It is in the interest of the stevedores as well as all other workers to organize a fight against this tax scheme. This must not be confused with the move of a group of large merchants who have announced that they will initiate a referendum for repeal. Such a referendum takes two years to carry thru. This would be useless as the law is only a two years' measure. This fight is part of the struggle against the high cost of living, and goes hand in hand with the chief fight, which is for increases in wages, and against the NRA cuts.

The B.B. in Pedro.

(by a correspondent.)

Stein, former "Iron Man" of the Blue Book got shown up in Pedro He was trying to cash in on the sentiment for organization created there.

In the Fink Hall alley one of the longshoremen acused him of collecting dues with blackjack in one pocket and gun in the other.

"And I'll bet you have a gun in your pocket right now" said the Steve.

This was proven to be true. So Stein slunk out of the alley . . .

NOT A CENT MORE INTO THE B.B. RACKET

[Endorsed]: Filed June 2, 1942.

Mr. Del Guercio: I would like permission to withdraw it and substitute a photostatic copy.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who were the editors of the Waterfront Worker in 1933 and particularly in June, July and August? A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know.

Q. Who were the editors of the Waterfront Worker when you took it over?

A. What do you mean by an "editor"?

Q. One who edits a paper, I guess. [5808]

A. Well, I know editors and editors. I go out here and I see a man sitting behind a desk in a big office. He's an editor. This type of paper, what you might call an "editor" was possibly anybody who contributed an article. I don't know of any editors in the true sense. The paper was handled by a group of people who contributed the material for it.

(Testimony of Harry Rentor Bridges:)

Q. There was a group? A. Yes.

Q. A group of what? A. Longshoremen.

Q. And you were one of them?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Now, when did that group—how did they come about to edit or to get out the Waterfront Worker-

A. We just—one of the days that we were standing around on the waterfront waiting for some work that didn't come along, why, just standing there on the curbstone on the sidewalk discussing it, we got the bright idea that we could do a better job with those fellows then they had been able to do.

Q. Than what fellows were able to do?

A. These fellows, this group of longshoremen.

[5809]

Q. Of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. Oh, we suspected—since reading this I can tell you why. We suspected——

Q. (Interposing) Now, wait! Not the Marine Workers Industrial Union? It was this group of longshoremen, a group of longshoremen other than these?

A. We suspected that they were one and the same.

Q. When did your group that you are talking about get together and first conceive the idea of taking over the Waterfront Worker?

A. My best recollection is in October.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. October what? A. 1933.

Q. 1933? A. At the time——

Q. (Interposing): That is your best considered recollection?

A. Well, the reason I fix it is this: Because at that time we had a strike on the waterfront and we needed some kind of an organ or a paper or some type of literature to distribute to explain the issues and to prevent strikebreakers coming on to the waterfront, and we conceived the idea.

Q. "We", who do you mean by "we"?

A. Just a group of longshoremen; just the fellows that [5810] stood there every morning day in and day out.

Q. And who were they among that group besides yourself?

A. Oh, there was quite a few. I could name off a few names.

Q. Yes, if you please.

A. Schmidt was one.

Q. Henry Schmidt? A. Henry Schmidt.

Q. In 1933? A. I think so.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. Well, I heard his testimony here. But I am just giving you now my best recollection.

Q. I know you heard his testimony and I know you heard him testify that he had nothing to do with the Waterfront Worker until the early part of 1934 some time. A. I did.

Q. And notwithstanding that you say that he was associated, connected with the Waterfront Worker in about, as you say, October 1933?

A. That was my recollection. Of course I could change it and say that it might have been '34, but I am trying to give my best recollection.

Q. Oh, I am sure. Sure.

A. Notwithstanding what Schmidt said. [5811]

Q. Now, who else?

A. I didn't say that Schmidt might have been it right from the start, but I certainly couple him up with it pretty close from the time we got started.

Q. Would you say that from the very beginning Mr. Schmidt was associated with the Waterfront Worker-

A. In my recollection he was there pretty close to the start.

Q. Now, who else?

A. Jack Shaw was another; John Schomaker.

Q. Jack who?

A. Jack Shaw. Schomaker was another.

Q. Is that John Schomaker? A. Yes.

Q. Right from the very beginning now?

A. Yes, or thereabouts. When you say "from the beginning" are you referring now to when the thing actually started?

Q. When your group, the group that you were connected with, took over the publication; if you call it "publication," of this Waterfront Worker?

A. It is pretty hard to nail that down when you understand the way the thing started. The thing started in a loose way. It didn't start in an organized way.

Q. Look! I have already asked you how it started [5812] and you said a group of longshoremen got together on the curb. You mentioned "curb."

A. That's right.

Q. And you got started. Do you want to go into that again?

A. That is exactly the way it happened, but your idea of what I meant by a "group" is different from what my answer really is.

Q. What group is that that conceived the idea of taking over the Waterfront Worker?

A. Just a few men standing on the waterfront one morning.

Q. Who are they?

A. I am trying to tell you to the best of my memory.

Q. You mentioned Schmidt, I believe.

A. I did.

Q. Jack Shaw?

A. Jack Shaw was another.

Q. John Schomaker was another?

A. Yes, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Who else?

A. Let me get around to it. I am trying to separate those first few fellows as much as I can from the large number who later contributed.

Q. Let me do some separating for you. You testified that there were only about eight or ten that were actively [5813] connected with the paper?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That I can remember.

Q. Give me the names of those eight or ten.

A. John Larson. It is pretty hard to remember some of them right now because of the way we used to know the fellows.

Q. They were the same fellows that were in this Albion Hall group that you have testified about?

A. No, no. Yes and no.

Q. Huh? A. Yes and no.

Q. Well, that's a good answer.

A. Well, I can explain it.

Q. Yes.

A. I can explain it. Many people contributed to the paper in the way of articles. Many people knew generally speaking, who was putting it out.

Q. Now, who now? A. Many people.

Q. Let's stay on that. You say many people knew who was putting it out? A. Yes.

Q. Let me ask you then who was putting it out?

A. Quite a number of longshoremen in the way that I have described.

Q. Now, let me have the names of those longshoremen [5814] that you say everybody knew; a lot of people knew were putting it out.

A. I am giving you the names to the best of my recollection. You first of all have got to understand the waterfront. You know this guy by the name of "Dutch" and this guy "Snowy" over here, and this guy is "Bill," and you have all kinds of nicknames and you can recall them much better by their nicknames and by just looking at them.

Q. I would even accept the nicknames, if you will tell me.

A. That's what I am trying to think of.

Q. Well, give me them.

A. Well, it is not so easy. I can't recall many more. They are the ones that stand out most in my mind.

Q. And yet you were able to recall definitely that there were eight or ten associated actively in putting out the Waterfront Worker. Now, how did you know that?

A. When was that?

Q. In your testimony even as much as yesterday and this morning.

A. Oh, no.

Q. Do you forget what you testified to yesterday?

A. I haven't said that there were not eight or ten. You are asking me to name them.

Q. Do you refuse to name them?

A. No, I don't. I just have a little difficulty [5815] remembering all their names. After all, that's eight years ago and I just don't remember all their names.

Q. Is that the best you can do now, those that you have mentioned?

A. Off-hand, yes. I could possibly—as we go along, every time I think of one I will let you know.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You will put up your hand?

A. Well, I can tell you or I can possibly do a little checking up and get you a few more. [5816]

Q. You testified, either yesterday or this morning—I don't remember which—that you employed seamen to distribute copies of the Waterfront Worker. Who employed the seamen?

A. Well, us fellows who were putting out the paper.

Q. "Us fellows who were putting out the paper?"

A. Yes; the same eight or ten.

Q. Who did the hiring, "us fellows all together?" A. As a rule.

Q. Did you have——

A. (Interposing): I am just trying to think of the person we used to depend on to take care of that. There was nothing to it. They was always a few hundred seamen——

Q. (Interposing): Did you have anything to do with hiring the seamen to distribute it?

A. You bet; on occasions.

Q. You hired them yourself?

A. On occasions.

Q. You paid them 50 cents a day?

A. It wasn't done that way. A. Huh?

A. You didn't pay them. You supplied them with the papers and then they sold them.

Q. At 50 cents a day.

A. They gave you back the money they had left over.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Your testimony this morning was that you employed [5817] seamen at 50 cents a day.

A. That is still correct.

Q. To distribute the Waterfront Worker.

A. That is still correct.

Q. 50 cents a day?

A. That is still my testimony.

Q. That is still your testimony? A. Yes.

Q. You were a union man at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. You employed seamen at 50 cents a day to work, to distribute papers for you?

A. Well, you are looking at "employment" in a little different way. They weren't in it for the money.

Presiding Inspector: Next question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you said that Jack Shaw was one of the original group of longshoremen who took over this Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes; and very active.

Q. Very active? A. Yes.

Q. Did he run for office about that time?

A. What kind of office? [5818]

Q. Municipal office. A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did the Waterfront Worker support him in his campaign for city office?

A. I think if Jack Shaw run for any office we who were running the Waterfront Worker would have supported him.

Q. Regardless of what ticket he was running on?

A. We would have supported him.

Q. If he ran on the Communist Party ticket would you have supported him?

A. We might not care what ticket he run on.

Q. Would you have supported him if he had run on the Communist Party ticket?

A. That is a theoretical question.

Q. And you don't want to answer a theoretical question?

A. It would depend on his program. If he was running for an open shop, the answer to that is "No." It would depend on what he run on. If he had been running on a program for short wages, or lesser wages, we wouldn't have supported him.

Q. Was John Shaw a member of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know. As far as I know he is not.

Q. Was John Schomaker?

A. I am not sure. [5819]

Q. Huh? A. I am not sure.

Q. What did you testify about that at the last hearing regarding John Schomaker, do you remember?

A. No. I don't have to check my testimony with my testimony at the last hearing, unless I was lying.

Q. Well, I don't know if you are lying—are you lying?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Well, it depends on who is going to judge that.

Q. Now, even now do you state that your best recollection is that you took this waterfront paper over in 1933 about October? A. Yes.

Q. That is the first issue?

A. It is not my best recollection. I am definitely sure of it.

Q. You are definitely sure of it?

A. Yes. The paper wasn't in existence in 1932 so it couldn't have been taken over then.

Q. Do you know Jack Bishop?

A. I had a recollection of a Bishop when you you were asking me about the "Bishop," and I was trying to place him.

Q. That isn't the same "Bishop"—Roy Bishop. This is John Bishop.

A. When you started talking about the "Bishop" it reminded me of the name of Bishop and I am still trying to [5820] place him. I heard it somewhere and I connect it with the waterfront.

Q. Do you also connect it with the Waterfront Worker?

A. You mean as a member of, if he was a longshoreman—no, I don't.

Q. He was a longshoreman working on this same waterfront that you were working on all these years from 1923 up to the time you became an official of your union?

A. Well, he might have been. I don't recall him very well. I just have a faint impression of the name, and that I either know the name or I know him somehow; but I don't connect it in my mind with the Waterfront Worker.

Q. Did the Waterfront Worker support his candidacy for office in the San Francisco municipal elections in November, 1933?

A. I don't know. After all, I can't remember that.

Q. You had something to do with the publication of the Waterfront Worker in November, 1933, did you not?

A. I am pretty sure at that time we did.

Q. And if the Waterfront Worker did support Jack Bishop as a Communist Party candidate in the San Francisco municipal elections in November 1933 you would have had a hand in that, wouldn't you?

A. In what way?

Q. In getting the Waterfront Worker to support him, Jack Bishop, a Communist Party candidate? [5821]

A. Not necessarily; no. It depends. Somebody might have wrote a letter in and it would be printed, saying, "I believe that everybody ought to vote for those people." I don't know. It all depends on how it is done. Unless it is announced there by me, or not by me—it all depends on how it is done. If Bishop was a longshoreman—and I don't remember that he was—but if he was a longshoreman and was running for office, it is entirely logical that he was supported by the Waterfront Worker. It would depend on his program, of course.

Q. Now, tell us just how you and the group of longshoremen took over the Waterfront Worker?

A. Well, we didn't exactly take it over. We started it up again.

Q. You must have done something. Where did you go, and who went?

A. Oh, as near as I can remember, here is what happened: First of all, the paper was coming out and there were many complaint raised against it; that it didn't talk the language of the men——

Q. (Interposing): This was before. Begin at the time that you and this group of longshoremen conceived the idea of taking over the Waterfront Worker. What did you do, where did you go, who did you meet?

A. That is what I am trying to tell you. [5822]

Q. Can you get that sequence?

A. Oh yes. I can tell the whole story.

Q. And try and follow it.

A. I will be able to follow it and tell you the whole story.

As I say, the paper went out of business. We were asking——

Q. (Interposing): Let me interrupt you right there if you don't mind. You said the paper went out of business. There was no publication for the month of October, no publication for the month of July, no publication for the month of June, 1933, no publication for any time during the year 1933, is that what you are trying to tell us?

A. No, no, I am not saying that. I am saying that the paper went out of business, to the best of my knowledge, for a couple of months.

Q. Prior to the time you took it over, so there were no issues for September, then, 1933?

A. I don't think there was.

Q. There was no issue for August 1933?

A. You just showed me one.

Q. A couple of months—how many months are a couple of months?

A. Well, that is my best recollection. Now, it is pretty hard—you are sitting there with the issues. My [5823] best recollection is that there was no issue for a couple of months. I can be mistaken on that point after this length of time.

Q. Yes, I realize that. A. All right.

Q. I realize that you can be mistaken.

A. I will say the first issue we put out was in October, 1933. I don't believe there was an issue put out in September, 1933.

Q. Now, you are positive on that now?

A. As positive as my memory will allow me to be.

Q. Let us go back and try and answer the question that I have asked you. Do you remember the question?

A. I remember the question all right.

I will say that there was no paper published for a certain period of time anyway.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Perhaps you have lost the question that I asked you.

Will you read the question, Mr. Reporter?

A. I can remember it very well.

We got the idea at that particular time that we needed some kind of a leaflet, or a paper, and we just decreed that we would take the name of the Waterfront Worker and put it out the same way.

Q. "We"—who do you mean by "we"?

A. Just a group on the waterfront. [5824]

Here is how we did it:——

Q. (Interposing) Just a moment—who did you get ahold of about this?

A. We got ahold of Harry Jackson and asked how he put out his paper.

Q. Where did you go to get hold of Harry Jackson? A. Right on the waterfront.

Q. Right at this time that this group conceived the idea of getting, or taking over the Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes. He was on the waterfront every morning.

Q. He was there, and you and this group of longshoremen were there, and you talked to Harry Jackson about the Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes. We said, "What happened to the paper? Where did it go?"

Q. You said, "What happened" to Harry Jackson. What did he say?

A. He said it was not being published any more.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Who said it was not being published?

A. Harry Jackson said it wasn't being published any more.

Q. He said that he wasn't publishing it any more? A. That is my best recollection.

Q. He said that. What did you next say?

[5825]

A. Well, we asked him how it was published. We hadn't given much attention to it up to that time.

Q. Did Harry Jackson tell you how it was published? A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. That it was put out, mimeographed and put out.

Q. Did he tell you where it was being mimeographed? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. I forget.

Q. You forget. Did he tell you by whom it was being published?

A. Our conversations, as far as I remember, were just along the line of how much money it would take. He told us it was simple; that all we needed was a mimeograph machine, and somebody to do the typing. So we went into the newspaper business.

Q. Didn't he, Jackson, tell you that he had a mimeograph machine? A. Yes.

Q. What did he say, suggest, about that?

A. I think he said it had broken down and

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

couldn't be used, or something. That was one of the contributing——

Q. (Interposing) Did he say it couldn't be repaired?

A. Something like that. That was one of the reasons [5826] the paper went out of business, among others.

Q. Was anything said at that time, while you were talking with Harry Jackson, about any money, about purchasing anything that belonged to the Waterfront Worker?

A. No. I remember we just went around and hit a few guys here and there for 50 cents, $1.00, $2.00, and rented a mimeograph machine.

Q. Let us stay there for just a moment. There was Harry Jackson, you, and this group of waterfront workers—you were talking with Harry Jackson about the Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes. That about ended it as far as Jackson was concerned.

Q. You asked him how you could get the Waterfront Worker? A. We didn't; no.

Q. Tell me everything that was said?

A. That is what I am trying to do if I get a chance.

Q. Give the conversation with Harry Jackson.

A. Jackson just told us how they had put out their paper. He told us what had happened to their paper. After he got through telling us how they had done it, and that their paper was finished, we didn't see any great difficulty as to why we couldn't do just as good, and maybe a lot better, and so we proceeded to do it. [5827]

Q. Did Harry Jackson offer his help and assistance?

A. I don't remember whether he did or not. I have an idea that is just the kind of thing he would say. I don't remember that we accepted it, or needed it.

You see, I should explain that up to this time we were putting out, this Committee of 500, were putting out printed leaflets on the waterfront, just one page leaflets.

For example, the meeting here (indicating) that you referred to——

Q. (Interposing) Now, you are going——

A. (Continuing) ——we had a leaflet on this particular meeting you referred to.

Q. You are going into another matter.

A. No, I am not.

Q. I am still staying with the Waterfront Worker, and how you got it from Harry Jackson, what you said to him, and what he said to you, and everything else. Is that all that you can remember now?

A. I am on the same subject.

Instead of putting out a printed leaflet, we decided to borrow the name of the Waterfront Worker, and all we took over was the name.

Q. And Harry Jackson said, "Sure, you can have the Waterfront Worker, and you don't have to give me anything for it," is that what he said?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

[5828]

A. Yes, as far as I know. It wouldn't have done him much good to have said, "I want a lot for it." We just started the paper up, took the name.

Q. Were any arrangements made then there with Harry Jackson as to what the mailing address was to be of the Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes. I think that—if not then at some later date.

Q. Who discussed it with Harry Jackson?

A. We discussed it along this line——

Q. (Interposing) You said, "We". You mean you are including yourself and——

A. (Interposing) Some others, myself and others. I can't recall the others that were there. I can't recall specifically the other people, but I was there.

One of the things that we were concerned about was to keep our identity secret.

Q. You were talking to Jackson about this?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What was said about the address of the Waterfront Worker?

A. Well, we continued to use it for a while.

Q. Did you ask Jackson, "Can I use, or can we use the same address that you have of the Waterfront Worker?"—Is that the way it happened?

A. Not that I recall. [5829]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What did happen regarding the use of the address?

A. I think we sent somebody up there, one fellow went up to see if we do it.

Q. "We sent"—who do you mean, you mean you sent someone?

A. I was one of the fellows talking it over.

Q. Who did you send? A. I don't recall.

Q. When did you send him with regard to this first conversation you had with Harry Jackson, regarding the Waterfront Worker?

A. At about that time.

Q. At about the same time, the same day?

A. I don't know that—around October 31.

Q. Did he return?

A. I don't specifically remember him returning, but it is a cinch he did.

Q. What arrangements were made with regard to using the address of the Waterfront Worker?

A. To continue having the address used as a mailing address.

Q. Do you recall—I am getting a little ahead of my story but I will come back again—when the Matson strike occurred?

A. When the Matson strike occurred? [5830]

Q. Yes.

A. That is at the time I am talking about—October '33.

Q. October '33? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the first issue of the Waterfront Worker the one that carried the story of the Matson Dock strike?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I am pretty sure it was; I am pretty sure that the first one we put out was a printed leaflet of the Waterfront Worker for special distribution up on Skid Row, a single page leaflet.

Q. Was this the first issue which you and this particular group put out?

A. I think it was. I might be wrong on it.

Q. After that did you put out a regular issue of the Waterfront Worker after the first issue?

A. I think we did; yes.

(Mr. Del Guercio passed an issue of the Waterfront Worker to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I will show you the September 15, 1933 issue of the Waterfront Worker, and on the masthead this is contained: "Issued by rank and file group in the I.L.A., Volume 110."

A. (Examining publication) That is one of ours. [5831]

Q. That is one of yours? A. Yes.

Q. So it wasn't September that you first took over the Waterfront Worker?

A. I think that is right.

Q. Huh? A. I think that is right.

Q. Not in October any more, is it?

A. No. I was fixing the date by the strike on the Matson Dock. You notice this (indicating) refers to the strike, except it was in September instead of October.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Mr. Bridges, is it possible that you again may be mistaken and that you now, after looking at this, and the others that I have shown you, say that you took over the Waterfront Worker earlier than even this date?

A. No. You notice this——

Q. (Interposing) Will you answer my question, please?

A. I say off-hand, my best judgment is, and from what I know, this was an issue put out by us.

Q. And you are sure you don't want to go back to your previous testimony in the earlier hearing and state that you took it over in 1932?

A. That is impossible. It wasn't in existence in 1932. Your first issue shows, Volume 1, No. 1, came out in January 1933.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence, if your Honor [5832] please, as Government's Exhibit next in order.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received.

Mr. Del Guercio: And with the request that we be permitted to withdraw it, have a photostat made, and substitute it for the original.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

(The publication referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 281.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

GOVERNMENT'S EXHIBIT No. 281

(Cut)—WATERFRONT WORKER

Issued by a rank and file group in the I. L. A.

BLUE BOOK SMASHED ON MATSON S. COMPANY BACKS DOWN AS MEN DESTROY BOOKS

The Blue Book is on the way out. On Thursday, Sept. 14th the stevedores working on the Matson Dock, decided amongst themselves that the B.B. had ruled them long enough. The result was that when called on to show their books, the men refused and walked off the dock 100%, and after a little discussion outside proceeded to tear up their B.B.s, and dump them in a pile on the sidewalk.

Imagine the feelings of Wicks and Red, who stood looking on from the upper windows of the dock.

Finally, after a conference by the B.B. officials and the Matson Co., Haskell came out and hired 3 gangs to go to work, and said, "Never mind the books". After that, hiring continued until (continued on page 3 column 1)

NO RANK AND FILE GUARANTEE ON LOCAL N.R.A. CODE

Everyone on the front is wondering what the NRA code for the longshoremen will be when it will be out. The code proposed by the I.L.A. "looks" very good; a $1 an hour, and a 6 hour day—but what guarantee have we that this code will be accepted? And how will the wages look when inflation finally gets under way? Already prices are rising and the NRA proposes to force them further up.

As matters now stand, the Intern'l President, Ryan, will be our representative before the N. R. A. board. Ryan has a long history of cooperation with the shipowners and against the workers.

The code does not come back to the local for final approval, and no representative has ben sent from S. F. In the three Eastern districts of the I.L.A., the Atlantic, Gulf, and Great Lakes, the proposed code has been even lower, 85c an hour and an 8 hour day. Support Seamen On SS Diamond Cement; Wage Increase Won Baltimore, Md.—Led by the fighting Marine Workers Industrial Union, the entire crew including officers, of the S. S. Diamond Cement, chartered to the Nelson Line declared a strike on August 18th, for the following demands: 1) $ 10 increase in wages, 2) better food, 3) recognition of a ship's comittee, 4) no one to be victimized, all strikers to be put back to work.

Called by Captain Kjeldsen, the police came on board, arrested four of the crew, and put the rest ashore. A picket line was formed by the crew and the unemployed sea men of Baltimore, until a towboat finally came alongside and towed the Diamond Cement out into the bay.

Unable to obtain scabs, the agents finally appealed to the notorious scab-herding agency, the New York Seamen's Institute, who sent 21 men to Baltimore. Eighteen of these men finding upon arrival (continued on Page 3 Col. 2)

Who And What Are They?

The leaflets that have appeared on the front lately and signed by the Independent Longshoremen's Committee, disclaim any connection to the employers, or the Blue Book. Why is it then, that only ones seen passing them out are Wicks and Red?

The last one issued right after the ILA election, stressed the fact that the fighting talk delivered by Paddy Morris of Tacoma was to arouse the fighting spirit of the members. Well, at least, Paddy Morris saw the need of action on the B.B. or the I.L.A. is liable to die away. Then again, maybe he had been reading the Waterfront Worker which has been advocating the same thing for the last

STRIKE NEWS

Aug. 22—Following the example of the fighting crew of the Diamond Cement, the crew of the S. S. Cornore of the Ore S. S. Co., went out on strike under the leadership of the Marine Workers Industrial Union for $5 increase in wages, three watches, better sanitary conditions, and recognition of a ship's committee.

When representatives of the Marine Workers Industrial Union went on board the Cornore to confer with the ship's crew, they were threatened with arrest. This threat failed to materialize however, when the crew made militant demands that their chosen leaders be let alone.

Although efforts were made by scab-herding shipping masters to put scabs aboard, latest reports are that they were unable to do so. A twoboat captain publicly announced that neither he nor his crew would put any scaps aboard the Cornore.

Under the leadership of the M. W. I. U., the only organization leading the struggles for better conditions, That Stands For The Unity Of All Workers, Regardless Of Organization, The Fight Has Begun. Let us go forward in a united front of seamen and stevedores for higher wages and better conditions.

NOTHING CAN BE GAINED EXCEPT THRU STRUGGLE

Despite the fact that the NRA is supposed to guarantee the workers the right to organize into the union of their own choosing, discrimination has been resorted to in many cases on the S.F. waterfront. The Waterfront Employers Association, thru their own union, the BB, have been firing men right and left from many different docks.

Excepting the actions already described on the front page of this paper, nothing else, that has been done by the ILA, the Labor Commission, or the NRA board, has succeeded in putting these victimized men back on the job.

Our policy is then clear. Never mind waiting for unfavorable decisions by any of the different boards. Let every longshoreman do his part, and see that the BB goes and that there is an end to all discrimination.

"SMASH THE BLUE BOOK"

IN THE MAIL BAG

Dear Editor:

After last Wednesday's meeting one thing should be clear to all stevedores—that waiting for law is not going to do us any good in getting rid of the Blue Book.

Curly Cutright's report showed us that we cannot get any action from the labor commission or the NRA board. It seems to me that Paddy Morris hit it on the head when he said, "Labor never gained anything thru law, but only thru organized action of labor."

At the meeting before this, he told us that no man should carry an I.L.A. card and Blue Book and that if he wanted to carry a B. B. he should turn in his I. L. A. card. I agree with this, too.

Now most of us know these things and want to be rid of the Blue Book, so why all the delay in our union getting busy with some organized action to smash the B.B.?

Waiting for a code to be signed and hoping our I.L.A. will be the recognized union instead of the BB, besides keeping us in suspense is giving the shipowners a chance to knock off our men, one by one, and we have not been able to do anything about it so far. There is one good way we can be sure the ILA will be recognized in the code and that our members will be protected, and that is, for us to smash the B.B. now.

Let's organize committees of our members on each dock to refuse to pay to the B.B. and to organize a walk out if we are knocked off.

we answer, "How're we going to avoid one? Are the shipowners going to give us what we demand without a fight?"

Maybe, but we have all yet to live to see it. We must be prepared to fight, and not expect to get wages and working conditions by just trusting to any labor leaders, here, or anywhere else.

They say the BB union has a large treasury, and is not likely to go out of business. Judging from the action of the gangs on Pier 39, and the Matson gangs walking out and tearing up their books, throwing them on a pile on the sidewalk, it looks as tho the B B will need their treasury to buy some books.

The only good piece of advice that we find in them is that the longshoremen don't allow themselves to be fooled by attorneys that may be hired to fool them, or by leaders who don't know how to lead but are only interested in what they get out of it.

enough men had been hired to work the ships, and not one man showed a Blue Books.

The foregoing, following the walkout on Pier 39 a short time ago, is clear cut proof that the longshoremen on this waterfront are definitely thru with the B. B. Don't let this action go unsupported.

All longshoremen must stand ready to back up the action taken by the gangs on these docks and to see that the I.L.A. also gives its full support.

I.L.A. delegates that were present at the time of the walkout, and who gave the longshoremen a great deal of unofficial support deserve credit. But, we might ask, why unofficial?

Red, Bryan and Wicks, when they left the docks after their conference with the Matson Company officials, were asked by some of the men, "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

They replied that they were going to stick with it, and for a moment, it looked as if they were in for a tough time, but they quickly jumped into their machines and beat it, followed by a great chorus of howls and boos.

last war, Reichert, a rabbi, and O'Connell of the Central Labor Council of wellknown sellout fame, has handed down a decision that the Blue Book is not a company union. This means that as far as the N.R.A. is concerned, they might deal with the B.B. unless we organize to smash it.

The code previously passed under the NRA show what a vicious attack on our living standards the employers have been able to force on us. For instance, the auto code, $15 a week minimum, and the open shop.

The only way to better our conditions on the waterfront and smash the Blue Book, is to take matters into our own hands.

A) Dock committees should be formed on every dock to carry thru in an organized manner, the refusal to pay dues to the Blue Book.

B) We should insist that a rank and file representative be sent to Washington.

that the ship was on strike, joined the picket line and supported the strike although the captain offered as high as $75 for A.B.'s. The other three, detectives, and professional stoolpigeons, went aboard in a police launch.

Of extreme importance to the San Francisco stevedores is the fact that the Baltimore longshoremen—rank and file members of the International Longshoremen's Ass'n walked out in solid support of the seamen. Although the officials of the Baltimore I.L.A. attempted to get the Negro local to work the ship, all refused to do so.

The Diamond Cement was finally towed to Philadelphia, with a skeleton crew of six scabs, where she was met by another picket line, and was unable to ship a crew. Later she went to New York and was greeted by M.W.I.U. pickets. Many of the unemployed seamen were so aroused they bombarded the ship with stones, rivetheads and brickbats. The wage increase has been won, but latest reports disclose that the strike will continue until the original crew is reinstated.

In a leaflet issued in Balitmore, the striking crew of the Diamond Cement say, "Longshoremen,we, thank you for your support. Your act of solidarity will help unite the seamen and longshoremen in all ports who will follow your example. . . . . In the future, we pledge to do everything possible to mobilize the seamen for support of the struggles of the longshoremen."

900 BARGEMEN WIN STRIKE LED BY M. W. I. U.

St. Louis, Mo.,—Aug. 25th.Under the leadership of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, 900 Negro bargemen declared strike and walked out demanding a 48 hour week, an increase in wages, no work on Sunday, and recognition of the M.W.I.U.

Again the solidarity of the workers was displayed in that the longshoremen of East St. Louis and Cairo, Ill. gave full support to the strike.

The strike, which tied up the entire barge fleet, lasted for 11 days. The strikers won their demands for a 48 hour week, no Sunday work, recognition of the union and 7c per hour wage increase.

THE SALES TAX

Always on the alert to stick another knife into the backs of the workers, our treacherous state officials, at the instigation of the big capitalists, have placed the burden of the state finances directly upon the workers, farmers and small businessmen of the state.

Deliberately vetoing a state income tax which would have forced the bankers and the big businessmen to carry this load, Gov. Rolph and the State Legislature, thru a neat bit of legal trickery, have forced thru the Sales Tax Act, and have even attempted to make it appear that the people themselves had voted for it.

The present drive of the NRA to legalize low wages and high prices, coupled with the Sales Tax, are an integral part of the vicious plan of Wall Street to force small businessmen out of their establishment and what is far worse, to so weaken the American working class by the lowering of the standard of living, that they will be unable to defend themselves against further attacks.

This tax, which is supposed to be 2½% tax on all sales, is so devised that it is in reality a 4 to 6% tax, due to the fact that most purchases of the workers are for small amounts, on which the tax is much higher than 2½% (for instance, when you pay 1c on a 15c purchase, you pay a 6.66% tax).

This acts as a direct wage cut when already wages are at starvation level.

The Retail Merchants Association headed by the Chamber of Commerce, have initiated a move for a referendum on the tax which has much support from small merchants. This is an attempt to fool the small businessman and workers into believing something is being done against the sales tax so they will not take the issue into their own hands and put up a real fight against it.

STRIKE ON HAVANA FRONT

Havana, Cuba—4000 longshoremen went on strike in Havana and tied up the entire waterfront. After several days of militant struggle, during which even the Cuban women attacked scabs with stones and clubs, the shipowners granted the demands of the workers. A 10% increase in wages, a rotary system of employment, and recognition of the union were won.

ORGANIZE. AGITATE! FIGHT!

This move is not only fake, and insincere, but is absolutely ineffectual. The tax bill is only designed to last two years, and it would take two years to repeal it by referendum.

In order to really defend ourselves against this and further ons. ights against our standards of living, we must make a real fight against this tax.

To do this, we must cooperate with the Anti-Sales Tax Committee and refuse to pay the tax. We must boycott every store and business house who will not join us in our fight, and patronize only those who will.

When you go into the corner grocer to buy two bits worth of liver, or a loaf of bread, refuse to pay the pennies. If the merchant will not make the sale, explain to him the fake tactics of the Retail Merchants Association and urge him to join in the program of the Anti-Sales Tax Committee. If he refuses to do so, take your trade only to some merchant who will.

This is an issue which strikes home to all of us. We must throw off this terrific burden, maliciously forced on us by the bosses, and by a solid, united effort we can force a special session of the State Legislature to convence and repeal the sales tax.

GRACE GETS HIS

The shooting of F. J. M. Grace, the retired shipowner, by his one time nurse, calls to our minds the time—about a year ago—when a gang loading lead on one of the Grace Line ships on Pier 46, was instruced by the walking boss that two tons to a load was required in order to make money for the company.

Well, those two tons damn near killed many a stevedore, but it only took one load with a hell of a lot less weight than two tons to finish Grace!

ACTION ON PIER #39

When several stevedores were knocked off for not paying their B.B. dues, the rest of the men walked off with them. The next day the men were called back to work without the B.B!

[Endorsed]: Filed June 2, 1942.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Would you say that the word "Stevedore" never appeared in the Waterfront Worker after you and your group took it over? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. That is, that the word "Stevedore" never appeared in the Waterfront Worker after we took it over?

Q. Yes. A. Ridiculous.

Q. When referring to longshoremen?

A. I wouldn't say that either. You can't refer to longshoremen, after all——

Q. (Interposing) Didn't you testify that one reason you didn't believe in taking the Waterfront Worker over was because of the appearance of the word "Stevedore"?

A. No—but it was used. You can read it yourself. [5833] I can explain it further if you like. But to refer to longshore work without using the word "Stevedore" somewhere—you read that article that you are looking at and see the difference between that and this. (Indicating.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you know what article I am looking at?

A. I looked at one article and I could see the difference immediately.

Q. You can do more than I can.

Now, let's go back to this address now. You sent somebody to see Jackson about using the same address?

A. No, we didn't. I never said that.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said somebody went up to the address to see if it was all right to continue using that address for a while.

Q. What was done?

A. What was done on what?

Q. Did he come back and report on that?

A. I don't remember that. But I presume he did.

Q. What address was used?

A. I forget—at least I didn't recall until I saw the Waterfront Workers in evidence here.

Q. What?

A. I know now. But I didn't remember. The first time that I brought it back to my mind was when I saw the Waterfront Workers introduced in evidence here. It was a Market [5834] Street Address.

Q. Is that the first address that the Waterfront Worker used after you and your group of longshoremen took it over?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I think so. It will show on the copy.

Q. And that was 830 Market Street, room 421, is that correct? A. Possibly; yes.

Q. Possibly? A. That is right; correct.

Q. Do you know whose address that was at that time?

A. I think I do now. I had no recollection of it when the hearing started.

Q. Was Sam Diner at that address at that time? A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know.

Q. You heard Sam Diner testify?

A. Yes.

Q. What? A. Yes.

Q. You heard him testify that he had offices at 830 Market Street, that he occupied Room 421?

A. I heard him say that.

Q. Did you ever go up to this address at that time?

A. No. We kept away from those addresses, very far [5835] away.

Q. Now, tell me to whom the various articles that appeared in the Waterfront Worker, to whom they would be sent? A. To the address.

Q. And who was at that address to receive them?

A. Nobody; except they were just kept until somebody went up and collected them, and that was none of us.

Q. Who went up to collect them?

A. Oh, some seamen that we sent up there.

Q. Did you pay the seamen?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. First, you have got to get the idea as to why we had such an address.

Q. I have the idea, and I wonder if you will be getting it pretty soon. A. I have it too.

Q. This was your mailing address, 830 Market Street?

A. That is all; a mailing address.

Q. And articles that later appeared in the Waterfront Worker were submitted, sent to that address? A. That is right.

Q. You, yourself, wrote articles for the paper?

A. Oh, sure.

Q. Did you send them to this address?

A. No. [5836]

Q. Where did you send your articles?

A. Sometimes I did and sometimes I didn't.

Q. When you didn't send them, your own articles, to 830 Market Street, Room 424, where did you send them?

A. I would give them to the fellow that was going to have them typed.

Q. Who was he?

A. I don't remember. I think it was—I don't remember. One of the fellows had a wife who was a typist, and she used to do the typing. I remember that.

Q. All right. Let's get away from the typist for a while and go back to the articles which you now say, that is, some of which you say you sent to 830 Market Street. A. That is right.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Then, what would you do, send somebody up there to get them? A. That is right.

Q. What? A. That is right.

Q. You mailed the article up there and then sent somebody up to get it?

A. Right. That is perfectly easy to understand if you know the picture. We used to do work out of town——

Q. (Interposing) There is no question pending, unless you want to make an explanation. [5837]

A. This is an explanation.

Q. Do you want to qualify your answer?

A. I don't want to qualify my answer, but I would like to add something to the answer.

Mr. Del Guercio: I submit it isn't a qualification of his answer.

Presiding Inspector: It will all come out later.

Mr. Del Guercio: I see it is getting close to four o'clock.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will go on. We have lost a good deal of time today. We will go on for about ten minutes.

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio conferred with the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: We will adjourn until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: You may go on, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, before any further examination I would like to call attention to two errors, I think, in the reporter's transcript which occurred on Thursday. One of them is on page 5798, the third line, where the date appears as "June, 1938" when the Bridges group took over the Waterfront Worker, and I have a clear recollection that it was January 1938—I mean, 1933. And that was the date of the first issue. It was January and not June, and that is my recollection.

Presiding Inspector: The first issue of the Daily Worker?

Mrs. King: Of the Waterfront Worker.

Presiding Inspector: Of the Waterfront Worker, I mean? The paper itself shows.

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: It can't make and difference.

Mrs. King: I believe the transcript is incorrect.

Presiding Inspector: Is that in the testimony of Mr. Bridges?

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall anything about it.

What do you think about that, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't think there should be any [5840] change in the transcript at all. The transcript speaks for itself. We made a similar request not so long ago in connection with the spelling of the name "M-a-a-s" and "M-a-y-e-s", I also have a distinct recollection at that time that the witness had said "M-a-a-s".

Presiding Inspector: I can't remember, myself. I have no recollection. You had better let it stand.

Mr. Del Guercio: That can be brought out on redirect.

Presiding Inspector: Explain it in your brief.

Mrs. King: Then there is another one which I think maybe Mr. Del Guercio would consent to have changed because it is in one of his questions. As it reads now it doesn't make any sense, and it is on page 5832.

Presiding Inspector: Will you look at it? I don't want to see it.

Mrs. King: The third line, the question as it now stands in the transcript is as follows: "So it wasn't September that you first took over the Waterfront Worker?" My recollection was, "So it was in September," not "So it wasn't September." Now, I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: You will have to read the context, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't agree with that.

Mrs. King: All right.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Let it stand.

[5841]

Mr. Del Guercio: We will let the transcript stand.

Presiding Inspector: I have no recollection of it.

Mr. Gladstein: It can be corrected by the testimony on redirect.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you testified last Thursday that if Roy Hudson had made a speech during the 1934 strike, in connection with the 1934 strike, you would have known about it?

A. That is right, to any sizeable group.

Q. Now, you recall, don't you, that particular period during the 1934 strike when the discussions were had regarding the calling of a general strike?

A. I do.

Q. Are those events fresh in your mind?

A. Pretty clear.

Q. Now, who was it that first proposed the calling of a general strike?

A. The Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. And were you in favor of it? A. Yes.

Q. And was the Marine Workers Industrial Union in favor [5842] of it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I think they were. They were not seated with us at that time.

Q. Did they make known to you, as Chairman of the Strike Committee, that they were in favor of calling a general strike?

A. I don't recall if they officially made it known, I am pretty sure they were in favor of it.

Q. How did they make it known to you?

A. I am trying to remember.

Q. Having in mind that Harry Jackson was at the head, or heading the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time, can you now recall how it was made known to you?

A. Maybe not; maybe I can't recall specifically if they sent us a communication, but I am pretty sure they were in favor of it, and they supported it.

Q. Was Harry Jackson in favor of it?

A. I am sure he was.

Q. He talked to you about it, didn't he?

A. I am pretty sure he did.

Q. When did he talk to you about calling a general strike? A. I can't recall that.

Q. But it was before the general strike was called?

A. Very definitely it was. [5843]

Q. Did you have meetings with Harry Jackson?

A. I can recall the Marine Workers Industrial Union presenting credentials to the General Strike Committee——

Q. (Interposing): I am not speaking about that. I am talking about the meetings discussions that you had with Harry Jackson with reference to calling a general strike and with reference to the Marine Workers Industrial Union supporting such a general strike. You understand that?

A. I do.

Q. All right. Now, confine yourself with that.

A. I can't recall any specific conversation at this time on that matter.

Q. But you did have specific conversations, and you did have meetings with Harry Jackson, did you not?

A. It depends on what you call a meeting.

Q. What kind of meetings did you have with Harry Jackson?

A. Just prior to the general strike?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't recall any formal meeting.

Q. Where did you meet Harry Jackson to discuss the general strike and to discuss the Marine Workers Industrial Union's support of a general strike?

A. Oh, I guess we would meet Jackson most any place at that time. Jackson was around—— [5844]

Q. (Interposing): I am not asking how you would meet him. I am asking where you met him.

A. I can't recall any specific meeting. I told you that. If you are asking me was there a formal meeting of some type, I don't recall any. If you are asking did I meet Jackson during the various strike activities and discussed all the strike questions with him, the answer it "Yes."

Q. Now, Jackson was talking to you and discussing these matters with you not as a trade union man, but as a member of the Communist Party, wasn't he?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No.

Q. Was he a trade union man?

A. As far as I know; yes.

Q. How far did you know?

A. I knew enough to know he was.

Q. What union was Harry Jackson a member of?

A. Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. Was he a worker?

A. As far as I know; yes.

Q. What was he working for?

A. For the strike at that time.

Q. He was working for the Communist Party, wasn't he? A. Not that I know of.

Q. You knew he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I am not sure I did at that time; but even if he was [5845] he was still working for the strike.

Q. And he was working for the Communist Party?

A. He was working for the men on strike as far as I know.

Q. And you and Harry Jackson were working together, weren't you?

A. Well, in so far as the strike was concerned. I think that is correct.

Q. Now, this Roy Hudson, you say you knew all about every event leading up to the 1934 strike. You took an active part in it, didn't you?

A. I certainly did.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You considered yourself one of the leaders of the 1934 strike, didn't you?

A. I had a little to with.

Q. Well, did you have more than anyone else—withdraw that. Would you say that you were the leader in the 1934 strike? A. The leader?

Q. Yes.

A. No, not particularly. [5846]

Q. Well, who was? Harry Jackson?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Roy Hudson? A. No.

Q. The Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Well, who was?

A. I would say the labor movement was and the various leaders and the officials of the labor movement. I can name them.

Q. You were a member of the ILA at that time, weren't you? A. Yes.

Q. Now, did the ILA call a conference prior to the calling of the general strike with regards to calling a general strike?

A. Yes. They had a meeting of various unions. They called a conference of unions in the Eagle's Hall, I think; either the ILA Committee or the Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. And who called that conference?

A. The Strike Committee.

Q. You were Chairman of the Strike Committee?

A. I was Chairman of both of them.

Q. And you called a conference to be held at the Eagle's Hall? [5847]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. The Strike Committee did.

Q. Well, you were on the Strike Committee? You were the Strike Committee, weren't you?

A. I was the Chairman of the Strike Committee.

Q. And you called a conference to be held at the Eagle's Hall?

A. The Strike Committee did, not me.

Q. Were you there at the conference?

A. I think I was.

Q. All right. You were at that conference?

A. If you have the same conference in mind as I have.

Q. I think we have. Now, you knew——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Just wait a minute, Mr. Del Guercio.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing): ——that Roy Hudson, at least during the time of the 1934 strike, was general Secretary of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, didn't you?

A. Not that I remember I don't.

Q. Well, I will refresh your memory.

A. It is very fresh on that point.

Q. Well, it might be fresher after you read this. I have here a copy of the Western Worker for July 16, 1934 and there are several articles in this issue, one particularly appearing on page 1, column 3, headed "26 Locals want general [5848] strike, 1600 packed the hall, conference called by ILA wants immediate action to settle strike." Does that refresh your memory?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. In regard to what?

Q. In regards to the matter of the 1934 strike and the calling of that conference.

A. I said I remember the conference.

Q. All right. Now, we will go further. The article reads: "An immediate general strike was the voice of delegates representing 26 local A. F. of L. Unions at a maritime conference called by the Maritime Strike Committee at Eagle's Hall". That is the same matter about which you have just testified, the calling of such a conference?

A. The same conference. I remember.

Q. To go further: "1600 workers took every available inch in the hall cheering and applauding as delegate after delegate announced his union 100 per cent for immediate strike action". You recall that? A. Yes.

Q. That is correct, is it? A. Yes.

Q. "The meeting was a preliminary conference to determine the sentiment"—"sentiment"—"of all workers toward a general strike. Delegates"—and I continue on page 5, column 4—"Delegates of 26 unions declared their overwhelming majority. One delegate expressed himself 'our men ready for instant action by union has voted 100 per cent [5849] for a general strike and we are ready right now. What we don't approve of is all this monkeying around. Let's go' ". Do you remember that?

A. I remember lots of statements something like that.

Q. " 'All labor leaders who oppose general strike at this time', said a representative of the Teamsters' Union, 'are labor fakers and should be driven out of organized labor.' " That is correct, isn't it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Well, there was something said like that.

Q. "His statement was received with thundering applause". Is that correct?

A. If I remember the meeting correctly, that would be about correct.

Q. "Representatives of all marine unions now on strike addressed a conference stressing the true situation on the waterfront as opposed to the false statements printed in all capitalist papers." Is that correct? A. I think so.

Q. "Delegates demanded a general strike for the protection of their own unions. 'This strike is no longer a matter of the waterfront alone', was the opinion voiced by almost every speaker. 'The armed attack of the bosses on the longshoremen threatens the existence of every union not only in S. F. but in the entire U.S.A.' " Is that correct?

A. I think that that was the general nature of many [5850] statements.

Q. "Members of the marine unions gave detailed descriptions of the ruthless police attack of last Thursday and of the cold-blooded murder of workers who were struggling for decent conditions." That is correct, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. "Every man in the hall stood silent for one minute in honor of the dead." That is correct, isn't it? A. I think so.

Q. "All unions were requested to close their halls for a period of two hours on Monday in respect of their fallen comrades." That is correct, isn't it?

A. Right.

Q. "It was also suggested that all comrades lay down their tools for one hour at one o'clock on Monday, which is the time of the funeral." That is correct, isn't it? A. Right.

Q. "A representative of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers Industrial Union announced that his union had voted 100 per cent to support the general strike." Is that correct? A. I guess so.

Q. All right. Now, I will read you another article in this same paper headed "Strike Ranks"—just a minute, please. Is that your picture appearing in this paper, Mr. Bridges? A. Yes. [5851]

Q. That is yours?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. Now, immediately underneath it it reads "Strike Ranks Solid in All Coast Ports. Communist Central Committee calls for solidarity actions in all states. The 2000-mile strike front at a glance stood as follows on the ninth week: In San Francisco 2000 troops took control of the waterfront after battles which resulted in at least two dead and hundreds wounded". That is correct, isn't it?

A. Right.

Q. "The State Belt Line workers joined the strike." That is correct, isn't it? A. No.

Q. That is not correct?

A. No, not entirely correct.

Q. "Cargo movements through police and militia convoys are insignificant as pickets stop all trucks".

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. More or less.

Q. That is correct? A. More or less.

Q. "A conference of 26 locals was 100 per cent for a general strike. From indications the San Francisco Labor Council's efforts to head off the general strike will be overwhelmed by the sweep". Is that correct? A. Yes. [5852]

Q. Now, skipping several articles here in regard to the situation at San Pedro and Portland and in San Diego and in Seattle and reading on "From the East come reports that New York longshoremen are to consider a general sympathy strike unless Ryan can stop it. Ryan, International President of the longshoremen, who was kicked out of the situation here by the strikers, continues with his strike breaking efforts." Is that correct?

A. Very much so.

Q. "'The Pacific Coast strike' he says, 'can never be settled until employers refuse to recognize Harry Bridges and his Strike Committee'". Is that correct. A. Yes.

Q. A quotation from Ryan?

A. Yes, he said worse things than that.

Q. "The Central Committee of the Communist Party has issued an appeal to workers in all parts of the country for immediate action in support of the West Coast strike with protests, solidarity actions in all ports and financial assistance." That is correct, isn't it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I think so. We received contributions from all parts of the country.

Q. Now, "the appeal concludes with 'The strike can be won with the combined forces of workers. Protests against the bloody terror should swamp the U. S. and California Government offices.'" That is correct, isn't it? [5853]

A. Sure; that's how it was won, too.

Q. "Financial support should be sent by unions and labor organizations to the Central Strike Committee and the Marine Workers Industrial Union". That is correct, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. You were working in close cooperation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time, weren't you, as this indicates?

A. That does not indicate. That indicates funds to be sent to two separate organizations, which was the facts at that time,——

Q. (Interposing): Now, I will continue.

A. (Continuing): ——because they had been removed from the strike committee or were not speakers on our strike committee they had to establish their own separate set-up.

Q. And you were continuing to cooperate after they had been refused to be seated, didn't you.

A. In the way of funds?

Q. In every way? A. No.

Q. Didn't you continue to contact Harry Jackson?

A. That was—well, it was impossible to do otherwise. If you say, did I continue to talk to him and the two committees continue to work together on certain phases of the strike, absolutely yes.

Q. You did? [5854] A. Yes.

Q. Now, continuing on page 5 of the same article, column 8——

May I consult here a minute with Mr. Whitson?

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio conferred with Mr. Whitson.) [5855]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, continuing reading that article there in column 8, page 5:

"Solidarity actions in all ports, on the ships and docks and on the waterfronts, must be launched at once in support of the heroic West Coast Strikers.

"Demand that the terror against the longshoremen cease!

"Demand the right to strike and picket!

"Demand that the warship Holland be removed from the vicinity of the Frisco piers.

"Pacific Coast workers, answer the terror with a general strike!"

That is correct, isn't it, that is what the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the Communist Party were demanding at that time?

A. Maybe they were.

Q. And what you were demanding, in collaboration with them?

A. I don't understand all the demands—I don't remember any warship Holland.

Q. Do you want to read the article?

A. Yes; I would like to.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Can you see that?

A. (Examining article referred to.): Yes.

Presiding Inspector: He has the original paper if you [5856] want to see it.

A. (Continuing): The only thing I don't recall is any demand about the warship being removed.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You recall the rest?

A. Yes. I think we had all those demands, the demand that terror cease, the demand to strike and picket and to support the general strike. All unions had those demands.

Q. Now, I will show you another article here on page 5 headed "Teamsters Vote General Strike, continued from page 1, column 7." That is the article I first showed you under your photograph headed "Strike Ranks Solid in all Coast Ports."

A. I thought under my photograph was "Communist Executive Council."

Q. Read that, and going down in the article under the heading "First Strike Breaking Action:

"The very first action of the Committee of Seven was a step toward strike-breaking."

What was the Committee of Seven?

A. The Committee of Seven was a Strike Strategy Committee—the Committee of Seven was from the San Francisco Labor Council.

Q. Were you on the Committee? A. No.

Q. That is one committee you weren't on, that is right.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That was a committee set up by the Labor Council. [5857]

Q. (Continuing): "They, in a meeting with the representatives of the striking unions demanded that the conference called to consider general strike action should not take any actual organized steps."

Is that correct?

A. Right.

Is that correct? A. Right.

Q. (Continuing): "It was taking seriously the much advertised purpose of the 'Strategy Committee' as a step toward a general strike,"——

Is that correct?

A. That is right. We agreed with the Strategy Committee and went along with them.

Q. (Continuing): " . . . that the strike representatives agreed." A. That is right.

Q. (Continuing): "This is now clearly seen as a serious mistake, as the effect is only to delay action. The Committee will come before the Board with speeches while cargo is loaded protected by bayonets."

Is that correct?

A. At that time that was, I think, was the line advocated, and it is one of the times it wasn't followed, I guess.

Q. (Reading on):

"While the S. F. Labor Council was in session, a meeting of 1600 workers packed the Eagles' Hall to hear Roy Hudson"——[5858]

Does that refresh your memory?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. On the meeting I am talking about, no.

Q. Does it refresh your memory?

A. I was in the Labor Council.

Q. You were in the Labor Council?

A. Apparently I was at every meeting of the Labor Council at that time.

Q. You are sure you weren't at this other meeting with Roy Hudson? A. I am positive.

Q. You can recollect clearly back to those events, back in 1934—how many years ago is that?

A. That is eight years ago; seven or eight years.

Q. You now recall clearly being in a labor council meeting while Roy Hudson was speaking at the Eagles' Hall?

A. I recall that any time that the Committee of Seven met I was around, because we were suspicious of them.

Q. Let me read on and maybe this will refresh your memory a little more.

" . . . Roy Hudson, General Secretary of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and raised the roof with their applause for every mention for a general strike, and the unity of all unions involved in the strike."

Does that refresh your memory?

A. I don't think that refers to the meeting I am talking [5859] of.

Q. Roy Hudson was advocating a general strike at that time, wasn't he?

Q. Roy Hudson was the general secretary of the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time, wasn't he? A. Apparently.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You were working in close cooperation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time, weren't you?

A. Up to a point. You are asking me about——

Q. (Interposing): I will continue to read the article——

A. (Interposing): I am kind of mixed up. What meeting do you mean?

Q. You know the meeting I mean.

A. I think I know. Do you mean the meeting called by the twenty-seven unions?

Q. I mean the meeting in Eagles' Hall in which Roy Hudson spoke.

A. That is a meeting called by the twenty-seven unions?

Q. What do you mean?

A. I am referring to that meeting. If you are referring to another, I don't know anything about another meeting.

Q. Have you a lapse of memory?

A. I have no lapse of memory.

Q. To continue reading: [5860]

"The majority of those present were strikers. Among the speakers were Henry Schmidt, of the ILA Strike Committee"——

You remember Henry Schmidt, don't you?

A. Yes; sure.

Q. A friend of yours? A. A very good one.

Q. Your pal? A. And how!

Q. And he was there. Now, to continue reading:

" . . . and Caves, of the International Seamen's Union rank and file."

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

You remember Caves?

A. Sure—Chairman of the Sailors' Strike Committee.

Q. (Continuing):

"The wife of Nick——"

A. (Interposing): Bordeau, the man that got shot during the strike.

Q. How do you pronounce it?

A. Bordeau.

Q. No, this is someone else—"Nick Coundeorakis"—— A. I don't know him.

Q. (Continuing):

". . . member of the Communist Party, who was killed in front of the ILA hall, was on the platform."

Do you remember that now? [5861]

A. The only person I remember being killed at that time was Nick Bordeau. I thought you were going to refer to him.

Q. Maybe that is an alias for Nick Coundeorakis. Was Nick Bordeau a Greek? A. Yes.

Q. And might have been the same person?

A. Possibly. Nick Bordeau was the only person I remember being killed down there at that time.

Q. And then in parenthesis at the end appears this: "(See Hudson's Speech elsewhere in this issue.)"

After seeing this Western Worker issue for Monday, July 16, 1934, and calling attention to Roy Hudson's speech there in San Francisco in the

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Eagles' hall, and advocating a general strike, don't you want to change your testimony as to when you met Roy Hudson? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. I don't recall meeting Roy Hudson during the Maritime Strike and the general strike.

Q. Now, you recognize the Western Worker as the Western organ of the Communist Party of the USA, Don't you? A. Yes.

Q. That isn't a fake copy, is it?

A. (Examining publication.) There is no mention of Hudson at the meeting I am referring to.

[5862]

Q. Try and refer to the same meeting I am referring to.

A. I don't recall that one. I think that if I check, or you check, you will find I was with the Strike Strategy Committee somewhere else.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this Western Worker in evidence as Government's Exhibit next in order.

Mr. Grossman: We object on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid. Otherwise, it seems to be an attempt to introduce as evidence the news story contained in the paper.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has identified the paper, the articles I read.

Mr. Grossman: Assuming Mr. Bridges said it looked like the Western Worker, that doesn't mean it is proper to introduce it as evidence because there is no evidence contained in that paper that is properly before this court.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Let your expert examine it.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. This is a serious question. We have received a great deal of similar testimony, similar exhibits.

Your objection is that this is hearsay from an undisclosed source?

Mr. Grossman: Certainly. Even if a proper foundation is laid, which I doubt, it is incompetent, irrelevant and [5863] immaterial. I would like to know for what purpose it is introduced. If it is to prove the facts set out in the articles, it certainly is the kind of hearsay that is not admissible.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is admissible, but only used to refresh his recollection.

It may be marked for identification.

I can't see how it is evidence otherwise.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court will recall that the witness testified last Thursday that if anybody made a speech in 1934——

Presiding Inspector: This is no proof that anyone did make a speech. You will have to have something more than a mere newspaper account.

Mr. Gladstein: I recall the same question coming up during the cross examination of Mr. McCuistion, and you ruling was the same, that the newspaper article was not evidence.

Presiding Inspector: It may be marked for identification. The only value is as a source of refreshing his recollection. When his recollection is refreshed his testimony is the material part.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: This paper here also contains the text of Roy Hudson's speech.

Presiding Inspector: That is no proof of it unless——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): And it contains a [5864] photograph of Roy Hudson.

Presiding Inspector: We can't try this on newspaper accounts.

I will allow it to be marked for identification.

(The publication referred to was thereupon marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 282.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. The same issue of the Western Worker, Government Exhibit 282 for identification, contains a full text of Roy Hudson's speech. Let me read you the last two paragraphs of that speech:

"Go ahead in the struggle for the establishment of a united front, build up a fighting organization in the course of the strike. Murders do not stop our struggle. Monday we will demonstrate that we will continue to fight that other workers have died for.

"Our ace in the hole—the ace in the hole of the working class—must be an answer to the bosses' attacks with a general strike. This must be done by the rank and file. Local after Local is going on record as being in favor of a general strike. Demonstrate at the Central Labor Council. Go forward to a rank and file conference and make a decision for a general strike."

Do you now recall Roy Hudson's speech at Eagles' Hall on that day? [5865] A. No.

Q. You still don't?

A. No. If that had been an important instance I would have recalled it.

Q. On page 4 of the issue of the Western Worker appears a photograph of Roy Hudson. Do you recognize it?

A. (Examining photograph): Yes.

Q. That is a photograph of Roy Hudson?

A. Uh huh (affirmative).

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence, if your Honor please, for the——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): We will agree to the admission of the photograph, but not the document. That may be a ruse to get the whole paper in. We submit; by cutting out the picture, he can get the same effect.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't want to destroy the picture, I mean the paper.

Presiding Inspector: Counsel concedes you may have the picture, but I don't think the picture aids in any way.

I will adhere to my ruling.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you testified, also last Thursday, that the first mailing address of the Waterfront Worker, after you and your group of longshoremen took it over, was 3470 Nineteenth Street, or Market Street —I gave the wrong number. I have another——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

[5866] A. (Interposing): ——821.

Q. 830 Market Street, room 421, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Those rooms were occupied by the Needle Trades Union, were they not?

A. I think so. I am not quite sure.

Q. Of which Sam Diner was an official?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. And the Needle Trades Union was also a TUUL Union, was it not?

A. I believe that is so.

Q. How long did you continue to retain that address as the mailing address of the Western Worker—of the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. But—what was the Waterfront Worker's next address?

A. 3470 Nineteenth Street.

Q. How did you happen to get that address as a mailing address of the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't recall. I think that it was for the purpose of switching it around, and getting a new address, and in that way divorce it from the waterfront, from the MWIU group, and the other group that had been putting out the paper. [5867]

Q. And how was this brought about?

A. I can't recall exactly. I think one of the fellows connected with the Waterfront Worker—as a matter of fact, hearing the testimony here and looking at the Exhibits, I believe the man who helped to rent the box was one of them. That's Mann. Herman Mann.

Q. What was that man's name?

A. Mann.

Presiding Inspector: Herman Mann.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. M-a-n-n?

A. Yes. He was one of the original group. And, incidentally, I have thought of a few more that I can give you any time you want them.

Q. I told you to raise your hand. You remember a few more? A. Yes.

Q. Mann was one. A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any more?

A. Michaelson; a man named Andy Thor; a man named Marshall Olsen; a couple more. For example, their nicknames, I recall a fellow we used to call "Mac". I can't think of the rest of the name. I have been trying to think it up, but that is all I can think of.

Q. Who contributed the most articles to the Waterfront [5868] Worker?

A. When? Right at the start?

Q. Throughout the whole period?

A. That would be hard to say. The contributions came in from numbers of people. That would be hard to say who contributed the most. The articles were contributed by dozens of men on the waterfront, either verbally or written.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And how many articles did Harry Jackson contribute?

A. I don't know. I doubt whether he—it's possible he contributed some. I don't recall that. He mightn't have contributed any.

Q. How many did Sam Darcy contribute?

A. None.

Q. Huh? A. None.

Q. How many did Elaine Black contribute?

A. None so far as I remember.

Q. How many did Schneidermann contribute?

A. I don't think—Schneidermann wasn't even around then. He didn't come to San Francisco until, as far as I know—until 1936.

Q. The Waterfront Worker was not in existence then?

A. I think it had folded up before he come to San Francisco.

Q. Now, to go back to this address, 3470 19th Street, you say that's the next address after the one at 830 Market [5869] Street? A. Yes.

Q. With whom did you discuss the change of address of the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you talk about it with—did you talk to Harry Jackson?

A. I don't specifically remember that.

Q. Huh?

A. It's entirely possible I did.

Q. And why would you be talking to Harry

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Jackson at that time regarding the moving of the address for the Waterfront Worker?

A. I thought I had explained that. Our purpose in having a mailing address was to pick up mail and it wasn't to be picked up by any of us. The place was being watched.

Q. And whose address was 3470 19th Street?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh?

A. I don't know. We weren't concerned with that.

Q. And who obtained the service at that address, like the gas service and the electric service?

A. I didn't know that. I know now.

Q. You know now, don't you? A. Sure.

Q. You know now that it was Walter Lambert?

[5870]

A. According to the records you showed here. It was the first I knew of it.

Q. Had you met Walter Lambert at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew who Walter Lambert was?

A. Oh, yes, yes.

Q. And who was he?

A. I forget his exact position, but I knew he was an official in the Communist Party.

Q. And for how long had he been an official in the Communist Party?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And when prior to the time he had applied for service at that address, 3470 19th Street, did you know Walter Lambert?

A. I met Lambert in the Labor Council in 1933 upon the occasion of a Cigar Makers' strike.

Q. 1933. And that's the first time you met him?

A. The first time I recall meeting him, yes.

Q. How many meetings did you have with Walter Lambert thereafter? A. None.

Q. Huh? A. None. [5871]

Q. At any time?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Was Walter Lambert connected with the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. But you do know that he was connected as an official of the Communist Party? A. Sure.

Q. How did it happen, if you know, how Walter Lambert applied for service at 3470 19th Street?

A. How do I know that?

Q. Yes.

A. I saw it here in this hearing.

Q. Can you explain that?

A. No. The first I knew of it.

Q. You can't explain it?

A. Can I explain how I knew? Is that the question?

Q. Why Walter Lambert applied for service at 3470 19th Street?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't know. Possibly because he wanted gas and lights, would be the most logical explanation.

Q. What did he want gas and lights for?

A. The same reason I would want them.

Q. What was that address at 3470 19th Street?

A. What was it? [5872]

Q. Yes. Was it a home?

A. I couldn't tell you. I was never there.

Q. You were never there? A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know it was a hall, don't you?

A. Know it was what?

Q. A hall? A. I do not.

Q. Where was the——

A. (Interposing): As a matter of fact, I had the impression it was a home.

Q. Now, you saw this Government's Exhibit 219, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Application for service? A. Yes.

Q. At 3470 19th Street, made out by Walter Lambert? A. Yes.

Q. And you saw also that he stated that the premises there were occupied as "halls"?

A. I didn't. When I saw that Exhibit I got a brief look at it here when the lawyers were looking it over, and they gave it back to you. I would have liked to see more of it, but I didn't get a chance.

Q. And you saw on the back of it that Walter Lambert gave his occupation as at that time "manager, Workers Ex-Service Men's League". [5873]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. You say did I see that?

Q. Yes.

A. I did not. I never had a chance to look the thing over. All I saw was that the bills were made out to Lambert. I didn't look any further.

Q. Now, there are two of these applications: One on 8/15/1933 and one on 8/12/1933 for services at this same address, 3470 19th Street. On the one for 8/15/1933 Walter Lambert states that the premises was occupied as halls. On the one for—is that correct?

A. (Examining Exhibit): In this application, yes.

Q. And on the second one it is stated that the premises were occupied as "assembly rooms". Is that correct?

A. That's what it says, yes.

Q. Now, having that in mind does it refresh your memory as to why you transferred the name and address of the Waterfront Worker from this address on Market Street to 3470 19th Street?

A. No. I think we transferred it for the reason to protect ourselves and remain unknown as the people putting out the paper, for the reasons I have stated.

Q. Now, was the Waterfront Worker mimeographed at 3470 19th Street? A. It was not.

Q. Where was it mimeographed? [5874]

A. It was mimeographed in one of the fellow's homes by his wife.

Q. What fellow's home?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I can't specifically remember that. I have been trying to.

Q. You can't remember that?

A. No. I don't know if it was—it was mimeographed at one of the fellow's homes. We rented a mimeograph machine.

Q. Who cut the stencils for the mimeograph machine?

A. One of the fellows whose wife was a stenographer.

Q. And you don't remember his name?

A. The same person. That's where the mimeograph machine was. That's where the typing was done.

Q. Was it John Schomaker?

A. I was thinking of Schomaker. I am not sure if it was or not.

Q. How long did you continue to retain that 3470 19th Street address as a mailing address for the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't know. Not very long I don't think. I am not sure.

Q. Then what happened?

A. Well, I know we got a Post Office address. I have seen that by the Exhibits that were introduced here.

Q. Now, how did it come about that you transferred to a Post Office box this mailing address?

A. I can't remember that. [5376]

Q. You mean you can't explain it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I think it is a difference. Those matters are not very important, and there would be nothing——

Q. (Interposing): You mean it is not important that you were using as an address for your Waterfront Worker an address occupied by a known Communist?

A. It wasn't as important——

Q. (Interposing): Not of importance to you?

A. Not as important to us at that time as possibly losing our jobs or getting run out of the city and thrown in jail or something.

Q. Did anybody discover why you were using this Walter Lambert's address?

A. Discover why we were?

Q. Yes, as the mailing address for the Waterfront Worker?

A. Did anybody discover why we were using that address?

Q. Yes?

A. I don't know what you mean by that.

Q. Well, why did you change the mailing address from Walter Lambert's premises?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? [5877] A. I don't know.

Q. Would there be any reason for changing it?

A. Possibly was.

Q. And you don't know what the reason was?

A. No. Maybe, look in the paper. If you have got a copy of it, look in the paper. It might tell you.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you get orders from Sam Darcy to change it?

A. Never had orders from Darcy in my life.

Q. Did you get orders from Harry Jackson to change it?

A. Never had orders from Harry Jackson in my life.

Q. Whom did you get orders from to change the address of the Waterfront Worker?

A. From no one. We were able to do a pretty efficient job all by ourselves.

Q. And you don't know why you changed the address?

A. No, not off-hand. Can't remember why we changed the address. It wasn't important.

Q. It wasn't important to whom?

A. No. To us.

Q. And who went up to rent the Post Office box?

A. I don't know.

Q. How did it happen?

A. I don't know that either.

Q. Huh?

A. I am telling you that it wasn't important. It [5878] didn't make a good enough impression upon me at that time.

Q. But it does make an impression on you to know that Harry Jackson went up to rent the Post Office box for your Waterfront Worker?

A. I know that.

Q. You know that?

A. In testimony here.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What kind of an impression does that make upon you?

A. Not a very——

Q. (Interposing): Not a very good one?

A. (Continuing): ——important one, no.

Q. Do you know any reason why Harry Jackson should go up and hire and rent a Post Office box for your Waterfront Worker?

A. I can think of the reason. If you want to know the reason I will tell you.

Q. I want the truth.

A. That is all you are getting.

Q. The real reason. What was the real reason for Harry Jackson going up to rent a Post Office box for your Waterfront Worker?

A. Jackson was known—Jackson was out in the open. They couldn't do any more to Jackson than they had already done.

Q. What do you mean "Jackson was out in the open"? [5879] Do you mean that everybody knew that he was a Communist? A. No.

Q. What do you mean?

A. Everybody knew he was trying to organize.

Q. Organize what? A. The workers.

Q. On what? A. On the waterfront.

Q. In what union?

A. In the M. W. I. U.

Q. And in the Communist Party?

A. I wouldn't call that a union.

Q. No, I wouldn't either.

A. We agree on that then.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was he soliciting members for the Communist Party also?

A. I am sure he was.

Q. Huh? A. Yes, sure.

Q. And you were working with Harry Jackson? A. In some respects.

Q. Can you give us a reason here?

A. Yes.

Q. Why you were using Harry Jackson at that time to change these various addresses for your Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes. Now, listen to me when I give it. [5880]

Q. Yes. I will be glad to listen to your story.

A. I have already told you what the paper was for. The paper was to bring the attention of the various people in the waterfront and in sympathy with the waterfront to the conditions that prevailed on the waterfront. The paper was also a means of the men on the waterfront, for the men being able to express themselves without coming out in the open. The things that they were able to say through the Waterfront Worker, if they had said them openly they would have been blacklisted out of the industry. Therefore, that was the main reason the paper was anonymous.

Q. Now, you haven't mentioned a single reason why Harry Jackson was connected with the Waterfront Worker.

A. I am giving the reasons. You don't understand them, but I am giving the reasons. Now, we had to get an address, a mailing address where these written complaints could be mailed in. We also knew that there was quite an effort afoot through the city agencies, through the employers' own agencies and their own people to discover the people behind the Waterfront Worker. They had a couple of nice little slugging squads around there, too, also trying to find out who was behind it.

Q. Did you ever get slugged?

A. Well, in more ways than one, yes.

Q. Go on. Continue.

A. That's always part of the game. [5881]

Presiding Inspector: Let him finish his answer.

A. (Continuing) And, therefore, the thing to do was to pick out somebody who was already known, and if they were watching the place that was selected for a mailing address and they found that this person was going up there to rent it or to collect the mail or anything like that, and it was somebody already known to them, somebody they had already discriminated against as much as possible, it didn't hurt us, the real people behind the paper. So it was merely for the protection against the employers and the employer agencies that were at work to protect the people who were trying to bring out the bad conditions on the waterfront. And that was the only reason, no other one.

Q. Now, will you tell me why you used Harry Jackson to change the addresses?

A. Because—I thought I had said that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. That is your reason?

A. Jackson was so much out in the open. They had done about everything they could to Jackson. They couldn't do any more, even if they found out he was the whole brains behind the Waterfront Worker, which was not so.

Q. Is this correct? You went to Harry Jackson and said "Will you please change the Waterfront Worker's address for us? We don't want to continue it at the first address there on Market Street. We want another address". Is that [5882] correct?

A. I am not sure that that is entirely correct.

Q. What happened?

A. I don't know if I went to him, but this is what is correct.

Q. (Interposing) With regards to the changing of the address.

A. Harry Jackson was requested by the people who were concerned with the Waterfront Worker to change the address or establish an address to have the various letters and complaints mailed into, yes.

Q. And you say that Harry Jackson was out in the open so you used Harry Jackson?

A. That's right.

Q. Well, then can you tell me why Harry Jackson had to use an alias in getting that Post Office box?

A. No.

Q. Or can you explain that?

A. No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. But you know he did rent the box under an alias, don't you? A. I don't. Did he?

Q. You have heard the testimony here in Court. You have heard the name of Harry Glickshon, haven't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you have heard it testified that Harry Glickshon [5883] was Harry Jackson's alias?

A. I might have heard things testified to here. You are asking me what I know and what I believe.

Q. You have seen this Government's Exhibit 212, haven't you, application to rent a box in the Post Office; haven't you? A. I saw that.

Q. Well, look at it again. A. Yes.

Q. Do you see the name of "Harry Glickson"?

A. Yes.

Q. And he rented what box?

A. 1185. Our box.

Q. That is the Post Office box for your Waterfront Worker? A. That's right.

Q. So Harry Jackson came out in the open or was out in the open and because of that you used him to rent the Post Office box for your Waterfront Worker under an alias, is that correct?

A. That is not correct.

Q. Well now, who suggested——

A. (Interposing) As far as I know, the testimony I have heard here is that his correct name is Glickshon, the name he used on the box is correct.

Q. Was he known as Harry Glickshon? [5884]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Not to us he wasn't. He was known as Jackson.

Q. That is the only name you knew him under?

A. That's all.

Q. And is that the only name he was known to by others?

A. As far as I know, yes. He was known to us under an alias. He used his true name to rent the box, apparently.

Q. And how long did you continue to use that Post Office box as the address of the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't recall that specifically either. I don't recall whether we changed or kept the same box all the time.

Q. Who paid the rental for the box?

A. The Waterfront Worker.

Q. The Waterfront Worker. Did it go up to the Post Office and pay it? A. Yes.

Q. Huh?

A. I presume so. I don't recall a detail like that.

Q. Who went up to the Post Office to pay it?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, you know that Jackson paid it, didn't you?

A. You mean continuously? I know that that would be impossible.

Q. That would be impossible. Why would it be impossible [5885] for Harry Glickshon or Harry Jackson to pay for the box?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Because he was not there after a certain time. Glickshon left the city.

Q. When did he leave the city?

A. I think it was towards the end of 1935 or the middle of 1935 after the M. W. I. U. dissolved. He went to Seattle.

Q. He went to Seattle? A. Yes.

Q. And he remained up there?

A. Sure! So he couldn't pay the rent.

Q. So that up to the time he went to Seattle would he be paying the rent?

A. I am not at all familiar with how it was done. I don't know whether it would be paid by mailing the money in or by sending a check in or anything else.

Q. Who paid the original deposit for the box?

A. I believe it was Jackson, according to the records there.

Q. Well, was it his own money?

A. No. I think that it was given to him by us.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. I have a very definite recollection of when we took over the paper and started it up again all the expenses were met by us. [5886]

Q. You gave the money to Jackson?

A. For that purpose, yes.

Q. Where did you see Jackson to give him the money for that purpose?

A. I don't recall anything like that.

Q. Did you give him the money?

A. I don't recall that. I might have.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You said you recall definitely the incident.

A. I did not. I said I definitely recall that we assumed all expenses. But when you start asking me about details, who done this, that and the other I don't remember.

Q. Yes, so I notice. Now, how much money did you give Harry Jackson for the rental of the box?

A. I don't know. We gave him enough.

Q. When you say "we" you mean yourself and others?

A. Every time I say "we" I refer to everybody that was connected with the Waterfront Worker at that time.

Q. And who was connected with the Waterfront Worker at the time you gave this money to Jackson?

A. The ones that I recall I have told you.

Q. You can't recall any others?

A. Well, you asked me originally for the names of the bunch that got together first. Now, if you want to have me recall everybody that was connected with the Waterfront Worker, why, that would amount to hundreds and it would be almost im- [5887] possible for me to do it.

Q. Now, did you have a discussion with Harry Jackson at the time this money was given to him?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. And where did you give the money to him? Did you go to his home or did you go to the headquarters of the Communist Party to see Jackson?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. None of those things were necessary. Most of those transactions were carried on, as I say, just by standing on the waterfront on the sidewalk.

Q. You mean you carried on a transaction of this nature, of changing the address of the box of the Waterfront Worker, out in the street?

A. That is practically the way the whole thing functioned. Even the union functioned that way for quite a few months.

Q. You didn't go up to see Harry Jackson at the Communist Party?

A. It was not necessary.

Q. It was not necessary? A. No.

Q. And your testimony is now that Harry Jackson may have continued to pay the rental of that box up until the time he left for Seattle in the middle of 1935?

A. No, it is not. That is not my testimony. My [5888] testimony is that I don't remember whether that happened or not.

Q. Do you know if you paid for it?

A. If I went up and paid the actual money in?

Q. Yes.

A. No. I'm sure none of our group did.

Q. None of your group did?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. So then it is possible for Harry Jackson to have paid it?

A. Oh, wait a minute! Not necessary.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Who else would have paid it?

A. We might have sent up one of the fellows that would have peddled the paper. I am sure of this: We would send up somebody who couldn't be taken any steps against in so far as his job on the waterfront was concerned. Now, we were not foolish. We knew that they were watching for who as behind the paper and we knew that they were watching the mailing address, and anybody who went up to collect the mail was somebody they couldn't make any move against on the waterfront, generally speaking anyhow.

Q. They didn't follow the one that picked up the mail, did they?

A. Did they? Oh, I'm sure they did. [5889]

Q. Well, how did he get the mail to you after he picked it up? A. It never did come to me.

Q. Whom did it go to? To Jackson?

A. No. The mail could be opened up and then turned over to one of us on the waterfront.

Q. Who would do that? The same fellow who went up to get the mail?

A. That was all, sure.

Q. Where did he open it up?

A. He brought it right down to the waterfront. It could be opened up there.

Q. Right in the street?

A. Sometimes, sure.

Q. Would you be there when he opened up the mail? A. Sometimes, yes.

Q. The times you were there he would go up to this Post Affice box or these other addresses, go up and get the mail and bring it down to where you were gathered out in the street and open it up there?

A. We might be sitting in a restaurant on the waterfront or sitting in a saloon somewhere.

Q. And he couldn't have been followed while he was doing that? A. Sure, he could. [5890]

Q. Was he followed? A. Plenty of times.

Q. Huh? A. Plenty of times.

Q. Were you ever caught with the fellow who got the mail from these various addresses?

A. Undoubtedly they saw us talking to the man who collected the mail.

Q. And what happened? A. Nothing.

Q. Did anything happen? A. Nothing.

Q. Were you exposed?

A. No. By that time we were getting pretty strong on the waterfront and it reached the point where it was——

Q. (Interposing) I am talking about 1934 and '33, the latter part of '33 and 1934, the time you had this Post Office box.

A. Oh. About four or five months after we took the paper over we weren't particularly worried any more.

Q. So there was no necessity, then, for getting anybody to rent a Post Office box for you in 1934?

A. No; a few months after we took the paper over the Union was pretty well organized and we didn't have to worry so much about being discriminated. [5891].

Q. Oh. Then, you want to change your testimony and say that that was not the reason why Harry Jackson rented the box?

A. No. I still say that. You are talking about the initial renting of the box.

Q. Which was on February 7, 1934.

A. All right. And a couple of months after February of 1934 we weren't particularly worried about any discrimination. We were beginning to get our feet on the ground then.

Q. Now, you continued to use that box, did you not, until the Waterfront Worker discontinued?

A. I am not sure about that. Possibly. There might have been another change.

Q. Did you have any other mailing address for the Waterfront Worker? A. What?

Q. Did you have any other mailing address for the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Huh? A. Not that I remember.

Q. Now, to go back to this mimeograph machine, you say you and a group of longshoremen purchased it? A. Later on.

Q. When did you purchase it? [5892]

A. Oh, I can't remember that. We rented the first one and later on we made an appeal——

Q. (Interposing) You rented the first one?

A. Yes.

Q. From whom?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Oh, I forget. Some firm in the city.

Q. You rented a mimeograph machine?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you rent it for?

A. Five or six months or so.

Q. And you don't remember the name of the firm?

Presiding Inspector: He said that.

A. There are a lot of firms who do business like that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where was the mimeograph machine taken that was rented?

A. Where was it rented from?

Q. Where was it taken?

A. It was taken to one of the fellow's homes, the fellow whose wife typed the stencils.

Q. And later on you purchased a mimeograph machine?

A. Yes. We put on a drive through the pages of the paper and asked that donations be sent in. We printed a weekly itemized statement of expenditures and we put on a subscription drive and a donation drive. [5893]

Q. And you purchased this mimeograph machine?

A. Yes, and got together $500 through such a set-up and purchased the machine outright.

Q. From whom did you purchase the mimeograph machine? A. I forget that, too.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. From the same company?

A. I am not sure.

Q. Was it a San Francisco firm?

A. Yes.

Q. Local? A. Yes.

Q. You are sure you didn't rent it and purchase it from the Communist Party?

A. Gee! I didn't know they were in business selling machines.

Q. Did they have a mimeograph machine?

A. The Communist Party?

Q. Yes.

A. I am sure that they have plenty of them.

Q. You didn't get one of those? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. We bought our own machine brand new from some stationary firm.

Q. Did you retain a bill of sale, if there was any? [5894]

A. Possibly for a while. A lot of these items you are talking to me about was something that we didn't pay a great deal of attention to. Maybe in an efficient business office you would. This wasn't that efficient type of set-up and bill of sale for the ink and machine and things like that I don't remember and I don't know where they went. They were paid, that's all.

Q. At any time while you were putting out this Waterfront Worker did you support or the Waterfront Worker support a slate, a Communist slate of candidates for the municipal elections in San Francisco?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't remember that. It's possible. Maybe we did and maybe we didn't, or we might have supported certain individuals who were running for office. I recall they used to always be campaigning on the waterfront of all different types and characters.

Q. Now, who would ask you to give support to any particular candidate running for office?

A. The candidates themselves. They were down on the waterfront constantly asking us for support. Everybody was soap-boxing.

Q. Did Jack Bishop ever run for office in San Francisco?

A. I don't specifically recall. My memory of Bishop is pretty hazy. I think he was a longshoreman. I am not even [5895] sure of that.

Q. You are sure that he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I am not even sure of that. I never said that.

Q. John Diaz. A. Who?

Q. John Diaz.

A. That name makes an impression on me. I can't place him off-hand.

Q. Ed Harris?

A. Ed Harris. I know Ed Harris.

Q. You know him to be a member of the Communist Party?

A. I know him to be a member of the Machinists' Union.

Q. What?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I know him to be a member of the Machinists' Union.

Q. Do you know him to be a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Louise Todd?

A. Louise Todd was one of the people in the Cotton strike in '33.

Q. A member of the Communist Party?

A. Somehow or other I know she is now. I am not sure about that time.

Q. James Tracy? [5896]

A. I know Tracy.

Q. A member of the Communist Party?

A. No, a member of the Machinists' Union.

Q. And did the people that I mentioned run for Supervisors in 1934 in San Francisco?

A. I don't know. They might have.

Q. Neil Hickey? A. I don't know him.

Q. Ran for Treasurer?

A. I don't recall him.

Q. Now, you knew that these people that I have mentioned—Bishop, Diaz, Harris, Todd, James Tracy and Neil Hickey—were advertised as the Communist slate?

A. Not particularly. I don't recall that.

Q. Well, for the purpose of refreshing your memory I will show you an issue of the Waterfront Worker for October 18, 1933 and call your attention to an article appearing on page 2 under the heading "Vote for Whom?" I am reading now the Western Worker, looking——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Do you want to see this?

Mr. Gladstein: We will look at the copy while you read the original, or vice versa.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. "The Waterfront Worker in looking over the 30 can- [5897] didates and their platforms for the coming elections, recommends to all longshoremen to vote for the six Working Class Candidates".

Mr. Gladstein: What page did you say this was on?

Mr. Del Guercio: Page 2 second column.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. "Some candidates want votes because they were born somewhere in S. F. or other, some because they belong to some order or other, others promise economy, but at who's expense they don't say.

"We can all agree with the platform of the six Working Class Candidates * * * Cash Relief—Abolition of the Vagrancy Laws—No Evictions—Gas, Water and Electricity for the Unemployed—Unemployed Relief at the Expense of the Rich Taxpayer.

"Vote for Jack Bishop, John Diaz, Ed Harris, Louise Todd & James Tracy for Supervisors. Neil Hickey for Treasurer".

Did you write that article?

A. Sounds very much not like what I wrote but it sounds very much like an article that the Waterfront Worker would support.

Q. And does that refresh your memory now?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Meaning would I agree with that?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes. I agree with it. [5898]

Q. And did you support those candidates as indicated by this article?

A. Possibly. I don't recall what candidates were running against them, but they certainly must have looked the best to us, and if it is in the paper I supported it, yes.

Q. Well, it is in the paper, isn't it?

A. Well, you read it. Better let me see it.

Q. Well, you look at it.

A. (Examining Exhibit) Yes. The article is here and undoubtedly that was the position of the paper in supporting them.

Q. Then you did support at that time those candidates for office, is that your testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. Did anyone ask you to give your support to them?

A. Only in the way that it is set forth in the paper, as I said: That all the candidates for office at that time were on the waterfront requesting support.

Q. Did they ask you for your support?

A. I don't remember that specifically or whether any of them specifically asked me.

Q. Did Harry Jackson ask you to support them? A. No.

Q. Did Sam Darcy ask you to support them?

A. I have told you how it was done. [5899]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, how was it done? Maybe I misunderstood you.

A. All the candidates for office at that time were on the waterfront, the various—of all political denominations, urging that the men on the waterfront vote to support them. There was a specific reason for it. You could go down to the waterfront every morning at seven o'clock and you could speak to upwards of three or four thousand men. That's why they were all down there. Mayor Rossi, all the Supervisors, all the candidates for those offices, the Socialist candidate, the Progressive candidate and the Communist Party candidate, they were all down there. We picked out what we thought was the best of the bunch and supported them.

Q. You picked out, did you not, the Communist Party candidates?

A. Not necessarily. I don't know that.

Q. You don't know that?

A. We picked out all the trade unionists apparently.

Q. Let me refresh your memory.

A. What?

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this Waterfront Worker in evidence, your Honor, and ask that a photostatic copy be substituted.

Presiding Inspector: There is no objection to that. It may be received.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 283.) [5900]

"IMPARTIAL" BOARD SITS ON DISCRIMINATION

Union-Buster Sloss on Arbitration Board

From the very first beginnings of the ILA on the San Francisco waterfront, the ship owners showed that they were determined to keep the BB. Many men were knocked off at various docks and at dif ferent times for refusing to pay the BB dues or for belonging to the ILA. Inspite of the demand of the majority of the longshoremen to answer the shipowners with strike action to force the BB off the waterfront Holman & his side kickers refused to act and tried their best to prevent the rank and file from taking the initiative to act.

The Matson Co. has always taken the lead in the fight against the stevedores and it was there that a showdown had to come and did come in spite of all the efforts of Holman and his machine to hold the men back and thus give in to the shipowners attempts to save the BB. The strike on the Matson was more than a strike against the discrimination of 4 members of the ILA. It was a strike for the recognition of the unions. And for this reason it not only concerned the stevedores on the Matson but every stevedore on the front. The strike threw a strong light on many things. It showed that the shipowners are determined to fight it out and that the stevedores were just as determined. It showed, however, that little in the way of leadership can be expected from the top officials of the union or from the International.

The rank and file will have to develope leadership from its' own ranks. None of the strike tactics that are used by workers everywhere were used. No organized mass picket line existed at any time during the strike. Much in this respect can be learned from the miners, who bring their families and all sympathetic workers into the picket line & organize picket lines in front of scab-herding agencies. No efforts were made to make the strike known to all the unemployed or the seamen on the Matson ships, or to call on them for support. No efforts were made to involve the teamsters.

The failure to take these steps, which are necessary to win any strike, was mainly due to the lack of a broad strike committee and to the fact that the Matson stevedores allowed themselves to be bulldozed into folding their arms by means of the old Red Scare. The shipowners will always drag that out unless we act just as Scabby Peterson wants us to.

With the Matson ships tied up & support coming from San Pedro, the Northwest ports, and Australia, it was a mistake to submit to arbitration. The issue was clear. Either the Matson took back the four ILA members, or it didn't. What the striking Matson stevedores will get by arbitration is well illustrated by the fact that on the board of arbitration sits that well known union-buster, Judge Sloss, who as a member of the Industrial Association was successful in the breaking up of the building trades union in San Francisco.

In this case we can accpet no compromise. Either the shipowners recognize the union of our own choosing or they don't. We cannot allow ourselves to be blinded by so called "impartial" arbitrators. We Must Stand Ready for the Next Move!!!

ACTIVITIES OF "WATERFRONT-WORKER" IN THE STRIKE

While the leadership of the ILA, the Holmans down to those that want to get in (the Kulbergs) were busy making statements to the papers, that they could no longer hold the men in check, the Waterfront Worker did its' duty—3000 special Don't Scab editions were issued.

The group of longshoremen responsible for the Waterfront Worker was the only organized body who took any concrete steps whatsoever to fight the recruiting of scabs. The leaflet was issued on Tuesday night and Wednesday morning immediately following the walkout, calling upon the other stevedores, the seamen, the teamsters and all workers not to scab. This leaflet was given wide distribution, in the Fink Hall, along the skid road, at the Murray & Ready employment office, among the teamsters, all along the Oakland Waterfront, in North Beach, Mission district, and every other place where a possibility of attempts at precruiting scabs might take place. This leaflet was very effective in accomplishing its purpose, proof of this is the fact that the shipowners found it impossible to hire scabs among any of the workers whom the leaflets reached.

One reason for the success of this leaflet was the fact that it had been proceeded by another leaflet, which was distributed along the S F front just prior to the strike. This leaflet also called upon all workers to support the Matson stevedores in their demands. With the excetion of two men, who are dealt with elsewhere in this issue, these two leaflets received the heartiest endorsement of all workers who read them.

The Waterfront Worker takes this opportunity to point out to the rest of the ILA members, that if they do not immediately take control of their organization, by means of rank & file dock committees on every dock, they will suffer disasterous results from the misleadership from the officialdom of the ILA.

EXPEL THE TREASURY THIEVES

Those responsible for the treasury shortage will try to use the excitement of the moment created by the Matson strike to escape punishment. Because a struggle with the shipowners for better

N R A & COMPANY UNIONS

Dealing with workers through company unions is in full conformity with the NRA, said Robert L Lund, Pres. of National Ass'n of Manufasturers, in a statement addressed to William Green, Pres. of the AFof L.

Lund's statement dealt with Green's sham attack on company unions.

Lund complained that Green and other AFofL officials could not control the rank and file members, saying, "It is clear that a great deal of the organizing effort and agitation resulting from it is the work of men, some of them of very radical beliefs, who pay little attention to those leaders nominally representing them."

The National Association of Manufacturers says that 80 per cent of its members support NRA.

VOTE FOR WHOM?

The Waterfront Worker in looking over the 30 candidates and their platform for the coming elections, recommends to all longshoremen to vote for the six Working Class Candidates.

Some candidates want votes because they were born somewhere in S F or other, some because they belong to some order or other, others promise economy, but at who's expense they don't say.

We can all agree with the platform of the six Working Class Candidates . . . Cash Relief—Abolition of the Vagrancy Laws—No Evictions—Gas, water and electricity for the unemployed—Unemployed Relief at the expense of the rich tax payer.

Vote for Jack Bishop, John Diaz, Ed Harris, Louise Todd, & James Tracy for Supervisors. Neil Hickey for Treasurer.

THE OLD RED HERRING

It is an old trick of the bosses that whenever the workers strike to better their conditions, they are accused of being Reds. According to Scabby Peterson and one or two misguided workers, any worker who don't agree with them is a Red. But what do we see? It was old Scabby himself who sent in scabs to the Matson Co and not the so-called Reds. The best way to answer that is by sticking together and fighting our common enemy, the shipowners, instead of fighting among ourselves.

FRANK WORDS FROM THE RANK AND FILE

Editor:

How about Joes gang of scalers of Pier 44 moving freight from one side of the dock to the other, getting 35 cents per hour while hundreds of longshoremen are idle. Why don't the ILA correct this? We stevedores demand action, not promises as has been the case in the past.

A Stevedore.

STRAW HAT BEN. HE'S NOT SO HOT

About a year ago the Admiral Line canned Straw Hat Ben Knutson, but he was reinstated when he promised the Company that he could save them money—and how.

He had the gang bosses tend hatch, thus doing away with one man. However, about 6 weeks ago the candykid with the gum nose was demoted to hatch-tender himself, kid-gloves and all! Since then he has lost even that job, and has been relegated to the extra list.

We may mention heer that besides wearing kid gloves and dressing . . . like he thinks the well dressed gigalo does he also wears a wig to keep his brains warm so he caon hatch out more bright money-saving ideas for the Admiral Line.

A Stevedore.

OVERHEARD ON THE FRONT

Said one worker to another: "Say, John, I am a newcomer on the front, looking for work, and they call me a "prospector". Now I thought prospectors always had a jack-ass with them."

John: "Yes, but don't sit around and wait for the $1900 the Blue Book tells us we make, or you will be the jack-ass, and starve to death." Demand cash relief for all unemployed and part time workers!

QUESTIONS TO MEMBERS OF THE ILA

Should cops belong in ILA? If not, what is McNulty, who is a probation officer, doing in the ILA? The same people who sent the cops to protect the scabs on the Matson docks, most likely sent McNulty in to stool on the members of the ILA and also behind the scenes to run the ILA through Holmen. McNulty hasn't worked on the beach for years so he has no business in our union now. Not until we get rid of McNulty and his kind will we have a fighting union which will protect our interests.

FROM ONE WHO WANTS TO KNOW

When Holman recently got up on the soap box and chirped about being ready to die for the stevedores he must have been very sure of his ground, considering that a hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars have gone to the doctor to make damn sure that Lee doesn't lose his life.

With us stevedores facing a battle, these dollars might be one of the things that will spell the difference between defeat and victory. Demand an accounting of all funds!!!

From a Stevedore.

Dear Editor:

The thousands of Charity workers who refused to scab during the Matson strike should receive the support of every stevedore on the front in their fight for Cash Relief.

BIG LOAD
THOMPSON
SOME MORE ON BIG LOAD

Last month on the Admiral dock, B L Thomsen got a bright idea. He had the car gangs load the cargo on board slings during the day, then sent the dock gang home, using the only jitney drivers and hookers on dock—the hold gang workers—thus he saved overtime on half the gang.

Dear Editor:

The lot of the prospector is hard on the front. We must shape up early on the Embarcadero and if we don't make it which is usually the case, we go to various docks where ships are due. Some of us play some docks—others play other docks, but the story is always the same. It means long hours of waiting for the ship to dock, and then more waiting in the hope the Boss will pick us. And if we do get on it may last only an hour or so.

Now comes the question—how do we live? Well some of us live in the Rich street soup line on the skid road. Some of us who are married, work for the Charities and get in return, food that in most cases, could not be sold on the public markets, and for this rotten chuck we must work every third week.

Fellow stevedores and Waterfront workers: Demand cash instead of groceries. Demand cash at the expense of the very shipowners who are trying to force their rotten BB union on us.

YOU CAN'T JOIN THE ILA

Get wise, Dog Face. Remember the Matson strike.

EVERETT WALK-OUT SUCCESSFUL

A brief but successful walk-out occurred on the Everett waterfront, Oct. 5th. Resentment against a hiring system of favoritism and discrimination, under which straw-bosses would pick the men that they pleased. One hundred and forty men walked out of the Fink hall in a body.

Everett is one of the ports that has a duly elected grievance committee. This grievance committee informed the employers and in an hour's time Mr Weber, head of the Fink hall arrived from Seattle to arbitrate matters. A meeting was called of over 100 men and Mr. Weber pleaded with them to give the companys a break . . . not to hold them responsible for the action of their straw bosses.

After Wever left the hall the men took a vote

. . . agreed to go back to work only if they be allowed to pick their own men to do the hiring and the other straw bosses be fired. These demands were granted and the men then went back to work.

RECOGNITION THRU ARBITRATION?

The argument that the Matson Co agreement to arbitrate amounts to recognition of the ILA is but a stretch of the imagination. What are the facts? In the first place the Matson Co is not arbitrating directly with the ILA but thru an "impartial" board. In the second place after arbitration the Matson can still tell the longshoremen where to get off. The coal operators did that to the 100,000 miners and now they are striking for recognition a second time. The only time the shipowners will recognize the ILA without a fight is when the ILA becomes as harmless as the BB. What will be the gain then?

FIGHT FOR UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

In Jersey City, a man, unidentified, except for a button proving membership in a longshoremen's union, was found dead of starvation. In his pocket, he had one 5-cent piece, kept apparently for an emergency. The emergency came, and mercifully took him away.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Whatever is done will be done too late for him in this world.

TAKE A TIP MICKEY

While you were out fighting the Waterfront Worker, Mickey Rowen, scabs were being hauled into the docks. What did you, as a Union stevedore do?

The Waterfront issued a special bulletin calling on workers not to scab, which was given to seamen, longshoremen, teamsters, unemployed workers, and others, and you by your actions, tried hard to stop the only leaflets issued in support of the strike. The stevedores know, in spite of the write-up you received in the papers, that whether intentional or not, you actually gave support to the shipowners by your actions. Continued similar actions may win for you the reputation of being a rat, and we certainly do not want this to happen, Mickey.

GRACE LINE CUTS WAGES

We together with other seamen on the Grace Line were made happy recently when we saw the Blue Eagle flying above. But our happiness didn't last long. They fired 19 Chinese stewards and replaced them at the rate of one white worker for every three Chinese fired.

Their next step was to cut wages 8%. When the Santa Barbara found this out a ships committee was organized with the result they didn't get the cut. The Grace Line has announced that under no circumstances must seamen who belong to the Marine Workers Industrial Union be hired.

A Seamen.

Fellow stevedores; it is time that we forget what political beliefs the next worker has, when we are fighting for the betterment of our conditions; but rather we must unite in one common fight against rotten conditions existing on the beach. We must not be scared by the word Red. The bosses & their agents always try to keep the workers divided by calling the workers Reds because they strike and fight for better conditions.

NEWS FROM OTHER PORTS
ILA OFFICIALS MAKE AGREEMENT TO LOSE STRIKE

New Orleans, La. Dock men working on the government owned Federal Barge Lines went on strike on Sept 11 tying this line up. These men demanded 50c an hour straight time, & 75c an hour for overtime. Six men to a hold, four men to a car, two men to a bag. The Eight Hour day.

They got in touch with the ILA representatives, Darcy and Spencer who worked out an agreement to get the men back to work under the same conditions they were striking against. Being a government line, they got the recent Roosevelt 15% economy cut, reducing their pay to 34c an hour. The men work as long as necessary. Five men were cut off each gang.

During the strike there was no picketing, and scabs freely came to work. The strikers were warned by the ILA to beware of the Reds, or the government wouldn't negotiate with them.

This action was in distinct difference from the St. Louis strike of last August, where the bargemen led by the Marine Worker's Industrial Union organized a strong picket line, and won all their demands.

"Stockholm, Sweden—Following similar action taken in Danish ports, the longshoremen of Stockholm refused to unload the German freighter "Malkah", until it would pull down the Nazi flag it was flying.

JUST SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

The American Hawaiian line reports profits of 105,818 dollars clear. A Senate investigation of ship-subsidies now in progress discovered 66,000 dollars paid for carrying an entire pound of mail. During the past fourteen years the government has paid to shipowners a total of 3 & a half billion dollars. According to reports of the 22 Annual Safety Congress recently held in Chicago, the Marine Industry is only exceeded in severity rates by foundry, quarry, construction, lumbering and mining industries. Therefore the Congress decided to still keep this industry on the list of hazardous occupations.

conditions is on, it is doubly important for us that they do not escape. Now it is more important than ever that honest men lead the ILA. The trial of Holmen & others must take place immediately & when found guilty, expelled.

STEVEDORES! SEAMEN! STICK TOGETHER!

In the last regular issue of the Waterfront Worker we carried an article dealing with the unity of white and Negro stevedores in which we pointed out the shipowners policy of playing one worker against another as a means of breaking a strike and warned all workers to be on guard against any attempt of the shipowners to divide our ranks and lower the living standard of all workers on the Front.

That our warning was well founded is proven by the following facts:

On Thursday, Oct 12, in North Beach, a meeting was called by one "Fat", a colored tool of the ship owners. About 80 Negroes, mostly unemployed, were present. After listening to a white representative of the shipowners Ass'n make a long winded flowery speech in which he said, "If you will stand by us now we will stand by you later".

Later in the evening, at a resort on Post Street, between Webster & Fillmore, beer and sandwitches were set up at the expense of the shipowners.

Last Saturday night in a cellar at North Beach (No. 6, Stark St.) "Fat" again addressed a group of colored workers—this time only about 23 were present. This time he told them, "When you go to work, work as hard as you can. Build up a reputation, and maybe we can get a 5 year contract, when the strike is over".

After "Fat's" pretty speech, one Negroe got up and spoke in spite of threats of violence, pointing out that they would only hurtthemselves and that their own people would turn against them if they scabbed. Finally the entire gathering got up and walked out at the request of the speaker to show their solidarity with the strikers. They walked out leaving "Fat" and his secretary alone and bewildered in their foul basement.

WAR GOOD OR BAD

With war preparations going strong, with shipments of war materials constantly increasing, some workers think war is OKay. Look at the last war . . . we all had a chance to work . . . made good wages. Let us reason this out. First, is there a new world war to be declared and why? The statement that wars are fought to gain markets, wealth, and to increase the power of a nation, is proven correct by the capitalists statement in "trade follows the flag". Lack of trade then becomes one of the conditions which creates wars. A check of figures show the U. S. is losing 60%.

Much of this trade however was lost due to the fact that there has been a tremendous drop in purchasing power throughout the world.

The fight for the remaining markets becomes more sharp. Therefore all nations who must sell goods to make profits are spending untold billions to prepare to take the biggest slice of the world trade. The U. S. alone spent, out of a public fund, 938 millions of dollars for the army and navy this year. And other stunts are pulled. Wages are constantly cut so competing nations will be in a better condition to undersell on the world markets. Proof of this is shown by every $10 in wages we workers got in in 1926—today we only get $4.26. In addition to this prices are being boosted to 1926 levels.

We can readily see that even war preparation means more misery for us. At present, in addition to fighting among themselves, these capitalist nations are seeking to attack the Workers Republic, the Soviet Union, the only country in the world where wages go up, hours come down and there is no unemployment. War itself will mean 6% guaranteed profits for the bosses as provided by an act of Congress, and the army scale of pay for the workers.

[Endorsed]: Filed June 2, 1942.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I have before me now the Western Worker, San Francisco, September 18, 1933, in an article here appearing in the third column of the front page: "Communist Slate for Election in S. F. Nominated, Conference of workers organizations to endorse slate planned, Only workers ticket, A. F. of L. officials back Rossi Machine; . . .". You didn't back the Rossi Machine, did you? A. No.

Q. You were an A. F. of L. official at that time, weren't you? A. That's right.

Q. "Locals to be canvassed for Red ticket".

A. Yes.

Q. Was your local canvassed for the Red ticket?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't recall. Possibly it was.

Q. Would you say that it wasn't canvassed?

A. I couldn't remember that. It is entirely possible it was. I just don't remember.

Q. To read on: "San Francisco, Sept. 11.—The Communist Party has nominated candidates for the five supervisors and city treasurer, to be elected in San Francisco this November. They are: For Supervisors: Jack Bishop, Longshoreman; Louise Todd, office worker; James Tracy, railroad worker; Edward Harris, Machinist; John Diaz, Agricultural Worker. For Treasurer, [5901] Neil Hickey, Miner".

Those are the same names, the same persons that appear in your Western Worker here for October 18, 1933, on page 2, are they not?

A. Right, and were supported by the Waterfront Worker. They were running for office, and legally, I understand, we supported them through the paper.

Q. Now, this is the issue of the Waterfront Worker, Western organ of the Communist Party, U. S. A., isn't it, the one I have just shown you?

A. "Issue of the Western Worker", you mean?

Q. "Western Worker".

A. Yes, right.

Q. And is it true that the Communist slate for election in San Francisco nominated the persons I mentioned—Jack Bishop, Louise Todd, James Tracy, Edward Harris, John Diaz and Neil Hickey?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Is it true that they say it in there?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. The Western Worker wouldn't print falsehoods?

A. They possibly have made a mistake or two in their time.

Q. Would they make a mistake?

A. I would believe the Western Worker before I would believe the Hearst papers, for example. [5902]

Q. Do you believe that that is a correct statement, that the Communist slate——.

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): I think this question calls for conjecture and it wouldn't satisfy the requirements of proof.

Suppose the witness says that he doesn't have——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, he has said it so many times.

Mr. Gladstein: Suppose he says that he hasn't any doubt, that it may be so? That still doesn't satisfy the rule requiring proof of the fact. I don't think it is a good substitute to take care of that problem before offering the document in evidence, and we will renew the same objection.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that Mr. Del Guercio is pressing him for an admission in that respect.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have a right to do that.

Presiding Inspector: Of course you have the right to press him.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer the copy of the Western Worker in evidence as Government's Exhibit next in order.

Mr. Gladstein: We make the same objection.

Presiding Inspector: For what purpose do you offer it?

Mr. Del Guercio: For similarity of names.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, that is admitted.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I offer it for identification then? [5903]

Presiding Inspector: Yes. You may have it marked for identification.

(The paper referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 284 for identification.)

Presiding Inspector: He admitted not only the similarity of names but the similarity of the identify of persons. There is no question about it, I suppose?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is there any question in your mind that thos persons were the candidates of the Communist Party, Jack Bishop, Louise Todd, James Tracy, Ed Harris, John Diaz, and Neil Hickey?

A. I couldn't say with certainty, but I am sure that the city records would show whether they were not. They could be running on the Communist Party ticket without necessarily being Communists.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, just a moment, please. The San Francisco municipal elections and the county elections are non-partisan elections. It would be impossible for any candidate now or at that time to run on a Communist Party platform or any other.

Presiding Inspector: I can't accept that.

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't an objection, if your Honor please.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment! Therefore, any reference [5904] which indicates that they were running on any party ticket would be misleading the witness, because it would have been impossible at that time.

Presiding Inspector: The witness has assumed that that was so, I think. Perhaps I misunderstood him.

Mr. Gladstein: It might well be that all that actually happened would be that if——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, I object because it is on a matter that I want to press the witness on here, and also unless there is an objection——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Still, I must hear the objection.

Mr. Gladstein: We are objecting to the offer in evidence of the document, because no proper foundation has been laid for its introduction.

Presiding Inspector: It hasn't just been offered, has it? It was offered some time ago.

Mr. Del Guercio: A ruling has been made on that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I haven't received it except for identification only.

Mr. Del Guercio: For identification only.

Presiding Inspector: It has been marked for identification.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I will ask the question again. I don't know whether [5905] it has been answered or not. Is there any question in your mind that Jack Bishop, Louise Todd, James Tracy, Edward Harris, John Diaz and Neil Hickey was the Communist slate for election in San Francisco at that time?

A. Supported by the Communist Party?

Q. Yes.

A. No. I think that is correct. But I am basing my answer on what I read in the paper there. I don't necessarily disbelieve the paper on that ticket matter.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[5906]

Presiding Inspector: All right, Mr. Del Guercio.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, during the time that you and your group of longshoremen were putting out this Waterfront Worker were you collaborating with the Western Worker in any manner? A. No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. In anywise, in connection with the matters that were to appear in the Waterfront Worker?

A. No. It depends on what you mean by "collaborating," of course.

Q. Were anybody on the Western Worker giving you any ideas to be used in the Waterfront Worker? A. Not that I recall; no.

Q. Would you say that they didn't, that nobody——

A. (Interposing): I would say they didn't.

Q. Did Harry Jackson give you any ideas?

A. Oh, at the start; yes. We asked him how he put out the paper; and it seemed to be simple, and we figured we could do it. After we got rolling we thought we were very self-sufficient.

Q. And you told Harry Jackson, "We don't need you any more;" is that it?

A. I don't think we exactly done that, but we didn't need anybody. We felt we were getting along fine.

Q. Did Harry Jackson continue to give you ideas? [5907] A. No.

Q. Did you at any time, in the Waterfront Worker, tell the readers to read the Workers' Press? A. Oh, that is possible.

Q. What is the Workers' Press—what was the Workers' Press at that time?

A. I don't know; I don't recall what we had reference to. It might have meant a lot of things.

Q. Was it the Western Worker?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Possibly—the Western Worker and other publications.

Q. Communist Party Publications?

A. Not necessarily. We might have meant the Labor Council Journal, or might have meant the Leader—might have meant a lot of papers.

Q. Who drew the cartoons for the Waterfront Worker?

A. Oh, we had somebody quite an artist; I forget his name.

Q. Was it one of the group of the longshoremen putting out the paper?

A. Here is what it was: They were traced generally. In other words, you could pick out a cartoon from a newspaper, or a magazine, or something, and you could trace it, trace the general outline.

Q. Who did the tracing, who in your group?

[5908]

A. Wherever the paper happened to be stenciled, mimeographed, at that time.

Q. Who did it?

A. I am not sure; I can check up and find out. To the best of my recollection, from time to time the mimeograph machine was moved around, was located in this person's home, and in that person's home. I can check up on it definitely.

Q. You don't know who did the tracing, or who drew the cartoons that appeared in the Waterfront Worker, is that it? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who was it?

A. I can't recall the particular person's name.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was there more than one person?

A. I would know him, would have seen him. You must understand we knew a lot of fellows by their first name or a nickname.

Q. Was it a longshoreman connected with this group? A. Yes.

Q. Was it any of the ones you named?

A. I think he was among them; yes.

Q. One of those that you named?

A. Yes, sir. As I say, at times one of the fellow's wives done the tracing. I recall that.

Q. I show you the March 22, 1934 issue of the Waterfront Worker, and call your attention to an article in it, a [5909] cartoon appearing on page 2.

A. (Examining cartoon.)

Q. Now, will you look at that cartoon?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Who drew that cartoon?

A. Just a minute. I want to look at the story. It might help.

(Examining article): Well, I couldn't say who drew the cartoon, this specific one.

Q. The cartoon represents two workers?

A. Apparently that is what it is meant to represent.

Q. Does it represent longshoremen?

A. No—well, I guess they could represent any workers that pack a lunch box.

Q. What are they reading?

A. The Western Worker, according to the cartoon.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And immediately underneath that appears "Read the Workers' Press," does it not?

A. Yes. I think the entire article and the cartoon indicates that the Waterfront Worker was advocating the workers to read the Western Worker.

Q. Who advocated them to read the Western Worker?

A. The people that put out the Waterfront Worker, including myself.

Q. And you advocated at that time the reading of the [5910] Western Worker? A. Yes.

Q. And you knew at the time that the Western Worker was the official organ of the Communist Party of the USA?

A. I believe that is correct.

Q. No doubt about it, is there?

A. No. I think that——

Presiding Inspector: He testified to that several times before.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this copy of the issue of the Waterfront Worker in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Does it add anything to the testimony?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. It shows—it is documentary evidence of the Alien's cooperation with the——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): We have no objection.

Mr. Del Guercio (Continuing): ——Western Worker, the official organ of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. At times the Western Worker——

Mr. Del Guercio: Is there a question pending?

The Witness: No. I am sorry.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

WATERFRONT WORKER

Vol. 2, No. 7 March 22nd, 1934

San Francisco, Calif.

THE STRIKE and Its LEADERSHIP

The Waterfront Worker advises the men to go forward with the strike preparations regardless of the advice of the couple of weakkneed brothers who did their damnedest to disrupt the Special Strike meeting.

Brother Finnegan ran true to the form he displayed at the ILA Convention, when he came out for arbitration, and recognition thru Regional Labor Boards, which plan was discarded by the Convention, in favor of a Coast-wise strike to win recognition and our demands.

The Waterfront Worker wants to point out if we follow Brother Finnegan's advise of relying on Pres. Roosevelt's intervention, & allowing the shipowners another 20 days to prepare for the strike we will find ourselves in the same position as the auto workers, the Railroad workers, and the Wierton Steel workers. These workers were betrayed and promises broken on their return to work after they were assured of a square deal by the N. R. A.

The impression created by Brother Finnegin, that the District Executive Board has the power to call a strike or to end it—is wrong. The Executive Board has only the authority to negotiate and to recommend. The power to call off the strike must be left in the hands of the Central Strike Committee, who are the true representatives of the men. This is the only way we can be sure that the wishes of the membership can be carried out and the danger of sell-outs avoided.

We have had one experience with Labor Advisers, and now we have a lawyer who wants to dic-

BIG LOAD DEMANDS TONNAGE

It happened during a dark and stormy night not so long ago, one of the Admiral Line ships was working at full speed, the ship was late, cargo must be discharged in a hurry, in order to send the ship on her way and to the next port.

The Gaffer was none other than Ben Ohm, a character well known on the Frisco front. He was doing his best, urging and egging the men on to hurry their work. There was plenty of hollering & growling and sarcasm. The stevedores were sweating blood, for the going was tough, but all thought that they were doing their very best.

Then like a bolt of lightning from a blue sky the unexpected happened. Big Load Thompson appeared on the scene. According to very authentic information received by us B. L. T. was about "three sheets in the wind" he'd been splicing the main brace. And then something happened to Ben Ohm. Mr. B. L. T. proceeded to bawl him out, and told Ben that the 5 gangs working the ship were only averaging 87 tons per hour, only 87 tons per hour, just think of it. The steamship owners must grow many gray hairs worrying over this.

draws $200.00 per. Big Load Thompson gets $500.00 per month for thinking up schemes to cheat the longshoremen out of work. Money which should go into the pockets of the men as wages, go into B. L. T.'s jeans instead. He must be keeping a harem on $500.00 per month, while many a poor stevedore can't even take his wife or gal to a nickelodean. Well let's hope things are different after the strike, maybe there two characters can be eliminated.

WESTERN WORKER

READ THE WORKERS PRESS

Many workers in the marine industry are beginning to realize for the first time that newspapers do not print the workers' side of the story. Many workers are beginning to see the vast amount of resources the shipowners have at their disposal to try and confuse the men and get them back into the Blue Book. It is easily understood that the shipowners who can pay thousands of dollars for advertisements—are going to get the preference in stories sent to the press. Is there any worker foolish enough to believe that the newspapers are seeking the truth or will print the longshoremens' side of all the misery, the long wait for jobs in the shape up, the tramping up and down the waterfront in prospecting the beach, the speed-up, the bosses shouting and raving for more tonnage, when we longshoremen, thru our organization, the ILA, have no money to spend for quarter page advertisements.

We workers if we want the truth we must try and read the Workers Press. The Workers Press prints the workers stories. The hunger and misery we face when we go on strike, our toiling at Break Neck speed to build up profits for the Bosses. The Workers Press prints these tales truthfully, simply and boldly.

We must not only read our own press, but we must write for it too. The Workers Press has no reporters to send out in taxicabs with cameras and pads, the workers on the job, on the picket line, on the CWA jobs, in the soup line and flop houses, on the farms and in the shops are the reporters.

BLIND BOSS THREATENS GANG

Charlie Kallini, one of the bosses for the associated Terminals, warned his gang that if any of them walked out when the strike is called, the strikers will lose their jobs.

Charlie, you are blind to facts—you have as much chance of scaring the men from strikings as you have in keeping the tide from coming in. Get next t yourself, the shipowners only use you when you are useful to them, you can no longer serve them, you are junked. Stick—to your class—the working class. To hell with the shipowners and The parasites who rob us of what we produce. Stick together. Strike with the men.

"WHAT A MAN??

The other day, the young efficiency expert, Big Load Thompson came on the Admiral dock, packing quite a load of this 98 cents a pint liquor. Drunk or sober he is an efficient boss always. So he staggered up the gang plank and bawled Ben Ohm the gang boss, out for not getting out the tonnage. Good stuff Big Load, you had better take full advantage of your opportunity because the I. L. A. will soon clip your wings—drunken bosses will not be allowed on the docks after the I. L. A. gets recognition.

betterWorking conditions on the front. For 14 years the shipowners have been doing such tricks as this and they have been getting away with it. Now the time has come when we must put a stop to it. Longshoremen, steam schooner men, sailors, teamsters, & all waterfront workers stick together and win. Do not let the disrupters split us up by telling usThe seamen's troubles are not the concern of the longshoremen and vice-versa. We longshoremen can help the seamen win better working conditions and the seamen can help the longshoremen win I. L. A. recognition.

We must stick together. Let us go down the line arm and arm United. For better working conditions. For union recognition.

As we go to press we are notified from Stockton that the Gentleman, who was strongly recommended by our International Organizer. Mr. Kulberg left town in a hurry with ILA funds that the men had to scrape up to pay dues. Kulberg fixed it up so the men can't work any more.

A MILITANT WIFE SPEAKS AN APPEAL TO ALL WOMEN

Editor Waterfront Worker:

I am the wife of a longshoreman and being his wife I am going to fight with him in the coming struggle. This is not only the fight of our husbands, but the fight of every woman whose men work on the waterfront, be it husband, father or son, therefore like my husband I stand 100% in favor of the coming strike, which is our only way out of our uncertainty & to a great extent our misery.

I wish to make this letter an appeal to all wives and mothers—who have men working on the waterfront to join with them in their struggles and to understand the reasons why and how the men have to fight.

I am ready and willing to take my place alongside my husband on the picket line and in the fight for relief or in any way in which I can help.

We women have been silent long enough, it is time for us to act, for the men's problems are our problems. Their victory is our victory, their defeat is our defeat. We should organize the women to collect and distribute relief and to help in any manner in which they can. This fight isOur fight.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

So once again in closing I appeal to all women to support and aid the men.

The fighting wife of a Fighting Stevedore.
Editor P. S.

Wives have had to suffer thru the system of keeping longshoremen waiting around for hours awaiting orders when to report at work. This system has been very beneficial to the liquor sellers as many longshoremen while waiting are tempted to drink & spend perhaps most of their wages. Another good reasons why we mustWin our demands for job control and hiring from the I. L. A. Hall.

Hangman LEAVING

Editor Waterfront Worker:

What will become of all the Blue Book bosses on 39 when the Hangman leaves? Only Preacher Larsen knows and he's not telling. It looks like the Blue Book is going to; then what will happen? The Preacher says they'll all join Judge Rutherfords army selling books. Preacher Larsen is an expert book seller and after a few lessons from him the Blue Book force can make their living selling "Moses' Books".

The Preacher don't look for any extra work, he would sooner go around and pester people with his fanatic literature. Since the Blue Book got sick, he spends most of his time running between Pier 39 and the Blue Book. The Preacher knows all the bad sides about the I. L. A. and nothing but "good" about the Blue Book, in fact, he thinks he knows it all.

BOSS BEGS MEN TO GO BACK

Last week 4 California gangs were working across the Bay and men were ordered back to 45 at eleven o'clock, but due to fog the ship did not get in until 2 o'ck. Arvid Anderson sent 2 gangs aboard a quaker boat which had 2 hours left and the other 2 gangs were sent aboard the golden ship, this move would beat the 2 gangs outof about 2 hours waiting time and the stevedores like true I. L. A. men refused to turn to and be beat out of their money. When the other gangs heard about it they refused to take off the hatches and walked off too. Arvid Anderson began to plead and beg the men not to walk off but to come back and go to work. The men went back only to their original ships.

This is the kind of action that will win better working condition

AN ANSWER TO SCABBY PETERSON

The Waterfront Employees Union has been carrying paid advertisements in all newspapers statingThat the longshoremen are very unfair in asking for coastwise negotiations and a coastwise agreement. The Shipowners state they have no authority to speak for the Pacific Coast. They also state that it is illegal according to Gen. Johnson, to ask for a closed shop. These statements are deliberate lies on the part of the shipowners.

The Pacific Coast steamship Operators Association organizes and calls the rate conferences which sets the passenger and freight rates for the Pacific Coast. The newspaper advertisements is an attempt to misinform the men that the shipowners have no right to speak for the coast, this is an absolute lie.

Scabby claims it is illegal for the I. L. A. to ask for a closed shop although the Blue Book has maintained a closed shop for 14 years with the men being forced to pay dues and accept its scabby rule.

The fact that Gen. Johnson, as quoted by the Waterfront Federation, made the statement that it is illgal to have a closed shop this should prove to the workers that the N. R. A. is a scabby document, as all the rulings made are in favor of the employers. These facts were pointed out by the Waterfront Worker last July.

We must asnwer the shipowners, Scabby Peterson and his stool pigeons with a solid, united fight-

MESSAGE FROM STEAM SCHOONER MAN

Editor Waterfront Worker:

I am a steam schooner sailor and want to say that the men on the schooners are plenty disgusted with conditions. Every day we work 10-12-14 hours and if we happen to have a 4 to 8 watch when we come into port we have to work 16 hours at a stretch. The pay runs around $45.00 a month and 40c an hour for overtime after 8 hours. When we take aboard oil we used to get overtime for handling the oil hose and for standing by when we were oiling but all that has been stopped now. Almost every schooner has from 1 to 4 I.L.A. men aboard and it is no doubt when the stevedores hang the hook we will too. We have nothing to lose we are barely making a living, and I want to say in closing that the steam schooner sailors are not scabs but are behind the longshoremen in their fight.

An I.L.A. STEAM SCHOONER SAILOR.

Ed's Notes: When the strike is called, the steam schooner sailors should go on strike but do not leave the ship in case you are forced off the ship you must picket the dock when the ship is tied up. Do not just walk off the ship in sympathy with the longshoremen but present to the shipowners the demands of the crew.

PREPARE AGAINST POLICE TERROR

Already Thomas Plant, the spokesman for the shipowners, has made the statement that the S. F. Police will be used against the union stevedores. Chief Quinn has also stated that the police detail at Harbor station has been increased.

These preparations mean but one thing and that is the shipowners mean to protect their profits even if it means the shedding of the worker's blood.

The stevedores cannot take this lying down, we must be ready to defend ourselves against all attacks of the shipowners and their agents.

We must stand up like men and fight for the right to organize, strike and picket and to defend our right to struggle to better our conditions.

Didn't Andy Fursueth, "the old man of the Sea" have the cops beat up the young sailors and throw them out of the meeting when they wanted to keep up the strike when they had a chance to win? Andy Fursueth had that done and now the great leader Kulberg wants to chance the sailors back into Andy's arms. Say who is this guy Kulberg anyway to be shouting for the A. F. of L. anyway? Wasn't he an organizer for the I. W. W. at one time? It's damn funny he should change over so sudden. It must be the $10.00 a day, in other words he will serve any master who has the money. Your paper had a picture of Kulberg heading back for Cardiff, what is the meaning of this? Let us know. PEDRO PETE
DICKERS WITH THE LABOR BOARD

Reports come up from Pedro, that Pete, "the wonder man", has approached the Regional Labor Board of Southern California to see if San Pedro could sigh an agreement with the shipowners and let the coastwise negotiations go by the board.

If such reports are true, we would like to know how much money it took to buy Pedro Pete? If Pedro Pete can be judged by his actions in the I.L.A. convention acting as servant boy to Paddy Morriss and as a "Yes man" to "old lady" Bjorklund, we would say the price of a package of Bull would be a big price. Pedro Pete you have to prove you are on the up and up—your past record is against you. Anything can be believed of a servant boy of your caliber.

P.S. Anyway you always remain a louse.

BIG EMIL THE FOOTBALL STAR

Emil Larson claims he has 19 gangs ready to scab when the stevedores go on strike. We wonder where Big Emil got all the scabs? Could they be from Union Square? Or these husky he men from the Dugout Cafe?

NAPOLEON RETURNS FROM THE WARS

Editor S.F. Waterfront Worker:

Pedro Pete has returned with his army of four trusted captains from the Pacific Coast ILA. Convention. Pete in reporting did not say anything what the convention did or the program adopted, all he said was that there were 16 Communists on the Frisco delegation and Pete and Paddy Morris stopped the Communists in wrecking the ILA. He also said that these shipowners did not want to do business with the Frisco ILA because the men are too radical.

We got hold of a copy of the Frisco Waterfront Worker and the picture of Pete down on his knees before Paddy Morris is fine.

That's Pete all over—you stevedores in Frisco should have taken up a collection and bought him a new set of Knee-pads, his old ones are about wore out.

In looking over the minutes of the convention the men in Pedro can see why the shipowners called the Frisco Stevedores radicals, the Frisco delegation were the only ones to put up the demands of the men and they sure fought for the men all thru the convention. Pete has ruled the Pedro Local with an iron hand But We Are Beginning to See Thru the "Little Napoleon".

You fellows in Frisco keep up the fight, the progressives in Pedro are behind you and will stick to the last ditch.

Editor Waterfront Worker:

prospectors on the beach work these ships regularly. The lumber handlers thought it best if the ILA would run a lumber list and the men made the suggestion to Pete. What does Pete do but go to the Mr. Nichols and asks the king snipe of the Fink Hall for permission to run the lumber list thru the Fink Hall. This action shows what kind of a labor leader this guy Pedro Pete is. He is always running to the government officials, and he is always worrying about the poor shipowners. Pete says the men should be patient and take thing easy, the government will make the bad shipowners toe the mark. As a rank and file stevedore of San Pedro, I want to tell the coast stevedores that the men are fed up with Pete, Patterson and Hull. These baloneys have shot enough hot air into us and we are ready to stick to the demands of the men and to hell with the National Industrial Labor Board and compulsary arbitration.

A Stevedore Who Should Have Been a Delegate to the ILA Convention.

Editor Waterfront Worker:

Reading your paper, I sure agree with you about the necessity of united action by seamen and longshoremen. Being a seaman who has been sailing on this coast off and on for about 12 years, I can see the need of sticking together with the stevedores very plainly now, when the shipowners will try every way to get us to scab on the stevedores, but

Q. Were there any paid advertisements appear- in the Waterfront Worker?

Q. You heard testimony in this hearing here that the [5912] Workers International Relief was a Communist organization, haven't you?

A. I have heard it said here.

Q. Now, who wrote this article regarding the "Solidarity Offer of W.I.R."?

A. (Examining article): I don't know specifically who wrote the article, but I remember the incident.

Q. Could it have been Harry Jackson?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Could it have been Sam Darcy? A. No.

Q. Could it have been Elaine Black?

A. No.

Q. Did you write it?

A. No, not that I remember.

Q. Somebody wrote it?

A. If I recall writing it I would have no hesitation in saying that I did.

Q. Somebody did write it?

A. Oh, sure; somebody wrote it for the Waterfront Worker and sent it in; or one of the people connected, or concerned with the Waterfront Worker wrote it, and I can't remember.

Q. Who had the say about what was to appear in this Waterfront Worker? [5913]

A. Well, it was never, it was never very tight. Everything was printed in the paper as it came in—even articles attacking the paper. You will find, if you look through the various issues of the paper, you will find articles in there attacking the paper.

Q. Do you have any such issues of the Waterfront Worker?

A. I have no issues of it in that respect; but I am sure, if you have a file of them, you will find many of them like that.

Q. And you don't know then who wrote this particular article? A. No, I don't.

Q. It might have been sent in by Jackson?

A. Well, of course—I guess that is possible.

Q. Now, did you read the article? A. Yes.

Q. Let me read it for the purpose of the record, and it might refresh your memory:

"Royce"——

You know who Royce is?

A. I remember him.

Q. Who is he?

Presiding Inspector: He said he remembers the incident. What is the use of reading the article? If you want the incident [5914] why don't you ask him?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I have another reason for reading the article.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. There is a reference in this article to the International Labor Defense? A. Yes.

Q. What was the International Labor Defense?

A. The International Labor Defense.

Q. Was that a Communist organization?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You have heard testimony in this hearing to the effect that it is a Communist Party organization?

A. You have got to differentiate between the testimony being given here and what the real facts are.

Q. What are the real facts, as you know them, in regard to the International Labor Defense?

A. Not a Communist organization.

Q. You know that of your own knowledge?

A. I know it as an ordinary person. I was never a member of the organization. I just know the activities of the International Labor Defense as it applies to our trade union movement.

Q. Do you know of the activities of the International Labor Defense during the 1934 strike? [5915]

A. Yes; and in many other cases too.

Q. You had dealings with the International Labor Defense during the 1934 strike. A. Yes.

Q. And with whom in the International Labor Defense? A. Elaine Black.

Q. Elaine Black? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Where was Elaine Black's office during the 1934 strike? A. 121 Haight Street.

Q. 121 Haight Street? A. Yes.

Q. You knew Elaine Black to be a member of the Communist Party, did you not? A. I did not.

Q. When did you find that out?

A. I don't recall, but some time later.

Q. How much later?

A. I don't remember that. I think it was around after the strike, or many months after the strike.

Q. And she occupied offices at 121 Haight Street, the headquarters of the Communist Party?

A. I think she was the Secretary, or the ranking official that did the business for the International Labor Defense at that time. [5916]

Q. How many times did you go to see Elaine Black at 121 Haight Street? A. Only once.

Q. When was that? A. 1934.

Q. What month? A. May.

Q. Was it during the 1934 strike or after the strike had been called?

A. After the strike had been called.

A. I was sent up by the Strike Committee.

Q. Who from the Strike Committee sent you up there? A. The Strike Committee; all of them.

Q. Was there a vote taken? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have the minutes of that Strike Committee? A. I don't know if I could get them.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you ever advocate sending yourself up to see Elaine Black?

A. I don't remember. I was the Chairman of the Committee. They used to do pretty well without me advocating things.

Q. You say you were chosen to go up to see Elaine Black [5917] at 121 Haight Street, is that right?

A. I was one of the committee that went up there.

Q. How many were on the Committee?

A. Myself, Dietrich, and a third person.

Q. Now—and this was done at the meeting of the Strike Committee?

A. Official meeting of the Strike Committee.

Q. Did you preside as Chairman at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you propose your own name?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. How did the question of going to the International Labor Defense, or going to 121 Haight Street to see Elaine Black, of the International Labor Defense, come up?

A. At that time we were attempting, we were attempting to set up a defense structure to protect our people. There was three or four recommendations of the best way to do it. Fred Heiner, who testified, was a member of the Defense Committee, and he was suggesting one attorney; Dietrich was suggesting another attorney. The ILD had made an offer.

To investigate the three offers—they are the three that I remember—the Strike Committee sent this

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Committee up to investigate, to see what was the best thing to do. They brought back a recommendation, in connection with the ILD, against using the ILD, and that was concurred in. [5918]

Q. That was your committee, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you went up to 121 Haight Street, in accordance with the mandate, or dictates of that strike Committee? A. Right.

Q. And who did you see? A. Elaine Black.

Q. Anyone else? A. I don't remember.

Q. Who was the spokesman for the Committee?

A. Our Committee?

Q. Yes—you were on the committee?

A. Yes. I think we all spoke. I think Dietrich was the spokesman, as much as anybody else.

Q. Did you speak? A. I am sure I did.

Q. To whom? A. Elaine Black.

Q. Now, what did you say to Elaine Black?

A. Oh, I think we—I don't recall any specific conversation. I am sure that we told her we were up there as a result of the action of the Strike Committee to ask her to explain what their proposals were for proper defense of any strikers that were arrested, or got into trouble in any way.

After they had explained the whole thing to us we reported [5919] back to the Strike Committee.

Q. After "they"——

A. (Interposing): After she explained the whole thing to us.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Is it possible that Sam Darcy was there at the time? A. Not that I recall.

Q. Is it possible that Harry Jackson was there?

A. I have no recollection of Harry Jackson being there either. I am sure he wasn't.

Q. But Darcy might have been there?

A. He might have been in the building, or somewhere around. I only recall meeting with Elaine Black alone, and no one else.

Q. You said that an offer had been made by the ILD? A. Yes.

Q. Some time prior to your going to this 121 Haight Street? A. Right.

Q. Who made the offer and to whom was it made?

A. My recollection is that Elaine Black came down to the Union headquarters at some time, even before the strike broke out, or she came down before the Strike Committee, and made this proposal. As a result of her appearance this Committee was sent up to investigate.

Q. Did she appear before the Union or before your [5920] Strike Committee, or did she appear before both?

A. I am not sure. She either appeared before the Union or the Strike Committee. I think it was the Strike Committee.

Q. And you were there? A. Yes.

Q. What did she propose?

A. She proposed to utilize the International Labor Defense for the proper and adequate defense of any person who got into trouble with the law during the strike.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And did she tell you who the attorneys for the ILD were at that time?

A. I am not sure. Possibly she did. I don't remember that particularly.

Q. You know, don't you, who the attorneys for the ILD were at that time?

A. I think George Anderson was the leading attorney.

Q. Anyone else?

A. I don't remember any others.

Q. Now, you heard the testimony of your witness, Heiner, regarding the same incident? A. Yes.

Q. Did he testify truthfully regarding that same incident?

A. I wouldn't say that he was testifying in any other [5921] way, because his remembering of what happened and mine happens to be different. I am giving you my best recollection.

Q. But they both couldn't be the same, could they?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: That is for the trier of the fact and not for the witness.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Isn't it true that Elaine Black spoke at the convention of the longshoremen in 1934, February, 1934?

A. She might have; I don't remember off-hand.

Q. That was before the 1934 strike?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That was in February, 1934; yes.

Q. That wasn't the union, was it, your union, Local union?

A. That was a Coast Convention, Pacific Coast District Convention.

Q. And you were there?

A. I was a delegate there.

Q. You were a delegate? A. Yes.

Q. Don't you know if Elaine Black appeared before that convention and spoke?

A. I can't remember that well. It is entirely possible she did. It is entirely possible. I can easily check it up. I have the official minutes. [5922]

Q. Could you check that?

A. And how! I will check it.

Q. Will you please do that and be prepared to come in this afternoon with that information?

A. I will give you the minutes. You can look through them.

Q. Then you wouldn't know right now what Elaine Black spoke about?

A. I wouldn't be able to say with any certainty. There is no use guessing as long as I can look up the minutes and definitely find out.

I think the Marine Workers Industrial Union spoke there too.

Q. Do you know Bill Dunne?

A. I have met Bill Dune.

Q. When did you meet him?

A. Some time in New York, and fairly recently.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I forget the particularly occasion,—I was introduced to him.

Q. Who introduced you to him?

A. I don't remember that. It was at some social gathering, or some union dance, or something.

Q. Well, now, if it was a social gathering where would it have been?

A. Well, I am not that well enough acquainted with New York to say. [5923]

Q. At whose social gathering were you at the time? A. At whose?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, as I say, my recollection is it was some union social affair. I recall being introduced to Bill Dunne.

Q. You met him, you say, recently. Can you place it more definitely?

A. I am trying to place it right now. It was during one of my trips east; I will say within the last couple of years.

Q. Within the last couple of years—1939?

A. I doubt if it would be that long.

Q. Was it prior to your last hearing in 1939?

A. I don't think it was. I think it was afterwards.

Q. How long after? A. I don't know.

Q. Would you say it was the latter part of 1939?

A. It is possible.

Q. You were in New York the latter part of 1939?

A. No—I am not sure about that. I was back and forth to New York quite a bit.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Can you put it more definitely than you have as to——

A. (Interposing): No. That is pretty hard. After all, I meet a person, get introduced to them and——

Q. (Interposing): Who was Bill Dunne? [5924]

A. Bill Dunne—I think the main reason I know him, he was one of the Dunne brothers of Minneapolis.

Q. Is he also the Dunne of the Communist Party.

A. He is the same Dunne, that Bill Dunne of the Communist Party. That is one branch—after all, things kind of get mixed up. They all claim that they are Communists—Vincent Dunne, and the other Dunne brother, and Bill Dunne.

Q. The Bill Dunne of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know that.

Q. What?

A. I don't know that. I know he is a trade unionist.

Q. You would know him as having been the member of the National Executive Committee of the AF of L at one time?

A. No, I don't know that. I am not sure of that.

Q. Were you ever—— (pause)

Presiding Inspector: Where?

Mr. Del Guercio: I was just thinking—strike that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you know Bill Dunne prior to this time that you met him in New York? A. No.

Q. In the last couple of years? A. No.

Q. Did the Waterfront Worker ever carry anything about [5925] Bill Dunne during the time that you and your group of longshoremen were putting it out?

A. I don't know that; I don't remember. It is impossible for me to remember all these references to individual people that the Waterfront carried.

Q. Do you know of the Butte, Montana incident connected with Bill Dunne?

A. Not particularly.

Q. What?

A. I remember they were on a strike in 1934, the miners up there.

Q. Do you recall now that Bill Dunne being a militant leader of that strike in Butte, Montana?

A. No; not particularly.

Q. Let me refresh your recollection. I have here Government's Exhibit 250, the Waterfront Worker for December 1, 1934, and there appears on the first page of this Waterfront Worker an article under this heading, "A Birthday Party", the following:

"Come to the birthday party. Waterfront birthday party, Saturday nite, January 5th—8:00 P.M. at Albion Hall, 145 Albion Street,—around the corner from Duggan's Funeral Parlors.

"The Waterfront Worker is going to celebrate its 3rd birthday by holding a meeting at Albion Hall,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Saturday Night. [5926] For this memorable occasion, the Waterfront Worker has invited Wm. F. Dunne, one of the foremost trade-union authorities in America, to speak and explain the West Coast Maritime Strike and the Great San Francisco General Strike. Many workers are acquainted with Dunne already, knowing him for his militant history in Butte, Montana, and as a militant member of the National Executive Committee of the A.F. of L." [5927]

Now, does that refresh your memory as to when you first met William F. Dunne? A. Yes.

Q. Then the first time that you met William F. Dunne was not in 1939, recently, as you have testified, but you met him in 1934, didn't you?

A. No, I never. I didn't meet him on that occasion. After all, that was a question of inviting a trade union leader to speak, and I didn't meet him—I recall distinctly—I was sorry I didn't.

Q. You remember distinctly that you weren't there on that occasion?

A. I am sure I wasn't, and I remember that meeting; and there was no harm in having a meeting. It was December, '34. Dunne was in town and he just came from some place or other. But I never met him.

Q. How did you know that Dunne was in town?

A. Apparently that article—I can remember that much.

Q. Do you remember anything except what it says in that article?

A. I recall the celebration, and the meeting here.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I think, if you will look in other copies you will find out who was there at that meeting and who else spoke.

Q. Were you there at the meeting?

A. I was not. [5928]

Q. Where were you?

A. I don't exactly know where I was. I wasn't at the meeting.

Q. You know you weren't at the meeting, but you don't know where you were?

A. Listen—maybe it was on the December 23 when I was supposed to be in Fresno.

Q. That is very possible. A. Yes.

Q. You remember now being in Fresno, do you?

A. No.

Q. At the Communist Party convention in Fresno?

A. I am sure I wasn't there, and if you had not put it on Sunday I would have proved it too.

Q. As a matter of fact, this William F. Dunne was in San Francisco all of the 1934 strike, wasn't he, the general strike, for the three days of the general strike?

A. During the three days of the general strike?

Q. Yes. A. Not that I know of.

Q. How long did the general strike last?

A. It lasted about four days.

Q. About four days? A. Yes.

Q. Was William F. Dunne here?

A. I don't know. [5929]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Huh? A. I don't know.

Q. Maybe Government's Exhibit 191 will refresh your memory.

A. I saw that in the last hearing, that pamphlet.

Q. You did? A. Yes.

Q. You have read this (referring to Government's Exhibit 191) before?

A. Yes. I read it some time before the last hearing. I read it also during the last hearing too. I mean I read the entire pamphlet during the last hearing.

Q. Who wrote Government's Exhibit 191?

A. Supposed to be written by William F. Dunne.

Q. You knew that?

A. Listen, I am not exactly dumb. I remember that much.

Q. I know that.

A. I have seen this pamphlet, and it was written by Bill Dunne.

Q. Did he state the correct happenings of the 1934 strike, as stated here?

A. If I remember correctly, in most respects; but there were certain respects that he didn't.

Q. Can you tell me what are the respects in which he [5930] didn't correctly state them?

A. You read it and I will tell you. I can't remember that well.

Q. I don't want to take the time to read it all.

A. I will read it through and come back and tell you.

Q. Now, he states here on page 5:

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"The Marine Workers Industrial Union—affiliated to the Trade Union Unity League—raised the question of a general strike."

Is that true?

A. Raised it with whom—at their own union? If they raised it at their own union I guess it is true.

Q. (Reading):

"The Left Wing in the leadership of the ILA"——

That is you, isn't it?

A. Oh, I think you would call me a member of the Left Wing before you would of the Right.

Q. (Reading):

" . . . and the Joint Strike Committee of the Waterfront Unions, headed by Harry Bridges"——

That was you? A. That is me.

Q. (Reading):

" . . . in San Francisco, endorsed the proposal to call upon the Bay Counties' unions for a general strike." [5931]

Is that correct? A. Whose proposal?

Q. Is that correct?

A. Whose proposal—the first proposal for the general strike and the first movement for the general strike was made by the Joint Strike Committee.

Q. Then it goes on .

"Harry Bridges and the Committee of strikers brought the question of the general strike to the Central Labor Councils in San Francisco and Oakland."

Is that correct? A. Right.

Q. (Reading):

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"The official leaders endorsed it."

Is that correct?

A. What official leaders?

Q. "Opposed it," instead of "endorsed it."

A. The official leaders of what?

Q. I will read on:

"Bridges and the Committee then began a systematic canvass of all local unions affiliated to the Central Labor Councils."

Is that correct? A. Right.

Q. Now, even at that time you knew, did you not, that [5932] William F. Dunne was a militant Communist Party member?

A. No. I told you I didn't meet Dunne——

Q. (Interposing): This is the same Waterfront Worker. Did you ever use 37 Grove Street as a place where the Waterfront Worker could be purchased?

A. At no time—where it could be purchased?

Q. Yes.

A. That is possible. We tried to use a lot of places to have it purchased.

Q. Who made those arrangements?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Would you have made the arrangements?

A. It is possible.

Q. And if you did, with whom did you make the arrangements? A. I don't know.

Q. Was it with Harry Jackson?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Just a question of having it put on the newspaper stand for sale up there.

Q. Let me show you here the issue of the Waterfront Worker for January 28, 1935——

(The issue referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

Q. (Continuing) ——And on page 5 of it appears this:

"Waterfront Worker outmaneuvers bosses.

[5933]

"Again the Waterfront Worker is printing a small part of Bill Dunne's famous pamphlet, 'The Great San Francisco General Strike.' Every worker should read this lively and intimate report on the second general strike in America.

"The pamphlet can be bought at 37 Grove Street, or from the Western Worker salesmen on the Front every day."

I want to apologize here. I deceived you. I thought it was the Waterfront Worker that you were putting on sale at 37 Grove Street, but apparently here you were advertising Communist literature on behalf of the Communist Party. I don't want to deceive you.

Having called your attention to this article here, can you tell me what it is about?

A. (Referring to article) Just the top article?

Q. Yes.

A. That is a boost for Bill Dunne's pamphlet on the San Francisco General Strike, with the suggestion that every worker should read the pamphlet.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. That is the pamphlet here? (Indicating).

A. It says where the pamphlet can be bought.

Q. This one? (Indicating).

A. Yes.

Q. "The Great San Francisco General Strike," by William F. Dunne; Government's Exhibit 191?

A. Yes, sir. [5934]

Q. Published by the Workers Library Publishers? A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes; that is right.

I was looking through to see if we have any other ads about supporting any other papers. I am sure you will find them.

Q. Look and see if you can find any.

A. (Examining publication) Maybe not this one—but I might as well look while I have got it.

Q. Are you through looking?

A. Yes. I can't find any along the lines I was looking for. I am sure, if you will look through the various issues, you will find on occasion we urged that this, that, or the other particular publication be read, because it dealt in some way with the Waterfront, or our general problem.

Q. Did you collaborate with William F. Dunne in writing this book, "The Great San Francisco General Strike"?

A. No. If I had been asked I might have. I collaborated with a lot of people writing things about the waterfront.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. With how many members of the Communist Party have you collaborated in writing Communist Party literature?

A. None; not in writing Communist Party literature.

Q. Did anyone ask you to advertise the fact that this, [5935] Government's Exhibit No. 191, could be purchased at 37 Grove Street?

A. I don't know. Maybe we didn't need any asking. We figured it was a good enough pamphlet to advertise and support without being asked.

Q. "We figured"—who do you mean by "we"? Do you include yourself?

A. Yes; I include myself.

Q. Who else.

A. Everybody connected with the Waterfront Worker.

Q. Did your account of the San Francisco General Strike differ from William F. Dunne's account of it?

A. In some respects it does. I was in a better position to know about it than William F. Dunne, and still am.

Mr. Del Guercio: Excuse me. I am looking for a particular issue of the Waterfront Worker.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I have here a copy of the Waterfront Worker for November 19, 1934.

(The publication was handed to Mr. Gladstein.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing): I want to call your attention to an article appearing on page 5, headed, "Hearst —Lying Editor [5936] of Gutter Press. Boycott all Yellow Sheets—Read Working Class Press. A Call-Bulletin Newsboy."

Who wrote that article—and at the end it says, "We remain very respectfully yours, The Editors, Waterfront Worker, P. O. Box 1158."

A. (Examining publication): It seems to me this is in answer—here is the first letter. Here is the letter (indicating) written in by a newsboy; and an answer was given in the paper to the letter written in by the newsboy.

Q. Who wrote this?

A. It reads—the particular individual?

Q. Yes. A. I don't know. [5937]

Q. Did you write it?

A. It doesn't look like my language, but it doesn't seem to be a bad article to me.

Q. You adopt everything that is said in there? You would have done the same thing?

A. Well, generally speaking, yes. I think it is a good article.

Mr. Gladstein: I suggest that the entire article be read to the witness and the witness be asked whether he disputes any part of it. The purpose is to obtain the witness' views.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this an objection to the question?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: It is a suggestion to the procedure.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will have to let the counsel adopt his own course.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let me read you a portion of this article.

Mr. Gladstein: We will object to the reading of any portion of the article which tears it out of its context.

Presiding Inspector: You can read the rest.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I want to call your attention particularly to this paragraph: "Ragged Newsboy, the workers never forget the injustices heaped upon them by the ruling class and their flunkies." Would you have written the same kind of a sentence in connection with this same matter? [5938]

A. Well, I mightn't have used the same words.

Q. The same thought?

A. Yes. When they call Hearst a "flunky" of somebody I think they are right. I'll say that.

Q. I am continuing: "The terror, the brutalities, the beatings, the jailings, the murders, are never forgotten"?

A. I think that's a true statement. You could go down and ask the fellows on the 'front.' They haven't forgotten.

Q. I will continue: "These impressions are stamped upon our minds forever and ever." They are stamped on your mind too, aren't they?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I sure remember them.

Q. Now, "One day soon those sadistic culprits shall answer before a Workers' Tribunal"?

A. I hope so.

Q. Huh? A. I hope so.

Q. You believe in the Workers' Tribunal, do you?

A. Well, part of that has been accomplished. There was a change of government in the State of California and some of them had to answer a little bit.

Q. That is the dictatorship of the proletariat?

A. Oh, you are reading something in there that is not there.

Q. I will continue, the last paragraph. [5939]

A. Yes.

Q. "Workers, read the working class press—The Western Worker printed twice weekly and the Daily Worker, the only working-class daily in America." Does that express your thought, too.

A. In preference to the Hearst press? Absolutely. I'll advocate that they read those papers before they would read and believe the Hearst press.

Q. Now, are you able to state who wrote that article? A. Specifically, no.

Q. As to the particular individual who was responsible for the article.

A. The group behind the Waterfront Worker, including myself.

Q. You would be responsible for it? You wouldn't evade responsibility for this article, would you?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No, I don't think I could.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will offer this in evidence, if your Honor please, as Government's Exhibit next in order.

Presiding Inspector: It will be received without objection.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 286.)

WATERFRONT WORKER

Volume II Number 35 November 19, 1934

San Francisco

LET'S ACHIEVE COAST UNITY

Don't Let The Shipowners Worsen Conditions

Upon looking over the situation and current events along the Front we must point out to the longshoremen that a critical situation exists on the Waterfront.

The S. F. longshoremen are certainly the most militant of any group existing along the Coast. The men in the other marine crafts are well aware of this and take advantage of the militancy existing in S. F.; for instance—seamen are continually striking their ships when arriving in S. F. knowing they will receive full support from the S. F. longshoremen.

The employers accuse the

Page 2 Waterfront Worker November 9, 1934

I. L. A. of breaking the award—and accuse its leaders of being irresponsible because they support the men every time the longshoremen take action. The strikes occurring during the past ten or twelve days at the Dollar Docks, Piers 34 and 23, were deliberately provoked by the employers who tried to increase loads. They are doing this in order to worsen conditions, and if we fight back they pretend that we only want to make trouble.

The strikes mentioned above were caused mainly by the employers demanding that bigger loads be hoisted. They have been satisfied with small loads since the termination of the strike, but are suddenly taking an attitude of offensive; they may attempt a lock-out in this port, hoping of course that the other ports will not support S. F. The infamous Joe Ryan will certainly stab us in the back at the first chance he gets. We stopped him from selling out the strike last summer and Fink Ryan stepped out of the picture for awhile, but he left his loyal henchmen on the job. These boys are still with us and doing everything in their power to stop and hinder the work of the Relations Committee. The District officials, Lewis, Morris, Pedro Pete and the rest of those "officials" did nothing to organize and help win the strike. On the contrary, they worked overtime to betray us. Now, they are working to split us up.

What is Lewis, drawing his $60:00 a week doing to build Coast unity. Nothing, on the contrary, he is trying to split the coast. Pedro Pete, another District official, is also sitting back doing the same thing. Why have such men represent us? Now is the time to build the Pacific Coast Federation. Now is the time to build in order to hold the gains we won through our splendid fight.

A leader is judged by the manner in which he leads his army. All Lewis was concerned with was to draw his $60.00 a week, which has got all during the strike and to "keep from being a playmate of Tom Mooney," as he said.

Temporarily a policy of watchful militancy be adopted by the S. F. longshoremen. The militant spirit existing must not be allowed to die. However, pull your punches for awhile so far as improving conditions further, but dont let the bosses worsen conditions. Let's keep status quo until our men on the board adopt working rules This should be done within a few days.

Remember, the employers want a group of meek workers along the Front, but meekness is something S. F. longshoremen do not possess.

The concentration of cops on the waterfront is ample proof that the shipowners are contemplating some dirty work; intimidation of the workers by these methods is an old trick with which we are acquainted.

The "Marine Federation" must be made into a reality. The marine workers along the entire Coast must be drawn in—only by unity and solidarity can present conditions be retained and undesirable conditions eliminated.

Remember the good ship, I.L.A Local 38-79, is being held to her right course by your local militant leaders, but the employers and fakers are always trying to run the ship on the rocks.

SPECIAL COP MALONEY

Young Maloney, driving jitney for the Calif. Stev. Co. at Pier 28, seems to be displaying a great amount of courage these days. During the General Strike this same man sold his services as a special cop, joining a machine set up to destroy the workers, and when the strike was over, young Maloney, through the influence of his Pa and Uncle, Ed and Jack Malony, who are big shots at Piers 28 and 38, respectively, was brought in to share the improved working conditions won by our militant workers.

Fate does play a peculiar game at times for Jack Malony came very close to receiving a good beating along with some more finks whom he had hired at a hotel on Fillmore Street during the strike. He escaped this thrashing by a bare few minutes, but never mind, Maloney, fate will not always be so kind to your kind and maybe after dishing out a good beating to one of the family it will have the

NEWS BOY CALLS FOR FAIR PLAY CHARGES UNION MEN SMOKE FINK CIGARETTES

The Waterfront Worker

Gentlemen:

Why do you boycott the Hearst newspapers? Why do most all Unions boycott a Union newspaper? Is it because you didn't like the editorials written by Mr. Hearst during the last strike? I didn't like them myself, and I sell a Hearst paper.

Wasn't it Abraham Lincoln who said, "You can please some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can't please all of the people all of the time?" And truer words were never spoken.

You are not hurting Mr. Hearst a great deal because the advertisements almost pay for the cost of the paper. You are only hurting the newsboy. And believe me the newsboys have a hard enough time now to make a living.

You Union men have no scruples to borrowing money from these same newsboys.

The most of you Union men who smoke cigarettes smoke either Lucky Strikes, Chesterfields or Camels, and they are absolutely Non-Union. I firmly believe you have a sense of fair play, so why don't you play fair with your newsboys. Hoping you will print this but afraid you will not.

I am very respectfully yours,

A Call-Bulletin Newsboy

HEARST—LYING EDITOR OF GUTTER PRESS

BOYCOTT ALL YELLOW SHEETS—READ WORKING CLASS PRESS

A Call-Bulletin Newsboy

Sir:

In answer to your pathetic plea for justice of "poor" Mr. Hearst, please bear with us while we answer your question: "Why do you boycott the Hearst newspaper"?

This question could be answered very simply and truthlyfully by stating, the Hearst newspapers are the most vicious, lying, strike breaking, anti-working class, yellow-sheets ever printed, which are owned and edited by a liar, a forger, a war-monger, red-baiting, union busting scoundrel—Wm. Randolph Hearst.

Because the Waterfront Worker is a paper published by a group of militant longshoremen, who realize that the great masses of workers must be made conscious of their own strength and power therefore, it is to the interest of all maritime workers and to all workers that we add to the knowledge gained through the bitter struggle of the maritime strike of last summer, so we will further analyze why every class-conscious worker should not only boycott Hearst newspapers but all yellow capitalist rags.

To begin with, Mr. Hearst represents and is spokesman for the Capitalist or Boss-class. We are workers, therefore, Mr. Hearst and the longshoremen have nothing in common.

During the Maritime Strike, the newspapers played a vile part in villifying and slandering the heroic strike leaders. The yellow-press out-did themselves in heaping dirt and abuse upon those courageous fellows and leading the pack of yelping jackals was the Hearst gutter-press.

The Hearst newspapers supported one of the blackest reactionnaires ever to run for office in the U.S. and when he was elected Governor, proudly boasted that the Hearst papers helped to elect him. That man (?) "So I took the $30,000" is now Governor of our glorious state.

During the time of the vigilante raids on Workers Centers thru-out the Bay Region, Hearst reporters played an important role. Photographs were taken showing these "Gentlemen" gleefully helping the police and other hoodlums smash the working-class halls.

Ragged newsboy, the workers never forget the injustices heaped upon them by the ruling class and their flunkies. The terror, the brutalities, the beatings, the jailings, the murders, are never forgotten—these impressions are stamped upon our minds forever and ever. One day soon those sadistic culprits shall answer before a Workers' Tribunal. Yes, poor newsboys, one day soon.

Sure the newsboys have it tough; all workers have a tough time to make a living. The boss forces the workers to toil for miserable wages so he can have a larger profit, but the workers must Organize and demand a decent living wage.

Most Union men smoke but they do not all smoke non-union cigarettes. Twenty-Grand, Wings and Clowns are union made smoke and more and more the workers are turning to these.

Yes, we have a sense of fair play, not only to the newsboys, but to all workers. First of all the newsboys must be fair to themselves. Do they want to continue to be exploited by a tyrant, such as Hearst, or are they going to get together with others of their class and smash Mr. Hearst and other blood-suckling leeches. But the newsboy must help himself—Organize, Boys, Organize.

You say we are not hurting Hearst in the boycott because advertisements pay for the paper. Well, little newsboy, we know that the newspaper which gets the largest circulation also gets the largest paid advertisement. That is why newspapers have a Circulation Department generally used to increase and speed-up the circulation, using all tricks, even writing to a small rank and file paper, such as the

Waterfront Worker and signing it "A Call-Bulletin Newsboy". There is nothing a Circulation Department will not do to boost "their" paper, regardless of how finky it is.

In closing we make an appeal to all workers to continue and spread the boycott against all yellow-lying sheets, especially the vicious red-baiting Hearst gutter-press.

Workers, read the Working class press — The Western Worker printed twice weekly and the Daily Worker, the only working-class daily in America.

We remain very respectfully yours,

The Editors

FINNEGAN SIGNS HIS NAME AGAIN CLERKS BEWARE

Dear Ed:

You dont have to call a clerk Oscar to make him wild these days. Just ask him how he likes the award that Finnegan got for him from the arbitration board. The only ones the clerks have a right to get mad at though are themselves. This paper warned them months ago, that no union should give one man the power to act for it in negotions, let alone a man like Finnegan, whose knowledge of the labor movement is nil. But the clerks have run their union like a bunch of boy scouts with Finnegan, the Leader the Noonan, the Scout Master, Brolan and Hesketh, the Chief Cubs. These boys went around the docks saying the board was leaning over backwards in the clerk's favor. Well, this kind of Favor has given many clerks a reduction in wages. The whole award is finky. President Roosevelt and Bill Green have both come out strong for a shorter working day and yet the board deliberately ignored that side of the question, despite the fact that there are, on the busiest days, clerks out of a job. How "Limo Johnstone" on 26 will laugh now that the board has authorized all docks to put his system of one hour shifts, into operation.

Why clerks, who are supposed to have more brains than us stevies, should allow themselves to be flim-flammed for a whole year is a mystery!

Does Finnegan have you fellows hypnotized or chloroformed? Why you should think this guy, who couldn't make good as a shyster lawyer, would make a union leader, is another mystery. He was wrong on the June 16th signing. He was wrong on the14th Street notice, when he said it was a fair shop with fink clerks working there. He was not there when we wanted to clean out the finks from 26. But why go on? Next time, get a man who will do as You tell him and not try to tell you what is best for you Start in now and fight that fink award because the board leaned so far backward that they have fallen on their rumps and you are underneath. Get a rank and file committee to get you out of the wilderness where your "Leader" has lost you.

A Longshoreman.

MR. ABEL KNOWS — OH YEAH!!

Dear Ed:

Oakland 14th St. is in the limelight again. Mr. Abel, the big boss there, has been giving out weight to the newspapers since last week's little disturbance, says, "The I.L.A. is not going to tell him, etc. etc." Also, "The I.L.A. has no jurisdiction over clerks". Mr. Abel may be able to kid himself that way, but will he be able to persuade the Labor men of Oakland, that members of the punk orchestra run by his straw boss, are able to come to work the morning after and do the work that I.L.A. clerks are qualified and able to do?

[Endorsed]: Filed June 2, 1942.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I believe you testified—when did you say the ILA was organized? [5940]

A. June, 1933.

Q. And who obtained the charter for the ILA at that time?

A. The organizer at that time, Lee J. Holman.

Q. Were you an organizer at that time of the ILA? A. It depends on what you mean.

Q. Well, did you go about trying to get members? A. Yes.

Q. To make up this new union? A. Yes.

Q. Were you one of the charter members?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who the charter members were, how many there were? A. Oh, about 10 or 12.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you been all over this?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, we haven't.

Presiding Inspector: I thought he said he wasn't a charter member although he was an original member.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you an original member of the ILA?

A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes. [5941]

Presiding Inspector: A charter member, I suppose, is one who asks for the charter.

The Witness: I was initiated in June, 1933 and the organization was chartered in 1933.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was it chartered before you were initiated into the union? A. Of course. That's logical.

Q. So that you were not one of the original founders of the ILA?

A. In the way of being a charter member? Signing for the charter?

Q. In any way?

A. No. Most of the charter members were not even longshoremen.

Q. Was Holman a longshoreman?

A. Some time past, but he had never been on the waterfront for 10 years.

Q. Were you a paid official of the ILA at any time from its inception to the time of the calling of the 1934 strike? A. At no time.

Q. Who was the President of the Union at that time? A. Lee J. Holman.

Q. Prior to the 1934 strike?

A. Before the 1934 strike? [5942]

Q. Yes. A. Lee J. Holman.

Q. Lee J. Holman? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, the calling of the 1934 strike was discussed prior to May 9, 1934, in the union, was it not?

A. Oh, it was originally set for March 7, 1934.

Q. And who had advocated it? Did Holman advocate calling the strike?

A. No. He was against it.

Q. And who advocated it?

A. Lots of us did. I did.

Q. Would you say that you were instrumental in having the union, the ILA, go on record as favoring a strike at that time? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Very definitely, yes.

Q. Would you say that anybody else was responsible?

A. Certainly. Many others were responsible. It wasn't a one-man job. The strike was voted by a referendum.

Q. And I believe there is testimony here that a Strike Committee of the Local Union was created or formed. [5943] A. It was.

Q. At whose suggestion was that Strike Committee formed?

A. Well, I don't know if you would say that it was on my sole suggestion, but I know at least I, among others, suggested it, and very strenuously.

Q. Did Holman oppose it? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. And a vote was taken, as I understand it, in the Local Union and a Strike Committee was formed and persons were nominated?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Not that way, no.

Q. How was it done?

A. A strike Committee was established of 75 men.

Q. Who established it?

A. Composed of two men from each dock elected in the union meeting.

Q. Were you elected in a union meeting?

A. Yes, elected from my particular dock on the Strike Committee.

Q. Was that a union matter or was it just an action of various individuals of the union?

A. That was a matter of the union meeting three months before the strike,—two months before the strike. [5944]

Q. Done in a regularly conducted union meeting?

A. Right, at Eagle's Hall. I have got the minutes of the meeting.

Q. Was Heiner a member of the original committee? A. Yes.

Q. Strike Committee?

A. Yes. He was elected from the dock, the same as I was.

Q. Did Holman appoint anyone on the Strike Committee? A. Holman?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Did he suggest or propose anyone to serve on the Strike Committee?

A. You mean nominated anyone?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Yes. He might have. All he could do was to get up and place somebody's name in nomination.

Q. Did he oppose your nomination for the Strike Committee?

A. I don't think—as a matter of fact, I believe those last couple of months before the strike Holman had quietly disappeared.

Q. I am not talking about that. I am talking about the time the Strike Committee was formed.

A. Yes. I am just wondering if he was even around. I [5945] think he disappeared at that time, or said he was sick or something. I don't have a distinct recollection that Holman was present at that meeting.

Q. What other paid officials of the ILA were there at that time? A. Of the Locals?

Q. Yes.

A. The Treasurer, the Vice-President.

Q. Who was the Vice-President?

A. A fellow by the name of Joe Johnson.

Q. Did he participate?

A. I am pretty sure he did. He was pretty active at that time.

Q. Was he in favor of the strike?

A. I can't recollect whether he was or not. I have got an impression that he was, but I am not quite sure.

Q. Who was the Secretary?

A. Ivan F. Cox.

Q. Prior to the call of the strike did the Strike

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Committee operate under any directions from the President of the Local?

A. No. The Strike Committee was almost a separate body. We had quite a discussion over that with the officials taking the position that all the Strike Committee was for was to handle the strike and had no interest and no concern in any [5946] other business or any other affair of the Local itself.

Q. Was there any provision in the constitution of the ILA at that time regarding the relationship of the Strike Committee so formed and the officials of that Local?

A. No, I don't think there was. The constitution was pretty vague on those points and pretty incomplete.

Q. Well, could the Strike Committee under the Constitution as it then existed operate independent of the officials of the Union?

A. It could and did.

Q. Do you have the constitution of the ILA at that time? A. Have I?

Q. Yes.

A. I am not sure. I might be able to find out. I'll try, but if I recall——

Q. (Interposing) Will you try and——

A. (Interposing) Our constitution was very vague. We never did—it wasn't until many months after the strike, if I remember correctly, that we ever had a printed constitution of the Union.

Q. Now, you say you were a delegate to the San

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Francisco Labor Council that was set up during the 1934 strike? A. What was set up?

Q. Well, not the San Francisco Labor Council, but you [5947] were a delegate to the San Francisco Labor Council during the 1934 strike or a portion of it? A. And before the 1934 strike.

Q. And before? A. Yes.

Q. Now, what were some of the duties and purposes of the Labor Council?

A. The Labor Council? What were its duties and purposes?

Q. Yes.

A. Generally to act as an organizing medium for the entire labor movement; to act as a legislative body for the entire labor movement; to act in many cases and disputes as a body in attempting to negotiate a settlement of a dispute as a body for mediation, as a body that suggested or actually carried on arbitration; also as a central body that could—where the unions would congregate; a delegated body for the purposes of cooperating with each other, coordinating the various activities of each individual union and supporting each other.

Q. Well now, were their decisions binding upon the unions? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No, unless they could enforce them in some way. [5948]

Q. What?

A. Certain decisions they could enforce in more ways than one, but to say that all their decisions were binding on the unions, no, that is not so.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Would they be binding on the Strike Committee during the time of the strike?

A. No, not particularly. The union could—a local Strike Committee could approve the recommendations. All the Council could do would be to recommend. If the Local Union to which the recommendation was directed or at which the recommendation was directed, if they wished to approve the recommendation, all right. If they wished to reject it, the Labor Council could do nothing.

Q. Do you recall a mass meeting being held on June 19, 1934 in which the Marine Workers Industrial Union's representative Harry Jackson spoke?

A. You mean at the Civic Auditorium?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Who called that meeting? A. Oh, sure.

Q. Who called it?

A. I think the Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. Were you a member of the Joint Marine Strike Committee?

A. What was the date of the meeting? [5949]

Q. June 19, 1934.

A. The Joint Marine Strike Committee called it, yes, and I was the Chairman of the Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. And who invited Harry Jackson to come over to speak?

A. I don't know. The Committee, I guess. All arrangements for the meeting were approved by the Committee. The way those meetings were arranged, they would be arranged through a sub-committee who would report back to the main committee and they would approve all arrangements. If Jackson was invited——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing) Did the Marine Workers Industrial Union have a representative on the Strike Committee?

A. They had a speaker as a union on strike, and I remember a big fuss was made of it.

Q. Well, did they have a representative on the Joint Strike Committee?

A. No, not after the first two or three days.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have been over that a good many times.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: That is pretty clear in the record.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe so.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: If we have, I won't——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, that parti- [5950] cular feature, I am sure has been covered by the testimony. Not that meeting that I know of, but the representative of the Marine Workers Industrial Union on the General Strike Committee.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. As a matter of fact, the Marine Workers Industrial Union had withdrawn from membership from the Joint Strike Committee at that time, had it not? A. Right.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And at whose—were they requested to withdraw because of some action taken by some body?

A. Yes. Their seating on the Joint Strike Committee was protested by some of the Seamen's Unions and it developed into such a wrangle that the delegation from the Marine Workers Industrial Union finally got up and said "Well, sooner than have all this trouble and dissention on the Strike Committee as to whether we will be seated or not, we will pull out of the Strike Committee and keep on supporting the strike in every way we can".

Q. Then there was a question of the Marine Workers Industrial Union being seated in this Joint Strike Committee?

A. This was challenged by two or three groups; all the seamen's groups, I know.

Q. Just stick to that. Did you advocate that the Marine Workers Industrial Union representatives be seated on the Joint Strike Committee? [5951]

A. Yes.

Q. And the Joint Strike Committee voted not to seat them, is that correct?

A. That's right. I was under instructions from my Local Union to fight to seat them on the Committee as a striking union.

Q. That what? A. As a striking union.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read the last answer, please?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who from the union gave you those instructions?

A. Well, first the Strike Committee and then all actions of the Strike Committee were approved by the general membership.

Q. Now, the Strike Committee was not the union, was it?

A. Oh, very much so in many respects at that time. In between meetings of the union the Strike Committee was the union.

Q. And you were the Strike Committee?

A. I was the Chairman of the Strike Committee, bound by its decisions and always carried them out.

[5952]

Q. All right. Now, after they had been refused a seat in this Joint Strike Committee they had no longer any official connection with the strike, did they, the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. As far as the Strike Committee—as far as being seated on the Strike Committee is concerned, that's right.

Q. And——

A. (Interposing) But they were still on strike.

Q. And thereafter you invited, as I understand it, Harry Jackson to speak at a mass meeting held at the Civic Auditorium?

A. They were officially invited to speak at that meeting and they did speak and the invitation came from the Joint Strike Committee.

Q. Who extended that invitation?

A. The Committee.

Q. Were you on the Committee?

A. Yes; Chairman.

Q. And did you advocate sending the invitation to Harry Jackson to appear to speak?

A. I don't recall specifically that I did, but I would, I think.

Q. You wouldn't have opposed it?

A. I don't think so.

Q. And did Harry Jackson at that time advocate a [5953] general strike?

A. I'm not sure. He might have. I only remember one specific remark that he made that stuck in my head ever since.

Q. And thereafter did not the San Francisco Labor Council pass a resolution on June 22, 1934 substantially to the effect that the Labor Council disclaimed all connection with Communist organizations and particularly the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. That's right.

Q. And did not in the same resolution the San Francisco Labor Council advise the Longshoremen's Association, the ILA, to disavow all connections with the Communist element on the waterfront?

A. Yes.

Q. Huh?

A. A resolution was passed. I remember a big battle in the Labor Council the night it was passed.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And did you consider yourself bound by such a resolution?

A. Yes. I think at that time—we approved the passage of the resolution at the local meeting.

Q. Did you approve it? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes. [5954]

Q. Did you disavow your connections with the Communist Party after the passage of that resolution?

A. I followed the orders of my union.

Q. Huh?

A. And that's what happened.

Q. Huh? A. I can tell you why.

Q. Well, now, didn't you continue cooperating with the Marine Workers Industrial Union even after the passage of that resolution? A. No.

Q. Didn't you continue to advise with and associate with Harry Jackson? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. I never said I did. I have already testified that later on they had to have their own set-up entirely. Our members picketed with them, but after the passage of that resolution we had to take an official position for the simple reason that the Labor Council, along with the resolution, said "If you didn't you would get no more funds".

Q. As a matter of fact, you notified the Communist Party even before the resolution was passed to the effect that that action was going to be taken by the San Francisco Labor Council? [5955]

A. That is true.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Huh? A. That is true.

Q. And whom did you inform in the Communist Party?

A. I think I informed Darcy at the time.

Q. Sam Darcy? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you meet Sam Darcy to notify him of that resolution that was about to be passed?

A. Sam Darcy was down at our union headquarters very early in the strike. My best recollection is that he came down with Ross in connection with offering the printing of the special bulletin of the Waterfront Worker.

Q. Are you sure you didn't go to see Sam Darcy?

A. I am sure of it.

Q. You say that he and Lawrence Ross came down to you at your Union headquarters?

A. Yes, him and Lawrence Ross and some other person.

Q. When did they come down there?

A. Oh, that was shortly after the strike broke out.

Q. Well, the strike broke out in May?

A. Yes.

Q. And this action of the Labor Council, when was it first brought out that they were going to take such action? [5956]

A. Oh, the question came up two or three times in the Labor Council. I can give you the whole story. But there were certain—some of the officers in the Labor Council were for us and wanted to support us.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What do you mean? For whom?

A. For the longshoremen, for the strike and in support of us. Others were definitely against us. Others even tried to stop the chartering of our Local Union.

Q. Let's stick to Sam Darcy.

A. The whole story is tied in together.

Q. You met Sam Darcy when with reference to the matter of the resolution that was passed by the San Francisco Labor Council?

A. Oh, it was before that.

Q. How long before it?

A. I first remember meeting Sam Darcy in the early days of the strike on the occasion that I have told you about.

Q. Is that the only time you met him?

A. Oh, no. I met him later.

Q. The first time you met him did you discuss with him the action that the District Council was contemplating taking with regard to the disavowing connection with the Communist Party of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No, not that I recall. The discussion all centered around the one thing and I don't know as any action was contem- [5957] plated at that time.

Q. The second time you met Sam Darcy was when? A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. Huh?

A. I met him on more than one occasion during that entire strike period. I couldn't say the second time I met him.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. How many times did you meet Sam Darcy during the 1934 strike?

A. Oh, I don't know that.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know that.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will stop here and resume at two o'clock.

(Whereupon at 12:35 o'clock P. M. a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock P. M. of the same day.) [5958]

After Recess
2:00 O'Clock P. M.

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

By the way, there is a letter from Mr. Meyer saying that there are no other statutes or regulations. I will show you the letter. Hand it to Mr. Gladstein.

(The letter referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

Mr. Grossman: This probably should be marked for identification, then, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Grossman: Since the other was.

Mr. Del Guercio: I haven't seen it.

Mr. Grossman: Oh, I beg your pardon.

(The letter referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Mark it for identification.

Mr. Del Guercio: Very well.

Presiding Inspector: Just in connection with the other letter.

(The letter referred to was marked for identification as Alien's Exhibit No. 40.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed) [5959]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, during the general strike in 1934 did your Strike Committee or the Strike Committee of which you were Chairman continue to exist?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your Strike Committee thereafter have full control of the general strike? A. No.

Q. Who did?

A. The General Strike Committee.

Q. And who formed the General Strike Committee?

A. The San Francisco Labor Council.

Q. Were you on that Committee? A. Yes.

Q. What was your position on that Committee.

A. I was a delegate to it, and later on a member of the General Executive Strike Committee.

Q. Was there also a Strike Strategy Committee?

A. Yes, prior to that.

Q. What? A. Prior to that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. And who formed the Strike Strategy Committee?

A. Formed by the Labor Council.

Q. Were you on it? A. No. [5960]

Q. And what were the functions or duties of the Strike Committee—of the Strategy Committee?

A. It was a Committee of Seven appointed by the San Francisco Labor Council to see what steps could be taken by the Labor Council to terminate the dispute, or the strike in our favor.

Q. Would it be true to say that through this Strategy Committee and the other Committee of which you spoke that the leadership of the general strike was placed in the hands of conservative leaders of the AF of L?

A. Not necessarily. There was a lot of leaders on there that you might not term conservative; some of them you would definitely.

Q. Now, and what did this Committee do with reference to the general strike?

A. What committee?

Q. The Strategy Committee.

A. The Strategy Committee?

Q. Yes.

A. The main thing it done was to try to prevent the general strike.

Q. It didn't succeed? A. No.

Q. Now, did you oppose a general strike?

A. No; I was for it. [5961]

Q. You were for it? A. Yes.

Q. Was the Communist Party for a general strike. A. I think it was.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was the Marine Workers Industrial Union for a general strike?

A. All the unions that went on general strike were for it.

Q. Was the Marine Workers Industrial Union for it?

A. I think so; yes. All the maritime unions were.

Q. Would you say the conservative element in the unions were against the general strike?

A. What do you mean by "element"?

Q. Conservative elements, the AF of L leaders in the various unions, and particularly the Strike Strategy Committee?

A. That is pretty hard—I don't know exactly what you mean. There were certain individuals and certain unions opposed to a general strike; certain unions for it. The latter were in the majority.

Q. Now, did you hold any conferences with members of the Communist Party just prior to the calling of the general strike? A. No.

Q. Did you meet with Sam Darcy?

A. No—in connection with the calling of the general [5963] strike?

Q. Yes.

A. Not that I remember; no.

Q. Well, will you try and remember?

A. I can—the answer is still "No".

Q. Did you meet with Harry Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Did you discuss with him the calling of the general strike?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I have explained how I met with Harry Jackson. I couldn't avoid meeting with Jackson in connection with the activities of his men on strike, and his union practically during the strike period.

Q. You said that you met with Sam Darcy on numerous occasions during the general strike, is that correct?

A. Did I say that? I said that I had quite a few meeting with Darcy. I don't know how many.

Q. Would you say you had 25 meetings with Sam Darcy during that period? A. No.

Q. Would you say you had 20? A. No.

Q. How many?

Mr. Grossman: During what period?

The Witness: The general strike period, as I understood it. [5963]

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. A. No.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How many? A. Two or three.

Q. Where did you have these meetings with Sam Darcy?

A. Generally on the waterfront, or in union headquarters.

Q. The ones you had in the union headquarters, who would be present?

A. Oh, it might be myself, and other members of the Strike Committee.

Q. Who, on the Strike Committee—all the members?

A. Anybody that happened to be around; not all the members necessarily.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Can you fix any particular meeting with Sam Darcy that you can remember?

A. No, I can't.

Q. During the general strike? A. No.

Q. Was Sam Darcy a member of any union?

A. No. I think when we met with him we met with him as a representative of the Communist Party——

Q. Now——

A. (Interposing): ——or of the Western Workers. [5964]

Q. When "we met with him." By that you mean you and certain others?

A. I and others.

Q. What did you discuss with Sam Darcy?

A. That depends. I don't recall that. I can recall two or three particular matters we discussed with him, but to recall all the things we ever discussed would be impossible.

Q. Let us have the things you do recall discussing with Sam Darcy.

A. I recall specifically discussing with him in regard to the Western Worker. I recall specifically——

Q. (Interposing): What was the discussion regarding the Western Worker that you had with Sam Darcy?

A. I think I told you once what that was: that they came down and offered to print a bulletin for us with the Western Worker apparatus and it was accepted. That is one thing I recall.

I can recall very distinctly discussing a meeting with Sam Darcy in connection with a lot of people that were injured around the end of May, in 1934.

I can recall distinctly meeting with Sam Darcy in connection with the action taken by the Labor Council and by my own union—that we had to disassociate ourselves officially and publicly from any connection with the Communist Party.

Q. Was that after the resolution had been passed by the San Francisco Labor Council or before?

A. I don't know whether it was after or before. I think it was possibly after.

I recall those [5965]

Q. Was that after the resolution had been passed by the San Francisco Labor Council or before?

A. I don't know whether it was after or before. I think it was possibly after.

Q. How many times did you see Sam Darcy after this resolution had been passed?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh?

A. I don't know. A few times.

Q. So many times that you couldn't fix them?

A. No. No, no. You are talking about the strike period now?

Q. Yes.

A. You are talking about the strike period?

Q. After the resolution had been passed by the San Francisco Labor Council in June, 1934.

A. I don't know, two or three or four times, maybe.

Q. And where did you meet Sam Darcy then?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Generally on the waterfront, or somewhere thereabouts.

Q. What did you talk about with Sam Darcy?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh?

A. I don't know.

Q. And who were present when you met Sam Darcy? [5966]

A. I don't recall that. They would be members of the union or the Strike Committee.

Q. Was Schmidt there?

A. It's possible.

Q. What?

A. It's possible. It was done openly, nothing secret about it.

Q. Huh? A. Nothing secret about it.

Q. When was the general strike called? I don't believe we have that fixed in the record.

A. July 16 to the 20th, '34.

Q. July 16th to the 20th?

A. That's right.

Q. Was there any discussion in the General Strike Committee as to whether the Bakery Wagon Drivers and the Milk Wagon Drivers and the Ice Wagon Drivers were to go out? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. And what was your stand on that proposition?

A. Against it. As a matter of fact, when we first proposed the general strike program we took care of all those things in the proposals.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, didn't you before the General Strike Committee claim that allowing the Bakery Wagon Drivers and the Milk Wagon [5967] Drivers and the Ice Wagon Drivers to remain at work would be bad strategy and it might break up the strike?

A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. Exactly the opposite. I am sure we can find it in the minutes.

Q. Now, do you have the minutes of the general Strike Committee?

A. No, but I have got an idea I can find out where we can get them.

Q. Are they available to you?

A. No. They are not available to me, but I believe the minutes of the General Strike Committee at that time are laying around somewhere and I could ask certain officials of that Committee for them. They might be available.

Q. Who was President of the San Francisco Central Labor Council at that time?

A. Edward Vandeleur.

Q. Now, if Vandeleur would say that your stand was opposite to what you are testifying now would your testimony be the same?

A. Sure. Vandeleur has been mistaken more than once.

Q. Will you make an effort to obtain the minutes of that General Strike Committee with reference to that matter?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I will be glad to. You could do a much better job [5968] in that connection than I could, possibly. I could give you the names of the people who are officials and who I think have those minutes.

Q. Yes, do that.

A. Yes, I am pretty sure if you approach Mr. Vandeleur, Mr. John O'Connell of the Labor Council or Mr. George Kidwell, who was Secretary of the Strike Committee, and request them on behalf of the FBI that they will be forthcoming.

Q. When did the 1934 strike end?

A. What strike?

Q. The 1934 strike.

A. What part of it? It had two or three different groups in it at different times.

Q. The part that you were connected with, the longshoremen. I assume you were connected with the longshoremen.

A. The longshoremen's strike ended July 31st.

Q. July 31, 1934? A. Yes.

Q. Did the Marine Workers Industrial Union go back to work on that day, too?

A. Yes. All Marine groups did.

Q. And did the strike end for all purposes on July 31, 1934?

A. Oh, no. No, no. It carried on in many ways.

Q. What continued? [5969]

A. Well, the clearing of many of the strike breakers off the waterfront continued; the organizational work continued; the adjustment of the various grievances continued and the discrimination against union men continued.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I think by the "strike" itself he meant the men not being at work.

The Witness: That's right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That ended on July 31st?

A. That ended the main strike, yes. But there were post-strike activities that went on and actions.

Presiding Inspector: Almost always that is the case?

The Witness: Yes. There were walk-outs and stoppages of work over disputes and discrimination for many, many months.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you in favor of the men going back to work on July 31, 1934?

A. Very definitely. I advocate the support of arbitration and the men returned to work all together. That's when the so-called conservative leaders got pretty militant and it went the other way.

Q. You weren't in that conservative group, were you?

A. No. I was against them. I was for getting back to work. [5970]

Q. You were in the 1934 strike with the Communist Party and with the Marine Workers Industrial Union? You were on their side, were you not?

A. I had done what?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Were you on the side of the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I was on the side of the people on strike.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, may I have Government's Exhibit 135?

(The exhibit referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I will show you here Government's Exhibit 135 entitled "From Bryan to Stalin" by Foster. You know who Foster is, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is he?

A. Bill Foster, an old trade unionist and I think he is now the official head of the Communist Party.

Q. Have you read his book, Government's Exhibit 135? A. Yes.

Q. You know that it carries on account of the 1934 strike? A. That's why I read it, mainly.

Q. Now, I refer you particularly to that portion of it beginning on page 258 and ending here on the middle of page [5971] 262. Would you say that that was a correct exposition of the events as they occurred during the 1934 strike?

A. (Reading pages enumerated) Generally I think that's correct. Uh huh, (affirmative.).

Q. Now, can you point out anything that is incorrect?

A. I can go over this paragraph by paragraph —starting with the San Francisco strike, starting off on page 259, the second paragraph:

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"The most important strikes of 1934 were those in Toledo, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, the Pacific Coast Marine Strike, the San Francisco General Strike and the National Textile Strike. These were practically all conducted under the banner of the A F of L. For the most part, the TUUL's participation in them took the form of active support by its unions or work through its groups within the A F of L. But in all these situations the C.P. and the TUUL forces played a vital role."

Q. Is there anything wrong with that?

A. Not a great deal.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Anything else?

A. I can go over the whole thing. As I say, generally, the statements made in here are correct. It deals with the——

Q. (Interposing) Is this statement correct:

[5972]

"But it was in the big Pacific Coast Marine and San Francisco General Strike that the C.P. and the TUUL did their most important strike work in this period."

Is that correct?

A. I think if you will read——

Q. (Interposing) Is that statement correct?

A. It also says—I think it is correct—I think it points out that the Marine Workers Industrial Union organized the seamen and——

Q. (Continuing):

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"In fact, in this struggle"—referring to the San Francisco strike—"their influence was decisive."

That is the influence of the Communist Party and the TUUL A. Decisive in what way?

Q. You read the article haven't you?

A. Well, I have read it and I have my ideas on it. You have got to explain what you mean by being "decisive." They were very decisive.

Q. As far as it goes, is that correct?

A. Yes, as far as it goes—decisive in getting the Marine Workers on strike, sure.

Q. And this statement appearing on page 260:

"The strike movement began among the longshoremen early in the spring of 1934. The San Francisco local had taken [5973] the lead in lining up the weak ILA Coast Locals to present demands to the employers."

Is that statement correct? A. Correct.

Q. (Continuing):

"The employers, aided by corrupt ILA top leaders, tried the usual schemes of delay, conciliation and arbitration to break up the rapidly developing militant movement."

Is that correct? A. Correct.

Q. (Continuing):

"Rechecking these maneuvers, the ILA locals declared a strike on May 9th and had the whole Pacific Coast tied up within two days."

Is that correct?

A. Yes. They are brief statements. There are a lot of statements, but they are correct basically.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Continuing):

"Harry Bridges was elected Chairman of the ILA Strike Committee, and the Western Worker, Local Communist organ, was endorsed as the official strike journal."

Is that correct?

A. In the way I have described it; yes.

Q. Is it correct in the way Foster has described it, as I just read it to you? [5974]

A. Well——

Presiding Inspector: He doesn't describe it. He just makes the statement.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. In the statement that Foster made correct?

Presiding Inspector: I think he has answered that. He said "Yes", he described it.

If you want to press him further on it you may, if you think it will do any good.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did the Strike Committee of which you were Chairman cease to exist after the men returned to work in July, or July 31, 1934?

A. Yes; very shortly afterward.

Q. Well, now, did you immediately after that, have any official position at all in the ILA Union?

A. I—right after the strike ended—I and two or three others carried on, on behalf of the unions, on a committee mainly concerned with settling grievances that carried over and making adjustments of complaints after the strike was over.

Q. I believe your first position in the, official position in the ILA local 38-79 was President, is that correct?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. I was an Executive Committee member.

Q. For what period of time? [5975]

A. From '33 to '34.

Q. September 1933 to 1934—was that a paid position? A. No.

Q. You were elected President when?

A. September '34.

Q. Are you sure it was September, or was it October, 1934?

A. Well, at the time of the yearly elections—I thought it might have been later.

Q. That is the first time you held a paid position in the local?

A. No. I was paid on this position after the strike ended, that I have just referred to.

Q. On the Executive Board?

A. No. I was still a member of the Executive Board, but this was a position as kind of a trouble shooter.

Q. For how long a period did you hold that position?

A. Up until the time I was President.

Q. And for how long previously?

A. What is that?

Q. For how long previous thereto?

A. From the end of the strike.

Presiding Inspector: About a year?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: No, no. From July to September, as I understood the question. [5976]

Presiding Inspector: When were you elected President—wasn't that the next year?

The Witness: No; the same year—the fall of 1934, September or October.

Presiding Inspector: I misunderstood.

The Witness: I thought it was September.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And when you were elected President, in either September or October, 1934, you became a paid official of the Union, that is, a permanently paid position?

A. Yes; but I was being paid before that time.

Presiding Inspector: From the end of the strike?

The Witness: From the end of the strike up until the time I was regularly elected President. I was paid as a kind of a representative of the Union, adjusting matters that came up after the strike, that was a carry-over.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And you have been a paid official ever since, up to the present time, ever since the end of the 1934 strike? A. Not continuously.

Q. Huh? A. Not continuously.

Q. You have been an official of the Union ever since?

A. I have been an official of the Union, but I [5977] haven't been paid continuously.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Have you done any longshore work?

A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Any work, manual work of any kind that you got paid for?

A. No—I have done a lot of work.

Q. You have lived off the union ever since that?

A. That is not a correct statement. I have lived off of nobody at no time.

Q. The union has paid you, however, since that time, has it not— that is where your salary came from?

Presiding Inspector: He said——

A. (Interposing) The union has paid me, and has offered to pay me more, and I have refused it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you continue to be a delegate on the San Francisco Labor Council after the 1934 Strike?

A. Yes.

Q. For how long a period?

A. Until we were thrown out of there.

Q. When were you thrown out? A. 1937.

Q. By whom? [5978]

A. The Labor Council.

Q. That is, after your union went CIO?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during the time that you—in what capacity did you serve on the San Francisco Labor Council after the 1934 strike?

A. I was never any more than a delegate. For a brief time I was elected to the Executive Committee, but I never had enough time to show up at the meetings and I resigned.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You resigned before you were thrown out?

A. Oh, yes. I think that was around 1936 some time.

Q. Now, how often would the San Francisco Labor Council hold meetings?

A. Every Friday night.

Q. Did you attend all those meetings until the time you resigned?

A. Every one, as long as I was in San Francisco. I never missed a meeting.

Q. Now, did you hold any meetings with anybody else prior to these Friday night meetings of the San Francisco Labor Council?

A. Occasionally we did at certain times; yes.

Q. With whom?

A. Well, we had a whole caucus of delegates that used to attend the Labor Council. [5979]

Q. Well, now would they be in connection with matters that were to be taken up in the Labor Council meeting the next day? A. That is right.

Q. Who would you sit with?

A. Who would we sit with?

Q. Yes.

A. The delegates, you mean?

Q. Yes—in these caucus meetings?

A. There was delegates from, as I remember, from the culinary group, delegates from the machinists groups, delegates from practically every maritime union, delegates from the clothing workers—they were there—and we had a group of about, oh, 20 or 30. [5980]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Twenty or thirty?

A. Delegates, more or less.

Q. How many were there on the Labor Council all together?

A. How many delegates used to attend the Labor Council?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I think around 250 or 300.

Q. Did this group that you speak of, of 20 or 30——

A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. (Continuing): ——would they meet regularly?

A. The year round? No. Generally before elections.

Q. Can you give me the names of some of those that met with you prior to the regular meetings of the San Francisco Labor Council?

A. You mean of our caucus?

Q. Yes. That is what you call it a, "caucus"?

A. Yes. Well now, maybe you are referring to something else.

Q. What?

Presiding Inspector: No. it is of the caucus. Go ahead.

A. Well, I could give you the names of quite a few. There might be repercussions in their own particular unions from their Internationals, but I guess it can't be helped. [5981]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Are you talking to yourself or are you testifying? A. No, I am explaining.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want him to give the names?

The Witness: I don't wish to give the names.

Presiding Inspector: He would rather not give the names. Do you want to press him on it?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Give the names.

The Witness: There used to be—we'll take, first of all, the delegates from the Cooks and Waiters. I think Battalini, who has just been elected to office——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing): Battalini?

A. Battalini.

Q. How do you spell it?

A. B-a-t-t-a-l-i-n-i, I think.

Q. Is that the same one that is connected with the American Peace Mobilization? A. Who?

Q. Is that the same person who is connected with the American Peace Mobilization?

A. I don't know. He might be. I am not sure.

Q. All right.

A. And I think McKelvie is another one. I don't know [5982] his first name. He was one of the strong supporters of the rank and file in the Labor Council. Another fellow from Local 110, also Culinary group. There was Sam Jaye, was one. There were others, but at least I recall Jaye. There were more from that particular group. I can't recall them offhand. From the Metal Trades—that is, Metal Trades groups—I remember a fellow named Saunders.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What is Saunders' first name?

A. Hookendillan.

Q. What is Saunders' first name?

A. I don't know. I think Bill Saunders. Hookendillan, Slattery, Scheer. They were Metal Trades workers and others.

Q. How about Walter Lambert?

A. I don't know if he was there. He might have been there. I don't know if he represented any particular Union at that time.

Q. Would you say that he didn't attend any of these caucuses that you speak of?

A. I can't be sure. It is possible he did.

Q. Huh?

A. If he was representing a union—the caucus would be confined to representatives of unions in the Labor Council.

Q. Was Lambert representing any union at that time? A. He might have been, I don't know.

Q. Was he a delegate to the San Francisco Labor Council?

A. He might have been. I don't know. [5983]

Q. The minutes would show, would they not?

A. Yes. I think the minutes would. The Labor Council would have credentials at that time. I recall when I first met Lambert. I think he was a delegate to the Labor Council, and I might be getting things mixed as to the exact time. He might have been there.

Q. Was Henry Schmidt?

A. Oh, yes. All of our delegates were there; all the maritime delegates.

Q. Schomaker?

A. Schomaker, sure. Our entire delegation used to attend.

Q. Where would you meet with this group?

A. I think some of the meetings we held of that were in Albion Hall.

Q. Were they open meetings?

A. No. I would say they were closed to the extent I have outlined. They were a private caucus.

Q. And what would you do in these meetings? Would you program?

A. We would program for the Labor Council what candidates we were going to support and why and so forth.

Q. Would the meetings be regular meetings. Would a Chairman be elected?

A. Yes, I think we had a Chairman to keep order.

Q. Did you preside as Chairman? [5984]

A. I don't recall that I ever did. They were not that formal.

Q. Did Walter Lambert?

A. Never as far as I remember, if he was there.

Q. Did Sam Darcy ever appear at any of these meetings?

A. I am sure Darcy never attended any of them?

Q. Harry Jackson?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. I don't think Jackson would attend any of them or did.

Q. Are you sure that Harry Jackson never appeared before any of these caucuses?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Now, you knew, then, did you not, at the time these meetings were going on that Walter Lambert was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Oh, I think so, yes. The time I am thinking of would be about 1934 and '35.

Q. That is the same time. A. Yes.

Q. And wasn't he the so-called trade union expert of the Communist Party? A. Who?

Q. Walter Lambert?

A. Yes; he was one of them.

Q. Do you know any others who were trade union experts in the Communist Party?

A. I guess they all believe or they all are in some form [5985] or other.

Q. And did Walter Lambert lay down in these meetings that you attended with him the Communist Party Line in regard to your trade union activities?

A. The meetings were all held on the question of a program for the Labor Council.

Q. Did Walter Lambert—did you understand my question?

A. Yes, I understood your question.

Q. Will you answer that first?

A. Well, I don't recall anything. All the meetings were concerned with what I have told you and I don't recall Lambert laying down any program, even if he was there. I don't recall him him specifically being there, not at the times I am thinking of.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You did at the last hearing testify that Walter Lambert did attend such caucuses, did you not?

A. I might have.

Q. Huh? A. I might have.

Q. Let me refer to your testimony in the previous hearing in that connection. I refer now to page 2695, Volume 17:

"Q. (Interrupting) : Suppose I ask you a few names; would that relieve it? Was Lambert there?

"A. I think Lambert was there a couple of times."

A. Yes.

Q. Did you so testify? [5986]

A. I believe I did.

Q. At the last hearing?

A. I believe I did.

Q. And is that testimony true?

A. I think it is.

Q. Is there any question?

A. No, no question, except that I just don't remember two years later where I said that I think he was at a meeting. I still say I think he might have been there. I am telling you what I based it on. It would be very easy to check up. The Council group at that time running for elections put out their own printed slate with a full slate of candidates and we all stood at the door of the Council——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing): Is this an answer to some question or are you just making a speech?

A. Well, at least I guess you want all the knowledge you can get on the subject.

Q. Wait until I ask the question first.

A. This was following up the question.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead and ask the next question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, while you were meeting with Walter Lambert in these caucuses you knew he wasn't a member of any union?

A. Not particularly. I knew nothing of the kind; no [5987] sir.

Q. You knew that the only union, called a "union", that he was representing, was the Communist Party? A. I did not.

Q. Huh? A. I did not.

Q. Well, do you have any information either now or then that Walter Lambert was representing any union while you were meeting with him in these meetings?

A. My distinct impression is that he is and was a member of the union. I have told you that.

Q. Of what union?

A. I don't know. I have told you you can check up on it, too. The credentials or the files of the Labor Council will show you that and they will give them to you before they will give them to me.

Q. Who arranged for these caucuses? Who brought it about?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Well, I know I arranged for some of them.

Q. Who started them?

A. I did in many respects.

Q. Was it your own suggestion or did somebody suggest it to you?

A. Mainly I was running for office in the Labor Council. I was running for office in the Labor Council and [5988] I was looking for a little support, and I started to organize some of it and that's how this come about.

Q. This continued over a period of years, did it?

A. Oh, no. I never said that.

Q. For how long a period?

A. My only recollection is '34 and '35.

Q. Well, that's two years. A. Yes.

Q. Approximately.

A. But I don't recall any year-round meetings. These meetings or caucuses used to start maybe a month or two before the regular elections. That's all that I have reference to. Any others I don't know them.

Q. Now, you have heard of the American League Against War and Fascism? A. Oh, yes.

Q. And you have heard the testimony that was given here regarding the American League Against War and Fascism? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the American League Against War and Fascism? A. Never.

Q. Did you ever hold any position in the American League Against War and Fascism?

A. No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you recall a Pacific Coast Congress Against War [5989] and Fascism in San Francisco on April 28, 1935? A. Where at?

Q. In San Francisco?

A. Not off-hand, I don't.

Q. Did you attend such a conference, such a congress?

A. I think I have attended a couple of conferences.

Q. Well, with particular reference to this Congress that was held in San Francisco on April 28, 1935 did you attend it?

A. I can't specifically place it. If you can tell me where it was I would know better. I attended numerous conferences and I have a——

Q. (Interposing): Maybe I can refresh your memory. You had just come back from Seattle, Washington. A. In April?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. We just came back after a convention up there.

Q. Now do you recall attending such a Congress?

A. I don't recall if I attended at that time, but I have a recollection of attending some conferences.

Q. Do you know Leo Gallagher?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is Leo Gallagher?

A. He's a member of a group of attorneys in Los [5990] Angeles, at the present time, the official firm of attorneys representing some of our unions and doing an excellent job of it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And an admitted Communist, isn't that correct? A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. Is he? I don't know.

Q. Has he ever denied that he was a member of the Communist Party? A. I can't recall.

Q. What?

A. I can't recall ever asking him.

Q. Huh?

A. We just don't run around nailing people down and asking them if they are Communists or not.

Q. Representing, you say, some of the CIO Unions in Los Angeles?

A. CIO Unions and ILWU Unions that I happen to be elected President of, and doing a good job of it.

Q. Huh? A. That's what I said.

Q. That's what you say.

A. That is what I said. Just freed two or three men that were on charges.

Q. And is he also the Los Angeles ILD attorney

A. I don't think he is.

Q. What? [599]]

A. I don't think he is.

Q. Was he ever an attorney for the ILD?

A. He possibly has been. I am not sure. I think he had handled cases for the ILD, but I believe his partner, Al Wirin, was the ILD attorney. Oh, no. That's wrong. I think Grover Johnson, another member of the firm, was the ILD attorney.

Q. And isn't that the same Leo Gallagher who represented the Communists that were charged with setting fire to the Reischwehr in Germany?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Certainly. He certainly did. That's exactly what——

Q. (Interposing): Do you know who sent him over to Germany to represent such Communists?

A. Either the Communist Party or the ILD. Whoever done it I would certainly be in favor of it.

Q. Now, to go back to this Congress Against War and Fascism, isn't it true that you were elected to the presiding committee at that Congress Against War and Fascism held in San Francisco on April 28, 1935?

A. I don't know. I have no particular recollection. How was I attending? Was I attending as a delegate from our Local Union to such a Conference?

Q. Were you?

A. I have been elected to many committees attending a conference on behalf of my Local Union. Any time I was nominated and elected I would serve. That's what I was there for. [5992]

Q. Well, did you ever serve on such a presiding committee of the Congress Against War and Fascism?

A. I don't specifically remember it, but if you have got a record there that I did it's possibly true.

Q. If I showed you the record would you then admit that you did service?

A. I can see what's doing on it, then.

Q. Let me show you what——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

(Whereupon the document referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I have here the proceedings of the first Pacific Congress Against War and Fascism, San Francisco, California, Building Trade Temple, April 27 and 28, 1935. On the first page appears this:

"The following were elected to the presiding committee", and among others "Harry Bridges, President, San Francisco International Longshoremen's Association". Does that refresh your memory?

A. Yes, I think that's correct. I think that's correct. I believe that——

Q. (Interposing): You were elected on the presiding committee of this Congress of—what do they call it?

A. Of the West Coast, or the Pacific Coast Congress [5993] Against War and Fascism. But I am trying to find out what this thing was called by. Maybe it was called by us. It just shows that I was elected to a committee at a conference attended by probably half the trade unions in San Francisco.

Mr. Gladstein: Does it purport to be put out by the American League Against War and Fascism, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: It is headed "The Minutes and Proceedings of the First Pacific Coast Congress Against War and Fascism, April 28, 1935, San Francisco, California", signed by Thelma Bramley, Regional Secretary.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: That isn't the same as American League Against War and Fascism on its face.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is the forerunner.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know anything about that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now,——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing): Just a moment! I would suggest this: If you are not offering that, there is quite a list of people on that presiding committee. I don't know what counsel's purpose is in questioning along this line, but I think for the sake of fairness that entire list should be put in and not simply Mr. Bridges' name taken out of the list, so that the character or nature of the committee, or whatever it was, may be before the eyes of the Court when it comes to judgment. [5994]

Presiding Inspector: You can put that in on redirect.

Mr. Gladstein: We don't have the book. It should be marked for identification at least, in view of the fact that it has been used.

Presiding Inspector: He will let you have the book.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have just shown it to refresh his recollection and it has served that purpose.

Presiding Inspector: And they may put in the rest of the paragraph if they want to put it in.

Mr. Gladstein: For that purpose I suggest that the document be marked for identification at this time. Is there any objection to that?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, there is at this time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Your memory having been refreshed, do you recall attending such a Congress in San Francisco on April 28, 1935?

A. I don't recall attending that specific Conference. I attended so many. But I believe that record is correct and I don't remember any of the details.

Q. Well now, isn't it true that the Chairman of that Congress introduced you as President of the San Francisco ILA, who had just returned from Seattle, where you had been active in forming the Maritime Federation?

A. I don't remember it, but that's what the record said and that's entirely—possibly that is the way I would be [5995] introduced.

Q. And is true that you then reported on the work you accomplished at Seattle?

A. Yes. We are very proud of it.

Q. You recall that?

A. No, I don't. I am saying that this is the logical thing. I just returned from the first convention of the Maritime Federation and it is logical that I would report. And that book does something else. I was short a couple of dates around there in making up the New York trip. That fills in a couple of days that I was short. So if I had been able to know where I was at, if I had remembered that conference, I would have put that in my record.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that that be stricken, if your Honor please, as not being responsive.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, it will come out afterwards. I think I will let it stand.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And at this conference were not the following pledges, among others, made: "To support the peace policies of the Soviet Union, including total and universal disarmament, and to defend the Soviet Union against all its enemies"?

A. Are you asking me?

Q. Was that pledge made?

A. Are you asking me from memory?

Q. Yes. [5996]

A. I don't know. I would sooner go by the record.

Q. I will show you the same proceedings here and call your attention to page 33.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, may I suggest that this is certainly improper, when the witness says that he can't remember whether he was at the conference (to ask him whether or not certain resolutions were passed?

Presiding Inspector: I think he has now conceded that he was at the conference.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think he has conceded that. He has conceded that he might have been there.

Presiding Inspector: He says that accounts for two days of his life.

Mr. Grossman: He says "if" he was there.

Presiding Inspector: Which I think is an admission that he was there.

Mr. Grossman: This is true: He might have been there, but he doesn't recall.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: He can say so. If this doesn't refresh his recollection, of course he is perfectly at liberty to say he doesn't remember.

The Witness: I am trying to say, if I was in attendance on that particular day. There is no question about the action was taken. That was one of the policies adopted by the conference according to the minutes here. [5997]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you subscribe to such a pledge?

A. I don't recall it, but if I was in attendance here, and that was the action taken by the conference, I would be part of it.

Q. And you would have made such a pledge, "to defend the Soviet Union against all enemies?"

A. Not necessarily. I mean—when you put it like that, not necessarily.

Q. Put it in the language, as used in this book, here, "to support the peace policies of the Soviet Union, including total and universal disarmament, and to defend the Soviet Union against all its enemies."

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): If your Honor please, to ask the witness whether he would have done something if he had been present—we have no objection to asking what his views are.

Presiding Inspector: It is purely hypothetical.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think he is entitled to ask such a hypothetical question.

Presiding Inspector: It is purely hypothetical. I don't think it is proper examination.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't see where that was even adopted. This seems to be a statement in a resolution put forward by somebody or other. I can't find where it was adopted. [5998]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Would you say it wasn't adopted?

A. Not that—I haven't found where it was adopted.

Q. Your office subscribed to the Western Worker about that time, did it not? A. My office?

Q. Yes.

A. April '35? I am not sure if it did or not.

Q. What?

A. It might have. I couldn't say for certain.

Q. Was your attention called to an article wherein your name appears in it——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Let me see it, please.

(The article referred to was passed to Mr. Grossman.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing) ——in the Western Worker for Thursday, May 2, 1935?

A. An article in the Western Worker by me?

Q. Wherein your name was mentioned as attending this Peace Conference?

A. Oh, I don't know. It is possible that there is such an article. You mean a statement in the newspaper that I attended?

Q. Yes.—A statement in the Western Worker.

[5999]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Well, I guess you might read that in every San Francisco newspaper. I can't keep track of every time my name is mentioned in the papers as doing this, that and the other thing.

Q. I will show you an article appearing in the Western Worker for Thursday, May 2, 1935, under the heading "238,000 unite in Pacific Coast Anti-War Meet," and I call your attention to the comments appearing on page 4 as follows:

"Harry Bridges spoke on the powerful Pacific Maritime Federation which has just been formed in Seattle, 35,000 strong, seamen, radio men, longshoremen, every one who works in the Marine Industry. Bridges told how this organization was fighting Fascism in the northeast, where a Fascist Committee of 500 openly advocates Fascist terrorism and the enactment of laws abolishing trades unions."

Does that refresh your memory?

A. On what?

Q. As to your——

A. (Interposing) As to whether——

Q. (Continuing): ——your presence at this Conference and your making these pledges, one of which I just read to you?

A. I think that I attended a conference—if it says so in the minutes there—and possibly you can go by the Western Worker, or you can take the other papers in San Francisco, the Chronicle or the Examiner. If you give me my choice [6000] on which I would believe I would sooner believe this.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. The Western Worker? A. Yes.

Q. The official organ of the Communist Party?

A. Before the Examiner, the Chronicle and the other papers; absolutely.

Presiding Inspector: May I see the document that you showed the witness? Have you finished with it for the moment?

Mr. Del Guercio: For the moment; yes.

(The booklet referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Del Guercio: May I proceed, or do you want to finish looking at that?

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Sam Darcy appear and speak at the same Congress? A. I don't remember.

Q. Huh? A. I can't recall.

Q. Maybe this will refresh your memory—this is from the same article in the Western Worker, the article that I referred you to, and it states as follows:

"Sam Darcy, District Organizer of the Communist Party, sounded a grave note of warning. 'Unite, forget basic differences, join hands and defeat this relapse into barberism that [6001] is Fascism and the horrors of another world war!' His plea won the greatest ovation of the Congress. Darcy urged the consolidation of all liberal, radical and revolutionary political movements under a joint ticket in the coming elections, a Labor Party ticket for which all workers, poor farmers, middle-class and intellectual progressives may unite to elect their candidates."

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Does that refresh your memory?

A. On what he said?

Q. Yes—and about Sam Darcy being there?

A. No, I don't recall him being there. I think the official minutes are the best thing to go by. As far as what he said. Apparently he knew what he was talking about, if you will look around us in this day.

Q. Would you believe the Western Worker?

A. I would sooner believe the minutes before I believe the Western Worker; and I would believe the Western Worker before the other papers.

Q. Was John Shoemaker also there?

A. I don't know.

Q. He was there from your union, wasn't he?

A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't he head the Trades Union Commission? A. I don't know.

Q. You would be interested in knowing whether he was there in an official capacity? [6002]

A. I am not saying he wasn't there. If there was such a conference going on we were attending as the official delegates, elected delegates of our union. If we weren't it can be checked up and found out. I will check the minutes and let you know.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. The Western Worker, the official organ of the Communist Party——

A. (Interposing) Right.

Q. (Continuing) ——states this in regard to Shoemaker:

"Delegate Shoemaker, of the ILA"——

That is your union?

A. That means he was a delegate there elected by the membership.

Q. (Continuing):

"* * * who headed the Trades Union Commission of the Congress"——.

A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. (Continuing):

"* * * told how the unions must be organized to defeat war and Fascism"——

A. (Interposing): That is right.

Q. Did he do that?

A. Well, I don't remember, but knowing Shoemaker I am pretty sure that he would. [6003]

Q. (Continuing):

"* * * told how the unions must be organized to defeat war and Fascism, with especial reference to tie-ups of munitions factories"——

You remember that, don't you?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. (Continuing):

"* * * transportation, food supplies and the handling of war materials during a general strike."

A. I don't recall that he said it, but a lot of people feel pretty strongly about these things.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you believe munitions should be tied up during times like the present, for instance?

A. And how! It depends on who they are going to. We have been opposing it.

Q. They are going to Great Britain.

A. That is news to me. I go down on the waterfront and see them going to Great Britain and everywhere else.

Q. Do you believe in tying up munitions, and war supplies, that the United States is now sending to Great Britain?

A. We haven't advocated any such thing. We have tied them up going to Japan, Italy and Germany.

Q. Do you believe in tying them up when going to Great Britain at the present time?

A. No, I don't think we have taken any position. [6004]

Q. What would be your position, or what is your position?

A. You mean as an individual, or as President of the Union?

Q. As a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well——

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. I think that is improper. He hasn't admitted he is a member of the Communist Party. Let us keep within some bounds.

Mr. Del Guercio: He knows what I mean.

Presiding Inspector: But I don't. Go ahead.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Ask the next question. We are getting pretty far from the issue here involved.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know if a Second Congress against War and Fascism was held in Chicago?

A. No.

Q. Do you know of a Congress against War and Fascism that was held in Chicago prior to the Congress held in San Francisco? A. No.

Q. Were you notified, or did you receive any information from any source to the effect that your name was placed before the Convention of the Second U. S. Congress against War and [6005] Fascism held at Chicago, Illinois, on September 28, 29, 30, in 1934? A. No.

Q. And that your name was placed before the Convention as a nominee for the Executive Committee? A. No.

Q. And that you were unanimously elected?

A. And I wasn't there?

Q. Were you there?

A. I am sure I wasn't.

Q. Did you receive information that you had been placed in nomination?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did you receive information that you had been elected?

A. No. It is strange to me that I should be elected when I wasn't even there. I can prove that I wasn't there, if that is what you mean.

Q. Did I say you weren't there?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No, but you are asking if I was elected at that Congress.

Q. Would it have been impossible to have elected you in your absence?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that——

Presiding Inspector: It is self-evident. You don't gain [6006] anything by asking this witness about that. You may ask him if he ever heard of it, if you wish to. If you ask him about what occurred some place where he wasn't present, it isn't very important.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever been connected with the American League Against War and Fascism?

A. Do you mean as a member?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. In what way were you connected with it?

A. Well, do you mean if we ever supported their policies or endorsed certain actions they took in the union?

Q. In whatever manner.

A. Well, I would say in the latter way; certainly, yes.

Q. In what latter way—what do you mean?

A. It seems to me that the League——

Q. (Interposing): Not what it seems to you—in what way were you connected with the American League Against War and Fascism—just the facts?

A. Only by supporting certain policies, or things that they advocated. That is the only way I can think of.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What policies of the American League against War [6007] and Fascism did you advocate and support? A. We were against——

Q. (Interposing) "We"—you mean who, I am asking you?

A. Well, boil it down to myself,—I was against a shipment of munitions and materials to Mussolini; also during the campaign against Ethiopia. I was against any assistance to France in Spain. For years we have been opposed to shipments of munitions and other things to Japan. And certainly we have always been opposed—I have always been opposed to any support of Hitler.

The American League——

Q. (Interposing): Are you now opposed to any support to Hitler?

A. We have never changed—I never have.

Q. Has the American League Against War and Fascism changed? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Is there such a thing as an American League Against War and Fascism at the present time?

A. Is there any such thing?

Q. Yes?

A. No. I think it went out of business.

Q. When was it out of business?

A. I don't know. [6008]

Q. What?

A. Some time recently, I think.

Q. Did you adopt or support any program against shipping munitions, or giving any aid to the Soviet Union? A. We in the union?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. In the Union, at any time, any place, anywhere?

A. Not that I remember; not that I remember any single case. We supported all nations that were opposed to what was going on at that time.

Q. I am only asking you about the Soviet Union.

A. You can't pick out one.

Presiding Inspector: How is this of any materiality?

Mr. Del Guercio: It indicates, if your Honor please, the witness' attitude.

Presiding Inspector: But you have implied that this was to the contrary. You say, "Have you ever opposed aid to the Soviet Union?" Was there any proposal for aid? It doesn't advance it any. I think you have got everything there is about that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What other policies of the American League Against War and Fascism did you support?

A. I don't remember any others.

Q. Huh?

A. I don't remember others; there might have been others. [6009]

Q. Did you give any financial support to the American League Against War and Fascism?

A. You mean did I personally, or individually?

Q. Let us take yourself individually, first.

A. Not that I remember. I think now and again I bought a few buttons for it. I remember Dietrich was a great button seller for them.

Q. You bought buttons yourself?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes, for two-bits, 25 cents, or a dollar.

Q. Did you send any money to them?

A. Only in that way—I don't recall making any other contributions.

Q. Did you speak on behalf of the American League Against War and Fascism at any time?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Have you ever spoken at any place, any time, under the auspices of the American League Against War and Fascism?

A. Not that I know of, or even recall. I have spoken a great many places, and it is barely possible, but I don't recall any specific occasions; no.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have our afternoon recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[6010]

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: If you will bear with me for a moment.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, certainly. We will run over a little this afternoon because of conferences.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am trying to weed out certain matters.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Take as much time as you need.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will save time this way.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I want to direct your attention to this 1936-'37 strike. When was that strike first called?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. October 28, 1936.

Q. That is the date that they actually went out on strike? A. Yes.

Q. Who called that strike?

A. The strike was voted by all the maritime unions affiliated with the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. They were all A. F. of L. Unions, were they not? A. Yes.

Q. And you were at that time what?

A. That is incorrect, that they were all A. F. of L. Unions. At least one of them, I think, had been suspended. [6011]

Q. I am speaking now of the West Coast.

A. Maybe more. That's what I am.

Q. Yes.

A. I am pretty sure that the Sailor's Union of the Pacific was functioning at that time as the Sailor's Union of the Pacific Emergency Committee, suspended and expelled from the American Federation of Labor. I believe the Marine Cooks & Stewards, and the Firemen's Union, the Pacific Coast Marine Firemen's Union was somewhat in the same status.

Q. Now, were you President of your own union at that time, the ILA?

A. No, I was President of the Pacific Coast District of the ILA.

Q. Pacific Coast District of the ILA?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you hold any position in your union?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. My Local Union?

Q. Your Local Union?

A. No. I don't think I did at that time.

Q. And weren't you also an international officer of the A. F. of L.? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. I was the Vice-President of the State A. F. of L. [6012]

Q. Vice-President of the State A. F. of L. Now, this Pacific Coast District, who elected you to that office?

A. The Pacific District membership by Australian ballot.

Q. What was Joe Ryan's position at that time?

A. International President of the ILA.

Q. And were you not the international representative on the West Coast at that time??

A. Of the ILA?

Q. Of the ILA. A. Oh, yes.

Q. Was that an appointive job or an elective job?

A. In so far as being on the payroll was concerned of the International, an appointive position; in so far as——

Q. (Interposing) Now, in that connection who paid your salary?

A. The International Union, Joe Ryan.

Q. How much were you getting?

A. What's that?

Q. What was your salary?

A. $75.00 a week.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, in addition to that you occupied what positions? A. You mean in the ILA?

Q. Yes. A. Or any other position? [6013]

Q. Any other positions?

A. Well, for a period, as I have said, I was a Vice-President of the State A. F. of L. of California.

Q. Did that carry a salary? A. What?

Q. Did that carry a salary?

A. Oh, no. I was the President of the San Francisco Bay Area District Council of the Maritime Federation.

Q. Did that carry a salary?

A. No. No other position carried a salary except my one position as President of the District.

Q. Well now, what was your salary as President of the District? A. What is that?

Q. What was your salary as President of the District?

A. $75.00 a week. But the way it was handled was this:——

Q. (Interposing) Well now, so that all together you were receiving $150.00 a week?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Why?

A. I was on the International payroll at $75.00 a week by virtue of my position as the District President.

Q. Did you have any other salary other than that? A. No other salary whatsoever. [6014]

Q. And what were your duties as International District Officer?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. My duties were prescribed first of all by the constitution of the District and, secondly, they were also prescribed to some degree by the International President himself.

Q. And that was Joe Ryan?

A. Joe Ryan.

Q. Now, your Local—that is, your Local ILA, No.—what was that number? What was the number of your Local?

A. 38-79, the Local I belonged to.

Q. Did it go on strike?

A. All the Locals went on strike.

Q. All the Locals went on strike. Now, did any A. F. of L. Unions on the East Coast go on strike at the same time? A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. The Masters, Mates & Pilots Organization.

Q. When did they go on strike?

A. I think at the same time, October 28. I might be incorrect as to that, but I think that's correct.

Q. Any other union? Was the Masters, Mates & Pilots, was that a sympathetic strike or was it a strike of its own?

A. No, the Masters, Mates & Pilots struck on the West Coast and they struck on certain ships on the East Coast. I am [6015] not sure whether they struck all ships, but they struck some ships as a National Organization, and certain of the seafaring unions.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Under the A. F. of L.?

A. Yes. The Marine Firemen on the East Coast were A. F. of L. at that time.

Q. Did they strike?

A. They struck. Their strike was later declared illegal, but the strike was voted by the membership.

Q. Did they actually cease work? A. Yes.

Q. Did they go back to work when the strike was declared illegal? A. No. Some of them did.

Q. Any other A. F. of L. Union on the East Coast?

Presiding Inspector: On the East Coast?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

A. I don't think so. I don't—not A. F. of L. Union.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. So that on October 29th the only A. F. of L. Unions that went on strike were the Masters, Mates & Pilots and the Marine Firemen's Union?

A. On the East Coast?

Q. Yes, on the East Coast?

A. Well, of course you will have to understand the [6016] position of the Marine Firemen and the Marine Cooks & Stewards on the East Coast. They were still affiliated with the A. F. of L. They were later suspended because of this strike action from the A. F. of L., or the fight was going on at that time, and the International Officers of those unions declared them suspended for some technical or through some technical methods or other. So, really, you could say that all the East Coast seamen's Unions were in the A. F. of L. at that time. They had not been expelled or suspended.

Q. Did you take up as International Officer the question of your going back East in December, 1936 with either the local unions here on the Pacific Coast or with Joe Ryan? A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, let us take your local unions first. With what unions did you take it up?

A. All of them.

Q. All. In what manner?

A. They were notified as to exactly what our plans were.

Q. Not what "our" plans were. I am talking about "your" plans, what your plans were. Did you take that up?

A. Just a moment! What do you mean by "my" plans?

Q. What do you mean by "our" plans? Who else was in it? [6017]

A. I mean the plans of the ILA Strike Committee.

Q. Was there an ILA Strike Committee?

A. Oh, yes. A Coast Strike Committee.

Q. Were you connected with it?

A. I was Chairman of it.

Q. All right. Now, what action was taken?

A. There was arrangements made to call upon Joe Ryan to live up to a promise he had made to support us at a conference held in New York in

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

September, 1936. That was attended by Matt Meehan and myself. And at that conference the International pledged us full support, if we had to strike for the demands as we outlined them at that time. When the question came to get that support the support was not forthcoming and eventually we set a deadline on the West Coast to give Joe Ryan and the East Coast International Offisers —we set a deadline as to when they would make good on the support that had been officially passed upon and promised. I think that deadline was December 20th, and if the support was not forth coming by that time we were to urge the East Coast longshoremen to strike in our support in defiance of Joe Ryan and, in return for striking in our support, we would promise the East Coast longshoremen that we would not return to work on the West Coast until they had reached a settlement of any demands or any grievances they had on the East Coast. And at the time I left to go East, a couple of days [6018] before, we notified all unions by letter as to these plans asking——

Q. (Interposing) Whom do you mean by "we", "We notified all Locals"?

A. I notified them on behalf of the Longshore Coast Committee.

Q. All right. Now, in what manner did you notify them?

A. I notified them by letter and they were asked to——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing): Just a minute, please. You notified them by letter? A. Yes.

Q. You signed the letter? A. Yes.

Q. And what did you say in the letter?

A. It's in evidence here.

Q. Is that the letter you refer to.

A. The letter of December 10th.

Q. I have here Alien's Exhibits 37, 34 and 32. Will you tell me which letter you have in mind?

A. This is it.

Presiding Inspector: Which does he refer to?

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir? Referring to Alien's Exhibit 37.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That is correct? [6019]

A. That's right.

Q. Now, as I understand your testimony, it is that you sent letters to all Locals that you were going to take a trip to the East Coast for the purpose of pulling out the longshoremen there, is that correct? A. Right, under certain conditions.

Q. Now, was anyone to go with you?

A. I don't remember at that time. Nobody did, except Meriwether and Charlot. They went back in connection with the activities——

Q. (Interposing) Were they part of your delegation? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Of your delegation?

A. We all went back for the same reason, but they did not go back specifically to speak to the longshoremen. They went back in conjunction with their own organizations and difficulties with their organizations along the same line. In other words, their national organizations were withdrawing support and that's why they went back, the same reason as I was, practically.

Q. Did you ask them to go along with you?

A. No. I think that the—I didn't ask them. I think that was action of the Joint Committee. I am not sure. I think it was.

Q. Now, did you tell your Local Unions in this letter [6020] anything about going back there to speak at Boston, Philadelphia?

A. I don't know. I didn't read the letter.

Q. I thought you read it? A. No.

Q. Is there anything in this letter wherein you advised your Locals that you were going back to speak at Madison Square Garden, Boston, Philadelphia or elsewhere?

A. I think so. "To dispatch an ILA delegation to the East Coast which will attempt to cover the ports of New York, Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia".

Q. What delegation was that?

A. Well, in this case I was the delegation.

Q. Huh? A. From the ILA.

Q. It was a one-man delegation, is that it, and you were it?

A. Maybe they figured that was enough.

Q. Who was to pay your expenses?

A. Well, I explained how that happened. So long as the East Coast offered to pay my expenses our West Coast Committee, being somewhat thrifty, I guess, said "O.K. with us".

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you tell your Local that the East Coast had offered to pay your expenses?

A. Oh, yes. They knew all about it.

Q. When? When did you tell them that?

[6020A]

A. Well, I am sure that they knew before I left. My own Strike Committee knew it.

Q. Who on your Strike Committee knew it?

A. And I reported that they had paid my expenses after I returned because I remember making the report the way——

Q. (Interposing) I am speaking of the time before you left. A. Yes.

Q. Who on the Strike Committee knew that the East Coast was to pay your expenses?

A. The entire Committee.

Q. Give me some of their names, the persons that knew. A. Our ILA Strike Committee?

Q. Yes. Is that the Committee you refer to?

A. I am referring to both the ILA Committee and the Joint Committee.

Q. Well, who knew? Do you understand my question?

A. Yes. I understand very well and you are getting an answer.

Q. Yes. Who knew on either Committee before your leaving for New York that your expenses were to be paid by the East Coast?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. All of them. [6021]

Q. Huh? A. All of them.

Q. Will you give me the names of some of them that knew?

A. Instead of me trying to remember the names, let me submit you an official list tomorrow or some other time of the members of the Committee.

Q. You don't know at this time?

A. Yes. I know a lot of them.

Q. Give me the names of those that you do know.

A. I will give you the names first of the ILA Strike Committee or the ILA Executive Committee. There was myself, Chairman; Matt Meehan, Secretary; Con Negsted was——

Q. (Interposing). Let's go to Matt Meehan. Did Matt Meehan know that your expenses were to be paid by the East Coast prior to your departure? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: All right.

Presiding Inspector: He said that everyone.

The Witness: Con Negsted was another member of the Committee. F. Ward was another member. A. Larson was another member. That's all I can think of with certainty, for this reason: That the Committee changed.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [6022]

Q. Without regard to your reason——

A. (Interposing) I might get somebody on

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

there that wasn't on there at that time, but I can submit you an official list of the members of that Committee.

Q. What was the other Committee?

A. The other Committee was the Joint Coast Committee. There was three or four Committees. If you want the names of the Joint Coast Strike Committee——

Q. (Interposing) How many were there on the Joint Committee?

A. Oh, there were four or five from each Union; about 40 or 50 all told.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that the purpose of your going to the East Coast at that time was to confer with Joe Ryan?

A. Part of it, yes; very definitely.

Q. Well now, that was the primary purpose, was it not? A. Oh, no.

Q. Huh?

A. No. The letter shows you otherwise, and the minutes will show you otherwise. One of the things that I was supposed to do, and it was done, was to call upon Joe Ryan and demand that he give us the support that he had promised us, and after waiting around in New York for two or three days I [6023] managed to crash past Joe Ryan and his gangsters and talk to him.

Q. Now, was Joe Curran at that time connected with any union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. The position of the entire East Coast seamen was that they were still affiliated and been illegally suspended.

Q. Then Joe Curran was not, as I understand your testimony, affiliated with any A. F. of L. Union?

A. Well, it all depends on how you look at it.

Q. Well, was he or wasn't he?

A. Yes; in my opinion, definitely.

Q. And in the opinion of the International Officers?

A. Oh, no. Definitely the other way.

Q. Whom did Joe Curran represent at that time?

A. East Coast Seamen's Strike Committee.

Q. And whom did the East Coast Strike Committee represent at that time?

A. The East Coast Seamen on strike, and a lot of them that weren't, I guess.

Q. They were the rank and file seamen, weren't they? A. That's right.

Q. And they were not connected with any A. F. of L. Union, were they?

A. They were all members of the ISU.

Q. Was that an A. F. of L. Union? [6024]

A. International Seamen's Union of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. And you say that they had been outlawed because of their——

A. (Interposing) I think that Curran's testimony on that point is better than mine. He officially participated. The membership voted to strike and the officials walked out of the meeting then and the membership carried on.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. The officials did not want them to go out on strike? A. That is correct.

Q. And they went out notwithstanding?

A. That's right.

Q. And they didn't go out then as an A. F. of L. Union but rank and file?

A. Oh, no. Because the officials didn't want the strike doesn't say that they didn't go out as an A. F. of L. Union.

Presiding Inspector: We have got the fact. The conclusions we can draw. [6025]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, when you returned from the east coast did you make a report to anyone?

A. Yes; I made—sure, I made a report, I think, to all the ports on the coast; all the big ports, and I made it to a mass meeting in San Francisco. I made quite a few reports on that. And, of course, I made it to the Joint Strike Committee, and my own Strike Committee.

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio showed Mr. Gladstein a book of convention proceedings.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I have here the proceedings of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the Pacific Coast District No. 38, International Longshoremen's Association——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) '37.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: '38.

Mr. Grossman: He is speaking of District No. 38.

Mr. Del Guercio: Pacific Coast District No. 38.

Mr. Gladstein: I thought you said 1938 proceedings.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing) ——of May 3 to 22, 1937, covering that period. Mr. Bridges, have you ever seen that before?

A. (Examining proceedings) Yes. This looks like a copy of our official convention minutes of the convention that was supposed—I forget—I think it is the 28th [6026] or 29th Annual Convention of the District.

Q. Now, reading from page 120 of these proceedings:

"At this time also the District Executive Board decided to send me to the east coast to survey the situation and see what could be done to get support of the Atlantic ILA and in conjunction with the publicity program in an attempt to exert added pressure on the shipowners to break down their refusal to arrive at a settlement."

Did you make such a statement?

A. That is my statement.

Q. That is your statement?

A. In the official minutes.

Q. (Continuing):

"Attempts to get some action and support of the East Coast Longshoremen to the East Coast rank and file seamen on strike although having some little results were mainly fruitless."

A. Right.

Q. (Continuing):

"However, the East Coast seamen despite the greatest odds and obstacles were making a valiant although losing fight and the West Coast ILA and Maritime Unions owed them a never to be forgotten debt for their fight and support on our behalf."

Did you make that statement? [6027]

A. Not only at the convention, but I made a similar report when I returned from the east.

Q. (Continuing):

"I proceeded to New York, attended a mass meeting of seamen, also attended meetings of longshoremen and seamen in Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore." A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing):

"It was apparent, however, to myself on arrival on the east coast that the possibility of any broad action from the longshoremen was nil. We were able to institute some action in the ports of New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, such as having some longshore locals refuse ot work ships. It was at this time that I met with J. P. Ryan and the Atlantic District Executive Board and was informed I was no longer a member of the International Executive Council or on the payroll of the International."

Is that correct. A. Correct.

Q. (Continuing):

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"After staying four days on the east coast, I returned to the west coast. However, one thing happened while east that was noticeable, and that was the publicity to the effect that the West Coast Strike was almost over.

"The question came up this morning about carrying out [6028] the orders of the District Executive Board. Those were concurred in by all locals, I understand. When we discussed it on the Executive Board, we had certain information that we didn't know how authentic it was—that possibly we could get the support of the east coast longshoremen. The seamen requested me to go back and attend a mass meeting, paid the expenses—the District didn't pay them.

"In regard to carrying out orders. The orders were carried out, but just a bit too good for Mr. Ryan. When I got to New York I found he was not in but was in Albany and I was not going to hang around and wait for him and waste a day. I went to Philadelphia that night and attended a mass meeting. I went to Boston, and then to Baltimore, where they tied up ships the next morning."

Is that correct? A. Substantially; yes.

Q. What orders were you talking about there in that paragraph?

A. I think you would have to read what I referred to during the rendering of the report. Somebody raised a question of what I was doing back there, and he raised the question in defense of Joe Ryan. He happened to be, I believe, one of the people that was a recognized supporter and an adherent of Joe Ryan and actually left our union when it went CIO, and he was bringing up the fact that when I had gone back [6029] east I had not carried out the orders of the Executive Committee.

Q. What were the orders of the executive Committee with respect to your going back east?

A. The letter of December 10th, in evidence.

Q. Were they orders, or was that your letter?

A. That was an official letter of the Executive Committee. And just what I say is true—The orders were carried out so well that I got fired.

Q. And you are referring to Alien's Exhibit No. 37?

A. Yes; orders of the Executive Committee.

Q. That was signed by yourself, was it not?

A. As Chairman of the Board.

Q. Pacific Coast District Executive Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any mention in this letter about arrangements having been made for you to speak at Philadelphia, Boston, New York, or elsewhere?

A. What I think you was referring to here. I have got evidence that we did. I have got evidence, I have a telegram wiring back east before I left, to make arrangements to speak.

Q. Is there anything in this exhibit, Alien's Exhibit 37, to the effect that arrangements had been made for you to speak at New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore or Boston? [6030] A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. In the first paragraph.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Will you read the first paragraph?

A. (Reading) "(1) To dispatch an ILA delegation to the east coast which will attempt to cover the ports of New York, Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia, and appeal to the longshoremen there, members of the ILA, to immediately refrain from performing any further work on inter-coastal ships operated by companies that the ILA, Pacific Coast District, is at present striking against."

Q. That is the only thing in that letter with reference to arrangements having been made for you to speak?

A. That is certainly enough, as far as I can see it, taken into consideration with what actually was done. I wasn't going to go back in the dark, with the short space of time we had. Those arrangements were made before that letter was ever written.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, you had made those arrangements with Joe Curran, isn't that right?

A. Yes. I had made the arrangements partly through Joe Curran, partly through Rathbone, partly by direct contact with Foster.

Q. Did you make any such arrangements with Joe Ryan? A. To meet—— [6031]

Q. Did Joe Ryan know you were going back east at those places? A. Oh, yes.

Q. When did you notify Joe Ryan?

A. We notified Joe Ryan by——

Q. (Interposing) Do you mean by letter?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I did, as Chairman of the Board.

Q. When did you notify Joe Ryan?

A. At the end of November.

Q. The end of November?

A. I think; yes.

Q. Well, now, had arrangements been made for you to go to the East Coast to speak at the end of November?

A. I can tell you everything that happened if you want me to.

Q. Do you have a copy of that letter that you sent to Joe Ryan?

A. I am referring to a letter—yes, I have got a copy of it.

Q. Where is it?

A. It is a letter dated November 29th.

Q. Do you have it here?

A. They (indicating counsel) should have it there.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will counsel mind getting the letter?

Mr. Gladstein: He says it is in evidence—are you [6032] referring to a letter in evidence?

The Witness: The letter of November 29 or thereabouts.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is it in evidence, or has your counsel got it?

A. I am not sure—I don't remember. It might be, but I don't think so.

Q. What did you say in this letter to Joe Ryan about going back east to speak?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. The letter was addressed to Joe Ryan, pointing out that he was strike-breaking—we called him as much—and that we demanded that he live up to the promises that he had made us for our support.

Q. Was there anything in that letter about you going to the east coast to speak?

A. I am just trying to remember.

Q. That is the only question.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose the letter would be the best evidence.

A. (Continuing): I am not quite sure. That is why I wanted to look at the letter. I think it is all connected up.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Try and look for it. First, you say you might have the letter here?

A. My going back east——.

Mr. Gladstein: We are looking for the letter.

[6033]

The Witness: My going back east was a follow-up of the letter. I am not sure whether it says specifically in the letter that I am going to go back east; but all these letters that were written, copies of them always went to Joe Ryan, and were published in the papers, published in our Organ—and all the rest of it. Joe knew I was coming back. He had a couple of people there to meet me.

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein passed a letter to the witness.)

The Witness: There is nothing in this particular letter (indicating) that specifically indicates that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What you are referring to now is a letter handed to you by your counsel?

A. Yes—a letter dated November 29, one of our official letters.

Q. And there is nothing in that letter referring to your going back east?

A. Nothing in there that indicates or specifically says that I will——

Q. (Interposing): Nothing that indicates that you will be going back east?

A. It only indirectly indicates that.

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein passed another letter to the witness.)

The Witness: The same with this letter (indicating). [6034] This is a letter dated November 28th. It doesn't specifically refer to a delegation going back but indirectly.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Then, as I understand you, you have nothing to show that you notified Joe Ryan that you were going back east to speak?

A. No, not specifically in these letters. It is possible there is some communication. I would have to look and see.

Q. Will you make a search for such a communication?

Mr. Gladstein: We shall.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And let me know tomorrow about it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That is a letter, or a wire, or something showing Joe Ryan that I was bound back east?

Q. Anything.

A. Yes. I can make a search for one. I am pretty sure I will find one.

Q. Now, when had you definitely decided to go back east to speak at those places?

A. When?

Q. Yes. A. December 9th.

Q. Before this letter of December 10th had been written? A. Yes. [6035]

Q. Alien's Exhibit 37?

A. Yes. I couldn't go back—we were still making arrangements for meetings. We had a meeting going on here December 8th, and we couldn't set a definite time.

Q. Were you a free agent at that time—could you determine your own trips? A. Oh, no.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

Q. You had to get authority, didn't you?

A. And how!

Q. And so you couldn't have gone back east without getting authority from someone?

A. Right.

Q. Who did you have to get the authority from?

A. My executive committee.

Q. You didn't have any authority to go back east to speak, did you, on December 9, 1936?

A. I had it before that; yes, had it before that.

Q. Do you have any evidence of that, other than

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

this letter of December 10, 1936, signed by yourself?

A. Yes. I think you will—we have got the evidence in the minutes of the Executive Committee, and certainly it is indicated in the letter of November 29 as part of the major program. [6036]

Q. Did you tell anyone that you had arranged with Joe Ryan to speak——

A. (Interposing) I am sure we did.

Q. (Continuing): ——prior to your going out there to speak at Madison Square Garden, and Philadelphia, and Boston, and Baltimore?

A. Yes. Our Committee certainly knew it, and I know that when I was up north it was known, and my attorneys have got a set of teletypes and telegrams that indicate it.

Q. Now, you didn't meet Joe Ryan, did you, in New York upon your arrival there?

A. No. He was in Albany attending a session of the Legislature.

Q. How did you know that?

A. Well, I was first informed, I believe, by the press.

Q. When? A. When I hit there.

Q. What did they say about it? Did you ask the press there as to where Ryan was?

A. The press—of course, every time I hit New York at that time they wanted to know what I was going to do to Joe Ryan, or what Joe Ryan was going to do to me. There seemed to be quite a lot of interest in it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Where was this? Immediately upon your alighting from the airplane? [6037]

A. That is generally where they get down to see me at New York.

Q. Where? A. At the air field.

Q. And what did they say? A. Well,——

Q. (Interposing): Did they ask you why you were coming to New York?

A. They apparently knew.

Q. Huh?

A. You see, what you have got to understand——

Q. (Interposing) Wait now! You are getting off the airplane and the press is interviewing you. What did they say to you?

A. They asked me how far I thought I would get in the program that I had come to New York and the east coast to put over, the program that had been published in the press.

Q. Now, did they say anything about your speaking there? A. Yes.

Q. At Madison Square Garden?

A. Well, I don't know about that.

Q. Huh? A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did they say anything about your going down to Philadelphia to speak? [6038]

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did they say anything about your going to Baltimore to speak?

A. I don't remember. I don't remember if we——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing): Did they say anything about your going to Boston to speak?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Then you weren't interviewed concerning the speeches that you were to make at any of those places, were you, by the press?

A. I don't recall specifically. I was interviewed on the general nature of my trip back east.

Q. And did you tell them that you were going to speak at any of these places? Did you tell the press?

A. I don't recall what I told them.

Q. You know you didn't?

A. No. Here's what happened, if I remember. I was to go back there and I was to arrange a meeting with Ryan. Communications and wires and telephone calls had availed us nothing, and I was to see Ryan and finally say "Now, what's the score here? Do you back up what you promised us or don't you?" And if he refused we were going to try and contact the longshoremen in as large a number as possible everywhere we could, especially the ports that we had discussed.

Q. Now you are using "we" again. Who is your "we"? [6039]

A. Well, I mean "I" was in this case.

Q. There wasn't anybody else, was there?

A. No, not in this connection there wasn't. It was just myself.

Q. Joe Curran included?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Well, of course Joe was with me on these trips.

Q. Tommy Raye included? A. No.

Q. Roy Hudson included?

A. No. I was representing the West Coast longshoremen and I was able to do it without any help.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that Roy Hudson had a lot to do with the rank and file seamen that were on strike at that time?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Didn't Joe Curran ever tell you anything about that? A. No, never.

Q. And wasn't that one of the things that you discussed with Roy Hudson when he came to your office there early in '36? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. Not that I remember.

Q. Didn't he talk to you about the situation in the [6040] east coast?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And the support you might receive out there?

A. Yes.

Q. If the west coast struck?

A. He talked, I believe, about the entire situation.

Q. And didn't he tell you what influence he had on the east coast? A. He might have.

Q. Didn't you meet Roy Hudson there upon your arrival in New York?

A. In New York?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Was he in New York at the time?

A. I don't know.

Q. Now, when did you see Joe Ryan?

A. When?

Q. Yes, on that trip.

A. Oh, I don't remember. I don't remember whether it was—I know it was before the Madison Square Garden meeting. Whether it was the same day in the morning or the day before, I'm not—I can't recall.

Q. That was how many days after your arrival in New York? [6041]

A. Well, I didn't see him the day I arrived. I doubt if I saw him the second day. It was either the second or third day after I arrived.

Q. And where did you see him?

A. When?

Q. Where? A. Right in his office.

Q. Was anybody with you?

A. He wouldn't talk to me. I didn't see Ryan. He wouldn't talk to me. He sat in the next office and sent one of his gangsters in to talk to me.

Q. Anybody with you? A. No, I was alone.

Q. And you went to see Joe Ryan in his office alone? A. That's right.

Q. And what did Joe Ryan tell you?

A. He wouldn't talk to me. He sent in a fellow named Owens to talk to me.

Q. What did Owens tell you?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. He would come in and tell me what Joe Ryan thought of me and I told him what I thought of Joe Ryan, and that's the way the things went on, and in the meantime the goon squad went around making dirty cracks at me, threatening to throw me out.

Q. Did they, literally? [6042]

A. Just about.

Q. Well, did they? A. Just about.

Q. Did they use force to throw you out?

A. Well, I would call it "force."

Q. They put their hands on you? A. Yes.

Q. And they threw you out? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Joe Ryan fired you, didn't he?

A. Oh, yes. That was done before I was thrown out.

Q. When was it done?

A. Before I was thrown out.

Q. Who told you that you were fired?

A. The ambassador that was passing backwards and forwards.

Q. Did he tell you why?

A. Did he tell me what?

Q. Did he tell you why? A. Sure.

Q. Why?

A. I was going against Joe Ryan.

Q. Did he tell you that it was because you hadn't obeyed orders?

A. I wasn't under Ryan's orders. [6043]

Q. Under whose orders were you?

A. Under west coast orders.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Weren't you also under Joe Ryan's orders?

A. No. I would have kept my job if I had done that.

Q. You were required to do that?

A. No, no. I was required to take orders from the west coast and the people who elected me.

Q. And as an International officer you weren't required to take any orders from Joe Ryan?

A. Not in conflict with my orders from the membership on the west coast.

Q. And what orders were in conflict with orders from the west coast?

A. Joe Ryan's orders.

Q. What were his orders?

A. Break the strike. Break the strike. That was his orders.

Q. Now, the west coast had ordered you to go to see Joe Ryan, hadn't they?

A. Right.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Had they ordered you in so many words to make a speech in the Madison Square Garden?

A. No. I don't think they did in so many words. [6044]

Q. Had they ordered you to make a speech in Philadelphia? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. They knew I was going there.

Q. I didn't ask you if they knew that you were going there. I asked you if they had given you orders to go back east to speak at Philadelphia.

A. They gave me orders to get all the support I could get in any way I could get it, and I carried out orders.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. But not to speak, did they?

A. Any way. That included speaking. They trusted my judgment some, and that included speaking or doing anything else that was legal.

Q. And is that—did they give you orders to go to the Communist Party headquarters in New York?

A. Not necessarily. Not that I remember. Completely unnecessary.

Q. Now, did you go to the Communist Party headquarters while you were in New York?

A. Never been to them in my life in New York. Don't even know where they are at.

Q. At any time? A. At any time.

Presiding Inspector: Can you finish this subject? [6045]

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: Then we will recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 4:15 o'clock p. m. an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, June 3, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.) [6046]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: Thank you.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, to go back to this trip of yours to the east coast in December, 1936. As I understand it, you had been ordered to go there to try and get the east coast longshoremen to declare a strike, is that right?

A. Providing Ryan wouldn't go through with the promise he had given us.

Q. That was your purpose in going to the east coast, to try and get the longshoremen to go out on strike?

A. Yes—and some of them went out.

Q. Now, under whose auspices were the meetings at Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, and the mass meeting in New York?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Under the auspices of the seamen in some cases, longshoremen in others. I think the meeting in Boston was under the auspices and arranged for by the longshoremen of Boston.

Q. The meeting at Boston—— [6048]

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. I would like to speak to you a moment.

(Whereupon the Presiding Inspector conferred with Mr. Del Guercio.)

Presiding Inspector: We will take a brief recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read the last question and answer, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, what longshoremen union arranged for a meeting with the seamen, the mass meeting of the seamen at Boston?

A. I never said that. The meeting in Boston was arranged by the ILA.

Q. By what ILA?

A. The ILA; the union.

Presiding Inspector: The local union?

The Witness: Yes, the Boston Local of the ILA; the officials up there. I think the President of the Local arranged it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That ILA was, of course, an AF of L affiliate at that time?

A. Affiliate of our own International. [6049]

Q. And who with that ILA joined with the seamen to hold this mass meeting at Boston?

A. Marty Flaherty, the only one I remember. There were others.

Q. Was there any joint mass meeting with the joint longshoremen and seamen at any of the other places, at New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

A. The meeting at Philadelphia was longshoremen and seamen; mainly longshoremen.

Q. Did the local ILA there join with the seamen to hold that mass meeting? A. Yes.

Q. And who in Philadelphia with the longshoremen did that?

A. I don't remember the names of the local men.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, all of those meetings at which you spoke were held solely under the auspices of the rank and file seamen headed by Joe Curran?

A. That is not so. I have got the records to show otherwise.

Q. Now, on this trip to the east coast did you make any contacts with east coast unions of the longshoremen? Did you yourself go on the floor of any longshoremen union on the east coast at either Boston, Philadelphia, New York or Baltimore?

A. Not at that time. Do you know how impossible it [6050] is to get a meeting of longshoremen on the east coast?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: No. Did you?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I am speaking of this time that you went to the east coast to get the longshoremen on strike. Did you appear in any of those four days on the floor of any longshoremen east coast union?

A. And I am saying No, because such a thing would be a practical impossibility. There were no meetings of those unions. Some of the men I spoke to hadn't been in a union meeting for twenty years.

Q. Did you make any attempt before you left the west coast to contact any longshoremen union on the east coast?

A. I arranged the Boston meeting. I arranged the Boston meeting the early part of December.

[6051]

Q. Did you have any communication with any longshoremen union regarding the Boston meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are those communications?

A. My attorneys have some of them.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want them?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

(The communications referred to were passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you have any communication with any

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

longshoremen union in Philadelphia regarding your speaking there?

A. No. We wired Curran to arrange that.

Q. Now, you knew that Curran wasn't connected with any longshoremen union, didn't you?

A. I knew he had more connections than many of the so-called longshore leaders.

Q. Did you also wire to Roy Hudson to make the same connections?

A. Not necessarily. I wired to Curran

Q. Well, did you wire to Roy Hudson?

A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No. [6052]

Q. Did you wire to Tommy Raye?

A. No.

Q. Did you wire to anybody in the Communist Party? A. Not at all.

Q. To make arrangements?

A. We have got the wires to who I wired to.

Q. Do you have the wires to the Communist Party?

A. I wired and telephoned to the official people back there that we were working with.

Q. Now, this Flaherty that you speak of in Boston, he's a member of the Communist Party isn't he? A. He is not.

Q. Huh? A. He is not.

Q. Is he still with the A. F. of L?

A. He is still, I think, the president of the Longshore Council out there, or of the Longshore Union.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I don't know what his official office is now, but he was at that time.

Q. Now, your counsel here has handed to me two telegrams here received from——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) There are three of them.

By Mr Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing): Thomas. Who is Thomas?

A. I know a half a dozen. Which one do you want?

Q. J. E. Thomas.

A. I think he was the Chairman of the Sailors' Strike [6053] Committee in Boston at that time.

Q. He wasn't connected with any longshoremen union, was he? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Huh?

A. I think so. I think in a time like that everybody is connected with the unions on strike.

Q. Did he belong to any longshoremen union, J. E. Thomas?

A. He might have. I don't know. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you weren't communicating with him as an official of any longshoremen union, were you?

A. No, not necessarily.

Q. He wasn't communicating with you as an official of any longshoremen union?

A. He was communicating with me in conjunction with Flaherty.

Q. He was communicating with you as Chairman of the Strike Committee on the East Coast?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Of the Sailors' Strike Committee.

Q. Not the Longshoremen Strike Committee?

A. In conjunction with the longshoremen.

Q. The longshoremen went on strike on the East Coast? [6054]

A. There were a few. After we got through there was.

Q. But not at the time you went East?

A. They had all taken a vote to strike, but they were not allowed to strike.

Q. Then they weren't on strike?

A. Well, it all depends. Up in Boston and up in Connecticut, a few other places around there, they were refusing to load West Coast ships. Now, maybe they weren't on strike. Technically, according to Ryan, the action was illegal. But they went in our support and they had refused to load the ships bound for the West Coast.

Q. And, as a matter of fact, you didn't carry out the orders of your locals here on this trip to the East Coast, did you?

A. Well, between what you say and what my convention said I'll go by the convention.

Q. And you know, and, as a matter of fact, you were just camouflaging that trip to the East Coast?

A. In what way?

Q. In every way. You were going out there on orders of the Communist Party, weren't you?

A. Not at all. It's all in the records how I went there, why I went there, and I reported back to my Executive Committee in the convention and my report was approved, except for the agents in the convention. [6055]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you know how much money was collected at the Madison Square Garden meeting in December, 1936?

A. You mean in the collection itself?

Q. All. A. The whole thing?

Q. The collection and the tickets; the money received from the sale of admission tickets?

A. No. I think Curran's recollection is better than mine on that.

Q. Did you ever have any independent knowledge of how much was collected?

A. At no time.

Q. How much did Joe Curran tell you was collected?

A. He told everybody on the witness stand. I forget the figures now. I think he said about $3,500, he said. That is the paid admission and the collection. All that I remember was that the sum was announced before we left the meeting and it was published in the newspapers the next day.

Q. Is that the first time you had any knowledge as to how much was collected at the time Joe Curran testified here on the witness stand?

A. No. I heard the amount announced at the meeting. It was announced before the meeting was over.

Q. And who announced it?

A. I don't recall. It was either Lawrenson or McCuistion. [6056]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And did you receive any of that money?

A. I never received a nickel of the entire trip in cash.

Q. My question is, Did you receive any of that money that was collected at the Madison Square Garden meetings?

Presiding Inspector: Well, he said "No."

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Either by sale of the tickets, admission tickets or by collection?

A. I never received a nickel of it.

Q. Now, you never received a nickel of it?

A. Not a nickel.

Q. Now, on July 3, 1937 at the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in Portland, Oregon——you remember that, don't you?

A. What date?

Q. On July 3, 1937? A. Yes.

Q. Did you state in substance with regard to your trip to New York in December, 1936 as follows. "I am going to speak for the records. During the last strike I drew not one nickel in salary or in expenses during the entire time of the strike, not one nickel of it. The funds of the District were audited by the auditing committee of the District Convention and they found those statements entirely correct. I [6057] made a trip back East and the entire trip was paid by the East Coast seamen because I was to attend the mass meeting of the seamen and speak in their behalf. They collected some $4,000 at the mass meeting. I assume some of the expenses, which was about $275.00 train fare, came out of that money."

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Did you make such a statement at that time?

A. I believe I would make a statement along that line, yes.

Q. Then you did receive $275.00 from the money that was collected at that mass meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. In New York? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Huh?

A. My ticket was paid for before I left the West Coast.

Q. Your ticket was paid for before. By whom?

A. I don't know the individuals, but we have got a telegram to show it.

Q. Could it have been paid for by Roy Hudson?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Could it have been paid for by Tom Raye?

A. No.

Q. You heard the testimony of Joe Curran here, didn't you? [6058] A. Yes.

Q. Did he say that money had been advanced to you from the East to pay for your transportation back East? A. No.

Q. And your testimony now is that it wasn't?

A. My testimony is that we wired East that I was coming and to arrange for the ticket in New York, and it was done before I ever left here.

Q. Well now, who gave you that $275.00?

A. I never got any $275.00.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, were you making a false statement when you gave that report before this Maritime Federation in Portland?

A. I think it is substantially correct.

Q. Well, where did that $275.00 come from?

A. That was the price of the ticket.

Q. And who gave it to you?

A. Who gave me the ticket?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, the East Coast seamen.

Q. Who and when?

A. Before I left the West Coast.

Q. And how was it sent to you? Through the mails?

A. Well, you don't do it that way.

Q. What did they do?

A. I would go down and get aboard the plane and my [6059] transportation was arranged for.

Q. Tell me how you did that. You went down to what airport?

A. I went down to Mills Field, if I left from San Francisco, which I did.

Q. What did you do?

A. You just go down and get aboard the plane and you are off.

Q. Without any ticket?

A. Without any ticket at all. That is, if they trust you. They mightn't do it for everybody.

Q. Did they have a ticket there for you?

A. Yes. That was the way it was done.

Q. Who purchased it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. The ticket was purchased in New York and they had word of it in San Francisco, and all you did was to board the plane, and that was before the meeting and before any collection was made. I have already told you that we sent a thousand dollars back East immediately after I returned to the West Coast. [6060]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, now, Curran's testimony that the seamen there on strike on the east coast were starving to death, didn't have a penny to spare, that was all untrue and false, is that correct?

A. No. It is perfectly true and correct. I saw that with my own eyes.

Q. You mean the seamen were starving to death and yet they had enough money to advance you $275 to pay for your round trip ticket?

A. They apparently did.

Q. They didn't need that money to feed the starving seamen on the east coast?

Mr. Gladstein: That is argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that all argument?

Mr. Gladstein: Very much so; and I object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have the facts.

Mr. Gladstein: I have shown Mr. Del Guercio three telegrams, none of which he has chosen to use, and I have now given him a fourth telegram.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am about to use this telegram now. I only use it if I wish, regardless of what counsel hands me, but I use this.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Your counsel has given me what purports to be a copy [6061] of an RCA radiogram, dated December 10,—notice the date—December 10, 1936, addressed to Joseph Curran, Chairman, Strike Strategy Committee, 164 Eleventh Avenue, New York City, and signed by Mervyn Rathborne.

This wire reads:

"Harry will speak at mass meeting Madison Square Garden December fourteenth Stop."

You didn't speak at Madison Square Garden on December 14, did you?

A. No. I think it was two days later.

Q. (Continuing):

"Request you make immediate arrangements for round trip airplane ticket with United Air Lines and notify by telegraph Stop."

A. Right.

Q. (Continuing):

"In addition to public mass meeting also arrange mass meetings of longshoremen in Boston and New York Stop."

So that Mervyn Rathborne then was arranging for the mass meetings in Boston and in New York, and not the seamen on the east coast?

A. Do you want me to answer that?

Q. Can you answer it?

A. Sure I can.

Presiding Inspector: He asked the questions. I suppose he [6062] wants you to answer.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Rathborne was the Secretary of the Committee, and communications that went out generally went out signed by Rathborne. That is what the Secretary of the Committee is for. I didn't sit down and send the communications off. Rathborne used to take care of those things. He was the Secretary of the Committee and he operated in the office. I was getting around here, there and everywhere. Those meetings were arranged by me and Rathborne was just transmitting the arrangements from me to Joe Curran, and that is what that telegram means.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. It ends:

"Acknowledge receipt and keep us posted as to arrangements." A. That is right.

Q. What does the "ABAJCF" mean there?

A. That was so the other end would know that no agency of the employers, or any other kind of agency, were doing a little spying and sending phony telegrams.

Q. You wanted to keep this secret?

A. No. Do you want an explanation of that? I can give it to you.

Q. I know you can. A. You bet. [6063]

Q. Having seen this wire, do you want to change your testimony that you gave here just this morning—not yesterday or several years ago—that you had made arrangements for that Boston meeting upon your return from the northwest prior to December 10th?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. I made the arrangements before I returned..

Q. Huh?

A. Before this telegram was sent and before I returned from the northwest. We have telegrams to show that too.

Q. You don't want to make any explanation of that?

A. Oh, yes, I will explain.

When I was in the northwest—I left San Francisco November 29—and I had to speak at a meeting in Seattle November 30, and I spoke there. I also spoke at meetings in Astoria, In Aberdeen, in Portland. Then I came back to San Francisco.

While I was in the northwest at some point or other I spoke to Boston by long distance telephone, and arranged the meeting tentatively in Boston—maybe not the exact date—but all the other arrangements; told them to procure a hall, told them to get the arrangements set up, and all the rest of it, and that we would be back there. I done it in the northwest before I returned to San Francisco.

This (indicating radiogram) is in the nature of a confirmation. We have the teletypes and telegrams to show that [6064] too, with the telephone numbers.

Q. Now, I believe you testified here on direct examination that you were in the hospital in June 1935, is that correct?

A. The best part of it; the best part of June.

Q. What? A. The best part of June.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. The best part of June?

A. Yes. I went to the hospital May 28.

Q. Had you at that time been insured with the IWO?

A. No, never been insured in the IWO.

Q. Do you know what the IWO is?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it?

A. International Workers Order. It is kind of a fraternal or benefit society.

Q. Isn't it an insurance organization set up by the Communist Party?

A. Not that I know of. You had better ask somebody that is in it.

Q. Do you know Max Bedacht?

A. I met him for the first time about two months ago.

Q. You heard that about two months ago?

A. No. I met him for the first time about two months ago. I was in a meeting where he spoke.

[6065]

Q. Do you know him as being the head of the IWO? A. I didn't, and I don't now.

Q. Who treated you while you were in the hospital? A. Who treated me?

Q. Yes.

A. You mean the doctors, the nurses, or who?

Q. Doctors?

A. I had three doctors; one was Dr. Korshet—K-o-r-s-h-e-t—I think it is; and——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing) Let us stay with Dr. Korshet. Wasn't he the doctor for the IWO?

A. I don't know.

Q. Who made arrangements for you to have Dr. Korshet?

A. I don't know that. I think some of my friends on the waterfront did.

Q. Schneidermannn?

A. I don't think it would be Schneidermann. He wasn't even in the city.

Q. Was it Darcy that made the arrangements?

A. I don't see why; I don't think so. The state I was in I wasn't worrying about who made the arrangements for the doctor. I would have taken him regardless of who made the arrangements.

Q. As a matter of fact, it was Norma Perry—P-e-r-r-i e—no, P-e-r-r-y—who made the arrangements, [6066] wasn't it?

A. I don't know. I think I was out at that time; unconscious. That is entirely possible.

Q. And Miss Norma Perry had been assigned to you as your Secretary by Sam Darcy?

A. She had not been assigned to me; no.

Q. Was Norma Perry your secretary at that time?

A. I think she was at that time; yes. She was not assigned to me by anybody except the longshore Executive Board, and somewhat against my will.

Q. How did she get employed with you?

A. She came down on the waterfront during the

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

1934 strike here, as did a group of other people, quite a few.

Q. Group of what other people—who were the others?

A. I am trying to recall. There were dozens of people at that time coming down and volunteering their services, such as stenographers, this and that and other thing, and some of them we accepted and some we didn't.

I remember once I fired a whole bunch out of the strike headquarters.

Q. Let us stick with Norma Perry.

A. Yes—and I am saying that somehow she got back.

Q. All right. Did she tell you who sent her down there? A. At that time, no. [6067]

Q. Did she tell you at any other time?

A. Not that I recall. I had very grave suspicions as to who sent her down there.

Q. Did she tell you that Sam Darcy had sent her down there?

A. I don't recall that. She was very well acquainted with Darcy and everybody.

Q. She was well acquainted with all the Communist Party leaders at that time, wasn't she?

A. Sure. She was so well acquainted with some of the people in the city that I got very suspicious of her. She was well acquainted with all the police, the District Attorney, and the employers, and everybody, and that is why I finally fired her.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. How long was Norma Perry with you?

A. I don't know. I can check the record.

Presiding Inspector: Your best recollection.

A. (Continuing) Somewhere around 1935.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. For how long a period?

A. From the 1934 strike, the first or second month of the 1934 strike, to around the end of 1935, I think.

Q. Over a year? A. Oh, yes; over a year.

Q. About two years? [6068]

A. Might have been.

Q. She first came to you during the 1934 strike?

A. Yes. And she was assigned to the Publicity Committee, to work with them during the strike.

Q. Did she work with Henry Schmidt?

A. No. She worked with Ralph Mallon, and he made the motion to the Executive Board to hire her as a regular union stenographer after the strike was over.

Q. Was that done?

A. That was done. I have the minutes, I think.

Q. Did you support it?

A. I think I opposed it.

Q. In any event, she became Secretary?

A. Yes, she became one of the Secretaries. There was others.

Q. Who were the others?

A. I can't think of the girls' names, a couple of girls there, one, at least—and I can't think of them now.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. During this period of time you were on speaking terms with Sam Darcy?

A. Oh, yes; sure.

Q. Did Sam Darcy ever speak to you about Norma Perry? A. Not that I recall.

Q. Can you try to recall?

A. I don't recall any specific conversation about her. [6069]

Q. Well, not a specific one, but maybe you can recall a general one.

A. No. It is pretty hard to recall general conversations that far back.

Q. And you want your testimony to be that Sam Darcy never spoke to you about Norma Perry at any time?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as a misstatement of the evidence.

Presiding Inspector: You have got that once. Why ask it again?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you speak at the Dreamland Auditorium on July 5, 1935, here in San Francisco?

A. Dreamland Auditorium?

Q. Yes. A. July 5, 1935?

Q. Yes.

A. I am pretty sure I did. That was another meeting when I gave Lundeberg a big build-up, even though I was supposed to be against him.

Q. Who was on the speakers' platform at that time?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I remember Lundeberg, and that is about all. I think there was also a member of the Masters, Mates and Pilots, a Captain Lawberg — L-a-w-b-e-r-g — that is the only two. I am not sure about the latter. I am positive [6070] Lundeberg was there. I went up there with him and introduced and spoke in his behalf, as well as my own.

Q. Was Henry Schmidt there?

A. Undoubtedly he would be.

Q. Was Louis Weinstock there?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. You are sure that Henry Schmidt was there?

A. I am not sure as to that. Knowing the type of meeting the chances are 99 out of 100 Schmidt would be there.

Q. Now, on your direct examination you testified that you spoke at Manhattan Opera House?

A. In 1935?

Q. 1935? A. Yes.

Q. When was that, in July?

A. July 1935.

Q. And under whose auspices was that meeting in the Manhattan Opera House?

A. I am not sure. It was either the A F of L Trade Union Committee for Unemployment Insurance, or the A F of L Trade Union Committee for something else. I am not sure what the name was. It was one of those two.

Q. Was it the American Federation of Labor Committee on Unemployment Insurance and Relief? A. I think it might have been. [6071]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Who was the Chairman of that Committee, or President? A. I am not sure.

Q. You know Louis Weinstock, don't you?

A. I know Louis Weinstock; yes.

Q. Was he there?

A. Yes; he was at that meeting. He was either the Chairman or the speaker.

Q. He was on the speakers' platform?

A. He was either Chairman or a speaker.

Q. You know that Weinstock is a member of the Communist Party, don't you?

A. I know nothing of the kind; and if he was for unemployment insurance I didn't care either. I recall the circumstances there well.

Q. Even though it was called the American Federation of Labor Committee on Unemployment Insurance and Relief you know that it wasn't an A F of L Committee at all?

A. I know nothing of the kind. I know it was.

Q. Huh? A. I know it was.

Q. Wasn't the matter litigated in a Federal Court? A. Not that I know of.

Q. With the Trade Commission?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Weren't they compelled to drop the name "American [6072] Federation of Labor?"

A. It might have been one of those technical cases where the American Federation of Labor refused to allow any member of the American Federation of Labor to use the name. That has happened dozens of times.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, you were served with a summons in that case, weren't you? A. I never was.

Q. Huh? A. Not that I remember.

Q. You don't remember the incident now?

A. Not at all. If I was served with a summons I didn't do anything about it.

Q. Weren't you also served with a notice to cease and desist?

A. Certainly not that I remember. I remember instances like that.

Q. With reference to this particular Committee? A. No, not that I recall.

Q. Would the records refresh your memory?

A. They might. I remember a case like that, but I don't think it was in connection with what you are referring to. I thought it was in connection with some publication.

Q. Well, now, as a matter of fact, you recall that you got two notices, one a notice to cease and desist and the other [6073] a notice to appear at a hearing?

A. Well, I don't recall. I recall receiving such a notice—yes, it would be a cease and desist notice—but I don't think it was in connection with this case. It might have been, I know that that was the basis of it, that it was an order to cease using the name of the American Federation of Labor without the American Federation of Labor's permission. But it seems to me that suit was brought, or that, whatever you call it, was brought by Paul Scharrenberg.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Wasn't that done because that group there was a Communist organization?

A. No, not the case I am referring to. It was done by the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, who were opposing unemployment insurance at that time, and there was a movement amongst the rank and file of the American Federation of Labor to support the bill in Congress at that time asking for unemployment insurance.

Q. And not a movement by the Communist Party?

A. I think the Communist Party was of the same mind, but the Committee I refer to was composed of A F of L local unions and union officials.

Q. Who were also members of the Communist Party? A. I don't believe it.

Q. You don't believe that Louis Weinstock is a member of the Communist Party? [6074]

A. No.

Q. Huh? A. Why should I?

Q. And a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party?

A. Why should I believe that?

Q. Huh?

A. Why should I believe that? I have no recollection of him telling me he was.

Q. Wasn't this Louis Weinstock on the speakers' stand there in the Madison Square Garden meeting in December 1936?

A. He was either the Chairman of the meeting or one of the speakers of the evening.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was he connected with the American Federation of Labor at that time?

A. I am sure he was; either a member of a local union or in some official capacity. I know later on he was Chairman of the New York Council of Painters, and they gave him credit for cleaning out all the racketeers out of the movement and giving it back to the rank and file.

Q. Was Roy Hudson on the speakers' platform at the Madison Square Garden meeting?

A. I don't think so. What meeting?

Q. What?

A. The Madison Square Garden meeting, do you say? [6075]

Q. Yes. A. Not that I remember.

Presiding Inspector: You mean the Madison Square Garden meeting?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. Not the Manhattan Opera House.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was Vito Marcantonio there?

A. He spoke.

Q. He spoke?

A. Marcantonio was one of the speakers of the evening.

Q. Now, you know Bill Schneidermann, don't you? A. Yes.

Q. When did you first meet Bill Schneidermann? A. 1936.

Q. And where did you meet him?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I can't quite recall where.

Q. Under what circumstances?

A. I don't remember that either.

Q. When?

A. I have a hazy recollection it was in connection with the Presidential Election at that time, or some political movement at that time. I don't recall where I met him. He might have come down to see me in my office.

Q. Could that have been the time you were introduced to [6076] Earl Browder at Dreamland Auditorium?

A. It might have been; I don't remember.

Q. Who introduced you to Earl Browder?

A. It was either Schneidermann or Lambert, if I remember.

Q. Was it Elmer Hanoff?

A. Might have been Hanoff. They were all up there. I went up to the meeting, and Browder was speaking and I remember I asked one of them to introduce me.

Q. Did you ask either Elmer Hanoff or Schneidermann?

A. It might have been Schneidermann, Hanoff or Lambert, but I don't recall now.

Q. So you knew Schneidermann before that meeting? A. I think so.

Q. Can you tell me the circumstances under which you met Schneidermann?

A. No. I can recall some of these things, but I can't recall all those little incidents.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, now, go back a little while—is it possible that you could have met Schneidermann at 121 Haight Street? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. I am sure of that. I can tell you why.

[6077]

Q. And did anybody introduce you to Schneidermann?

A. I don't recall it, but I assume that that's how I would meet him.

Q. You don't recall anything about how or when or where or under what circumstances you met Schneidermann?

A. I seem to have a recollection that I met Schneidermann in '36 around election time, about the middle or right after the middle of 1936.

Q. Who was Schneidermann at that time?

A. Schneidermann took Darcy's place in the Communist Party, whatever the official office was, whether it is the District Secretary or State Secretary or State Organizer.

Q. Of the Communist Party? A. Yes.

Q. And how many times did you meet with Schneidermann after that, after you first met him?

A. You mean up to now?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I don't know; ten or a dozen times.

Q. At the most?

A. Oh, it might be more, it might be less. It might be a few more times. I couldn't say with certainty.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And where did you meet him?

A. Generally come down to my office.

Q. Schneidermann would come down to your office? [6078] A. Yes.

Q. Was Schneidermann ever a member of any union?

A. I don't know. I don't know.

Q. Did he come down to your office?

A. I think he was. I think, if he isn't now, or hasn't been recently, he was a pretty prominent member, I believe, at one time.

Q. Well, did he ever come down to your office as a member of a union?

A. A. No. Always came down as a member of the Communist Party, as far as I recall.

Q. And would he be alone when he would come down to your office?

A. No. Maybe sometimes he might have somebody with him.

Q. Who?

A. Well, I recall a couple of times he came down with Lambert, for example.

Q. Walter Lambert? A. Yes.

Q. Anyone else?

A. I can't remember off-hand, not that I recall.

Q. And how many times did he come down to your office? A. How many?

Mr. Gladstein: It has been asked and answered, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [6079]

Mr. Del Guercio: Has it? I don't recall.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: He has told you how many times he met him.

A. (Continuing) Well, practically all the meetings would be in my office.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. All of them?

A. Yes. I don't recall seeing him eslewhere, except on occasions like, well, there would be the occasion of the meeting when Browder spoke and I have seen him at other public functions.

Q. And how long would he remain in your office?

A. How long would he remain in my office?

Q. Yes.

A. That would depend. Maybe five or ten minutes, maybe half an hour.

Q. Maybe two hours?

A. I can't recall any occasion where he'd stay that long, or have any reason to stay that long.

Q. Were there any meetings at your office in which anybody else was present other than Schneidermann and Walter Lambert?

A. Meetings? Do you mean while they were present?

Q. Yes.

A. Would there be anybody else there? [6080]

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. There would be other people coming in and going out.

Q. Would they be there the entire time that

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Schneidermann and Lambert would be in your office? A. No.

Q. Was O'Neil ever present at a time when Schneidermann came in to your office?

A. Yes. I think that O'Neil would come in and out, but he wouldn't sit down and participate in the discussion. My office——

Q. (Interposing) What discussions did you have with Schneidermann and Walter Lambert?

A. Generally it was on something that they wanted support on.

Q. "They", you mean——

A. (Interposing) Schneidermann or Lambert representing the Communist Party.

Q. Wanted your support?

A. Or some question that might involve certain activities I can't specifically recall some of them to mind, but if I do a little thinking about it I will be able to.

Q. Well, let me help you do a little thinking. When they would discuss with you about wanting your support for the Communist Party, what matters would they want your support on? [6081]

A. It might be a lot of matters. It might be a matter of some of them in trouble.

Q. Some of who in trouble? Some of the Communist Party members in trouble?

A. Some of the Communist Party members in trouble in some legal way and they would want support, pledges of support. It might be a political question.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. If it was a political question what would they want you to do? A. Support them.

Q. Support the Communist Party?

A. Or some individuals or some individual that the Communist Party was supporting who might not be a Communist.

Q. And they would talk these things over with you and you would come to some kind of and understanding? A. Yes.

Q. How many times did Schneidermann come there to your office offering the support of the Communist Party in your activities?

A. Oh, I don't know if you could put it that way.

Q. Would you say 50-50?

A. Would you say offering the support of the Communist Party to who?

Q. To your activities.

A. To my activities? Well, it all depends on what my activities were. You see, he might come down and offer his [6082] support in our activities; for example, in supporting certain political people in office. That wouldn't exactly be "my activities". That would be the activities of the organizations that we represented on behalf of certain groups or certain individuals.

Q. Tell me about those circumstances.

A. I would say the election of Governor Olson, Ellis Patterson and Sheridan Downey would be one meeting.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And Schneidermann came down and asked you to support them?

A. They were supported.

Q. You were an Alien then? A. Yes.

Q. Schneidermann was an Alien?

A. I thought he was a citizen.

Q. Well, he is an Alien now?

A. Oh, yes. I think——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) If your Honor please, that is immaterial and something not within this witness' knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: Then he can say so.

A. (Continuing) Well, I think the present case is in Court.

Presiding Inspector: You don't have to give an opinion on a legal case. [6083]

The Witness: It is not an opinion. I didn't know his case had been decided.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Hadn't you heard that the Circuit Court had rendered a decision upholding the cancellation of Schneidermann's citizenship upon the ground that it had been procured by fraud? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does all this make? We are not trying Mr. Schneidermann.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, we won't argue the matter.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is material. If it is you may have it, but I don't see how it is material.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, what else would he ask for your support on? A. Other political matters?

Q. What other political matters?

A. Well, there were other political contests. There were certain matters pending in the legislature that they might, and definitely did, think might be harmful to them and to us also, and, therefore, we would have a common ground to fight the things on through our various organizations.

Q. You and the Communist Party had a common ground on these matters?

A. That's true. There are many matters, legislative matters that the Communist Party opposes that we oppose. [6084]

Q. And then in those matters, after these meetings with Schneidermann, you would support Schneidermann and Schneidermann would support you, Schneidermann representing the Communist Party?

A. It wasn't a question of supporting me. It was a question of the issues involved as to whether the Communist Party as an organization would use what weight or what votes or what influence they had against certain things. I can name them if you wish.

Q. Now, how many times did Schneidermann talk to you about your trade union activities in these meetings?

A. It is pretty hard to separate trade union activities from the general subject under discussion.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, will you try to as best you can?

A. No, I can't.

Q. Huh?

A. I can't. I know a little about trade union activities, but if you can separate them I can't. I can't separate them from political activities of a trade union. Impossible.

Q. You mean you are unable to separate trade union activities from Communist Trade Union activities? Is that what you are saying?

A. I can do that. That is not the question.

Q. Will you do that as far as Schneidermann is con- [6085] cerned?

Mr. Gladstein: I submit that that is immaterial. I object to it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, if the witness understands. I don't understand, but if the witness does he may answer. I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What Communist activities did Schneidermann ask you to follow in your trade union activities? A. I never said that.

Q. Huh?

A. I said that the conferences and the discussions were in connection with certain matters that originated either from our side or from the Communist side, and we had a mutual reason to either support or oppose such things. Now, it didn't necessarily mean that they were my activities or trade union activities or Communist activities or any other political party's.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. In so far as you were concerned, your activities and the activities of the union, you w epresenting in these conferences, and meet ags those activities? A. That's right.

Q. And Schneidermann was representing the Communist Party?

A. That's right. I think the best thing to do would be—— [6086]

Q. (Interposing): When did you first meet Morris Rapport?

A. During the 1937 ILA convention.

Q. Where was that? A. Seattle.

Q. And who was Morris Rapport?

A. He was the head of the Communist Party in either Washington or the Northwest or in Seattle.

Q. And was he a trade union man?

A. Was he a what?

Q. Trade union man at that time?

A. I don't know. I think he was a carpenter or something, but I am not sure.

Q. Did you meet him as an official or representative of a trade union?

A. I met him as the official of the Communist Party. That's the way he was introduced to me.

Q. And who introduced you to Morris Rapport?

A. I don't recall that; either one of the delegates or somebody in the convention one day. The convention was open to the public. He was in the galleries, and I forget who done the actual introducing.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did Morris Rapport participate in the convention? A. No, merely a spectator.

Q. You have testified, I believe, that you were present [6087] at a meeting with Morris Rapport?

A. I didn't hear you.

Q. You testified on direct examination that you were in a meeting with Morris Rapport during the time of this convention?

A. I testified I went to a meeting in the Gowman Hotel where there was a discussion going on and he was there.

Q. Morris Rapport was there?

A. Oh, yes. I recall that very distinctly.

Q. Who invited Morris Rapport to this meeting at the Gowman Hotel? A. I don't know.

Q. Who invited you?

A. I don't think I was invited.

Q. Did you call the meeting?

A. No. I just heard that there was a gathering of warehousemen over there, that they were discussing the warehouse situation and the CIO situation and we barged in.

Q. Was Morris Rapport a warehouseman?

A. No. I'm sure he wasn't.

Q. Was he a CIO man?

A. No. I'm sure he wasn't. You mean affiliated or a member of?

Q. A member of or affiliated with the CIO.

A. No; I'm sure he wasn't. He was a CIO supporter may- [6088] be, but I'm sure that he was not a member, not at that time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. He was a CIO supporter? A. What?

Q. You say he was a CIO supporter?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have known Morris Rapport continuously since? A. Yes, that's true.

Q. How many times have you met with Morris Rapport since that first meeting?

A. Oh, less than half a dozen times, I think; half a dozen or less.

Q. Now, Elmer Hanoff, where did you meet Elmer Hanoff? A. I met Hanoff in '34.

Q. Before or during the 1934 strike?

A. During the strike.

Q. And who was Elmer Hanoff?

A. I don't know what his position was. I know him as an official or he was connected with the Communist Party. I don't know what his position was.

Q. Could he have been the District Organizer of the Communist Party?

A. He might have been.

Q. And who introduced you to Elmer Hanoff?

A. I think Hanoff—my recollection is that Hanoff [6089] came down to strike headquarters with Ross and Darcy.

Q. Sam Darcy?

A. Sam Darcy, on the offer of printing the free bulletin for us.

Q. Let's see. This Strike Committee also had a Publicity Committee at that time? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Who was on that Committee, the Publicity Committee?

A. I think Schmidt was one. Schmidt was one, Ralph Mallon was the Chairman. That's the only two that I recall now.

Q. And how many times did you meet with Elmer Hanoff after you met him in 1934?

Presiding Inspector: I have difficulty in hearing.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: I have difficulty in hearing.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you have difficulty in hearing?

A. I didn't hear that one.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't either.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will try to speak a little louder.

Presiding Inspector: You drop your voice.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How many times did you meet with Elmer Hanoff after the first meeting?

A. I have no recollection. [6090]

Presiding Inspector: "After the first meeting"?

Mr. Del Guercio: After the first meeting.

Presiding Inspector: Oh.

A. (Continuing): I have no recollection of meeting with Hanoff after that first meeting. If I met with him it was casual and very few in number.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Not official meetings?

A. Not that I recall at any time.

Q. Now, Walter Lambert, when did you first meet Walter Lambert?

A. I met Lambert in 1933 at the Labor Council, San Francisco.

Q. Were you a delegate to the San Francisco Labor Council at that time? A. Yes.

Q. 1933? A. Yes.

Q. Was Lambert in 1933?

A. I think he was. Let me see. No, I don't think he was a delegate. I remember the circumstances of how he was up there and how I met him.

Q. And who was Walter Lambert?

A. Who is he now?

Q. Who was he then and who is he now?

A. He was just somebody who had been beaten up in a [6091] picket line at that time to me.

Q. Who is he now?

A. Oh, he is an official of the Communist Party, so far as I know. I haven't seen him for quite a while.

Q. Didn't you testify at the last hearing that you knew that Lambert had more to do with trade union affairs from your own experience than possibly anybody else you had run into?

A. That's true.

Q. And that your contacts with Walter Lambert had been more than with anyone else?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That's true.

Q. Now, do you know Alex Noral?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first meet Alex Noral?

A. 1933.

Q. Where?

A. Oh, he was running a vacant lot up in the Skid Row.

Q. And was he a member of the Communist Party at that time? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know now?

A. I think he is.

Q. When did you first learn that he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know. I am pretty hazy on Noral. I don't [6092] know. All I have got is an impression. I don't recall specifically knowing it in any way.

Q. Well, you knew him at the time he was President of the Workers Alliance of the State of California — A. Yes, sure.

Q. When was that?

A. That was mostly through '36, '37, I think, and '38; '37 and '38.

Q. And didn't you testify at the last hearing that you had frequent dealings with Noral as a member of the National Unemployment Committee of the CIO? A. Yes, true.

Q. And didn't Noral assist you in the Matson strike that you have testified to?

A. What strike?

Q. The Matson strike?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That's when I first met Noral.

Q. You knew him well then, didn't you?

A. I did not. I met him for the first time.

Q. Now, Lawrence Ross, you know him, don't you? A. Yes.

Q. Who is he?

A. He was the Editor of the Western Worker.

Q. And a functionary of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? [6093] A. Maybe.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing that you knew him to be a member of the Communist Party?

A. Yes.

Q. You do know that he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Oh, you said a "member." I thought the question was, "Was he a functionary"?

Q. Member or functionary.

A. Well, what's a "functionary"?

Q. You tell me.

A. I don't know. You tell me.

Q. Wasn't he the leader of the Communist Party delegation that proposed to your Strike Committee acceptance of the assistance of the Western Worker?

A. He was one of them. I don't know if he was the leader. It is just a logical conclusion on my part, so long as he was the editor of the paper, that he might naturally be the leader of the delegation.

Q. Do you know of anybody connected with the

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Western Worker who was not a member of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know enough people connected with the Western Worker.

Q. Do you know Ida Rothstein?

A. Yes. [6094]

Q. Do you know her to be a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. When did you first meet Ida Rothstein?

A. I met Ida Rothstein around the same time, very early. Pretty hazy about her. I think I met Ida Rothstein around the same time in 1933 or later. She was—I met her in connection with the unemployed movement, I think.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing that Ida Rothstein was a Communist and that she was active in the unemployed councils during 1933, '34 and '35? A. I might have.

Q. Was that testimony true? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Jim Branch? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know him as a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well, I always took him for one. He used to speak—my recollection is that he used to speak on behalf of the Communist Party.

Q. Betty Gannett, G-a-n-n-e-t-t?

A. No, I don't recall meeting her very well. I think I have met her, but I can't connect it up with anything in my mind that gives me any idea of how I met her, where I met her, what she looks like or anything like that. The name seems [6095] familiar. I think I have met her.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing that you did know Betty Gannett?

A. I might have. I am sure that I couldn't have testified that I knew her very well.

Q. Was that testimony true, that you did know her?

A. Well, I am saying that I know it now.

Presiding Inspector: That does not prove that he did testify to that. He says he might have.

The Witness: I think I testified that I knew her and I testified that I didn't know her very well, and I couldn't recall where I met her.

Presiding Inspector: That is more definite.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: That is more definite.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing that you knew that she was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I am not sure. I might have.

Q. Were you asked this question:——

A. (Interposing): That's my impression now: That wherever I met her I met her as a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Were you asked this question at the last hearing:

"Do you know whether she," referring to Betty Gannett, "is a member of the Communist Party?" and did you answer "She is"? [6096]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Possibly. That's my impression.

Q. Well, I will show you the transcript of the previous testimony.

Presiding Inspector: He says that is his belief now.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: He says that is his belief now. He has admitted it.

I take it that is correct?

The Witness: That is correct, yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Following that were you asked this question: "How do you know that?" and did you reply "Well, she told me"?

A. I don't know. If I said it then, my memory is a little better than it is now. It is two years later.

Q. Did you so testify at the last hearing?

A. I possibly did. The only recollection I have got of Betty Gannett now is that I have met her seldom. I don't even recall when and under what circumstances, and my testimony was the same——

Q. (Interposing): Do you have available the transcript of your deportation proceedings in the last hearing?

Mr. Gladstein: You know that the witness doesn't have that in his pocket. There are volumes of transcript. If you [6097] are going to read something, go ahead and read it. We don't think that you are going to misread the record.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know what you are thinking.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I have here the transcript of the deportation proceedings against you in 1939 and your testimony of August 2, 1939. I am reading from page 2581:

"Q. Do you remember Betty Gannett?

"A. Betty Gannett, yes.

"Q. Do you know whether she is a member of the Communist Party? A. She is.

"Q. How do you know that?

"A. Well, she told me.

"Q. Do you remember when you first met Betty Gannett? A. Very recently.

"Q. When, for instance? About when?

"A. Well, it"—that should be "I", I suppose—"I think some time last year; some time during the election campaign; prior to the election campaign.

"Q. In November? A. Pardon me?

"Q. In November?

"A. No. I think maybe a little before that."

[6098]

Did you so testify at the last hearing?

A. I did.

Q. Was that testimony true?

A. Yes. You'll find more of it there where I was unable to remember what she looked like or the circumstances or anything else. I had met her recently, apparently, and I still had the recollection. It was so incidental that I don't remember it now.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you know Walter Stack?

A. Very well.

Q. When did you meet Walter Stack?

A. I think in 1934 for the first time. I wouldn't be too sure. It might have been earlier.

Q. And under what circumstances did you meet Walter Stack in 1934 or earlier?

A. Either as a member of the Marine Workers Industrial Union or as a member of the Marine Firemen.

Q. Do you know if Walter Stack is and was a Communist? A. Oh, yes.

Q. And was he also called "Ed" Stack?

A. I never heard him called that.

Q. I believe you testified that Walter Stack might have been connected with the Marine Workers Industrial Union at the time you met him?

A. He might have been. My impression is that he was. [6099]

Q. Was he with Harry Jackson at the time you met him?

A. I don't know. He might have been.

Q. Who introduced you to Walter Stack?

A. I can't remember that.

Q Did you meet him at a meeting?

A. Possibly did. I think he was on the Northwest Strike Committee or he was on the Seamen's Strike Committee in the Northwest.

Q. Prior to 1934?

A. No, during 1934.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was there any strike going on in 1933 in the Northwest?

A. Quite a few here and there.

Q. Was Walter Stack down here in San Francisco or in the Northwest in 1933?

A. My impression is that I met him in San Francisco.

Q. Was there a Local of the Marine Workers Industrial Union in the Northwest anywhere?

A. They had Locals in every port.

Q. And how many times did you meet with Walter Stack after you first met him?

A. How many times have I up to now?

Q. Yes.

A. That would be too numerous to mention. He's an official of the Marine Firemen. He is an official now and he [6100] has been an official and delegate—he has been an official of this, that and the other thing. He has been a delegate of this, that and the other convention or conference.

Q. Do you remember if he had ever withdrawn as a member of the Communist Party?

A. I am sure he hasn't.

Q. He still is? A. Yes.

Q. An admitted Communist? A. Yes.

Q. He is one of the so-called few labor leaders who openly admit their Communist connections?

A. He admits that he is a Communist, and apparently he makes a good labor leader because he keeps on getting elected by his membership. They don't seem to mind it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you support him?

A. Certainly I support him. He has always appeared to me to be a good trade union leader and a good union man.

Q. Has Walter Stack asked for your support?

A. It is not a question of whether he asks for it or not. He would get it anyway.

Q. Has he, that you recall?

A. Not that I recall. He knows that I would support a good unionist without being asked. [6101]

Q. Would you also support a good Communist?

A. Not if he is a bad unionist, I won't.

Q. Do you know Dave Saunders? A. Yes.

Q. Is he also a Communist?

A. I don't know. I don't think he is.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing that you knew that he was a Communist?

A. I don't know. I don't think I did. I think I said I "believed" he might me.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing regarding Saunders as follows: "I know that Saunders—Dave Saunders is a Communist. I, of course, know the recognized official Communists outside the union movement."

That is on page 2480.

"I know we have in our Local Unions, for example, a fellow by the name of Archie Brown; we have Ben Jones. We have—off-hand, I can't think of all of them, but when I see them and know them I can recall their names."

Did you so testify at the last hearing?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes.

Q. Is that testimony true? A. Yes.

Q. Now, this Sam Telford, I believe you testified that you knew him? [6102] A. Yes.

Q. As an official of the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. Right.

Q. Is that the circumstances under which you first met him?

A. Yes. I think he was the President or the Organizer or the Secretary.

Q. Would you say that you met Sam Telford at about the same time you met Harry Jackson?

A. No, much later.

Q. Much later?

A. My recollection of Telford is not meeting him before the strike.

Q. And you knew him also to be a member of the Communist Party?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times did you meet with Sam Telford? A. How many times did——

Q. (Interposing): After your first meeting how many times did you meet with Sam Telford?

A. I can't remember that, but I had contact with Telford numerous times. He was the official of the union.

Q. Is there any official or was there any official of the Communist Party on the Pacific Coast that you did not meet [6103] or that you did not know or that you did not come in contact with?

A. Is that the question?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Yes.

A. Give me a list and I'll look them over and I'll tell you.

Q. You know them all, don't you? A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. You know many more than I do.

Q. Yes, I know I do. A. That's right.

Q. Much more.

A. You give me a list and I'll look them over and tell you the ones I have met and the ones I have never met.

Q. You know Frank Spector, don't you?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You have never met Frank Spector?

A. I don't recall meeting him.

Q. Have you heard that he is a member of the Communist Party?

A. I have heard of it. I think I have read a book or something by Spector.

Q. You also read that he was made the subject of a deportation proceedings? [6104]

A. Did I know?

Q. As a member of the Communist Party?

A. No.

Q. I just happened to have handled that ten years ago, so I know. A. Pretty good!

Q. Was he an official of the ILD?

A. I don't know.

Q. Has he ever been? A. I don't know.

Q. Regarding Frank Spector did you testify as follows in the last hearing:

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"Q. (By Mr. Shoemaker) Frank Spector?

"A. Spector? I am not sure about Spector. I think he is an official of the Communist Party."

Did you so testify? A. I think so.

Q. Was that testimony true?

A. Yes. I'm still not sure.

Q. Do you know John Brohman?

A. Who?

Q. Brohman? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who is John Brohman?

A. Connected with the People's World at the present [6105] time.

Q. Is that the successor of the Western Worker? A. No, it's the People's World.

Q. Huh? A. The People's World.

Q. Did it succeed the Western Worker?

A. I don't know. Did it? I don't know.

Q. Do you know John Brohman to me a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. When did you first meet John Brohman?

A. I can't tell that. I have met him many times. My meetings with Brohman are generally in the nature of newspaper publicity.

Q. Did he ever work on the Western Worker?

A. Did he ever work on the Western Worker?

Q. Yes? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you meet him while he was employed on the Western Worker?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Not that I remember. It's possible, if he was on the Western Worker. I can't remember all the names of the reporters on the Western Worker? [6106]

Q. You have seen him in this Court room, haven't you? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Is he here now? A. I can't see him.

Q. How many persons on the editorial staff of the Western Worker do you know?

A. How many persons?

Q. Would you say that you knew them all?

A. No, I never. I said I didn't know them and I don't yet. I don't know how many persons are on the editorial staff and I don't know how many people connected with the Western Worker that I might know might be on the editorial staff. You name them and I will tell you whether I know them.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I believe that I am through with the cross examination, with the reservation, however, concerning that matter that we were speaking about in chambers.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Gladstein: Shall I go ahead with redirect?

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, in your cross examination you were asked whether you had heard that the ship Cumberland had exploded. You gave an answer to the effect that there were [6107] strike breakers on that ship. How would that relate to the possibilities of an explosion occurring on that ship?

A. It depends on what the ship was, where she was going to, what she was carrying, and at that time it was bad enough with an experienced crew on some of those ships, because I sailed on many of them. The ship— I thought he said the Schooner Cumberland. There was a fleet of ships sailing out of Australia to South Sea ports, up to ports in the Straits Settlements, up and around Burma and around there, and the cargo they used to carry was always topped off with a load of high-test gasoline on deck in cases. And those ships used to disappear one after the other simply because the gasoline used to blow up, get on fire. The working around with the cargo used to blow them up and they were pretty tough ships to sail on, and I was on quite a few where, as soon as we hit bad weather, the first thing we used to do was to throw the gasoline overboard.

Q. Now, what difference would it make——

A. (Interposing): And with a crew of inexperienced men acting as strike breakers it is very easy to understand what would happen. The strike breakers didn't know enough to throw the gasoline overboard, and up they went.

Q. You mentioned that you are opposed to legislation against criminal syndicalism. Do you know whether the labor movement of this State or of this country has ever taken any [6108] official position similar to yours or different than yours on that subject matter?

A. At every annual convention of the National A. F. of L. and the State A. F. of L. they have unanimously gone on record for the repeal of the criminal syndicalism laws.

Q. And what is the basis or reason given for that position by the A. F. of L.?

Mr. Del Guercio: We didn't object to the Alien going into this matter here, but we certainly object to going into the reasons that other organizations have given for opposition to criminal syndicalism laws.

Presiding Inspector: I think he can give his union's views, if he knows them. Is that what you asked?

Mr. Gladstein: That is what I am calling for.

Presiding Inspector: This, of course, must be based on what he knows of the members at the meetings.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. Well, the criminal syndicalism——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): They have made speeches on this subject, I suppose.

A. (Continuing): The criminal syndicalism laws are used to prevent organizing. They are applied in such a way that straight organizing, striking, picketing are termed as coming under the application of the C. S. Laws, and people have been sent to jail and are still being sent to jail for straight [6109] trade union activities, but they have been prosecuted under the C. S. Laws. The laws have been generally applied against any type of trade unionism where they have had a chance to apply them.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that, what you have testified to, the position of yourself or the trade union movement or both?

A. Myself, the trade union movement, both A. F. of L. and CIO.

Q. Now, during the 1934 strike was there any other publication besides the Western Worker which offered support or assistance to the strikers?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one or which ones, if any?

A. The Catholic Leader, Father York's own paper. There was an East Bay—there was an East Bay neighborhood paper. It seems to me there was one other, but I can't recall.

Q. How were these offers of assistance made by the Catholic Leader and the other newspaper you have mentioned?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that upon the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that remote from the issue?

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that and ask it this way.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein: [6110]

Q. Were the offers of these other newspapers, the two that you have mentioned, or publications, accepted by the Strike Committee?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see its relevancy.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think that shows the factual situation, your Honor, at the time that support was accepted.

Presiding Inspector: Then we would have to go into what kind of support.

Mr. Gladstein: I mean simply the—well, that's true. I would have to bring out that they made their columns available to the union.

You see, the point I have in mind, is this: The Government has tried, in my opinion, to create the inference that the entire union, in effect, during 1934 was taking Communist support and that, therefore, for that reason and others that are offered by the Government it was a Communist strike instead of a genuine bona fide fight for trade union conditions.

I think we are entitled to show that the situation was that the strikers had very, very few opportunities to obtain assistance and that they did take those which were offered. And I think we have the right to have the record show who offered assistance and what that assistance consisted of, and whether or not the strikers rejected it or accepted it. [6111]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

If the strikers accepted aid, no matter from what source it came, that would certainly tend to refute the inference which the Government seeks to have drawn by this line of testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I think it seeks other inferences from that evidence, but it may seek the inference that you speak of. Therefore, I will take this testimony.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, the Government did not try to leave the inference that the union was accepting Communist support. The inference—I say the "inference" is that Harry Bridges and certain of his group were members of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: I think I understand your theory, but there is a possibility of the claim being made that Mr. Gladstein suggests, and on that basis I will take this very briefly.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have the question in mind, Mr. Bridges? A. The aid was accepted.

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't hear the question.

Presiding Inspector: "The aid was accepted", he said.

What was the nature of the offer of assistance?

The Witness: The big difficulty of the strike was to get the real issues before the people and the public, and we had no methods of doing that. We had no money for radio time.

Presiding Inspector: They offered to print in their [6112] columns such material or some material that you might offer them?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: They printed articles just as they were sent up by the union and photographs. They printed, for example—the Leader printed a double page of photographs of the shooting and the tear-gassing, and it had quite an effect on—well, at least the——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, they printed it anyway?

The Witness: Yes. We accepted it. It was a weekly paper. [6113]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you were asked whether you had ever stopped at the book shop at 37 Grove Street to buy pamphlets, and when you answered that you had you were asked to look and see whether you had any of those at your home. Have you done so?

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I asked him about Communist Pamphlets. I assume counsel is going to show him Communist Pamphlets.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know—it all depends on what you think are Communist Pamphlets.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you a pamphlet——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Are they to be shown to me? I understood the witness was going to give me the pamphlets.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: I gave you some telegrams and you didn't use them.

(The pamphlets referred to were passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We have no objection to their being introduced in evidence.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't offered them yet. I intend to ask the witness about them.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6114]

Q. Mr. Bridges, here is a pamphlet put out by Bernard Shaw, rather, carrying his name. Do you recall whether you bought that at 37 Grove Street?

A. (Examining pamphlet): Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is the same book you showed me?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Put out by the Friends of the Soviet Union?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know whether it is or not. We will offer it.

Mr. Del Guercio: No objection.

Presiding Inspector: Received.

(The pamphlet referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 41.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Here is one entitled "The Strike of the Dredging Fleet 1905."

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): By whom published?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: The Workers Library Publishers. It shows on its face, I take it.

A. (Examining pamphlet): This is one of them that I purchased there; yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I will offer that.

Presiding Inspector: Received.

(The pamphlet referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 42.)

[6115]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Here is one entitled "Burlington Dynamite Plot," published by the International Labor Defense. Did you buy that there? A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it.

Presiding Inspector: Received.

(The pamphlet referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 43.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you, since 1933, ever bought pamphlets or books in any of the book shops on the waterfront or elsewhere? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that. Certainly there is no question that he bought books elsewhere.

Presiding Inspector: He says he bought a great many books and is a great reader. That is all you want to convey, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is any question about that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I don't think the record shows the date when the CIO unions were suspended by the A F of L, Mr. Bridges. Do you recall that date? [6116]

Presiding Inspector: You mean those that voted to go into the CIO?

Mr. Gladstein: No. The original ten.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I think there were ten. How many were there, do you recall? A. Ten.

Q. When were they suspended?

A. I think it was late summer of 1936. I am not sure. I can check the date.

Presiding Inspector: What was their status at that time?

The Witness: The unions?

Presiding Inspector: Had they voted to go in the CIO?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: Or applied for a charter?

The Witness: No, nothing like that.

Presiding Inspector: What had been done?

The Witness: Ten national unions, of the American Federation of Labor, formed themselves into a Committee called the Committee for Industrial Organizations, as against the craft type of organization. It grew out of a resolution being passed by the 1934 and 1935 national convention of the American Federation of Labor.

This Committee of National Unions, that called themselves [6117] the Committee for Industrial Organization—that is CIO—they pooled, or they each donated a certain amount of money that was to be put into organizing the mass industries on an industrial basis.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor ordered them to disband and cease their organizing.

The Committee refused to do that, taking a position that they were not organizing a dual organization, but were carrying out the action of the convention, which they were really doing. They were organizing workers into the American Federation of Labor, not into another organization.

When the A F of L Executive Council ordered them to disband, and they refused to disband and cease organizing, they were suspended by the Executive Council prior to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The suspension was protested under the constitution of the American Federation of Labor, because the Executive Council had no legal power to suspend unions.

By the suspension that automatically prevented the unions from appearing at the annual convention of the A F of L and defending themselves, or having a vote on their particular case.

The convention took place, the annual convention, and with the ten of the largest unions in the A F of L suspended, and therefore unable to vote, the decision for suspension of [6118] the A F of

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

L Executive Council was upheld and in that way became legal.

So it was not until after that that the CIO actually decided that they would go ahead and begin issuing charters; because, in addition to the ten original unions by that time other unions were being expelled or suspended from the American Federation of Labor for supporting the ten suspended unions. They also made that a crime and suspended you for that too, and in that way the CIO eventually reached a point where it had to form its own organization and grant charters to take care of the expelled and suspended unions.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You have mentioned in your testimony that you have members of your family, relatives, in Parliament in Australia. Would you give the names of them and their positions?

A. I have one.

Q. Which one at the present time?

A. I have an uncle in the Upper House in Australia.

Presiding Inspector: Commonwealth or Dominion?

The Witness: Federal Parliament; the Upper Chamber of the Federal Parliament.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know on what ticket he was elected?

A. Yes.

Q. What one? [6119]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I submit it is of no importance unless he was elected on the Communist Party ticket.

Mr. Gladstein: Let us have the answer.

Presiding Inspector: Let us have the answer. That will be all on this.

A. Elected on the non-Communist Labor ticket.

Mr. Del Guercio: A black sheep.

Mr. Gladstein: Does Mr. Del Guercio's remark appear on the record?

The Reporter: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you asking the Court or the reporter?

Mr. Gladstein: The reporter.

Presiding Inspector: He may answer.

The Reporter: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, in discussing the IWW you used the expression "Direct action." Will you state whether that term was used by you, or whether you know it to have been used by anyone in the IWW during the time that you were in it?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being too ambiguous.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6120]

Q. Was that expression used, "direct action," by you in such a way as to include the idea of violence or unlawful action?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being suggestive and leading.

Presiding Inspector: He may explain what he meant by the use of that term. A. No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In what sense did you use the term "direct action"?

A. Well, a preference for economic action in all cases and under all circumstances as against the use of other forms of action or bargaining.

Q. Could you give some examples that will illustrate your idea of the meaning of the term "direct action"?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. It used to be the IWW philosophy that as a rule they are opposed to signing collective bargaining agreements. They first secure an understanding, or a verbal agreement in the matter of wages, hours and working conditions. If a grievance ever develops on that job they would adjust that grievance by taking direct action or economic action. That is what the term really means. Instead of, for example, once there being trouble, the matter of a strike, an understanding was reached on [6121] wages, hours and working conditions that settled the strike; and then after the strike was over and everybody was working, and some grievance came up on the job, the IWW philosophy generally was to walk off the job until the grievance was settled. And in general the term "direct action" means that instead of, after you have collective bargaining established, say a contract was signed, contracts generally carry within them the machinery for adjusting disputes, and it was never the IWW philosophy to do that as a general rule.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you know of the term "direct action" ever being used by any IWW member to indicate to you anything other than direct economic action?

A. No. It was always used in that sense.

Mr. Gladstein: You have seen all these wires and telegrams—I have showed them to you.

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein handed Mr. Del Guercio the telegrams referred to.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, I show you a telegram under date of December 3, 1936, addressed to you, purporting to be sent from Boston, Massachusetts, by Thomas, Chairman of the Boston Strike Committee. Did you receive that telegram?

A. (Examining telegram): Yes.

Q. And where did you find it? [6122]

A. I found this in the files in my office; the old files.

Q. Does it relate in any way to your speaking in Boston in December of 1936? A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain in what way it does?

A. Well, this is just——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, the telegram speaks for itself.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. It can be introduced in evidence.

Mr. Gladstein: I will offer it in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to it on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid for it.

Presiding Inspector: I think, in view of your examination, I will take it. You have asked about the communications and so forth. He says he received this and various telegrams.

(The telegram referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 44.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you another telegram——

Presiding Inspector: You know who the sender is?

The Witness: Yes. That was Thomas—Thomas, Chairman of the Boston Strike Committee.

Presiding Inspector: I haven't seen it. [6123]

The Witness: It says, "Chairman, Boston Strike Committee."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you another telegram under date of December 5, 1936, addressed to you, also sent by J. J. E. Thomas, and ask you if you can identify that telegram as having to do with your speaking in Boston during December of 1936?

A. (Examining telegram): Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Where did you obtain this telegram?

A. Out of my files.

Q. Did you receive it? A. I did.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it. I object on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid.

Presiding Inspector: May I look at it?

(The telegram referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Del Guercio: These telegrams add nothing or detract nothing from the testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear that.

Mr. Del Guercio: And clearly not on matters brought up on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. [6124]

(The telegram referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 45.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you another telegram under date of December 5, 1936, addressed to you, purporting to come from Martin J. Flaherty, J. R. Walker and J. E. Thomas, and ask you if you can identify that? A. (Examining telegram): Yes.

Q. What is it? A. This is a telegram——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If it is going to be introduced in evidence it will speak for itself.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you receive it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I received it.

Q. From where did you obtain it?

A. From my files.

Q. Does it relate to your speaking in Boston in December 1936? A. Very definitely.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it over your objection. [6125]

(The telegram referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 46.)

Mr. Gladstein: I have in my hand a copy of a telegram dated December 10, 1936, to Joseph Curran from Mervyn Rathborne——

Presiding Inspector: You read that into the record?

Mr. Gladstein: Part of it was read.

Mr. Del Gurecio: Yes, in connection with a question that I asked.

Mr. Gladstein: The fact that it was officially sent from the ILA, and from the address of the ILA, was not read by Mr. Del Guercio, and I think, under those circumstances, that I would like to offer this in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do I understand you to say that Rathborne was connected with the ILA?

Mr. Gladstein: This was charged to the ILA.

Mr. Del Guercio: Wath Rathborne connected with the ILA?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Rathborne, as I understand from Mr. Bridges' testimony, was the Secretary of the Maritime Federation of the District of which the ILA was a member.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

(The radiogram referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 47.)

The Witness: He sent it for me, is what I said. [6126]

Presiding Inspector: Wait until the question is asked.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Referring to the July 1935 meeting at the Manhattan Opera House, Mr. Bridges, what kind of a meeting was that?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has already been gone into, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Only on cross examination and to a very limited extent.

Presiding Inspector: Pardon?

Mr. Gladstein: Only through cross examination and to a very limited extent, which did not bring out the character of the meeting, and whether it was an open meeting, a mass meeting, or a public or secret meeting.

Mr. Del Guercio: Maybe the witness didn't know.

Presiding Inspector: As it was only brought out to some extent by the Government I will take it as redirect.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you present at that meeting?

A. I spoke at it.

Q. What kind of a meeting was it?

A. It was a public mass meeting.

Q. How many people attended, do you know?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. What difference does it make? [6127]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. A large number—I wouldn't know exactly—but the place was pretty full.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were the subjects discussed, do you recall?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think you went into it. I think it is repetition.

Mr. Del Guercio: Only by whom it was called; not as to what was said there, or who said it.

Presiding Inspector: You asked what was the object of the meeting and he stated in relation to unemployment insurance, or something of that kind. I will take it in view of the fact that the door was opened.

A. The meeting was called by this committee, who was supporting and advocating the passage of legislation for unemployment insurance, and who called themselves the American Federation of Labor Committee on Unemployment Insurance.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was there a division of the American Federation of Labor at that time as to whether or not trade unions should support the idea of obtaining legislation for Unemployment Insurance?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being immaterial. [6128]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. There was.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was that division?

A. Many of the official leaders—I know the President of the American Federation of Labor at that time—and other official leaders were opposed to the idea of unemployment insurance, claiming that it would in some way injure unions; and they were opposed to legislation of this nature. Therefore, the unions and individuals, and individual members of the rank and file, formed this Committee in defiance of the leaders, such leaders as I have mentioned—they were not all that way—in defiance of the leaders to advocate and support the passage of such legislation. And this committee was under the auspices of that particular Committee.

I can distinctly recall, for example, that the Printers Council of New York—or New Jersey, I think it was—and the Chairman of that Council was present at the meeting and also spoke, a man named Brown.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that all on that subject?

Mr. Gladstein: I think so.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a recess.

(Whereupon, at 12:30 P.M. a recess was taken until 2:00 P.M. of the same date.) [6129]

After Recess
2:00 o'clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: We are all ready.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified as follows:

Redirect Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, going to the '34 Strike, will you state just when you began to advocate that workers join the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and which workers your advocacy pertained to?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is a compound question, your Honor. I think it ought to be split.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I have heard many compound questions which we didn't object to in order to save time, but I am willing to do so, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you begin for the first time to advocate that any workers join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. After the strike started in May '34.

Q. What workers did you believe should join the Marine Workers Industrial Union? [6130]

A. Seamen at that time.

Q. Did you ever, or have you ever taken the position that longshoremen should join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. At no time. They were—well, of course, there were a lot of circumstances surrounding it; but the longshoremen were already organized when the strike broke out. The——

Q. (Interposing) Did you ever——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He hasn't finished his answer.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you finished?

A. The longshoremen were already organized. The Marine workers were trying to organize longshoremen, oh, I think, beginning around 1932, but didn't get anywhere, and it was always opposed, and the longshoremen eventually organized themselves into the ILA.

Q. Did you ever advocate that longshoremen join or become affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. At no time.

Q. Now, when did you—withdraw that. You say that you advocated the seamen joining the Marine Workers Industrial Union shortly after the 1934 strike began, is that correct?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That is right. [6131]

Q. Prior to that advocacy on your part had you taken a different position?

A. Yes; at many times.

Q. What was your position with respect to the organization of seamen prior to the 1934 strike?

A. We were trying to have the International Seamen's Union organize jointly with us.

Q. When you say "we" to whom do you refer?

A. The longshoremen at that time in the ILA, going back to the latter part of '33 and early in 1934. I attended a meeting of the seamen in 1934 when Andrew Furuseth was speaking, the President of the Seamen's Union, and speaking from the floor I asked Andrew why the seamen couldn't organize together with the longshoremen so that we wouldn't make any more mistakes like such as always had been made in the maritime industry? And I can still remember his answer. This was prior to the 1934 strike, and on many occasions prior to that time, even going back to 1920 that I can recall, this had been quite a matter that I couldn't understand as to why the seamen and the longshoremen couldn't work together. We just changed that situation in 1934, but the leaders of the seamen at all times refused to allow their men to have anything to do with the longshoremen.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I move that the witness' answer be stricken. It isn't responsive to the ques- [6132] tion asked.

Presiding Inspector: It may not be strictly responsive but it is on the general subject and I think it would save time to let it stand.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, what was the position of the ISU with respect to taking the unorganized seamen into their organization as at the beginning of the 1934 strike?

A. They refused to take them in and they refused to have them recognize the strike. They urged them not only to do their own work but to perform longshore work to help break our strike.

Q. What was the opinion of yourself and other leaders of the ILA during the strike with respect to the importance of having the seamen join in the strike on the side of the longshoremen?

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor. It should be limited to his own opinion, not to the opinion of others.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will ask first for your own opinion on that, Mr. Bridges.

A. Well, my own opinion was in conformity with the decisions of the union and of the convention.

Q. And what were those decisions?

A. Our convention in February, 1934, passed a special [6133] resolution on it urging the organization of the seamen and the organization of seamen and longshoremen together in a federation and joint and mutual support on questions such as strikes and so forth, and, therefore, when the strike broke out and the seamen were refused entrance into the Seamen's union, I'm not quite sure about the other locals in the other ports in all cases, but I know in the Port of San Francisco our official position, not only mine, but the official position of the union, was to urge them to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union to get them into an organization.

Q. And how would getting the seamen into an organization increase or decrease, or in any way affect the chances of the longshoremen to win that strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. We are going pretty broadly into this man's views. I will take it.

A. Well, I think the only way you could judge that is that I don't think there has been a strike won in the Marine industry without the longshoremen or seamen working together. Every other one has been lost. I know of none, and I am pretty well acquainted with the marine labor history.

Q. Now, during the 1934 strike was there a time when the seamen later found it possible to become members of the ISU? [6134]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please; immaterial and irrelevant.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the question and put it this way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After the time when you urged seamen to go into the Marine Workers Industrial Union did the position change?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes, there was reasons.

Q. Well, how did it change?

A. Both the MWIU and the Seamen's Union were recognized by the President's Board. Both were given audience before the President's Board and both put forward demands before the President's Board, and then the issue come up as to which union truly represented the seamen. And it was decided that an election would be held, and the election was eventually held. However, prior to that time many of the seamen deserted the MWIU and joined the ISU, who by that time had agreed to take them in, and they were taken in as probationary pledge-card members. They were not admitted to full membership. They were given pledge-cards for the purposes of voting as to which union would represent them.

Presiding Inspector: When was that?

The Witness: That was in the hearings right here in this court room, before the President's Arbitration Board, July 9, 1934. [6135]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did your position as to whether seamen should go into or remain members of the Marine Workers Industrial Union change as of that date?

A. Providing the Seamen's Union would accept them without any discrimination, and when the Seamen's Union finally agreed to do that we urged the seamen to join the ISU of A.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. When you say "we" to whom do you refer?

A. I mean myself and other members and officials of the Union.

Q. Which union? A. Longshoremen.

You have got to understand that for many, many months after the strike——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Is this in answer to a question——

The Witness: (Interposing) Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: The same question?

The Witness: He asked me what I meant by "we".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. If you want to finish your answer you may do so.

A. The seamen never had an organization until some eight or ten months after the strike ended. They went into the strike with no organization. The main thing they got [6136] out of the strike was organization. That organization wasn't a stable one until around February or March, 1935.

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, what actually caused, if you know, the general strike of 1934 to take place?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. It has already been gone into a dozen times at least.

Presiding Inspector: May I hear the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I may say, in explanation of that, your Honor, that on cross examination Mr. Del Guercio, by his questions, indicated a line of examination intended to show that the general strike was an idea of Mr. Roy Hudson, or the Communist Party, or both, and we intend to show what the true cause was.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges:)

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that going to lead us into the justification for the strike?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think so. I am not going into the merits of the strike from the employers' point of view or from the workers' point of view, but simply what Mr. Bridges, who was involved in the strike, says was the actual cause of it.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Well, there were many things that might have caused it. I think the main thing that caused the strike was the [6137] results of the attacks on the waterfront pickets on July 5, 1934, when the men was shot and gassed, resulting in two men being killed. It was a terroristic attack.

At that time an organization known as the Industrial Association had taken over the strike for the employers and their leaders, that is, the leaders of the Association, were making various statements, saying that "for once, or this time, labor has got to be taught a real lesson and this is the time to do it," and so forth.

On July 5th there was an all-day battle on the waterfront, some 400 men being injured, shot, clubbed, gassed, and so forth, two being killed and——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) We are going into again the reason for it, and I thought that was to be excluded.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I am afraid you are going to have this whole fight brought out.

Mr. Gladstein: Just the cause of the general strike is all I am interested in.

Presiding Inspector: He said that there was injury to certain of their pickets——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) And the death of certain of the men.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about the merits, what they were, for the purpose of this hearing.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6138]

Q. Were the men killed members of organized labor?

A. Yes; one of them was a longshoreman. The other one was a member of the Cooks and Stewards.

Q. Do you know what the reaction among organized labor was to the events of July 5 that you have just mentioned?

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. The strike was a protest against the attack on the waterfront, and at that time many of the leaders of the labor movement, who had formerly refused to support the strike, woke up to the fact that the attack was also directed against them and held dangers, and therefore, the general strike took hold as a protest against, not only the attack on the waterfront on July 5, but the placing of troops on the waterfront on the evening of July 5.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, when did the general strike actually begin? A. July 16.

Q. Between July 5 and July 16, Mr. Bridges, do you know whether San Francisco labor leaders, regarded as conservatives in the labor movement, changed their position as coming out in favor of a general strike? A. Some of them did.

Q. Now, are you able now to name any of the leaders of the 1934 waterfront strike? [6139]

Mr. Del Guercio: The what?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't we had that?

Mr. Gladstein: No. There was reference made along this line: That Mr. Del Guercio, in his questioning, asked Mr. Bridges if he wasn't the leader. He said, "No," that there were others; and he was asked, "Was Jackson a leader?" and Mr. Bridges said "No." He asked, "Was the Communist Party the leader of the strike?" and Mr. Bridges said "No, but I can tell you the names of the leaders." But Mr. Del Guercio didn't seek those names, and I think, for the record, we should have those.

Presiding Inspector: It won't mean anything.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor feels that way I won't go into it. It was simply to fill the record on that one point where Mr. Bridges had offered to supply this information for the record and it had not been taken; but if you regard it as unimportant——

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it amounts to anything but if you think the record ought to be filled, I will allow him to give the names.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you do that? [6140]

A. You say the waterfront strike—you mean the waterfront striking unions?

Presiding Inspector: 1934.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. (Continuing) Of course, there was, first of all, the longshoremen——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He asked for the leaders only.

Presiding Inspector: But he is going to put these in classes.

A. (Continuing) That is right. There were the longshoremen, and the longshore strike committee, of which I was Chairman, and various other sub-Chairmen, members of the Strike Committee. There were 75 of them, and many of their names have been mentioned.

There was the seamen, broken down into three parts.

For the AF of L——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Jackson, Telford, the two that I most remember, they were for the MWIU.

For the AF of L seamen, the Sailors Union, Bill Caves was Chairman of the Strike Committee; George Larson, and a man named Silver, were two of the local officials of the Sailors Union at that time. Herbert Mills was a member of the Strike Committee, and a man named O'Brien was on their committee. There were others I can't recall right now. [6141]

For the Firemen there was John McGovern, and he was the Secretary or the ranking official of the union. I can't think of any others at this time, who was on that committee.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean the Committee for the Firemen?

A. I am talking now of the San Francisco Committee for Firemen.

For the Marine Cooks there was Eugene Burke, present Secretary of the Union, and a man named Carl Frietche—F-r-i-e-t-c-h-e—and he was a member of their Strike Committee and very active.

I can't remember the rest of their committee.

[6142]

Q. Were there any draft organizations represented by leaders in the strike?

A. Yes. I am giving you now the waterfront unions.

Q. Yes. Well, I am referring to unions that had any connection with the waterfront or were part of the general or Joint Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Sure. There was dozens of them.

Q. You remember any of the other leaders?

A. Well outside of the waterfront you should have the Machinists and the Boilermakers, the Ship Fitters, the Patternmakers. They were all concerned——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) We have been all over this.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, the only question is about names.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you recall the names of any of the leaders of those unions?

A. Yes. Two of the leaders are pretty active now; Harry Hook and Dillon. They were leaders then. They had their International Representative, a man named Grow—"Curley" Grow they used to call him. For the Boilermakers I think there was a man named Gabbett. I don't recall the other officers. And then I think you get away from them and [6143] you get off the waterfront. The next group would be the Teamsters.

Mr. Del Guercio: He has only asked for the waterfront, as I understand it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did the Teamsters have any direct connection with the strike on the waterfront or maritime unions?

A. They struck the waterfront. They refused to haul any goods to and from the waterfront.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Under whose leadership were they?

A. Michael Casey and John P. McLaughlin.

Q. Did the Teamsters support the longshoremen during that strike?

A. Through the entire strike. They played a very important part. Without the Teamsters the strike would have been lost.

Q. Was any of that support from Mr. Casey in the nature of personal support to you, Mr. Bridges?

A. No, I don't think so. He was very much opposed to me at that time.

Q. Did he later change his opinion and support you in any way?

A. Oh, yes. He later changed his opinion completely.

Mr. Myron: I don't know how this is material, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how this is material. [6144] Leave that out.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you testified yesterday that you have in the past advocated that workers read the Western Worker or the Daily Worker. Did you have reasons for that position?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, the reasons aren't important. The fact that he has advocated it is sufficient.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think that you have——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) It would be self-serving at the best.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I know, but that wouldn't be a reason for not receiving it. I think I will take it.

A. Yes, I have.

Presiding Inspector: You have gone into his general attitude toward all these matters. In fact, you seek to draw an inference from the very fact that he advised this.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, supposing that this Alien was charged with distributing literature advocating the overthrow of the Government by force and violence, and supposing that he admitted that he did distribute such literature? Now, would the reason why he did it be important or material or relevant?

Presiding Inspector: According to the claim of the Alien it would be. [6145]

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to add something to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It is their argument and I am not passing on the validity of that argument at present. Therefore, I think we had better have the proof as a background.

Mr. Gladstein: As a matter of fact, our theory is a good deal different from that and our theory is much more in line with the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Dijon case in which the Court stated, for example, in that case that a peaceful assembly for the purpose of lawful discussion could not be made criminal even though it developed in the case that one or two of the people who were present at that meeting were members of the Communist Party.

Now, our position simply on the question of the Western Worker and the Daily Worker is to find out what reason there was Mr. Bridges had in suggesting to anybody that that person read it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Was the Dijon case a deportation case?

Mr. Gladstein: No, it wasn't. But I don't think that makes a great deal of difference.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think the precedent is very close, but I will take the proof.

A. (Continuing) The answer is, Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were those reasons? [6146]

A. Well, it has always been our experience, still is——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Now, this is his own reason, I believe, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Give your own reasons.

A. (Continuing): It has always been my experience and still is that you can't, or one can't, especially the working or labor people, can't expect any fair treatment from the daily newspapers. I think we see enough evidence every day of that.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness should be confined to his own experiences.

Presiding Inspector: He is giving his own experiences. I take this as his own. He may use different pronouns, but he means his own.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

That is right, isnt' it?

The Witness: Yes. I am not in the habit of saying "I", maybe.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. Don't be afraid to say "I". Go ahead.

A. (Continuing): I think that in dealing with the problems of labor and trying to get their story before the broad mass of the people that we have a very difficult time with the ordinary, average daily newspaper, and separate and apart from the policy or certain other things advocated by such an organization as the Daily Worker or Western Worker [6147] it certainly has been my experience that they run the story of labor pretty straight as a rule. It is certain that they make mistakes and make errors at times in printing the whole story, but compared to the other newspapers, who either refuse to print any press release that a union gives them—if they print it they add an editorial completely distorting it, they twist it around and, as a matter of fact, they lie. Compared with those types of papers and a paper like the Western Worker or the Daily Worker, they would print the true facts of a labor case. And in so far as those articles are concerned, the average person can get a better idea of what a labor union is doing and what their true story is than they can by reading any of the other newspapers. And, therefore, in urging any workers to read a paper like the Western Worker or the Daily

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Worker you are not necessarily urging them to read them because of the policies or the principles set forward in the editorial policy, but merely for the news and the stories contained in the paper in regard to union activities or trade union activities or this, that or the other issue that at that time is current.

That was the only reason that I ever had in urging that workers read those papers, and my ideas haven't changed on it even yet.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I move that the entire answer be stricken as it appears to me that it is not [6148] testimony but merely a present solicitation for the subscription to the Daily Worker and the Western Worker. I suppose a motion would be improper, as it might be said to be improper, as it would tend to establish that even now the Alien here——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You are giving that——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——is soliciting subscriptions to Communist papers.

Presiding Inspector: I think he was giving that latter statement now to show the firmness of his belief in the correctness of the original view as stated, and I will let it stand. I don't think it will be very successful as a bid for subscriptions for the particular journals.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, you were asked whether Elaine

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Black spoke at the ILA convention in February of 1934, and you stated that you would check the records and see whether she actually spoke or not. Did you make a check of those records? A. I did.

Q. Did you find whether or not Elaine Black was a speaker? A. She didn't speak.

Mr. Myron: I assume he means by that, whatever records he checked didn't show that she spoke.

Mr. Gladstein: I suppose so. I don't suppose he could say that she didn't speak from any records he didn't check. [6149]

Mr. Del Guercio: The question was whether Elaine Black was scheduled to appear to speak.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want to continue with your cross examination?

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you speaking to me or to the Court?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, now, let us not get into a controversy on the matter.

Mr. Del Guercio: He should address the Court.

Presiding Inspector: Even though it varies from your question I will allow it. He hasn't been able to find any records.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What records did you check?

A. Official minutes of the convention. They are verbatim.

Q. Did you find whether or not she was invited to speak or whether she asked permission to speak?

A. She was invited to speak.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And by whom was she invited, according to the records? Of course, I suppose the records are the best evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think the records should be produced.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't suppose they are material exactly and I will withdraw the question. [6150]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it without the introduction of the documents. It is entirely collateral. I will allow it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know by whom she was invited to speak?

A. The minutes show that the Chairman announced that there had been a request in the form of a communication by Elaine Black herself, I think, or someone else, and that's all that deals with the invitation.

Q. What was the disposition of it?

A. I think a vote was taken and the answer was, No.

Presiding Inspector: You didn't want to hear her?

The Witness: There is no reason given in the minutes as to why they didn't want to hear her, but they didn't want to hear her. That is correct. No reasons given. It might have been because of the press of work before the convention, one thing or another.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I ask that an answer be read a little way back? Maybe I was mistaken. I thought I heard the witness testify that they were verbatim minutes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: He did say, I think, that the minutes were verbatim.

You did, didn't you?

The Witness: That's right. The minutes show "All [6151] those in favor of hearing her speak say 'Yes' ", and there was some "Yesses". "All those say 'No' ", and there were too many "Noes" and that was that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, did the question of the Waterfront Worker ever come up before the union itself, the ILA? A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. I don't remember the exact time. 1935 or early in '36.

Q. In what way did the question come up before the union?

A. Somebody got up and made a motion to donate a couple of hundred dollars to the Waterfront Worker.

Q. Did the union take any position on that motion? Or any motion to support the Waterfront Worker?

A. Once the motion was made they would have to take a position. My recollection is that—I am not sure the donation was approved or voted. I do remember that a vote of confidence was given the paper.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. That is the ILA union voted a vote of confidence to the Waterfront Workers? A. Yes.

Q. You were asked about the constitution of the ILA in 1935 and you stated that you would make a search for that [6152] and attempt to produce it here. Did you make such a search?

A. Yes, and couldn't find one.

Q. Do you recall from memory what the situation was in 1934 with respect to whether the ILA had a constitution?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, that has been gone into.

Presiding Inspector: I think so.

Mr. Gladstein: It hasn't.

Presiding Inspector: I think that he said it had, but not a very full one.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, assuming then that that is the state of the record—

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I may be wrong, but that was my general recollection.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Assuming that that it the state of the record I will ask you, Mr. Bridges, in what state the constitution was,—that is, in what condition it was—in 1934 with respect to whether there were copies available, printed copies or whether it was in the process of being adopted?

A. I don't think there was any printed copies of the constitution available until after 1934. Pretty loose. The constitution was adopted in 1933 and there were a few mimeographed copies distributed

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

then and really no—as far as I recall, there was really no printed copies of the constitution available in final form until after 1934. [6153]

Presiding Inspector: I think that is substantially what he testified to before.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is there any office of the ILWU, either in San Francisco or elsewhere on the Pacific Coast or anywhere——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): May I get that question?

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't finished it yet.

Mr. Del Guercio: We can't hear you. You have got your hand up to your face.

Mr. Gladstein: I am falling into your habits, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't have to cover mine.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear the question again. Do you wish the reporter to read it?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is there any place where there could be available to you a copy of the ILA constitution in 1934?

A. I don't know. Maybe in the International Offices of the ILA or in the ILA District Offices on the Pacific Coast. The reason is that most of our ILA records were given over to the ILA after we went CIO. They sued for them and they were turned over to them. So any spare copies of constitutions and things like that that were on file in what you might call my office or the office of the Secretary were turned over [6154] as a rule.

Q. Now, you were asked concerning a meeting on June 19, 1934 at which Harry Jackson was present. Do you recall that meeting?

A. Well, I was asked about a lot. I don't know exactly what meeting you refer to now. June 19, 1934? Off-hand I don't know what meeting you refer to.

Q. A public meeting, as I understand it.

A. I recall such a meeting around that time, yes.

Q. Where was it held, do you remember?

A. Civic Auditorium, San Francisco.

Q. Under whose auspices?

A. Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. What was the purpose of the meeting?

A. A public mass meeting to acquaint the people of San Francisco with the reasons that a contract—a so-called contract that had been signed by President Ryan had been repudiated by the longshoremen.

Q. Now, you stated that you recall Jackson being there.

A. I don't know at this meeting. I think that the only meeting I recall Jackson speaking at was a meeting after—the only meeting that I recall Jackson speaking at was a public meeting in the Civic Auditorium—and I don't recall any other—was a meeting after July 5, 1934.

Q. You testified that you recalled a public meeting at which Jackson spoke because of a remark that he made. Do you [6155] recall that remark?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the remark that he made?

A. If it is the meeting I mean, and this was the meeting where—I think that was in regard to the general strike being advocated—I recall one meeting and I recall one remark that he did make, yes.

Q. What was the remark?

A. Well, I just happened to remember it. His remark was, I think, that "They might call us 'Red', but they can't call us 'Yellow' ". I happen to remember that one, and later on in the Labor Council there was quite a to-do over the fact that he spoke at this meeting with the rest of us.

Q. Now, you mentioned the Agreement of June 16, 1934 that was signed by Mr. Ryan. I think you have already testified that the rank and file or the Local Unions up and down the Pacific Coast refused to accept that Agreement, is that correct?

A. That's right. It was an agreement they called the "June 16 Agreement".

Q. What was your relationship with Mr. Ryan at that time?

A. That was the first time I ever seen him.

[6156]

Q. Well, what did your relationship become as a result of your experinece with him at that time?

A. Pretty strained, I would say. Ryan came to the West Coast here, and with a lot of publicity.

Presiding Inspector: What was your relationship with Mr. Ryan? I think you can answer that directly as being close, or friendly, casual, or any of those words.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Myron: He already answered. He said it was strained.

Presiding Inspector: Strained?

Mr. Myron: Strained.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Has your relationship to Mr. Ryan been different than that?

A. We got kind of friendly later on; I mean it changed a little.

Q. At what period did that occur?

A. For about three months in 1936.

Q. Can you date that period with respect to the time when, as you have testified, the International agreed to support the Pacific Coast District in the 1936 strike?

A. Yes. That would extend from about August to November or December, 1936—or September to about December, 1936.

Q. Now, when——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Are we going into all this on redirect examination? [6157]

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. New matters brought out on cross, as to those subjects there may be redirect examination.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is on a subject that has no remote connection here.

Presiding Inspector: Let's hear the next question.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did the relationship between you and Ryan become strained again?

A. When I went back east in 1936, or just prior to that; around the beginning of December, 1936, or a little earlier.

Q. While you were back east was it possible for you to appear at any ILA union meetings?

Presiding Inspector: You asked about that?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know as I have.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know as you have. He explained that pretty fully. I didn't suppose you cared to touch it, but you are entitled to if you want it.

Mr. Gladstein: Some things that were not brought out on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

A. No; no, only in certain cases.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you explain that, please?

Mr. Del Guercio: Are we going into—— [6158]

Presiding Inspector: You went over it, and I don't suppose they would care to touch it, but they have a right to ask him again about it.

A. Well, in most of the ports of the east coast the men in the union, they don't just have any union meetings. There are some exceptions. The places that I went to at that time were the exceptions, where the local union leaders were not a part of the Ryan machine, and they held local union meetings

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

—the three places being Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Practically all through the entire port of New York, for example, union meetings of the longshoremen are unheard of. The unions are gangster controlled. Something has recently been done about that particular phase of the situation there.

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you talking about Joe Curran's union?

The Witness: Oh, no. Joe Curran was one of the fellows that put a stop to that kind of thing.

Mr. Del Guercio: I must have misunderstood you.

The Witness: I am sorry. I thought you wanted the information.

I am talking about Joe Ryan, and the ILA in the Port of New York, where the District Attorney for Brooklyn recently ordered him to hold union meetings, and forced him to disband [6159] three local unions there under the domination of gangsters.

So it wasn't easy to hold union meetings of longshoremen in New York, and it is not easy now. It is more than your life is worth in some cases.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, in that 1936 strike in the east was there any close connection between the longshoremen and the seamen who were on strike?

A. There is always a close connection between longshoremen and seamen, and especially in strike periods, and there was at that time very definitely a close connection.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What was the nature of that connection?

A. Well, the support of the longshoremen would determine the success of the seamen's strike. They didn't get the support and, therefore, their strike was not a success.

Q. Would that in any account for the fact that some of the requests that you received from the east to speak in the East came from representatives of both the seamen's group and the longshore group?

Mr. Myron: I object to that as a hypothetical question.

Mr. Del Guercio: And as calling for a conclusion.

Presiding Inspector: There are objections to that question.

Mr. Gladstein: It does call for a conclusion, but I can ask him to explain the relationship. [6160]

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps that would be the best way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you explain the relationship between what you have just expressed, what you have just explained, and the telegrams in evidence, which came to you during 1936 from representatives of both the seamen's and the longshore groups, jointly signed?

Mr. Myron: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. The only requests that I received from any eastern port, or the Gulf, were from those ports where the seamen and the longshoremen were working together, where the longshoremen were supporting the seamen; and where there was some measure of tried union democracy, where they were able to send such a request. And in those particular ports there was close cooperation between the seamen and the longshoremen, and we were trying to spread that cooperation—therefore, the requests.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, you were asked about a meeting in San Francisco on July 5, 1935, a public meeting. What kind of a meeting was that?

A. I am not sure if it was a public meeting. I think it was a meeting in commemoration of July 5, 1934. It has been one of our policies to set aside July 5 in memory of the [6161] men that were killed and shot up and down the Pacific Coast in the '34 strike. Eight men were killed all told. We have generally recognized, and have held certain types of services, on July 5th.

July 5, 1935, I recall that we had all the unions participate in a demonstration, in a mass parade, winding up in the evening, or in the late afternoon, I think it was, in a meeting of the Waterfront Maritime Workers in Dreamland Auditorium. I was one of the speakers.

Q. Now, was that anything except a union meeting?

A. It was mainly a union meeting. It is possible that members of the public were there, but it would mostly be members of the maritime unions.

Q. You mentioned that Mr. Lundeberg spoke at that meeting. Do you recall that? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And that you introduced him?

A. I introduced him as the President of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, the newly elected President.

Q. And as of that date, July 5, 1935, what did you in public say with respect to Lundeberg as to your position toward him?

A. I said we were lucky to be able to elect him President of the Maritime Federation, and believed that he would make a very good President. [6162]

We all make mistakes.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you have supported a man named Walter Stack, whom you know to be a Communist. Will you explain in what ways you have supported him and your reasons for it?

A. Oh, I supported him as long as he had a good trade union policy; and always opposed him when he had a bad one.

Q. In what ways would the question of your support for Walter Stack come up?

Mr. Myron (Interposing): "Would" come up, or "did" come up?

Mr. Gladstein: "Did".

A. It might be any matter, it might be any policy, or activity he was advocating as the best thing to do at a particular time for the——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): I object—the question was reframed to "What did occur".

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: Something specific?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: As to what did occur in that respect.

A. (Continuing): Let me see—you want a specific example?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

A. (Continuing): I very recently had—although Stack [6163] has more or less come to see it the same way—very recently had a pretty wide difference of opinion with him. On the question of affiliating, for example, the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast, Stack was opposed to it. I thought he was all wet. He might have changed his mind a little, but not completely. I think that is a good example and one of the most recent.

There have been many similar.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you and he in open opposition on that matter in trade union meetings?

A. Yes; very definitely.

Q. What has been your position, Mr. Bridges with respect to whether or not you will support a trade unionist if he is a Communist or—if he is a Communist?

Mr. Del Guercio: "If he is a Communist or if he is a Communist?"

Mr. Gladstein: No. I finished the question. I said "if he is a Communist."

A. The question of support only goes to whether he is a unionist or not. If he is a bad unionist, we don't care what he is, we are against him; if he is a good one, we don't care what he is, we are for him. His first allegiance must be for the union.

Mr. Myron: I suppose when he says "we" he means "I"? [6164]

The Witness: I.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How do you determine, how have you determined in the past, Mr. Bridges, whether a man is a good trade unionist?

A. How do you determine it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, generally by the net results of the policies or the activities he advocates and follows. For example, if you see a person advocating a strike at the wrong time, and the strike takes place and you see the union smashed, well, I would say as a trade unionist, regardless of his political affiliation, he is lousy. We have had enough examples of that.

At the same time, take the reverse situation—if a strike is necessary, and you see a person fighting against a strike, and as a result the union is weakened or destroyed, or becomes impotent, again he is no good as a trade unionist.

It doesn't make much difference whether he is possibly sincere in his beliefs or not, it is results you must go by. The workers don't excuse you, and there is no good arguing with them that you made a mistake and didn't mean it. They want results and that is all they go by. If you don't produce them it is too bad. Therefore, when you start trying to judge people on their political philosophy, if he is a trade unionist, the first thing that counts is what are you going [6165] to do for the union as a whole and what will the union get out of it. As long as a person, as far as I am concerned, as far as our entire union is concerned—and when I say "our entire union" this question comes up occasionally:——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing): Has your union ever passed on this question?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, we are not interested in his union, but in his own particular beliefs.

Presiding Inspector: We have had those.

The Witness: In all matters I am bound by my union. I can't operate as a single individual. Everything I say or do——

Mr. Del Guercio: Wait until a question is asked.

The Witness: I think it is entitled to come out as to what the true facts are.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps you had better let the Presiding Inspector rule on this.

I will take the answer.

A. (Continuing): I was just saying, it is impossible for me to do anything any more as an individual. Everything I say I have got to watch, everything I do I have got to watch. I can't do anything as an individual. It is always taken as an official position of my union, or of the CIO, or something; so that to talk in terms of personal or individual opinions is somewhat foolish in these cases. Generally, when [6166] I express an opinion, for my own protection, if nothing else, I express an opinion that I well know I will be supported in by the majority in my union, or the majority of all unions that I have to represent; otherwise I would be foolish. And when I point out that there is no discrimination in our union because of political beliefs, I mean that. We have gone on record for it time and time again. And while this hearing was adjourned the matter came up in our convention and the decision in favor of no discrimination because of political beliefs was unanimous.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Has that position been previously taken in local unions, or in district conventions of the longshoremen?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor pleases, in the interests of expedition alone I think that the witness should be stopped.

Presiding Inspector: We have heard a lot about good trade unionists, and bad trade unionists, and about good Communists and bad Communists. I think we will take this, and let it stand.

The Witness: It has been settled, as I explained it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, referring to the occasions when Mr. Schneidermann, or Mr. Lambert, have come to your office and had conversations with you, what have been, to your recollection, any of [6167] the issues or matters discussed?

A. You mean specific examples?

Q. If you can think of any.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I can think of some. Separate and apart, practically any discussion like that would be——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): He has been asked what were the discussions and he is saying what would have been.

Presiding Inspector: He is saying how difficult it is for him to remember. This is a mere explanation.

Go ahead.

A. (Continuing): The only ones that I can think of were generally political matters, matters of——

Presiding Inspector: What do you mean by "political," supporting some candidate or policy?

The Witness: And other things.

First of all, at no time do I recall were trade union policies as such discussed in such conferences.

Presiding Inspector: Were political philosophies discussed,

The Witness: Political theories, yes. I have discussed that with those people, and in many cases disagreed.

For example, there would be matters discussed such as the freedom, or support in the fight for freedom of certain prisoners—Mooney and Billings, McNamara, the Scottsboro case, King-Ramsay-Connor, and the Modesto case, and many things like that; and there would be requests for support [6168] against discrimination, such as refusing halls to Communists, or Communist speakers, or Communist political candidates; the refusal of the radio; requests for them to appear before our union meetings on behalf of this, that or the other issue; requests for support of legislative matters that might hurt, hit or hurt trade unions, and discussions along that line. In addition to supporting certain political candidates or matters.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

For example—I can give examples if necessary.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you give any that you think of, other than what you have mentioned?

A. Well, I think the Communist Party didn't exactly like my attitude in the last election where, somewhat in the support of John L. Lewis——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): This relates to a discussion, meetings and discussions with Schneidermann long prior to this last election.

A. (Continuing): Well, I can go back even further: I can definitely remember a discussion—I am trying to place one with Schneidermann. I can remember a discussion with Schneidermann on the "Ham and Eggs" issue. We supported it. The Communist Party was against it.

I can remember many discussions, for example, on matters such as I have said, support or joint cooperation in the [6169] matter of the fight to release Mooney and Billings, McNamara, Scottsboro case, and such things as that.

Presiding Inspector: You were in general accord on those subjects?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: Oh, yes. I can remember, definitely remember requests asking us to protest to maybe the City authorities, maybe private authorities, for the refusal of city and private authorities to rent them halls and things like that. In many cases we protested.

I can recall discussions in the C.S. cases, where they had several of their people in jail on the C.S. laws, and asking us to help them in the fight against the C.S. laws, and we were in agreement on those things.

I can recall them requesting to have speakers at certain meetings we held to speak in favor of either the Communist Party, or something connected with it.

And, as I say, I can recall various discussions requesting our cooperation, or them offering their cooperation, on certain matters, such as the support of political candidates, matters of strikes, and things like that.

Mr. Gladstein: Could I have time for a conference for a few moments? Could we take our recess?

Presiding Inspector: You want a short recess?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[6170]

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, at this time we would like to ask leave to have Mr. Bridges withdrawn from the stand so that we can put on our next witness. We have finished our redirect examination. The reason for this request is that our next witness is an important official of the State of California whose time is rather important. Because of the uncertaintly as to when this case would end he is now available, and we would appreciate it very much if we could, in order to save his time, put him on at this time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: How much further do you have?

Mr. Grossman: We have finished our redirect.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, you have?

Mr. Grossman: We have finished our redirect, yes.

Presiding Inspector: Then, if you will step aside,——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I have, of course, a few questions.

Presiding Inspector: You have a right to ask them. You don't object to this?

Mr. Del Guercio: No. I don't object. I do object—I think we are all important. All our time is important and our time is to be considered, too.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is true, too.

(Witness temporarily excused.) [6171]

BENJAMIN E. MALLARY

called as a witness for and on behalf of the Alien, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is your name, please?

A. My name is Benjamin E. Mallary; M-a-l-l-a-r-y. I live at 33 Overhill Road, Orinda, California.

Q. What position or positions do you hold at the present time, Mr. Mallary?

A. I am a Consultant in Personnel Training, and among my positions are at the University of California as a lecturer and member of the State Personnel Board, and I advise with several Government departments regarding personnel training.

Q. What generally—very generally and simply—are your functions in connection with the State Personnel Board?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to going into the functions if your Honor please. He has stated what his occupation is. I think that is sufficient.

Presiding Inspector: Unless his functions have brought him in contact with Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: Unless his functions have brought [6172] him in contact with Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Grossman: I will abandon that, then, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. For how long have you been connected with the State Personnel Board?

A. Two years about.

Q. And how was that connection established? By election, appointment or what?

A. By appointment of the Governor.

Q. Have you ever held any other state positions?

A. I was with the State Department of Education for about ten years.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Supervisor for the training of vocational teachers located at the University of California.

Q. Have you held any Federal positions?

A. From April, 1935 until September, '36 I was employed by the Department of Agriculture, part of that time as Assistant Director in the Resettlement Project, Region No. 12 at Amarillo, Texas.

Q. Have you held any advisory positions in connection with any governmental departments or agencies, any federal departments or agencies?

[6173]

A. Oh, several.

Q. Which federal departments or agencies?

A. Oh, the Forest Service. I mean, these were consulting capacities, usually unpaid. CCC, NYA, WPA. Those are some of the agencies.

Q. For how many years have you been working in the field of personnel work or personnel administration? A. Since 1918.

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

Q. For how many years have you been connected with the University of California?

A. Indirectly about 13 years and directly about 5.

Q. Could you define for us very generally what personnel work consists of?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I think this is a sufficient building up.

Mr. Grosman: I am asking this question because I am getting close now to the basis of his knowledge, and I think if we define "personnel workers" its importance will be indicated.

Presiding Inspector: With that understanding I will take it. I think you have established the position of the witness.

Mr. Grossman: I want to know, though, what "personnel work" generally consists of because of the basis of his knowledge. [6174]

Presiding Inspector: If that has brought him into contact with the Alien I will allow that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state generally what personnel work consists of?

A. Primarily it consists in attempting to surround workers, whether they are in private industry or public employment, with the kind of conditions that will be conducive to them doing their work well and selecting the right man for the right job and be concerned that the right men are promoted; the whole problem of the worker and his work.

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

Q. Do you belong to any California organization of personnel specialists?

A. California Personnel Management Association.

Q. And, generally speaking, can you describe what is the function of personnel managers?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to going any further.

Mr. Grossman: This is going along the same line as coming closely to the basis of his knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: You had better get quickly to it. I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: The next question, your Honor.

A. The members of that Association are representatives of Government agencies and private employers and they are in- [6175] terested in working conditions.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What did you say was the name of this California Organization?

A. California Personnel Management Association.

Q. Did you ever have occasion in connection with the meetings or conferences of this Association to obtain any information on the reputation of Harry Bridges for truth and veracity?

A. I have.

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor.

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you state what was the occasion for your receiving such informotion on the reputation of Harry Bridges for truth and verocity?

Mr. Myron: I object to this, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take this. It is a qualifying comment. He has not yet reached what his reputation is, but what opportunities the witness has had to know of his reputation among the people.

Mr. Grossman: That is right.

A. During the years 1937 and '38 and part of '39 I was a regular attendant at every one of their meetings, and at [6176] those meetings the men and women are seated around small tables, and during those table conversations that took place before the speakers we would discuss employment conditions, and at that time I received my information.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were there present there personnel managers for various industrial establishments?

A. There were.

Q. Were there present there personnel managers for various shipping companies?

A. I believe there were.

Q. Were there present there personnel managers for various companies which have their seat of operation on the waterfront?

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

Mr. Myron: He might ask him who was there?

Presiding Inspector: I suppose he is going to do that. I will allow this question.

A. There were.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were there present personnel managers or men doing personnel work in State and County governments? A. There were.

Q. Could you state about how many persons there were at these various meetings you spoke about? A. From 75 to 175 persons.

Q. Would it be possible for you to list the names [6177] of these persons?

A. I couldn't recall specific names.

Q. Upon the basis of what discussions were had in the meetings of this organization can you state what is the reputation of Harry Bridges for truth and veracity where he lives and works?

Mr. Myron: I will object to that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, on a number of grounds: Bringing in the question, the issue of the Alien's reputation for truth and veracity, which is not at issue at this time. It also brings in another question. I don't believe that the witness is qualified to say whether he knows——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) We can't hear you.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——the Alien's reputation for truth and veracity. All he has testified to so far is that he has attended a number of personnel meetings. I don't know whether these people, of course, knew; where the meetings were held. They weren't held, certainly, as I get the testimony in the community in which the Alien there has lived and worked. And so on those grounds, both of those grounds——

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Were there representatives of employers in San Francisco there?

The Witness: There were. [6178]

Presiding Inspector: And of citizens? A number of citizens of San Francisco?

The Witness: Oh, they were most all of them employers' representatives or employers.

Presiding Inspector: In San Francisco largely?

The Witness: About half, I should judge.

Presiding Inspector: I think he is qualified. You may test his qualifications on cross examination.

Now, so far as the testimony being competent, although I excluded this same line of testimony with the Witness Horn who was on the stand and held—and I adhere to that ruling—that mere contradictions in the evidence between statements made on the stand and statements made elsewhere do not open the door for this kind of proof, yet if the witness goes to far as to give a basis on which it could be found that there was, for example, the commission of crime or anything weighing against his general character, then I think this testimony would be competent. Under the circumstances here

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

I have decided to admit this line of testimony, so I will allow the question.

I made that statement as a general explanation of what might appear to be an inconsistent ruling.

Mr. Grossman: I will reframe the question to save time.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are you in a position to state what was the reputation [6179] between 1937 and 1939 of Harry Bridges for truth and veracity in the places where he worked and lived? A. Excellent.

Q. Upon the basis of what you know about the reputation of Harry Bridges for truth and veracity would you believe him under oath?

A. I would.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Are you an important State official?

A. Modesty declines me to——

Q. (Interposing) What?

A. Modesty makes me decline to answer.

Q. This State Personnel Board, what does it consist of?

A. They are constitutional officers. There are five members appointed for ten years. They are responsible for the administration of the State Civil Service system, about 27,000 employees.

Q. Is it a political appointment?

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

A. Well, I had to be approved by the Senate. It is certainly not of my political faith by and large.

Q. Who appointed you to the position?

A. The Governor appointed me and the Senate confirmed [6180] me.

Q. Governor Olson? A. Yes.

Q. And it wasn't at any of these meeting of the Personnel Board of the State of California that you had occasion to know the reputation of Harry Bridges here? A. Never.

Q. For truth and veracity? A. No, sir.

Q. Did his name ever come up in connection with your duties as a State officer? A. No, sir.

Q. Did the question of Harry Bridges' reputation for truth and veracity ever come up during the time you occupied advisory positions with the State and Federal Governments? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know any members of the Communist Party? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Huh? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Have you ever asked members of the Communist Party as to what Harry Bridges' reputation for truth and veracity is?

A. Well, I wouldn't know. [6181]

Q. You wouldn't know?

A. I wouldn't know whom to ask.

Q. Huh?

A. I wouldn't know whom to ask.

Q. Would you say that a member of the Communist Party would have a good reputation for truth and veracity?

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

A. Well, I wouldn't know because I don't know much about them.

Q. Have you ever gone into the question or ever discussed the question with anybody as to whether the Alien here, Harry Bridges, was a member of the Communist Party? A. I probably have.

Q. Did that question ever come up in the meetings here of the California—what do you call it? California Personnel Management Association?

A. Never, to my knowledge.

Q. You say that there were representatives from the shipowners in those meetings. Did these representatives of the shipowners ever state in these meetings that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party? A. I never heard any.

Q. Huh?

A. I never heard any make that statement.

Q. Did these representatives of the shipowners accuse in these meetings here Harry Bridges of ever being a member of [6182] the Communist Party?

A. I never heard one of them do so.

Q. Did they give their opinion as to the Alien's reputation for truth and veracity?

A. They did.

Q. Do you know Mervyn Rathborne?

A. No.

Q. Did he have anything to do with your appointment on the State Personnel Board?

A. I would not know.

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

Q. You say you were connected with the National Youth Administration in advisory capacity?

A. In advisory capacity.

Q. Was Mervyn Rathborne ever connected with the National Youth Administration?

A. I do not know.

Q. You also say you were connected with the WPA? A. In an advisory capacity.

Q. In what connection?

A. Oh, I advised them regarding a pamphlet they wrote down there at Washington to train WPA foremen.

Q. Were you paid? A. I was not.

Q. You say you were also employed—connected in an advisory capacity with the CCC? [6183]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you paid? A. I was not.

Q. How long have you known Harry Bridges?

A. I don't know him.

Mr. Del Guercio: You don't know him.

Well, if your Honor please,——

The Witness: (Interposing) Well, I don't know him personally.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——I move that all this testimony be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, you don't have to know a witness. He testifies as to the witness' reputation. He has to know his reputation, not know his personally. He has to know his reputation in the mouths of the people either generally or the community in which he lives and works.

(Testimony of Benjamin E. Mallary.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who are some of the other members of this —give me the names of all of the members of the State Personnel Board?

A. There are about 350.

Q. Of the Board?

A. Oh, I beg your pardon. I thought you were talking about the California Personnel Management Association. Ex-Senator Christian of Hayward; Mr. Arthur Brown of San Bernardino; Mr. Harry Luchins of San Francisco; Mr. Irvin Spurback [6184] of Sacramento.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Now we will call back the Alien.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Gladstein: I have finished with my redirect examination. I may say this, your Honor: There are a number of requests that were made. As you noticed in the redirect examination, I attempted to bring out that Mr. Bridges had attempted to make a search for certain documents that were sort of requested by Mr. Del Guercio.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: And I have some notes on some others he requested for which we had not had time to make a search. So we may later on have occasion to ask Mr. Bridges to take the stand for five minutes to identify certain documents. Otherwise we have finished with the redirect examination.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. That is quite understandable.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You say that you can recall an expression used by Harry Jackson or that you did recall an expression used by [6185] Harry Jackson in his speech at the Civic Auditorium on June 19, 1934, and that that expression was that "They can call us 'Red', but they can't call us 'Yellow' ". Is that correct? A. That's substantially.

Q. Whom did he mean? Whom did Harry Jackson refer to when he said that "They can call us 'Red' but they can't call us 'Yellow' "?

A. Possibly those who criticised the fact that they were connected with the strike.

Q. Did he mean you? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Were you called a "Red"?

A. Oh, oh, yes.

Q. Well, did he mean you when he said that it was all right to call you a "Red", but as long as they don't call you "Yellow"?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. He was referring to the Marine Workers Industrial Union that was called a "Red" Union, I guess.

Q. Well now, was Harry Jackson speaking to the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time?

A. No. It was a public meeting. The auditorium was packed.

Q. And this was on June 19, 1934, is that correct? [6186]

A. I am not sure if that was the date. It seems to me that the meeting was after July the 5th.

Q. And did not Harry Jackson at the same time also advocate a general strike?

A. He might have. I think every speaker did. That was one of the purposes of the meeting.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, Harry Jackson advocated a general strike, John Schomaker advocated it long before the killing of pickets? I say, long before—at least two or three weeks before—that took place? A. I don't think so.

Q. Huh? A. I don't think so.

Q. Do you want me to refresh your memory?

A. Yes. I still don't think so. The idea of a general strike, I am sure, didn't come up until after the threat to open the Port and after the actual move to open the Port. There was talk of a general strike if they went ahead with their plans. [6187]

Q. Now, Sam Darcy was advocating also a general strike long before these events took place?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. There were 50,000 people advocating that as far as I know.

Q. Before July 5, 1934?

A. Well, I know—I know at least one or two unions—I know the Machinists' Union had taken a general strike vote way in advance.

Q. And you were in favor of it yourself before July 5, were you not?

A. I am not sure as to that, but I think so, along the lines I have indicated.

Q. Let's go back to this resolution that was passed by the San Francisco Labor Council——

A. (Interposing) This resolution would indicate the time of the meeting.

Q. Was this the resolution that was passed——

A. (Interposing) I don't know—what is the date?

Q. I will read it for you:

"Whereas Communist propagandists have taken advantage of the waterfront strike to issue numerous scurrilous attacks upon the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and upon the duly elected officers of said unions; and,

"Whereas, the anonymous slander of the A. F. of L. unions [6188] and officials thereof has had a tendency to weaken the morale of the strikers and to confuse the minds of trade unionists not familiar with the tactics of a Communistic character; and,

"Whereas, at a mass meeting of the waterfront strikers held in the Civic Auditorium, Tuesday, June

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

19, the Chairman introduced a spokesman for a notorious Communist organization, thereby creating the altogether erroneous impression that the unions involved have made common cause with the Communists;

"Therefore, Be It Resolved, by the San Francisco Labor Council in regular meeting assembled on Friday, June 22, that we repudiate all Communist organizations, especially the so-called Marine Workers Industrial Union, and denounce their efforts to inject themselves into an industrial conflict for the sole purpose of making converts to Communism;

"Further, Be It Resolved, that the San Francisco Labor Council strongly advises the International Longshoremen's Association, its members and its representatives to disavow all connections with the Communist element on the waterfront; and,

"Further, Be It Resolved, that copies of the resolution be forwarded to the President of the American Federation of Labor, the Presidents of the International unions involved, and to the press."

[6189]

You remember that resolution, don't you?

A. Yes. Did you read who it was signed by?

Q. You were bound by it, weren't you?

A. No.

Q. You weren't bound by it?

A. The particular local union that I was a member of——

Q. (Interposing): You were a member of the

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

ILA at that time, were you not? You were Chairman of the Strike Committee? A Yes.

Q. Formed by that ILA union, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And yet you were working with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, with Harry Jackson and Sam Darcy before after that resolution was adopted?

A. You have heard why. You forgot to mention who that resolution was introduced by, and there were many things surrounding it, and which we were not bound by.

Q. The resolution was adopted, was it not, that resolution I read?

A. It was adopted by the Labor Council. I have seen a lot of things adopted by the Labor Council that didn't bind us and we didn't approve of.

Q. How many unions did that Labor Council represent?

A. Oh, at that time—I don't know—possibly 70 or [6190] 100, something like that.

Q. It represented all of the unions that were on strike, excepting the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time, if that was a union, did it not?

A. No.

Q. Were there any unions, any bona fide unions, American Federation of Labor Unions, that weren't represented in the San Francisco Labor Council at that time? A. Sure.

Q. That were on strike? A. Yes.

Q. Who?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. The Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, and the American Radio Telegraphists' Association.

Q. The ARTA?

A. Yes—independent unions, both of them.

Q. They weren't AF of L affiliates, were they?

A. No. They were independent. They pulled out of the AF of L because it was too rotten for them.

Q. And the Communists controlled the ARTA, particularly? A. No, you are wrong.

Q. Communist controlled and Communist dominated? A. No, you are wrong.

Q. Huh?

A. No, you are wrong. Your agents have misinformed you [6191] again.

Mr. Del Guercio: I might say that you are—I won't say "misinformed."

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, that resolution that was passed by the San Francisco Labor Council was sent down to your own local, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. What did your local do about it?

A. The local approved it.

Q. Did they do anything else besides approving it? A. How do you mean?

Q. Didn't your own local—to refresh your memory—didn't your own local pass a resolution to the effect that to any person who refused to abide, any members of the local who refused to abide by the advice of the San Francisco Labor Council to disavow all connections with the Communist element on the waterfront shall be held on trial on charges of insubordination and, if found guilty, shall be expelled from Local 38-79, International Longshoremen's Association?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't know. I don't recall if they passed that resolution.

Q. Did you consider yourself bound by such a resolution of your own local? [6192]

A. If they passed it. I don't know if they did.

Q. Did you check the records, the minutes, then, to determine whether that resolution was passed by your local?

A. No. They are missing, but I have a hunch where they are at now.

Q. Huh? A. They are missing.

Q. What?

A. The minutes are missing; but I have a hunch where they are at now.

Q. Are the records of the Central Labor Council also missing?

A. They are not very friendly with me and won't make them available to me.

Q. Is anybody but a Communist friendly with you? A. Well——

Q. (Interposing): Strike that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, the minutes of the San Francisco Labor Council are published, are they not, and are available to the public?

A. Yes. It used to be the custom, unless it is changed, to publish them in their weekly journal, or at least to publish them very briefly.

Q. Are the minutes of any of your unions available to the public?

A. Some of them; yes. [6193]

Q. All of them?

A. No, not all of them. The minutes of our meetings during the strike weren't. The only people that could get them were the agents of the employers.

Q. Do you consider your own unions to be sort of public organizations?

A. Public organizations?

Q. Yes.

A. What do you mean by "public organizations"?

Q. What do you mean by it? A. Huh?

Q. What do you think I mean by it?

Mr. Gladstein: I suggest that is immaterial.

A. A public organization is an organization that, for example, operates in the public welfare, operated by the public, operated by the State, Federal or City Government.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you consider, under your definition, your unions are public organizations?

A. No, I wouldn't class them as a proper public organization. I wouldn't consider an organization a public organization unless the public is admitted to all its activities, its meetings.

I am sure the FBI is not a public organization.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Don't compare the FBI with your union.

[6194]

A. No, I shouldn't want to.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, the FBI is a Governmental agency and shouldn't be taken by either this witness, or anybody else——

Presiding Inspector: That is true, but let's go right along.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to go on record as resenting those remarks made by the witness, counsel, and anybody else that makes them against any Governmental agency.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly; it will be on the record. He is merely giving his viewpoint.

Mr. Del Guercio: Even if it is his viewpoint, your Honor, it is not only bad taste but——

Presiding Inspector: Well——

Mr. Del Guercio: This is our Government here, we hope.

Presiding Inspector: There is no use wrangling with the witness. Go on. It doesn't affect anybody.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all, excepting that reservation I made earlier.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness. [6195]

Mrs. King: I am sorry, but we have no others—

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) We have no others for today. We didn't expect the cross examination to end so soon.

Presiding Inspector: You don't want to depend on cross examination.

Mr. Gladstein: That is true.

There is one other request we might make at this time and that is in connection with the witness, Cannalonga. You will recall that there was a letter shown to you, and also to me, by Mr. Del Guercio. It is our feeling that since that bears on the subject it ought to be offered in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will offer it in evidence at the proper time.

Mr. Gladstein: You don't have objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to it at this time; but at the proper time before the hearing is over, no.

Mr. Grossman: We probably should go into conference in chambers about the matter we discussed before, and if there is any news on that Mr. Del Guercio will probably know whether there is.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. We will have a conference in chambers.

We will now recess until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 3:40 p.m., an adjournment was taken to Wednesday, June 4, 1941, at 10:00 a.m.) [6196]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to wait for Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Grossman: No. We can start.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Call your next witness, Mr. Grossman.

Stand and raise your right hand.

HENRY P. MELNIKOW

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is your name?

A. Henry P. Melnikow—M-e-l-n-i-k-o-w.

Q. Your address?

A. 2333 Rose Street, Berkeley, California.

Presiding Inspector: Speak louder. Draw up your chair and speak louder so they can hear you over there.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is your business, Mr. Melnikow?

A. I am the Director of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau, which is a business engaged in furnishing

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

statistical research and personal representation on behalf of trade unions in connection with negotiation, mediation and arbitration proceedings and collective bargaining. [6198]

Q. For how long have you been connected with the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. Since 1921.

Q. Were you doing similar work before that time?

A. No. That was when I came out from the middle west shortly after my overseas service.

Q. Has your time been devoted almost exclusively, or exclusively, to such work since 1921?

A. Practically exclusively.

Q. Does your organization do work for all types of unions?

A. All standard or bona fide unions. We do not do work for company unions.

Q. In what cities does your organization represent unions?

A. We have branch offices in Portland and Seattle at the present time, and in Vancouver, British Columbia. [6199]

Q. Have you had occasion personally to represent unions in other cities besides these where you have stated you have branch offices?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to any further testimony along this line.

Presiding Inspector: This is for qualification, I suppose; Identification and qualification. I will allow it to a certain extent. I think he may go somewhat further. Of course, it isn't material on the direct issue.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Mr. Grossman: You may answer.

Presiding Inspector: You may answer.

Mr. Del Guercio: He was asked for his qualifications in trade union matters. That isn't at issue here.

Presiding Inspector: I know. But this shows, I suppose, his knowledge on the general subject on which I anticipate, judging from the testimony of the Witness Kagel, that he is going to be examined on.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember the question?

A. I think I do. I have represented unions as far East as Washington and as far South as San Diego and as far North as Vancouver, British Columbia.

Presiding Inspector: As far East as Washington, D. C.?

The Witness: Yes, sir. [6200]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Does your organization have regular retainers in the sense that it does regular work for certain unions?

A. Yes. About half of our work is done on that basis and the other half is on what we call a "special-job" basis.

Q. Could you estimate about how many unions

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

there are for which your organization does regular work? And I am including your branch offices in this question.

A. Between 75 and 100.

Q. Could you estimate the number of unions you personally have done work for during the last several years? Just a rough estimate.

A. As a rough estimate I would place it at 300.

Q. Could you estimate about how many different international unions would be included in this 300? Just a general estimate.

A. My guess would be about 35.

Q. Could you estimate the relative proportion at the present time of your clients between A. F. of L. and CIO?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see what difference that makes. They are just unions.

Mr. Grossman: If the claim were made that there were any bias. That is the only reason for laying such a basis. It is not important, though, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is important. [6201]

Mr. Grossman: All right.

Presiding Inspector: We will see what the cross examination is.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When was the first time that you had any occasion to meet Harry Bridges in connection with this work you have been describing?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. 1934.

Q. And what brought about your meeting with Harry Bridges?

A. I can't remember specifically, but my recollection is that it was a meeting of a committee to plan what to do about appearances before the National Longshoremen's Board.

Q. What unions was involved in that?

A. The International Longshoremen's Association, Pacific Coast District.

Q. Could you estimate about how many different issues—withdraw that.

This is a little bit difficult to express, Mr. Melnikow. What I am concerned with is different occasions in the sense that a complete negotiation is an occasion or a complete arbitration is an occasion.

Mr. Myron: Is this a question? [6202]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: No. He is framing his question. Let him finish it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Defining "occasions" that way, that is, a whole negotiation would be an occasion or a whole arbitration would be an occasion, on how many different occasions have you worked with Harry Bridges?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the form of the question in its present form.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. Without consulting my records that would be difficult to say, but my guess would be upwards of 50 and perhaps closer to 100.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you had occasion to work with Harry Bridges on arbitration proceedings? A. Yes.

Mr. Myron: Of course, we object to all this line of inquiry, your Honor, upon the ground it is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, of course. That is your objection. But I will take it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Could you estimate about how many of these arbitra- [6203] tion proceedings, in about how many of these arbitration proceedings you were working with Harry Bridges?

A. At least 25, including what we call "Interpretation" proceedings.

Q. During the time that these occasions occurred was Harry Bridges President, either of the District of the ILA, or of the ILWU?

A. He was either President of the Local or President of the District of the ILA or the ILWU.

Q. Have you had occasion to participate in negotiations along with Harry Bridges?

A. Yes; on a number of occasions.

Q. Have you had occasion to participate in meetings that were not negotiations with Harry Bridges to discuss trade union policy and strategy?

A. Yes. Preparatory to negotiations or arbitra-

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

tions we would frequently meet to discuss policy and strategy.

Q. Mr. Melnikow, during your various trade union contacts with Harry Bridges has he at all times been a good trade unionist?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it—in his opinion.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. In your opinion?

A. Yes. In my opinion he has conducted himself as an [6204] excellent trade unionist.

Q. During the course of your contracts with Harry Bridges has he ever, in your opinion, acted in such a way as to recruit thhe workers into the Communist Party and prepare them as stooges for the proletarian revolution?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Does he know anything about this?

Mr. Grossman: I suppose he would know the negative. In other words, it is the absence of Harry Bridges doing anything along those lines.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Myron: This is on the basis that he has seen him or heard him?

Presiding Inspector: We will find that out when you cross examine. I judge he has seen him if he participated in all these arbitrations.

A. My answer would be no, not to my knowledge.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts with Harry Bridges has he ever taken the position that workers and employers cannot sit down at a table and bargain collectively with the employers in an amicable fashion resulting in benefits for the workers involved?

A. No; wherever the employer was acting in good faith his position has been that it was possible for the union to sit [6205] down and negotiate in good faith with the employer.

Q. You indicate that in some cases he has taken the position that it would not be possible to bargain collectively with employers in an amicable fashion and have it result in benefits for the workers involved?

A. In some instances, where the employers gave indication of not being in good faith, not acting in good faith, it was difficult, if not impossible, to see any good that would come from it, in his opinion.

Q. In the course of your contacts with Mr. Bridges did he ever take any action, or position, that was inconsistent with the best interests of the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, this is based on a lot of conclusions of this witness. I will take it. I don't know how valuable it is. It is a matter for the trier of the fact when it comes to evaluate the evidence.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. No. While we have differed, I think he has always done his best to do what was best for the economic interests of the workers he represented.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You mean while you have differed for the best interests of the workers involved?

A. Yes. There have been times when I thought he was wrong and there have been times when he thought I was wrong, [6206] in our opinions.

Q. In any of these occasions when you thought he was wrong was he, in your opinion, attempting to carry out some ulterior purpose, such as aiding the Communist Party, or any other ulterior purpose, except the best interests of the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I submit that is clearly improper.

Mr. Myron: I object—unless he knows.

Presiding Inspector: This is his judgment. I will take it for what it is worth.

A. As far as I could judge, in my opinion, he was always acting in a sincere manner in what he considered the best interests of the workers.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts with Harry Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: This is his conclusion Mr. Bridges' conclusion.

Mr. Grossman: Right, based on objective things, your Honor.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes; I realize that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts with Harry Bridges was there any action of his that you saw along the line of sabotage, or industrial violence, or advocacy of sabotage or industrial violence? [6207]

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as improper, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know how you can see it, but I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: If the Government is going to prove it I assume there is some way of recognizing it, your Honor,

Presiding Inspector: I don't know——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Unless——

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing)——we might go into these riots we heard intimation about, if you ask questions of that kind.

Mr. Grossman: On cross examination I have no objection. I am using the wording of the statutes and I assume that there must be some way to prove such things. I don't see clearly how you would prove it but, nevertheless, if it is possible for a witness to testify Mr. Melnikow also can.

May we have an answer?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will allow it.

A. No. The position has always been against violence, sabotage, or anything that would interfere in the lawful following up of the interests of the workers.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts with Bridges did he ever advocate a policy of a strike for a strike's sake, a strike which was not justifiable, because of the economic advantages it would bring to the workers involved? [6208]

Presiding Inspector: Again, your opinion.

A. In my opinion, while he has been in favor, in one or two occasions, of strikes where we thought it was inadvisable, it was not because of lack of interest in the workers but just an honest difference of opinion as to what would be the consequences.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have there ever been occasions when you were in favor of a strike and Mr. Bridges was not in favor of such a strike, and continued to advocate having no strike?

A. Yes. On a number of occsasions we thought that the best interests of the workers would be reflected by strike action and Mr. Bridges differed with us on that. Also in the reverse—in other words, to be fair to myself. [6209]

Q. During the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges did he ever engage in conduct such as unlawful destruction of property in connection with industrial disputes?

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: As far as you know?

The Witness: Not to my knowledge.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts with Mr. Bridges did you find him equally willing to use the procedure of arbitration or negotiation or mediation as well as the procedure of strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. Of course, this is all opinion testimony.

Presiding Inspector: All opinion. I will allow it. It is all opinion.

A. Generally speaking, yes, but there have been times when he has been more in favor of one method as against the other, depending on the circumstances of the case.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You mean there have been times when he was more in favor of strikes than of the other procedures that I named? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And vice versa?

A. And vice versa. There have been times when he was [6210] opposed to strikes when others, including myself, thought it would be the best procedure under the particular circumstances.

Q. During the course of your contacts with Harry Bridges did you find him regularly and continuously willing to and actually cooperating with Governmental agencies to avoid strikes where such strikes could reasonably be avoided?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it also, with the same understanding that it is opinion testimony.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: There are two or three judgments mixed in there, aren't there? I will allow it.

The Witness: May I have the question?

Presiding Inspector: Read it to him.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I should say, on the whole, yes. There have been instances where he wasn't sure of the good faith of the particular individual involved. He was loath to cooperate in those instances.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did Mr. Bridges ever take the position in your contacts with him that arbitration as a principle or as a general rule is bad for the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. [6211]

A. No. He considered, as far as I could judge, that arbitration was one of the methods to be used in collective bargaining procedure.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. To your knowledge has Mr. Bridges ever taken the initiative to see to it that an arbitration set-up could be provided so that disputes between the workers and their employers could be settled without a strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that also.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: If he understands it he may answer it. I don't.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Well, do you understand it?

A. I'm not sure. May I have the question read?

Q. I will rephrase it, then. Did Mr. Bridges ever take the initiative to provide in an agreement between employers and employees some kind of an arbitration set-up to settle disputes arising under the contract?

A. Oh, yes. There have been a number of occasions where the union would not want the arbitration procedure written into the contract and would be told that it was to the best interests to have it in the contract.

Q. Told by whom? A. By Mr. Bridges.

Q. From your trade union contacts with Mr. Bridges are you able to state what was or what is his theory of the role and [6212] the function of trade unions?

Presiding Inspector: Well, haven't you had that from Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: How will this witness——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): The Government apparently disbelieves the statements Mr. Bridges made on that question.

Presiding Inspector: This merely shows that this man believes him. That is all.

Mr. Grossman: Well, your Honor, I think I have qualified Mr. Melnikow sufficiently to show that his opinion of Mr. Bridges and his views may be based in part, true, on what Mr. Bridges may have said, but is based in large part at least on the activities of Mr. Bridges from which he can draw certain conclusions.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: You have shown the opinion of Mr. Melnikow about this. I have allowed it very generously. Has the question been allowed heretofore?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Are you sure about that?

Mr. Grossman: Dean Morse was permitted. You see, every question I am using was permitted either in the examination of——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): In this form?

Mr. Grossman: Yes. I have the page. It is 4579. [6213]

Presiding Inspector: Very well. I will allow it, then.

A. As near as I can judge from Mr. Bridges' utterances and actions he believed in the gradual improvement of our present economic order, economically and politically, through trade union action. I would say that I see traces of the Australian labor movement philosophy in his actions and his thoughts.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts with

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Harry Bridges have you seen any activity of his which indicated or now indicates to you that he was or is a Communist?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well now,——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): This was permitted, your Honor, in the examination of Dean Morse.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know that that was permitted, that particular question.

Mr. Grossman: Page 4588 of the transcript.

Presiding Inspector: Wasn't there some qualification of what this man knows about Communism?

Mr. Grossman: I know the Government raised that objection and I don't recall whether any questions were asked to qualify him. We can look at the transcript.

Presiding Inspector: Never mind. I will take the question. We will leave it to cross examination. [6214]

Mr. Grossman: I know it led to cross examination on the question. I will repeat the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you seen any activity of Harry Bridges which indicated or now indicates to you that he was or is a Communist? A. No.

Mr. Grossman: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Cross examination.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is this Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. It is a private enterprise which was started in 1920 in New York by Stuart Chase and Evans Clark and a number of others, and through correspondence with them I was induced to start a branch office of what was called the Labor Bureau, Incorporated, in San Francisco.

Q. Is it incorporated?

A. No. The incorporation was dissolved and at the present time the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau is solely owned by me.

Q. You are the sole owner? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you running it for profit? [6215]

A. For compensation rather than profit, because we each have a fixed compensation; each member of the staff.

Q. What is the difference between "compensation" and "profit"; running it for "compensation" and running it for "profit"?

A. Well, in the case of profit there is a desire to make all the profit you possibly can, and in the case of compensation there is the desire to earn a certain amount as compensation for the work.

Q. Do you have any other income other than the income you receive from your work with this Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. Nothing except what I get from teaching.

Q. Where do you teach?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. I have taught at the University of California Extension Division and at the present time I teach at the Pacific Coast School for Workers every summer.

Q. Pacific Coast School for Workers?

A. Yes.

Q. Who runs it?

A. It is an Advisory Board consisting of labor people who operate it as a summer school every summer in Berkeley.

Q. Who operates it?

A. Well, this Advisory Board consists of trade unionists and educators, and they operate it. [6216]

Q. Who are they? What are their names?

A. George Headley is the Director of the school. There is a committee consisting of Mr. Maguire of the Building Service Employees, who I think is Chairman, representing the trade unionists; and a representative of the State Department of Education whose name escapes me at the moment, but I think it is Mrs. Heinneman; and I believe there is a representative of the University of California, who is John L. Kerchen; and a number of others. I think the Chairman of the Educational Committee is Mrs. May.

Q. Well now, who started this school?

A. I'm sure I can't tell.

Q. When was it started?

A. It was started years ago, and I believe it was the result of cooperation between the State Federation of Labor and the University of California Extension Division.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. And you receive a salary? A. Yes.

Q. How much?

A. $100.00 per summer.

Q. $100.00 per summer? A. Yes.

Q. Now, is that your only income other than that received from the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. I own two houses and, being unable to live in them, receive rent for them. That is another source of income. [6217]

Q. Now, when you say that you were working with Harry Bridges, do you mean that you were employed by Harry Bridges?

A. We use the word "retain" because we consider ourselves as professionals rather than employees and consider the capacity that of between client and professional consultant.

Q. Are you an attorney? A. No, sir.

Q. What kind of a profession is it?

A. Economist and statistician.

Q. What?

A. Economist and statistician. I am on the——

Q. (Interposing): "Communistic" did you say? I didn't get it. Will you speak a little louder, please?

A. Yes. I am on the Civil Service list of the United States Civil Service Commission as Principal Economist, and I consider that my profession.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Well, is that your profession in connection with the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. Yes, sir. We call ourselves "economic counsel".

Q. Well, you sell your services, don't you?

9. We sell them?

Q. Yes.

A. In the same sense that any other professional sells his services; yes, sir. [6218]

Q. Do you sell your services?

A. Yes. We are paid for our work.

Q. And has Harry Bridges paid you for the work you have done for him?

A. Not personally, but the organizations which he represented or advised did.

Q. Now, can you estimate how much you have received from Harry Bridges and from his union that he represents during the time that you have known him?

A. It would be rather hard without consulting the books, but I should say it would run approximately $15,000 since 1934: perhaps more.

Q. $15,000 since 1934? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that include all of your employment by Harry Bridges and the unions he represents?

A. That would depend on the definition of "represents".

Q. Let's take all of the CIO Unions, for instance. How much have you received, your company received, from the CIO Unions since you started this Bueau?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: You mean which Mr. Bridges represents?

Mr. Del Guercio: With which Mr. Bridges is connected.

A. Yes. Well, I think that would begin about 1937.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That what? [6219]

A. Beginning in 1937, because prior to that, even though Mr. Bridges represented them, they were not CIO Unions. My guess—and it would be sheer guess, I would rather consult my records—would be approximately right or nine thousand dollars.

Q. Now, you know that Bridges is a national official of the CIO?

A. I don't know it, but I have been told that.

Q. Have you represented also any other CIO Unions on the Pacific Coast?

A. Yes, quite a large number.

Q. Can you estimate your total income, say since 1937, since the time that the CIO Unions came into existence; your total income received from all CIO Unions?

A. That's difficult to estimate, but I will venture a guess that it would be about a third of the annual income of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau.

Q. And what is the annual income of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. It runs between seventy and ninety thousand dollars, a year.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. And a third of that would be about $25,000?

A. Something like that.

Q. How many people are employed by your Bureau?

A. It ranged from about twenty-five to about thirty on [6220] an average and sometimes there wwill be as many as forty or fifty all together, including temporary employees as we are pressed.

Q. That includes clerks and stenographers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many clerks and stenographers do you have? A. About ten.

Q. Now, when you say that you participated in negotiations with Harry Bridges do you mean that you were employed by Harry Bridges in such negotiations? A. We use the term "retained".

Q. Well, weren't you employed? Did you sell your services to Harry Bridges in such negotiations?

A. In a sense, yes. But we regard the retainer as being a more independent relationship. In other words, if a union or its representatives asked me or anybody connected with the Bureau to do anything that we considered unprofessional we would merely sever the connection with that retainer.

Q. What are the professional ethics of a Bureau such as you represent? Are they written ones?

A. Yes. We have had ever since it started four cardinal principles.

Q. You mean you have?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. Yes, and the Labor Bureau, Incorporated, which started in 1920 had exactly—— [6221]

Q. (Interposing): Is that your own company?

A. No. That was the corporation of which Stuart Chase was President and was until very recently the president. [6222]

Q. Is that a corporation?

A. That was a corporation and it has been dissolved recently.

Q. Your organization is not a corporation?

A. Not at the present time; no.

We followed those four cardinal principles, which were as follows:

First, not to have any political affiliation, but to adhere strictly to the economic field of action.

Second, to take no part in any inter-union conflicts or factional fights.

And to do the work on a strictly professional basis on the assumption that the facts and figures would, in the long-run, benefit labor more than any misrepresentation.

And, finally, to do it on as nearly a cost basis as possible.

Q. Is there any organization or bureau to check up on you to see whether or not you live up to those ethics?

A. We have always invited it.

Q. Is there any organization or bureau—read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: You may answer the question directly.

A. Yes—the answer is that we have invited the repre- [6223] sentatives of organized labor to check whenever they wanted to, but they never have taken occasion or advantage of the invitation.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Then your answer is that there is no such organization to check on you?

A. There is, but they have never taken any occasion to do it.

Q. Is there any governmental agency set up to check up on the ethics of your Bureau?

A. Not directly. I am in continuous touch with Dr. Steelman, and the other Mediation bodies, and they are in a pretty fair position to judge of our activities.

Q. Do you know what the policy of the Communist Party is toward trade unions?

A. Towards trade unions?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't say that I am an expert on the subject, but from my readings I would say that at various times that policy has changed. At times they have wanted to set up dual organizations; at other times, apparently, the idea was to control the organizations without setting up dual organizations.

Q. What literature have you read?

A. Oh, generally the issues of the American Federation [6224] of Labor publications, and similar publications.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Have you read Communist literature?

A. No, not to any extent; nothing except as it happened to fall into my hands.

Q. Have you ever conferred with and consulted with members of the Communist Party?

A. Not to my knowledge. There may have been those who were members, or officials, but I didn't know it.

Q. Did you ever represent Harry Jackson?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know Harry Jackson?

A. I had him pointed out to me by Mr. Paul Scharrenberg.

Q. Have you ever had any business relations with Harry Jackson?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Have you ever been a paid advisor of Harry Jackson? A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Would your books show that?

A. That is, unless he was a member of an organization which I represented and I didn't know that he was a member thereof.

Q. Did your organization ever represent the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been a paid advisor of Mervyn Rathborne? [6225]

A. Yes, I think so. I think when he was in charge of, what is called now the American Communications Association out here, we participated in negotiations for that union.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Have you ever been a paid advisor of Walter Stack? A. Walter Stack?

Q. Yes.

A. I think he served on one committee of the Marine Firemen's Union at a time when we represented them.

Q. Were you ever employed by Walter Stack?

Presiding Inspector: What?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you ever employed by Walter Stack at any time?

A. Not in any personal way. We have been employed by the organization, the Marine Firemen's Association.

Q. Through whom were those negotiations carried out, your employment?

A. I didn't catch that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Through a committee.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was Walter Stack on that Committee?

A. I am not sure whether he was on the Committee at the time we were retained, or came in later. I am inclined [6226] to believe the latter is true; that we were retained and he came down from, I believe, Seattle and joined the Committee and we were retained.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Do you know if Walter Stack is a member of the Communist Party, and was a member at the time you had these business transactions with him?

A. No, I didn't; and I don't know it today.

Q. You never heard that Walter Stack has admitted that he is and has been a member of the Communist Party?

A. No. I have seen some references to statements that he was a member of the Communist Party in the newspapers, but that is as far as my own knowledge goes.

Q. Haven't you seen the same things about Harry Bridges in the newspapers. A. Yes.

Q. As you have Walter Stack?

A. Yes. I have also seen publications about me too, but I knew better than to believe them.

Q. Do you believe that Walter Stack is a member of the Communist Party?

A. Do I believe it?

Q. Yes.

A. I have no basis on which to have an intelligent belief.

Q. Have you any basis on which to believe whether or [6227] not Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party?

A. Only through my continuous contact with him, and observations of his actions.

Q. Did you have the same opportunity with regard to Walter Stack?

A. No, not nearly the same. It was very limited compared to my contacts with Mr. Bridges.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. You have come in contact with a lot of trade union men, have you not?

A. Yes, sir; hundreds and thousands.

Q. Hundreds and thousands of them. Over what period of time? A. Since 1913.

Q. In your contacts with these hundreds of thousands of labor men have you ever discovered one who was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well, there is one I am sure of. When he was negotiating for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, I was told Mr. Sam Diner was a Communist and also that he was a stooge for the employees, and I didn't know which to believe.

Presiding Inspector: Stooge for whom?

The Witness: For the employers.

Presiding Inspector: You said "employees".

By Mr. Del Guercio: [6228]

Q. Sam Diner is the only one that you can remember out of these hundreds of thousands—did you say hundreds of thousands?

A. No. I said hundreds and thousands.

Q. And the only one you can think of is Sam Diner?

A. Well, that is the only one that occurs to me right now, and that apparently on his own statement.

Q. Can you think of anyone else of these hundreds and thousands of labor men that you have come in contact with——

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. (Interposing): Off-hand, no.

Q. Sam Diner is the only one?

A. That occurs to me at the moment; yes, sir.

Q. You have come in contact with Harry Jackson, haven't you?

A. Just by having him pointed out to me by Paul Scharrenberg on one occasion.

Q. By whom? A. Paul Scharrenberg.

Q. What did Paul Scharrenberg have to say about him, if anything?

Presiding Inspector: I cannot hear.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. What he said would hardly be printable.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [6229]

Q. About Harry Jackson? What did he say?

A. He called him a "blankety-blankety-blank"——

Q. (Interposing): What?

A. A "blankety-blankety-blank Red".

Q. Do you know that Harry Bridges has associated with Harry Jackson?

A. I don't know it, but it may be quite true.

Q. Huh? A. It may be quite true.

Q. Do you know what Bridges' associations wi Harry Jackson were?

A. Not from my personal knowledge; no.

Q. You have no knowledge at all on that?

A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Do you know what Harry Bridges' associations were with Sam Darcy, or have been?

A. No, sir.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who Sam Darcy is?

A. I have heard that he was an official of the Communist Party.

Q. And you don't know anything about Harry Bridges' association with Sam Darcy?

A. No, sir. [6230]

Q. Do you know who Elmer Hanoff is?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever heard of him?

A. Only what I have read in the newspapers recently.

Q. Do you know what Harry Bridges' associations with Elmer Hanoff have been?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know William Schneidermann?

A. I have had him pointed out to me at a convention a couple of years ago.

Q. What convention was that?

A. CIO convention in San Francisco.

Q. Was Schneidermann present?

A. He was there as a spectator and one of the persons there I knew pointed him out and said, "There is Schneidermann."

Q. Where was that convention held?

A. It was held in Polk Hall.

Q. Where?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. Polk Hall, the Civic Auditorium, of the City and County of San Francisco.

Q. What date?

A. It was August, I believe, of '35 or '36—I am not sure—maybe '37. I would have to look that up.

Q. Was Schneidermann on the speakers' stand?

[6231]

A. No. He was present in the same capacity that I was, just looking on.

Q. Who pointed him out to you?

A. I can't recall at this time, but somebody who was with me said, "There is Bill Schneidermann."

Q. Do you know Morris Rapport?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever heard of him?

A. Not except what I saw in the newspapers while I was up in the northwest about some proceedings in which he was involved.

Q. Isn't he considered an authority on trade union matters?

A. I wouldn't consider him such without more knowledge than I have of him at the present time.

Q. Do you know Walter Lambert?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you heard of him?

A. Only what I have read in the papers recently.

Q. In any of your transactions, business transactions, with any of these unions has the name of Walter Lambert ever come up?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. I don't think so directly. I think, perhaps, in an indirect way his name may have been mentioned, but if it was I can't recall at the present time. [6232]

Q. Do you know what association Harry Bridges has had with Walter Lambert? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you ever associated with the Sailors Union of the Pacific? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. Back in 1934, 1935 and, I think, in 1936.

Q. In what capacity?

A. In the same capacity as with all the other unions, retained to assist them in a professional way in their negotiations and arbitrations.

Q. Have you ever been retained by them since then?

A. No. They had a difference of policy as to living up to agreements or doing it by job action; that is, changing the agreement by job action versus striking, and they decided that our services would not assist them because they were going to do it by way of job action, rather than collective bargaining procedure direct.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you were kicked out of the Sailors Union of the Pacific for 99 years?

A. Kicked out? No, sir.

Q. Not literally kicked out—but you know what I mean.

A. Yes. To answer that fairly—I was told that a resolution was passed by the Sailors Union of the Pacific that [6233] they would not use our services for a period of 99 years.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: What do you mean by "job action"?

The Witness: By job action is meant such activities right on the job as will force the employer to do what the union wants them to do.

Presiding Inspector: Sabotage?

The Witness: Not necessarily; although that is a part of the extreme form, yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: Sit-down strikes?

The Witness: Yes; or walking off the job at the end of six hours when the agreement calls for eight hours, and saying "That is our day's work done unless you pay us overtime"—something like that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Didn't the ILA use job action on various docks during 1934 and 1936? A. The ILA?

Q. Yes.

A. Not in the same degree or in the same way; no, sir.

Q. In what way did they differ?

A. They never walked off the job at the end of six hours. For example, if they walked off the job it was simply on the ground that the award under which they were operating said that the employees could choose their jobs and the [6234] employers could choose their men; and whenever the men didn't like the conditions of employment they said, "We hereby do not choose this job," and walked off with that as an excuse—which gives it a little bit different situation than a sailor walking off the job from the ship.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Well, it was still job action?

A. To that extent, yes; it was a form of job action.

Presiding Inspector: Is that good trade union policy?

The Witness: I think it is justifiable only in extreme occasions. I do not think it is ordinarily good trade union policy.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever been a member of the Harry Bridges Defense Committee?

A. I am not sure. I was called up on the telephone and asked if I would permit my name to be used and I said, "Yes." Whether they are actually using it or not I can't say.

Q. The present one, you mean?

A. No. I think that was some time ago. I don't know what the present situation is.

Q. Have you made any contributions toward the Harry Bridges Defense Fund?

A. I do not believe so.

Q. You do not believe so?

A. I mean I do not remember that I did. I may have, but [6235] I don't remember.

Q. Wouldn't you know it if you did?

A. I don't know that—I didn't directly.

Q. Did you do it directly or indirectly?

A. It may have been that somebody passed a slip around our office and there might have been a contribution made that way. That is what I have in mind.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. Did you make a contribution there?

A. No, I haven't personally.

Q. Did your company—whatever you call it—the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau, make any contribution? A. No, sir.

Q. In any form?

A. No, sir—well, in the form that some employee may have passed a slip around; yes, I think there was such a slip passed around.

Q. Did you solicit contributions in your office for it? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you give permission for anyone to solicit contributions?

A. No one asked my permission.

Q. They just walked in and did it?

A. What I said was some employee in the office may have circulated such a slip.

Q. Do you know Sam Kagel? [6236]

A. Yes; very well. He is my right hand——

Q. (Interposing) Is he employed by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he on a salary basis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his salary?

A. $425.00 a month.

Q. $425.00. Are you on a salary basis?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your salary?

A. $600.00 a month.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. $600.00 a month? A. Yes.

Q. Are there any other high salaried employees in your organization?

A. It depends on the definition of "high." I think the next person gets $350.00, and it ranges down to $130.00 for the stenographer.

Q. All these salaries come from your employment with these unions? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is done with the—are all the funds you receive expended in salaries?

A. No, sir. We have a sizeable overhead.

Q. Do you have a reserve fund? [6237]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much do you have in that reserve fund at the present time?

A. I am not sure that I can tell you, but it must be about $6500 or $7500.

Q. And in whose name is that?

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Just a moment. I don't want to make a legal objection. This seems to be completely irrelevant. However, unless Mr. Melnikow has any desire to——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Well, now——

Mr. Grossman: (Continuing) Let me finish.

I say, if Mr. Melnikow has any reasons to desire any kind of secrecy, which cannot be maintained in the light of this series of questions, with reference to any of his business transactions, I believe he should express himself and I think your Honor should rule. But from our standpoint we have no objection, although we think it is completely irrelevant.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think he has any objection.

The Witness: On the contrary—our financial books, and otherwise, are always open and available.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You don't want to hide anything?

A. Not a thing.

Mr. Grossman: I withdraw my statement.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [6238]

Q. What do you do with the moneys you receive in excess of salaries and overhead?

A. We put it in a savings account and draw on it when we begin to run into the red.

Q. When you say "we", do you mean you put it into a savings account? A. Yes.

Q. The money is in your name — it is your money?

A. It is in the name of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau, which is a trade name, and of which I am the sole owner.

Q. You are the sole owner? A. Yes.

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Melnikow?

A. In Kiev—K-i-e-v—Russia.

Q. Did you try to go out of the United States recently, Mr. Melnikow?

A. Yes. I just returned from Canada last week.

Q. Were you permitted to enter Canada?

A. I was on the last occasion. On the occasion before I was deported.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Q. When was that?

A. The order for deportation is dated May 6, 1941.

Q. Were you made the subject of deportation proceedings in Canada? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what ground? [6239]

A. On the ground that I was not an accredited representative of an International Trade Union, and that I was entering Canada under contract.

The Immigration official who was responsible for this order did not tell the truth to the newspapers and published a report that it was because of doubt of my United States citizenship. He has since explained to me that he thought it would sound better if he put it on that basis, rather than make a labor matter of it.

However, within a couple of hours after I went back to Seattle they sent a message that I could come back and that all was a mistake.

I have the deportation order here if you would like to see it. [6240]

Q. You were served with a notice of your exclusion order, were you not?

A. I didn't get that.

Q. You were served——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Read the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing) ——with an order of your exclusion, were you not?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. Yes, sir. I have it right here.

Q. How does it read?

A. Just as I have read it a minute ago.

Q. May I see it? A. Certainly.

(The document referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You were examined here by the Canadian Immigration Officers at Vancouver, were you not?

A. Yes, sir; at the airport there.

Q. Sir? A. At the airport.

Q. At the airport in Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you given a hearing?

A. No. I was merely asked a lot of questions and then told that I would be barred. I asked whether the law had been changed and I was told, No, it hadn't been. And then—— [6241]

Q. (Interposing) Was there some question about whether or not you were a member of the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. Was the Communist Party mentioned? Was the Communist Party mentioned?

A. No, sir. The only ground that was mentioned was the one shown in the order as you have it.

Q. Did you take an appeal from this exclusion order?

A. I did, and I was admitted later upon orders from Ottawa.

Mr. Grossman: May I have that last answer, please?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you apply for an American passport before you went to Canada?

A. No. It isn't necessary to have an American passport in going to Canada.

Q. At that time? When was that? In what year?

A. May 6, 1941. I did have my identification papers.

Q. You had an identification card?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Issued where?

A. Well, I have a number of them. One is a transcript of my registration. I got that later. And as a voter in Alameda [6242] County, California.

Q. Did you have a registration card issued at an Immigration Office? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever discussed with leaders of the Communist Party, any leader of the Communist Party the policy of the Communist Party towards trade unions? A. No, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: Just one moment, please.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are you a citizen of the United States, Mr. Melnikow? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the occasion when you were first not permitted to enter Canada what was the reason for your trip to Canada?

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

A. I was to represent the three divisions of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America in an arbitration against the British Columbia Electric Railway, Limited.

Q. Do you know whether Harry Bridges took any position on job action in 1935?

A. Yes. He was opposed to it.

Q. Can you state what if anything he did to carry out [6243] that opposition?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose you can show individual acts.

Mr. Grossman: This matter was brought out in connection with the Sailor's Union of the Pacific, his position on job action.

Presiding Inspector: Not in relation with anything to Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Grossman: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: Not in relation with anything to Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Grossman: All right. It is not too important. His position is well known.

No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Would mass picketing be job action?

The Witness: No, sir. Job action relates to action on the job before a strike is called. That is, the people remain on the job and continue to draw their pay, but do things which they trust will force the employer's hand.

(Testimony of Henry P. Melnikow.)

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, at this time we rest our case [6244] except for the fact that we have a witness, Mr. Lord, who I think will be here tomorrow morning. We mentioned it to you, and naturally we are going to ask leave when he comes to put him on out of order.

Presiding Inspector: I think there will be no objection to that.

Mr. Grossman: Otherwise we rest our case.

Presiding Inspector: No, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Grossman: Could we have a recess now, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Call your witness, Mr. Del Guercio.

F. J. M. ERNEST

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. State your name, please.

A. F. J. M. Ernest.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. Portland, Oregon.

Q. What is your profession?

A. Physician and surgeon.

Q. And are you connected with any Governmental agency [6245] at this time?

A. I am with the Veteran's Administration.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Neuro-psychiatrist.

Q. For how long a period have you been so connected with the Veteran's Bureau?

A. Since 1922 I have been doing nothing but such work.

Q. Are you also a physician and surgeon?

A. I am.

Q. For how long a period?

A. 1904. I graduated in 1904.

Q. What college did you graduate from?

A. I am a graduate of Kansas; Post-Graduate of Rush, Chicago; Sanitary School of Lyon, France; and University of California Medical.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. Do you know a Richard Lovelace?

A. Yes.

Q. And will you state for how long a period you knew him and under what circumstances?

A. I have known him since he came to Oregon in, I think, 1929.

Q. And did you ever treat Richard Lovelace?

A. Yes. I took care of him—oh, I examined him on a number of occasions and he reported to the Veteran's Hospital [6246] at Portland, and he was admitted to our hospital on February 20th this year after having had a stroke, and he was under my supervision until he died on the 13th day of March.

Q. Now, you say that he was under your supervision until the time of his death? A. Yes.

Q. And for how long a period prior to his death had you been treating him at the Veteran's Bureau?

A. Pardon? I didn't get the question.

Q. For how long a period had you been treating him at the Veteran's Bureau prior to his death?

A. He was a Veteran of the World War and he had been to our hospital on a number of occasions previous to this last admission, and over a period of years ever since—I think I first knew him shortly after he came to Oregon, because he came up to the Veteran's Hospital. I didn't know him well or markedly until 1932 when he ran for Congressman, United States Congressman on the Communist ticket. Then in '34 he ran for the State Legislature on the same ticket. I knew him then, and two or three years later I began to know him better, and for the last two or three years I had been pretty closely associated with him.

Q. What was Mr. Lovelace's mental condition during the time that you knew him up until the time of his death?

A. Well, he was an intelligent, very conscientious, rather clever individual. He was bright, active.

[6247]

Q. Did you notice any mental impairment in his mental faculties in any period of time that you knew him and treated him?

A. Oh, no. Mentally alert.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to discuss Mr. Lovelace's reputation for truth and veracity in the community in which he lived? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all. Just one more question, if your Honor please. May I?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew a Mr. MacMickle who calls himself a "doctor"? A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss Mr. Lovelace's condition with a Mr. MacMickle? A. No.

Q. A Virgil MacMickle? A. No.

Q. Either over the telephone or otherwise?

A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: I would like to ask a few questions.

What is paranoia?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

The Witness: Paranoia is a mental sickness in which the [6248] individual has an exalted idea of his own ability and efficiency. It's a delusional state.

Presiding Inspector: Is it a well-recognized condition?

The Witness: Very well recognized.

Presiding Inspector: And is it easily recognizable?

The Witness: Easily recognizable.

Presiding Inspector: Now, will you state whether or not at any time up to the time that you say this man had a stroke whether he was suffering from paranoia?

The Witness: Oh, no.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to ask anything else?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Doctor Ernest, do you consider that you specialize in the field of psychiatry? A. Yes.

Q. Are you attached to the staff of the Veteran's Hospital in Portland? A. I am.

Q. Do you do any other work besides the work for the hospital?

A. Oh, no. I have been wholly employed by the Veteran's Administration; I mean, in full time.

Q. Is the work that you do for the hospital confined to the specialization of psychiatric work?

[6249]

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. Well, every member of a general hospital has to do general work as well as his specialty, but my work on that staff is neuro-psychiatry. For instance, I have to be the officer of the day when my turn comes and I have general care then of all patients.

Q. Now, for how long have you been specializing —rather, put it this way: For how long has most of your work in the Veteran's Hospital been within the field of psychiatry? A. Since 1922.

Q. Now, what is the practice in the Veteran's Hospital with respect to whether a patient is treated by one doctor or several doctors or a combination of those two methods?

A. Well, the staff of a Veteran's Hospital constitutes a clinic and his examination covers all the specialties. I mean, if he requires any special examination there is a member of the staff to do that.

Q. I see. Suppose a man returned several times to the hospital, is he treated or examined by the same doctor?

A. Well,——

Q. (Interposing) Generally speaking?

A. Generally speaking, no. A man is admitted to the hospital through the admission and diagnostic service, and there is one officer in charge of that service. So that any [6250] time he is admitted other than by the officer of the day he comes through that service, but his treatment will be according to the disablement for which he has been admitted.

For instance, if he is a cardiac case he will be sent to the cardiac ward. If it is a tuberculosis, then the tubercular specialist will have him. If he is a neurological case he will come under my supervision or neuro-psychiatric work, and g.u. and so on. Surgical work goes to the surgical service.

Q. Can you state when was the first time that you had occasion to examine Mr. Lovelace from a medical standpoint?

A. Oh, I — roughly speaking, I should say it might have been been the fall of '29 or the spring of '30. It was just after he had come to Oregon.

Q. And on that occasion was any treatment given him by you? A. No.

Q. On that occasion were there several examinations or only one?

A. I didn't get your question.

Q. Were there several examinations or only one on that occasion?

A. On that occasion he came in for examination for rating purposes.

Presiding Inspector: For what?

The Witness: For rating purposes. [6251]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Disability rating purposes?

A. For rating purposes; examination to determine whether he has compensation coming and how much, and they are examined in—any patient coming in that way will be examined by the different members of the diagnostic staff.

Q. When was the next time you had occasion to examine Mr. Lovelace?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. Well, it's over the period of years from that time on, until he was admitted the last time, I can't give you the dates of that.

Q. Can you make an estimate of the number of times, very generally, during that period that you either examined him or treated him?

A. Well, it would be rather hard to make an estimate. Possibly once in two years or such a matter. The regulations have been changed with reference to the number of times men are called in for examination for rating purposes.

Q. Would you state that you had examined Mr. Lovelace at no time except when he was brought in for rating purposes?

A. I never examined—oh, for rating purposes, yes. I have examined him at times when he was in the hospital for other conditions. For instance, he was hospitalized a time for a cardiac disease, for heart disease, and I reported on [6252] his condition at that time as part of the routine record.

Q. Do you remember any other occasion except the rating examinations when you examined Mr. Lovelace?

A. Well, that wasn't for rating purposes.

Q. Yes. Any others besides that one?

A. Oh, I don't recall any other time.

Q. Did you examine him for other than rating purposes after he came to the hospital in February of 1941?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. Oh, I didn't examine him at that time for rating purposes.

Q. For any purpose?

A. Oh, yes. That's for Apoplectic treatment purposes.

Q. And what was his condition when he came to the hospital in February of 1941?

A. On the 20th day of February? When he came in he was unconscious. He had just had a stroke and he was brought by ambulance.

Q. Were you the doctor who was primarily responsible for his treatment when he came to the hospital in February of 1941?

A. I was the doctor who made the examination and the diagnosis and recommended the treatment.

Q. What was your diagnosis at that time?

A. Well, generally speaking, apoplectic stroke.

Q. Had there been any medical history which tended [6253] you thought, to explain the stroke at that time?

A. Yes. The refined diagnosis was—I think I can probably—well, the diagnosis given on his death certificate—and, of course, that was arrived at after he had been admitted and after laboratory studies of various kinds had been made and after the treatment and final determination and death—was thrombotic embolism left brain, possibly or probably due to myocardial infarction, myofibrosis.

Q. What would that mean with reference to the condition of the brain at the time of the death? Could you put it in layman's language, please?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. Well, what it actually means is that at some time, and possibly when or about the time when he was last admitted to our hospital for treatment of heart disease, he probably had a coronary thrombosis—that is, one of the arteries of the heart occluded, that shut off the blood of a certain artery of the left ventricle and, as a result of that, the lack of blood supply and his ability to recover a fibrosis developed; and in those fibrous developments occasionally they will lose their own vitality enough so that a part of them will break off, and it is on the order of an organized clot.

Now, if one of those—a piece breaks off of this fibrous structure it slips into the circulation and goes out through the collateral artery, and in this case we explain it as being forced through the middie vaginal artery on the left, producing the deep vascular disturbance, as we [6254] called the stroke a while ago.

Presiding Inspector: That is, this clot, in layman's language, becomes lodged in one of the smaller arteries in the brain itself, and that occludes that artery and there is a lack of blood supply to part of the brain, and that makes the disturbance in the body?

The Witness: That's right. The usual blood supply to the brain is not—it has no collateral. This artery has so many branches and there are no collateral circulation from some other part. Now, when the piece broke off of the mural thrombus in the heart it became an embolus. It was something loose, a loose body in circulation. Then it went through and followed along with the blood stream until it got to the place where it couldn't go any further and then it blocked off all beyond that area. And that's the thing that happens that brings about the stroke.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you state, Doctor, whether you have had experience with any cases where such a blood clot as you found in the brain of Richard Lovelace interferred with the mental processes of a person having such a clot?

A. Will you repeat that question? I didn't understand it.

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you had any such experience with such blood [6255] clots on the question of whether they ever affect the mental processes?

Presiding Inspector: You mean before the stroke?

Mr. Grossman: Oh, yes. Before a stroke takes place.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose his blood clot lodges there within a very short time.

Mr. Grossman: Well, the Doctor hasn't testified to that. As a matter of fact, he testified that it probably began to form at the time he was previously in the hospital.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Didn't you, Doctor?

Presiding Inspector: And then at the time it became an embolism. An embolism is a floating body and it couldn't affect the brain until the embolism reached the brain.

The Witness: That's correct.

Presiding Inspector: That's elementary.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Could you state, Doctor, when you think was the first time that this fibrosis had developed in the brain?

A. We assume that it was in process of development ever since the previous time he had been hospitalized for heart disease.

Q. And when was that?

A. That was within a year or less; a few months. I can't give the dates exactly, because he was on another service and we don't remember those things very well. And in answer to [6256] your question, there would be no involvement of the patient's mental functions until the thrombosis took place, until the circulation was shut off, and after that many times there is no involvement of the mental capacity so far as thinking or reasoning or judgment is concerned. It depends on the area in which this embolus lodges.

Q. Well, was this in such an area that it could have affected the mental processes?

A. Well, it didn't in this case. This man was—after he came through the original shock of his stroke he cleared and became conscious and was perfectly familiar with everything going on in his environment. He wasn't able to speak because it shut off the motor area, which is Broca's area; so-called "Broca's area". He couldn't talk, but he understood everything you said to him and he smiled appropriately. He appreciated the things that were being done for him. He was a very splendid patient.

Q. In layman's language, ultimately this stroke came from the fact that the blood vessels were closed off or one blood vessel was closed off in the brain or at least that participated, did it, in causing the stroke?

A. Yes. The left middle cerebral artery was occluded.

Presiding Inspector: That was the stroke?

The Witness: That was the thing that caused the stroke, yes.

Presiding Inspector: By the "stroke" you mean the—— [6257]

The Witness (Interposing): The lodging in of the embolus in this stream where the vessel was too small for it to go any farther. That's the thing that caused the stroke.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Is it possible that this occlusion or cutting off of the blood stream took place gradually; in other words, that it was cut off in parts for some time before it was completely cut off?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. Oh, no. In an embolic thrombosis it is a slow process in comparison with a man being shot, for instance. The shock will come, but he will continue to lose certain physical ability for probably hours after the first impact because, as the embolus lodges and shuts off the circulation, then all tissue, all brain tissue supplied by blood will almost, well, shortly be converted into fat and products of that kind. So that that particular area becomes a cavity rather than a mass of tissue as it had been before, and as the embolus in its lodgment interferes with the blood supply, coagulation takes place around the original embolus and it increases in size and, as it does, the clotting of the blood behind it backs up and involves other vessels leading away from this main artery, and then you have a wider field of an involvement than you did have when the original embolus struck. [6258]

Q. Have you stated all the physical conditions of Mr. Lovelace that contributed to his death, or were there others that contributed to some extent to his death?

A. We are quite satisfied that we have stated all of the causes of death.

Q. Was your diagnosis generally the same before the autopsy—I assume there was an autopsy?

A. Yes.

Q. Was your diagnosis generally the same before the autopsy as it was after it?

A. The same diagnosis before and after.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. What was the condition of Mr. Lovelace when he was first given his disability rating?

A. Well, I am not qualified to answer that question, your Honor, because we are not permitted to do it without his, or someone's consent. Unless his file was subpoenaed and brought into court I couldn't quote from it. I couldn't give—we are not permitted to answer that question. I am not permitted to answer that question, even if I knew it, but I don't know it.

Q. What was his condition so far as your examination disclosed at the time he was first given a disability rating?

A. I wouldn't answer for the same reason. I have covered practically all the things with reference to my examination in what I have already stated. [6259]

Q. You mean you don't remember what his condition was so far as disclosed by your examination when he was first given a disability rating?

A. He had a disability——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): That is not what the witness has stated.

Mr. Grossman: It may not be, but I am trying to clarify his reason.

Mr. Del Guercio: He has given his reason.

Presiding Inspector: I would like to hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of F. J. M Ernest.)

Presiding Inspector: I think that question is clear.

Mr. Del Guercio: He already explained what he testified to.

Presiding Inspector: I am not quite sure.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the previous question and answer.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Grossman: When he stated the same reason as his previous answer, his previous answer was in part that he didn't know. I want to know whether it was for the same reason.

Presiding Inspector: He said he didn't know and couldn't [6260] testify at any rate, under the rules.

Mr. Grossman: I am concerned now with whether he remembers.

Presiding Inspector: He says——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): I don't think he has answered this because your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: Let me ask a question. Have you any recollection on the subject?

The Witness: Well, I haven't any recollection in detail, and apparently that is what he is trying to get me to say.

Presiding Inspector: You have such a recollection of his condition as any person dealing with him might have, a layman's recollection?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

The Witness: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: To which you apply your medical knowledge, of course?

The Witness: Well, if the records had been subpoenaed, your Honor, and they were here in Court, then I could testify accurately to all of the records and could give my findings, as well as the others—and especially I could give mine in detail—but we can't remember over a period of years—for instance, I can't tell you whether a man had neuritis in 1932, and paralysis in 1934. That is, I can't tell, give details about the things that we arrive at on our examination and remember them in detail to report [6261] on them years afterwards.

Mr. Grossman: Recognizing that his memory may not be as good as the records, I still think I am entitled to the witness' best recollection as to his condition as disclosed by his first examination of him. We are certainly not limited to the last examination.

Presiding Inspector: I think that you are entitled to that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I want your best recollection, doctor, of the condition of Mr.——

A. (Interposing): As far as——

Q. (Continuing): I want your best recollection of the condition of Mr. Lovelace, as disclosed by your first examination of him.

A. My recollection of him there was that he was——

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Just a moment —if it is permitted under the rules of the Veterans' Administration.

Presiding Inspector: You produced this witness, the Government produced this witness. I will allow the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Even if we did produce him——

Presiding Inspector: You produced him to show that he was not mentally affected.

Mr. Del Guercio: At the time prior to his death?

Presiding Inspector: At the time these various matters [6262] relate to. I will allow cross examination on that.

A. Well——

Presiding Inspector: Of course, if he comes in conflict with the rules he can state that; but he is asking for his recollection, if he has any.

A. Well, I remember Lovelace as a veteran, as a splendid sort of an individual who was quite bright and pleasant, efficient, intelligent, a kind of a fellow that was affable and knew what he was doing, and interested in everything going on about him. He was a conscientious sort of a chap, as I stated before. He had ideas of his own. He wasn't influenced too much by public opinion. He usually went into the subject in hand and familiarized himself with it and then made up his own mind and acted accordingly.

That was his picture when I first knew him, and that is his picture when I last knew him. There had been no change in his type of personality in all the years I have known him.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were there any neurological or psychiatric problems you discovered when you first examined him?

A. He never had any psychiatric problems in his case.

Q. How about neurological?

A. Well, that is the thing that I am not prepared to give in detail because I can't remember—I don't remember [6263] whether, as I said a while ago, whether he had neuritis, whether he had paralysis of the peripheral nerve, or whether he had some peculiar thing as a result of gunshot wounds that were reported in detail. I can't remember those things in detail.

Q. Do you remember whether, at the time you first examined him, there was any shell shock condition?

A. Oh, no. He wasn't the type of shell shock. He had a splendid army record. He saw action. He was the kind of a fellow that didn't boast about what he had been through but he never evaded anything. He was in touch with reality, and he was a real splendid citizen.

Q. Did you examine Mr. Lovelace more than any of the other doctors in the hospital, or did you just do your share in your specialty?

A. Oh, I just did my specialty.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. Do you remember whether you ever examined him on any occasion when he was not examined by doctors in all the other specialties that the hospital had?

A. You mean outside of the Veterans' Administration—no.

Q. In the Veterans' Administration—in other words, here is what I am driving at, Doctor!, You stated that when a patient came in for rating he was examined by doctors in the various specializations in the hospital? [6264] A. Yes.

Q. And as part of your specialized work you examined him. I want to know whether on any occasion you examined him when he was not examined by the doctors in the other specializations?

A. Now, I understand your question to be did I examine him as a neuro-psychiatrist for mental or nervous disturbances?

Q. No. That is not the question. The question is, did you ever examine him, not as part of a complete examination of all parts of him by all specialists?

A. When we make an examination our examination is independent of all others. We make a special examination. It is inclusive and conclusive as far as nervous and mental diseases are concerned.

Q. Was it true that whenever a man came in for examination as to his rating that he was examined as to every specialization or, rather, by every specialist from every field?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. No. A man comes in for rating purposes. He is examined by the man we call the General Examiner. Then he routes him around to the various specialists, according to his idea of what the man needs. If he has some definite service connected disability, something that has been rated or has been considered by the Legal Department and determined to be ratable, compensable, then always he will be examined [6265] by the specialist in that department.

If it was for paralysis of some sort he would come to me. If he had a service connected neuritis he would come to me. But if he had tuberculosis he would go to the T.B. specialist, or for heart disease he would be examined by the cardiac specialist—and for surgery and orthopedic things accordingly.

So the service connected disabilities are always examined by specialists and reported on for rating.

Q. Did Mr. Lovelace have a service connected disability? A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

A. I can't answer that question. I can't answer because I am not prepared to answer it.

Q. Was it in your specialized field?

A. No.

Q. Will you please explain then why, if the service connected disability of Mr. Lovelace, for which he came to the hospital for regular rating, was not in your specialized field, why you examined him on each occasion?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. He had gunshot wounds and as a result of gunshot wounds we have, in the areas involved, nerve supply which may at some time be active. For instance, a gunshot bullet or missile may be in the neighborhood of the peripheral nerve— [6266] by that I mean one of the nerves that comes out to the extremities after it leaves the neuro axis— and the missile may at times irritate the nerve and produce neuritis. As a result of his service connected gunshot wounds, or missile, which happens to be there, then the neuritis would also be service connected if it was present. At one examination it may be present and at another examination it isn't there, and he would be covered, that patient would be covered.

Q. Did Mr. Lovelace have neuritis?

A. Yes. He at times had involvement of the peripheral nerves, especially in—well, following his cardiac hospitalization treatment for his heart he had a good deal of trouble with his left brachial plexus, which means the nerves supply to the left upper extremity.

Q. Is neuritis within your specialization?

A. That is right.

Q. When was the first time that Mr. Lovelace developed any neuritis?

A. I can't answer that.

Q. To your knowledge?

A. I can't remember. How could I?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. Can you give me any kind of an estimate?

A. I really don't know. It may have been on the first occasion he came up in 1929 or 1930; and it may have been any other times in between. I don't know. [6267]

Q. Is it your statement, then, that—withdraw that. Is it correct that the only reason that you examined Mr. Lovelace was because of the presence or the possibility of neuritis?

Presiding Inspector: That isn't in accordance with his statement. He said it was routed to him.

Mr. Grossman: If he knows why he was routed to him he may say. I assume that the routing would indicate——

Presiding Inspector: You should have something shown about the routing.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Let's have the routing procedure. I assume it would be true that the routing, doctor, would give you some idea of the reason why a particular patient was being routed to you, is that correct?

A. That is usually the way.

Q. All right. And basing your answer on that knowledge which you received from the routing, Doctor, or any person who saw to it that Lovelace came to you for examination, will you state whether you ever examined Lovelace for any reason except neuritis, or the possibility of neuritis?

Mr. Myron: I object to that question, your Honor. He can ask him whether he received any or not.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow him to show it, if he can remember that.

A. I don't remember. [6268]

Presiding Inspector: Neuritis isn't the whole subject of the neurological field.

Mr. Grossman: It may be the only one that is traceable to the cause that Mr. Lovelace had.

Presiding Inspector: Maybe. He gave that, I suppose, as an example.

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know why, on any occasion, Mr. Lovelace was routed to you?

A. You are asking me to answer a question that I have already told you that, without the records I couldn't give the details. I don't remember just the answer to the question that you now have propounded.

Q. Do you remember the reason on any occasion, however general, why Mr. Lovelace was routed to you?

A. Well, there isn't any question about why he was routed to me, when he came to the hospital this last time, because he came to my service direct. He was routed to me, or I was asked for a conference while he was being treated for heart disease, on account of his complaint of a pain in his left upper extremity, and especially his shoulder.

Q. Do you remember any other?

A. No. Those are in rather recent years and I remember those.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. What did you find to be the cause of the pain in [6269] the shoulder or upper extremity?

A. It was a lack of nourishment. In cardiac cases the circulation isn't so good and the nervous system, like the rest of the body, is not adequately supplied; and then you get your neurotic or your neuritic pains.

Q. Before you came down here did you read the hospital record on Lovelace, or any portion of it?

A. No. The only thing I read was the death certificate. The records have been sent to Washington, D. C. After the death of a veteran the files are closed and sent to the central office.

Q. Do you know when they were sent to Washington? A. After his death.

Q. Do you mean to say that there are no records remaining in the veterans' hospital in Portland as to the physical condition of Lovelace at any time?

A. Well, I asked for them, because I wanted to refresh my memory before I came down here. The manager was away. The Chief Medical officer knew of only the file of the death certificates. We keep a copy and that is the one I reviewed.

Q. Did you speak to any doctor in the hospital, or formerly in the hospital, with respect to the mental, with respect to the physical or mental condition of Lovelace before coming down here?

A. You mean to help refresh my memory, or something like that? [6270]

Q. For any purpose?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Mr. Del Guercio: For any purpose? You mean for any purpose connected with Lovelace?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; certainly.

Mr. Grossman: I assume it would be connected with him.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

The Witness: May I have the question again?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Before coming down here did you speak to any physician about the physical or mental condition of Lovelace at any time?

A. Oh, well——

Q. (Interposing): I mean in the last, let us say, two or three months?

A. He died the 13th day of March—April, May, June—that is two or three months—his case came before the staff conference after death, who had the laboratory studies with the microscopic projection of slides, and the specimen examination, and that was shown to the whole staff, the case was presented to the whole staff. That is just one of the routine things we do with cases of this kind.

But I talked to no one.

Presiding Inspector: Did you demonstrate something there on the slides?

The Witness: Yes, sir. The slides—and a picture [6271] was graphically portrayed of exactly what I have told you.

Presiding Inspector: You see there was talk of that kind.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. After that time, when you had conferences in order to fix the cause of death, have you discussed Lovelace's physical or mental condition with any decor?

A. Well, when I spoke to the Chief Medical Officer asking him for the records to refresh my memory, we discussed, oh, just comments like one doctor would do to another, in regard to Lovelace; and the fact that when he came there on the 20th of February he practically was—I believe the remark was that he was practically the same as dead, except that he knew what was going on. He was conscious. He wasn't able to move or talk. It was just that sort of conversation. There wasn't anything with reference to his physical or mental condition.

Q. Was that the only discussion you have had with any doctors? A. Yes.

Q. Since the cause of death was finally fixed at your conference——

A. (Interposing): The cause of death was fixed by autopsy—it was verified.

Q. When was the discussion you had with this doctor is the hospital? [6272]

A. Dr. Brace—the C.M.O.—that would be on Saturday morning. I left on Sunday.

Q. Last Saturday?

A. This last Saturday.

Q. When was the first time you made any inquiry to see if there were any medical records in the hospital on Richard Lovelace?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

A. That Saturday morning.

Q. Do you recall where the medical history of Mr. Lovelece's, as given by him to you, or obtained from any other source——

Presiding Inspector: When he first came, you mean?

Mr. Grossman: At any time.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Continuing): ——contained any facts or alleged facts that caused you to investigate as to whether there was any psychiatric problem there?

A. All history is of record and when a man has been examined in one facility and transferred to another, or if he moves about, all his records go with him. And when we made our first examination we had all of the records that had been made before, ever since his application for compensation, and we considered all those records, as well as the history he gave us, at the time of our examination in arriving at our own conclusions.

Presiding Inspector: Are you testifying from general [6273] routine or from your memory of this particular case?

The Witness: That is general routine.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember anything in the history that caused you to investigate as to whether there was any psychiatric problems?

A. There wasn't anything in his history that I recall that indicated that he had ever had any nervous or mental—I mean, mental sickness.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. Temporary or permanent?

A. I don't recall anything either temporary or permanent.

Q. Now, is it your best recollection that you never examined Mr. Lovelace except when he was being examined for a rating, or for a possible change in the rating, or when he was in the hospital because of his cardiac condition, or when he came to the hospital because of the stroke?

A. I have no recollection of ever making any examination.

Q. Did you have any contact with Mr. Lovelace outside of the medical contact you have related in the hospital? A. Oh, yes.

Q. What was that other contact?

A. Well, I have been on the Executive Board of Post 1, American Legion, Portland, Oregon, for a number of years. In 1937 he came before the Executive Board in an effort to get [6274] back to the American Legion. We discussed the situation but when the minutes of the Executive Board were read on the Post floor, floor of the Post, they wouldn't permit him to come back. Dick was at that meeting. The Legionnaires weren't very careful about how—they stated that he had been a Communist and "Once a Communist, always a Communist," or something to that effect, and they didn't want him in our Post.

That is when I began to know him best and from then on I have more or less been in close contact with him inside and outside of the hospital.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

He was not admitted. We didn't accept him.

I think it was in 1939, because he was recommended by members of our Post who had special things to do with the subversive activities, he was considered by the Executive Board again and was admitted. Since that time he had been an active member of Post 1, American Legion.

I now am Second Vice Commander of the Post, and, as I said, I have been on the Executive Board for years before that. I had something to do with getting him back into the Legion because he has been—since he has come back he has been a very good Legionnaire and he has been attending meetings regularly. We meet every Monday night. At the same time he has been working on the various committees. He was Chairman of the Committee, active manager of a Committee to put on the [6275] Greek Relief, in which we invested some $2000, and he had charge of that and was working on that at the time of his death.

Q. Doctor, did you participate as a pallbearer, or honorary pallbearer, at his funeral?

A. Occasionally.

Q. I say, at his funeral?

A. No. I thought you asked that as a general question. For instance, I was an honorary pallbearer at a funeral here just recently in Portland.

Q. Did your Post provide funeral ceremony?

A. They did.

Q. For Mr. Lovelace? A. They did; yes.

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Q. You are sure you weren't one of the honorary pallbearers?

A. I wasn't a pallbearer at all.

Q. I mean in the sense—I assume the honorary pallbearers don't carry anything.

Presiding Inspector: You mean his name was published in the newspaper?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. There was a printed program put out for this funeral ceremony?

A. I can't answer that. I know I wasn't at his funeral.

Presiding Inspector: You know it is like places where [6276] there are going to be speeches—the announcements are not always carried out.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: People's names are posted in the newspapers, as well as honorary pallbearers, when they haven't been there.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. At least, you have a recollection of that?

Presiding Inspector: I think the Examiner would take judicial notice of that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. At least, you weren't at the funeral, that is definite? A. No.

Q. Did you ever have any social contact with Mr. Lovelace outside of the activities of the Legion Post? A. No. [6277]

Q. Now, you have described the mental condi-

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

tion of Mr. Lovelace, I have forgotten the terms you used, but you used such terms as "intelligent"——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): The record will show what terms the Doctor used.

Mr. Grossman: I understand. I am not changing them by restating them.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you have the same views with respect to the mental condition of Mr. Lovelace at any time when you knew that he was an active Communist?

A. Yes, for the reasons that I gave. He was one of those—he was a well educated chap and he had the faculty of going into things, and if you asked him why—in fact, at that appearance at the Post when they turned him down he explained why he got into the Communist Party and the difficulty he had in getting out. And it was a very instructive talk he made. He was a very intelligent sort.

Q. Did you as a psychiatrist consider that he gave a rational explanation of why he went into the Communist Party?

A. Yes, I certainly do. He said that the constitution and by-laws and the preamble or the creed, or whatever it is upon which Communism was based, was ideal for the human race and he didn't hesitate in giving a lot of reasons why. That was his statement when he went in, and his statement that the reason he went out was that, while that was the foundation [6278] of it, so far as he was concerned he found out that it was a racket and that was his explanation for getting out.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, at the present time we have completed our cross examination. It may be that we have absolutely finished it. At the same time, since we naturally didn't know that Doctor Ernest would testify—we would like some chance to check our records. We can do it without inconveniencing the Court if we adjourn fifteen minutes earlier and reconvene fifteen minutes earlier. We, therefore, would like the opportunity of continuing our cross examination after lunch and adjourn now.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is unusual.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I don't think that is very unusual. But do you want to re-examine him any further?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not at all.

Presiding Inspector: Have you another witness that you can put on?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. We won't break in for ten minutes.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps I'll decide that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps I'll decide that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I meant that, of course. We don't want to.

Presiding Inspector: But I will accept the suggestion.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have a matter, however, that I would [6279] like to take up at this time.

Presiding Inspector: In chambers?

(Testimony of F. J. M. Ernest.)

Mr. Del Guercio: No; right here in Court.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. You are excused for a moment, but don't go because they want to examine you at a quarter of two, perhaps.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have here a——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): Just one thing. Is it understood, Doctor Ernest, that—Doctor, you understand that we would like to have you back at two o'clock?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, he understands.

Doctor Ernest: Yes. The Judge just informed me.

Presiding Inspector: A quarter of two.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, a quarter of two.

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you through?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, I am through.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have here an affidavit from Virgil MacMickle in which he transmits a photostatic copy of certain diplomas. I offer this in evidence.

Mr. Grossman: We have no objection.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 287.) [6280]

Mr. Del Guercio: And I want to call the Court's attention to Virgil MacMickle's diplomas. The Court recalls his testimony regarding the diplomas he received and the places he received them.

Presiding Inspector: I remember that.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is one here, a diploma from the Stanhope High School, a photostatic copy. The next one is a diploma from—what purports to be a diploma from the American School of Naturopathy, Incorporated, 1905 under the laws of the State of New York, reading as follows:——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): Is it necessary that it be read?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I think it is very important in view of the testimony given by MacMickle.

Presiding Inspector: Counsel wants to point out something to the Presiding Examiner. I will allow him to do it because we have done this all the way through.

Mr. Del Guercio: Because of the volume of the Exhibits here I am afraid that the Court will not have time to look over each of the Exhibits.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I shan't read all the Exhibits.

Mr. Del Guercio: "Be it known to all to whom this presents shall come that Virgil MacMickle has received the full theoretical and practical course of instruction in all of the Branches of the Science of Naturopathy".

You will recall MacMickle's testimony that he attended [6281] that school in New York for just a period of six months, not longer than six months, and took a Post Graduate course.

"As prescribed by the Faculty of the American School of Naturopathy and Graduated with Honor in consideration of the high degree of ability attained, the American School of Naturopathy does by this instrument certify him to be a competent Naturopathy and commend him to public favor", signed by Benedict Lust, N.D., M. D. and Wm. F. Havard, N.D.

This is signed and sealed by the American School of Naturopathy, the 20th day of June, 1913.

The next one is a diploma from the MacFadden College of Physcultopathy. I don't know if I can pronounce that or not. I understand that that is physical education.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: "Physcultopathy".

Presiding Inspector: I am not familiar with the word.

Mr. Del Guercio: "Physcultopathy".

Presiding Inspector: I am also unfamiliar with that word.

Mr. Del Guercio: Chicago, Illinois.

You will recall Mr. MacMickle's testimony. He said he attended the American College of Drugless Physicians in Chicago, Illinois for about two years.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I recall the testimony. [6282]

Mr. Del Guercio: And this reads: "To all to whom this writing may come, Greetings.

"Be it known that Virgil MacMickle having successfully completed the Post-Graduate course of Study of this College and having complied with all other requirements for graduation from this Institution has been declared a Doctor of Physcultopathy", and signed by, among others, Frederic S. Goodrich, D.D., which I suppose is Doctor of Divinity. I don't know. And John G. Speicher. I can't make the initials out there, and another person.

Presiding Inspector: You may have it marked in evidence. We will take a recess until——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Sir? I have a few more documents on this.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court will recall that MacMickle testified that he was authorized to call himself a Doctor by virtue of the diploma received from this American School of Naturopathy.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have here, and I offer it in evidence, under the seal of the State Department of Education, the State of New York, reading as follows:

"I, J. Hillis Miller, Associate Commissioner of Education of the State of New York, do hereby certify that an examination of the records of this Department does not reveal [6283] that the American College of Naturopathy was ever incorporated by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York; that said college was not in 1910 or subsequent thereto a recognized college in the State of New York.

"The records further reveal that Benedict Lust and Virgil MacMickle have not been licensed to practice medicine in the State of New York. No person unless licensed may legally practice medicine in such state.

"I further certify that the degree of 'Doctor of Naturopathy' does not appear among the degrees in course or the honorary degrees approved by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York.

"In witness whereof", the usual affidavit.

Mr. Gladstein: We object to the offer and we move that that portion which was read into the record be stricken upon the ground that the document offered is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and no proper foundation has been laid for its introduction in evidence, and it is also hearsay on which no possible cross examination——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): It is an official document. As a matter of fact, all educational institutions—I happen to know and I suppose you would be willing that I should take judicial notice of the laws of the State of New York.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct. [6284]

Mr. Gladstein: We have no objection to your taking judicial notice of the laws.

Presiding Inspector: All educational institutions must be incorporated under the Regents.

Mr. Grossman: Has that always been true?

Presiding Inspector: I think so, ever since I practiced law.

Mr. Grossman: Because we are dealing with a period back—what is it? 1911.

Presiding Inspector: I was admitted in '95.

Mr. Gladstein: We renew our objection to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it. But you may, of course, attack it by any reference to the laws or anything of that kind or any regulations of the Regents of the University or any department in the State of New York.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 288.)

Presiding Inspector: We accept those certificates in relation to colleges even outside of the State of New York.

Mrs. King: We have no objection to your taking judicial notice of the fact that the school was not incorporated under those laws, but the fact is that what knowledge Doctor MacMeikle had of the situation is another problem. [6285]

Presiding Inspector: Oh, that doesn't appear, of course. That doesn't establish that he had any knowledge.

Mrs. King: Yes, and that is the reason we regard it as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose that he has to take judicial notice.

Mr. Del Guercio: Before I offer these I want to call the Court's attention to the fact that MacMickle, when he appeared on the stand here, testified that he did not know that Doctor Lust—Benedict Lust had been convicted of unlawfully issuing degrees. I have a number of certified copies of convictions of Doctor Lust for publishing advertisements relating to venereal disease, two of them for unlawfully conferring a degree.

Mr. Gladstein: We object to all those as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose Doctor Lust's character is in question, if he is "Doctor" Lust. I will exclude those.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is in question. Everything MacMickle claims to be he got from Doctor Benedict Lust.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: So we go to the source to see the sources.

Presiding Inspector: You have made the offer. You may [6286] have them marked for identification.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will offer them for identification.

Presiding Inspector: I won't receive them in evidence.

(The documents referred to were marked Government's Exhibit No. 289 for identification.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I have just one other document, your Honor.

You will recall another witness—I don't believe he was a character witness—that the Defense called, a Charles A. Yeoman. That's the man here that was in doubt as to whether he had married a girl the first time.

Presiding Inspector: Was his name "Yeoman"?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yeoman; Charles A. Yeoman.

Presiding Inspector: Are these records of conviction?

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: Are these records of conviction?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. It is a record of conviction. He testified that he was not convicted of a felony in the State of Oregon.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I remember that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am not speaking about the other charge here in Los Angeles. This is a charge in Oregon.

Mr. Gladstein: Are these the same?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, we wonder about this question. [6287] This is a conviction that Mr. Yeoman admitted. I don't think in any sense this is inconsistent with the admission he made on the stand. That being true, if it is,—and I think very definitely it is—then we think this is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: It would only be——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): Confirmatory as a statement.

Presiding Inspector (Continuing): ——confirmatory and perhaps it is a little fuller than his statement.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will receive it. It is one, isn't it? Just one conviction?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, in Portland.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 290.)

Mr. Del Guercio: As I recall Yeoman's testimony in that connection, he said that he was convicted of petty larceny or petty theft.

Mr. Grossman: Maybe it is petty larceny. There is no way of knowing. It is called "larceny" and it gives the amount. Unless we look at the statutes in Oregon we wouldn't know.

Presiding Inspector: Those sums are different in different statutes.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I now offer in evidence a certified [6288] copy of conviction in the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Multnomah in the case of The State of Oregon vs. Charles A. Yeoman.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think there was a little doubt in his mind as to the sum.

Mr. Grossman: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: So that this will explain that at least.

Mr. Del Guercio: I desire to call the Court's attention to the fact that this document shows that Charles A. Yeoman was accused of the crime of larceny, by information filed in the Municipal Court for the City of Portland, County of Multnomah, State of Oregon, and having appeared before the Honorable Robert Tucker, Judge of the above-entitled Court, and waived indictment therefor, the undersigned, District Attorney for the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon, files this Information against the said Charles A. Yeoman, and charges him with the crime of larceny, committed as follows:

"The said Charles A. Yeoman on the 14th day of September, A.D., 1935, in the City of Portland, County of Multnomah, State of Oregon, then and there being, did then and there unlawfully and feloniously take, steal and carry away certain personal property, to-wit:——"

And then it won't be necessary to read that.

". . . . of the total aggregate value of $278.00, contrary to the statutes in such cases made and provided, and against the [6289] peace and dignity of the State of Oregon".

Presiding Inspector: Is there anything else before recess?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a recess until a quarter to two.

(Whereupon at 12:25 o'clock P.M. an adjournment was taken until 1:45 o'clock P.M. of the same day.) [6290]

After Recess
1:40 o'clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

Mr. Grossman: We have no further questions of Dr. Ernest.

Presiding Inspector: Then the Doctor is excused unless——

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio entered the hearing room.)

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon. They said they have no further questions of Dr. Ernest, and unless you have some questions of the Doctor he is excused.

Mr. Del Guercio: No, I have not.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused, Doctor. Next witness?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment.

(Witness excused.)

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: You have been sworn?

The Witness: I have.

Presiding Inspector: You continue under the oath.

The Witness: I do.

Presiding Inspector: Anything you say is under the oath already given.

The Witness: Yes. [6291]

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your name?

A. Maurice J. Cannalonga.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Are you the same Maurice J. Cannalonga who appeared in this proceeding here and have given testimony? A. I am.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, do you remember the testimony you gave here in this court the last time you appeared here? A. I do.

Q. Was all that testimony true and correct?

A. It is.

Q. Now, when did you complete testifying in this case, the last time, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. It was on a Thursday.

Q. On April 17, do you recall? A. Yes.

Q. 1941? A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell the Court what happened after you completed testifying here, starting from the time you left the stand?

A. Well, I left here and caught a train back to Seattle—I think it was an Express—and I got to Seattle on Friday evening about 8:00 o'clock. Then I went out to the [6292] house.

The next morning I went down to the union hall to register. I got down there and went in there and saw the business agent. He looked at me—his name was Burt Cole—and he said, "You got yourself in a pretty bad spot."

I said, "Yes, I believe I have."

He says, "Well, anyway, I have got a good job for you. I want you to take it."

I didn't intend to ship. I was going to wait for my old ship, the Clevdon. The Chief Engineer and the Ship's Delegate had made arrangements for me to go back on it.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

He said, "We are in kind of a spot now. Charlie got off the West Cussetta in Victoria to go out on one of the new ships."

Charlie is another electrician.

So I said, "Well, I don't want to ship." I says, "I will see you Monday. I will think it over and see you Monday."

He said, "Well, think it over pretty serious because we can't get electricians for the ships, and we want you to take this for we know you can handle it."

So I went down Monday morning and he got ahold of me and he says, "We are in a tough spot, Blackie. We have got to have a man and we can't get no electricians. How about taking it?"

I said, "O.K., I will take it." I said. "As soon as I [6293] can get relief later on I will quit it."

Q. On what ship was that?

A. The West Cussetta.

Q. The West Cussetta?

A. Yes, a Maritime Commission Ship.

Q. And that was lying in Portland at the time?

A. No, Seattle.

Q. In Seattle?

A. In Seattle, yes. Well, you want a brief outline.

Q. Yes, sure. A. O. K.

Presiding Inspector: Go right ahead. He interrupted to have it straightened out in some way something about which he was in doubt.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. (Continuing): Ah, uh-huh (Affirmative). Let's see. Then——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You said you would take if.

A. (Continuing): I took the job and I went down aboard ship and reported to the Chief Engineer and then asked him if I could get off in the afternoon about two o'clock so I could go down and see the Draft Board as I hadn't taken a physical examination yet and I had been notified on the East Coast and again in Portland just before I came down to testify.

And he said "O. K." And I went down and saw the Draft Board and tried to make arrangements with them to get a physical [6294] examination right then. And they said, "Come back Wednesday."

Well, on Wednesday the ship was in Tacoma and then from there. from Tacoma we went down to Portland and we got to Portland and a longshoreman came aboard to load cargo, and my job was electrician's, checking up on electric winches and seeing that everything was in proper shape.

I met quite a few longshoremen that I knew and they wanted to know why I testified against Bridges and I told them that I testified mainly against the Communist Party and what it stood for. And then I think that's the day Craycraft came aboard on a Thursday, yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let me interrupt you there. When did the West Cussetta arrive in Portland, do you remember?

A. I believe it was Thursday.

Q. Thursday. Was that May the——

A. (Interposing): Thursday or Friday.

Q. April 30th, is that correct?

A. May the 30th, yes.

Q. April 30th?

A. April 30th. Correct. And, oh, there was quite a few fellows that came aboard ship and asked me the same question why I testified against Bridges. And I think it was three or four days later that Crayeraft came aboard. He had some meeting on a Friday to go to. I think it was an Executive Board meeting of some sort, and, well, anyway he talked to me. And the [6295] first thing he said that down in San Francisco he heard that the FBI had a Mann Act charge against me and that I had transported a woman from Reno, I believe, to Seattle. And I looked at him and I says "Christ! You're crazy!"

So, anyway, he talked a while and he said he had to go and he had this meeting to go to and he would be back later on that night. So as he was leaving the gangway another fellow stopped him and asked Crayeraft—he says "What's the status of Cannalonga?" And Crayeraft says "Just hold everything up."

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"Well," he says, "The members want to know," because if I am not mistaken that same day a picture of me appeared in the Voice of the Federation as a stool pigeon and labor spy. So I was kind of burned up over it. So he said he would come back that night and, well, he came back that night and there was a couple of fellows in the room drinking with me. We had a bottle of rum out and some Coca Cola and I gave him a drink and he called me aside. He says "Well," he says "I want to talk to you." He says "I don't want to talk to you in front of a bunch of fellows and I don't want to be seen on the ship."

So I told him "Well, I have got a little work to do back in the shop. If you want to come back there you can go ahead and come back and talk to me while I am working."

So he says "OK." And we got back in the shop and he mentioned that Bridges couldn't understand why I appeared against him and that he was worried over me and said that the FBI had [6296] some kind of a hold on me. And at the time I told him, I says, "No, they didn't have anything on me." So well, he said he was leaving, that Gladstein would be up on the following day, Saturday, and he wanted to talk to me. And I says "Well, I don't want to see Gladstein."

"Well," he says, "You should talk to him. They are worried about you down in 'Frisco."

And so I says "Yes, I would like to see him and have him explain to me in regards to the piece that appeared in the Voice of the Federation and that they had already started a campaign against me in the papers being a stool pigeon and a labor spy."

And so he says he will see me on the following day. And the following day, Saturday, which was my birthday—so I started hitting the bottle in the morning doing a little celebrating and had some of the fellows aboard ship in for a drink or so. Then I think it was around three o'clock that I met Craycraft. I am not sure of the exact time, and most of what so-called happened up in that hotel room—I am still hazy as the devil of what was said or done up there.

By Mr. DeGuercio:

Q. Where were you when you met Craycraft on Saturday?

A. I think he came aboard ship and we walked out to the car or I went out to the dock and met him. [6297]

Q. Well, did he tell you where he wanted to take you?

A. Yes. He said he was going to take me up to see Gladstein.

Q. And do you know where he took you?

A. Yes. I think it was the Clyde Hotel.

Q. Clyde Hotel. And where in the Clyde Hotel did he take you?

A. That's in Portland.

Q. No. Where? Did he take you to a room in the Clyde Hotel?

A. Yes, in the hotel room.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And who was in the room when you arrived there?

A. I think just Gladstein, Craycraft and myself.

Q. Now, will you tell us what happened in that room? What was the first thing that was said when you met—is this the Gladstein that you mean here?

A. Yes, that's the Gladstein. (Indicating)

Q. What was the first thing that happened when you saw Gladstein?

A. Let's see now.

Q. That you remember.

A. I remember—it is still vague as hell in my mind. I remember one instance where I think I brought up in regards to the Voice of the Federation, and another one where he said they had the backing of Murray and Lewis and political backing and [6298] physical backing.

Q. Who said that, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I don't know whether it was Gladstein or Craycraft. I think it was Craycraft.

Q. Well now, will you repeat that again? What was said?

A. Well, they said that they had financial backing and backing of Lewis and the CIO and Murray, and that they had physical backing also.

Q. And that was said by either Mr. Gladstein here——

A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. (Continuing) ——or Craycraft?

A. Or Craycraft.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Or, in any event, it was said in the presence of Mr. Gladstein? A. Yes.

Q. That is in Mr. Gladstein's hotel room there in Portland, Oregon? A. Yes. [6299]

Q. Will you proceed and tell us, please, what else happened in Mr. Gladstein's hotel room?

A. I believe we were in the room about an hour, and I left and went back to the ship. I got back to the ship and the first one I met—I went in a room and was in this room a while and had a couple of more drinks, and I came out and the first—I was going into the salon for dinner—and the first man I met in the passageway was the Purser, and he said, "I don't know how in the hell you can walk around," he says, "with that load you are carrying but, God damn, you sure can do your work," or words to that effect.

I beg your pardon for the swearing.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. We can stand it.

A. (Continuing) I said, "Well, as far as the job is concerned," I says, "I know my job and I have been putting in some pretty long hours." In fact it was from, I believe 59 hours overtime, besides my regular eight hours a day the first week, and 58 or so the second week, and I was pretty well pooped out; in other words, you know, from lack of sleep and—well, you can't exactly explain it. You have to go through the same thing yourself to understand it.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Craycraft go back with you, from Gladstein's hotel room, to the ship?

A. Yes, he did. In fact, he stopped—I had him pick me [6300] up a bottle. I didn't have one of those—what you call it?—Liquor permits. I didn't have a liquor permit so he got me a bottle of Government House rum, and I got half a dozen bottles of Coca Cola.

Q. Did he come on board the ship with you?

A. Yes; he came aboard ship. I gave him a drink.

Q. How long did he remain on the ship?

A. That I couldn't recall.

Q. Will you tell us, proceed from that point on?

A. Well, they worked cargo that night.

Q. Were you working that night?

A. Yes. As luck would have it, nothing broke down either. So I was all right.

Just as they knocked off, I think it was nine o'clock or so, one of these winches did go haywire and I got up—I had went to sleep—and I think I got up at three o'clock in the morning.

Q. That was Sunday morning?

A. Sunday morning—I had the night Mate wake me up at three o'clock to fix the winch; otherwise I never would have been able to fix it.

After I got it fixed, my head was a little big so I started in again and started to do some more drinking.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you meet anybody on this Sunday morning, that is, either Mr. Craycraft or any other longshoreman? [6301]

A. I think Craycraft came down that morning and wanted to know if I could get off.

Q. Look, Mr. Cannalonga, let's go back to this hotel room when you were with Craycraft and Gladstein here. Do you remember anything being said about Gladstein wanting to see you again either that day or the next day?

A. I believe so. I am not sure. It is hazy.

Q. What do you recall as to whether any arrangement was made to see you again?

A. (Pause).

Q. Just your best recollection. If you don't remember, say you don't know.

A. I don't believe I remember.

Q. Then you saw Craycraft on Sunday?

A. Yes. I think I did Sunday morning some time. He said something about calling him up at a grocery store when I could get off.

Q. Did you call him up?

A. I believe I did; yes, I did.

Q. And then what happened? Did you meet Craycraft?

A. I went out on the dock, to the dock office and called up; yes. Then I remember I went back to the ship and got another drink, and then I went out on the dock and went outside there, and he came along in a car and picked me up.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Was anybody with Craycraft when he picked you up [6302] that Sunday morning?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Where did he take you?

A. I believe we went up to the Clyde Hotel and I remember yes, we went up to the Clyde Hotel.

Q. Who did you meet at the Clyde Hotel?

A. It was Gladstein up there again.

Q. In his, Gladstein's room?

A. Yes, in his room, and Craycraft.

Q. Did you have any conversation there in Gladstein's room that Sunday?

A. I believe we did have some kind of an argument and I believe the outcome of the argument, either one of them said, "Well, what are you afraid of"?

I said, "Nothing."

I think I told Craycraft if he wanted to work me over he could at the time.

You see, it is pretty hazy. I wouldn't want to swear that I did and didn't—you know, after all, things like that, when you are not sure.

I think we did get in a car and started for some place.

Q. Who; you, Gladstein and Craycraft?

A. Yes.

Q. You went out of the hotel room and got into a car? A. Yes. [6303]

Q. Where did you go?

A. I remember going into the elevator; I remember that part of it, going into some building; and into some room where there was three or four other people in there.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Was Gladstein there?

A. Well, he must have been; he was with me.

Q. Was Craycraft there?

A. Yes; I am quite sure he was.

Q. Did you know anybody who was there?

A. No. Some lawyer—some lawyer's office, if I am not mistaken.

Q. What took place in this office?

A. Well, as far as I can remember, I remember being out in the hallway and Craycraft was out there and asked me to go back in.

I said, "No. Why should I go back in there? What are you guys trying to pull?"

And then I went into the toilet and I think I heaved a little. Then I came back out again and went back in the lawyer's office. And there was mentioned something about the Mann Act, and I turned around and walked out on them.

He came out again and asked me to come back.

Q. Who came out?

A. Craycraft. I says, "No, I am going down to the ship."

I went back down to the ship. Then I got aboard ship [6304] and had some supper.

That night I believe Craycraft or Mowery, one of them, came down and—the whole thing is hazy as the devil.

Q. Do the best you can.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, I am trying to. Anyway, I got back aboard ship.

Q. Did you see Craycraft, you say?

A. I believe so, I am not quite sure.

Q. You say Mowery might have come down there? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who Mowery is?

A. Yes; I know Jack Mowery.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. I knew him, met him during the 1936-1937 strike in Portland.

Q. Is he a member of the Communist Party?

A. He wasn't then; no.

Q. Was he later? A. I don't know.

Q. Then what happened? Did Craycraft say anything to you that Sunday on the ship after you left the lawyer's office?

A. Oh, I believe he wanted me to go back and see Gladstein again, and I wouldn't do it.

Then the following day there was quite a few fellows that [6305] came aboard to see me.

Q. That was Monday?

A. Yes, Monday—and I do know Monday night Craycraft and Mowery was aboard ship and Craycraft wanted me to write a note to Harry and stating I would be down there, and stating I would be down to see him.

I told him that I didn't want to write a note. I said, "What for"?

He said, "We will take you down and you can talk to Harry and kind of straighten things out."

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

I said, "No."

He said, "Well, why don't you write a note anyway. It will make him feel better."

I said, "O.K. I will write a note."

I wrote what he told me to write. Then he asked me to sign my name and I signed it "Blackie," which is my nickname.

He said, "What do you sign it that way for"?

I says, "That is good enough. He will know who wrote it."

He said, "You should sign your name."

I said, "No, let it stand that way as 'Blackie'."

Q. Who asked you to write a note to Bridges?

A. Craycraft. Then I think I went and made some sandwiches. I had a bottle and we were drinking out of it. I think I went to the pantry and made up a half a dozen sandwiches and brought them back in. [6306]

On the ship they have a night lunch for the crew and you just go and help yourself and make these sandwiches. When anybody comes, you see, regardless of who it is, you always play host to them.

And then I believe—oh, yes—when I got down to Portland I think I had been there about a week and I had called up the hall asking them to get me a man to relieve me, for the job was getting me down. I was putting in too long hours. I had just gotten off a ship. So they said they would do their best, and as soon as they could get a man I could quit the job and then go back up to Seattle. I wanted to go back up to Seattle and go to a place of mine out on Hood Canal.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Well, they couldn't get a relief and, I believe, Monday night they mentioned—— [6307]

Q. Did you tell Crayeraft what you were doing, that you were trying to get off the ship?

A. Oh, yes. He knew that. In fact, the Chief Engineer I notified him, and the port engineer previous to that and they didn't want me to leave the ship, and they claim I have been the best electrician they ever had on there. But I told them that the job was too much, that I was putting in too long hours and the ship was in pretty bum shape.

So then it was either Jack or Rosco Crayeraft suggested that if I was going to Seattle they would give me a ride up. They had to go up anyway. And so I worked Tuesday and I think I left the ship Wednesday morning.

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, before you proceed any further I want to show you here Alien's Exhibit 24 and ask you if that is the note you wrote and signed "Blackie"? A. That's it.

Q. And to whom was that to be addressed or to whom were you told that that was being addressed?

A. I think he said Harry Bridges.

Q. Crayeraft did? A. Yes.

Q. And is that all in your handwriting?

A. Yes, that is my handwriting.

Q. And you gave this to who?

A. Crayeraft.

Q. To give to whom? [6308]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't know.

Q. Well now, you say on this Monday here before you saw Craycraft again four or five longshoremen came aboard the ship to see you?

A. Yes, there was quite a few of them.

Q. What did they say?

A. They all mentioned the same thing, why I testified against Bridges.

Q. Now, were there any longshoremen employed on the ship that also asked you the same thing?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. How many of them?

A. Oh, Christ! About half the longshoremen on the ship.

Q. Now, did you see anybody else Monday night?

A. Yes. I think there was somebody else. I had been working and doing something and I had just gotten—how was that? Oh, I was—yes, I was taking a little nip in a room and this fellow showed up and he said he was Chairman of the Defense Committee, Bridges, and he wanted to know why I testified against Bridges.

Q. Had you ever seen him before?

A. No, I don't believe I have.

Q. Did he tell you his name?

A. I believe he did. [6309]

Q. Was it Rodman?

A. Yes, something like that.

Q. And he said he was from the Bridges Defense Committee? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What did he say as far as you can remember of what he said? Will you tell us all that he said?

A. All that he said? Well, he mentioned he was surprised that I appeared against Bridges and they all figured that the FBI had something on me and they were holding the rap over my head. And I told them, I says "No, they have never had anything on me. In fact, my record is as clean as a whistle." And I pointed out—I don't know whether it was him or Craycraft—that they could trace where I had been and what I had done from back to 1927 right to this day.

Q. What had you been doing from 1937?

A. '27.

Q. '27 to the present time?

A. Well, in 1927 I put a year in the Coast Guard and then in '28 I had been on the American Pioneer Steamship Company out of New York and we were gone about a year, and then on the West Coast, '29, I was on various tankers and then I was on various Dollar Steamship vessels and American Mail Line ships, and then I got off of one of the Dollar boats in '34 and went out on strike; was on strike all during the 1934 strike in San Francisco. And then I shipped on one of the [6310] States Line Ships to the East Coast; made a trip to the East Coast and got off—that was right after the '34 strike, and——

Q. (Interposing): Let me put it this way, Mr. Cannalonga. From 1927 until the present time have you ever been on the beach long enough to have taken a trip around the United States overland?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No. You see, in the first place, from '34 on we have what we call a shipping register and to ship out of that particular port you have to go on the shipping list and you register and then you have to go to meetings every two weeks. Otherwise, if you don't do that you go on the bottom of the list and you can't ship unless you do register in the union hall. You see, we have complete control over hiring.

Q. And your record there is available?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. As to what you have done from the time——

A. (Interposing): Oh, yes. From 1935 to the present.

Q. Now, have you ever been in Nevada?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been to Reno, Nevada?

A. No. In fact, I have never been off the coast states.

Q. By the coast states you mean Washington——

A. (Interposing): Washington, Oregon and California. I have never been in any of the inland states.

Q. Did your ever go across the country overland? [6311] A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Let us say from Massachusetts to the West Coast here.

A. No.

Q. Or the other way around? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You were born in Massachusetts, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. You say that every time you went from the East Coast to the West Coast or from the West Coast to the East Coast you went by ship?

A. By steamship.

Q. And you have never been in any of the states in the West other than the coast states?

A. No.

Q. Now, let's see. To go back to this Monday night, that is the day following your conversation with Mr. Gladstein and Craycraft.

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. And now you were at the point where Craycraft had seen you the Monday night, is that right?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Now, what happened Tuesday, the following day? [6312]

A. I think that's the day I quit the ship.

Q. What?

A. It was either Tuesday or Wednesday I quit. Let's see. Tuesday.

Q. Would dates mean anything to you?

A. It would help, yes.

Q. Let's see. Sunday was May the——

A. (Interposing): May the 4th Sunday was.

Q. This is for the purpose of refreshing his memory. I have some time-sheets here on the West Cussetta. Would they help you in refreshing your memory? A. Yes, very much.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What are those, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, it's my overtime record from the time I was on the ship until I left it. It gives the overtime started until it ended and then the number of hours and the jobs that I was doing.

Q. You were in Gladstein's, or in that attorney's office there on Sunday. That would be May the 4th, wouldn't it? A. Yes.

Q. All right. And the Monday, the day following, would be May the 5th. Now, what happened on May the 6th, the next day, Tuesday?

A. I believe that's the day they offered me a ride to [6313] Seattle.

Q. Who offered you a ride to Seattle?

A. Craycraft and Mowery. They said they were going to Seattle and they would give me a ride up there.

Q. Did you ask them for a ride?

A. Oh, no.

Q. What did they say about that?

A. They says "Well, if you are going up to Seattle"—I told them I was pretty sure that I would get a relief because the ship was about due to sail and that I didn't want to go out on it. And they said, "Well, if you are going to Seattle we'll give you a ride up. We're going up that way."

Q. Did you take up their offer?

A. What?

Q. Did you take up their offer to give you a ride? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you see Craycraft or Mowery or anyone else on Wednesday?

A. Oh, no. I was gone Wednesday.

Q. When did you leave the ship?

A. About eight o'clock in the morning.

Q. About eight o'clock in the morning?

A. Just previous to that the night mate, he gave me a call about six o'clock. They were going to start working [6314] cargo at seven and he gave me a call at six and he told me, he says—he says "You're in a pretty bad spot." And I says "What do you mean"?

"Well" he says "There has been a car outside the dock all night". He says "One of the Inspectors, Immigration Inspectors has come aboard and had checked to see if you was all right", and he says "They have been watching you for quite awhile now".

So I figured it was time to "take a powder". So I saw the first assistant and I told him that I was going to leave, and he told me—he says "Yes, you are in a pretty tough spot", he says.

I says 'Well, I will leave all my gear aboard". And he says "Yes, you can leave that aboard and we'll take care of it for you". So he says "Watch yourself".

And so I picked up a couple of fans and walked off the ship with a couple of fans and headed for this shore side electric shop that were doing a lot of work for us, the Marine Electric.

Q. What is the name of that shop?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. The Marine Electric.

Q. The Marine Electric Shop?

A. Yes, in Portland. And then I asked him to give me a lift to Vancouver and I wanted to catch a bus. So I caught a bus and went as far as Tacoma and then in Tacoma I took a cab [6315] and went down the highway and into Seattle, then I changed again and then I got my car and another fellow came down and picked up my clothes, and I had left the car—left him at Olympia and he came back as far as Olympia, and then I got my car and I beat up in the Olympic mountains,

Q. What did you do in the mountains?

A. Well, I did a little fishing.

Q. No drinking? A. No.

Q. Now, to go back to the day that you were in Gladstein's room there, in the hotel room on Saturday, that would be about May 2nd?

A. Saturday May the 3rd.

Q. May the 3rd?

A. Yes. I remember Saturday.

Q. May the 3rd, yes.

A. It is my birthday.

Q. Do you remember any other conversation that you may have had with Gladstein or Craycraft?

A. Yes. They were hammering about that——

Q. (Interposing) Concerning the FBI particularly. Was anything said about the FBI?

A. Oh, yes. They mentioned that the FBI was using Gestapo methods or words to that effect.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, who said that? [6316]

A. I believe it was Gladstein.

Q. Did he say that he knew all about Gestapo methods or anything like that, that he was familiar with them? A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Was anything mentioned about O'Neil?

A. I believe there was, yes, in regards to how he was getting—they made him testify and that he's arrested now and—how was that now? The best of my recollection was that he had mentioned O'Neil and how the FBI had used Gestapo methods on him; words to that effect.

Q. And did they say anything else about the FBI? Let me ask you this question, Mr. Cannalonga. Did either Gladstein or Craycraft suggest to you, if you remember, that you had been intimidated and threatened by the FBI?

A. Oh, yes, yes. I remember now what the argument was about. They kept hammering at me in regards that I must—that the FBI forced me to make statements that wasn't true. And I believe I told him that every statement I had made on the stand here previous was the best of my knowledge. And I think he harped about Schneidermann, too.

Q. Who did that? A. Gladstein.

Q. What did he say about Schneidermann?

A. Well, that I was all wet and wrong on that regards of Bridges being at the same meeting as Schneidermann in that [6317] private home.

Q. Do you remember anybody saying anything about the FBI having you "cold"?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Having me what?

Q. Cold? A. I didn't get that.

Q. Did you hear anybody saying anything about the FBI having you "cold"?

A. Oh, "cold". I believe that——

Q. (Interposing) At the time that you were making these statement to the FBI men?

A. Oh, I believe he did mention that "They must have had you cold".

Q. Do you remember who said that?

A. It was either Craycraft or Gladstein.

Q. To get back to the first time you met Craycraft, Mr. Cannalonga, did he mention anything about the FBI must have had a Mann Act charge against you? A. Yes, he mentioned that.

Q. And did he also say—give you the name of the girl that you were supposed to have transported from one state to another?

A. Yes, I believe he did. But I didn't take much notice of it because I thought it was damn funny at the time. Why, Jesus! somebody goofy on it! [6318]

Q. Did he even map out the route, the route that you were supposed to have taken?

A. Yes, I believe he did. It's like I say. I didn't give it much attention because it was so damn fantastic.

Q. Did you ever transport a girl from one state to another for any purpose? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. At any time? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did anyone ever question you about the circumstances under which you had made the statements to the FBI men prior to the time you appeared here to testify?

A. Well, it's like I said. What happened up in that hotel room, in a lawyer's office, is as vague as the devil. I might have been questioned, and if I did I might have made answers that I don't remember saying.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Cannalonga. Did you at any time say to Craycraft or to any other person "Well, I was forced to testify falsely through intimidation of the FBI"?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Did you ever make that statement to Mr. Gladstein? [6319] A. No.

Q. At any time? A. No.

Q. Any place? A. No.

Q. Anywhere? A. No.

Q. Did you ever say this to Mr. Craycraft at any time, any place, anywhere: "So I proceeded to Portland that afternoon, went down to the ship" —no, excuse me. Strike that out, please.

Let me ask you this question. Mr. Craycraft appeared here in this proceedings to testify. I don't know the exact date. Among other things he said that he had a meeting with you on Friday night, May the 2nd, 1941. A. May the 2nd.

Q. And he stated as follows: —Craycraft said "So I proceeded to Portland that afternoon, went down to the ship to see Mr. Cannalonga approximately eight at night and I explained to him that the attorneys had called and they wanted to talk to him on the testimony he gave in this trial and would he be willing to meet me. He said", meaning you, "He would be glad to. So I called Mr. Gladstein back at ten o'clock that night and then proceeded to Portland the next day, Saturday". . .

Will you state, please, if that is correct? [6320]

A. No, that's not correct. He asked me if—he had asked me—let's see—if I would see Gladstein, and I says "No, I don't want to see him".

"Well," he said "He wants to talk to you".

I said "The only thing I'll see him about is in regards to the Voice of the Federation calling me a stool pigeon and a labor spy".

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft also testified that he again contacted you on Saturday, May 3, 1941 at ten o'clock and that he told you, advised you that Mr. Gladstein would be in on the 1:35 plane and that he, Craycraft, would meet you at around three o'clock. Did Mr. Craycraft so advise you?

A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. I don't remember saying that. [6321]

Q. Will you state, if you haven't already stated, how you met Craycraft again on Saturday, May 3?

A. On Saturday, it is like I say—I had been drinking pretty heavy and——

Q. (Interposing) That is the time Craycraft contacted you and took you to the hotel?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes. I called up. I went out on the dock to phone to some grocery store.

Q. Now, Craycraft, while he was on the stand here, was asked this question by Mr. Gladstein:

"Mr. Craycraft, did Mr. Cannalonga say on that same afternoon in the Clyde Hotel, in the presence of yourself and myself and"—that is, Gladstein and Craycraft—"that he had told Mr. Medala and Mr. Dickstein that he would refuse to sign a statement to the effect that he had been at meetings with Schneidermann and Bridges because such a statement would be false?"

And Mr. Craycraft said, replied; "That is right?"

Did you have such a discussion as that with Gladstein or Craycraft?

A. No, I never. I never made no statement like that. In fact—I am quite sure of it.

Q. Were you under any kind of pressure at the time you made the statements to the FBI then?

A. No. At no time was I under any pressure.

[6322]

Q. Were you "gowed" up, Mr. Craycraft?

A. "Gowed" up—Jesus Christ, no. I never was "gowed" up—whatever you want to call it.

Q. Were you under the influence of any drug while you were making these statements?

A. No. I never was.

Q. Are you a drug fiend of any kind, Mr. Cannalonga? A. No.

Q. Had you taken any kind of a drug when you were making these statements, or at any other time, for that matter, particularly——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. (Interposing) I threw my hip out of joint up north. I saw a doctor, a marine doctor in Juneau, and the ship was leaving for Saskatchewan, and when we got down to Saskatchewan a prescription that the Doctor had made out for me I took it and—no, the Skipper went ashore and got it. On that prescription there was a dozen and a half of amytal sleeping tablets.

Q. Amytal? A. Yes.

Q. Not nembutal? A. No.

Q. Amytal? A. Yes.

Q. How do you spell it? [6323]

A. A-m-b-y-t-a-l.

Q. How many of those pills did you have?

A. Eighteen of them. I still got some left at home.

Q. You haven't used them all up? A. No.

Q. How many of those pills have you used?

A. Well, let me see—I think I have about eleven of them at home.

Q. How many of them did you take at any one time? A. One.

Q. And they were on orders of your doctor?

A. Yes.

Q. For what purpose were they given to you?

A. To make you sleep. It is a sleeping pill.

Q. Now, the statements I have in mind, that you made to the FBI men, are Government Exhibits 208, 209 and 210. They were shown to you and you identified them at the last hearing.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Now, Mr. Cannalonga, were you intimidated in any way at the time you made those statements to the FBI men? A. No. If anything——

Q. (Interposing) What were your relations with the FBI men at the time you made these statements?

A. I thought they were a swell bunch of fellows.

Q. Who were the men, the FBI men?

A. John Madala there, the fellow with the brown suit on— [6324] if he will stand up.

Q. Did he, during any time that he was taking these statements from you, did he even as much as give you a dirty look? A. Oh, hell, no.

Q. Did Mr. Dickstein, the other agent?

A. No. He is just as good a guy as John there.

Q. What do you think of those two men, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, I think they have very good personalities and they are pretty efficient.

Q. Would you be glad to shake their hands at any time you met them, anywhere?

A. Certainly I would.

Q. Now, did either Mr. Madala, here, or Mr. Dickstein, threaten you with any prosecution, with any kind of a prosecution? A. No.

Q. In particular, did they threaten you with a Mann Act porescution? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did they mention, tell you, or in your presence did they say anything about the Mann Act?

A. Not a thing.

Q. Did they at any time, and particularly during the time that they were taking these statements from you, state [6325] that, or talk between themselves, that the penalty for transporting a girl from one state into another was 20 years?

A. No.

Q. Or words to that effect?

A. No; never.

Q. When was the first time you heard the mention of the Mann Act and the fact that you had been transporting a girl from one state to another?

A. When Craycraft told me aboard ship.

Q. You hadn't heard that from any officer of the United States? A. No; never.

Q. Or about the 20 years, that you might be getting 20 years? A. No.

Q. Now, this same Craycraft was asked this question when he testified here:

"Thereafter, did Mr. Cannalonga say that, referring to the second time when he had been with the FBI agents, Madala and Dickstein, did he then say to you and to me that one of these FBI agents asked Cannalonga what had become of the girl Cannalonga picked up in Reno?"

And to that question, that was the question that Mr. Gladstein asked Craycraft, and then Craycraft answered:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"That is right." [6326]

Do you recall having any such discussion with Crayeraft and Gladstein? A. No.

Q. Did you say anything like that to either Mr. Gladstein or to Crayeraft? A. No.

Q. Did you say anything like that at any time in the presence of——

A. (Interposing) I would be crazy if I did.

Q. What?

A. I would be a nut if I did.

Q. Crayeraft was asked this other question by Mr. Gladstein—Mr. Gladstein asked him:

"Did Cannalonga then say in the Clyde Hotel that one of the FBI agents, referring to the second occasion of Mr. Cannalonga's meeting with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein, proceeded to tell Mr. Cannalonga by name the various places in the various states where Mr. Cannalonga had stayed with a girl?"

And Crayeraft said:

"That is correct."

Did anything like that happen?

A. No. I never said anything like that.

Q. And then Mr. Gladstein asked Crayeraft this question:

"Did I"—meaning Gladstein—"at the Clyde Hotel ask Mr. Cannalonga whether the FBI agents on this second occasion [6327] had him cold?"

That is the expression I meant to use the other day.

To which Crayeraft replied:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"Yes."

Do you recall making any such statement to Mr. Gladstein?

A. No, I don't recall making any such statement.

Q. Now, Craycroft was also asked by Gladstein this question:

"Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he continued to tell the FBI agents that he knew nothing about Harry Bridges' membership in the Communist Party and that he had never attended any Communist Party meetings with him?"

And Craycraft said:

"That is right."

A. Read that again, please?

Q. This question was asked Craycraft, when he was on the stand, by Mr. Gladstein:

"Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he continued to tell the FBI agents"—that is during the time they were taking these statements, you know, these three statements from you—— A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing) ——"That he knew nothing about Harry Bridges' membership in the Communist Party and that he had never attended any Communist Party meetings with him?"

Meaning Bridges—and Craycraft said: [6328]

"That is right."

Did you say that in Mr. Gladstein's presence?

A. I never said anything, or words to that effect.

Q. Did you at any time tell Gladstein, or anyone in Gladstein's presence, that you had never attended any Communist Party meetings with Bridges? A. Read that again, please?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. No, not that I know about.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft testified here that when you met Madala, Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein the third time, you were presented with a typewritten statement and then Mr. Gladstein asked Craycraft his question here:

"Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he refused to sign the statement because it contained falsehoods?"

And Craycraft said:

"Yes."

A. No. I never said that.

Q. Did you make any such a statement to Mr. Craycraft? A. No.

Q. Or to Mr. Gladstein? A. No. [6329]

Q. Or to anybody in Mr. Gladstein's presence?

A. No.

Q Did you at any time refuse to sign a statement that the FBI agents had prepared because it contained falsehoods? A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Cannalonga, before you signed these three statements you made to the FBI you had read them over, had you not?

A. I read them and corrected them—that was the first time on the stand. Those statements were the truth to the best of my knowledge.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And were you given every opportunity to read those statements before you signed them by the FBI agents? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft—I say Mr.—Craycraft testified in answer to a question asked by Gladstein, while on the stand, he said:

"Mr. Canalonga stated that he would be glad to come down to San Francisco and he would be willing to get up and tell the same story he told us"—meaning Craycraft and Gladstein—"that day, and the only request that he wanted was that he would be allowed to go to Seattle first to see some other parties whom he thought would be involved, and then proceed to Frisco to testify."

Presiding Inspector: Do you understand that?

[6330]

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you say that? A. No.

Q. Did you at any time tell Craycraft or Gladstein, or anyone in Gladstein's presence, that before you came down here to San Francisco to testify again you wanted to see somebody in Seattle?

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. Did they talk with you about coming down here?

The Witness: Your Honor, it is like I say, those two days are vague as hell.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: You can't remember?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: You can't remember whether they were talking about coming down here or not?

The Witness: Some points, you know, seem half clear and, like I say, I don't want to say for the simple reason that I have been hitting the booze heavy then.

Presiding Inspector: I understand your explanation. But do you recall whether there was talk about your coming down here again to testify?

The Witness: No, I don't.

Presiding Inspector: That is all. [6331]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Craycraft also testified to the effect that you were willing to make a deposition, or a statement, to Mr. Gladstein, and in that connection Mr. Craycraft said that you stated:

"I am willing to do that up to the part where it involves the FBI and the Mann Act charges."

Did you say anything like that?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you say anything like that to Mr. Gladstein? A. No.

Q. Or Mr. Craycraft?

A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Or to anyone? A. No.

Q. Craycraft also testified that you said you would come down and testify to everything up to the point that involved the Mann Act charges and the FBI, but that if you were going to testify on that you wanted to go to Seattle first to see some other people who you said were involved.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. That sounds silly.

Q. Did you say anything like that to anybody?

A. I don't believe I did. Why would I want to say anything like that after I had been on the stand here and testifying, and then turn right around and make statements of [6332] that sort? So—well, I won't say the rest of it. I will just think it.

Q. Did your trip to Seattle, that you took to Seattle, have anything to do with your coming down here to testify, either for Mr. Gladstein, or anybody else? A. No.

Q. Now, at any time while you were on that ship, or at any time, say, after you left the stand here on, I believe it was April 17, were you, up to last Thursday, Mr. Cannalonga, were you contacted by any FBI agent? A. No.

Q. From the time you left the stand on April 17 to last Thursday? A. No.

Q. Were you contacted by, or did you speak to any Immigration Officer? A. No.

Q. Were you contacted by, or did you speak to any Government agent.

A. No. They couldn't contact me. I was up in the mountains.

Q. Did you at any time say to Mr. Gladstein, or to Mr. Craycraft, that you would be willing to give testimony in a deposition that the statements you had made, that you had made to the FBI agents, were false? [6333] A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, do you recall—I believe you testified about leaving this attorney's office once—that is on a Sunday when you, Craycraft and Gladstein and some others were in there—that you left once to go to the toilet and——

Presiding Inspector: You have been all over that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am bringing it up——

A. (Interposing) Yes, like I told you at the start, I remember winding up in the toilet and throwing up.

Presiding Inspector: You have told us about that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, when you returned to the office did Gladstein say anything?

A. Yes. I walked back into that lawyer's office with Craycraft and he started to ask me about the Mann Act and I told him, "What are you trying to pull?" And I walked out on him.

Q. Did you use stronger language than that?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, Craycraft also testified like this:

"I mentioned prior to leaving that I was going to Seattle"—that is, he had reference then to Monday night, May 5, 1941—"so Cannalonga requested that I stop in and see Dr. Buckner while I was in Seattle, and he could tell me how he was all doped up in the hospital there." [6334]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Did you ask Craycraft to see Dr. Buckner?

A. What day was that, on Monday?

Q. Monday night, May 5, 1941. Did you say anything like that to Craycraft at any time?

A. No.

Q. Huh?

A. No. He had mentioned about my hip and I said, "If you want to know about my hip you can go up and check with Dr. Buckner in Seattle. He has records of the time I spent in the hospital and what was wrong with me."

Q. Who was Dr. Buckner?

A. He is a bone specialist. He does all the orthopedic work up there for——

Q. (Interposing): Do you know what Dr. Buckner's reputation is? A. A-1.

Q. He is a specialist in his line?

A. Supposed to be one of the best bone doctors in the country.

Q. Did Dr. Buckner prescribe any kind of drug for you? A. No.

Q. Did he give you any pills, even sleeping pills?

A. No, I don't believe so. He just gave me his regular routine reatment.

Q. Do you know anybody by the name of Cole Jackman? [6335]

A. At times that name sounds familiar, but I wouldn't be able to pick him out, say, in this room here. I had seen him a few times here. I believe he was on some part of the Strike Committee in Portland during the '36-'37 strike.

Q. Do you recall any such person coming down to the boat to see you?

A. Well, there is a possibility; yes. He might have come down, but I don't remember, you know, just by the name.

Q. Do you know Bert Nelson? A. Yes.

Q. Who is Burt Nelson?

A. He is a member of the longshoremen's union.

Q. Does he belong to the Communist Party?

A. He did; I don't know whether he does now or not.

Q. Did he come up to see you on that boat, on the West Cussetta? A. Yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Oh, a couple or three times; maybe more.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. The first time he invited me out to his home to have dinner.

Q. Did he say anything else to you?

A. He mentioned the Bridges case.

Q. What did he say about the Bridges case?

[6336]

A. Wanted to know why I testified against Bridges.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, to go back to this attorney's room there on Sunday, do you remember if you were asked whether or not the FBI had asked you if you had ever attended Communist meetings with Bridges, and do you remember if you replied as follows to Mr. Gladstein's question and to Mr. Craycraft there:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"I told them, no; that I had been in meetings with him where there were Communists and non-Communists, and then I explained the Party structure, how it works with the rank and file, and the progressive groups in the union."

Do you recall making any such statement?

A. No— —

Q. (Interposing): I will read it again.

A. No, I don't recall making that statement.

[6337]

Q. In any discussions that you may have had with Gladstein and Craycraft with reference to your hip injury and your treatment by Doctor Buckner at Seattle did you make any statement to the effect that the Doctor in Juneau gave you a prescription and that you got a hundred of them?

A. No, I don't ever recall making any statement like that.

Q. Did you ever get a hundred sleeping pills at Juneau? A. No, never.

Q. Anywhere else? A. No.

Q. Did you ever have a hundred sleeping pills in your possession at any time?

A. No. I don't think they will sell you a hundred at a time.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Gladstein or Craycraft or anyone in the presence of Gladstein that you were under the influence of a drug which prevented you from knowing what you were going or talking about at the time you made the statements to the FBI men?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No. I never recall making a statement of that sort.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a recess?

Presiding Inspector. Yes. We will have a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[6338]

Presiding Inspector: Call back the witness.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, did you ever tell Mr. Gladstein or Craycraft that you had stated to Mr. Madala and Dickstein, the FBI agents, that you had never to the best of your recollection been present at a meeting of Communists wherein Schneidermann and Bridges were also present?

A. No. I don't ever recall making any such statement.

Q. Did you ever make this statement to Mr. Gladstein or Mr. Craycraft or to anyone in Gladstein's presence, as follows: "You see, when I read these statements I was gowed up. If you don't know what 'gowed up' is, I was taking these pills pretty heavy. I was in pretty bad shape, and so instead of using them as sleeping pills, if you double the dose it makes everything rosy then."

Did you make any such statement?

A. No. I don't ever recall making any statement of that sort.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you ever make any statement like this: "If you double the dose it makes everything rosy then" at any time? A. No.

Q. To anyone?

A. No, I don't recall making any such statement.

Q. Do you recall being asked this question on Sunday there in this lawyer's office in the presence of Gladstein and [6339] Craycraft and others: "So you signed the prepared statement that they had," meaning the FBI, "for you"? and did you answer "Yes"?

A. No. I don't ever recall making——

Q. (Interposing): And then were you asked this question: "And it contains statements that weren't true, is that right"? Do you recall being asked that question? A. No, I don't.

Q. And did you reply or do you recall replying "Correct"?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, you said that you didn't see any agents of the Government from the time you left this stand here the last time you were here until last Thursday?

A. Right.

Q. Will you state under what circumstances you met an FBI man at that time, Thursday, last Thursday?

A. From last Thursday until today, you mean?

Q. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, I came back out of the mountains Thursday morning about two o'clock I got into Seattle, and I figured on getting in on about eight o'clock Wednesday night. Well, I burned out a bearing on the car and I had to make a quick repair out in the woods. So I got in about two o'clock in the morning and I slept a whole and then I went downtown and filed [6340] application into joining the Navy. And I didn't want to do a year in the Army on foot. I would rather do my four years on a ship than a year in the——(Pause). So I passed their physical test and then they gave me an examination and I passed the electrician's examination and they rated me First Class Electrician's Mate. And I got home in the afternoon quite late after being, you know, examined by the Navy and, well, I just got into the house and Mr. Madala drove by and stopped and knocked at the door and said that there was a subpoena out for me. And then Friday night we caught the train and come down here to San Francisco.

We arrived here—it was a slow train, I remember that. We slept two nights on the train, Friday and Saturday nights, and got here Sunday morning about eight o'clock. And I had been served with the subpoena, and since then I have been staying out at a hotel and manage to take a show in every night, going out to that Ice Follies and went swimming until today.

Q. Have you been drinking while you have been down here? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you got the subpoena with you?

A. Yes. [6341]

Do I have to show him the subpoena?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, if he wants to see it.

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment, your Honor.

(Whereupon the witness produced the subpoena.)

Presiding Inspector: Keep it until he asks for it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. May I see the subpoena?

A. (Handing subpoena to Mr. Gladstein).

Q. When was this served on you?

A. The date is on there.

Q. You tell me.

A. Well, let me see it then.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, let him see the subpoena. It is his there.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. If you can remember it.

The Witness: Well, I don't remember it, your Honor. I want to look at it to see it.

Presiding Inspector: If you can remember you can answer.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. This week or last week?

A. I believe the second of this month—it is dated the second. May the 6th it was dated out the top part of it and served June 2nd.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Where were you when it was served on you?

A. Where I was? [6342]

Q. Where were you?

A. Well, it tells you where I was.

Q. I am asking you.

A. Oh, you are asking me. O. K. San Francisco.

Q. Were you served with any subpoena before June 2nd?

A. Well, you'll find out.

Presiding Inspector: No, you must answer. He has a right to ask you.

Mr. Myron: Of course, he was served the first time he appeared here.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't what he means. He means since he left the stand here.

Mr. Myron: This is the subpoena that has brought him here in Court, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference. If he wasn't served with a subpoena he can say so. If he was served with another subpoena he can say so.

Mr. Del Guercio: Tell him.

The Witness: Yes. I was served with another one in Seattle.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When?

A. When? On a Saturday.

Q. Do you have it with you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I haven't. [6343]

Q. Saturday of when?

A. Oh, the Saturday I got into Seattle. I got in on Thursday and I was served—no, I was served Friday. I beg your pardon.

Q. Which week?

Presiding Inspector: You mean, got back from Olympia?

The Witness: Yes, from the mountains. May I have your calendar, Judge?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: So I can get these dates straight.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

(The calendar referred to was passed to the witness.)

The Witness: Thank you. This is the 4th, isn't it, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: June the 4th. Oh, it was on or about May 30th.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who served it on you?

A. A fellow from the Immigration Department.

Q. Do you have that subpoena in your pocket?

A. No, I haven't got it in my pocket.

Q. You don't have any other subpoena on you?

A. No, that is the only one.

Q. What did you do with that subpoena? [6344]

A. I think I have got it up in the hotel room.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Will you look in your pocket to see if you have the other subpoena?

A. I know I haven't.

Mr. Del Guercio: He said he doesn't have it.

The Witness: What do you want me to do? Search myself?

Mr. Myron: I don't think that is a proper question.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. That is perfectly proper.

The Witness: No. It is up in the hotel room.

Presiding Inspector: If he says he hasn't it, that ends it, of course.

Mr. Myron: He says it was up in the hotel room, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I know. But he asked him if he would search his pocket. He can answer that. It is perfectly simple.

The Witness: I haven't got it on me, your Honor.

Do I get that back?

Presiding Inspector: No. I suppose they will introduce it in evidence. If they do you won't get it back. Otherwise you will.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you remember what the other subpoena said? A. I don't.

Q. When did it tell you to appear? [6345]

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was that other subpoena like this one, Mr. Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, I believe it was. I didn't take a picture of it. It was just like the other subpoena. Aren't they all alike? I don't know.

Q. Did you read it?

A. No, I didn't read it.

Q. You didn't read the other subpoena?

A. I signed it, yes, and I believe I did glance at it. But I don't recall what it said.

Q. Who was the person who served it?

A. From the Immigration.

Q. Do you know who it was?

A. No, I don't remember his name.

Q. Where was it served?

A. In Seattle.

Q. Where in Seattle?

A. I believe up in the FBI office.

Q. When you say you "believe" you mean you don't know?

A. No. I told you. I believe it is up in the FBI office.

Q. Well, was it up in the FBI office?

A. Well, was it? Sure.

Q. All right. Now, where is that office? [6346]

A. It is up in the Federal Building, the new Court building. Yes. The new Court building.

Q. What time of the day was it served on you?

A. Well, you got me on that. I don't remember.

Q. Were you sober? A. Yes, I was sober.

Q. You don't remember the day, the time of the day?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't. It was sometime in the—sometime during the day.

Q. Morning or afternoon?

A. I don't quite recall whether it was morning or afternoon.

Q. Who was with you when you were served?

A. Mr. Madala.

Q. Anybody else?

A. And that Immigration guy, and I think an office boy. Somebody was in the office. And then there was another fellow there. There was about four.

Q. Which Immigration guy?

A. I don't know his name.

Q. Did you ever see him before?

A. No.

Q. Is he the one who served it on you?

A. I did ask him to identify himself and he pulled out a badge that says "Immigration Department," and then he had a [6347] square gadget with his picture on it, because I wasn't going to take a subpoena from a perfect stranger. So I asked him to identify himself.

Q. Was it in Madala's office?

A. No, not Madala's office.

Q. Whose office?

A. Sort of a—you know, where they have a suite of offices and there is a place where your switchboard is and all that. Well, that part of the office.

Q. How long had you been up in that office before the subpoena was served?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Just got up there.

Q. Did you go up there alone or with somebody else.

Q. Who else? A. Two FBI men.

Q. Who were the two?

A. Mr. Madala and—I believe he can tell you the name of the other. I didn't take time off to ask him.

Q. Had you ever met that other one before?

A. No.

Q. What did you do with the subpoena when it was given to you?

A. Well, before I accepted it I had this fellow identify himself and he identified himself properly, then I took the subpoena and I glanced at it and saw that it was [6348] made out to me, and I put my John Henry on it and he had two copies, yes, and he signed one. The copy he gave me he signed, and I think he put the time on it, too, if I am not mistaken.

Q. What did you do with the subpoena when he gave it to you?

A. What else could I do?

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I stuck it in my pocket, of course.

Q. Did he tell you what the subpoena required you to do? A. No.

Q. Did anybody? A. No.

Q. Did you have any discussion about the subpoena? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did anybody suggest that you were supposed to come to San Francisco and testify under that subpoena?

A. Well, it was written on it.

Q. It was? You saw that? A. Yes.

Q. When did it say that you were supposed to be here? A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you have any discussion with anybody as to when you were supposed to be here?

A. No. Could I have that thing back? You are liable to forget it. That is my property. [6349]

Q. Oh, yes, you will get it back. A. O. K.

Q. Did you read it through to find out what it required you to do?

A. Would you repeat it again? "Did you read it through to find out"—was it? It just says "appear at San Francisco," to the best of my knowledge, and I don't recall the date or how I was to get down here or anything else on it. I don't think it specifies.

Q. You say you don't think it specifies the date when you were supposed to testify?

A. No, on how to get down here. It must have had a date on it, yes.

Q. Did you ask anybody as to when you were supposed to come down here to testify?

Mr. Del Guercio: It has been asked and answered, your Honor. He is making much to do—what if there were two subpoenas? We will admit that there were two subpoenas issued. One was served on him up there and one down here.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: He may answer.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you want the question read?

A. Yes, read the question, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. No, I don't believe I did. [6350]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You paid no further attention to the subpoena? A. No.

Q. And nobody discussed it with you?

A. Oh, I don't recall.

Q. Did anybody tell you that you didn't have to bother about that subpoena?

A. No. What's all this anyway over a subpoena? Will you tell me, your Honor. Give me a fair idea.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference. All you have to do is to answer the questions. If you can't answer them by lack of knowledge, you say so.

The Witness: Because, you know——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) There is no use of arguing here.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After the subpoena was served on you did you stay up in that office?

A. No. Let's see. No I caught the eleven o'clock train that night for San Francisco here.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you leave——

A. (Interposing): I figured that——

Q. (Continuing): Did you leave Seattle on the same day that the subpoena was served on you?

A. Yes. [6351]

Q. With whom did you come?

A. With the FBI man, Madala.

Q. Was anybody else on that trip?

A. I believe another agent came on at Portland; a fellow by the name of Means, I think it is.

Q. Did he then travel with the two of you?

A. Huh?.

Q. Did Mr. Means then travel with you and Madala? A. Yes, we rode down together.

Q. Anybody else?

A. No, that's all.

Q. What did you do when you got to San Francisco?

A. Went up and registered at a hotel.

Q. When was that? A. Sunday morning.

Q. Did you go up there alone or with anybody else?

A. Well, I had another fellow with me.

Q. Who? A. Madala.

Q. Did he register there too?

A. I think he did. I don't know.

Q. Don't you know whether he registered and had a room there?

A. Well, I'm not going to follow the guy. I don't know. [6352]

Q. That was on Sunday morning?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, Sunday morning.

Q. This last Sunday?

A. Yes, this last Sunday.

Q. After you registered did you see Mr. Madala again that day? A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. I think he and I went to a show together.

Q. When did you meet him? A. Huh?

Q. When did you meet him?

A. In the afternoon. Yes, it was around supper time; after supper.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. At the hotel.

Q. Did he come to the hotel?

A. I think I run into him in the lobby. I'm not sure.

Q. Did you see anybody from the FBI or the Immigration Office from the time that you arrived Sunday morning until the time that you met Mr. Madala in the lobby of the hotel?

Presiding Inspector: Answer it.

A. Repeat that again. I didn't quite get you. Why don't you shorten out the questions?

By Mr. Gladstein: [6353]

Q. What's that?

A. Shorten your questions out instead of making them so long.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: I could have seen 50 of them and not know it.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he means did you see them to speak with?

The Witness: Yes, I believe I did. Some friend of Mr. Madala, I was introduced to him and——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Interposing): Did you see Mr. Del Guercio that day? A. No.

Q. Did you see Mr. Myron?

A. Who's Myron?

Mr. Myron: I am.

The Witness: No, I didn't see him that day either.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you see any of the other people who are here at the Government Counsel table?

A. Let's see. Sunday. Yes, I believe I saw one other.

Q. Which one? [6354]

A. I think Mr. Donnelley. I am not sure. I wouldn't swear to it or be positive about it.

Q. Point him out, please.

A. That guy with the glasses there (Indicating)

Q. You mean Mr. Connelley?

A. Connelley.

Q. The man at the end of the table here in the brown suit?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative)

Q. Where did you see him?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't recall where I saw him.

Q. At the FBI office?

A. I don't recall.

Q. How much time did you spend with Mr. Connelley on that Sunday?

A. I don't think I spent much time with him.

Q. Did you talk with him at all?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Madala at all about the case?

A. Well, we couldn't have done much talking. We went to a show.

Q. Did you or not?

A. Well, that's the answer.

Q. At any time on that Sunday.

A. Well, what do you want me to say? I don't get that [6355] one either.

Presiding Inspector: He wants you to say whether you talked with him concerning anything about this case on that Sunday. You can answer that "Yes" or "No," I should think.

The Witness: Well,——(Pause)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. "Yes" or "No," please.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you understand the question?

The Witness: I still don't quite understand it.

Presiding Inspector: Did you talk over any of this case with Mr. Madala on that Sunday?

The Witness: Yes, I believe I did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where? A. Huh?

Q. Where were you when you talked about it?

A. Oh, on the way to the show.

Q. Did you talk about your testimony in this case?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Did you talk about Craycraft's testimony?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you talk about Mr. Shoemaker's testimony? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you talk to anybody on that Sunday regarding your testimony in this case or Craycraft's testimony or Mr. [6356] Shoemaker's testimony?

A. I believe I did discuss—but I don't recall what I said, because naturally a person will talk about something that he is interested in.

Q. Well, whom did you talk with on Sunday regarding anybody's testimony in this case?

Mr. Myron: I think he just answered the question. If he asks him when did he talk about the case with somebody I suppose he can tell him.

Presiding Inspector: This witness has said that he talked about the case with Mr. Madala.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that correct?

A. I believe it is, yes.

Q. Can you remember anything that was said by you or Mr. Madala on that Sunday when you discussed the case? A. No, I don't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Nothing about your testimony?

A. No.

Q. Nothing about Craycraft's testimony.

A. Just casual talking over the thing.

Q. Nothing about Craycraft's testimony, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Nothing about Mr. Shoemaker's testimony?

A. Who is Shoemaker?

Q. Well, did you discuss the testimony of a Mr. [6357] Shoemaker in this case? A. No.

Q. In your discussion or talks with Mr. Connelley on that Sunday did you discuss any of the testimony in this case?

A. Yes, I believe I did.

Q. Whose testimony? A. Huh?

Q. Whose testimony?

A. About myself, naturally.

Q. What was that discussion? A. Huh?

Q. What was the discussion?

A. Well, don't yell at me that way either. I don't like your tone of voice.

Presiding Inspector: Never mind. Answer the question.

The Witness: Your Honor,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, well, answer the question.

A. (Continuing): Well, ask that question again, please.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where you when this discussion was held, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Oh, I don't just quite recall where I was.

[6358]

Q. Was it in your hotel room?

A. I can't recall whether it was in the hotel room, or up in the office or——

Q. (Interposing) What time of day was it?

Mr. Myron: Which discussion is this you are referring to?

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is clear from my question the reference is to the discussion with Mr. Connelley.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have that in mind, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. What is that again?

Q. What time of the day was it on Sunday, this last Sunday, when you talked with Mr. oCnnelley about your testimony in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: Why don't you ask him if he made any statement to Mr. Connelley?

Presiding Inspector: He can put the question as he sees fit. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. That is the first of June, wasn't it?

I didn't get the question. Read it again.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

(The question referred to was reread by the reporter as above recorded.) [6359]

A. What time? Well, that I don't recall either.

Presiding Inspector: Was it in the morning or in the afternoon?

The Witness: I think it was in the afternoon some time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How long a period of time did you talk to Mr. Connelley about your testimony in this case?

A. Well, I couldn't say that either; I don't remember.

Q. Was it half an hour?

A. No. I don't remember how long it was.

Q. Was it more or less than a half hour, do you think? A. Well——

Presiding Inspector: He is asking you for your best recollection about this. Probably you didn't look at a watch. Give him your best recollection.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was it as much as a hour?

A. No—I don't know.

Q. Do you think it was a little less than an hour?

A. It could have been less or it could have been more.

Q. Was anybody else present besides you and Mr. Connelley when you talked with him?

A. Yes. There was, I think there was, two fellows there.

Q. Which two fellows? [6360]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. On Sunday—your Honor, I am trying to figure whether it was a Sunday.

Presiding Inspector: This was the last Sunday, three days ago.

A. (Continuing): I remember making a statement to the FBI. I don't know whether it was on Sunday or Monday. I got the days confused. I think I can clarify that easy enough by asking Mr. Connelley if he remembers what day it was.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You say you made a statement to Mr. Connelley? A. Yes.

Q. You mean a written statement?

A. A written statement.

Q. Is that the first time that you discussed with any representative of the FBI during the last month, let us say, your testimony in this case?

A. Repeat that again.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you understand the question?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will make it clear to you, Mr. Cannalonga. You say that you made a statement to Mr. Connelley, a written statement, and you are not sure whether it was Sunday, this [6361] last Sunday, or the following day, Monday, is that right?

A. Right.

Q. At the time you made that written statement to Mr. Connelley, whether it was Sunday or Monday, was that the first time that you discussed your testimony, or Craycraft's testimony, or the testimony of a Mr. Shoemaker, at any time during the last month? A. I believe it is.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Is there any doubt in your mind about it?

A. Well, it is like I say—I am kind of doubtful on those two days, but outside of that, I haven't talked to nobody, to no FBI men in regard to the case.

Q. So you didn't talk to Mr. Madala, or any of the other FBI men, on your trip to San Francisco this last time? A. No.

Q. Or to any Immigration Inspector or representative of the Immigration office? — A. No.

Q. And on the day that you spoke to Mr. Connelley that is the only time, up to the time that you took the stand here today, that you have discussed your testimony, or Craycraft's testimony, or anybody's testimony in the Bridges case?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, where were you when you made that statement?

A. When I made that statement where was I? [6362]

Q. Yes. A. Up in the offices of the FBI.

Q. Do you recall when it was?

A. No. If you ask him he will tell you what day it was.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't quite get the question—when it was?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: When it was, yes.

Presiding Inspector: You already asked when it was.

The Witness: Is it all right if I ask Mr. Connelley?

Presiding Inspector: No. He is testing your recollection.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You said a couple of others were there too and Mr. Connelley? A. Yes.

Q. Do you see any of them here?

A. Yes, Mr. Weeks, and that is all I do see, and Mr. Main was there.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Weeks. will you stand?

(Whereupon Mr. Weeks stood.)

Mr. Del Guercio: You don't have to stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you see Mr. Weeks standing?

A. That is the guy with the blue tie, white shirt and curly hair. (Indicating). [6363]

Mr. Gladstein: There is no question—Mr. Del Guercio, I want to ask you this through the Court—that Mr. Weeks has been identified by the witness?

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no question at all—Mr. Weeks was there.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How long were you with Mr. Connelley on that occasion?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Oh, from about three o'clock until, I believe four o'clock. Then they changed stenographers and from four o'clock to five o'clock, and I believe they had another change of stenographers, and it wound up about, I would say, about seven o'clock, six-thirty or seven o'clock. I had got up a couple of times and went out and come back again.

Did you hear me then?

The Reporter: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Since you gave that statement you have talked to nobody about any of the testimony in this case, is that right?

A. Since I gave that statement I talked to nobody, you say?

Q. Is that correct?

A. Well, you know that covers a large field. I read newspapers and——

Presiding Inspector: He means about the testimony in [5364] the case.

A. (Continuing): About the testimony—no, I haven't.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you sign that statement? A. Yes.

Q. When did you sign it?

A. The same day they finished it.

Q. When did they finish it?

A. I just got through telling you. I don't remember what day it was.

Q. What time of the day?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. It was, oh—I signed it the next day.

Q. Where did you sign it?

A. I went up in their office and read it over and then signed each page there. It was the following day; yes.

Q. What time the following day?

A. Oh, about ten o'clock.

Q. Was that yesterday? A. Yeah.

Q. What is the answer?

A. Yeah. No, I think I signed it—yes, Monday I signed it, I think. I am not sure now whether it was Monday or Tuesday. I know it was the day following after I made the statement and, if I am not mistaken, I made that statement on a Sunday.

[6365]

Q. The day you came here? A. Yeah.

Q. And do you know now where you saw Mr. Connelley on Sunday, the day you came here?

A. Well, I told you where I saw him the first time. Naturally, when I came in the first day I saw him; yes.

Q. Do you know where it was?

A. I think it was up in their office.

Q. Who took you up there?

A. I got off the train, and went up to the hotel and took a shower. I don't recall his name.

Q. Have you talked with Mr. Del Guercio before you went on the stand? A. No.

Q. Have you talked with Mr. Myron before you went on the stand?

A. No. You mean about the case here?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. I mean about the case, or your testimony, or anybody's testimony in the case?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you talked to them at all about anything?

A. No. I did see them eating their lunch one day.

Q. What is that?

A. I did see them in a restaurant about five tables away across the dining room if that is what you mean. [6366]

Q. In the same hotel where you stayed?

A. Oh, no.

Q. Where did you stay?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I don't believe, under the circumstances, the witness——

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

Mr. Myron: It is pretty dangerous.

Mr. Grossman: He can move away.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

The Witness: I won't answer it.

Mr. Myron: I think the witness should be given some protection here.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that he needs any protection.

Mr. Myron: Well, it is pretty evident that he does. I think his place of abode has no materiality to this case at all.

Presiding Inspector: I am not so sure about that. We will take his answer if the witness will answer it.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: And if I don't answer, your Honor?

Mr. Del Guercio: Go on and answer. We will give you sufficient protection.

A. At the Sutter Hotel—S-u-t-t-e-r.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you been staying there since you arrived [6367] Sunday? A. Yes.

Q. Did you register under your own name?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, besides those that you have named, I want you to look around the Government table, and also the side wall there, and the court room—and take plenty of time—and pick out every person that you see here who is connected in any way with the FBI, or the Immigration Service, or the Government, to your knowledge, with whom you have talked since you arrived here on Sunday.

Do you understand the question?

A. In other words, you want me to pick out everybody that is——

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: You went into the same matter as to about what happened in Portland, or wherever it was Mr. Gladstein went and interviewed this witness. I think we can have the same examination on the other side.

You look around, if you are willing, and indicate who you have seen that you have talked with.

A. (Glancing around room): Well, there has been two FBI men with me practically at all times when I was on the streets because they thought I needed some protection.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

There is one of them in the back of the hall there standing up with the—— [6368]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is his name?

A. Some Irish name.

Q. How much of the time has he been with you since you arrived here?

A. Oh, I believe I went to a show—I went swimming with him yesterday, and to a show. We went out to the Cliff House and had a little lunch, and after we had swam a while, and then we went and saw "Blood and Sand," the Tyrone Power picture.

Q. What is his name, the FBI agent?

A. Why don't you ask him yourself?

Q. Don't you know it?

A. I suppose I do, part of it.

Q. What is it, if you know?

A. I don't recall his last name.

Q. What do you call him? A. Joe.

Q. What? A. Joe—J-o-e—Joe.

Q. Who else?

A. Then Mr. Madala (indicating) and I don't see anybody else. There was Mr. Devereau.

Q. What is that?

A. There was a Mr. Devereau and Mr. Means—four of [6369] them.

Q. Can you think of any others?

A. No, that's all.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What about Mr. Cassidy? A. Huh?

Q. What about Mr. Cassidy?

A. Cassidy?

Q. Have you seen him?

A. No, I haven't seen no Cassidy. What's he look like?

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Cassidy, would you be good enough to stand up?

(Whereupon Mr. Cassidy arose in response to Mr. Gladstein's request.)

The Witness: No. I have never been with him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You have never been with him?

A. No. There were just four of them. They relieved each other.

Q. Well, at least two of them have been with you pretty much of the time since you got to San Francisco? A. Yes.

Q. Would you say all the time?

A. No, I wouldn't say all the time.

Q. What times were they not with you? [6370]

A. Well, when I went to bed.

Q. That's the only time? That's the only time, Mr. Cannalonga? A. Huh?

Q. That's the only time?

A. Yes, that's all.

Mr. Gladstein: May we offer this for identification, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly. Have it marked for identification.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Alien's Exhibit No. 48.)

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, it is after four. If you don't mind adjourning for the day, we have a request to make for something for you to do between now and tomorrow morning.

We would like to have Mr. Wixon produce for you—and I am sure he will at your request—a record of, which would include a copy of, any subpoenas served on Mr. Cannalonga.

Now, it may be that some of them were signed by Mr. Wixon or signed by the Seattle office. Of course, he could check that very easily and I am sure there would be a record showing the man who served it and when it was served and where it was served. [6371]

Presiding Inspector: Didn't he say something in all our presence about subpoenas being issued from the north somewhere?

Mr. Grossman: It is possible.

Presiding Inspector: I think he did.

Mr. Grossman: It is possible we would have to do it by telegram, and I request that you suggest that so we can have it as soon as possible.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Wixon does not have them I have those.

Presiding Inspector: You have them?

Mr. Gladstein: Do you have them now?

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio says he has them.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: The only question is this. I think we should have those that Mr. Del Guercio has, but Mr. Del Guercio can't state positively probably whether any others have been served. That's why we would like Mr. Wixon's statement as to whether any others have been. This may be all. There may be others.

Presiding Inspector: I think Mr. Del Guercio, in the first instance—we had just better follow Mr. Del Guercio's offer and statement that he has them. If that doesn't——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) If he states that he has them all, that satisfies me. [6372]

Presiding Inspector: You don't have to answer this.

Mr. Del Guercio: If I don't, I should have. I'll look.

Presiding Inspector: As far as you know from the office here you have?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: That is as I understood.

Mr. Gladstein: Would you mark them for identification?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. I don't have the subpoena that was served on him up there. It is back there in the office, but I will have it available.

Presiding Inspector: You will hand them in tomorrow morning in so far as they are here.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you have others now which relate to Mr. Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The original—what is that that you have? A copy there?

The Witness: This one here is dated May 6th and signed by Samuel—something or other.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have them all. We will recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 4:15 o'clock p.m. an adjournment was taken to Thursday, June 5, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [6373]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein, you have the witness—or Mr. Grossman.

Mr. Gladstein: I will continue with the examination, your Honor.

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

The Witness: Here is that subpoena that you were asking me about yesterday.

(The subpoena referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein through the reporter.)

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I have been handed indirectly from the witness, Mr. Cannalonga, a subpoena.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Cannalonga, whether this document is the one which you say was served on you on May 30th? A. It is.

Mr. Gladstein: I will offer it for identification.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: It may be marked for identification.

(The subpoena referred to was marked for identification as Alien's Exhibit No. 49.)

By Mr. Gladstein: [6375]

Q. Now, I want to direct your attention to April 17, the day that you testified for the first time in this proceeding. After you got off the stand what, if anything, took place?

A. After I got off the stand I went in that side room and stayed there five or ten minutes. From there I went right down to the Ferry Building and I got my ticket for the train, and went directly north.

Q. While you were in that side room was there any conversation? A. Not that I recall.

Q. Who was in the room with you?

A. There was two FBI men and, I think, a couple of Immigration Inspectors, these fellows with uniforms. There was quite a crowd in there.

Q. What took place in that room, anything?

A. No.

Q. Did you collect——

A. (Interposing): Oh—I asked about my transportation, and they asked me if I wanted to wait until the next day. I said No, I had plenty of money on me, and that they could mail it up to me up north.

Q. Did anything else take place?

A. No. Well, I had them call and make a reservation for the train for me. [6376]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What else? A. That is about all.

Q. Did you collect your witness fees?

A. No, not that day.

Q. When did you collect your witness fees?

A. It was mailed up to me. I asked them to mail it up to me. I didn't want to wait around for it.

Q. Who made the reservations for you on the train? A. Who made it?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe one of the FBI men made the reservation for me.

Q. This was in your presence?

A. In my presence; yes.

Q. He used the telephone to do so?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he make the reservation under your own name? A. Yes. [6377]

Q. And what were the reservations that he made?

A. I asked him to make reservations first class as that train was an express going North and to get an upper berth, and I got aboard the train and decided that I wanted a lower berth.

Q. And to where did these reservations take you? A. To Seattle.

Q. That's what you asked them to reserve for you? A. Yes.

Q. And that is what they did?

A. They did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did they ask you where you were going to go in Seattle? A. No.

Q. Did you tell them? A. No.

Q. After the reservations were made did you leave here?

A. Yes. They drove me down to the Ferry Building.

Q. Who drove you down?

A. The FBI boys.

Q. And what happened then?

A. Well, I picked up my reservation at the ticket office and then went into the gate through that ferry that goes across to the Bay and then boarded my train.

Q. Did you have any conversation with the FBI men on [6378] the way down to the train?

A. No, no, I didn't.

Q. Did you tell them how they could get in touch with you if they wanted you again?

A. No.

Q. Did they ask you for an address?

A. No.

Q. Now, you said you——

A. (Interposing) Pardon me. I believe I did mention that I was going to wait for my—for that ship, if I could make it, the Clevdon.

Q. You told them that you might wait for the ship? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you say that when you were in the side room here you didn't want to wait around for the check to be made out?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga,)

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. Is that right? A. Right.

Q. So you told them to mail the check to you?

A. Yes, the check to me in Seattle.

Q. What address did you tell them?

A. 3033 - 115th Street, Seattle.

Q. So you did tell them where to mail the expenses to you? A. Yes. [6379].

Q. Did you tell them that that was your home?

A. Yes.

Q. So you did tell them where you lived?

A. Well, it's on the—I did.

Q. What happened when you caught the train? What happened after that?

A. Well, I caught the train and rode up to Seattle, and I got into Seattle about eight o'clock in the evening the following day. I left at five on the 17th and got there on the 18th at eight o'clock, and I got into a cab and then went home.

Q. Did anything happen the next day?

A. I went down to the Union hall the next day.

Q. What for? A. To register.

Q. What time did you go down there?

A. Oh, I believe it was in the morning.

Q. What were you going to register for?

A. So I could ship out and be able to get back on that same ship. If I didn't register I couldn't ship.

Q. What do you have to do in order to register and ship out?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, you go down to the hall and present your discharge, and that's about all, and show your Union book, that your dues are paid and you are in good standing.

Q. Did you do that? [6380]

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Is there any other purpose in registering except to ship out? A. No.

Q. In other words, if a man wants to ship out he has to register, is that right?

A. He has to register; correct.

Q. And if he doesn't want to ship out he doesn't register, is that right?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. You went down the hall, you say, and you registered? A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. What did you register for? A. What?

Q. What did you register for? Anything specific?

A. You don't register for anything specific.

Q. You just put in a——

A. (Interposing): You show them your register and your Union book and they make out a card for you, a shipping card, and then when jobs come up they call them out on the hour, see.

Q. They use the rotation system?

A. Yes, they use a rotation system. And, say, for instance, if a job will come out on a ship, electrician, see. Well, they will call for an electrician. Then if you throw in for the job you have got to produce your Certificate of Efficiency showing that you have been qualified as an electri- [6381] cian by the Steamboat Inspectors or discharges.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. If there is a man who has the same qualifications who has been out of work longer than you he gets the first choice?

A. He gets the first choice, yes.

Q. When you register you don't register for any specific job? A. No.

Q. What happened at the time you registered that morning?

A. Oh, I went in the office and talked to Bert Coleman, and he—we got talking and he says I was in a "pretty tough spot".

Q. Who was he talking about?

A. We got talking about the Bridges case.

Q. How did that happen?

A. Well, he knew I had been on the stand and testified. My name was in all the papers.

Q. How did the conversation come out about the Bridges case? Who spoke about it first?

A. I believe he mentioned it first.

Q. What did he say?

A. Like I told you: That I was in a "pretty bad spot". [6382]

Q. Were those his words?

A. As far as I remember; yes.

Q. He said to you, "You are in a pretty bad spot?" A. Uh-huh (affirmative).

Q. That was Mr. Coleman?

A. Mr. Coleman.

Q. Who else was there at the time?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, there was a couple or three other fellows, I believe.

Q. Who were they?

A. I don't recall the names.

Q. Where did this conversation take place?

A. In the Union office.

Q. That is, in Mr. Coleman's office?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there people working in that office?

A. No. I don't think anybody was working at the time. You see, in the Firemen's Hall we have access to the business agent's office. In other words, if we want to go in and chew the fat with the business agent, there is no locked doors or privacy. We just go in and get a chair and sit down and talk.

Q. And there were other people in that room?

A. Yes; like I say, I believe three or four.

Q. Did you talk to any of them? [6383]

A. Well, I wouldn't say I talked to anybody directly. It was just the ordinary conversation where four or five fellows get together and talk.

Q. Was there a general conversation in which four or five people participated? A. Yes.

Q. Who were these other people?

A. I don't recall who they were.

Q. Were they members of your union?

A. Yes; members of our union.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, it is just like in here—you get four or five fellows and you know definitely that they belong to the organization; otherwise they wouldn't be in the office. After all, in Seattle there are 800 or 900 fellows that ship out steady and you get so you know faces and you don't know their names.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Had you ever shipped out with any of these other men?

A. No, I don't recall shipping with any of them.

Q. Do you remember the name of any of those men? A. Well, I don't believe I do.

Q. All right. Now, when Mr. Coleman said, "You are in a spot"—that is what he said?

A. Yes; words to that effect.

Q. What did you say? [6384]

A. I told him, I said, "I don't think I am."

Q. What did he or anybody else say to that?

A. Well, they kind of grinned and—there was general rumors around there that by appearing on the stand here I wasn't doing myself any good. It is like I said, that the Voice of the Federation had branded me as a stool pigeon and as a company agent.

Q. That was before you registered for this job?

A. No. Your see, they don't get up—that paper up in the union hall. They——

Q. (Interposing): At the time you were talking to Mr. Coleman had the Voice of the Federation branded you as a stool pigeon?

A. I believe it did on Friday. It comes out on a Friday, I think the Voice does, Friday or Saturday, and I think I had been branded then some kind of a stool pigeon.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Before you actually talked to Mr. Coleman and registered?

A. Well, the paper wouldn't be up there by then, but down here it was.

Q. Where had you seen the paper before you talked to Mr. Coleman?

A. Well, I didn't see the paper before I talked to Mr. Coleman.

Q. How did you know that it had come out before you [6385] talked to Mr. Coleman?

A. The paper that came out, dated that following Friday, had an article on me appearing against Bridges.

Q. I don't want the paper that came out the following Friday. I want——

A. I didn't say "the following Friday". I said the Friday after I got off the stand.

Q. You got off the stand on Thursday?

A. Yes. And the paper comes out Friday or Saturday, and that issue had a spread in regard to me. I don't recall just what it said.

Q. That was the spread on the Friday, the day after you finished testifying? A. Yes.

Q. And you had seen that paper before you talked to Mr. Jackman in order to register?

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): He didn't say he talked to Jackman.

Mr. Gladstein: Excuse me—I withdraw the question.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I didn't say I saw this paper. Let us get it straight——

Mr. Gladstein: I withdraw the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Let the witness get it straight. You misstated the evidence and the witness is entitled to straighten it out.

Mr. Gladstein: I withdrew the question because I realized [6386] I used an incorrect name.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At the time you were talking to Mr. Jackman —I mean Mr. Coleman, that was a Saturday morning? A. I believe it was; yes.

Q. All right. At the time you talked to Mr. Coleman on Saturday morning had you already seen or heard about this spread in the Voice of the Federation calling you a stool pigeon?

A. No, not when I talked with Mr. Coleman.

Q. Did any of them talk about it?

A. I don't know if they had seen the paper or not.

Q. You say there had been some rumor about your being a stool pigeon? A. Yes.

Q. At the time you talked to Mr. Coleman, you mean? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you learn about those rumors?

A. Around the hall. You see, the Communist Party has quite a set-up in the Marine Fireman, and they have means of communicating with each other up and down the coast. They have a regular underground system of communication. One of their main methods of breaking down a fellow is that they immediately start a slanderous campaign against him. That is one of the main methods of the Party. If anybody had broke away from the [6387] Party they brand him as a Trotzkyite, or a stool pigeon, or a pimp, or what have you. They start building up right off the bat. They call them everything under the sun.

Q. From whom had you heard, Mr. Cannalonga, from whom had you heard that there were rumors against you before you talked to Mr. Coleman?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I submit this question has been asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. I think it has been covered generally.

A. I couldn't say just who it was. You get around a union hall and maybe there are a hundred fellows in the hall and somebody says "Hello, Blackie. I heard this and I heard that,"—and I don't know what his name is.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you name one person from whom you heard that there was a rumor that you were a stool pigeon before you talked to Mr. Coleman?

A. No, I couldn't name any name.

Q. Did Mr. Coleman tell you that? A. No.

Q. Did any of the men who there in Mr. Coleman's office at the time you were talking to Mr. Coleman tell you that?

A. No. I believe I had mentioned it to the boys in the [6388] office there at the time that I was quite sure that seeing that I had been in the Party, I had a general idea on h- they worked, and I was quite sure they would start a campaign of villifying my name and calling me a stool pigeon, and what have you.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You said that to Mr. Coleman?

A. Yes; I said that to Mr. Coleman.

Q. Is Mr. Coleman a Communist?

A. No; no, he is not.

Q. All right. Now, when he said "You are on a spot," and you said "No," you are not, what happened in the conversation after that?

A. I can't recall. It was just a general conversation. You get a bunch of fellows talking together and you are not going to write everything down or try to remember everything you talk about.

Q. How long did you talk with him?

A. Oh, about fifteen minutes or so.

Q. Can you remember anything at all that was said besides what you have already testified to?

A. Yes. He mentioned about the job on the West Cussetta and he mentioned about the permit man. I think it is, on the Cape Alva——

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: I don't know how to spell it. It is one [6389] of the new Maritime ships that has just been put into commission. It is being operated by the American Mail Line.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did he say about that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, this fellow was a permit man. It seems like he got drunk and didn't show up on the job. The ship sailed to Victoria, and the West Cussetta was going to Victoria. And when that Cape Alava was due—they had wired the ship for Charlie Danielson to take the job because she was heading for the Orient and the West Cussetta was heading for Seattle. He wanted me to take the job and I told him "No," I says, "I am going to wait for the Clevdon to come back. She was due back to Seattle after—she was due at Everett and loading for Honolulu. And he had mentioned that they were having quite a hard job getting electricians, as most of the electricians at the hall had been either working at the shipyards or working ashore. All over the country there was a quite a shortage of electricians. So he say, "Well," he says, "If you won't take it we will have to shanghai you on it."

I said, "No, I don't want it."

Then he mentioned the position that the organization was in if they couldn't get an electrician for it; that they had a signed contract with the steamship companies.

So I told him that I was going back out to the house, and I needed a little vacation, and I would think it over [6390] and come back Monday and if he hadn't got anybody by Monday that I would take the job. [6391]

Q. Let me ask you this: You say that Charlie Danielson—is that the name?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. (Continuing): ——had been the electrician on the West Cussetta? A. Yes.

Q. But he had transferred to this other ship that you named? A. Yes, in Victoria.

Q. In Victoria? A. Yes.

Q And the reason he did was because the electrician on this other ship—what is the name of that ship? A. The Cape Alava?

Q. The Cape Alava?

A. I think that is the name of it.

Q. The reason that Danielson took that job on the Cape Alava was because the electrician on the Cape Alava got drunk?

A. And never showed up.

Q. And that left an opening on the West Cussetta? A. Yes.

Q. And they wanted you to take the job on the West Cussetta? A. Yes. [6392]

Q. As an electrician? A. Yes.

Q. As Chief Electrician? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: That has all been gone over. The witness testified to that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, you took the job on the following Monday, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any assistants on that job?

A. No.

Q. You were the only one?

A. The only one.

Q. What kind of a ship is the West Cussetta?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. She is a Diesel job.

Q. That means a motor ship?

A. Yes, a motor ship.

Q. As distinguished from steamship?

A. Yes.

Q. On the West Cussetta do they have winches?

A. Yes.

Q. How many of them?

A. Oh, you have got your windlass forward. That is electric. Then you have two winches for each hatch. There is twelve, thirteen, fourteen winches on deck. You see, you [6393] have a capstan aft and windlass forward tying up the ship and hoisting anchor, and then two winches for each hatch.

Q. How are those winches operated?

A. By electricity.

Q. Anything else on the ship operated by electricity?

A. All your auxiliaries down in the engine room are electric. Well, everything is electric. And there was three generators on the ship.

Q. Dynamo? A. Yes.

Q. And you were the only one in charge of all the works? A. All that works, yes.

Q. While you were on that job after you took it did you have any trouble with the winches?

A. Yes. There was—off and on there was different winches going haywire and I'd fix them up and get them back in working order.

Q. Was the ship operating pretty steadily?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Was it operating an unusually long number of hours?

A. Well, I wouldn't say unusually long number of hours. Since the war that Britain has had the American ships, they have been what they call working "around the clock", all the American ships, so that they could move the cargo. [6394]

Q. Well then, the ship was really operating, with respect to the moving of cargo, practically day and night from the time that you went to work?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any danger in the handling of any of those electrical appliances on that ship?

A. No.

Q. None at all? A. No.

Q. What is the voltage? A. 230.

Q. Would you call it a responsible job?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you say that there was some trouble getting an electrician and that's why Mr. Coleman insisted that you take it? A. Yes.

Q. Do you have to have special qualifications of any kind to handle that type of job?

A. Yes.

Q. What special qualifications?

A. Well, you are rated by the Steamboat Inspectors. They rate you as a ship's electrician by giving you examination and they rate you as Chief Electrician, as Electrician and as Assistant Electrician.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Not every electrician could handle that kind of a [6395] job? A. No.

Q. In other words, that job involves special difficulties for which you have to have special qualifications? A. Yes.

Q. Did you work a lot of overtime after you took that job? A. I did.

Q. Yesterday you had an overtime sheet with you. Do you have that with you now?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Where is it?

A. I believe the FBI has it.

Mr. Gladstein: It was used for identification, I think, your Honor. I am wondering whether counsel would be good enough to produce it. Your Honor will remember that the witness used it to fix the dates.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: To refresh the witness' recollection.

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will give it to the witness.

Presiding Inspector: Give it to Mr. Gladstein.

(The documents referred to were passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, I show you some documents here which you used. [6396]

Presiding Inspector: It was used for identification, although it is not received in evidence.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you identify these documents?

A. Yes.

Q. What are they?

A. This is my overtime record while I was on that ship.

Q. Is it a correct record?

A. Yes. It has to be. It is in my handwriting.

Q. Is it a correct record? A. Yes.

Q. It covers the complete period you were on the West Cussetta? A. Yes.

Q. And it shows the overtime hours only?

A. Yes.

Q. In addition to the overtime hours shown on these documents you worked regular hours, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. What did they consist of?

A. Eight in the morning to five in the evening.

Q. Every day?

A. Every day but Saturdays and Sundays, and Saturday is from eight to noon.

Q. And Sunday is—— [6397]

A. (Interposing): Sunday is the day off.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer these for identification, your Honor. They haven't been marked.

Presiding Inspector: Oh. I understood they had been.

Mr. Del Guercio: No, they have not.

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon. I thought they had been. I took the statement that was made here yesterday as though they had been marked for identification. They may now be marked for identification.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

(The documents referred to were marked Alien's Exhibit No. 50 for identification.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you remember the date when you took that job on the West Cussetta?

A. It was on a—— (Examining calendar): ——April 20th. April—pardon me. Wait a minute. April 21st, Monday morning.

Q. Monday morning, April 21st? A. Yes.

Q. Where was this ship when you took it?

A. In Seattle.

Q. And have you worked continuously on that ship until you left on——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If the Court please, those time sheets were offered for identification. They show the hours and the day he started on the West Cussetta, and I think the witness should have them. [6398]

Presiding Inspector: If he wants to refresh his recollection from them he may have them, of course.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you worked continuously since April 21st of this year on the ship the West Cussetta until you got off on a Wednesday in May of this year? A. Yes.

Q. When is the first time that you saw Rosco Craythaft on that ship?

A. I could tell better by those overtime sheets.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

(Whereupon Alien's Exhibit 50 for identification was passed to the witness.)

A. (Continuing): I believe it was Wednesday.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Wednesday. What date? A. The 30th.

Q. What helps you fix that date from that schedule, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, nothing in particular. Just gives me an idea of where the ship was. You see, the ship arrived at Portland on 7:00 P.M.

Q. On what day?

A. On the 25th; Friday the 25th.

Q. And did it remain in Portland until the 30th?

A. Yes. It remained in to Portland until the 7th.

Q. All right. So the first time that Crayeraft [6399] actually saw you on that ship was nine days after you took the job?

A. Something like that.

Q. Do you remember the time of the day?

A. Yes. It was in the late afternoon or early evening.

Q. Somebody had been on that ship and asked you earlier that day whether you would care to speak to Roseo Crayeraft, is that right?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Do you know a man named Rodman?

A. Rodman? No. I'm still trying to place that Rodman's name.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Do you remember a man who came down to the ship and said he was from the Bridges Defense Committee and wanted to know if you would speak to Craycraft? A. No.

Q. You don't say that didn't happen?

A. No, I don't say it didn't happen.

Q. All right. Did you talk to Rodman at all at any time?

A. Well, I will tell you. It's like I say. There was quite a few fellows that come aboard ship. It seemed like it was a steady stream of them and I do recall when Craycraft come aboard and when he left, and he said that he was going to a meeting. And then there was a fellow by the gangway that [6400] asked him—asked Craycraft what my status was as he was going to some meeting and he wanted to inform the membership; and Craycraft says to hold it until he got through talking with me and he would see me that night.

Q. Did you talk to a man named Rodman at any time? A. I might have, yes.

Q. Do you remember anything that was said in that conversation?

Mr. Myron: Conversation with whom?

Mr. Gladstein: With Mr. Rodman.

Mr. Myron: He said he "might have" spoken to him.

Presiding Inspector: He said "I might have, yes". I don't know what he means by that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What do you mean by that, Mr. Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. It's like I say. I don't know the guy personally or good enough to know his—you know, know him by the name.

Presiding Inspector: Well, there was someone there that you talked with?

The Witness: Yes. There has been, like I told him——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well now, have you got any particular person in mind?

The Witness: I haven't.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, did anybody come from the Bridges Defense [6401] Committee? Did anybody come in and introduce himself as being from the Bridges Defense Committee?

A. Yes. I remember somebody introducing themselves from the Bridges Defense Committee.

Q. Didn't he say that his name was Rodman?

A. Well, I didn't take particular note at the time.

Q. Did you see Mr. Rodman at any time other than such occasion?

A. Well, if I am not mistaken, at two different times fellows said that they were from the Bridges Defense Committee.

Q. The same fellow or different fellows?

A. I don't even recall whether it was the same fellow or not.

Q. Well, didn't somebody on the afternoon of Wednesday April 30th, come to the ship and tell you that he was from the Bridges Defense Committee and ask you if you would care to talk to Rosco Crayeraft?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. In the afternoon? Do you know what time about?

Q. In the later afternoon.

A. Late afternoon? No. I recall talking to Crayeraft because I knew him a lot better than, you know, being on the Strike Committee with him. We had been working together quite a while on that Strike Committee during the '36-'37 strike, and I remember Rosco quite well and I remember when he came aboard the ship, and I'm quite sure it was late afternoon. [6402]

Presiding Inspector: Now, we are talking about the man who said he was from the Bridges Defense Committee.

The Witness: I don't recall.

Presiding Inspector: You remember someone was there.

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: We are calling that man "Rodman" in this examination.

That is right?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't he say——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Are you "calling" him "Mr. Rodman"?

Presiding Inspector: For the sake of identification.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Myron: He might not have been. We don't know. Of course, the witness can't remember.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he doesn't know who Rodman is. Well, call him "Gregory", if you want.

Mr. Gladstein: I shan't call him anything, your Honor. That will be better.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, before you ever saw Rosco Crayeraft in the late afternoon or early evening of Wednesday, April 30th didn't a man come down and tell you that he was from the Bridges Defense Committee and ask you whether you would care [6403] to talk to Rosco Crayeraft?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. It could have happened?

A. Well, let's see. On that Wednesday there was three or four fellows that come down.

Q. Were you sober that day?

A. Well, yes.

Q. All that day? A. Yes.

Q. All that evening?

A. Well, I had a couple of drinks.

Q. Were you sober? A. I believe I was.

Q. When you had a couple of drinks that doesn't make you completely drunk, does it?

A. Oh, no. Certainly not.

Q. So all that day, including the evening and the night, you were sober, were you?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. That's April 30th? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Wednesday, April 30th.

A. Wednesday, April 30th.

Q. Now, in the evening or late afternoon Rosco Craycraft did come down and see you on the ship, didn't he? A. He did. [6404]

Q. You were at the forward end of the ship, weren't you? A. No. I was in my room.

Q. Weren't you at the forward end when he say you for the first time?

A. I was at the forward end, you say?

Q. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: He is asking you if you weren't at the forward end.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't this what happened, Mr. Cannalonga? Weren't you at the forward end and didn't Craycraft come up and talk with you and then you suggested that both you and Craycraft go to your room? A. No.

Q. Did you go to your room with Craycraft?

A. I believe I met him in a passageway just outside of the room along the deck there.

Q. What were you doing just before you saw Craycraft for the first time that day?

A. Well, that's pretty hard to say because there was four or five shore side electricians working on the ship and I had been doing quite a bit of running around back and forth and checking up on their work, and— (Pause. [6405]

Q. Weren't you pretty busy on the winches at about that time? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Some of the winches at the forward end had broken down, hadn't they?

A. I recall some of the winches breaking down forward. There was one set there that was giving quite a bit of trouble that day and——

Q. (Interposing) What part of the ship was that on?

Mr. Del Guercio: Let the witness finish. He hasn't finished.

A. And that was up in the forward end, and I think it was No. 2 hatch, the winches for No. 2 hatch; and finally, after making a few adjustments and I corrected what was wrong, there was a couple of wires that had burned out.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And isn't that where you were, on the forward end when Craycraft came up there and saw you for the first time on April 30th?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. You are not sure about it? A. No.

Q. Do you remember that you and Craycraft went at your invitation into your stateroom?

A. Yes. I asked him into the room, and there was a couple of fellows in there drinking. [6406]

Q. How long did Craycraft spend with you on that occasion?

A. Oh, about five, ten minutes.

Q. What was the conversation between you and him?

A. He would ask me about the Bridges case and said he had a meeting to go to and he would come back later that night or the next day, and he wanted to have a good talk with me, and words to that effect.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What did you say to that?

A. I says "O.K.".

Q. Any other conversation?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Now, he and you were pretty good friends, weren't you? A. Yes, we had been.

Q. You had worked pretty close during the strike of 1936 and '7? A. Yes.

Q. And you and he had been on the same side of a pretty important argument on the question of relief to the Firemen in the '36 strike?

A. Correct.

Q. Didn't you talk about old times at all?

A. Oh, yes. We talked about the '36-'37 strike, and— [6407] (Pause).

Q. What else?

A. That's about all, and then he mentioned that he had to go to a meeting; some kind of a meeting.

Q. A meeting of his Union, wasn't it?

A. I believe it was, yes.

Q. Didn't he tell you that he had just come from a convention of the ILWU and he was a delegate to that convention and he was supposed to make a report to a meeting of his Local Union?

A. I believe he did mention that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, you offered him a drink on that occasion, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. He took one, didn't he?

A. Yes. I believe he took one of two. [6408]

Q. In the five minutes you think he took two?

A. I believe so; one or two. I wasn't——

Q. (Interposing) Did you take any drinks?

A. Yes, I took some.

Q. How many did you take?

A. The same amount he did.

Q. Are you sure?

A. No, I only took one.

Q. As a matter of fact, you didn't take any because you were busy on the winches, isn't that true? A. It might be so.

Q. All right. Now, he told you—withdraw that. Before he left it was understood, wasn't it, that after his union meeting he would come back and talk with you again?

A. Yes. He said he wanted to come back and talk with me.

Q. Did he come back that evening?

A. Well, I walked to the gangway with him and then that incident I told you about a little while ago, about that other official of the union asking what my status was.

Q. Who was that person?

A. I don't know his name.

Q. What union did he belong to?

A. I don't recall. It was affiliated with—some CIO affiliation. [6409]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannaloñga.)

Q. What does he look like?

A. Oh, he is sort of, I would say, about five foot eight and kind of dark complexion and wears glasses.

Q. Had you ever seen him before?

A. I believe I had seen him around the ship.

Q. Was he working on the ship? A. Yes.

Q. What job did he have?

A. I don't recall what job he had.

Q. Don't you know whether he was doing longshore work or whether he was a cook, or whether he was in a black gang?

A. He didn't belong to the ship's crew. He belonged to the gang—there were quite a few gangs on the ship working. They were doing a lot of work.

Presiding Inspector: Shore gangs?

The Witness: Yes. There were quite a few shore gangs there. I don't know what union he belongs to.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What time that night did Craycraft come back?

A. Oh, I would say about eight or nine o'clock, —somewhere in that vicinity. I don't know—it was kind of late.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. I was in my room and he came into the room. There was a couple of other fellows in it.

Q. In your room? [6410] A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Just before that there had been an accident right near your ship, hadn't there? A. Yes.

Q. A load had broken in the side of a building, isn't that right? A. Yes.

Q. They were taking a load out of the ship and it swung into the side of a building and broke it, isn't that true? A. Yes.

Q. And Craycraft came to your private stateroom, didn't he? A. Yes.

Q. Where was that located?

A. That is on the starboard side of the ship. It used to be a passenger room and they put the electrician in there because it was quiet and larger accommodations.

Q. You didn't have to bunk the way the other sailors did?

A. No. I had a private room all to myself with running water in it.

Q. And there were a couple of men in this stateroom at the time Craycraft came? A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it true that you and Craycraft then left that room and went to your little workshop?

[6411]

A. Well, when he saw the fellows in the room he says, "Well, we can't do any talking in here." He said, "Let's go some place where we can talk."

I told him, "I have a little work to do in the shop and if you want to come back there you can."

Q. You say he suggested it? A. Huh?

Q. You say he suggested that you go to your workshop?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has testified that Crayeraft said that he didn't want to talk in the presence of the other individuals.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is quite clear. If you want to have the answer read, all right.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that last question.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you have any drinks with Crayeraft then in the stateroom?

A. Yes; I believe we had one apiece.

Q. You think you had one apiece?

A. I believe so.

Q. Had you had any before that?

A. Did I have any before?

Q. Yes. A. I had a couple. [6412]

Q. Were you sober? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go with Crayeraft?

A. We went back to the workshop and——

Q. (Interposing) Where is that located?

A. That is in the after part of the ship between the hatches.

Q. Between No. 4 and No. 5 hatches, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you sat down on the work bench there, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't sit down on no work bench. I think I had a motor apart on that work bench.

One of the first words he asked me he——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. (Interposing) Wait just a minute, we will get to the conversation.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. I think the witness should be permitted to answer the question.

Presiding Inspector: He has answered the question. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At any time were you sitting down on that work bench, or any place in that work shop?

A. Well, yes, I could have been sitting down.

Q. You didn't have any drinks in that work shop, did you? [6413] A. No.

Q. You were there with Craycraft about 20 minutes to half an hour that time, weren't you?

A. I don't recall just exactly how long.

Q. Was it about that long?

A. I would say it was.

Q. You would say it was?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Now, did Craycraft tell you that he was able to get back and see you a little bit early because there wasn't a quorum at the longshore meeting?

A. Well, yes, I believe he did mention something about the reason why he got back early.

Q. I just want to ask another question about when you were back in your stateroom just before you came to the work shop with Craycraft that evening. Did you have a radio in your room?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And when these shipmates of yours were in that stateroom of yours with you, when Craycraft came in that evening, Wednesday, April 30th, the radio was playing, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. Wasn't that the reason that you and Craycraft left your stateroom so you could go somewhere so you could talk [6414] undisturbed?

A. No.

Q. What was the reason?

A. He didn't want to be seen with too many fellows.

Q. He didn't want to be seen?

A. He didn't want to be seen on the ship.

Mr. Myron: He already stated that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did he tell you that?

A. He called me aside and out in the passageway and he says, "I don't want too many people to see me aboard. I have got no business down here."

Q. Had he been in your stateroom before he did that?

A. Yes. He had been in and then called me out.

Q. How long afterwards?

A. Oh, not very long.

Q. How long was he in your stateroom before he called you out?

A. Just long enough to have a drink.

Q. Did you introduce him around to the other men? A. I don't believe I did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did everybody have a drink?

A. No. I just poured one out. The others had been helping themselves to the bottle.

Q. How big is that stateroom? [6415]

A. Oh, I couldn't say exactly how big, but it is quite a large stateroom. On the bulkhead to the starboard side of the ship there was a settee; then there was a dresser, and a bunk, and a writing table.

Q. Can you give the dimensions, approximately?

A. No, I couldn't. I am just describing it and that would give you a fair idea of the size of the room. There was a wash basin in there, and this desk was a writing desk with pigeon holes in it.

Q. When Craycraft——

A. (Interposing) And two large clothes lockers.

Q. What were you drinking then?

A. Rum.

Q. Where was the bottle of rum?

A. Sitting on top of the dresser.

Q. And were the other men, your shipmates, seated nearby?

A. No, sir; they were seated down near the after end of the room.

Q. How long is that room?

A. Oh, I should say about from the edge of this stand (indicating) to where you are at.

Q. The edge of the stand to where I am. My best guess is about ten feet—maybe more—what do you think?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object. Let's measure the space.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6416]

Q. Maybe it is 15 feet. Do you have any idea of whether it is 10, 15 or 50 feet?

Mr. Del Guercio: He stated what he thought it was.

A. It would be like me asking you if you knew the size of your hotel room.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean the one you were in, in my hotel room?

Presiding Inspector: He asked for your best judgment.

A. I thought maybe by describing the different articles in the room it would give him a fair idea. The bunk is 6½ feet long, and then from the foot of the bunk to the forward bulkhead I would say there is a door which opens at the foot of the bunk, an ordinary size ship's door, which is about three feet or so. That is nine and one half feet. Then there is a big clothes locker from the door to the forward bulkhead, and that is about two feet or so deep. So that would be 6, 6½, 9½—about 10 or 11 feet, or 12 feet.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. These shipmates of yours, were they in plain view of Craycraft when he was in that room for the five minutes or so? A. Yes.

Q. And he was in plain view of them, of course?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, going to your workshop, when you and Crayeraft [6417] were there on the evening of Wednesday, April 30, what did you talk about?

A. Well, he mentioned the Bridges case.

Q. Who mentioned it? A. Crayeraft.

Q. What did he say? A. He said——

Q. (Interposing) What did he say, Mr. Cannalonga? A. Huh?

Q. What did he say? A. I started——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He started to tell you.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You say he mentioned the Bridges case but I want to know what the words were.

A. I was starting, going into it to the best of my recollection of what he said.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said that Harry was worried about me and that they figured that the FBI had a rap over my head and they were exerting pressure, and that he had heard from one of the waterfront taverns——

Q. (Interposing) Did he say what tavern it was?

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness here hasn't finished.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has. If he hasn't [6418] finished you can bring it out on redirect.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he say where the waterfront tavern was located? A. No.

Q. Did he say in what city?

A. In San Francisco here—and that somebody had told him that they figured that there was a Mann Act charge hanging over my head. I turned around and told him, I said, "Hell, you are crazy. I was never involved in any Mann Act."

He said, "Well, that is what the rumors are," and, he says, "Now, if they have got anything like that we will try to"——

Q. (Interposing) "We will try to" what?

A. ——"We will try to protect you, or see what we can do for you."

And so I told him, I says, "There is no such thing." I says, "My record can be checked," I says, "to way back." So I says, "I don't see how they can have a Mann Act charge on me."

He kept insisting they did have a Mann Act charge and talked on at quite a length.

I told him I couldn't see how they had a Mann Act charge because I was never involved in one.

It was just around that mostly.

Q. Was anything else said? [6419]

A. And that—let me see—then he mentioned would I be willing to see you and I says "What for?"

He said, he says, "Harry is worrying about you and he is asking about you, and if you would talk to Gladstein maybe he can help you out."

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

I told him, I said, I says, "The only thing that I would like to know is why the Voice has branded me as a stool pigeon and a labor spy," because I had a fairly good, a good record during the 1934 and the 1935 tanker strike, and the 1936-1937 strike on the waterfront.

I thought it was—well, I used some nasty language then.

Q. You had seen the Voice of the Federation before Wednesday, April 30th?

A. No.

Q. How did you know about it if you hadn't seen it?

A. How did I know about it? Well, how do you know when people start spreading rumors? You don't know how they start, or who talks about it, but I know, and I knew the workings of the Communist Party, and I could practically predict the day I got off the stand what was going to be done, and how they were going about it It is a method the Communist Party uses.

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, on Wednesday, April 30th, when you were talking to Crayeraft, you just got through saying that you [6420] talked to Crayeraft about how the Voice of the Federation had called you a stool pigeon? A. Yes.

Q. Did that happen?

A. I am quite sure it did.

Q. That evening?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, not that evening.

A. Well—if I could get ahold of the files of the Voice of the Federation maybe I could tell you better.

Q. Have you ever seen an article in the Voice of the Federation calling you a stool pigeon or as having been intimidated by the FBI?

A. I saw an article in the Voice of the Federation, a picture of me, and other witnesses, and right down at the bottom of the whole thing, saying "Stool pigeons, rats and labor spies."

The Reporter: The word after "Stool pigeons"?

Presiding Inspector: The other word was "rats"?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did you see it?

A. In the Voice of the Federation.

Q. Where were you when you saw it?

A. Aboard ship.

Q. And is that the article that you had reference to in [6421] your discussion with Craycraft on Wednesday, April 30th?

A. Well, I am not quite sure whether it was that article or not.

Q. What other article could it have been?

A. Well, it could have been, like I say—rumors had already started to spread and different ones aboard ship had mentioned that they heard others call me a stool pigeon, and words to that effect, for appearing against Bridges.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. When you talked to Crayeraft on the night of Wednesday, April 30th, did you talk to him then about the article in the Voice of the Federation calling you a stool pigeon?

A. Well, I am not quite sure whether I mention that particular article. I did mention the fact that there was quite a few rumors going around that I was a stool pigeon, a labor spy, and a rat, and everything else that goes with it.

Q. You know, as a matter of fact, that no such article appeared or was seen by you until several days later, isn't that true?

A. I am not saying about the Voice of the Federation. I am telling you about the rumors that were going around.

Q. When was the first time you saw the article in the Voice of the Federation?

A. There was a couple of articles, wasn't there?

Q. When was the first time you saw any article in the [6422] Voice of the Federation in which there was a group of pictures, all of whom were labeled, as you have said "stool pigeons, rats and labor spies," and which included your picture among among them—when was the first time you saw that?

A. I don't recall when I first saw it. I know there were two articles, there were two issues—the issues right after I left the stand, and the following issue, so I don't know what issue it was.

Q. Well, that Wednesday night that you talked to Crayeraft you have just finished saying that

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Craycraft asked you whether you would talk to me. Do you remember giving that testimony just now?

A. What is that, sir?

Q. On that Wednesday night when you were talking to Craycraft do you say that Craycraft asked you whether you would talk to me, is that right? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is not what the witness said. I don't believe counsel should——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that what happened?

Mr. Myron: He already stated.

Mr. Del Guercio: He stated what happened.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will hear it again. There seems to be some misunderstanding.

[6423]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that what happened, Mr. Cannalonga?

The Witness: Will you read that back, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as follows:

"On that Wednesday night when you were talking to Craycraft do you say that Craycraft asked you whether you would talk to me, is that right?

"A. Yes.").

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you say "Yes"?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: As the reporter read it, yes.

Mr. Gladstein: To the last question?

Presiding Inspector: The one before. The last question is, "Is that so?"

Mr. Gladstein: The reason I asked that was because there was an objection that I had misstated evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Have the question and answer read again.

(The question and answer referred to were reread by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did you say when Crayeraft—withdraw that. What did Crayeraft say that I wanted to talk to you about?

A. It is like I told you previous to this, that he [6424] mentioned the fact that Bridges was worried and stated that you could help me out in regards to the FBI rap that they supposed that the FBI had hanging over my head.

Q. What did you say to that?

A. And I told him, I said, "Well, I want to get a lot of things clear." I said, "Rumors have been spread around the waterfront here about me being a stool pigeon and a labor spy"——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) We have been over and over this matter.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, we have.

Mr. Gladstein: Please don't interrupt the witness.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Go ahead, Mr. Cannalonga.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have an objection here, if the Court please.

Presiding Inspector: What is the objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: That the matter has been gone over at least——

Presiding Inspector: I will let him answer. We haven't been very strict upon this. Questions have been asked by both counsel repeatedly.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you continue?

Presiding Inspector: It is very bad practice.

The Witness: You will have to read it back now.

[6425]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. The last question I asked you want read, is that right?

The Witness: And the answer.

Mr. Myron: The question and part of the answer.

Mr. Gladstein: You want the question?

Mr. Myron: You asked him to continue.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want the reporter to read back to you the last question I asked and all of the answer that you have given so far?

The Witness: Yes.

Will you do that, Mr. Reporter?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Is there anything else you want to say on that?

The Witness: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a recess, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; surely.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[6426]

Presiding Inspector: All right, Mr. Gladstein. You may continue.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, at the time on Wednesday, April 30, 1941 in the evening or night time when you and Rosco Craycraft were in your little workshop on the ship West Cussetta, what did you say to Craycraft when he suggested that you talk to me?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as having already been answered at least twice.

Presiding Inspector: I am not sure. I don't remember that direct question being asked. I will take it.

The Witness: Would you read that question back, please?

Presiding Inspector: The general conversation was asked for.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Well, it was mostly a general conversation.

Presiding Inspector: No. There was some time when he suggested "Will you speak to Mr. Gladstein"? What did you say when he said that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: I said "All right."

Q. What did he say that he wanted you to talk to me about?

A. It's like I told you before: in regards helping [6427] me out on that rap that the FBI had re the Mann Act.

Q. And you said that there wasn't any such rap?

A. I told him that there was no such rap.

Q. Then why did you say "Yes," you would want to speak to me on that subject?

A. I didn't say I wanted to see you on that subject.

Q. What subject were you willing to see me on?

A. In fact, I told him he was crazier than hell that the FBI had a Mann Act rap on me, that there was no such thing. And I kept telling him that they had nothing on me and he kept insisting that they did. And, like I just told you, that was my answer. But I was willing to speak to you.

Q. What were you willing to speak to me about?

A. Well, to see how this rumor started against me and why it was started.

Q. The rumor that you were a stool pigeon?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Craycraft tell you that I was willing to come to Portland to talk to you about a rumor that you were a stool pigeon?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No. There was nothing mentioned about why you was willing to come to Portland.

Q. Did you tell Craycraft that you were willing to see me only to find out why there was a rumor that you were a stool pigeon?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered, if [6428] your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: He wants to conclude this. I think he is within his rights on that.

The Witness: What was that, please?

Presiding Inspector: I don't remember the exact form of the question.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read it, please?

The Witness: I believe I have answered it.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Well, your Honor, if he looks back, I have answered that about——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) He has already given the entire conversation.

Presiding Inspector: No. I don't know whether it is justified by the evidence or not, but he is inquiring whether you told him that you were willing only on account of the rumors to talk with Mr. Gladstein.

The Witness: Well, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You told him that you were willing to talk to Mr. Gladstein?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Now, did you go any further than that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: No. [6429]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you have any discussion with Mr. Crayeraft as to what I would be interested in talking to you about?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, I submit, your Honor, he has given the complete conversation.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have been all over it, haven't you?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think I have asked that question, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, very well.

The Witness: Read the question again, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Well, it's like I said before: that Crayeraft was insisting that the FBI had something on me and that they had this here Mann Act charge.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Now, go on from there and answer it. Did he tell you what Mr. Gladstein wanted to talk with you about?

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ask him?

A. No. I don't recall ever asking him why you wanted to come up.

Q. Did you think I had something to do with these [6430] rumors against you?

A. I don't know.

Q. At that time did you think so?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't know. You could of and you couldn't of.

Q. Did you tell that to Mr. Craycraft?

A. No, I didn't tell him that.

Q. What else was said in that conversation?

Mr. Del Guercio: He has already given the entire conversation.

Presiding Inspector: If there is anything more he can give it.

A. I don't remember any more, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You don't recall anything else?

A. No.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, Mr. Cannalonga, that on that evening Mr. Craycraft told you that the Bridges Defense Committee was interested in knowing why you had given testimony which they knew to be false?

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Did it take place or not?

A. I don't believe it did.

Q. You can't answer for sure?

A. Well, it seems funny to me that you have all this stuff verbatim and, you take the average fellow when he is talking, he can't remember. [6431]

Presiding Inspector: Well, he is asking you if you can't say positively to say to the best of your recollection.

The Witness: No, I couldn't, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You couldn't? You haven't any recollection or you mean to the best of your recollection you didn't have? What do you mean? I don't understand.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: Well, the way he put it, your Honor, I don't ever recall making any such statement.

Presiding Inspector: Or his making any such statement to you?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: He says he doesn't recall making any such statement, Mr. Craycraft making any such statement to him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't it true that you told Mr. Craycraft that the FBI had "put the heat" on you?

A. No.

Q. Isn't it true that you told Mr. Craycraft that Ed Fisher had turned you in to the FBI?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Ed Fisher?

A. Yes, I know Ed Fisher.

Q. Who is Ed Fisher?

A. He used to be a member of the Communist Party in Seattle at the time I was, and I don't know whether he is a [6432] member of the Party now or not.

Q. Do you know whether he is related to Mr. Honig? A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody that he was?

A. No. I do know that he got married and I think the girl he married had that name "Honig."

Q. She was the sister of Nat Honig, isn't that right?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't know. I have never met the woman.

Q. Isn't that what you heard?

A. Well, I don't recall. I don't believe I had heard, or did I?

Q. Isn't it true that you said——

Excuse me. I don't know whether he finished that answer or not. Will you read the last question and answer?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Witness: You see, I wasn't particularly interested in the man and I might have heard that he married this Honig, is it, Honig's sister or not. I might have heard it, you know, in general conversation along the waterfront and I wasn't interested enough in the man to take a note of it.

Q. Didn't you ever say to Rosco Crayeraft that you understood that Ed Fisher had turned you in?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had heard that Ed Fisher was a brother-in-law of Nat Honig?

[6433]

A. No.

Q. Did you tell that to Crayeraft?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. In the Clyde Hotel in my presence?

A. No.

Q. You are sure about that?

A. I am quite positive it didn't happen.

Q. Are you sure that didn't happen?

A. I am quite positive it didn't happen.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Are you sure that there was no discussion about Fisher in the Clyde Hotel?

A. There might have been some discussion. I couldn't say whether there was or not.

Q. What was the discussion?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know anything about the discussion in the Clyde Hotel about Ed Fisher?

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Then how do you know that the discussion about Ed Fisher wasn't along the lines that you said Ed Fisher had turned you in?

A. That I don't know. It's like I said when I first came on the stand, the day I went up to that hotel of yours I had been drinking pretty heavy and I could have said a lot of things and not remember it. It's like I say, I had been drinking pretty heavy and I could have said black was white. [6434]

Q. How can you be sure now that you didn't say——

A. (Interposing): It's like I said.

Q. Just a minute. (Continuing)—in the Clyde Hotel that Ed Fisher had turned you in to the FBI?

A. I am not sure.

Q. And how can you be sure now that you didn't say in the Clyde Hotel that you had checked and learned that Ed Fisher was a brother-in-law of Nat Honig?

A. You just got through telling me that I said that on the night of the 30th. Now, is this the night of the 30th or in the hotel?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. I am asking you about the first time you came to the Clyde Hotel. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, yes. I remember going up to the hotel.

Q. I think you said yesterday it was about three o'clock Saturday afternoon?

A. Somewheres around that.

Q. Can you be sure now, are you positive that you didn't say in the Clyde Hotel on that day in the presence of Craycraft and myself that Ed Fisher had turned you in and that you had checked on Fisher and learned that he was a brother-in-law of Nat Honig?

A. No, I couldn't be positive.

Q. You mean that you were so drunk on Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel when you saw me that you don't know [6435] what took place there?

A. It's like I said the first day on the stand: Everything was pretty hazy; my memory was pretty well fogged up as I had been hitting the bottle pretty heavy and I could have made those statements, yes, and I couldn't have.

Q. Were you drunk or not?

A. I was drunk.

Q. Were you so drunk that you don't know what what took place?

A. Like I said: I was able to walk and do a lot of things automatically and I might have said these statements, and I might have not.

Q. Were you so drunk that you don't know what took place that Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has answered that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was the same thing true the following morning? A. Yes.

Q. You were just as drunk on Sunday morning in my hotel room and in the lawyer's office as you were were the previous day?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you sure of anything that was said by anybody in the Clyde Hotel on the afternoon of that Saturday when you [6436] were in my room?

A. I am not positive.

Q. Are you sure o fanything that was said by anybody on the following Sunday morning in the Clyde Hotel?

A. No, I'm not positive.

Q. Are you sure of anything that was said by anybody in the lawyer's office on the Sunday morning when you, a shorthand reporter, another attorney, Rosco Crayeraft and myself were in an office building?

A. No. I'm not sure what happened there either.

Q. Let's go back to this Wednesday night, April 30th. Have you given all the conversation on all the subject matters that you remember were discussed that evening?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I believe I have.

Mr. Del Guercio: I believe that question is improper, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: No. I think that is perfectly proper. He wants to conclude it now.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Craycraft say anything as to what he was going to do about getting me to the North to talk with you?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over a number of times.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think so. [6437]

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think that has, about getting him up.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear it. I don't recall it.

Mr. Gladstein: I am sure I didn't ask that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Did Craycraft say that to you on Wednesday night or not?

A. I believe he mentioned something about phoning and flying.

Presiding Inspector: He mentioned something about phoning and flying.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did he say.

A. Well, I don't—I think he mentioned that he was going to phone you and that you would fly up.

Q. What else did he say about me?

A. I believe that's all I can recall.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did he say that you were to see me the next day?

A. No. He said he would see me the next day.

Q. Did he see you the next day?

A. Thursday? No.

Q. When did he say—on Wednesday night when did he say that he was going to see you the next day?

A. He said he'd come down to the ship. [6438]

Q. What was he going to come down to the ship for? To tell you whether I would come up, and, if so, when?

A. No. He wanted to talk to me some more.

Q. Was he going to give you a report on the following morning when he came down to the ship about phoning me? A. No.

Q. He said nothing like that?

A. No. I don't think he—he said he was going to make out a report.

Q. Did Craycraft tell you on that Wednesday evening when he was going to phone me?

A. No.

Q. Did he tell you or indicate to you that he was going to do it pretty quick?

A. No, no. I don't recall whether he mentioned when he was going to phone or why or how.

Q. Did you get the impression from Craycraft that he was anxious to have you talk to me?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you get the impression from him as to why he was anxious to have you talk with me?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No. The only impression I got was he seemed to have an idea that the FBI had a Mann Act charge hanging over my head, and I don't know where he ever got that idea. And that's [6439] about the whole thing that I can recall.

Q. Was anything else said that Wednesday evening between you and Craycraft?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, he told you, didn't he, that he had to go to Seattle the next day in order to make a report to another Union meeting?

A. Yes. Since you—I believe he did mention Seattle and the meeting.

Q. Isn't it true that you told him that if he wanted to he could drop in on Doctor Buckner and check upon the name of the pills that you had been taking at the time you came out of the Marine Hospital last year?

A. No.

Q. Was the name Doctor Buckner mentioned?

A. Yes, the name Doctor Buckner was mentioned.

Q. Who mentioned it?

A. He did. He asked me who was taking care of me when I was sick in Seattle, and—and he seemed—his impression was that I hadn't been sick and he wanted to check up on me. That's the impression I got. And I told him, I said "Well, you go to Seattle and see Doctor Buckner and he has got a record of me in the Marine Hospital when I threw my hip out and what they did for me," and all he would have to do is to go to Seattle and check up with this doctor Buckner. [6440]

Q. Then you did tell him the name of Doctor Buckner, didn't you? A. Why, yes.

Mr. Myron: He said that on the record.

The Witness: Sure I told him the name of Doctor Buckner.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And you did suggest that he could check with Doctor Buckner about something regarding your injury, is that right?

Presiding Inspector: He has just said that.

A. I just got through telling you that.

Mr. Del Guercio: He said it on direct and cross.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he has a right to ask him on cross if he said it on direct.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Had you been using any kind of dope of any kind in the hospital?

A. Now, will you clarify "dope"?

Q. Well, I mean pills, that, to use your language, would have a tendency to "dope you up", in any way. Do you understand me?

Mr. Del Guercio: Used whose language? He hasn't used any language like that, if your Honor please.

A. I don't understand you. Is it morphine or what, or sleeping tablets?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein: [6441]

Q. Did you take pills to kill the pain in your hip last year?

A. No. You see, when I hurt myself on the ship it happened out at sea and the captain of the ship went ashore and saw the doctor, and I had gone ashore in Juneau and saw the doctor there, and then the ship just pulled in long enough so that I could see the doctor and the doctor said that I would be better off down in Seattle in the Marine Hospital in Seattle, I would get better care. So he wrote out a prescription and part of it was filled in Juneau and on the way down stopped at Ketchican. They had to pick up some cannery workers in Ketchican, and he went ashore and bought me the other half of the prescription, and it was sleeping tablets. A dozen and a half he bought. I think they were "ambytols". And so I took them as it was directed, and when we got down to Seattle I had eleven of them left.

Q. Do you have any difficulty remembering the name of that tablet? A. "Ambytol".

Q. I say, have you had any difficulty in remembering that name? A. No.

Q. You have always remembered it well?

A. Yes. It's a coal tar by product.

Q. Where did you get that prescription?

A. In Ketchican. [6442]

Q. From whom?

A. The prescription. I got that from the doctor in Juneau and it was——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. (Interposing): What doctor?

A. Marine doctor.

Q. What is his name?

A. Oh, I don't recall his name. I know that he handles all the marine cases.

Q. Describe him in a general way.

A. Oh, he's an elderly fellow, white hair, and I believe he wears a goatee.

Q. When did you get the prescription from him?

A. When?

Q. Yes.

Q. Well, I wouldn't recall the exact day.

Q. Approximately.

A. Oh, about the middle of September.

Q. Last year? A. Yes.

Q. And you got about 18?

A. Not there. I got—the prescription was partly filled in Juneau and the rest of it filled in Ketchican.

Q. How many tables or pills all together did you get from that prescription?

A. A dozen and a half. [6443]

Q. And have you ever had any other prescription or used any other prescription for those tablets? A. No.

Q. Or any similar tablets? A. No.

Q. How many of those 18 tablets or pills have you ever used?

A. Well, I got 11 left, so I used 7 of them.

Q. Now, that Wednesday evening on the West

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Cusseta, didn't you tell Roscoe Crayeraft that when you were coming out of your Union hall a Mr. Boyd from the Immigration Department got hold of you last October?

A. No. I don't believe I ever said that to Crayeraft.

Q. Are you sure that you didn't?

A. I'm quite positive I didn't because, in the previous testimony about Mr. Boyd contacting me and then going up to the FBI office—oh, no; I never recall making that statement to Crayeraft.

Q. What did you tell him about Mr. Boyd?

A. I don't believe I have said anything to him about Mr. Boyd.

Q. Did you tell him how the FBI happened to get hold of you? A. No.

Q. Did he ask? [6444]

A. No, he didn't ask me.

Q. Did he ask you about the first time that you were with the FBI Agents?

A. No. I don't recall him asking anything about the FBI. The only thing his mention of the FBI was that they had a rap on me and it involved the Mann Act. That's about the only thing that I can recall referring to the FBI.

Q. When he said that to you, when he mentioned the Mann Act did you ask him where he got his information?

A. Yes. Like I told you half a dozen times, he claims he got it out of a tavern on the waterfront here in San Francisco.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you ask him anything else about it?

A. No. I thought——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Your Honor, I submit that we have gone over that, surely.

Presiding Inspector: I think we have been over that, haven't we?

Mr. Myron: Three times, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I wouldn't be sure about the "times".

Mr. Del Guercio: The record, I think, will show that we have been over it at least that.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you been over it?

Mr. Gladstein: Not this question. I have the previous question, [6445]

Presiding Inspector: Ask the one you haven't been over.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After there was this talk about Craycraft learning about a rumor in a waterfront tavern in San Francisco about a Mann Act charge did you ask him anything further about it?

A. No. I thought it was pretty fantastic, because I knew in my own mind that I had never traveled across any state lines with a woman, and so the Mann Act just covers going across state lines, if I am not mistaken. There is enough publicity about it. And so, like I said, I couldn't figure out where he ever got that idea.

Q. Did he ask you anything at all about the times that you had been with the FBI Agents?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, this is on Wednesday night?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

A. On Wednesday night?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have gone back to Wednesday night there at least four or five times.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But after he has exhausted his recollection it may suggest things.

The Witness: Will you repeat that, please?

Presiding Inspector: I think he has given his recollection. Now you can ask him direct questions to refresh his recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. [6446]

Presiding Inspector: Was anything said about that matter?

The Witness: No. It is like I stated, the only thing I recall in regards to the FBI was this rap they held—so-called rap they held over my head.

By Mr Gladstein:

Q. You mean there was no discussion between you and Craycraft as to whether or not you had given false statements to the FBI?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to the question.

Mr. Myron: It has been gone over before.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. He is suggesting. He is trying to refresh his recollection.

A. No, not that I recall.

Presiding Inspector: From his standpoint.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You say not that you recall. You mean that you are uncertain about it?

A. No. I am not uncertain about it. I do recall him mentioning that I could have made false statements and I denied it to him, but as far as specially bringing in the FBI into the conversation it's like I say, about the—I recall him mentioning the FBI in regard to that Mann Act.

Q. Then you do recall some talk about false statements, do you? [6447]

A. He was the one that mentioned it, yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. Like I just told you. Will you read back that answer.

Q. No, no; what did he say to you about false statements?

Mr. Del Guercio: What was it that you wanted?

A. Oh, I just got through telling him in regards to how he mentioned it I could have made some false statements in the first deposition, and I told him, no, I didn't.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did he say to you about false statements? A. I just got through telling you.

Q. Did he say to you "Cannalonga, you lied under oath"? A. No.

Q. What did he say?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, your Honor, we are going back again.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. He is pressing him now to find out what was the conversation about false statements.

A. Well, it's like I said: Crayeraft insisted that I could make some false statements and I told him, No, I hadn't made any false statements and that everything I had [6448] said I thought was the truth.

Q. Do you say that Crayeraft insisted that you "could" make false statements or that you "did"?

A. That I could have or did.

Q. Did you ask him what false statements he claims you made?

A. No, because I figured that——

Q. (Interposing): Did he tell you?

A. No, I don't believe he did.

Q. When he told you that you had made false statements, what did you do?

A. I just laughed it off because it was kind of silly.

Q. Did you feel mad?

A. No. Why should I feel mad? I just thought it was silly to—to suggest anything of the sort.

Q. Now, before he left you that Wednesday night Crayeraft told you that he was going up to Seattle to report to a longshore union meeting and he was going to be back in Portland on Friday, didn't he?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have gone into that. We are going over every situation at least three or four times, if the Court please.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: No. That hasn't been gone over. At least part of it hasn't. The first part has been gone over about going to this meeting, but not that he would be back Friday, as I remember.[6449]

Did he tell you after going to this meeting he was going to be back Friday?

The Witness: No, I don't recall when he—(Pause).

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he tell you that he was coming back to see you after he did his work for the union in Seattle?

A. Yes. He did mention that he was going to see me again, but he didn't specify when or where or—(Pause).

Q. Well, he saw you again on Friday, Friday evening, didn't he?

A. Yes, I believe he did.

Q. 8:00 o'clock about, wasn't it?

A. Well, I couldn't say the exact time.

Q. And the ship had moved in the meantime from the Irvin Dock to the Sunset Oil docks, hadn't it?

A. Yes. Sunset was—that's down about 12 miles out of Portland.

Q. And when he saw you that evening the two of you walked back to the after deck, didn't you?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, have we gone over this?

Presiding Inspector: No, I think not, not on cross examination.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Have you been over this?

Mr. Gladstein: No. This is an entirely different evening. [6450]

Presiding Inspector: You went over it, I think (addressing Mr. Del Guercio).

A. No, I don't recall going back.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you sober?

A. Yes, I was sober.

Q. All that evening?

A. I'm quite sure I was.

Q. And you knew what was being said and what was taking place? A. I believe so.

Q. Up to this point you hadn't been drunk at any of the times that you had seen Crayeraft, is that right? A. No.

Q. Is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And as you were walking back to the after deck there, you and Crayeraft, you saw a man named Burt Nelson, didn't you?

A. Well, that wasn't on the after deck.

Q. No. But you saw him as you were leaving with Crayeraft, isn't that right; when Crayeraft was leaving the ship.

Presiding Inspector: After the conversation.

A. Oh, yes. I believe Burt Nelson did come aboard. [6451]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You were walking Crayeraft up to the gangplank and that's where you saw Nelson, isn't that right? A. Yes, that could have been.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And all three of you stood around the gangplank and talked for a minute before Craycraft and Nelson left, isn't that right?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. All right. Now, before that happened Craycraft and you were alone in your room, isn't that true? A. Alone in my room?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, that's hard to say. I don't remember the both of us being alone in that room at that time.

Q. Well now, isn't it a fact that Craycraft told you then that he had been talking on the telephone to me and that I had asked Craycraft to find out from you whether you would talk with me? Didn't he tell you that?

The Witness: Will you repeat that again?

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. He might have said it that way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And didn't you tell him that you were willing to do so? [6452]

A. Yes. I believe Wednesday I told him I was willing to talk to you.

Presiding Inspector: We have got down to Friday now.

The Witness: Yes, I know.

Presiding Inspector: Did you tell him on Friday that you were willing to talk with Mr. Gladstein?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: Yes, I did. Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And didn't he ask you if you were willing to repeat the same things to me that you had told to him? A. No.

Q. You are sure that didn't happen?

A. I am positive.

Q. What makes you so positive about that, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Huh? Well, there was nothing to repeat. The way you ask that question you might think that he took shorthand notes of our conversation. That's the way I get it. Now, if you will read that question back again, Mr. Gladstein, maybe I'll——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Certainly.

Mr. Myron: He could be positive of what he said or what he knows he said.

Mr. Gladstein: We will read it back.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question. [6453]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Which question do you wish read back?

A. This last question and the answer.

Presiding Inspector: And the answer.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. And didn't he ask you if you were willing to repeat the same things to me that you had told to him? "A. No.

"Q. You are sure that didn't happen?

"A. I am positive.")

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: Yes, I am still positive about it, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I am asking you now what is it makes you positive about that?

Mr. Myron: He says nothing happened. I suppose he could be positive.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has answered it.

Mr. Gladstein: I suppose he will adopt the answer that Mr. Myron just gave him.

Mr. Myron: That is the only answer he could give.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that your answer, the one that Mr. Myron just gave? [6454]

Mr. Myron: Is that your question now? I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: Did you get what Mr. Myron said in the record?

The Reporter: Yes, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Then I will allow the question.

A. No. I answered his question, the question of Mr. Gladstein. [6455]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't Crayeraft tell you that he would try to phone me that night, and would let you know the next day whether I could come up?

A. No.

Q. He didn't say that? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You are positive of that too?

The Witness: I don't get this word "positive," your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Are you sure?

The Witness: Yes, I am sure.

Presiding Inspector: Certain?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You are absolutely certain?

The Witness: "Positive"—that is being infallible, isn't it? After all——

Presiding Inspector: Well, I suppose there are degrees of it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Don't you know what the word "positive" means? A. Well, I understand——

Q. (Interposing) Do you know what it means or not? A. Yes—you are infallible. [6456]

Q. Is that what you meant when you said a while ago that you were positive?

A. No, I didn't mean that—now, you are bringing up infallibility. Well, there is only one man that is infallible.

Q. Who brought up "infallibility"?

Presiding Inspector: Don't wrangle with the witness. Ask the next question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How long were you with Crayeraft that evening, that Friday evening?

A. Oh, I don't know how long I was with him.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

I couldn't definitely state whether I was with him five minutes or five hours. It was like I said, there was a pretty steady stream of fellows coming aboard ship to talk to me about the Bridges case, and it was a continuous stream, and every time I turned around there was some people asking me about the case.

Q. You mean that you couldn't, can't now tell whether you spent five minutes or five hours with Craycraft on Friday evening, May 2?

A. Oh, I would say approximately from 5 to 15 or 20 minutes.

Q. All right. What did you talk about with him?

A. Well, I don't recall every word that we said.

Q. Do you recall anything? [6457]

Presiding Inspector: He has recalled some of it, hasn't he?

Mr. Gladstein: He has been asked some specific questions.

Presiding Inspector: You don't want to go over it all again?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: Was there anything else?

The Witness: No, there isn't.

Presiding Inspector: Now, if you want to suggest anything to him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Craycraft tell you that he was going to phone me and let you know the next day whether I was coming?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. You asked that question before.

Presiding Inspector: You have been over that.

The Witness: And I answered that.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have been over that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was the next time you saw Mr. Crayeraft after that Friday evening, May 2?

A. Saturday.

Q. When?

A. Oh, I believe it was in the afternoon some time.

Q. You saw him in the morning about ten o'clock, [6458] didn't you?

A. I don't recall seeing him in the morning.

Q. Didn't the ship move over to the Crown Mills?

A. I remember the ship moving; yes.

Q. Didn't Crayeraft come up to the ship and see you that morning?

A. No, I don't recall seeing him that morning.

Q. Didn't Crayeraft tell you that I would arrive on the 1:30 plane that afternoon?

A. No. I recall calling him up at some grocery store.

Q. When did you call him up at a grocery store?

A. Saturday morning. It is like I say, maybe I didn't call him up. I don't know.

Q. Did you or didn't you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Like I say, I don't know.

Q. Why don't you know?

A. Well, that was my birthday and I was celebrating.

Q. When did you begin celebrating?

A. Oh, about eight o'clock in the morning.

Q. When did you think you called him up?

A. Well, I thought maybe I called him up some time during the morning, about ten o'clock or so.

Q. Where do you think you called him?

A. The way I remember, I thought I called him at some grocery store. [6459]

Q. Maleti's grocery? A. Maleti's.

Q. What did you call him up for?

A. To make a date with him, if I am not mistaken.

Q. A date of what kind?

A. To meet him out on the dock at three o'clock.

Q. What for?

A. We were going to see you, I think; yeah.

Q. That is what you called up for on Saturday morning?

A. I believe that is what I did Saturday morning.

Q. That is, to find out when you could see me?

A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: He didn't say that.

The Witness: (Interposing) To see him.

Mr. Del Guercio: He already testified why he called.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: He wants him to explain what "make a date" is.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean an appointment by "date"?

A. Appointment to meet a fellow.

Q. Well, you called up on Saturday morning to find out from Crayeraft what time you could see me? A. No.

Q. What did you call him up for?

A. What time I could see him, Crayeraft. [6460].

Q. What did you want to see him about?

A. He told me to call up.

Q. When did he tell you that?

A. I think it was a couple of days before that.

Q. What did he tell you to call up for?

A. Well, he told me if I could get off the ship and see him, and if I could to call him.

Q. What for? A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you ask him what he wanted you to call for?

A. No. He said just to make a call, so I called.

Q. What did you say to him when you called him?

A. I had in mind we were going to meet you.

Q. Where did you get that idea?

A. From the Wednesday previous. He said you were going to fly up and get here Saturday, I think.

Q. He told you that on the previous Wednesday?

A. Oh, it would have been Wednesday or Thursday or Friday—I don't know.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. All right. So you called up on the phone, called him up on the phone and you asked what?

A. I asked for Crayeraft.

Q. Did you get him? A. Yes.

Q. What did you say to him when you got him?

[6461]

A. I said, "Well, I will see you at three."

Q. Who said that?

A. I did; I think I said it.

Q. Was that the first thing you said?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell him where you would see him?

A. I think I told him I would see him out on the dock.

Q. Did he ask you what for? A. No.

Q. Was there any talk about me?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Well, you said that you intended to call him regarding the appointment with me. Isn't that what you intended?

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't what the witness' testimony is.

Presiding Inspector: He called to make a date.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. To make a date, is that right?

A. With Crayeraft. You see, this whole thing on Saturday—let me see——

Presiding Inspector: We know what you said. There is no use going over that. We know it was your birthday and that you were celebrating on your birthday. [6462]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: A lot of this stuff is hazy, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: We understand that you said that too.

Go on.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did you say to him on the phone?

A. It is like I told you, I might have phoned, and I don't know. I am just assuming that I phoned him.

Q. What would you be phoning him for?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over.

Presiding Inspector: He said he phoned him to make a date.

A. In the afternoon, meet him in the afternoon.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did you want to meet him in the afternoon for, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, he said he wanted to see me.

Q. When did he tell you he wanted to see you?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was it before you phoned him?

A. It could have been.

Q. Was it before you started celebrating?

A. Now, you have got me on that.

Presiding Inspector: You say, Mr. Cannalonga, I think, it was on Wednesday you had been asked to call him up at that [6463] time, at this grocery store. Isn't that right?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: No, your Honor. You see, I might have met him that morning, and I might not have made this phone call, you see—I don't know.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you remember anything at all about it, do you remember a phone call?

A. It was either—it might have been a phone call for me to call back. It could have been that way.

Presiding Inspector: Well, now, you have said a number of times about this grocery store, that there was to be a telephone conversation. You didn't put it in that language.

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Now, when was it that it had been arranged that there should be some telephone conversation, either you were to call him or he was to call you—when was that?

The Witness: Well, your Honor, I don't know whether I made that phone call Saturday or not. I remember making some kind of a phone call to a grocery store, and I don't remember whether somebody called up the ship for me to call back that number, or I called.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is there a phone on the ship?

A. Out on the dock. [6464]

Q. You don't remember whether you were responding to a phone call or whether you made the phone call yourself? A. Right.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. But you remember that you made a phone call? A. Well, I think I did.

Q. If you made the phone call do you remember what you said?

A. Well, if I made the phone call, I remember making a date to meet somebody at three o'clock.

Q. Now, isn't it true that at ten o'clock that morning Craycraft came down to the ship, which was at the Crown Mills, and told you that I was going to be in town on the 1:30 plane that afternoon?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember it? A. No.

Q. It could have happened, but you don't remember it, is that it? A. It could have happened.

Q. And isn't it true that Craycraft asked you, "How shall I meet you, Cannalonga?"

A. No.

Q. What is that?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember it. It could have happened, but [6465] you don't remember it?

A. Yes, it could have happened.

Q. Isn't it true that you told Craycraft that the ship was going to shift at noon to Terminal No. 1? A. It could have happened.

Q. Did the ship shift at noon to Terminal No. 1?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Isn't it true that you told Craycraft that you thought the FBI might be watching the ship

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

so you would walk over and meet Crayeraft on the street at about 2:45 P.M.?

A. No, I don't recall making that statement to him.

Q. What did you say about meeting Crayeraft?

A. I don't even recall meeting Crayeraft that morning.

Q. What did you say to Crayeraft about meeting him that afternoon?

A. It is like I say, to the best of my recollection I thought I was phoning.

Q. Whether you were phoning or talking in person, what arrangements did you make with Crayeraft regarding meeting him that afternoon?

A. I remember meeting him outside the dock at three o'clock, or somewhere around that time.

Q. About 2:45, wasn't it?

A. It could have been 2:45.

Q. You had walked off the ship and you met him out on [6466] Front Street, didn't you?

A. Out on the dock; yes.

Q. Outside the dock where Front Street is, isn't it?

A. Sure, the dock runs into the streets.

Q. Front Street is the street that is alongside that dock at Terminal 1, isn't it?

A. Front Street? I believe it is.

Q. That is where you met him, isn't it?

A. Yes; in front of the dock.

Q. And you had told him that he could meet you there at a quarter to three, hadn't you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't know the exact time, or whether I told him over this phone, or talked to him that morning.

Q. All the time that you were putting in these overtime hours of work on the ship, were you in a constant state of intoxication?

A. It being my birthday—during my birthday and the following day; yes.

Q. On all other days how were you?

A. Sober.

Q. You say on the day of your birthday and the following day you were drunk all of both those days? A. Yes, I would say I was.

Q. Did you do any work at all?

A. Now—when you call it "working"—in the electrical [6467] game that has a long explanation. If you want me——

Q. (Interposing): Did you do any work at all on those two days? You can answer "Yes" or "No" and then you can explain.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness can explain.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q Now explain.

A. All right. You see, when a ship packs one electrician, it is his job—as long as those winches are turning he has to see that they keep running, that they don't break down. That is his main function. And there is a lot of little things he can do. He can be dead drunk and as long as he can walk on his two feet he is still on the job. The engineers on the ship, they decide whether you can handle a job or not. They make a little allowance like for birthdays, and so forth. So the Chief, and the First Assistant, they liked me and thought I was a good man. I had done a lot of work on there. I had rebuilt half a dozen big motors, and did quite a bit of jobs, correcting a lot of work that needed correcting, and so when my birthday came around I told them I was going to start hitting the bottle and I was going on a couple of days' spree. So the Chief said, "O.K. We will keep an eye on things."

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

I believe I turned in that night about midnight. [6468].

Q. What night?

A. And got three hours' sleep.

Q. What night?

A. Saturday night. I woke up, had the night mate give me a call at three o'clock Sunday morning, and I repaired a winch that had broken just as the longshoremen were knocking off. So it just happened to be a lucky break for me that she broke down as they were knocking off. They reported it. So the night mate gave me a call at three in the morning so I could repair it and get it ready for seven o'clock. So I got up at three and took a cold shower and repaired this panel board.

Q. How long did it take you to repair it?

A. About an hour and a half.

Q. What did you do after that?

A. Well, I started hitting the bottle again.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. How long did you continue to hit the bottle?

A. Oh, until late Sunday night, until I passed out.

Q. Continuously?

A. Well, I managed to go through a couple of quarts of rum that day.

Q. Did you do any work, any more work on Sunday? A. No.

Q. Now, on Saturday when did you start hitting the bottle then? [6469]

Presiding Inspector: He told you that.

Mr. Gladstein: That was on Sunday, your Honor.

A. I told you Saturday at eight o'clock in the morning.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you do any work at all on Saturday?

Mr. Del Guercio: He has gone over that.

Presiding Inspector: You have gone over all that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What kind of work did you do on Saturday?

Mr. Del Guercio: He has gone over that.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not sure.

A. I just got through telling you that I was on the payroll as working, and so forth. I got a lucky break. The Chief and the First Assistant said they would keep their eyes on the equipment.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't it true that you didn't have to do a thing on Saturday from eight o'clock in the morning until the time that the winch broke down when the longshoremen went off shift around 3:00 A.M. the following morning? A. No; no.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. How was it?

A. Give me those overtime slips you got there and I will show you how it was.

(The overtime slips referred to were passed to the [6470] witness.)

A. (Continuing): On Saturday they worked until nine o'clock.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And finished when?

A. Saturday evening. They worked cargo and knocked off. That is when that winch had broken down, just as they were knocking off.

Q. Could I interrupt for a second? Is that the first piece of work that you had to do on Saturday, the repairing of the winch that broke down at nine o'clock? A. No.

Q. What did you do——

A. (Interposing): I am—well, they knew that the winch was broke, and I was pretty drunk at the time, so the first assistant notified the night mate to wake me up in the morning. I had passed out. So he woke me up about three o'clock in the morning, Sunday morning.

Presiding Inspector: The question is, what work did you do during Saturday before this winch broke down from 8:00 o'clock in the morning, when you began drinking, as you have said, until three o'clock the next morning? Did you do any work? I mean by "work", any work with your hands?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: I might have; yes.

Presiding Inspector: Did you? [6471]

The Witness: I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't show (overtime sheets) does it?

The Witness: Well, you see——

Presiding Inspector: Does it show that?

The Witness: It shows that I got paid for that time.

Presiding Inspector: That is all it does show?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Does it show that you were off the ship during that time?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: Although you were?

The Witness: Yes, sir. The way they work it is like this: When there is one man in charge of the electrical work, one electrician, they make a little allowance, if you notify the Chief Engineer, so you can go off an hour or so.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, you have already said, concerning this exhibit, this time sheet, which is a record of your overtime work, that you made it out in your handwriting, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And that is a truthful answer?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, it shows on Saturday, May 3, that from 12:00 [6472] noon until 1:00 o'clock you put in an hour testing the steering engine. Did you do that—"yes" or "no"?

A. Yes. But then there is an explanation for that too.

Mr. Del Guercio: He can explain.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Explain it if you want to.

A. When you test a steering engine here is what you do: You take the deck cadet back with you, and the Mate up on the bridge, he turns it hard over to port and hard over to starboard, and back to midship. That is to see if it needs repairing.

Q. That doesn't require any manual work?

A. No.

Q. Did you do any of the testing of that steering engine?

A. I went back and just stood up while he worked the wheel from the bridge.

Q. Is this a truthful statement on this time sheet of yours, that you spent one hour testing the steering engine? A. Yes, it is true.

Q. And it says from one o'clock until two o'clock you checked and helped with the circulator. What is that?

A. The circulator is a motor down in the engine room. That had stopped on them. They wanted me to go down, and I [6473] went down, and the Engineer on watch wanted to know what was wrong with it. He couldn't get it started. I said, "There is a button there. Push it." He pushed the button——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: This was on your birthday?

The Witness: Yes. He pushed the button and she started.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did it take one hour to do that?

A. You see——

Q. (Interposing): Did it take an hour to do it?

A. Well, will you let me explain?

Q. First answer "yes" or "no", and then explain. A. No.

Q. But you put down claiming an hour overtime?

A. Yes. The rule is——

Q. (Interposing): Just——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): He wanted to explain.

A. (Continuing): I want to explain that. The contract signed between the organization and the shipowners provides that any part of an hour is an hour.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Also, on Saturday, May 3, your record shows, made by you, that you put in three hours, between 2:00 o'clock and 5:00 o'clock, that afternoon. Is that (indicating) "cargo"?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. That is cargo. [6474]

Q. What does that mean?

A. That means standing by on the winches.

Q. Standing by, to do what?

A. Nothing.

Q. Well, what were you supposed to do standing there?

A. In case the winches break then you are supposed to fix them. You know what I mean by "standing by"?

Q. You actually weren't standing by on that ship for those three hours, were you? A. No.

Q. You were away about two hours of that time, one hour in my room in the Clyde Hotel, and the other hour going to and coming away from the hotel, isn't that true?

A. It could be possible.

Q. Is it true or not? A. I suppose so.

Q. All right. Now, on Sunday, May 4th, from 3:00 A.M. to 7:00 A.M. you spent four hours repairing the cargo winch, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that winch the one that broke down at nine o'clock Saturday night? A. Yes.

Q. Did you finish repairing it by 7:00 A.M.?

A. Yes. [6475]

Q. And you started hitting the bottle again?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you start hitting the bottle before or after 7:00 A.M.?

Mr. Del Guercio: I think the witness is entitled to see the time slips here to refresh his memory.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you start hitting the bottle?

That don't show on the record when he started hitting the bottle.

Mr. Myron: Let him see the sheets.

Presiding Inspector: You testified as to that?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear it again.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was it three o'clock in the morning when you started hitting the bottle again? A. No.

Q. Was it after you finished with the repair?

A. About, I would say about seven o'clock, after I had a little coffee. I took a little shot of rum and——

Q. (Interposing): You didn't get yourself drunk while you were working four hours repairing this winch? A. No.

Q. You couldn't repair cargo winches if you were drunk, could you? [6476] A. No.

Q. So you got drunk right after seven o'clock?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes. I did have a drink before I started to work on the winch to kind of snap me out of it.

Q. It didn't make you drunk? A. Oh, no.

Q. And then after you got yourself drunk, right after seven o'clock Sunday morning, you were drunk all day long until you passed out that night?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you making that as a statement or asking a question?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I am asking you if that is true.

A. What is that again?

Q. When you began drinking at 7:00 o'clock Sunday morning you kept on and got yourself drunk, and didn't know what was taking place in my room, or in the lawyer's office, and you were drunk all day until late that night when you passed out, is that right?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question. In the first place, it isn't one question. It is many questions.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. He can divide it. [6477]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that true:

Presiding Inspector: It is on one subject.

Mr. Myron: That is not the evidence.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference whether it is the evidence or not.

Mr. Myron: He shouldn't mislead the witness by stating the evidence and asking——

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is misleading the witness.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Myron: The witness testified he remembers some things that took place.

Presiding Inspector: But he said he was drunk all that time.

Mr. Myron: But he remembers some things that took place.

Presiding Inspector: This doesn't say he couldn't.

Mr. Myron: I so understood the question.

Presiding Inspector: Let's hear the question.

Mr. Gladstein: I will restate it.

Presiding Inspector: No. Let the reporter read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: You didn't know what was taking [6478] place, anything more than what you have testified to?

I didn't realize it was so positive.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will put it this way: You began to drink at seven o'clock that morning, on Sunday, after you finished repairing the cargo winch?

A. Yes.

Q. And you say you got drunk, and you were drunk at the time you came to my hotel room that morning? A. Yes, I was.

Q. And were you drunk at the time you went over to the lawyer's office? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And you continued to remain drunk until late that night when you passed out, is that right?

A. No.

Q. When did you sober up?

A. If I am not mistaken I recall doing a little, getting sick in the toilet up in that office, and I went back aboard the ship and talked to the First Assistant, and he made the remark that he didn't see how I could stand up, doing all this drinking, and that I was holding my booze pretty good. And then I went in and I et—I don't recall what we had for dinner that evening——

Q. You were too drunk to know that? [6479]

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Were you drunk or not when you had dinner that evening?

A. Well, I was, yes. I was starting to snap out of it then.

Q. You were starting to snap out of it at 6:00 o'clock in the evening?

A. Yes. Sober up, yes.

Q. When did you actually become sober?

A. Well, that's hard to—hard to say.

Q. Well, were you drink from 7:00 o'clock in the morning until 6:00 o'clock that night, on that Sunday?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, it is obvious that under those circumstances down there that counsel can't pin him down to hours.

Presiding Inspector: No. Well, he knows approximate hours.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein: Of course.

A. Well, I would say, Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you pass out on Sunday night?

A. I didn't pass out Sunday night.

Q. Didn't you pass out on Sunday night?

A. No.

Q. You didn't pass out at all? A. No.

Q. You didn't pass out from being drunk?

[6480]

A. No, not Sunday night.

Q. What night was it that you passed out from being too drunk? A. Saturday night.

Q. What time Saturday night?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have gone all over that.

Presiding Inspector: I think we have been over that.

A. I told him when I passed out on the Saturday, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What time on Saturday night did you pass out? A. It was in the evening some time.

Q. What time?

A. I couldn't say exactly what time.

Q. Early evening or late?

A. No. It was dark.

Q. Early evening or late at night?

Presiding Inspector: Well, Mr. Gladstein, can a man tell the hour when he is drunk and passes out?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If he knows.

Mr. Gladstein: My recollection of the testimony was that he previously said that he passed out on Sunday.

The Witness: No, I said "Saturday".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You meant Saturday night? [6481]

A. And I said "Saturday night".

Q. Now, the record shows that on Sunday, May 4th you worked from 7:00 A.M. to 12:00 noon, repairing cargo winches. Is that true?

Mr. Del Guercio: Is that what the time sheet says?

A. No. It says "cargo". That's just cargo here (indicating). Here's (indicating) where I made the repair work, where I put "winches" and then "repair". But the rest of it is cargo.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. From 7:00 to 12:00 noon is cargo?

A. Yes.

Q. What were you doing then?

A. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have gone over that, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were you doing?

A. I don't remember what I was doing. I was drinking. I had been drinking.

Q. You mean that you were standing on the deck of that ship drunk for those five hours?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. On the Sunday?

Q. Yes.

A. No. I wasn't standing on no deck. [6482]

Presiding Inspector: "Standing by".

The Witness: That don't mean "standing".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What does it mean that you were doing?

A. That means that you are subject to call where they can get ahold of you. I could be in the bridge.

Presiding Inspector: Ready to do the service you are called upon to do?

The Witness: What, sir?

Presiding Inspector: Ready to do the service you are called upon to do.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: That is what is called in the parlance of the sea "standing by".

The Witness: "Standing by"; yes, sir.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And you did no work that day?

Mr. Del Guercio: Does the time sheet show? Why don't you give him the time sheet and let him see.

Presiding Inspector: No. If he has any recollection he can tell.

A. No. I don't recall doing any work.

Presiding Inspector: The next question.

Mr. Gladstein: Just one second, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [6483]

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want to recess now?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Were you going to take up some new matter?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I was thinking of it.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. We will recess until two o'clock.

(Whereupon at 12:25 P.M. a recess was taken until 2:00 P.M. of the same day.) [6484]

After Recess
2:00 o'Clock P. M.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein. Shall we wait for Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Myron: He will be in shortly. We can go ahead.

Presiding Inspector: You are willing to proceed?

Mr. Myron: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: All right. We will wait for him if you wish?

Mr. Myron: He suggested we go right ahead.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, on those overtime sheets of

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

yours, which are an exhibit for identification, regarding the work that you did on Sunday, those hours when you were standing by, would you call it "standing by" when you were not on the ship?

A. Well, it is like I explained. Any time that I left the ship I generally saw the Chief Engineer and First Assistant and asked permission.

Q. Have you always done that? [6485]

A. Oh, yes.

Q. So you asked permission to leave on Saturday and Sunday when you left? A. I did.

Q. Who did you ask permission of on Saturday?

A. Oh, I think the First Assistant was in the Chief's room, and the Chief was in there, and I asked if I could go.

Presiding Inspector: You call the Chief the Master of the ship?

The Witness: No. He is in charge of the engines.

Presiding Inspector: The engineer?

The Witness: The Chief Engineer.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was his name?

A. I don't recall his name. It is Mack something.

Q. The First Mate, you talked to him about that?

A. Not the first mate—the First Assistant.

Q. The First Assistant Chief Engineer?

A. Well, I will explain the rating of the Engineers.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Certainly.

A. There is the Chief Engineer, a First Assistant, a second Assistant Engineer, a third Assistant Engineer, a fourth Assistant Engineer.

Q. All right. Now, on Saturday before you left the ship to see Mr. Craycraft and me, you told the Chief Engineer [6486] and the First Assistant that you were going to leave and you wanted permission? A. Yes.

Q. And they gave you permission to leave?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell them where you were going?

A. No.

Q. Did they ask you? A. No.

Q. Did you ask them for permission to charge the company, your employer, for those hours that you were away from the ship?

A. Well, it's like I said.

Presiding Inspector: Well, did you ask them specifically? A. (Continuing) No,

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever ask anybody about that?

A. No. You see, I would like to explain a little on that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You claim that is the custom.

The Witness: Yes, that is the custom.

Presiding Inspector: That is your testimony: that that is the custom.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6487]

Q. Now, did you tell the Chief Engineer and the First Assistant on Saturday how long you were going to be gone? A. I don't believe I did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did they ask you?

A. No, I don't believe they did, because I had previous like when I first went aboard in Seattle, I told them I wanted to go ashore for a while and I believe I went ashore in Tacoma the same way.

Q. Did you consider that you were available for duty on that ship during the couple of hours that you were ashore? A. No.

Mr. Myron: He has already testified to all this, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't ask him that.

Mr. Myron: What difference does it make?

Mr. Gladstein: It wasn't answered.

Mr. Grossman: He didn't answer.

The Witness: I did answer it. I said "No".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Why did you claim that overtime in your work sheets?

A. Oh, for Christ's sake! I told you once——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well now, just tell him again.

A. (Continuing) ——that it has always been the custom on any ship where there is one electrician, the company [6488] doesn't expect a man to stay on that ship all the while it is in port for the 24 hours and every day that the ship is in port. They make leeways and the figure that, after all, a person is human and he likes to get ashore for an hour or so and providing he tells the proper ones that he is going to leave for a while, why, it is all right with the company. They just turn their head aside on it.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, these hours on Saturday that you were not available for duty you charged overtime, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Is that the custom?

A. Yes, sure it is the custom.

Q. The custom on ships belonging to the Maritime Commission? A. Yes.

Q. You know the Maritime Commission——

A. (Interposing) Yes, I know what you are trying to get at. You are trying to get that I swiped a couple of hours of overtime on the company. Is that what you are driving at?

Mr. Myron: I believe he testified that his day was over Saturday at noon.

Mr. Grossman: He is claiming overtime, Mr. Myron, for that. [6489]

Presiding Inspector: I don't know, I guess you have all there is to it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What happened on Sunday? Did you get permission to leave then? A. Yes.

Q. Who did you ask permission of?

A. Either the Chief or the First. I am hazy on it. I know I asked them.

Q. Where were they when you asked them?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. You see, the Chief's room was just one door down from mine.

Q. Well, did you go there?

A. I believe I did.

Q. Don't you know whether you asked permission?

A. If I didn't ask him permission he would have, no doubt, told me about it.

Q. Did he ever tell you about it?

A. No. So I must have asked him for permission.

Q. Do you have a distinct recollection of asking for permission? A. No.

Q. On Sunday? A. No.

Q. How about Saturday? [6490]

A. I am quite sure I did on Saturday.

Q. Now, where did you go to get permission on Saturday? A. The same place.

Q. What's "the same place"?

A. In the Chief's room.

Q. Who was there at the time?

A. I believe the Chief and the First Assistant and possibly one of the other engineers.

Q. And what were they doing?

A. Just sitting around talking.

Q. What time of the day was that?

A. I don't recall the time of the day.

Q. Well, was it morning or afternoon?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. What did you ask him?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I assume that I asked him if it was all right with him if I went ashore for a while.

Q. Well, did you or didn't you ask him that?

A. It's like I made the first testimony on the stand here. There are a lot of things that is very vague. After all, I had been doing quite a bit of drinking and a lot of that stuff isn't clear in my memory.

Q. When on Saturday did you ask him, do you remember? A. I don't. [6491]

Mr. Myron: He has been over this over and over again.

Presiding Inspector: I think we have been over it three or four times.

Mr. Gladstein: No, Your Honor; not this.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we have had a general statement that he asked. Of course, you are pressing for very great details. It may be interesting to see how much he can remember.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was said to you when you asked for permission on Saturday to leave the ship?

A. I don't know.

Q. Don't you know whether they said "Yes" or "No"?

A. Well, if they didn't say—if they said "No", I would not have went ashore, and if they said "Yes" I went ashore.

Q. Do you know what they said?

A. No, I don't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, that's at least six times, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is pretty repetitious. Of course, it is implicit that they have to say something.

Mr. Gladstein: Excuse me, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I say it may have been implicit in the conversation.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6492]

Q. As a matter of fact, on that Saturday afternoon, Mr. Cannalonga, you left that ship and met Mr. Craycraft a little bit early on the street, didn't you?

Mr. Myron: At little bit early? What do you mean by "A little bit early"?

A. I don't know.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You were supposed to meet him at a quarter of three, weren't you?

A. If I am not mistaken I was supposed to meet him some time in the afternoon.

Q. At a quarter of three so that you would then meet with me at three o'clock, isn't that correct?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over.

A. I don't remember the specific time.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but I will allow him to press him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What's the answer, please?

A. I don't remember the specific time.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. As a matter of fact, you met Crayeraft on the street at about 2:25, didn't you? 2:25 or 2:30?

A. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know where you met him? [6493]

A. Yes. I have a recollection of meeting him outside the dock.

Q. Right out at Front Street, wasn't it?

A. Well, I don't know the name of the street out in the dock, in front of the dock.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. They pressed him on that this morning.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think this was covered.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you and Crayeraft then go—withdraw that.

Where did you and Crayeraft go after you met?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it also on the same ground, your Honor. We might as well start from the beginning again.

Presiding Inspector: I am not sure that that was covered, so I will allow it.

Mr. Gladstein: I know it was not, your Honor.

A. I believe we rode in a car and went up to the hotel. [6494]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What car? A. His car.

Q. Crayeraft's? A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a car was it?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't know the make of it.

Q. Well——

A. (Interposing) Well, I don't know whether it was his car or not.

Q. What kind of a car was it you rode in?

A. It was a—let me see—a sedan.

Q. Two door?

A. No, I couldn't say whether it was a two door or a four door sedan.

Q. Did you sit in the front seat with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it a new or an old car?

A. Well——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) You mean what model or what year it was?

Mr. Gladstein: I mean exactly what I asked.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was it a new or an old car, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was it a new car? [6495]

A. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: He might as well ask him if it was a used car or a new car.

Presiding Inspector: I think the purpose is perfectly evident. I will allow it. I think it is a proper purpose, I mean, within his right.

A. I don't recollect whether it was a new car or an old one.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did you go after you got in the automobile?

A. Well, I remember we drove for quite a while, and I don't know how long we drove, or where we drove to.

Q. Where did you drive to?

A. Well, I remember——

Presiding Inspector: You mean the final place?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Where did you stop—after you had driven where did you stop, get out?

A. The next thing I remember was going in an elevator. There are only certainly things that——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Interposing) Didn't you go in a cafe before you went in the hotel elevator? A. No.

Q. Isn't there a cafe near the Clyde Hotel called the [6496] Virginia Cafe?

A. I believe we did go in a cafe.

Q. Didn't you have a cup of coffee in that cafe? A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you and Craycraft sit in that cafe and have coffee in order to kill time until 3:00 o'clock?

A. No, I don't remember about killing time. But, if I am not mistaken, I do recall that I had coffee, black coffee.

Q. With some ice in it?

A. Well, I don't know whether I had ice or not in it.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Do you do that once in a while?

A. Yes; that is a habit of mine.

Q. When the coffee is hot?

A. Regardless of whether it is hot or not, I always put ice in coffee.

Q. All right. Then you went up in an elevator?

A. Yeah.

Q. To the second floor, wasn't it?

A. I couldn't say what floor it was

Q. You went to a hotel room in that hotel?

A. Yeah.

Q. This was the Clyde Hotel, wasn't it?

A. I don't even know the name of the hotel.

Q. You testified yesterday it was the Clyde Hotel. [6497] Where did you get that name?

Mr. Myron: I think he was asked.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did you get that name?

A. Oh——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) You said he testified yesterday it was the Clyde Hotel. Did he testify yesterday it was the Clyde Hotel?

Mr. Gladstein: He did, your Honor.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, all during the examination of this witness there has been an effort on the part of counsel for the Government, it seems to me, to protect him beyond——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) There has been no such effort.

Mrs. King: (Continuing) ——beyond what is warranted, which has interrupted the examination rather more than has been customary with other witnesses.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Myron: We have a right to object to questions improperly put.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is any objection now.

Mrs. King: It isn't a question of objection.

Presiding Inspector: Counsel shouldn't suggest answers. Of course, I am not passing on that, but it shouldn't be done. [6498]

A. I believe later on Rosco mentioned it was the Clyde.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did he mention that to you?

A. Well, I don't know whether I saw the name on the hotel, or he had told me a couple of days later that it was the Clyde.

Q. Do you remember when, a couple of days later, he mentioned it was the Clyde? A. No.

Q. Do you remember where you were?

A. No, I don't.

Q Who knocked on the door, you or Crayeraft?

A. You got me. I don't know.

Q. One of you did? A. I believe so

Q Did I answer the door?

A. I think you did.

Q. And you and Crayeraft came into the room; didn't you? A. I believe; yes.

Q. There was nobody else in that room, was there? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And Crayeraft introduced you and me and we shook hands, isn't that correct? [6499]

A. Did we?

Q. I am asking you?

A. I don't recall shaking hands with you.

Q. Did he introduce you and me?

A. I suppose he did.

Q. Didn't he say, "Brother Cannalonga, this is Brother Gladstein"?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, do you remember sitting down in an arm chair in that room? A. No.

Q. Do you remember where you sat?

A. No. I suppose I did sit down

Q. You sat on a chair, didn't you?

A. I don't know if I sat down or not.

Q. You think you might have stood up?

A. I might have.

Q. Through the whole time that you were there?

A. No, no; I wouldn't have stood up the whole time I was there; naturally not

Q. You were there about an hour, weren't you?

A. I don't remember how long I was there.

Q. You didn't have any drinks while you were there, did you? [6500] A. No.

Q. Now, isn't it true that Roseo Crayeraft said that you had told him that your testimony in the Bridges case had been false? A. No.

Q. You are sure that didn't happen?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, the way you put it—I am not sure what happened in that room. Like I said repeatedly, there was certain things that stood out, and others was foggy, and I could have said black and white. I don't know.

Q. Isn't it true that Craycraft said that you had told him, Craycraft, that the reason you had given false testimony in this case was because you had been threatened by the FBI with a Mann Act charge?

A. No; I don't ever recall him saying that.

Q. Do you deny that he said it?

A. Yes, to the best of my knowledge. He might have said it.

Q. Isn't it true that Craycraft then said that he had asked you whether you would be willing to tell me the entire story, as you had told it to him?

A No, I don't remember that.

Q. Do you mean you don't remember it, or do you deny that it was said?

Presiding Inspector: If he doesn't remember how can he [6501] deny it?

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, the witness has used various phrases——

Presiding Inspector: When you say—of course, this may call for what he actually remembers, or in light of the whole examination it may mean, could that have happened from the background, and it leaves him doubt, I think, as to that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: He says he has no recollection on the matter.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't Craycraft say that you had said you were willing to talk with me?

A. That I was willing to talk with you?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I said that the previous Wednesday, but I don't recall saying that up in the hotel room.

Q. Didn't Craycraft say that up in the hotel room on Saturday?

A. No, I don't remember him saying that.

Q. Didn't Craycraft say that because you had told him you were willing to talk with me he had phoned me and I was there to hear what you had to say? A. No, I don't remember that.

[6502]

Q. Didn't I ask you to start at the beginning, using your own words, and tell me about the times you had seen the FBI agents? A. No.

Q. What is the answer?

A. I said, "No, I don't think so."

Q. When you say, "I don't think so," Mr. Cannalonga, do you mean that you don't remember?

A. It is like I said, could have said it, yes; but if I did say it I don't ever recall saying it.

Q. All right. Now, didn't you tell me and Mr. Craycraft that the first time you were contacted by the FBI was through a man named Mr. Boyd, of the Immigration Service, in October of 1940?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't believe I said that.

Q. What do you believe you said about that, if anything?

A. I don't know what I said about it.

Q. Didn't you say that you were in the Marine Firemen's hall at the time, just coming out of the Union hall? A. No.

Mr. Myron: What time is this, may I ask, your Honor?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you understand the time I am talking about, the time the FBI agents first contacted you?

A. Well, that is in the previous statement that I had [6503] made.

Q. I will rephrase the question. We are in the Clyde Hotel now, Mr. Cannalonga, on Saturday afternoon. A. Uh huh.

Q. You are there, Mr. Craycraft was there, and I. Didn't you on that occasion, say that the first time you were contacted in connection with this proceeding by the FBI was indirectly through an Immigration man named Mr. Boyd, who caught you as you were coming out of the Marine Firemen's Hall on a day in October of last year?

A. No, no. That circumstance never happened.

[6504]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't Mr. Boyd get into contact with you in October of last year as you were in or leaving the Marine Firemen Hall.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Oh, no. No. I think you have got that twisted up with leaving the Out-Patient Station of the Marine Hospital. The United States Public Health Service Out-Patient Station, not the Firemen's Hall.

Q. Were you leaving the Out-Patient Station of the Marine Hospital in October of last year when Mr. Boyd contacted you?

A. I would have to have something to refresh my memory on that.

Q. What do you want to refresh your memory?

A. That previous deposition that I made when I was on the stand here on the 17th.

Presiding Inspector: What is your present recollection on the matter?

The Witness: I don't—to make the—I think it was down in Boyd's office, not in front of any union hall.

Presiding Inspector: You remember Boyd, do you?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you remember Mr. Boyd?

A. Yes. [6505]

Q. You know he is from the Immigration Office?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. You knew that in 1940? A. Yes.

Q. You know he is sitting in the room here, don't you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Myron: I object to this line of questioning.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Where is he sitting in the room?

Presiding Inspector: This tests his recollection.

Mr. Myron. He is testing his recollection in the Clyde Hotel. He says he doesn't recollect anything about Mr. Boyd in the Clyde Hotel.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but he said right after that that he thought that Mr. Gladstein had it confused with meeting him as he was leaving the Out-Patient Department of a hospital. Now, he is pressing him on that.

Mr. Myron: He said he couldn't have said that, regardless of the fact that he didn't recollect what he said, because it wasn't true, that he met him at such and such a place.

Presiding Inspector: He said he met him somewhere else.

Mr. Myron: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: That was only qualifiedly untrue because he did say he got in contact with him, but now he says, recollecting further, that he thinks when he met Mr. Boyd it [6506] was in the office of one of the departments. I think it is proper.

Mr. Del Guercio: Then Mr. Gladstein pointed out to the witness and stated to the witness that Mr. Boyd is in the room. Will you point him out, Mr. Gladstein?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know whether he is or not. I am asking whether he is.

Mr. Del Guercio: You told him he was in the room.

Presiding Inspector: He may have said that.

Mr. Reporter, will you read what Mr. Gladstein said?

(The portion of the record referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. You know he is sitting in the room here, don't you?")

Mr. Del Guercio: "You know that he is sitting in the room here, don't you?"

Presiding Inspector: That does imply that he is in the room.

Mr. Grossman: He doesn't happen to be, but we have a right to find out if this witness can identify him.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but not to suggest to the witness that he is in the room and then ask him whether he is nor not.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You know Mr. Boyd? There is no doubt about that? [6507] A. No.

Q. You knew him before the 1939 hearing, didn't you? A. '39?

Q. The 1939 hearing against Harry Bridges?

A. Yes.

Q. And you met him again in 1940, in October, didn't you? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. He is the man who contacted you, isn't he?

A. Is he?

Q. Is he?

A. Now, your Honor, I'm getting all confused. We are up in the hotel room now.

Presiding Inspector: We have gone somewhere else now.

The Witness: We have gone somewhere else.

Presiding Inspector: Now, is he the man from the department who first, I suppose, on that occasion got into communication with you?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: He said "Yes".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And where did he contact you?

Mr. Myron: Now, this is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. I am not sure that it is immaterial. It may be. [6508]

A. I believe I contacted him down in his office.

Presiding Inspector: "In his office", he said.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Whose office? A. Mr. Boyd's office.

Presiding Inspector: Speak up a little louder so that we can all hear.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How did you happen to go there?

A. I believe there was a phone call asking me to go down there.

Q. Where did you get that phone call?

A. I think it was the union hall.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. So you were contacted by Mr. Boyd through the union hall?

A. Yes, through the union hall.

Q. By telephone?

A. By telephone, leaving a message.

Q. Now, didn't you tell Mr. Craycraft and myself on that Saturday in the Clyde Hotel that Mr. Boyd took you up to the Immigration Station where Mr. Boyd told you that some FBI men were coming down and wanted to talk to you?

A. No, because it never happened that way.

Q. In what way did it happen?

A. I got a phone call to go down to the Immigration [6509] Office and I went down to Mr. Boyd's office at the Immigration Building, and while I was down there in the Immigration Building two of the FBI men came down.

Q. Did Mr. Boyd tell you before the FBI men came that they were coming down and wanted to have a talk with you?

A. I think he mentioned that the FBI men wanted to see me.

Q. Before they came? A. Yes.

Q. And then the FBI men came, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And then when they came they took you to the FBI Building?

A. Yes. That is all in the previous deposition.

Q. Didn't you tell me those things and Mr. Craycraft those things in the Hotel Clyde?

A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. No. I'm not sure of anything I did up there.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI men took you a building called the Vance Building on the corner of Third and Union?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Did they actually do that? [6510]

A. Well, as near as I can recall, after we left the Immigration Station, I was driving my own car and I parked it at the Four Stores Garage in Seattle and from there walked up to the FBI office, which was in the Vance Building, I think the ninth floor.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you went up to the ninth floor of the Vance Building and were with two FBI men by the name of Madala and Dickstein? A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Is that what happened?

Presiding Inspector: What do you mean? Happened at the Clyde Hotel?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did it actually happen that you went up there to the ninth floor of the Vance Building and were with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein?

A. No. When I got up to the Vance Building there was just Mr. Dickstein. We went in the building together and I went in one of the offices and then Mr. Madala showed up.

Q. That is, Mr. Madala showed up after you were up there with Mr. Dickstein: A. Yes.

Q. And then you met Mr. Madala afterwards?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you tell us that on Saturday? [6511]

A. No.

Q. Didn't you say that on Sunday the following day in the lawyer's office? A. No.

Mr. Myron: He has answered all these questions. He says "No".

Mrs. King: It does seem to me that the Government continues to suggest things——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) The Government will have to continue to object.

Mrs. King: It isn't a question of objecting. They didn't object to anything then.

Presiding Inspector: Let Mr. Gladstein go on. Ask the next question.

Mr. Gladstein: Was there an answer to the last question?

Presiding Inspector: I think he is entitled very fully to examine this witness as to what his recollection is of this interview in the Clyde Hotel.

Mr. Myron: I agree, your Honor, but I think he shouldn't reiterate the same questions over and over again.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he shouldn't. One answer is as good as a hundred, but that has been very largely forgotten in this hearing.

Mr. Grossman: If it is the same answer. [6512]

Mr. Gladstein: Was the question answered, Mr. Reporter?

The Reporter: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: What was the question?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you say on Saturday in the Clyde Hotel to Craycraft and myself that Madala and Dickstein began to question you regarding Bridges?

A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. Didn't you say that you were with Madala and Bridges about an hour and a half or so? Excuse me. I withdraw that.

Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you were with Madala and Dickstein about an hour and a half or two?

A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. Didn't you say that you had a doctor's appointment that day at either one o'clock or three o'clock in the afternoon?

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Didn't you say that you were questioned by the FBI Agents for approximately two hours before that appointment with the doctor?

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Didn't you say that a general conversation took place during that two hours?

A. No, I don't believe I did. [6513]

Q. Didn't you say that the FBI Agents asked you a lot of questions about what you knew about Harry Bridges? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Didn't you say that you were asked by Madala and Dickstein whether you could prove whether Bridges was a Communist?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't think so.

Q. Didn't you say that you were asked by Madala and Dickstein whether you could prove that Bridges was a Communist, and that you answered, "No", you couldn't prove that he was a Communist?

A. No, I never said anything like that.

Q. Didn't you say that Madala and Dickstein told you that they knew you had been a Communist?

A. No. I don't recall discussing either Madala or Dickstein with you—or Dickstine.

Q. Didn't you say that they wanted you to make a statement for them in which you were to say that Bridges was a Communist?

A. No, I don't think so. In fact, I know I wouldn't have said anything like that if I was sober.

Q. Why wouldn't you have said that if you were sober?

A. For the simple reason that it wouldn't be the truth.

Q. You mean that Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein never asked you to make a statement for them in which you were to [6514] say that Bridges was a Communist? A. No.

Q. They never did that?

A. No, not to make a statement that Bridges was a Communist.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel on that Saturday afternoon that Madala and Dickstein kept asking you questions as to whether you knew if Bridges was a Communist and that you kept denying that you had any such knowledge?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No.

Q. You didn't say that? A. No.

Q. Isn't it true that that happened?

A. What's that again?

Q. Isn't it true that Madala and Dickstein did ask you such questions and that you did deny——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now you have left it.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw it. I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that Saturday afternoon that Madala and Dickstein had asked you whether you had ever attended Communist meetings with Bridges?

A. No, not in the hotel. [6515]

Q. You didn't say that? A. No.

Q. Are you sure that you didn't?

A. Well, I am not sure of anything that happened up there.

Q. You wouldn't have said it if you were sober?

Mr. Myron: Oh, now. Said it to whom?

Presiding Inspector: That is rather argumentative, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't it a fact that Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein did ask you whether you had ever attended Communist meetings with Bridges?

A. Is this in the——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) This is not in the Clyde Hotel, but when you had the conversation with Madala and Dickstein.

A. (Continuing) Oh, yes, yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't it true that you said in the Clyde Hotel that you had not been in any Communist meeting or meetings with Bridges?

A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Isn't it true that in the Clyde Hotel you said that you had told Madala and Dickstein that you had been in [6516] meetings with Bridges where there were Communists and non-Communists?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Did you say it or didn't you? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you explained to Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein the structure of the Communist Party, how it works with the rank and file and the progressive groups in the union? A. At the hotel?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don't remember saying anything like that. No.

Q. Did you say it or not?

A. Well, I don't know.

Mr. Myron: He says he doesn't remember.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that is all the way through. When he says "No" he means that he has no recollection of it.

The Witness: I can't say I did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: He doesn't vary from that statement, as I understand it.

The Witness: And it is like I say, at the time I had been drinking pretty heavy.

Presiding Inspector: I believe we have that all in mind. [6517] You needn't repeat that. We understand it quite fully.

The Witness: I would be just making a liar out of myself if I said "sure".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you on that Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel in the presence of Craycraft and myself say that you had given untrue testimony and had made untrue statements to the FBI?

A. Not to my recollection, no.

Q. Did you ever say that to Craycraft?

A. No.

Q. Did you say that on Wednesday, April 30th to him? A. No.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. Yes, I am sure of that Wednesday. I was sober.

Presiding Inspector: Speak up so that we can hear you, Mr. Cannalonga.

The Witness: All right, sir.

Presiding Inspector: I told him to speak up.

[6518]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the reason you had given false statements to the FBI and because they were holding a 20 year sentence on a Mann Act charge over your head?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No.

Q. Did you ever say that to anybody?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you say that to Craycraft on Wednesday, April 30th? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: I am sorry about the delay but the pages of the transcript that I am reading contain so many objections that it is difficult to find the testimony of the witness and I wish to confront him with as nearly the exact testimony as I am able to find.

Presiding Inspector: That is all right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you, in the Clyde Hotel on that Saturday afternoon, say you had given false testimony on this witness stand? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell that to Rosco Craycraft on Wednesday evening of April 30th?

A. No. [6519]

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to interpose an objection. We are going back now to what he told Craycraft on that Wednesday night, and we have certainly been over that.

Presiding Inspector. I don't think he has asked that particular question, has he?

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't.

Mr. Del Guercio: I assume he did. He asked everything that occurred on that Wednesday night.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: He asked, refreshed his recollection, or claims to be refreshing his recollection, pressing him on a particular point, after having exhausted his recollection, and that is allowable.

Mr. Del Guercio: I may be mistaken.

Presiding Inspector: You may be right about that, but I don't recall it. He asked him quite fully about that conversation, there is no question about that.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is what I was basing my statement on.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that Saturday afternoon that you left the FBI agents, Madala and Dickstein, on the occasion when you first saw them, in a cab for the doctor's office?

A. No, I don't recall saying that.

Q. Did you actually leave there, the FBI agents, in [6520] October of last year after your first interview with them, and take a cab and go to your doctor?

A. No; no; I walked to the doctor's because the doctor's office is just around the building from the —the Vance Building is on Third and Union and the doctor's office was on Fourth and University—just one block.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that when you left the FBI agents on the occasion when you first saw them you had consistently denied that you had any knowledge or information to the effect that Bridges was a Communist?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No; I don't recall saying that at the Clyde Hotel.

Q. As a matter of fact, on the occasion when you first saw Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein in 1940, October of 1940, didn't you leave them on that first occasion, after having denied that you had any information or knowledge that Bridges was a Communist?

Presiding Inspector: I think that is a little objectionable. You mean, did he state that, did he make that statement?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You are asking if he left?

Mr. Gladstein: Excuse me.

Presiding Inspector: You put in a subordinate clause. I think you should ask him directly.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At the first time when you met there with Mr. Madala [6521] and Mr. Dickstein didn't you say to them that you didn't know whether Bridges was a Communist or not? A. No.

Q. Did you tell them that you knew he was a Communist?

A. I told them that I thought that Bridges was a Communist.

Q. Did you tell them that you knew he was a Communist?

A. No, I didn't say—I just told you what I told them.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you tell them why you thought he was a Communist? A. I believe I did.

Q. What did you say?

A. That he had been following the Party line pretty close.

Q. What else?

A. And that it was generally known among the Party members that he was a member of the Party.

Q. What else?

A. But there was no way of proving that he was a member of the Communist Party because I hadn't seen his Party book or seen him pay dues into the Party.

Q. What else did you tell them?

A. I believe that is about all.

Q. That is all the things that you told them which were [6522] the reasons why you thought Bridges was a Communist?

Mr. Myron: On this first occasion?

Mr. Gladstein: On this first occasion.

A. The transcript covers it pretty well.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I am asking you now, Mr. Cannalonga.

A. You would have to give me a little time to kind of——

Q. (Interposing) You take all the time you want.

A. Was that—that was covered by about four pages of that whole testimony.

Presiding Inspector: Never mind that. He is asking for your recollection as to everything you said to meet this question.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. All the reasons, Mr. Cannalonga, that you gave to Madala and Dickstein the first time you saw them as to why you thought Bridges was a Communist, besides those you have given?

Mr. Del Guercio: I would like to interpose an objection right here—all of the reasons? That presupposes—that is what the witness may have in mind—he was asked the question, "What reasons do you have"?

Presiding Inspector: He has given some of them so I don't think there can be any mistake by the witness.

Mr. Myron: Those are the statements he made; not [6523] necessarily reasons.

Presiding Inspector: Statements of reasons.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you now given, Mr. Cannalonga, all the statements that you are able to remember that you made to Madala and Dickstein the first time you saw them as to why you thought Bridges was a Communist—"Yes" or "No"?

A. Will you ask that question again?

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Well, then there was a Frisco meeting here in a private home where I sat in a meeting with Bridges and Schneidermann, and a few others, and that was in the original statement.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you say that the first time you spoke to them—did you tell them that the first time you spoke to them, Madala and Dickstein?

A. Well, I would have to look at some of these statements——

Presiding Inspector: No—your recollection, He is asking about your recollection.

A. (Continuing) My recollection—you see, it might have been in the second statement I made.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. The first time you ever saw Madala and Dickstein, [6524] up in the Vance Building, you told them that you thought Bridges was a Communist, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. But you said you didn't think it could be proved, as far as seeing his Party book, or paying Party dues, is that right? A. Yes.

Mr. Myron: He already testified to that.

Mr. Gladstein: It is preliminary in a sense.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't quite what he said.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is it correct or not?

Mr. Myron: His testimony shows what he said.

Presiding Inspector: I think you must follow his testimony. He said he thought it couldn't be proved because he couldn't show his book.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that what you meant? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And then when you said you thought Bridges was a Communist did they ask you what you based that on, did they ask you to tell them what you knew about Bridges? A. Yes.

Q. And then did you give them all these things you have just stated?

A. I believe I did. [6525]

Q. They did not suggest these things to you, did they? A. No.

Q. You told them all about these things voluntarily yourself? A. Yes.

Q. You told them about the meeting with Schneidermann and Bridges? A. Yes.

Q. You told them about all the party members knowing that Bridges was a Communist?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will interpose another objection. This was all gone into, and they had a very exhaustive cross examination on this matter at the time the witness was on the stand the last time.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that so?

Mr. Del Guercio: It isn't fair to the witness or anyone else to go into the same matter again.

Presiding Inspector: This really isn't new matter, is it?

Mr. Grossman: We certainly have a right to go into it again, considering the circumstances. What Mr. Del Guercio means is that they haven't prepared him on this again. That is what he means.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not so at all. We don't have to follow those tactics. [6526]

Mr. Grossman: It is quite obvious that is the reason because——

Presiding Inspector: I think that is an improper statement. Perhaps you ought to be called upon to produce proof before we finish.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes; and we demand it.

Mr. Grossman: We will produce it. I think we are tending to prove it now. I think, if you will look at the record, and find the number of objections, it is quite obvious that is the reason. Throughout the cross examination they object to every question and the reason is they are afraid to let this witness answer questions.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is a highly improper statement.

Mr. Grossman: It is true, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is a highly improper statement.

Let's go on with the examination.

Mr. Gladstein: Is there a question unanswered?

Presiding Inspector: You can argue your case when you sum it up at the end. If you want to sum it up orally I will give you an opportunity; otherwise, in your written brief.

Go on, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the last question? [6527]

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Was there a ruling?

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you remember the question? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the question again?

(The question referred to was reread by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Yes, I believe I did.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You volunteered that and told them about it?

A. Yes.

Q. They didn't ask you about it first?

A. Oh, no.

Q. And you volunteered to them that it was generally well known that Bridges was a Party member, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And they didn't try to force you to make any statements that were untrue, did they? A. No.

Q. And they didn't suggest to you that you had been at a meeting with Bridges?

A. No. [6528]

Q. They simply asked you to give them all the information you had against Bridges? A. Yes.

Q. And you voluntarily and freely told them everything you remembered? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If that isn't repetition I don't know what is.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mrs. King: If your Honor please——

Presiding Inspector: I think we have been all over this.

Mrs. King: It is not repetition. Whether it is repetition or not the answers to the questions are exactly—well, I don't want to go into that at this time, but it seems to me that the evidence that Mr. Gladstein is drawing from the witness at this time is extremely valuable and to cut us off at this time I think would be really to take away our rights.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have covered this.

Mr. Gladstein: My recollection is that the testimony now being given by this witness is almost directly contradictory to the testimony he gave the first time when he was on the stand.

Presiding Inspector: Can you show me the testimony?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I think so. [6529]

(The transcript referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Del Guercio: What testimony are you referring to?

Presiding Inspector: Page 1085.

We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: You did go all over this before.

Mr. Gladstein: In the first cross examination, yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: I say, you did.

Mr. Gladstein: During the first cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: What right have you to go over it again?

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: What right have you to go over it again?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, if your Honor thinks I shouldn't ask——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): You excused the man. You cross examined here. There are differences now, to be sure, but we can't retry this whole case. I will allow it as far as it has gone and I will let you have this. I think there was one further question, wasn't there?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I don't remember whether there was.

Presiding Inspector: We can't go over the whole case. [6530]

Mr. Gladstein: But I can summarize that in the form of one question, if you will allow that.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we have a right to recall every witness who testified against Bridges——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I have expressed my view, Mr. Del Guercio, that we can't retry the whole case.

Mr. Gladstein: You said I could ask one more question?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you may. We have covered this subject pretty nearly fully. It is all in the record. We had better allow this one more question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, the first time you were with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein, the FBI Agents, is this what happened? Did they ask you about what you knew about Bridges being a Communist? And did you tell them freely and voluntarily that you had been in a meeting with Bridges and Schneidermann and that you had been to a Communist fraction meeting at the Gowman Hotel and that Party members generally knew that Bridges was a Communist, and those other things which were contained in the statements?

Mr. Myron: Now, that has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: Right. But I will allow it. It sums up the testimony.

Mr. Myron: It has been answered. [6531]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think so. But he wants to sum up the whole matter and get an answer. I will allow the question.

The Witness: It is kind of confusing, it is so long. I can't keep up with him.

Presiding Inspector: Read it to him.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, coming back to the Clyde Hotel on that Saturday afternoon didn't you say to Mr. Crayeraft and to me that Madala and Dickstein had told you the first time that you were with them that they wanted you to come back the following morning?

A. No, I don't remember telling you that.

Q. Didn't you say that Madala and Dickstein had told you not to try to run away because the FBI was a big organization? A. No.

Q. You didn't say that?

A. No, I don't recall saying that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand that his answers, the answers that this witness is giving, are that he remembers it and can say that he didn't. His answer is "No. I answered it in the negative because I have no recollection".

Mr. Grossman: Well, your Honor, what are we to say, then, [6532] with reference to answers he gives where he doesn't say "I don't recall" but merely says "No".

Presiding Inspector: What?

Mr. Grossman: Are we able to distinguish between answers that he gives as "No" and——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't know. The whole subject is obscure in the way the questions are put and the way they are answered.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: This was begun by Mr. Del Guercio because Mr. Del Guercio went through certain questions. He got a "No" answer, which on the record looks as if this witness remembers that he didn't say it. Now, in answer to almost the same questions as to these things being said we now get a "No, I don't remember". What I want to know is this: Are we going to interpret the "No" differently from the "No, I don't remember"?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Grossman: If not, or, if so, are we going to interpret it any differently when he says "I am positive"?

Presiding Inspector: I am going to say that I don't know.

Mr. Grossman: In other words, we are going to either take the position that none of it is to be trusted because he didn't remember. That would knock out the answers that Mr. Del Guercio got.

[6533]

Mr. Del Guercio: As I sit here I note that they tell half-truths every speech that they make. My questions were "Do you recall? Were these things?" or "Do you recall that they were said at that time", referring to the conversation in the hotel. Why, counsel had to deliberately in all of the statements that he made——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't think that we should have recriminations one side to the other.

Mr. Grossman: This is not a one-sided charge.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

I am prepared right here and now to give Mr. Del Guercio the pages, because I have examined the transcript with that in mind, of questions that were not "Do you remember?" but "Did this take place?". And the answer was "No". And if Mr. Del Guercio wants a test on that I will give him the pages and show that this is not a half-truth. It is the full truth. If that is an issue I will prove it.

Presiding Inspector: Well, wait until the testimony is evaluated on this matter.

Mr. Grossman: All right. I can prove it.

Presiding Inspector: But you go on, Mr. Gladstein, with your examination.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That Saturday afternoon, that afternoon in the Clyde Hotel, Mr. Cannalonga, didn't you tell Mr. Craycraft and me about the second time that you saw the FBI Agents? [6534]

The Witness: What was that again?

Mr. Gladstein: Read it.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the second time you saw the FBI Agents they wanted you to sign a statement to the effect that you had seen Harry Bridges pay dues in the Communist Party? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you refused to sign such a statement? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that Saturday that the FBI Agents on this second occasion when they met you wanted to know whether you had ever been in meetings with William Schneidermann? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you had told the FBI Agents that you had been in meetings with William Schneidermann?

The Witness: Will you read that?

Presiding Inspector: Did you say this in the Clyde Hotel: That you had been in meetings with William Schneidermann? [6535]

A. No, no, not in the hotel.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agents on this second occasion when they saw you wanted to know if you had been in meetings with Harry Bridges?

A. No, I don't recall saying that.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you told the FBI Agent you had been in meetings with Harry Bridges?

A. No, I don't recall that—saying that in the hotel.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agents on this second occasion wanted to know whether you had been in meetings with Schneidermann and Bridges present at the same time?

A. No, I don't recall that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you told the FBI Agents that, while you had been in meetings with Harry Bridges and meetings with Schneidermann, you had never been in any meetings with the two of them there at the same time?

A. No, I don't recall saying that.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agents told you that they wanted you to sign a statement to the effect that you had been in meetings with Schneidermann and Bridges at the same time, although you had already told them that you had not been in such meetings? [6536]

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you told Madala and Dickstein on this second occasion that you would refuse to sign any statement to the effect that you had been in meetings with Schneidermann and Bridges present at the same time because such a statement would be false?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that after you refused to sign a statement for Madala and Dickstein one of them asked you what had become of the girl you picked up in Reno? A. No.

Q. You didn't say that in the Clyde Hotel?

A. No.

Q. Are you sure of it?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, certainly that is objectionable.

Presiding Inspector: No, I will allow it.

A. Well, it's like I told you, Mr. Gladstein, when I first come on the stand. I gave a brief outline of what had happened to the best of my recollection up at that hotel and it seemed to me like you and what's his name, both of you seemed to be bringing up this point about the Mann Act. Now, I don't know where you people ever got the idea and it seems like all through this, to me, it looks like that I am trying to [6537] be made out as a pimp.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Are you sure that you didn't say that in the Clyde Hotel? A. I'm quite sure.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that when the FBI Agent mentioned this girl you said "What girl"? and denied that you knew any girl or had picked up any girl?

A. No, I don't recall saying that.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agent said "You know the girl we are talking about"? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agent mentioned the name of the girl?

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agent told you at what places you stopped with the girl? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say at the Clyde Hotel that the FBI Agent described your itinerary from Nevada to California to Oregon to Washington? A. No.

Q. Didn't they tell you the name of the girl?

A. No. How could they tell me the name of the girl when I was never involved in any Mann Act?

Q. Didn't you tell the name of the girl to Craycraft? [6538]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't recall telling Crayeraft the name of any girl.

Q. Didn't you give the name of Duval to Crayeraft? A. No.

Q. Have you ever mentioned that name to him?

A. No.

Q. Do you know a girl by that name?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Have you ever? A. No, I never.

Q. Didn't you tell Crayeraft on Wednesday, April 30th that the FBI Agent told you that that was the girl that you had taken through these various states?

A. Is this in the hotel now or back——

Q. Do you want to hear the question again?

A. Please. We are in the hotel one minute and back and forth.

Presiding Inspector: No. We are somewhere else now.

The Witness: I want to make sure where we are at.

Presiding Inspector: We are back on the ship.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: That is now on the ship.

The Witness: No, I never did. [6539]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't I ask you in the Clyde Hotel, in the presence of Crayeraft and yourself, whether the

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

FBI agents, on this second occasion that they saw you and talked to you about this girl, had you cold?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Didn't you nod your head to say "yes" in answer to that question?

A. I don't remember nodding my head either.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that after a discussion with the FBI agents concerning this girl that the FBI agents then went back to questioning you about Bridges? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you continued to tell the FBI agents that you knew nothing about Harry Bridges' membership in the Communist Party and that you had never attended any Communist Party meetings with him?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you state in the Clyde Hotel——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Just a minute. I think at this time that the record should show that counsel is looking at a transcript of Crayeraft's testimony—I assume it is—although he was present at that hotel at that time.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't make any difference. This testimony is in through the oath of Crayeraft, and he is [6540] negativing this so as to cover the contradictory statements which Crayeraft testified that the witness made. I think it is proper. Probably it should have been before the testimony of Crayeraft and Shoemaker, but——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I don't remember Crayeraft mentioning the name of any girl.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: I think that is so; but perhaps that will come out later.

Mr. Gladstein: It will.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference whether Mr. Craycraft stated—this is your witness and this is cross examination to lay a basis for contradiction. Now, in the exigencies of this hearing we have allowed contradiction in large part to come in first, because Mr. Cannalonga was not for a time produceable.

Mr. Del Guercio: I thought I should note it because it is unusual.

Presiding Inspector: You are quite right.

Mr. Gladstein: I think I should note my feeling that the statement of Mr. Del Guercio was not intended as the basis of an objection, but it was intended merely to convey to the witness something Mr. Del Guercio felt he wanted the witness to know.

Presiding Inspector: No, that is not intended. That doesn't advance anything.

Ask the next question. [6541]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI agents then went back and started again to try to get you to sign a statement to the effect that you had been in a Communist Party meeting with Bridges? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel——

Presiding Inspector: What?

The Witness: I said "No".

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Continuing): ——you told the FBI agents that you had never been at such meetings with Bridges and you could not sign such a statement?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI agents then told you to return the following day? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you did return the following day and saw Mr. Madala and Dickstein? A. No; I don't recall it.

Q. Didn't you say that the FBI agents, on the third occasion that you saw them, had a prepared typewritten statement for you to sign?

A. No. I am quite sure I didn't say that for the simple reason that, if I am not mistaken, the third statement was [6542] written in pen and ink.

Q. I am talking about the third time you saw them, Mr. Cannalonga, and not the third statement. Do you understand?

A. I understand what you mean now.

Q. All right. With that understanding, did you say that in the Clyde Hotel or not?

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Did you say in the Clyde Hotel that you refused to sign the statement because it contained falsehoods? A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Did you say in the Clyde Hotel that one of the FBI agents then turned to the other and asked, "How much will he get under the Mann Act?"

A. I don't think so.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you say in the Clyde Hotel that the two FBI agents, on this third occasion when you saw them, computed your imprisonment on charges under the Mann Act at probably 20 years?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. You didn't say that?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you say in the Clyde Hotel that after this discussion of 20 years imprisonment the FBI agents handed this typewritten statement to you to sign?

A. No, I don't think I did. [6543]

Q. Didn't you say in the Clyde Hotel that you then signed a statement that the FBI agents gave you? A. I don't think I did.

Q. Didn't you say that you went through the statement and made some unimportant notations or corrections? A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Did I ask you in the Clyde Hotel whether the second statement that you signed for the FBI was also prepared in advance by the FBI?

A. I don't believe you did.

Q. Did you tell me that the second statement was prepared in advance by the FBI before you signed it? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did I ask you whether the second statement also contained false statements?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you tell me that the second statement that you signed for the FBI also contained false statements? A. I don't believe so.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did I ask you whether the third statement signed by you for the FBI was also prepared in advance by the FBI agents?

Mr. Del Guercio: "Signed by you for the FBI?"

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear that.

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask that the question be read and [6544] if it is ambiguous I will rephrase it.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: "Signed by you for the FBI."

Presiding Inspector: That is just his manner of speech.

A. I don't think so.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you say to me that it was prepared in advance by the FBI? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Did I ask you whether the third statement was in your handwriting? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you tell me that it was not in your handwriting? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Did I ask you whether the third statement also contained falsehoods?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Did you say that the third statement did contain falsehoods? A. I don't think so.

Q. Do you remember anything about what was discussed in the Clyde Hotel that afternoon?

A. That I said previous on the stand this morning, I [6545] remember that incident, one incident, in regard to the Mann Act.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What was the discussion on that?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have been all over that.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't come to this meeting at all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: What?

The Witness: Yes, your Honor, I answered that about three times this morning.

Mr. Gladstein: On direct; not on cross, that I know of.

Mr. Myron: He answer it very recently this afternoon.

Presiding Inspector: He has asked about specific statements this afternoon.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; about specific. Now, I would like——

Presiding Inspector: Ask him what he does remember.

Mr. Gladstein: That is what he does remember.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. Go ahead. You have given the answer to Mr. Del Guercio. Mr. Gladstein has a right to re-ask the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. This is on Saturday afternoon at the Clyde Hotel—do you have that in mind? A. Yes.

Q. How much do you recollect about that—or what was [6546] said?

The Witness: Your Honor, it is like I said this morning, I had been drinking and I got up to the Clyde Hotel, and I remember the incident where somebody brought up in regards to the Mann Act, and I told them that they were crazy, words to that effect; that I couldn't possibly be involved in it.

Then another incident I recall was in regards, I believe it was Craycraft or Gladstein, at the time had stated that they had the backing of John L. Lewis, and Murray, and the CIO, and that they had financial backing, as well as physical backing.

I think I got in an argument with Craycraft about this "physical backing" and told him if he wanted to work me over he could right then and there.

There was mention of—I believe they mentioned Schneidermann and Bridges. The rest of the time up there—that is about all I can recall just now.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was anything said about your having given false testimony?

A. No; I don't recall anything about false statements or testimony.

Q. Was anything said about your having given false statements to the FBI?

A. No; I don't recall that. [6547]

Q. All right; what was said about the Mann Act?

A. Well, like I said, I didn't pay much attention to it because I knew that the thing was all haywire.

Q. What was said about it?

Mr. Myron: He has already given that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Like I told you, either you or Mr. Craycraft mentioned the Mann Act.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was said when we mentioned it?

A. Oh, something about the FBI putting the pressure on me—words to that effect.

Q. How was it said—you don't mean that somebody just got up and said "Mann Act?"

A. I don't recall exactly the words. I have a faint recollection of the Mann Act being mentioned.

Q. In what way was it mentioned?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is what the witness has said for the last——

Presiding Inspector: He just said that he has a faint recollection of a charge being made, that the FBI had used an accusation of a violation of the Mann Act. That is what he said; as I understood it. I haven't phrased it in his words.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is there anything else that you remember that was said by anybody concerning the Mann Act?

A. No. [6548]

Q. That is all?

A. Yes; I believe that is all.

Q. What was said about the backing of the CIO?

A. Well, just the way I just told you.

Q. Well, what was said, who said it, and in what way?

Mr. Myron: He testified to that a few minutes ago.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: I think he has testified it was Craycraft. A. Craycraft.

Presiding Inspector: He said they had the backing of these gentlemen whom he has named, and that they had physical and financial backing.

Mr. Myron: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In what way was that raised, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I don't recall how it was raised. It is like I say, most of that stuff is not clear and there are certain incidents that I happens to remember.

Q. That is all you remember about the backing of the CIO? A. I believe it is.

Q. What was said there in connection with that argument, where you said to Craycraft something about working you over?

A. That followed right after, if I am not mistaken—I can picture it now—it was why I remember it—right after [6549] he said that I was getting hostile and told him if he wanted he could start working me over.

Q. You say who got hostile?

A. I did. I said, "If you want to work me over you can start."

Q. What made you hostile?

Mr. Del Guercio: He just got through stating, if your Honor please, that it was what Craycraft said.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is true.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What happened, Mr. Cannalonga, that made you feel hostile?

A. After he got through making that statement about—what got my goat was in regard to when he mentioned the physical backing.

Q. What did you understand by that?

A. Well, just like anything else—physical backing—you know the definition of physical backing.

Q. What did you understand by it when Mr. Crayeraft said it? A. Just what I said.

Q. What?

A. At the time I told him, if he wanted to work me over to go ahead and start working me over.

Q. Now, in spite of that hostility that you felt to Crayeraft that Saturday afternoon, you met him again on [6550] Sunday morning, on Sunday night, on Monday morning, and on Monday night, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. What was said that Saturday afternoon about Schneidermann and Bridges—withdraw that.

Have you given all the testimony that you can remember, all the statements or discussions that you can remember regarding working you over?

A. Yeah.

Q. And all the incidents connected with it, you have given everything you remember about that?

A. I think I have.

Q. You can't remember anything else?

A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What was said about Schneidermann and Bridges that afternoon?

A. I don't recall what was said.

Q. Do you recall anything at all about Schneidermann and Bridges being talked about that afternoon? A. No, I don't believe I do.

Q. What makes you think it was discussed?

A. I don't even know whether it was discussed or not. You claim it was.

Q. How long did the discussion take about that Mann Act—how long were we talking about it?

[6551]

A. I don't know.

Q. Was it a short time? A. I don't know.

Q. Don't you know whether it was one minute or half an hour?

A. No, I couldn't say; I don't know.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, the next day, on Sunday, beginning about noon—that would be Sunday, May 4, 1941— didn't you go up to the Guardian Building in Portland, Oregon, with Rosco Craycraft and me, and go into the office of an attorney by the name of William P. Lord, who was there, together with a shorthand reporter by the name of Ray D. Shoemaker?

A. No. I recall riding in an elevator in some office building, and then I recall leaving, recall being out in the hallway and in a wash room, and Craycraft asked me to go back in, and I went back in, and you was mentioning something about a

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mann Act, and I said, "What are you trying to pull?"

I then walked out and went into the hallway, and Craycraft asked me to go back again, and I said "Nothing doing. I won't go back."

And I left the building and went back aboard ship. [6552]

Q. Weren't you in Mr. Lord's office seated in a chair, for example, where you are now while I was seated behind the desk in a swivel chair, with Mr. Shoemaker, the Court Reporter, on the other side of the desk taking shorthand notes, Mr. Lord, the attorney, sitting about where the Judge is in relation to you, and Mr. Craycraft sitting over against the wall away from the shorthand reporter?

A. No, I don't.

Q. "I don't" what? A. I don't recall.

Q. Didn't Mr. Lord ask you to raise your right hand? A. No.

Q. Didn't you raise your right hand?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Didn't Mr. Lord administer an oath like this: "Do you solemnly swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in the testimony you are going to give?"

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Did he say any words like that at all?

A. I don't even remember him.

Q. Didn't you say to him "I do"?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Didn't I ask you, Mr. Cannalonga,——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Are you reading from a Government Exhibit, an Exhibit there in the record?

Mr. Gladstein: No. I am reading from a copy. [6553]

Presiding Inspector: Are you going all through that?

Mr. Gladstein: No, we haven't touched it with this witness at all.

Presiding Inspector: I say, Are you going all through it?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. I think it is necessary.

Presiding Inspector: He already said he didn't have any recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand that, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: He said that about the hotel meeting, too.

Presiding Inspector: I know, and I let you go all through it.

Mr. Grossman: He also said that he didn't recall anything.

Presidiing Inspector: I don't think he said he didn't remember anything. He said he remembered some things.

Mr. Gladstein: Perhaps the cross will develop that he remembers some things.

Presiding Inspector: We will stay here tonight until you finish it.

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask that the reporter get the original so that there won't be any question.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

(The original referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

The Witness: Don't you think we should have a recess?

Presiding Inspector: No. I think we are getting along [6554] all right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't I ask you, Mr. Cannalonga, "Mr. Cannalonga, you were recently a witness in the Harry Bridges Deportation Case, were you not?"

A. Is this supposed to happen up——

Q. (Interposing) You just put your mind on what happened up in Mr. Lord's office on that Sunday morning. Did I ask you that question?

Mr. Del Guercio: He is entitled to know what you are reading from there.

Presiding Inspector: He is going to find out.

A. No, I don't believe you did.

Q. Did you answer "Yes" to that question?

A. I don't remember.

Presiding Inspector: He will speak louder, I think, if you will stand a little further away.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did I ask you——

Presiding Inspector: Now, speak up.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Continuing) ——"Yesterday, in my room in the Clyde Hotel in Portland, you and Mr. Rosco

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Craycraft came into my room at about 3:00 o'clock, is that correct?

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes, sir."?

A. I don't think so.

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you "Now, I want to ask you some questions concerning that conversation, and I want to ask you to repeat the statements you made to both Mr. Craycraft and to me at that time. A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes."?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did they ask you whether you could prove —withdraw [6560] that.

Did I ask you this: "Did they ask you whether you could prove that Bridges was a Communist?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes; they asked me that, and then I answered that, no, I couldn't prove that he was a Communist."?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you "Then let me ask you this question: is it correct that on this first occasion they kept asking you questions as to whether you knew that Bridges was a Communist and you denied that you had any such knowledge?"?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes."? [6561]

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you "Is that correct?"?

Q. Didn't I ask you this: "Now, at the end of that first day, you told me yesterday that they sent you in a taxicab to the doctor?"? [6562]

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes."?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask "Is that what happened?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes, that is correct. I went to the doctor in a taxicab."?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you "Before you went to the doctor, did they tell you that they wanted to see you again?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer as follows: "Yes; they made an appointment for the next day. You see, the reason why I was going to the doctor, when I was on the branch I threw my hip out of joint up in Alaska, and I had been quite a while on a ship before I could get to a doctor; and I went to a doctor in Juneau and he didn't take no x-ray pictures and he just figured I had this sciatic rheumatism; and so when I got down to Seattle they had an ambulance waiting for me. They had to pick me off the ship. And so they drove me,—well, it wasn't an ambulance,—it was a Public Health Service car there. And so they took me up to the U. S. Marine hospital in Seattle. That is the U. S. Public Health Service. And I went in there, and I was in there, —I don't quite recall—but I have got the hospital discharge. You see, when you go into the Marine hospital they give you a discharge when you come out, the [6563] length of time you were in the hospital. And I asked to be released so I could go to a private doctor. And so I went down and saw Bogle, Bogle & Gates. I believe they handle all the insurance and accident insurance; and so they sent me up to Dr. Buckner."?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Did you give that answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Now, did you throw your hip out of joint up in Alaska? A. Yes.

Q. When you were on the branch there?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you been for quite a while on the ship before you could get to a doctor?

Presiding Inspector: Have you been over this?

The Witness: We have.

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: Are you sure about that?

Mr. Gladstein: I am pretty sure, your Honor.

Mr. Myron: I am sure we have.

Presiding Inspector: I rather thought we had.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, we went over the fact of the doctor.

Presiding Inspector: We have been over it to-day, this [6564] afternoon.

Mrs. King: Only as to the name of the doctor, but not as to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, no. About his getting off at some queer-named place.

The Witness: Ketchican.

Mrs. King: That had to do with pills and where he had them made up.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but that covers the whole matter.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mrs. King: There were certain details in this statement that were not in the other statement and as to the length of time on the ship.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will ask you—put it this way: You just heard the answer which I read, Mr. Cannalonga, which you say you don't remember.

A. Is this what happened up in the office or is this another instance now?

Q. I am asking you whether you made that statement, gave that answer up in the lawyer's office.

A. And I told you I didn't remember.

Q. And you say you don't remember. You heard me read the statement. Is that statement a truthful one? A. No. [6565]

Q. Where is it wrong?

A. For one thing, when I threw my hip out I was only about six hours from Juneau, from the doctor in Juneau. So I wasn't any great length of time with my hip out of joint on the ship. You see, they took a tender to a place called "Takoo".

Q. How long was it before you could get to a doctor? A. Oh, about six or eight hours.

Q. And that was a doctor in Juneau?

A. Yes, the Public Health doctor.

Q. Did he take X-Rays? A. No.

Q. He thought you had sciatic rheumatism, didn't he??

A. Well, he knew something was wrong with me.

Q. When you got back to Seattle were you able to navigate by yourself off that ship or did they pick you up in some kind of a car?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I walked down to a car, yes.

Q. What kind of a car?

A. A Public Health car.

Q. Sort of an ambulance, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And they took you in that to the United States Marine hospital?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Mr. Myron: It simply takes up time. [6566]

Presiding Inspector: But it isn't going to take any time to speak of.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. A Public Health Service car?

A. Yes, a Public Health Service car. That is the Marine hospital.

Q. And you finally got a discharge from there?

A. I stayed there, or, I think it was just about a week.

Q. You wanted to go to a private doctor?

A. Well, they wasn't doing anything for this hip of mine, so I asked them to discharge me and then from there I went to Bogle, Bogle & Gates. You have to see them before you go to a private doctor. And, well, they sent me to a bone specialist, a fellow by the name of Doctor Buckner, and he took the X-Rays. He took the X-Ray pictures and told me to come back the following day. And this was in the morning, and after he had seen the X-Ray pictures he got ahold of me and told me to go right up to the Providence hospital as my hip was out of joint. And he wanted to,—I believe he called it "manipulate" that same day. And I remember talking to him. And so I says "O.K., I will be up there about one o'clock".

So I got a suit of pajamas and shaving gear and so forth and I went up there that day, and that night about five o'clock they injected something in my vein and put me to [6567] sleep, and I woke up about an hour or so afterwards on this mattress with a bunch of boards under it, and I stayed there, oh, possibly a week or more. And after I left there I was taking treatments from him. He would inject, oh, some sort of medicine in my veins for the hip as it was still sore.

Q. Before you went to the hospital, after you talked to Dr. Buckner, did you go home and get yourself some pajamas and shaving gear and stuff?

A. No. I didn't go home. I called up the house.

Q. And had it brought to you? A. Yes.

Q. But you took that stuff along with you when you went down to the hospital? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: He just stated that he did.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, up at the lawyer's office on that Sunday, May the 4th——

A. (Interposing): We are up in the office now?

Q. Yes, we are up the office again.

A. O.K. I just want to get it clear now.

Q. After this answer that I read to you about Bogle, Bogle & Gates did I ask you this question:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"This all took place before the first time you saw the FBI?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Oh, yes."?

A. I don't remember. [6568]

Q. Did I ask you this question: "Did Dr. Buckner proceed to give you treatments?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Well, Dr. Buckner examined me that day, and it was on a Thursday, and he told me to come back the next day, that he would have his X-Rays all finished and everything. And so, in the meantime I had gone down to Bogle, Bogle & Gates, and they told me that Dr. Buckner, —the next day,—on Friday,—they said he wanted to see me right away; and so I called him up,—that was about 9:00 or 10:00 o'clock in the morning,— I called him up and he says, 'You go right up to the Providence hospital,' and I says, 'What for?' and he says, 'Well, we have to manipulate you.' I says, 'What the hell is manipulating?' So he explained it that my hip had been out of joint and that he wanted me to get up there right away, because that afternoon he was going to put me under ether and,—well, it is not ether, either; it is a new stuff they shoot in your veins that makes you go to sleep. And so then I argued with him. I told him, I said, 'Hell! You acted like I was faking, so I will be up there at 1:00 o'clock in the afternoon. I have to go home and get some clothes and stuff.' And so he says, 'You make sure to be up there.' And so I went home and got a couple of suits of pajamas and shaving gear and stuff."?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Did you give that answer? [6569]

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you this question: "Did you go into the hospital?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Then I come back and I went to the hospital."? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you, "How long were you in the hospital?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "I think I was in the hospital a couple of weeks."? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you this question: "During all the time you were under treatment by Dr. Buckner?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Yes. And after I left the hospital I started taking treatments again from Dr. Buckner."? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "What kind of treatments?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Well, he was giving me shots."? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "Shots of what?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "I don't know."? [6570]

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "Was he also prescribing pills of any kind?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "No. I had a box of pills that I got up at the Marine hospital. And in Juneau,—the doctor in Juneau gave me a prescription, and I got, I think, a hundred of these,—oh, what the devil do you call them?—a sleeping pill. You take one or two and go to sleep, but if you take four it makes you higher than a kite"?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "Nembuthal?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Nembuthal."?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "That is the name you mentioned to me a while ago, isn't it?"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer "Yes. Nembuthal. These names are pretty hard."?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you this: "Were you taking any more pills just before you saw the FBI Agents for the first time?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Yes."? [6571]

A. I dont' remember.

Q. Did I ask you "How many pills at a time were you taking?"? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "I was taking four pills at a time."? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "How many times a day were you taking these pills?"?

Q. Did you answer "Oh, well, I was taking them four or five times a day, so I was all hopped up all the time."? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you "Was this to relieve the pain from your hip?"? A. I don't remember?

Q. Did you answer "Yes. I think, if I am not mistaken, Dr. Buckner prescribed some of these pills, too."? A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did I ask you this: "Let's go back for a minute to the first time you spoke to Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein, the FBI Agents. That conversation was in their office in the Vance Building"?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer "Yes."?

A. I don't remember. [6572]

Q. Did I ask you:

"And they told you to come back the next day?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"At what time?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"I believe it was in the morning."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Did you come back the next day?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"I did." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"What happened?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"We were there a while and I,—well, I couldn't sit down very well. The hip bothered me. And so they asked me was my hip bothering me and I said, 'Yes,' and they suggested [6573] that we go up to the hotel room in the Roosevelt hotel in Seattle, and so we rode up to the room in a taxi up to the Roosevelt Hotel, and we went up in their room. And that was on the 10th or 11th floor. Quite a ways up in the elevator."

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"What happened when you got into the room?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Well, I got in the room and they had—I believe—yes, they did have a statement already typewritten out, and so"——

Did you give that answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"What did they want you to do with the statement?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Well, they wanted me to sign it."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Yesterday you told me that on this second day when the FBI agents saw you they told you that they wanted you to sign a statement in which you were to say that you had seen Harry Bridges pay his Communist Party dues. Did they do that?"

A. I don't remember. [6574]

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes. They mentioned that. And then I told them that I had never seen no party book—never seen

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Harry Bridges in a party book, or ever paid party dues."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Did you read the statement, or did they read it to you? The statement that they had prepared?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Well, to tell you—the statement was already typed, so I glanced through it. And they asked me, 'Now, are there any mistakes?' And so I found some words misspelled and a few errors, and they told me to initial,—to make corrections and put my initials on each line where I made a correction."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Before that happened, you told me yesterday that they asked you whether you had been in meetings with William Schneidermann?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer: "Yes."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you: [6575]

"What did you tell them?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes, I told them I had met Schneidermann."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"You also told me they asked you whether you had been in meetings with Bridges?"

A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

We are still in this office?

Q. Yes, still in the office.

Did you answer:

"Yes; they asked me that, too, and I said, yes, I had been at meetings with Bridges, and then they asked me if there was any Communist meeting I had been with Harry Bridges, and I told them that I had been—the meetings I had been with him, there was Communists in the meeting, such as myself, and there were non-Communists, and all the meetings were pertaining to—referred to the making up of agreements at the time. We were meeting at the shipowners of the waterfront unions, and, you see, we were meeting as a group, and that the sailors were going to try to break away at the time."

Did you give that answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you this: [6576]

"Yesterday you told me that Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein asked you whether you had ever been in a meeting where Schneidermann and Bridges were present at the same time, and that you told them you never had." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Is that what happened?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes; that is right." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"And that was a truthful answer to their question?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes. And as I told them, I had been—I was taking in quite a few meetings at the time—both Communists and non-Communist meetings—and that I couldn't remember that I ever had been in a meeting where both Schneidermann and Bridges were there. Which is correct. I hadn't."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you this question:

"But the statement that you signed for the FBI agents [6577] contains a statement to the effect that you had sat in a meeting with Schneidermann and Bridges. That was untrue?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes; but that isn't correct."

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"They had prepared that in the statement for you?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes; and I never noticed it when I"——

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"When you read it?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes. You see, I want you to understand this, too. You see, when I read these statements I was gowd up. If you don't know what gowd up is,—I was taking these pills pretty heavy. I was in pretty bad shape. And so instead of using them for sleeping pills, if you double the dose it makes everything rosy then."

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Did you give that answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"So you signed the prepared statement they had for you?" [6578] A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"And it contained statements that weren't true, is that right?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Correct." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Later on they had you sign two more statements, isn't that true?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Correct." A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Were those also prepared statements which were prepared by them in advance?"

A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes." A. I don't remember. [6579]

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Did those two statements also contain untrue statements?" A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you answer:

"They did." A. I don't remember.

Q. Is the reason that you don't remember any of this your claim that you were drunk?

A. What is that again? I don't even remember being up in that office.

Q. You were so drunk you don't even remember being up in that office, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Did those two statements also contain untrue statements?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"They did." A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"And they had you sign those also?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Yes." [6580] A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"Why did you sign all of these statements which they had prepared for you when you knew that those statements contained false statements?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you answer:

"Why?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Did I ask you:

"You knew and they knew, when you were signing those statements, that those statements contained falsehoods, isn't that true?"

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you answer:

"Yes." A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"You told me yesterday that you were compelled to sign those statements even though you knew they contained falsehoods. Is that right?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Isn't it true that you sat there and didn't answer that? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you: [6581]

"You didn't sign those voluntarily and freely when you knew they were untrue, did you?"

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do I understand counsel is reading matters that were not permitted, not read before?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: He is getting down close to it though, I think.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you hear the last question?

A. Yes.

Q. You don't remember that? A. No.

Q. Didn't you sit there and refuse to answer that question? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Let me ask you this: Isn't it true that you signed those statements because you felt under compulsion to do it even though you knew the statements were untrue?" A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you this:

"Isn't that what you told me yesterday, and isn't that the [6582] truth? I want you to answer only the truth, and nothing else. Isn't it true that before you signed even the first statement you were under compulsion to do it, and they knew it?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer that question?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Didn't you tell me that yesterday?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask:

"Please answer. Didn't you tell me that?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Didn't you tell me that yesterday?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"You did tell me that, didn't you, and it was true when you told me, wasn't it? Why do you object to answering it now? [6583] Don't you want to answer the question?" A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer that question? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you this:

"Well, I will ask you this question: You can answer it or not, as you see fit. Yesterday in my room in the hotel, in front of Rosco Craycraft, you told me that you were forced by the FBI agents to sign all those three statements? Didn't you tell me that?" A. I don't remember.

Q. And didn't you sit there and not answer that question? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you this:

"Didn't you tell me yesterday, in front of Rosco Craycraft that the FBI agents forced you to sign the first statement through threats?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer that?"

A. I don't remember. Was I awake at the time in an office?

Q. Do you recall now whether you were awake or asleep?

A. No. I don't even recall being in any office. Keep reading the questions. [6584]

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is asking you if you know —you were there.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't I ask you this question:

"Why don't you want to answer? If there is a question that is asked, there is an answer to it. It is either 'yes' or 'no' or whatever the answer may be. There is a truthful answer. That is the only answer I want to the question. Yesterday you made certain statements to me. These statements were made freely and voluntarily by you. I ask you now to repeat those statements. I am asking you questions for the purpose of bringing out those statements that you made to me. You told me that those statements were the truth. Why don't you answer the questions now? Is it because you are afraid of the FBI?" A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you answer:

"Off the record." A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't your ask to go off the record on that question? A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you want to engage in discussion outside of this record at that time?

A. I don't remember. [6585]

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Do you want to answer that? 'Yes' or 'No'. Don't you want to answer?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you this question:

"I don't care whether you ever sign this deposition or not. All I want is an answer to the question, and the answer I want is the truth, and nothing else. Don't you want to answer the question?" A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you sit there and not answer?

A. I don't remember.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't I ask you this:

"Since you indicate that you don't, I have no alternative except to summarize in a question form and put it to you directly. Yesterday, in my hotel room, you told Rosco Craycraft and me that when the FBI agents asked what you knew about Bridges and whether you knew he was a Communist, and so on, you kept telling them that you didn't have any information against Bridges in any way. You told them that you hadn't been in any Communist meetings with him. You told them that you had never been in a meeting with William Schneidermann and Bridges present at the same time. And despite that, the [6586] FBI agents prepared a typewritten statement for you to sign in which there is a statement that you had sat in a meeting with Schneidermann and Bridges, and you signed it. You told me yesterday that when you refused to make false statements to the FBI agents, they started to ask you certain questions. Do you remember telling me that?"

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you at that point——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) I didn't get the last question.

Presiding Inspector: The question was whether this occurred, whether Mr. Gladstein did say that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you at that point get up and leave the room and return in about three minutes?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I remember leaving a room and going into a toilet. And when I got in that toilet I threw up a little. I came out, and I think it was Rosco Craycraft that was waiting out in the hallway and asked me to go back, and when I went back—go ahead.

Q. When you went back what happened?

A. You read it.

Q. You tell me what happened?

A. I am telling you what happened when I went out in the hallway.

Q. You tell me what happened when you came back from the [6587] hallway?

A. What happened when I came back?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I remember feeling pretty sick, and I went back and Craycraft asked me to go back, and I went back in, and I noticed that there was yourself and two other fellows in the room, and I think you started to ask a question again, and I turned around and walked out. Craycraft came out in the hallway with me and asked me to go back in again and I says, "No." I told him, "What are you trying to pull?" And the I went back aboard ship.

Q. Where did you make this statement, "What are you trying to pull?"—In the hallway to Mr. Craycraft? A. Yes.

Q. After you had left the office?

A. I believe so. I don't quite recall whether it was in the office or in the hallway. I do remember making that statement and walking out.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. As a matter of fact, when you came back—withdraw that. As a matter of fact, you asked to leave the room because you wanted to urinate, isn't that true?

A. No. I don't remember that. I remember leaving that office, like I told you, and I went to this toilet, on the floor there.

Q. Did you go alone? [6588]

A. No. I think Crayeraft — they keep those locked—I think he came out and opened the lock for me, opened the door.

Q. Did you tell anybody you wanted to go to the toilet? A. What?

Q. Did you tell anybody that you wanted to go to the toilet?

A. I don't remember telling anybody.

Q. You just walked out of the room?

A. Yes. That is all I remember, leaving the room, and going out in the hallway.

Q. Then what happened?

A. That is like I told you twice now.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has told about that. Go ahead. Ask the next question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. To whom did you express the desire to go to the toilet, anybody? A. No.

Q. You just went to the toilet yourself?

A. I don't remember how I wanted to go to the toilet, but I do remember after I heaved I felt a lot better.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Where did you heave?

A. In the toilet.

Q. Were you alone? [6589]

A. I believe I was.

Q. Didn't you come back in that room, and didn't I ask you:

"Before you go I want to finish asking you a question. If you don't want to answer it, it is up to you. Will you please sit down so I can ask the question?"

A. I don't recall sitting down.

Q. Didn't you answer me as follows:

"I can answer here."

A. Read that again.

Q. Do you recall my asking you this question:

"Before you go I want to finish asking you a question. If you don't want to answer it, it is up to you. Will you please sit down so I can ask the question?" A. I don't recall it.

Q. Do you recall that you were standing up in the back of the office at that time?

A. No. I recall coming back and standing by the door a while, and I was starting to feel sick again and then I left.

Q. Now, don't you remember that you had a discussion with Mr. Lord at that time?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Don't you remember that Mr. Lord asked whether there was something that you wanted to discuss with a lawyer? [6590] A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Don't you remember that Mr. Lord said, in substance, to you "If you have got something on your chest that you want to get off, if you have any fears about it, go and get yourself a good lawyer?"

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Didn't he tell you that?

A. No, I don't recall that he did.

Q. Do you remember anybody coming in the office at all during that time? A. No.

Q. Didn't a lady come in the office?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Didn't Mr. Lord's wife come into the office and ask how long he was going to be?

A. No; I don't remember.

Q. While you were sitting down in a chair?

A. No; I don't remember.

Q. Didn't I ask you:

"Yesterday you told Mr. Craycraft and me that when you told the FBI that you didn't know anything against Bridges and that you refused to sign false statements for them, Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein asked you what had become—wait a minute"—

And then you left the room? A. No.

[6591]

Q. Didn't that happen?

A. I don't remember that.

Mr. Gladstein: Shall we adjourn?

Presiding Inspector: No; let's go on.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, do you believe that you said any of those things in the lawyer's office on that Sunday morning?

Mr. Myron: I object to that question, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: How is that material?

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, in referring to the Clyde Hotel meeting there were some distinctions in the testimony. That is what we discussed before. There were some distinctions in the answers of Mr. Cannalonga. In some of them he said merely he didn't remember. As to others he said "No, I am positive not." Now, I think we are absolutely permitted if he will say more than "I don't remember." It is possible for him to say "I believe" on the basis of some other information.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we have been all over the other information.

Mr. Grossman: No, we haven't on this. We haven't asked him whether he believed——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, well, we have been all over the fact in this matter. Now, what difference [6592] does it make whether he says he might have said it or not.

Mr. Grossman: On some of these he might say he didn't say them.

Presiding Inspector: We can't go all over that. It would merely be repetition. It would call for the facts and you have been over the facts. All you are making here is laying a basis for contradictory statements. That is all this testimony is for, I suppose.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: If your Honor will remember, with reference to the Clyde Hotel meeting——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, I know.

Mr. Grossman: (Continuing) ——in many of the questions the answer was either "no" or "I don't believe so", and we were permitted to ask further questions to confirm it in some of those cases.

Presiding Inspector: Because I didn't remember in those cases or there was no objection. One or two questions I allowed. We had gone so far I thought we might as well have the whole statement. But you had been over it. You had had every opportunity to cross examine him on the facts. I don't see that his belief is material now.

Mr. Grossman: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga——

Presiding Inspector: Because I don't think it would bring [6593] out anything new, Mr. Grossman.

Mr. Grossman: Unless he will say "I am positive that I didn't say that."

Presiding Inspector: He hasn't said that in any way through this.

Mr. Grossman: He might. Suppose he were asked this question—he did with reference to one. Suppose he were asked this question: "Is there any question here or any answer that you are positive was not asked or not given?"

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: He wouldn't do it from his recollection because he says he has no recollection.

Mr. Grossman: He has some recollection of this meeting. He has indicated he recalls leaving, he recalls saying something.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He has some recollection when he walked out. Now you want to go back and review this on the basis of the facts.

Mr. Grossman: Without asking specific questions, though, just saying——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't see how that is material. It seems to me it is going over it again.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, the Chief Engineer, you say, knew that you were drunk on Saturday?

A. Yes. [6594]

Q. And knew that you were drunk on Sunday?

A. Yes.

Q. And the First Assistant knew that you were drunk on those two days? A. Yes.

Q. Who else knew you were drunk on those two days? A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Who else did you talk with on the ship while you were in a drunken condition?

A. Well, I don't know who I talked to. I could have talked to five hundred persons on the ship.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What makes you think that the Chief Engineer knew you were drunk?

A. Well, the Chief and the First both had made remarks late Sunday, on Sunday late in the afternoon or about five or six o'clock, just before I went in to supper, and pointed out, like I pointed out when I made the statement yesterday morning, yesterday afternoon, that the first, he couldn't understand how I was walking around with the load that I had been carrying; that I was a perfect gentleman while I was drunk, or words to that effect. He said he didn't know how you could do it.

Q. What about Saturday? What makes you think they knew that you were drunk on Saturday?

A. Well, I didn't write them no letters about it.

[6595]

Mr. Myron: He has given the reason.

Mr. Gladstein: I would rather that Mr. Myron didn't answer, if your Honor. If he wants to make an objection he may. If he wants to object on the grounds that it has been asked and answered, he may do so.

Mr. Myron: That is my objection. It has been asked and answered.

Mr. Gladstein: Every time, in my opinion, he says something that is intended for the witness and is nothing but coaching, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, there is an objection to this. I will allow it to be answered.

Go ahead, if you can tell.

A. (Continuing) Well, I don't know how they knew I was drunk, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Why do you say they knew you were drunk if you don't know why?

A. Well, well, how do you know that anybody is drunk?

Mr. Del Guercio: Why does one know.——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Just a minute! I object to the form of these statements. [6596]

Presiding Inspector: Let him answer if he can.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Answer it, please.

A. Well, I can't answer that.

Mr. Myron: My objection was that he had given the reasons, and if there are any further reasons why he knew that he was drunk, why, he can give them.

Presiding Inspector: This was on a different occasion.

Mr. Myron: That isn't the proper way to ask the question.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Mr. Myron: I think the first question referred to Saturday and Sunday, and I think his answer was made and then it was referred to.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think the question

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

first was in relation to both Saturday and Sunday, and then he separated it.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Mr. Myron: After he has answered it once, if he wants to ask him if there are any further reasons, that is proper.

Presiding Inspector: If there are any reasons other than obvious condition.

The Witness: No, your Honor. There is no— (pause)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Saturday and Sunday were the only two days on which [6597] you had been drunk while you were on the West Cussetta? A. Yes.

Q. You were sober every other day?

A. Well, I had been drinking, yes, and leading up to Saturday and Sunday.

Q. How about after Sunday night?

A. No, I was sober after Sunday.

Q. Were you sober all day Sunday?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. All evening Monday? All night Monday?

A. Uh-huh (affirmative).

Q. And how about all day Tuesday?

A. Yes.

Q. And all day Wednesday? A. Yes.

Q. Definitely sober on those days?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you say that about six o'clock Sunday you had a discussion with somebody about your having been drunk and carrying a load like a gentleman, something like that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, the First.

Q. Who was that with?

A. The First Assistant on the ship.

Q. Where? A. On the West Cussetta.

[6598]

Q. Where were you when the discussion was held?

A. Oh, just outside of my room. He had come in the room and had a drink with me, and I recall that I was trying to sober up at the time and I recall he stated—he says "By God!", he says, "You sure have been celebrating your birthday", he says, "and I don't see how you can carry such a load as you do."

Presiding Inspector: Now, when was that?

The Witness: That was on the Sunday.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What time Sunday? A. Oh,——

Mr. Myron (Interposing) He has already answered that question, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He did answer it, I think.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, it was about six o'clock, I think you said? A. Somewheres around there.

Q. You were sobering up there?

A. Yes, I was trying to sober up.

Q. Did you drink any more after that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes. I had a few, tapering off.

Q. Were you sober after six o'clock Sunday night?

Mr. Myron: He is going into Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday now. He is going over it again. [6599]

Presiding Inspector: I think it is all right. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you sober after six P. M. Sunday?

A. Was I sober? Well, I wasn't entirely sober, no. I was tapering off.

Q. Do you have to get these time sheets approved by anybody? A. Oh, yes.

Q. By whom? A. The Chief Engineer.

Q. Have these been approved?

A. They are. They were.

Q. When were they approved?

A. When?

Q. Yes.

A. Just before they pay you off for your port pay.

Q. So the overtime hours that you have put in for on Saturday, May 3rd, and Sunday, May 4th, were all approved by the Chief Engineer?

A. They were.

Q. Now, at the time that you were talking to the First Assistant about six o'clock Sunday evening when he had this conversation with you about how much you could carry in the way of liquor, were you working at that time? [6600]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. It states on there. Can I look at those?

Q. Don't you remember?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if he wants to look at it, it is his.

Presiding Inspector: No. He is asking about his independent recollection.

A. I don't quite recall. Your Honor, if I would look at that overtime sheet I would tell you right to the exact minute.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but have you any recollection? That is the question?

The Witness: I think they were working cargo at the time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What do you think you were doing?

A. Huh?

Q. What were you doing at that time?

A. I was standing by.

Q. How long had you been standing by?

A. Well, I would have to look at the sheets to tell you the exact time. The sheets give it in detail.

Q. When you stand by does that mean that you are out on the dock ready for——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Haven't we gone into this?

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that. [6601]

Presiding Inspector: We have already gone into what he means by "standing by".

The Witness: May I look at those sheets, your Honor?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Let me ask you this question, Mr. Cannalonga: Do you know whether the First Assistant at the time that he had this discussion with you on Sunday about six o'clock in the evening—have you got that discussion in mind?

A. Yes, I believe I have.

Q. All right. Do you know whether he knew whether you were working or not at that time?

A. Well, it made no difference.

Q. Did he or didn't he know that?

Mr. Del Guercio: How could he know what is in the mind of another person, your Honor?

A. It is just like I said.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, is he your boss in any way?

A. Yes, he is my boss.

Q. Then he would know as your boss whether or not you were working?

A. Yes. But it makes no difference.

Q. I mean, he would know whether you were working or not?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. He is asking [6602] what another person knows, not what that other person said but what is in his mind. Certainly that is improper.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is meant quite that way. I will take it. We have had many of those questions by both counsel throughout this hearing.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. As a matter of fact, your time sheets show that you worked cargo, or standing by, or whatever you call it, from one to six P. M., five hours, and from six P. M. to midnight, six hours, on Sunday, May the 4th. That is an eleven-hour stretch.

Mr. Myron: I object to that. Why doesn't he be fair to the witness? Show him the time sheet and ask him what it says.

Mr. Gladstein: Oh, that is absurd.

A. I will explain it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I just want you to see that. Is that correct?

A. Let me hold it, please, and then I can see it better. 1:00 to 6:00, five hours, and 6:00 to midnight; yes.

Q. That is straight eleven hours that you were working overtime? A. Yes.

Q. And your boss knew that you were working overtime? A. Yes. [6603]

Q. And he's the First Assistant? A. Yes.

Q. And he is the one that had this talk with you, is that right?

A. Yes. Uh-huh (affirmative). [6604]

Q. Are there any rules about being drunk on the job on the ship?

A. Will you ask me that question again? You was walking around the table when you was talking. I didn't quite get you.

Q. I will ask you this question first: Is there any rule regarding being drunk on the job aboard ship? A. What kind of rules?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Any kind of rules?

A. Yes, there is, we have a rule in our contract with the steamship companies that it is up to the First Assistant if he wants to fire a fellow for being drunk while on duty. Now, I have explained this to you a dozen times, Mr. Gladstein, in regards to standing by.

Q. No, don't tell me about "standing by". I just want to know about rules now for drunkenness.

A. I just told you about the rules and maybe you have misunderstood me.

Q. You say there is a union rule?

Presiding Inspector: You have covered the rule. If there is some other rule you can give it. You say that the rule is that if a man is drunk on duty he can be fired?

The Witness: Yes, if the First Assistant wants to fire him.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6605]

Q. That is in the union contract with the shipowners, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Are there any other rules regarding being drunk on the job?

A. Well, there are rules for being drunk, incompetent, and the Marine Firemen have rules to that effect.

Q. That is a union rule? A. Yes.

Q. That is a union rule, separate and apart from the rule that is contained in the collective bargaining agreement between the shipowners and the union? A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Are there any rules besides those two rules on drunkenness?

A. No. But I would like to explain those two rules.

Q. Is there a Maritime Commission regulation?

Mr. Del Guercio: If he wants to explain it let him explain.

Presiding Inspector: You can ask about them.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is there a Maritime regulation regarding being drunk on the job on ships operated by the Maritime Commission? A. I don't know.

Q. Is there a Steamboat Inspection rule regarding being [6606] drunk on the job on a motor ship of that kind?

A. I don't know. But, now, may I explain, your Honor?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment, Mr. Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: No. You answer the questions. You will have time to explain. There is going to be plenty of opportunity.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is the First Assistant Engineer a licensed officer?

A. He is, and he has the responsibility to Judge whether a man is competent or not on the job.

Q. And according to the rules of the Steamboat Inspection Service his license is subject to being cancelled if he violates rules, isn't that right?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: How is that material?

The Witness: I don't know.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I will withdraw that question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the name of the Chief Engineer on that ship, please?

A. I don't recall his name.

Q. What was the name of the First Assistant?

A. And I don't recall the First's name. [6607]

Q. What was the name of the Second Assistant?

A. I don't recall his name.

Q. What was the name of the Third Assistant?

A. I don't recall his name.

Q. What was the name of the Fourth Assistant?

A. I don't recall his name.

Q. What was the name of anybody on that ship?

A. You want to understand, Mr. Gladstein, that aboard ship——

Q. (Interposing): Can you give me the name of anybody on board that ship?

A. I will give you their nicknames.

Q. Were you drunk on that ship all the time you were on it? A. No.

Q. How friendly were you with the Chief Engineer? A. I wasn't friendly with him.

Q. You were or you were not?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I was not friendly with him.

Q. How friendly were you with the First Assistant?

A. I wasn't friendly with the First Assistant. I only spoke to him in the line of duty.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all for this witness?

Mr. Gladstein: Oh, no.

Mr. Grossman: We have a lot more of this witness.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, what was the name of the Mate that [6608] woke you up at three o'clock in the morning?

A. I don't know his name. He was the night mate.

Q. Did he know that you were drunk?

A. I don't know whether he did or not.

Q. Did any of the longshore gang foremen talk with you at any time while you were on this drunk during Saturday and Sunday?

A. I don't recall. I could have talked to individuals on the ship, but I don't recall talking to anybody in particular.

Q. When did that winch break on Saturday?

Mr. Del Guercio: Haven't we gone over that?

Presiding Inspector: I think we have been over that.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not sure.

The Witness: Yes, we went over that. I remember that quite well.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you remember when the winch broke? I don't remember what the record shows?

Mr. Del Guercio: Is there a ruling on that?

Presiding Inspector: Do you want me to tell you?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: It broke just as they were quitting work in the unloading in the evening and he was called again at three o'clock in the morning, and I think he said at nine o'clock in the evening. [6609]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was the next shift of longshoremen to go on who would have occasion to use that winch, Mr. Cannalonga? A. At eight——

Q. (Interposing): The next morning.

A. If you will let me look at this overtime sheet.

Q. Yes, certainly.

A. Thanks. At seven A.M.

Q. That is as the men were leaving the ship on Saturday night, the longshoremen, Saturday evening, as the shift was going off at about nine o'clock the winch broke down; is that right?

A. I believe so.

Q. And that winch was not to be used again by the longshore gang until seven o'clock the next morning, is that it? A. I think that's it.

Q. And you were told about the winch breaking down at three o'clock in the morning when you were awakened by the night mate?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. By the night mate. He is a relief mate.

Q. Is that correct? A. That is correct.

Mr. Gladstein: Does your Honor want to recess now? I see we have had a rather long day and we cannot finish [6610] with this witness today, your Honor. I regret that this is going to take the time that it does take, but I see no alternative.

Mr. Del Guercio: Regrets, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: We will recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon at 4:50 o'clock P.M. an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock A.M. Friday, June 6, 1941.) [6611]

Court Room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,
June 6, 1941

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A.M. [6612]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Call the witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: Before we proceed, I have a request to make.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will the Court please inquire as to whether Harry Lundeberg has responded to a subpoena for ten o'clock this morning.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you please make inquiry so I may take proper steps if he is not here?

Presiding Inspector: The name?

Mr. Del Guercio: Harry Lundeberg.

Presiding Inspector: Is Harry Lundeberg in the hearing room?

(No response.)

Will you call his name in the hall?

(Whereupon Harry Lundeberg's name was called out in the hall by a guard.)

A Guard: No response.

Presiding Inspector: You had better call it again loudly in the hall.

(The name of Harry Lundeberg was again called in the hall by a guard.)

Presiding Inspector: Evidently there is no response. [6613] It is only two minutes past ten. You had better call it again at half past ten.

Mr. Gladstein: Shall I proceed?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Cross Examination
(Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, do you have any seamen's certificate or discharge papers with you?

A. I have.

Q. With you? A. Yes.

Q. May I see one of them?

A. What do you want to see?

Q. Your identification certificate as a seaman, if you will.

A. (Producing papers): Of course, you understand that these papers——

Q. (Interposing): I won't take them from you.

A. I will let you look at it, but the Government reserves me the right to keep my papers at all times and nobody has a right to take them.

Q. I wouldn't think of it. [6614]

A. Let me get them apart, please.

(The papers produced were passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

The Witness: Anything in particular you are looking for? I have got about seven there.

Mr. Gladstein: I just want to look over it.

The Witness: Which one are you looking for, Mr. Gladstein? I might be able to help you.

(The papers referred to were passed back to the witness.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Let's go back for a moment and start with that Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel, Mr. Cannalonga. Do you recall how the subject of political backing of the CIO came up?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Del Guercio: Haven't we gone all over this?

Presiding Inspector: I am not quite sure whether that particular question was asked, but you have been over this in general.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Are your sure that "physical backing" was mentioned in any way?

A. I am quite certain of that.

Q. In those words?

A. It is like I told you yesterday or the day before, that the whole thing was pretty hazy and I remember having an [6615] argument with Craycraft and that was mentioned in regards to physical backing.

Q. Isn't it a fact that I asked you to come to San Francisco and testify to the whole truth?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Gladstein. [6616]

Q. Isn't it a fact that you said you would be willing to come to San Francisco on condition that you first went to Seattle and cleared with some people in Seattle?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Isn't it a fact you said you were afraid the FBI might go after you for perjury if you went on the stand again and told the truth?

A. I don't believe so.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Isn't it a fact that that's the way the O'Neil question came up? A. I don't remember.

Q. Isn't it a fact that I told you that the CIO would stand behind any man who was prosecuted for perjury by the FBI as a result of his taking the stand and exposing the methods of the FBI?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, it is obvious that that question was not meant at all for the purpose of cross examining this witness but for other purposes. The O'Neil matter has never appeared in examination of this witness.

Presiding Inspector: The question ought not to be asked unless it is the claim of counsel that some such thing occurred.

Mr. Gladstein: It is that claim, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: In violation of professional duty.

Mr. Gladstein: It is that claim and we will have evidence [6617] on it.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. I will allow the question.

A. I don't recall that, Mr. Gladstein.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't it true that before you left the Clyde Hotel that Saturday I asked you whether you would be willing to make the statements that you had made to Crayeraft and to me in a sworn deposition before a Notary Public? A. No.

Q. Isn't it true that you said you would like to have a night to think it over?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't recall saying that.

Q. Isn't it true that you said you would be willing to make a statement but you did not want to admit having committed a violation of the Mann Act ?

A. No. I don't possibly see how I could make a statement of that sort.

Q. Isn't it true that before you left the Clyde Hotel that Saturday afternoon it was agreed that you should return the following morning at 10:00 o'clock and that in the meantime arrangements should be made for a shorthand reporter and a Notary Public in whose office you were to give a deposition the following day? A. No. [6618]

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object to the use of the word "deposition".

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. If that was said, you see.

A. (Continuing): No. I don't ever recall you saying anything like that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did you go after you left my room with Rosco Craycraft that Saturday?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over.

Mr. Gladstein: It has not been asked, your Honor.

A. Well, I went back to the ship.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How did you go back to the ship?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't recall how I did go back. I think I —I think Rosco took me back.

Q. Why, he took you to Fourth and Oak where you wanted to do some shopping, didn't he?

A. Fourth and Oak? I believe we stopped at a liquor store and picked up a quart of rum and half a dozen bottles of Coca Cola.

Q. Didn't he take you to Fourth and Oak at your request because you wanted to do some shopping?

A. He possibly could have.

Q. Didn't he tell you that he would wait for you at [6619] Third and Couch?

A. Third and Couch? Whereabouts is Third and Couch?

Q. I am asking you this: Didn't he tell you that he would wait for you at Third and Couch after you finished doing your shopping?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Didn't you do some shopping?

A. Well,——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): Does shopping include buying that liquor?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you do some shopping, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I believe I did stop at a drug store and pick up some Anacin tablets and a bottle of——

Q. (Interposing): Didn't you go in there alone? A. I think I did.

Q. Didn't you then go to Third and Couch

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

when you finished with your shopping and meet Craycraft? A. Third and Couch?

Q. Did you or didn't you?

A. Yeah, I think I went to some grocery store.

Q. That is the Maleti's Grocery Store, isn't it?

A. Maleti's, yes.

Q. And didn't you then ask Craycraft to take you down to [6620] the ship?

A. No. I don't believe I asked him to take me down to the ship.

Q. Did he take you down to the ship?

A. As far as I recall, we got in his car and the next stop was I asked him to stop at a liquor store on the way down to the ship and I didn't have no liquor permit, so he bought me a bottle of rum and I got a half a dozen bottles of Coca Cola.

Q. Before you met Craycraft at Maleti's Grocery on Third and Couch what other shopping did you do besides the Anacin tablets?

A. Oh, I don't—well, I didn't do any shopping.

Q. Didn't Craycraft take you down to the ship in his automobile and you got there about 5:00 o'clock?

A. I believe it was around that time. I'm not sure.

Q. And didn't you agree with Craycraft before you left him that afternoon that he was to meet you the next morning at 9:45 in the morning?

A. No. I don't recall making a date at 9:45 with him in the car. [6621]

Q. Wasn't that—you say in the car?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes.

Q. Any time before you got on the ship didn't you make that date for 9:45 the following morning with Craycraft?

A. No. I believe he came aboard ship with me and we opened a bottle and—I had a bottle already open aboard ship—and poured a couple of drinks.

Q. Which was it, did you open a new bottle or did you have an old bottle?

A. I had an old bottle open.

Q. How long was Craycraft with you on the ship? A. I don't recall how long he was.

Q. Anybody else in the room?

A. No; I don't think so.

Q. Nobody at all?

A. I don't know; I couldn't be sure.

Q. How long was Craycraft with you?

A. Oh, I would say he was with me long enough to have a drink.

Q. How many drinks?

A. I don't recall how many drinks.

Q. Before he left you that afternoon, that Saturday afternoon, didn't you agree with him that you would meet him at 9:45 the following morning?

A. I possibly could have agreed with him.

[6622]

Q. Wasn't the reason for that date with Craycraft because it had been previously agreed when you were in my room in the Clyde Hotel that you would come back at ten o'clock on Sunday morning?

A. No; I don't recall that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Are we going all over this matter again?

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you gone over this?

Mr. Gladstein: I think not. I have a right to press him on this.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but you haven't a right to press him more than once.

Mr. Gladstein: When part of it comes out I think I have a right to follow it up.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have gone over this—be brief about it.

Mr. Gladstein: Was there an answer?

The Reporter: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: What was the answer?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where was that liquor store where you say Crayeraft bought some liquor for you?

A. I don't recall the street. I know—I am quite [6223] sure it was on the way out to the ship.

Q. Give me the neighborhood.

A. What is that?

Q. Give me the neighborhood.

A. I don't know the neighborhood of Portland.

Q. Do you know anything as to the name of any street nearby? A. No.

Q. Did you go in the store? A. No.

Q. Where were you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I was—I believe I walked down the block to a restaurant of some sort, or a store, and I picked up the Coca Cola.

Q. By yourself? A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know where you picked up the Coca Cola? A. No.

Q. What did the store look like?

A. I don't recall what it looked like.

Q. What street was it on?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was it a corner store?

A. No—I don't know whether it was a corner store or what the street was. [6624]

Q. Was it a drug store, a grocery store, or what kind of a store?

A. No, it wasn't a drug store. I don't recall what the store was.

Q. Did you talk to anybody in that store?

A. Well, I must have talked to somebody to get the Coca Cola.

Q. Now, the next morning, Sunday morning—withdraw that. After Crayeraft left you that Saturday afternoon you didn't see him again that night, did you?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone over. Are we going over it again?

Presiding Inspector: I think you have.

Mr. Gladstein: This is Saturday night. I have not gone over it. All I have done is to go into the events in the hotel room and the events in the lawyer's office. But I have not gone over the matters in between. I haven't done that, your Honor.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We may withdraw the objection as to show what must have gone on there Saturday and Sunday considering Mr. Gladstein's attitude now. If he does that in this court room what did he do there on Saturday and Sunday night?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't understand that as an objection.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

I would like to see the testimony of yesterday.

[6625]

(Whereupon Mr. Gaiser left the hearing room for the transcript referred to.)

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You didn't see Crayeraft again after he left you about five o'clock Saturday, May 3rd, did you?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to this as having been asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: It is preliminary, I suppose. I will take it.

A. After five o'clock? You say after five o'clock?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After about 5:00 p.m., yes.

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. But you spoke to him the following morning on the telephone, didn't you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I think it was.

Q. You phoned him, didn't you?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; half a dozen times.

Mr. Gladstein: Not on Sunday morning.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; oh, yes, that was asked. He wavered somewhat as to whether he called or was called.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, perhaps there was a question on that. [6626]

Presiding Inspector: More than a question; quite a lot of them.

(Mr. Gaiser entered the hearing room and handed to the Presiding Inspector a copy of the transcript previously requested.)

Mr. Gladstein: Shall I continue?

Presiding Inspector: I wouldn't pursue that.

Mr. Gladstein: I shan't at length.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You phoned him at Maleti's Grocery, didn't you? A. Well——

Q. (Interposing) Did you or didn't you?

Presiding Inspector: That means you had a talk with him. Or do you mean he called him?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You called him?

A. I think I did; I am not sure.

Presiding Inspector: You have been over that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Wasn't it raining so hard that you called him and asked him over the phone to come and call for you?

A. No. I don't remember the conversation I had on the phone.

Q. Wasn't it raining hard?

A. I don't remember whether it was raining or not. [6627]

Q. Did you call Broadway 0718?

Mr. Myron: I object to this line of inquiry, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: If he can tell.

Mr. Myron: That has been gone over and over again.

A. The way it seems to me, that he called to the ship and left a phone number for me to call back. I am not sure on that. I remember there was a phone number written on a slip of paper, so if that is the number of the grocery store that you just said that is the number I called.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After that he called for you and met you, did he not, near the——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I object to that as having been asked and answered a dozen times.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't finished yet.

Presiding Inspector: He hasn't finished.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After this phone call, Mr. Cannalonga, Cray-

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

craft called for you and met you at the gate of the ship near the sheds, didn't he?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: You have been over that.

Mr. Gladstein: I am doing this very hurriedly for the purpose of getting the chronology, your Honor. [6628]

Presiding Inspector: I think the chronology is perfectly clear.

Mr. Gladstein: We will save a lot of time. As you notice, I am not going into the details of these matters at all.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't think there is any doubt about the chronology. I think you have covered it. [6629]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. All right. That Sunday morning when you were in my room before we went to the lawyer's office, you didn't have any drinks in my room, did you?

Mr. Myron: Now that was asked. That same question was asked, I think, twice.

Presiding Inspector: I can't remember that.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we go over the transcript, if your Honor please, to see whether that question was asked?

Mr. Gladstein: That was asked as to the Saturday afternoon, your Honor, but I am perfectly willing to take a stipulation that the answer that was given applies to both.

Mr. Del Guercio: I won't stipulate.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein: Then if you don't stipulate I would like an answer to the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You don't think that you had any drinks in my room that Sunday morning?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment! The Court hasn't ruled.

Mr. Grossman: May I say something about what I think is wasting a lot of the Court's time? It is my understanding that in cross examination there is no rule of evidence that a question, assuming that it has been the same question in identical words, has been asked twice. There is no rule of evidence forbidding it. It is entirely within the discretion of the Court. [6630]

Presiding Inspector: That is true. It is entirely within the discretion of the Court.

Mr. Grossman: And very often in cross examination similar questions are permitted to test the recollection of the witness and lots of other things. Now, since there is no legal rule, even assuming that these identical questions have been asked, and, secondly, since it certainly takes longer to have an objection made than to get a reply and no one is hurt, I think we would certainly expedite the proceedings if, subject to the limitation that Mr. Gladstein has put on himself, that he is only going through this briefly, if we do not have such objections as "asked and answered", because, as I say, it takes more time than having an answer and an answer doesn't hurt anything. If it is inconsistent I know your Honor would like to have the answer. If it is going to be the same it doesn't hurt any.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I think, if the Court please, we have been very, very lenient.

Presiding Inspector: If I may look at this just briefly here, it will only take a moment or two (Examining transcript).

I think it will be shorter to allow it. I don't think there is any claim of any such thing as proving a negative.

The Witness: Will you repeat that question again?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You didn't have any drinks in my room on Sunday morning, May the 4th, did you? [6631]

A. No.

Q. Or in the lawyer's office, did you?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Or between the two places, did you?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Now, after you left with Crayeraft and me on Sunday morning, after we left the Clyde Hotel we walked about a block and a half or a block to Crayeraft's car, didn't we?

A. No. I don't remember walking to any car.

Q. And didn't you see a man in plain clothes and a green hat and say that you had seen him before and you wondered whether he was watching you? A. No, I don't believe——

Q. (Interposing) And didn't we stand on a corner and watch to see where this man was going?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't remember watching any man.

Q. Didn't we ride in Crayeraft's car, you seated —where were you seated, by the way?

A. I don't—I don't even remember where I was sitting.

Q. Didn't you get in and sit in the back?

Mr. Myron: This has all been gone over.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think the details to that extent.

A. No. I don't remember I sat in the back.

Mr. Myron: I think he asked him what car it was, what [6632] model it was and where he was seated in the car. I remember.

Mr. Gladstein: No, I didn't ask about this particular day.

Mr. Del Guercio: No. I don't think that there was any testimony that Mr. Gladstein was watching a man with a green hat.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you get in and sit in the back of the car?

A. No. I don't remember getting in the car at all.

Q. And wasn't I sitting in the front with Crayeraft? A. I don't know.

Q. And didn't we carry on a conversation as we drove to the building where the lawyer's office was?

A. No. I don't remember no conversation.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't we park the car and get out and walk toward that building? A. No.

Q. Didn't we have a conversation——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) May I interject something? By "we" do you mean yourself?

Mr. Gladstein: The question is perfectly clear, and I will answer only the questions of the Court.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. I think the question is clear. [6633]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't we have a conversation before we got to the lawyer's office?

A. No, I don't recall either.

Q. About the pills that you had been taking?

A. No, I don't recall any conversation.

Q. Didn't you say it was pretty hard to remember those names? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell me they were sleeping tablets?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Didn't I say that I had been in the hospital and had had sleeping tablets by the name "nembuthal"?

A. No. I don't recall ever saying that to you.

Q. Didn't you say when you heard that word "That's the name of the tablets."?

A. No, I don't remember saying that to you.

Q. Before that didn't you suggest that we walk into a drug store and ask them about the names of sleeping tablets because you wanted to know the name of the tablet before you went into the deposition? A. No, I don't remember that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, when you were up in that office, that lawyer's office, isn't it a fact that when I started asking questions, not at the beginning but later on, which you refused to answer you got up, walked out of that office into the corridor, into [6634] a hallway within the office suite, where Rosco Crayeraft talked to you for a moment?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Isn't it true that Mr. William P. Lord walked out there and talked with you for a short time?

A. Well, he could have, I don't remember.

Q. Isn't it true that Mr. Lord said to you out there in the hallway that if you were afraid of anything you had better go to a lawyer and talk to him about it? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: Meaning that there weren't any lawyers in the room or what?

Presiding Inspector: I think you have asked about that. I don't know that you have placed it in the hall.

Mr. Gladstein: No, I hadn't, and there is some more that I wish to ask.

Presiding Inspector: Very well; go ahead. You asked about that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And isn't it true that he said to you that under the circumstances he considered that he should not be the one to give you advice, but he would give you the names of some of the most prominent lawyers in the city who would be only too glad to advise you if you were without money?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't remember that. [6635]

Q. And didn't he also say that you probably needed the advice of a lawyer.

A. I don't recall that.

Q. And isn't it true that after that conversation with Mr. Lord you came back in the office and sat down again and the deposition continued?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Now, isn't it true that as you were leaving that office you had a conversation with Crayeraft and you asked Crayeraft to call you or see you again that night? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Isn't it true that you told Crayeraft that you were going to try to get replaced, a replacement for your job so that you could go to Seattle and get this clearance from these people?

A. No, I don't remember saying that to him.

Q. Isn't it true that you told Crayeraft that if you could get a replacement that day, Sunday, you would go with Crayeraft the following day to Seattle to see these people that you wanted to see?

A. No. In regards to replacement, it was known on the ship as soon as we hit Portland I was trying to get a relief.

Q. What is your answer to that question?

A. No, I don't recall telling Crayeraft that.

Q. Isn't it true that you told Crayeraft that morning, [6636] that Sunday—it was after lunch time, after 12:00 noon—isn't it true that you told him as you were leaving the lawyer's office that you would call Crayeraft at 7:00 o'clock that evening?

A. No. I don't remember saying that to him.

Q. Now, isn't it true that about 7:30 that evening a man named Cole Jackman came down to see you on the ship?

A. I can't place that name, the name of that Cole Jackman.

Q. Did a man come down and see you on the ship at 7:30 P.M. Sunday? You were sober then, you said yesterday.

A. 7:30, I believe somebody did come down.

Q. And didn't he come down to ask why you had not called Crayeraft, who was waiting for you at the Maleti's Grocery Store?

A. No. I don't—I don't remember asking me that.

Q. What did he ask you?

A. I don't think he asked me anything.

Q. What's that?

A. I don't think he asked me anything.

Q. Well, where did you see him? Where were you when he saw you?

A. I believe I was in the room on the ship, in my room.

Q. What happened when he came in? [6637]

Mr. Myron: This has all been gone into.

Mr. Gladstein: This has not been gone over. The incident with Mr. Jackman, it hasn't even been touched.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: His name was mentioned.

Mr. Gladstein: On direct it was.

Presiding Inspector: Didn't you mention it?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. I will take your recollection. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have the last question in mind?

A. Yes. You asked me what did he ask me?

Q. Yes. What was said?

A. I think I offered him a drink.

Q. Did he drink with you? A. I think so.

Q. Did you know him? A. No.

Q. Did he introduce himself?

A. Yes. I think he introduced himself as a member of the Bridges Defense and I think he mentioned something about being on the Strike Committee during the '36-'37 strike.

Q. You were in the Chief Engineer's quarters when he saw you that evening, weren't you?

A. Oh, I was in the Chief's room? [6638]

Q. Yes, when he saw you for the first time that evening? A. It could be possible.

Q. And then he introduced himself, didn't he, to you? A. It's like I said——

Q. (Interposing) Did he or didn't he?

Mr. Myron: He is explaining. Let him answer the question.

A. I think he did.

Presiding Inspector: You mean did he introduce himself further than by saying that he was interested in the Bridges Defense?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein: No. I am not satisfied with the witness' answer as to how the introduction was made and I am asking him whether he introduced himself.

Presiding Inspector: That is introducing himself. You want to know whether he introduced himself later?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you mean to say that Jackman told you that he was a member of the Bridges Defense Committee?

A. I'm not quite clear on that, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. You invited him to come to your room, didn't you? A. I assume I did. [6639]

Q. And he stated——

Mr. Del Guercio: He hasn't finished the answer. He butts right in.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Go ahead and finish.

A. For the simple reason that anybody who comes aboard a ship, and if I am in somebody else's room, it is just a matter of courtesy of inviting you into your own room.

Q. You invited him into your stateroom and he came with you, didn't he?

A. I believe he did.

Q. And the two of you stayed there a half hour?

A. Half hour?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. About a half hour?

A. Oh, I don't recall how long.

Q. And didn't he tell you that Craycraft had been waiting for your phone call?

A. No. I don't recall him saying that.

Q. And didn't you tell him that the reason you couldn't meet or call Craycraft at 7:00 o'clock was because the winches had broken down?

Mr. Del Guercio: I suppose we haven't gone over that?

Mr. Gladstein: I know we haven't.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. It is not claimed that the conversation with Jackman was gone into in any detail. [6640] I will take it.

A. No. I don't recall any winches breaking down that time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you tell him that the reason you couldn't call or meet Craycraft at 7:00 o'clock that evening was because the winches had broken down?

A. No, I don't remember telling him that.

Q. Didn't you talk about Jackman having been a delegate to the ILWU convention and having just come up from San Francisco where he had been for a while?

A. He could have mentioned it, yes.

Q. And didn't you ask him whether he had heard your testimony here in Court?

A. No.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. Well,—(Pause).

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Are you sure about it, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, let me try to work it out in my mind, try to place the incident. It's like I told you, there has been a steady stream of fellows coming aboard the ship and the little minor details, I wouldn't catalogue them.

Q. This isn't a minor detail. The two of you were talking about mutual acquaintances that evening, weren't you?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that threatening manner of [6641] counsel.

Presiding Inspector: I think we have had it on both sides during the case.

Mr. Del Guercio: It indicates his attitude there on Saturday and Sunday. If he is doing this now what was he doing then?

A. No, I don't.

Presiding Inspector: I couldn't get the objection there.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know a man named Moose Norbeck?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you and Jackman talk about Moose Norbeck whom both of you know?

A. I believe we did. [6642]

Q. Yes. Didn't you ask Jackman whether he had heard you testify here in Court?

A. No; I don't believe I did.

Q. Didn't Jackson tell you before that that he had taken in a couple of days of the hearing when he was here in San Francisco?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No; I don't remember him saying that.

Q. Isn't that the reason that you asked him whether he had heard you testify?

A. No; I don't think so.

Q. Didn't Jackman say to you that he was surprised when he read about your testimony?

A. No; I don't believe he did.

Q. Didn't you say to Jackman, "I hope you fellows know what kind of a spot I was in. The FBI had the heat on me and I had to do pretty much what they told me to do?" A. No.

Q. You deny that you said that?

A. I do.

Q. You are positive about that, is that right?

A. Well——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) That is another——

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. We have had it right through the trial.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6643]

Q. Are you positive about that?

A. I couldn't be absolutely positive, but I know in my own mind that I never made a statement of that sort.

Presiding Inspector: That is the same word "positive" you see.

Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladsein:

Q. Didn't you tell Jackman that you had told the whole story, all the facts, to Crayeraft and to me? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Were you drunk or sober at 7:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. on Sunday night, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I told you yesterday, Mr. Gladstein, and I think I repeated, that on Sunday evening I started to taper off and cut down on my drinking. I believe it is quite clear what I told you. You don't sober up like that.

You have been drunk, haven't you?

Presiding Inspector: He doesn't have to answer that.

Mr. Gladstein: Nobody has ever been as drunk as you say you were.

Mr. Del Guercio: Have you?

Presiding Inspector: Let's not have that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Isn't it a fact that Jackman told you that he was a member of the Coast Labor Relations Committee for the longshoremen? [6644]

A. No; I don't remember him saying that.

Q. He left you about eight o'clock, didn't he?

A. I don't even recall what time he left, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Before he left, that is Jackman, I am talking about, didn't you tell him to tell Rosco Craycraft to come down and see you on the ship?

A. No; I don't recall telling that to Jackman.

Q. When you say you don't recall, is it possible that you did tell him that?

A. Well, Mr. Gladstein, it is possible I could have said all this stuff, and it is possible that I couldn't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And didn't you tell Jackman before he left where you would be so that Rosco could find you?

A. No; I don't think so.

Q. Didn't Rosco Craycraft see you about 8:30 that Sunday night?

A. No; I don't recall the exact time he came aboard.

Q. Isn't it true—what do you mean by that—do you mean you remember seeing him but you don't know the exact time?

A. He could have been aboard ship that night.

Q. Was he or not? A. I don't know.

Q. You mean you have no recollection at all about what happened that Sunday night? [6645]

A. No, I don't.

Q. Isn't it true that some winches had broken down?

Mr. Del Guercio: Here are the broken winches again.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He told your once he didn't remember.

Mr. Gladstein: This is a question as to the fact, and not as to what took place in the conversation with Mr. Jackman. We are now in a subsequent incident, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Oh. Haven't we been through the broken winches? At what time is this?

Mr. Gladstein: 8:30 p.m. and thereafter Sunday night.

Presiding Inspector: There is testimony that it was about 9:00 o'clock the winches broke down.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mrs. King: That was Saturday night.

Presiding Inspector: Aren't we on Saturday night now?

Mr. Gladstein: Sunday night.

Presiding Inspector: I will let you answer that. I thought you had gone back to Saturday.

Mr. Gladstein: No, I hadn't, your Honor.

The Witness: Could I have those time sheets, please?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can't you answer that from your memory first?

A. I would like to have those sheets.

Q. You can have them, but please answer first.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness said he would like to have [6646] those sheets.

Presiding Inspector: But he is entitled to ask for his recollection, and then if he cannot recollect his memory can be refreshed by the time sheets.

A. I do recall a terminal being loose on the control board on winch No. 2—No. 2 winches.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you learn that it was loose?

A. Well, as a rule when a winch stops, either the walking—the sugercargo—that is the head. walking boss, whatever you want to call him—I don't know what you call him——

Q. (Interposing) That is the longshore boss, isn't it?

A. I think so.

Q. He keeps a written record of breakdowns?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I believe he does.

Q. Did he tell you about that—when did you learn about this breakdown?

A. I think he came back in the room and called me and I went up there.

Q. When was that, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I don't recall what time it was, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Sunday evening, wasn't it?

A. I believe it was Sunday evening. [6647]

Q. All right. You went back to the winch and what did you do?

A. Well, just one little wire was lose and I pulled the switch and took a screwdriver and screwed up this little connection.

Q. There wasn't much to it, was there?

A. No.

Q. It is pretty dangerous for the men who are working as longshoremen if there is anything wrong with a winch, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And it is a pretty big responsibility for you, who are in charge of those winches, to see that they are operating correctly, isn't it?

A. Yes, it is a responsibility.

Q. So the winches had broken down before Crawcraft saw you that evening, correct?

A. Yes; that could be correct.

Q. And you had worked on them?

A. I had gone up and fixed it; yes.

Q. And Crayeraft met you in the machine shop,

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

your machine shop, where you were wrapping some cords, is that right?

A. Wrapping some what?

Q. Cords for electric wires. [6648]

A. Coils?

Mr. Gladstein: Cords.

Presiding Inspector: Co-r-d-s.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. You mean making up solenoids?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that what you were doing?

A. I think so.

Q. What is a solenoid?

A. A solenoid is just a spool with a lot of wire wrapped around it. You measure the ohms on it and you use it as a magnetic induction, either induction or repulsion. That is a solenoid. It is used on relays quite a bit.

Q. Relays on what? A. Electrical relays.

Q. Electricity? A. Yes; electrical relays.

Q. What were you doing with those solenoids?

A. I think at that time I was testing them.

Q. Testing them for what?

A. To see if they were grounded.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. Well, there is a whole slough of them laying around the ship and I was checking over all this stuff, as I had a testing instrument of my own. The ship didn't have any. I [6649] was throwing away the ones that were haywire.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Why did you throw them away—was there any danger from them when they were haywire?

A. No. They just don't work. There is no —when they are grounded, a solenoid when it is grounded loses its magnetic field.

Presiding Inspector: This was material in the storeroom.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who told you to do that? A. Nobody.

Presiding Inspector: I mean, this is not a part of the connected apparatus on the ship.

A. (Continuing) I couldn't say when I started, Mr. Gladstein, because there is a lot of stuff—everything was left to my own discretion aboard the ship. If I saw stuff that needed repair, I did it; and I didn't have to get a written order to do anything.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In other words, there were some things that you had the right to do when you had time and felt like doing it?

A. Yes. In fact, all the electrical equipment.

Q. And Craycraft met you in your machine shop while you were doing this work?

A. It is not a machine shop. [6650]

Q. What is it? A. It is a work shop.

Q. He met you in that work shop while you were doing this work, it that right?

A. I believe so.

Q. And before he left you that evening didn't you agree with him that he was to return and see you again at ten o'clock the next day?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No; I don't think I did—I don't recall that.

Q. You had been unable to get a relief for yourself up to 8:30 that night, isn't that true?

A. Well, I didn't get no relief at all.

Q. But you had put in for a relief earlier, had you not?

A. Oh, I had put in for relief, I believe it was the second day the ship got into port.

Q. And didn't you on Sunday night, when you talked with Craycraft, say that you thought you would get your relief by ten o'clock the next morning?

A. No, I didn't say that to him.

Q. Didn't you ask him to see you again on Monday morning at ten o'clock?

A. No, I didn't ask him to come and see me.

Q. Now, either in that conversation on that Sunday night, or in previous conversations with Craycraft, the two of you had talked about mutual friends, had you not? [6651] A. I believe so.

Q. One of those mutual friends was a man named Jack Mowery, isn't that true?

A. I think so; yes.

Q. He had been a friend of yours during the 1936-1937 strike, hadn't he? A. Uh huh.

Q. And you asked about him, didn't you?

A. I think I did ask about him.

Q. And didn't you, on Sunday night, ask Craycraft to invite Mowery down to speak to you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No; not the way you put it, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Had you asked Craycraft to invite Mowery down to see you on the ship if Craycraft ran across Mowery?

A. No. I didn't send an invitation to him. If I am not mistaken, we were talking about Jack Mowery and I said I would like to see him, that I hadn't seen him since the '36-'37 strike.

Q. On Monday morning at ten o'clock at Terminal No. 1 on the ship, the West Cussetta, Craycraft and Mowery came down and met you in your stateroom, isn't that true?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. You were sober then, weren't you?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. All right. And you spent about five or ten minutes [6652] in your stateroom with them, didn't you? A. Something like that.

Q. And didn't you talk about the question of getting relief so that you could go to Seattle and get your clearance before you came down to testify in the Bridges case?

A. No; I didn't say anything about "clearance." I am pretty certain that I mentioned that I was still waiting for somebody to take over my job so I could go to Seattle.

Q. You did say you wanted to go to Seattle?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell them why you wanted to go to Seattle? A. No.

Q. Did they ask you why? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Why did you want to go to Seattle?

A. Because that is where I lived.

Q. Is that the only reason? A. Certainly.

Q. But you never discussed with Mowery and Craycraft why you wanted to go to Seattle?

A. No.

Q. But you just told them that you did want to go to Seattle and you were going to Seattle as soon as you could get a relief? [6653]

A. Yes; as soon as I could get off the ship.

Q. Now, isn't it true that before Craycraft and Mowery left you that Monday morning, the three of you arranged that you were to phone this Maleti's Grocery store as soon as you were ready to go to Seattle with Craycraft and Mowery?

A. No.

Q. You say that didn't happen, or you don't remember, which is it?

A. No; that didn't happen.

Q. Now, at 3:30 that afternoon, that is Monday, May 5, you phoned Craycraft, didn't you?

A. Monday—I believe I did.

Q. What did you phone him for?

A. I don't recall right now what I phoned him for.

Q. Why you phoned him to tell you that your relief had not yet come and you would try to leave the ship by 5:00 p. m., didn't you?

A. No. I don't think—no, I don't recall what I said to him over the phone.

Q. Then you tell me what you said, or talked about, on that telephone with Craycraft when you called him Monday about 3:30 in the afternoon.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I can't remember what I said.

Q. Not a thing? [6654]

A. No. It couldn't have been much because——

Q. (Interposing) Were you drunk then too?

A. No, I wasn't drunk.

Q. Isn't it true that you called him because they were waiting at that grocery store for you as soon as you got your relief to tell them so that all three of you could go to Seattle, where you wanted to see these people before you came back to San Francisco to testify to the truth in the Bridges case? A. No, it is not true.

Q. Didn't you tell them on this telephone, tell Craycraft, at 3:30 in the afternoon that Monday, that you thought you would get your relief by 5:00 o'clock?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is about the third time——

Presiding Inspector: You asked that before and got a negative answer.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you tell them on the telephone, Craycraft, when you spoke to him that Monday afternoon, that if you didn't get your relief by 5:00 o'clock and leave the ship that day you wanted Craycraft and Mowery to see you that evening on the ship?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No. Let me see, I do recall asking Craycraft if Mowery was going to come down again—words to that effect. [6655] I remember talking over the phone a few minutes. I think I mentioned if Jack was coming down.

Q. Weren't you making plans all the time with Jack Mowery and Rosco Craycraft for you to leave that ship, go to Seattle, where you said you wanted to see some people, before you could testify to the whole truth, and then come down to San Francisco?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered. Counsel has put it in so many forms, it is like a snake charmer. He wants to charm the witness into saying it.

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: This is cross examination. He is your witness, Mr. Del Guercio. I will allow it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That night, Monday night about seven o'clock, you did see Craycraft and Mowery, didn't you?

A. Yes. They came down to the ship.

Q. Were you drunk then?

A. No, I wasn't drunk.

Q. As a matter of fact, when they came down to the ship you had been uptown shopping with the shore electrician, isn't that right?

A. I had been up—I went ashore, yes, up to the shop of the Marine Electric. I made quite a few trips up there.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. On that particular evening you got down to the ship [6656] at about 7:15, didn't you?

A. I don't know the exact time I got down to the ship.

Q. Was it about that time?

A. It was in the evening some time; yes.

Q. And you were late for your appointment because you had been uptown doing this shopping, this electrical shopping of some kind, isn't that correct?

A. Well, I went up to this shop, Marine Electric Shop; yes. [6657]

Q. And that's the reason you were late for your appointment with them, isn't it?

A. Appointment? I never make appointments.

Q. Now, you and Craycraft and Mowery went to your stateroom? Correct?

A. I believe they were in the stateroom already. They were already in my room.

Q. Do you mean to say they didn't wait on the dock for you?

A. No, I don't think they did.

Q. Did you tell them where you had been when you found them in your stateroom?

A. I believe there was some mention.

Q. How did that come up? A. Huh?

Q. How did that come up?

Mr. Del Guercio: How did what come up? All the witness said that there was some mention and counsel interrupted and said——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mrs. King: (Interposing) Your Honor please, if Mr. Del Guercio wants to make an objection I think he is entitled to make an objection, but I see no reason why he is entitled to interrupt an examination and make it more difficult——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I am making an objection——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) To contact the witness and get anything out of him, and it seems to me that that kind of a [6658] remark,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I suppose the objection is that the question is answered, that they had this conversation. How it came up is immaterial.

Mrs. King: I mean, if he wants to make an objection, then it is "immaterial".

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that is his objection. I will take it to be such. I will let you ask it.

Mr. Gladstein: The witness probably doesn't remember it. I will repeat it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, this is all largely collateral. You may go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How did this mention of your having been uptown to do this shopping come up in the conversation between you, Mowery and Craycraft that Monday night?

A. I believe they asked me where I had been and I naturally answered them.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you tell them that that was the reason you were late?

A. Yes. I suppose when I answered them, there was nothing to hide, so in a natural conversation with any fellow on the ship, if they ask you where you have been you generally tell them, give them a rough outline of where you have been.

Q. And didn't you tell them that? Didn't you give [6659] them that rough outline to explain why you were late?

A. No. I didn't have no explaining why I was late because I was late for nobody. After all, ——

Q. (Interposing) How long were you with Craycraft and Mowery that evening?

A. Oh, I would say about a half hour.

Q. About an hour is more like it, isn't it?

Mr. Myron: Well, he has answered the question.

Mr. Gladstein: I am entitled to cross examine him.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He can press him.

The Witness: No. I figure about a half hour.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you drunk that night?

A. Now, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Were you? "Yes" or "No", please.

A. No, I wasn't drunk.

Q. All right. Because you were late you had missed your supper, isn't that right?

A. Yes. I didn't have any supper.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. So you made some sandwiches, didn't you?

A. Yes. I made sandwiches.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, if your Honor please, as being immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand the point of it, [6660] but you may ask it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And while you and Craycraft and Mowery were in your room eating some of these sandwiches that you made——

A. (Interposing) And drinking some rum.

Q. And drinking some rum, you say?

A. Yes, certainly.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. One of the mates came in and asked you to fix a radio of his which had gone "out of whack", isn't that right?

A. No. There was no radio that I fixed. I do recall the mate came down to the room and asked me if I would go up to his room. He had boughten a new radio and the ship's juice is 240 volts and the radio was only operated on 110 volts and he wanted me to fix up a resistor for him to cut down the voltage. So I went up to the mate's room and took a test instrument, my test instrument with me and fixed up this resistor to cut down his voltage.

Q. And then you had a conversation with Cray-

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

craft and Mowery in that stateroom that evening, didn't you?

A. Yes. I think we had a general conversation.

Q. Do you know anything at all that was said by any of the three of you that evening?

A. Yes. I believe I mentioned to him that I was having trouble ever since I got into Portland trying to get a man to [6661] replace me and talking about a shortage of electricians up and down the whole coast; that a fellow could go ashore and go right to work if he wanted to because there was quite a shortage of them. And I think they asked me why I wanted to quit, and I told them that I had been putting in pretty long hours and the ship was in pretty bad shape; that I had done quite a bit of work on it. And then I think I was called again by somebody else.

Q. Anything else in that conversation with them that you remember?

A. Yes. I mentioned that I was going to Seattle and I think Craycraft said, well, he was going to Seattle too, and he would give me a ride up.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, isn't it a fact that Craycraft told you that Monday evening that he had talked on the long distance telephone to me and that he, Craycraft was leaving for San Francisco on the airplane that night in order to testify in this case? A. No.

Q. He didn't tell you that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, he didn't mention it.

Q. He told you that he was going to Seattle the next day?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is what the witness has testified.

Mr. Gladstein: I know, but I am entitled to press [6662] him on this, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you are entitled just to ask the same question over again.

Mr. Gladstein: It isn't the same as repeating the question.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't pressing.

Mr. Gladstein: When something new comes up it seems to me that you are entitled to come back.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. If you claim that that is something new and he denies anything of that kind.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, when there is objection and then discussion, the purpose of the examination is lost.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't even remember the last question now.

Presiding Inspector: You may have it read, then.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How about it, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, it could be—there was mention of—I assume that the both of them were going up to Seattle.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You started to say "it could be". What was the rest of that?

A. Well, just like I say, it could be possible that he [6663] was going down to 'Frisco. I didn't know that he was going to 'Frisco. It didn't come out in that conversation.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all? Do you want to say anything more about the conversation?

The Witness: Oh, no.

Presiding Inspector: He has finished.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. All right. Anyway, your best recollection is that Craycraft and Mowery said that they were going to Seattle the next day and if you would like to come, why, they would be glad to take you; is that it? A. Yes.

Q. Then why did you write a note on Monday night giving it to Craycraft to be given to Harry Bridges in which you said "Harry, I'll see you tomorrow night"?

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't the testimony, if your Honor please. There is no such evidence in the record, no such testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask the question. If he wants to say that there isn't, that is all right.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, he is deceiving the witness. He has no right to do that.

Presiding Inspector: He hasn't any right to deceive him.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Cross examination or what. [6664]

Presiding Inspector: He has no right to deceive the witness, of course.

Mr. Gladstein: May I have that Exhibit, please?

Presiding Inspector: I think the question should be as to this Exhibit, then. Why did he write this Exhibit.

(Whereupon the Exhibit referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Then why did you write——

Mrs. King: Just a moment! I think there was a statement made by Mr. Del Guercio while the Court Reporter was looking for the Exhibit that is not in the record. I am wondering if we could have the last thing in the record.

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall it.

Mrs. King: The statement was "We are not in the hotel".

Mr. Del Guercio: No, I will repeat the statement if the Court wants me to.

Mrs. King: I should like to have it in the record.

Presiding Inspector: Well, if you are willing to, Mr. Del Guercio. You don't have to.

Mr. Del Guercio: I would be glad to repeat it if they want me to.

I said that "Mr. Gladstein is not in the hotel room now questioning the witness". [6665]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think it was an improper remark. That is not an objection.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Cannalonga, ——

A. (Interposing) Will you let me see what you have got there?

Q. Not yet. I will show you this later. Isn't it true that that evening you agreed that the following morning, relief or no relief, you were going to quit that ship and go with Mowery to Seattle and then come down to San Francisco after you had seen the people in Seattle and then testify in this case to the whole truth? A. No.

Q. What is the answer?

Presiding Inspector: If you will stand back, I suggest the witness will be inclined to speak louder.

The Witness: I says, No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And isn't it true——

Presiding Inspector: Speak out, Mr. Cannalonga, so we can hear.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And isn't it true that Mr. Craycraft told you that he, because he had talked with me, was going to San Francisco by plane that Monday night? [6666] A. No.

Q. And isn't it true that you wrote a note for Craycraft to take with him so that Bridges would know that you would be down in San Francisco Tuesday night? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Now, I show you Alien's Exhibit 24. That's the note you wrote, isn't it?

A. Yes, I wrote that.

Q. What's the date on it?

A. May the 5th.

Q. That was in your handwriting, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. You weren't drunk then, were you?

A. No.

Q. That was Monday May the 5th, wasn't it?

A. Well, if you want, it is not——

Q. (Interposing) Was it Monday, May the 5th?

Mr. Del Guercio: Let the witness answer there.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was it Monday, May the 5th?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And when you say "Will see you tomorrow night", to whom was that sent?

A. Well, that could have been sent to anybody.

Presiding Inspector: Let me see it. [6667]

(The Exhibit referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. To whom did you send it?

A. I was asked to write it and sign my full name to itand I wouldn't sign my full name to it.

Q. Who told you to say that story?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Nobody told me to say that story.

Q. All right. Now,——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Now, if the Court please,——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Continuing): ——who were you sending that note to?

Mr. Del Guercio: I demand that he take his foot off that witness stand. That's the attorney.

Presiding Inspector: I have suggested to Mr. Gladstein, as I suggested to you several times, that we would get along better if you would stand near the table provided for counsel.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who did you want this note to go to, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. That note, it's like I said at the start when I first came on the stand, that night Craycraft asked me to write a note to Harry Bridges and sign my full name to it, and I says "What do you want my name to it for?" And he insisted [6668] that I sign my name to this note. So at the time I figured, "Well, O.K. I'll write a note". So I wrote a note and he dictated the words.

Q. Who dictated it? A. Craycraft.

Q. Did you understand what he was dictating?

A. Did I understand what he was dictated?

Q. What he was dictating to you?

A. Well, that's the words.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. When he dictated to you did you understand what he was dictating?

Mr. Myron: You mean, did he write it?

Presiding Inspector: No. He means did he understand what the words meant.

A. No. I just wrote what he told me to write.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you know what you were writing?

A. I just scribbled that down.

Q. Did you know what you were writing?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you understand what you were writing?

A. I didn't understand it was going to be sent to Bridges, no.

Q. How did you understand this note was going to get to Harry Bridges?

A. I didn't even think it was going to get to Harry [6669] Bridges.

Q. Whom did you think it was going to get to?

A. I don't know.

Q. How did the name of Harry Bridges come up in this?

A. Well, he mentioned Bridges.

Q. In what way?

A. Oh, in a dozen ways.

Q. You tell me any of them.

A. About Harry being worried about me and that Harry Bridges felt that I was under pressure by the FBI.

Q. What else? Any other mention of Bridges that you can remember that Monday night?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Was there any mention of Bridges in connection with this note?

A. Not at the time I wrote it.

Q. When? When was that mention made?

A. I believe the mention of Bridges was before I went up to fix this radio.

Q. Regarding Bridges and this note, you mean?

A. About me writing to Bridges, yes.

Q. All right. What was that mention? Who mentioned it? A. Craycraft.

Q. What did he say?]6670]

A. He wanted me to write a note to Harry Bridges.

Q. A note to Harry Bridges?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. What did he want you to say in your note to Harry Bridges? A. He didn't say.

Q. What? A. He didn't say at the time.

Q. When did he say? A. He didn't say.

Q. When did he say at any time that night what he wanted you to write to Harry Bridges?

A. He didn't.

Q. So you wrote this yourself saying that you were going to see Harry Bridges the following night, didn't you?

A. No. That there was dictated tome.

Q. It was still dictated?

A. Yes, that note there.

Q. Well, if it wasn't dictated by Craycraft was it dictated by Mowery?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. It was dictated by Craycraft, like I said at the start.

Q. Did you understand that Craycraft was going to deliver this note to Bridges? A. No.

[6671]

Q. What did you think he was going to do with it? A. I don't know.

Q. He didn't tell you? A. No.

Q. You didn't ask him? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will take a short recess.

(Whereupon, a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein, you may continue.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you said in this note, Mr. Cannalonga, "Will see you tomorrow night" what did you understand "tomorrow night" to mean?

A. Well, like I said, there was quite a bit of argument over that note, Mr. Gladstein, nad——

Q. (Interposing): Were you threatened?

A. Well, he insisted that I write this note.

Q Were you threatened? Were you threatened?

A. Openly?

Q. In any way?

Mr. Myron: Let him answer the question. He was starting to answer it.

Presiding Inspector: I think he want to answer it. [6672]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I wasn't threatened openly.

Q. In what way were you threatened?

A. I don't know how to answer that question, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. I can understand that. But in what way were you threatened?

Mr. Del Guercio: May be Court at this time should properly take the witness under his hand now. It is apparent that this witness has been under—perhaps the Court will find out just what the witness means, whether he was threatened and intimidated.

Mr. Grossman: Would you like a "Yes" or "No" answer, as you did before?

Presiding Inspector: If you don't know how to answer it, you can say you don't know how to answer it; or make a try at it, if your wish to.

A. I wouldn't know how to answer it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You mean you don't know whether your were threatened or not?

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You don't know whether you were intimidated or not? A. No.

Q. You don't know whether you were forced or not? [6673]

A. Well, if you call being "insistent" "forced", then I was forced.

Q. How did they insist on this?

A. Oh, he just kept "Well, go ahead and write

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

the note" and I kept saying "No, I don't want to write no note. Why should I?"

Q. And then what did they say?

A. And, oh, it kept up for about five minutes, I believe, and then the mate come in and the mate come in then and asked me if I would put this resistor in for him. So I got up and put the resistor in.

Q. Before you went and put in the resistor, let's go back to the five minutes when they were insisting that you write the note and you said "No", you didn't want to. You say they kept insisting that you write a note? A. Yes.

Q. What did they say?

A. Oh, I don't recall everything they said.

Q. What arguments did they use that you should write the note?

A. I don't know what you mean by that, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. What did they say to try to persuade you to write the note or try to insist that you write the note?

A. He just kept repeating, that's all.

Q. What did he keep repeating? [6674]

A. "Go ahead and write that note".

Q. In a threatening way?

A. Well, what do you call "threatening"?

Q. Did you understand it as a threat?

A. No. He didn't come out openly and threat.

Q. Did you write this note against your will? "Yes" or "No".

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't get your answer. What do you mean by that?

Q. You didn't want to write this note, you say?

A. No. I didn't feel that I should write the note.

Q. And they insisted that you write the note, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. So you finally wrote the note against your will, is that right?

A. Well, I finally wrote the note.

Q. Against your own will, is that right?

A. No. That's hard to answer, too. If you want to write against—I just wrote the note because they insisted.

Q. Did they insist on anything else besides you writing that note? A. No.

Q. Did you ask them what they wanted that note for?

A. Yes. I asked them, and they wanted me to sign my full name and I wouldn't sign my full name. I just signed the way it was signed. [6675]

Q. Why wouldn't you sign your full name?

A. Because I wouldn't.

Q. Why? You must have had a reason?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now he is arguing with the witness, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you have a reason for not signing your full name? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Why did you refuse to sign your full name?

A. Because I thought it wasn't proper.

Q. You thought what?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. It wasn't proper.

Q. In what way did you think it was improper?

A. Well, when they insisted that I write this note and sign my full name I figured, well, they must have some reason for wanting me to sign my full name to it. So I just got——

Q. (Interposing): Suspicious?

A. Well, you can call it that if you want.

[6676]

Q. So you got suspecious of those men, Mowery and Craycraft? A. I did.

Q. And you wrote this, though you didn't want to write it, because they insisted on it?

A. Yes.

Q. That night while you were with Mowery and Craycraft, the night that you wrote this note, Craycraft told you that he was coming down on a plane to San Francisco and was going to testify to the things that you had told him and me, didn't he?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that. It has been asked and answered before.

A. No, he didn't.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will allow it.

Mr. Gladstein: Thank you, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't he? A. No.

Q. And didn't he ask you, "Before I go, Cannalonga, is there anything else, is there any other information you want to give me before I go to testify on this thing?" A. No, he didn't say that.

Q. Didn't you at that time tell him the various places where you had been with this girl, and where the FBI said they [6677] had checked and found you had registered with her? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And didn't he make notes on an envelope right in front of you as you were telling him this?

A. No.

Q. That didn't happen?

A. No; that didn't happen.

Q. Didn't he write that list of places on a slip of paper as you told him the places? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: First, it was an envelope and now it is a slip of paper.

Presiding Inspector: That is comment, argument.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you tell him that the first place you stopped with this girl was this side of Reno in an auto camp about four or five hours out of Reno?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

A. Interposing): No.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to make an objection at this time. I believe the Court will recall—I am not sure of it, but I think I am fairly certain—Crayeraft testified that he was making notes on an envelope. Counsel is now reading from a sheet of paper. He had an envelope there that he pulled out a little while ago, and I think it is very very important to know whether it is an envelope or a [6678] sheet of paper.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is of any importance——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): I will tell Mr. Del Guercio about it.

Presiding Insepctor: Just a moment. I don't think it is of any importance so far as this question is concerned. It may be important largely later, but not so far as this question is concerned.

Go ahead.

The question is whether he told this fact about where a certain camp was, and whether he stopped there on his way from Reno. That is all the question is. It hasn't anything to do about an envelope or anything else.

The Witness: I answered that question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How did you answer it? A. No.

Q. Didn't he make a note right in front of you to that effect as you told him? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you then went to the southern part of California with this girl?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you stayed in an auto [6679] camp in the vicinity of Los Angeles and San Pedro? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you then drove up toward San Francisco with this girl and spent a night in an auto camp in South San Francisco?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you then went up north and stayed in an auto camp between Frisco and Eureka? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Didn't you tell him that you stayed in an auto camp in Eureka one night? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him you spent one night in Roseburg? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you spent one night in Portland? A. No.

Q. At a National Auto Camp just before you get into Portland? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you then went with this girl to Tacoma? A. No.

Q. And that you stayed in an auto camp there?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you then went to Seattle? [6680] A. No.

Q. And that you stayed in a hotel on First Avenue between Seneca and University?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you then went to Coulee City, or Coulee Dam and stayed a night with her? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him then you went to Spokane and spent two nights there? A. No.

Q. The first night was in an auto camp?

A. No.

Q. And the second night in a hotel?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you left the girl in Spokane? A. No.

Q. And that you then came back to Seattle?

A. No.

Q. And that you then got a ship in April of

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

1940 at the branch in Seattle headed for Bristol Bay? A. No.

Q. Did you ship out in April of 1940 from Seattle to Bristol Bay? A. No. [6681]

Q. From where did you ship?

A. The ship left Seattle for Bristol Bay in May; the latter part of May.

Q. Where were you in April of 1940?

A. In April I think I was down in the Union hall.

Q. Now, didn't you repeat, in the presence of both Mowery and Craycraft on two occasions on Monday, May 5, one at ten o'clock in the morning, when you were with them in your stateroom, and the other time a little after seven o'clock in the evening when you were with them in your stateroom, didn't you say to both of them that your testimony in the Bridges case had been false?

A. No.

Q. That your testimony had been given under pressure? A. No.

Q. That you were glad that you had made a statement in the Attorney's office? A. No.

Q. That you were willing to testify in San Francisco if you could get relieved and get a clearance from these people in Seattle? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell them that Monday night that you expected your relief the following morning?

A. No. [6682]

Q. Didn't you tell them that night that you would call Mowery the following morning at Ma-

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

leti's Grocery at ten o'colck to advise him whether you were free to go to Seattle in Mowery's car?

A. No.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, on Tuesday, May 6th, you did phone Mowery, didn't you?

A. Tuesday, May 6th—yes, I did phone him.

Q. And you phoned him at this grocery store, didn't you? A. I believe I did.

Q. And you told him, didn't you, that your relief for your job had not come?

A. I think he asked me if there was another electrician aboard yet and I told him "No."

Q. He asked you? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't tell him this before he asked you?

A. No.

Q. What did you call him up for?

A. He asked me to call him up at this grocery store.

Q. What for? A. He wanted to talk to me.

Q. What about? A. I don't know. [6683]

Q. Didn't he tell you what he wanted to talk to you about? A. No.

Q. You mean he told you Monday night he wanted you to call him just to talk? A. Yes.

Q. Just to talk? A. Yes; certainly.

Q. And so you went out on Tuesday and you phoned Mowery just to have a talk with him, is that right? A. Correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is what the witness testified.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Gannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes; that is what he testified to.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you tell Mowery over that telephone that you expected your relief to come any minute?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: Not in this particular respect.

A. I did answer—no, I didn't tell him that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did you tell him?

A. He asked if I got a relief yet, if the fellow had relieved me yet, another electrician had come aboard, and I said "No."

Q. Didn't you tell him that you expected to be relieved, [6684] at any time?

A. Yes, I told him that.

Q. And din't you invite Mowery to come down to the ship to see you?

A. Sure, I invited him to come to the ship.

Q. Didn't he come down and see you at 10:30 that morning?

A. I think he came down at 10:30.

Q. Didn't he see you in your room?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he spend about half an hour with you that Tuesday morning in your room?

A. Well, no; he didn't spend half an hour there.

Q. How long did he spend with you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. He was in the room about that time, yes; but I had left a couple or three times while he was in the room to do a little work.

Q. Were you sober then?

A. Yes; I was sober.

Q. Didn't you tell Mowery in your room that you were trying to get the Marine Firemen's agent to see why you hadn't been relieved?

A. Yes; that was mentioned; correct.

Q. Didn't you say that you would call Mowery again at noon that day?

Q. No, I don't believe I did. [6685]

Q. Well, at noon you did phone Mowery, didn't you? A. I don't think I did.

Q. Didn't you phone Mowery and tell him that you were still waiting for your relief? A. No.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. I am pretty sure.

Q. Didn't you tell Mowery over the telephone that Mowery was to stand by and wait for a phone call from you which you would give him as soon as you were relieved?

A. No. He did mention that he was going to be around this grocery store all day. There was a little bar in there, if I am not mistaken, a beer joint in this grocery store. He said that is where they hung out, a bunch of longshoremen hung out.

Q. You say you didn't call him at noon.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. As a matter of fact, you called him at noon and also at three o'colck that afternoon, didn't you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No.

Q. You did call him at three o'clock, didn't you?

A. I think I called him at three.

Q. You asked him to come down to the ship at that time, didn't you?

A. Yes, I asked him to come down to the ship.

[6686]

Q. And he came down and met you at 3:15 on the ship, didn't he.

A. He came aboard in the afternoon; yes.

Q. Right after you phoned him, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was in your stateroom, wasn't it?

A. Yes; in my room.

Q. And you told him if you didn't have relief by the following morning you would go to Seattle anyway? A. No.

Q. What did you say about that, if anything?

A. Nothing; we were just talking about—we had been doing quite a bit of talking about the 1936-1937 strike, and we were going over old times. That is all.

Q. What? A. Nothing.

Q. That is what you were talking about at 3:15?

A. Yes.

Q. You called up at 3:00 o'clock to invite him to come down at 3:15 to talk about old times?

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't his testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. It is cross examination.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. The reason I called—he said he wasn't doing [6687] anything all day and he would be around there and would like to talk over old times with me. I said "O.K. The first chance I get caught up on some of this work I will give you a buzz and have you come down to the ship."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. But you were busy while he was in there, isn't that true?

A. Yes; but I wasn't so busy I couldn't see him for a while.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you told him at 3:15 in the afternoon that day, that Tuesday, that if you didn't get a relief by the following morning you would pack up and leave the ship anyway?

A. No.

Q. That you were going to go to Seattle with him?

A. No. I believe there was mention that he was going to Seattle and he would give me a ride up.

Q. Didn't you agree that you would phone Mowery at nine o'clock the next day? A. No.

Q. Was there any talk about a phone call at nine o'clock the next day, nine in the morning?

A. I believe there was mention, yes, if I got a relief that he would hold up that trip to Seattle and give me a ride.

Q. Now, that night he saw you again at about six [6688] o'clock, didn't he?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, I believe he did drop in just before he went to work.

Q. He came down to the ship and told you that he had just received a call, a phone call, from San Francisco, didn't he?

A. No; I don't think he mentioned that.

Q. Didn't he tell you he had received a phone call and that he had information that a subpoena was to be issued for you? A. No.

Q. Was there any talk about a subpoena?

A. No.

Q. Didn't he tell you——

A. (Interposing) What day is this, Monday or Tuesday?

Mr. Del Guercio: Is that Tuesday night you are talking about?

The Witness: Is it Tuesday?

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have that question read?

The Witness: Mr. Gladstein——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Just a minute.

Presiding Inspector: Let the reporter read that question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows: [6689]

"Q. Didn't he tell you he had received a phone call and that he had information that a subpoena was to be issued for you?

"A. No.")

Mr. Del Guercio: I assume that is Tuesday night.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: Is that Tuesday night?

Mr. Gladstein: Tuesday night I am talking about.

A. No; he didn't come aboard ship.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. As a matter of fact, at 6:00 o'clock you weren't on that ship at all, were you, on Tuesday?

A. No; I don't think I was.

Q. And a message was left for you by Mowery to call him at the Union Hall of the Marine Cooks and Stewards where he was going to be, correct?

A. No.

Q. Didn't you call up the Marine Cooks and Stewards Hall at eight o'clock that night?

A. I didn't.

Q. What? A. No.

Q. Didn't you call up and say you were Cannalonga and a man named Eddie Lane answered the phone? A. No.

Q. Didn't you ask for Mowery? [6690]

A. I called up—I think it was that grocery store that I called up.

Q. You called up the Marine Cooks and Stewards Hall, didn't you? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You asked for Mowery, didn't you?

A. I asked for Mowery, yes.

Q. And you asked for Mowery when you were making this telephone call at eight o'clock Tuesday night, 'isn't that true?

A. It was on a Tuesday night; yes. I don't recall what time it was.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. It was about eight o'clock, wasn't it?

A. It was dark, yes; I suppose it was about eight o'clock.

Q. Did you get Mowery right away or did you have to ask for him from somebody else?

A. I had to ask for him. I am quite sure it was a grocery store.

Q. Were you sober or drunk? A. Me?

Q. Yes. A. I was sober.

Q. All right. When Mowery took the phone you asked him what he wanted and why he had left a message for you to call him, isn't that true?

A. I believe that is right. [6691]

Q. And isn't it true that he told you that a subpoena had been, or was about to be issued for you?

A. I believe he did mention a subpoena.

Q. Didn't he tell you that the subpoena was going to be served on you the next morning?

A. No; I don't believe he mentioned when it was going to be served.

Q. Didn't he tell you that by being served with a subpoena on the next morning, Wednesday, that it would give you a legal right to leave that ship and not wait for a relief any more?

A. No, he didn't.

Q. What did he say about that?

A. He just mentioned this subpoena, and how he heard it was being issued to me and I told him —well, I believe I read it in the newspaper too.

Q. You had read it in the newspaper that day?

A. I believe so. I am not quite sure.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. In what paper had you read it, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Either in the Oregonian—I think it was the Oregonian.

Q. On that Tuesday? A. Yes.

Q. In the afternoon or in the morning?

A. At night.

Q. At night? [6692] A. Yes.

Q. What time at night?

A. Oh, it was about—after supper.

Q. Before eight o'clock? A. Yes.

Q. What had you read?

A. There was a little article about a subpoena being issued for me.

Q. You are sure about that?

A. I am quite sure about it.

Q. Now, didn't Mowery tell you over the telephone that this subpoena was going to be served on you the next morning, but he had word from the defense attorneys that if you wanted to go to Seattle and see these people before you came to San Francisco to testify it would be all right?

A. No; he didn't say that.

Q. Didn't he tell you that this subpoena required you immediately to come to San Francisco, but since you were being subpoenaed by the defense, if the defense allowed you to go to Seattle where you wanted to go first, it would be all right?

A. No.

Q. He didn't give you that information?

A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What was said about the subpoena then?

A. He just mentioned the fact that a subpoena was being [6693] served on me and I told him, I said, "Yes, I know that. I seen it in the paper."

Q. What else? A. That is all.

Q. That is all that was said?

A. That is all.

Q. Did you tell Mowery whether you would come down if the subpoena was served on you?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did he ask you?

A. I don't believe he asked me.

Q. When you read about this subpoena did it frighten you in any way?

A. No, the subpoena didn't.

Q. When you heard that there was going to be a subpoena issued to you to come down and testify were you scared? A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Was there any reason why you wouldn't want to come down and testify? A. No.

Q. And you knew about a subpoena being issued on Tuesday?

A. I don't know what day it was going to be issued, the exact minute.

Q. But you heard about it?

A. I heard about it; yes. [6694]

Q. Now, didn't Mowery tell you over the telephone—withdraw that.

Didn't you tell Mowery over the telephone that your relief had not yet come?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I believe he asked me if I got another electrician yet. I said "No."

Q. This was the eight o'clock telephone conversation, eight o'clock at night, Tuesday, correct?

A. Somewhere around there.

Q. Didn't you say that although your relief had not come you would leave the next day with Mowery and go to Seattle? A. No.

Q. And didn't you say that you would phone Mowery at nine o'clock in the morning and tell him where and when to meet you so that you could go to Seattle? A. No.

Q. Now, on Wednesday morning you did phone Mowery at eight o'clock in the morning, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. At Maleti's Grocery, correct?

A. I did.

Q. And Mowery wasn't there so you left a message, didn't you? A. I did. [6695]

Q. You said, "Give Mowery a message to the effect that Blackie called and will call later", didn't you?

A. Yes. I said I would call back about ten o'clock.

Q. Correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: What was that last remark?

The Reporter: "Correct."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At 10:15 in the morning you had not called the ship, had you? A. No.

Q. I mean, you hadn't called the grocery store?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No.

Q. You didn't call Mowery after eight o'clock, although you left a message saying that you were going to call again at ten? A. Right.

Q. So Mowery went down to the ship and he saw you in your stateroom at about 10:15 in the morning? A. He saw me there?

Q. Yes, didn't he?

A. Well, he is seeing things, was seeing things because I was on my way to Seattle at 10:15 Wednesday morning.

Q. Oh, you were?

A. I absolutely was.

Q. Why did you leave a message that you were going to [6696] call Mowery at ten o'clock then?

A. Well, now, I have got to tell you what happened. At 6:00 o'clock in the morning of Wednesday——

Q. (Interposing) What happened after six o'clock in the morning?

A. The Mate came aboard, the night Mate, and woke me up and he said, "Blackie, you are in a pretty tough spot." He says, "You want to watch yourself." He says, "You are liable to wake up one of these mornings not knowing that you are alive."

I said, "What is the trouble?"

He said, "During the night one of the Immigration Inspectors, or Custom Inspectors, had seen a car parked across the dock there with a bunch of fellows in it and they were there all night long."

and that they were watching me. So he had woke me up at six o'clock.

He said, "Watch yourself. This Custom man came aboard ship to see that you were all right." He said, "You had better stop drinking, and stop seeing these fellows that have been coming aboard to see you every day." He says, "They have seen them come aboard."

So I started putting two and two together, and so I left the ship at 7:30 with a piece of motor, a small motor, headed for this electrical shop.

I stopped in a restaurant and called up Mowery. It was about [6697] eight o'clock. I called him up and told him that I would see him at ten o'clock—knowing that he wouldn't come down to the ship and that he would stay over at this grocery store.

Then I asked—oh, I got twisted up on the streets. I had been at that shop a dozen times, but I got lost. So I called up their shop and asked them whereabouts it was at. So he told me, he says, "You are only about four blocks from the shop here." And so I walked—he said "I am heading down that way and I will pick you up."

So I started walking toward the shop, and this fellow from the Marine Electric Shop picked me up. We went to the shop.

On the way to the shop, before we went inside, I asked him if he would do me a favor. He said, "Yes. Sure. What do you want?".

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

I said, "How is the chances of getting one of the boys to give me a ride over to Vancouver, Washington?"

He said, "O.K."

I said, "If anybody asks if you saw me to tell them you didn't."

So on the outskirts of Vancouver, just outside the city limits, I got out of this pick-up truck of theirs and caught a bus and beat it to Seattle.

So I couldn't have been on that ship at the time Mowery came. [6698]

Q. Where were you when you called Mowery?

A. I called him from this restaurant.

Q. Which restaurant?

A. I don't remember the name of the place.

Q. Where was it located?

A. Down on the waterfront.

Q. Why did you call him? A. Why?

Q. Yes.

A. I just told you he asked me to call him.

Q. When did he ask you to call him?

A. I think the night before.

Q. When, the night before?

A. I don't recall just when.

Q. Why did you leave word that you were going to call again at ten?

A. Well, I figured that he wouldn't know where I had gone.

Q. You didn't want him to know where you had gone? A. No.

Q. Why? A. Just because.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You must have had a reason, did you?

A. Well, there was plenty of reason outside the dock there in that car.

Q. Did you think Mowery was going to beat you up? [6699]

A. No, I didn't think Mowery would.

Q. Who did you think it was in that automobile?

A. I don't know who it was.

Q. Did you think it was the FBI?

A. No.

Q. Did you think it was the Immigration Inspectors? A. No.

Q. Who did you think it was?

A. I don't know who it was—just a carload of fellows.

Q. What were you afraid of, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I wasn't afraid.

Q. Then why did you leave the ship that way?

Mr. Del Guercio: It is obvious—a car full of men.

Mr. Grossman: You need not tell why he left.

Presiding Inspector: Let's find out. I think it is proper. I would like to know myself.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Why did you leave the ship, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, I will tell you why.

Q. That is what I am asking.

A. Because I felt I was being watched and intimidated.

Q. By whom?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. By the Communist Party. [6700]

Mr. Del Guercio: He said "The Communist Party."

Mr. Gladstein: I heard it. I heard it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Why do you think the Communist Party was watching you?

A. Why? For the simple reason that they already started a campaign against me, a whispering campaign, and a few incidents caused me to believe that it seems like every move that I made in Portland and when I shipped on the ship and everything else pointed out that all my movements were being watched.

Q. You didn't associate Mowery or Craycraft with the Communist Party, did you?

A. What was that again?

Q. You didn't associate Mowery or Craycraft with the Communist Party, did you?

A. Well, I don't know whether they are Communists or not.

Q. Did you associate them with the Communist Party?

A. I understood that—what do you mean "associate"?

Q. When you say that you thought you were being watched by the Communist Party did you mean that you thought you were being watched by Mowery and Craycraft, too?

A. Well, Mowery seemed to want me to phone him up pretty often.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Why should he watch you, do you know?

[6701]

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you have any idea? A. No.

Q. Did you think that he was interested in watching you? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you think so at that time?

A. No, I didn't think so at first.

Q. How about Craycraft? Did you think that he had any interest in watching you?

Mr. Myron: Wait a minute! Why don't you let him finish the answer?

Presiding Inspector: Was there anything more?

Mr. Myron: Read the answer.

The Witness: I told him that I didn't think he was interested in watching me at first, but later on I got suspicious that he was.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you get suspicious for the first time that Mowery or Craycraft was interested in watching you? A. Oh, Tuesday.

Q. Tuesday when?

A. The day before I left.

Q. Well, what time Tuesday?

A. Oh, I couldn't say right at the exact minute. It [6702] was just during the day.

Q. Were you interested—did you think that Mowery was interested in having you watched that day?

A. Yes. I started to feel it because all these phone calls were supposed to have been made in good fellowship, and I got thinking Jesus! that's doing a lot of phoning to say hello to a guy who is interested in whether I got a relief or not.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you think the same thing about Craycraft that day.

A. I don't even know if Craycraft was there at all that day.

Q. Did you think the same thing about Craycraft that day?

A. The the rest of the ship seemed to have felt the same way, that I was being watched every move and step. The engineers remarked on it and different crew members.

Q. Now, when you left that ship you thought that there was a subpoena out for you, is that right?

A. When I left the ship?

Q. Yes. You had heard about it the previous day? A. Yes.

Q. You read about it?

A. Yes. I read that little article.

Q. All right. So at the time you left the ship you were under the belief that there was a subpoena out for you to have you come back and testify in this case? Correct? [6703]

A. Well,——

Q. (Interposing) Correct?

A. I didn't know what the subpoena was about, no.

Q. But you were under the impression that a subpoena was issued for you to come back and testify again? A. No, I wasn't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What did you think the subpoena was about?

A. I didn't know what the subpoena was about.

Q. You knew it was a subpoena involving you?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, the only subpoena you have ever been served with in this case was a subpoena before you first testified, is that right?

Presiding Inspector: You mean before that time?

Mr. Gladstein: Before that time, yes.

A. Oh, you mean the first subpoena?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

A. (Continuing) Yes, yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know anything else about a subpoena except that it requires you to come to Court to testify?

A. No, that is all I know about them.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, isn't it true that at about 10:15 in the morning on Wednesday you were still on that ship and Mowery saw you in your stateroom?

A. Absolutely false. How could I be on the ship? [6704] How could I be on the ship when I was on a bus?

Q. Yes. And isn't it true that you asked Mowery why the subpoena had not been served?

A. At 10:15?

Q. That morning.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. That morning? No, it is not true.

Q. Did you ask him at any time that morning why the subpoena had not been served?

A. No.

Q. Did you discuss it with him at all?

A. No.

Q. You deny that you discussed it?

A. I deny discussing it with him.

Q. Didn't Mowery tell you that he understood that the subpoena was to be served that morning on you? A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell Mowery to come back at noon and the two of you, you and Mowery, would pull out for Seattle? A. No.

Q. Didn't you spend about 15 minutes with Mowery in your stateroom that morning?

A. No. That's Wednesday morning now?

Q. Yes, that's Wednesday morning.

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative). Absolutely not.

Q. Were you on deck at 11:00 o'clock that morning, on the deck of that ship? [6705] A. No.

Q. Were you around there at noon of that morning? A. No.

Q. Did you leave that ship somewhere around noon that day? A. No.

Q. What kind of clothes were you wearing when you left?

A. My regular working clothes: khaki pants and khaki shirt; a reversible blue—one of these skiing jackets, a water-proof jacket. You know, it has a zipper and one side is dark blue and the other side is light.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What else did you take with you?

A. That's all.

Q. You took no baggage or luggage?

A. No baggage or luggage.

Presiding Inspector: A hat?

The Witness: No hat.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you left the ship did you intend to to come back? A. I did.

Q. Now, you say you went by bus?

A. I did.

Q. By the way, you have mentioned several times [6706] that a lot of longshoremen kept asking you why you testified against Bridges. Please give me the name or nickname or first name or last name of any one of those longshoremen.

Mr. Myron: Now, this has all been gone over, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't asked for names.

Presiding Inspector: I think he was asked, wasn't he, then he said he couldn't give their names.

Mr. Gladstein: That is men on the ship.

Presiding Inspector: Then he said "You don't understand that people are known by nicknames".

Mr. Myron: We have no objection to this. It might delay the proceedings.

Presiding Inspector: I think that occurred at some time. Go ahead.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Can you give any names?

The Witness: No, I couldn't.

Presiding Inspector: Can you give any nicknames?

The Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know where they were working, any of them that spoke to you?

A. Oh, the different parts of the ship, various parts of the ship. They were working different hatches, all hatches.

Q. Can you identify any winch driver or hatch tender [6707] or any particular classification of work that was filled by any man who talked to you and said "Why did you testify against Harry Bridges?" or anything of that kind? A. No.

Q. Who was the man that said "What's the status of Cannalonga?"

A. I don't know his name either.

Q. Was that the first time you ever saw that man? A. I believe it was.

Q. Is that the last time you ever saw him?

A. Oh, I saw him once or twice after that.

Q. Doing what?

A. I don't recall what he was doing.

Q. What kind of work was he doing?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether he was a longshoreman or anything else?

A. No. All I noticed is he had a CIO button on him and, it's like I stated, at the time, oh, there was about eight different gangs, shore gangs on that ship. They were doing a lot of engine work and there was machinists and everything else.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. How many times did Craycraft tell you that he didn't want to be seen on that ship?

A. I believe he mentioned it a couple of times.

Q. Three or four? [6708]

A. Oh, no. It would be a couple of times.

Q. Now, on your direct examination you said that after you had been in the lawyer's office on that Sunday morning, Mr. Cannalonga, later on you saw Craycraft and Craycraft wanted you to see me again. Do you remember that testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when was it that Craycraft made that request?

A. I was aboard the ship, I believe.

Q. Who was present?

A. Oh, I don't recall who was present.

Q. What did he say? A. When?

Q. At the time, the first time that he wanted, or any time that he said to you that he wanted you to see me again.

A. I don't recall him saying that.

Q. What is the answer?

A. You say "any time". Is it Saturday or Friday or when?

Q. No. After you were up in the lawyer's office.

A. After I was up in the lawyer's office?

Q. That Sunday morning did Craycraft ever ask you to see me again?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, I don't believe he did.

Q. Now, you say that that Monday night, when Craycraft saw you with Mowery in your stateroom—do you remember that? [6709] A. Yeah.

Q. The night that you wrote that note?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. You say that you didn't tell him about these various places? A. No, I didn't.

Q. With a girl? A. No.

Q. There was no discussion of that at all?

A. No. He——

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't we been over this?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. There was no discussion of that at all? Correct? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute! I am waiting for a ruling, if the Court please. I have an objection to it.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't know what is meant by the word "discussion". I think I will ask the counsel to elucidate the question.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I shall.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You say you didn't tell——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): He said that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Continuing): ——Rosco Craycraft these things that [6710] I asked you about, these various places where you stopped over night.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, that's the testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: This is preliminary.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Now, go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that mentioned at all by you?

A. Now, what do you mean "was that mentioned by me"?

Q. These places, these various places.

A. No, they weren't. I never mentioned anything about that.

Presiding Inspector: We have had all that before.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did anybody mention it?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as already having been——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): No. If Mowery mentioned these places——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): He has already testified to that.

Presiding Inspector: He didn't ask him about Mr. Mowery.

Mr. Myron: That has been gone into three or four times.

Presiding Inspector: I haven't heard any such testimony. [6711] The suggestion in the question is that Mowery told the witness about these places. Is that so?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: No, that is not so.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did anybody mention these places?

Presiding Inspector: Was there anyone else there? Wait a minute! Do you claim that there was anyone else there?

Mr. Gladstein: I asked the witness in my previous questions about that.

Presiding Inspector: He said there wasn't.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, he did.

Presiding Inspector: Then how could anyone else say that?

Mr. Gladstein: I did ask him, your Honor, and he admitted that he was there that night with Crayeraft and Mowery the night that he wrote the note.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I know.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That note, by the way, Mr. Cannalonga, did you give it to Mowery or to Crayeraft?

A. I believe Mr. Crayeraft took it.

Q. All right. Now, that night when you were having a discussion you have already said you didn't tell Mowery and Crayeraft about these various cities and auto camps that I read off to you. Correct? [6712] A. No, that is correct.

Q. And you say that Mowery didn't mention anything like that either? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. And Craycraft, what about him?

A. He—it's like I say. He kept pounding away. He mentioned that Mann Act all the time.

Presiding Inspector: Did he mention any places?

The Witness: No, he didn't.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all?

Mr. Gladstein: That is all I have, your Honor. There is a line of examination that we have yet to go into and I would like——

Presiding Inspector: Well, we had better go right into it.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to have permission to have Mr. Grossman take over the examination.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. That you may do. Go ahead, Mr. Grossman.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What were your regular hours of work, Mr. Cannalonga?

Presiding Inspector: Where?

Mr. Grossman: On the ship.

Presiding Inspector: On the ship.

A. On the ship, from 8:00 o'clock in the morning—— [6713]

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Now, your Honor, I will object to this line. Apparently we are going into the same thing. He has already asked him what the hours were. He has the time sheets. They are in, identified.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: I did answer that once before.

Presiding Inspector: I don't remember it, so I would like to have it again.

A. (Continuing): My working—I was working from 8:00 o'clock in the morning until 10:00; then I knocked off fifteen minutes for coffee from 10:00 to 10:15; 10:15 to ten minutes of twelve; and from ten minutes to twelve to 1:00 o'clock was dinner hour; and 1:00 o'clock until 3:00 o'clock, then knocked off again for coffee from three to three fifteen; then went back to work; you go back to work from 3:15 to, oh, about ten minutes to five; and you do that on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Then Saturday you go to work at 8:00 o'clock in the morning until 10:00, and from 10:00 to 10:15 is coffee time; then you go back to work until ten minutes of twelve.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, when did you make out your overtime sheet for Wednesday, May the 7th?

A. Where?

Q. When? [6714]

A. When? That morning.

Q. When that morning?

A. Oh, when I got up at 6:00.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that the overtime sheet shows overtime being done after 6:00 o'clock that morning?

A. Yes, I know that. They started working cargo from 7:00 to 8:00.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Was it your practice to make out your overtime sheet on the same day that the overtime work was done? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't quite understand that. Before you did the work?

The Witness: Oh, yes. You see——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): You made it out in the morning because you had orders for overtime?

The Witness: No, your Honor. You see, the way they work it, you see, before 8:00 o'clock or after 5:00 o'clock is overtime; and the supercargo, he knows that time they are going to start the winches the next day, you see, that night when they knock off, and he will leave word to the night mate to tell the electrician or he will tell the electrician himself "Well, we are going to start working at 7:00 o'clock in [6715] the morning".

Presiding Inspector: So you have practically orders in the morning for the rest of the day?

The Witness: Oh, yes.

Presiding Inspector: And that's what you put in on your overtime sheet?

The Witness: That one hour from seven to eight.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When was this overtime sheet approved, the one that we have for identification?

A. Oh, that was—you see, let's see. May I have that sheet a moment? And I'll tell you.

Q. While you are looking at it I am going to change the question. When was your overtime for Wednesday, May 7th, approved and by whom?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. By the Chief Engineer.

Q. When? A. On the ship.

Q. When? A. Oh, I suppose a couple of days later.

Q. What is your recollection?

A. I don't know; you see, I had already left the ship.

Q. Weren't you there when it was approved?

A. No.

Q. How did you get it to the Chief Engineer?

A. Well, these slips were left on my desk at all times. [6716] You see, this was my own copies.

Q. What was your practice so far as getting the approval of someone for these overtime sheets?

A. Well, as far as the cargo overtime was concerned, that automatically is made out because so long as those winches are turning over it is overtime.

Q. You mean you are given credit for it even though you don't show it on your overtime sheet?

A. Oh, yes. Correct.

Q. What about the other overtime? Are you given credit for it only if it is shown on your overtime sheet?

A. Yes. You show it on your overtime sheet and then the Chief O.K.'s it.

Q. Don't you have to hand the sheet to the Chief so that he can O.K. it? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. How does he know what overtime you are claiming?

A. How does he know? You tell him.

Q. How do you tell him?

A. And as a rule——

Q. (Interposing): Orally or in writing?

A. Orally. As a rule you tell him "I have been working on such and such a job" and he knows the job was done, and so there you are.

Q. How many copies of the overtime sheet do you make? [6717] A. One copy.

Q. Is this copy that you have brought here the only copy you made of your overtime?

A. I didn't bring this copy here.

Q. Is that copy the only one that you made of your overtime sheet?

A. No. I had a little book aboard ship, too.

Q. Is that the only copy in that form?

A. In that form, yes.

Q. Do you know how the Chief Engineer or anyone else got this copy?

A. I don't. Yes, I do. Wait a minute! I do. Before I left the ship I talked to the First Assistant and——

Q. (Interposing): The First Assistant what?

A. Engineer.

Q. Yes.

A. When I say, "First Assistant" I mean First Assistant Engineer. That is all there is on the ship, one First Assistant. And I had seen him about three o'clock in the morning just after I had finished repairing this winch on the—no. I seen him at six when the Mate called me. That's right. And I told him that I was going to leave and that everything was O.K. on the ship, there was nothing broke down, that everything was in running order. And I mentioned I had left all my stuff in the room and I asked him if he'd take care of it when [6718] the ship got out to sea, and he said he would, and that my overtime sheets were laying on the desk.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did he object to your leaving the ship?

A. No.

Q. Was there an electrician on the ship, or arrangements to come to the ship, when you left?

A. No.

Q. Did he state that he needed an electrician on the ship and, therefore, you shouldn't leave unless there were one there? A. No.

Q. Did he make any objection at all on your leaving the ship?

A. No. He said he was sorry as hell to see me go.

Q. Did you tell him why you were leaving the ship?

A. I didn't have to; he had an idea himself.

Q. Did you tell him?

Presiding Inspector: He said "No."

A. No.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know how he got an idea? What makes you say he had an idea as to why you were leaving?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. He seemed to feel that people were watching me, and that my life was in danger. Yes, he did.

Q. What gave you that impression?

A. I don't know what gave him that impression.

Q. What gave you the impression that he felt that way? [6719] A. He told me.

Q. He told you before you left your life was in danger? A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you what he based that on?

A. No.

Q. How many people did you talk to on the ship about leaving the ship before you left?

A. Just him.

Q. Did you talk to the other Mate that woke you up about leaving the ship? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: We didn't object to changing counsel, but they are going over the same thing that the other counsel did, but in a little different form.

Presiding Inspector: No, I think this is different.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You didn't mention to the Mate that you were going to leave this ship? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: That relates to the psychology of this man, his reaction.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. With whom did you have this conversation about leaving your gear on the ship? [6720]

A. The First Assistant.

Q. What time was it, about six o'clock.

A. About that time.

Q. What did he say to you about leaving your gear? A. He said he would look after it.

Q. Did you tell him when you were going to leave the ship?

A. I told him I was going to leave that morning.

Q. Did you tell him what time that morning?

A. No.

Q. What were the plans of the ship for that day—was it to remain where it was, or was it to move?

A. I don't know. I believe it was to remain there for a while until noon.

Q. And then where was it to move to?

A. I don't know as to that. You see, when they are alongside docks you don't know that far ahead of time. Sometimes they will say they will be two days at one dock and be there a couple of hours and then move. The ship was supposed to have gone to a dozen different places and being that we had to go into dry dock that ruined the whole schedule of the different docks. We were supposed to go to Terminal 4 and Terminal 1 and shift around to different places. And what they did do, they made one or two shifts and then just stayed in one dock. So I don't know whether she left at noon [6721] or where she went at noon.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you take any money with you when you left this ship?

A. Yes; the money that I had on me.

Q. How much money?

A. Oh, about $200—almost $300.

Q. You had that much money with you when you left the ship?

A. Oh, yes. We just got paid off a couple of days before I left the ship. That goes on the ship's articles.

Q. Was this $200 or $300 mainly money you had received as wages for work on the ship?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall approximately how much you got paid on that last payday?

A. Oh, about $235.00.

Q. For how long a period?

A. Oh, let's see—about 15 days.

Q. Did you read any newspaper before you left the ship? A. No.

Q. Did you know that a Mr. Shoemaker had testified on Tuesday the day before you left the ship, in this hearing? A. No.

Q. Did you know that someone had testified in this hearing on Tuesday to the effect that you had given certain [6722] statements in a lawyer's office concerning this case? A. No.

Q. You are sure of that?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I am positive of that.

Q. Did you read any newspaper on Tuesday night?

A. No; just this article that the Sailors had seen and mentioned to me in regards to this subpoena.

Q. Did that article mention who had testified that day in the Bridges hearing? A. No.

Q. Did you listen to any news broadcast on Tuesday night, or Wednesday morning concerning the Bridges case? A. No.

Q. Did you talk to any man on the ship, or anyone else, on Tuesday night, or before you left the ship, as to what had taken place on Tuesday in the Bridges hearing? A. No.

Q. Did you talk to any representative of the Government, or anyone who claimed to have any connection with the Government, before you left the ship? A. No.

Q. What kind of a bus was this you got on in Vancouver?

A. It was not in Vancouver. It was just outside of Vancouver.

Q. What kind of a bus was it? [6723]

A. Greyhound.

Q. Pardon? A. Greyhound.

Q. How far did you go on that bus?

A. South Tacoma.

Q. How did you happen to get out in South Tacoma—why did you get off there?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. So I couldn't be traced. I got off at South Tacoma and got in a cab and rode to Seattle in a cab.

Q. How far is it from South Tacoma to Seattle?

A. It is $7.00 fare.

Q. $7.00 fare? A. Flat rate.

Q. Why did you think it would be more difficult to follow you in a taxicab than a bus?

A. Well, you see, South Tacoma, that is about a couple of miles before you go into Tacoma. I felt maybe at that bus station somebody would recognize me, and this way I just pushed the button and the bus stopped at this corner, and I just got off the bus.

Q. Did you tell this First Engineer where you were going? A. No.

Q. Did you tell him how you were going?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any discussion with the First Engineer [6724] as to what you were going to do after you left the ship? A. No.

Q. When you left the ship did you see any car full of men?

A. There was quite a few cars out there at the time.

Q. Full of men?

A. Well, yes, there was—I believe it was longshoremen coming to work, or something like that, at the time. I don't just recall. In fact, I didn't notice. I was just packing this little electric motor, so I wouldn't be—I don't know how you say that—I didn't notice how many cars were out there.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What time did you leave the ship?

A. About 7:30.

Q. Can you estimate what time you caught the bus?

A. I caught the bus on the outside of Vancouver about 8:30.

Q. What time did you call Mowery?

Mr. Myron: We have gone all over this. Mr. Gladstein went into it and now Mr. Grossman wants to go through it.

Presiding Inspector: He has given that conversation.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What time did you start work that morning? A. What time did I start work?

Mr. Myron: What morning? [6725]

Mr. Grossman: Wednesday morning.

A. Seven o'clock.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What kind of work were you doing?

A. Nothing in particular.

Presiding Inspector: Standing by?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you work only to 7:30?

A. I don't recall just how long I was on the ship; between 7:00 and 7:30 I believe—somewhere in there.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: I think we had better recess now until 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:33 P.M. a recess was taken to 2:00 P.M. of the same day.) [6726]

After Recess

2:00 O'clock P.M.

(Remarks outside the record.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Grossman.

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination

(Continued)

Mr. Grossman: May I have the last question and answer, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. On this Wednesday morning when you left the ship what did you do after you arrived in Seattle?

A. I went out to the house and took a bath.

Q. Who lives at that house?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Mr. E. G. Emel.

The Reporter: Spell "Emel" please.

The Witness: E-m-e-l.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Is he any relation to you? A. No.

Q. Does anyone else live there?

A. His wife and son. [6727]

Q. Do you consider that your home?

A. I do.

Q. Is that the address you give when you give your address? A. It is.

Q. How long were you there?

A. How long was I there?

Q. In that house.

A. Oh, long enough to take a bath, and he was home and I asked him to come back down to Portland and pick up my clothes.

Q. Do you remember what kind of a cab it was you took from South Tacoma?

A. I don't.

Q. Do you remember the color?

A. No. I remember it was a new Buick.

Q. Do you remember about what time you arrived at this house in Seattle?

A. Oh, it was in the afternoon sometime.

Q. Early or late?

A. Oh, about the middle of the afternoon.

Q. Did you have to wait for this bus that you picked up at Vancouver?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I believe I did. About five minutes or so; five or ten minutes.

Q. What is the address of this house in Seattle? [6728] A. 3003 East 115th.

Q. 3003 East 115th? A. East 115th.

Q. Street? A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. How do you spell the name of the people who live there? A. Emel; E-m-e-l.

Q. Did you say something about Mr. Emel picking up some clothes? A. Yes.

Q. What was that you said about the clothes?

A. Well, I asked him if he would come down to Portland and pick up my clothes and gear that was on the ship.

Q. Did he agree to do so? A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell him the circumstances under which you left the ship? A. No.

Q. Did you tell anyone in that house the circumstances under which you left the ship?

A. No.

Q. Did you discuss with anyone in that house the question of your possibly being a witness again in this case? [6729] A. No.

Q. Or the question of the subpoena?

A. No.

Q. Did they discuss that question with you?

A. No.

Q. When did you leave the house?

A. I think I left after supper.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. I believe I am.

Q. You mean you ate supper there?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes.

Q. What time of day did you leave?

A. Well, ordinarily they generally have supper around 6:00.

Q. Did you leave right after supper?

A. I believe I did.

Q. Where did you have lunch on that day, if you had any?

A. Where did I have lunch? In Centralia.

Q. Do you remember where in Centralia?

A. Yes, where the bus stops.

Q. How long did the bus stop in Centralia?

A. Twenty minutes. [6730]

Q. What did you do after you left this house?

A. Well, I rode with him to, I believe it was, Olympia, and he proceeded on to Portland and picked up my stuff, and I met him again and, then, I got into my car.

Q. Now, wait, not so fast. You waited at Olympia until he came back? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did it take him to get back?

A. Oh, I don't recall the exact time.

Q. Where did you wait in Olympia?

A. In—oh, I walked around town and, I think, I took in a movie.

Q. Well, did you have an appointment to meet him when he came back? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where and when were you to meet him?

A. Well, we had figured—let's see—I believe it took him about four hours. We had figured something like that.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You mean four hours from Olympia to Portland and back?

A. Yes, four or five hours; I am not quite sure.

Q. How long does it take to drive from Seattle to Olympia; rather, how long did it take you that night? A. Oh, about two hours.

Q. Now, did you have an appointment to meet him when he came back and where and when would it be? [6731]

A. I don't know what you mean by "appointment."

Q. Well, how was he to find you when he came back to Olympia?

A. I told him I would meet him on such and such a corner.

Q. At what time?

A. Like I told you, we had figured approximately it would take him that long barring accidents and so forth.

Q. Did he come back about the time you expected?

A. No—wait a minute now—let's see. No, we didn't leave right after supper; pardon me. I believe I went to bed; that is it, I went to bed right after supper and we left about eleven or twelve o'clock at night.

Q. At night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How could you have gone to a show in Olympia, then?

A. Well, it is just coming to me now; I am trying to tell you as close as possible how we left and when we left. I went to the show in Seattle with him, that is it. Now, we get the show straightened out. After supper we went to a show; then, after the show we left for Portland.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You didn't go to bed in Seattle, then, before you left? A. No; I laid down for a while.

Q. Let's get this straight. After supper you went to a [6732] show in Seattle?

A. Yes, we went to a show about eight o'clock.

Q. What show did you see? A. Oh, I——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Just suspend a moment.

(Discussion outside the record.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What picture did you see, Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I went to the Arabian Theater. I don't recall what the picture was. [6733]

Q. You can't remember anything about the picture? A. No, not off-hand.

Q. Do you recall about what time this Mr. Emel came back to Olympia to pick you up?

A. Well, instead of asking me all these questions, if you let me tell the story as I can recall it—you are asking me a question one minute and you get me all confused. If you will let me tell the story from the time I left the ship and I went home and had my gear picked up, and so forth, I can do it. It would be a lot better for you.

Presiding Inspector: Do the best you can in answer to Mr. Grossman's questions.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. See if you can tell the same story in reply to specific questions. That is what I am concerned with. The next now is, What time did he pick you up again in Olympia? I am referring to Mr. Emel.

A. Yes, I know you are referring to Emel. You see, I made two trips. There was two trips made and on the first trip—no, on the first trip I rode to Portland with him when the clothes were picked up. Then we went back to Seattle.

Q. You say you rode to Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. That is a little different. [6734]

A. Well, if you want me to tell you the story——

Mr. Grossman: Just a minute!

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute!

Mr. Grossman: We'll get there, Mr. Del Guercio, in my way.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the witness hasn't finished with his answer and there is nothing different about it at all.

Mr. Grossman: The record will speak for itself whether it is or it isn't.

Presiding Inspector: The record will show. He was explaining how he might do it. But, of course, Mr. Grossman may proceed and ask him particular questions.

Mr. Grossman: He said there were two trips to Olympia. Now, I am going to make sure that it is clear, that he didn't go to Olympia and stop.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When you left Seattle what is your best judgment as to the time that you left with Mr. Emel?

A. Well, I left Seattle at—after the show. It was about—about midnight, and I drove with him. We went right directly to Portland, and——

Q. (Interposing) Do you remember what time you got to Portland?

A. No. I was asleep in the car.

Q. Did you wake up at all while you were in Portland? [6735]

A. Yes. But I don't know what time it was. It was early morning. Dawn was breaking.

Q. And do you know whether he went to the ship to pick up your clothes?

A. Yes. He went aboard ship and got my clothes.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because on the way leaving Portland all my gear was in the car.

Q. Did he tell you he had been to the ship?

A. Yes.

Q. What is his first name? A. Ernest.

Q. Ernest? A. Uh-huh (Affirmative.)

Q. Did he tell you whether he had had any conversation with anyone on the ship?

A. No, he didn't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. All right. Then can you——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You mean he didn't have a conversation or he didn't tell you?

The Witness: He didn't tell me. You see, I had given him——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes, that is all right.

By Mr. Grossman: [6736]

Q. When did you tell Mr. Emel where to go and what to pick up?

A. Well, when I got home I told him that my clothes and stuff was on the ship, that I would like to have him go down and pick it, and he suggested "Well, you might as well come along". And so then I suggested to him that we go to a movie first and that it was better traveling at night than it was day time; no traffic on the highways.

Q. Did Mr. Emel ask you how it was that you had left the ship, just left the ship and you wanted him to go back and pick up your clothes?

A. No. You see, it's quite common for him, whenever I get off the ship,—for him to come down to the ship and get my gear.

Q. Why is that common?

A. Well, he has an automobile and it is easier to go right down to the ship to pick up your clothes than it is to pack it to a bus station.

Q. Has he ever gone down from Portland to Seattle for you to pick up your gear?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. He did. When I got off the Clevdon the first trip he came down. I called him up, asked him to come down and pick up my gear.

Q. Did he pick up you also that other time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it his car that you were driving in? [6737] A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a car is that?

A. It's a DeSoto.

Q. What year? A. '39.

Q. Sedan? A. Coupe. Business coupe.

Q. All right. When you got down to Portland do you know where he stopped the car to get out and get the gear?

A. Yes. In front of the dock.

Q. Were you awake at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell him how to find the ship?

A. No. The ship was—you can see the ship from the dock where you park the car, and I had given him a note to the First Assistant.

Q. What did the note say?

A. Just telling him to give Mr. Emel my clothes and radio and all such property that I had on there, my tools and stuff.

Q. When did you write that note?

A. Just before he went aboard the ship.

Q. Was there anyone else in the car at any time between Seattle and Portland?

A. No. There was a dog in there. [6738]

Q. Did you stop to eat on the way?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I believe we stopped in Olympia, for a cup of coffee.

Q. All right. After you got the gear what did you do?

A. Come back to Seattle and got into my car and left.

Q. You drove directly back to Seattle?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't stop in Olympia? A. No.

Q. Did you ever stop in Olympia and go to a show? A. Yes. When I had my own car.

Q. All right. You drove directly back to Seattle, you say, and got your car? A. Yes.

Q. Where was your car? A. At home.

Q. Why didn't you go down to Portland in your own car? Why did you have Mr. Emel take you down?

Mr. Del Guercio: It doesn't make any difference as to why he didn't, if your Honor please. He has testified that he went down to Seattle in somebody else's car. He went back to Seattle. Now, he is asking him why he didn't go down in his own car.

The Witness: I will give him the answer.

Presiding Inspector: I think we may have the reason. [6739]

Mr. Del Guercio: It is a waste of time, if your Honor please.

A. For the reason that my car is an old model and in pretty bad shape. It is just about wore out, and his car was in better condition mechanically. He just had an overhaul job done to it and a lot faster than mine and a lot more comfortable. [6740]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Why did you take Mr. Emel down with you to Portland to get your stuff?

A. Well, like I say it is his car; he drives his own car. I am not going to grab his car off and drive it.

Q. And as soon as you got into Seattle after this trip to Portland, did you immediately get into your car and leave town? A. I did.

Q. You didn't stop anywhere at all?

A. I stopped in Olympia. I believe I stopped on a highway and had some gas put in.

Q. Why didn't you go aboard ship to get your own gear? A. So I wouldn't be seen.

Q. Why didn't you want to be seen?

A. That is the reason why I left the ship, for the same reason. It seems like they still had some fellows who were watching that ship.

Q. What do you mean "it seems like?"

A. I don't know; I didn't look.

Q. Well, then, why does it seem like that to you?

A. Well, I felt that if they would watch the ship the night before they would still be watching the ship.

Q. After you left?

A. After I left. [6741]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Between the time that you left Portland, or, rather, the time that you caught the bus in Vancouver and the time that you left Seattle in your own car did you meet anyone except the Emel family? A. No, I didn't.

Q. After leaving Seattle in your own car where did you go?

A. I went down to Olympia and stopped off and went to a show.

Q. What time would this be that you arrived at Olympia?

A. Oh, I don't recall the exact time.

Q. What day was it? A. What day?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, on a Thursday.

Q. Morning or afternoon?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. Early or late?

A. Oh, about the middle of the afternoon.

Q. What did you do after you arrived in Olympia?

A. I just told you I went to a show.

Q. Went to a show. Do anything else there?

A. No.

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. I just told you I went to a show. [6742]

Q. Went to a show. Did you do anything else there? A. No.

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. Then, I cut across.

Q. You mean you left Olympia——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. . (Interposing) After I left Olympia I headed for——

Q. (Interposing) Just one moment.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, the question is asked, the witness is replying and counsel won't give him a chance to answer it. He interjects other questions making it confusing not only to the witness but to everybody else.

Presiding Inspector: Let's hear the question and answer.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Grossman: I have a right to stop with leaving Olympia. I don't have to get the rest of the tour just because Mr. Del Guercio wants the witness——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He has no right to stop the witness.

Mr. Grossman: I have a right to stop the witness.

Presiding Inspector: He has the right to stop at the end of a responsive answer.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Before you left Olympia this time—I am referring to now when you were driving your own car—withdraw that. [6743] Between the time that you left the ship and the time that you left Olympia driving your own car did you read any newspapers? A. No.

Q. Did you hear any news broadcasts?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No.

Q. Did you find out from anyone what had happened in the Bridges' deportation case or what had happened with respect to your subpoena?

A. No.

Q. Were you interested in the question of whether there was a subpoena out for you and when they were going to serve it? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: He has answered it. I will let it stand.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. After leaving Olympia what did you do?

A. I went to Aberdeen, then, from Aberdeen to Hoquiam.

Q. Did you stop in Aberdeen?

A. I believe I stopped in Aberdeen for a cup of coffee.

Q. About when did you arrive in Aberdeen?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Was it dark?

A. I believe it was. [6744]

Q. How far is it from Olympia to Aberdeen?

A. Oh, about 60, 70 miles.

Q. What did you do after you left Aberdeen?

A. Then, I headed for Hoquiam, then, up towards the Olympic peninsula.

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. Then, I went up in the mountains.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you have any long stops or any stops of more than an hour between leaving Aberdeen and arriving in the mountains? A. No.

Q. What was the first stop you made in the mountains?

The Witness: Do I have to tell him where I went in the mountains?

Presiding Inspector: I should think so.

The Witness: Your Honor, I figure on going back up there again.

Presiding Inspector: That won't hurt you.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: He says he figures on going back up there again. I say it won't hurt him.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, no——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Except, if there is another subpoena out for him we want to know where he is.

Presiding Inspector: Another subpoena? [6745]

Mr. Grossman: I say if there is one we want to know where he is going in the mountains. Otherwise, we won't——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't understand that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe we should keep witnesses available here.

Presiding Inspector: He is here.

Mr. Grossman: He is here after dodging a subpoena. We want to know where he was; we have a right to know where he was.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: What do you mean I dodged a subpoena?

Presiding Inspector: Just answer the question.

Mr. Myron: It is a charge that is unfounded. Counsel said he was dodging a subpoena.

Mr. Grossman: We will let the record speak for itself.

Mr. Myron: He didn't know there was any subpoena, according to his testimony.

Mr. Grossman: That isn't the way I understand it.

Presiding Inspector: You have heard his testimony. No use discussing it now.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, regardless of the question of a future subpoena we do have a right, in view of the direct examination which traced his trip, or which brought out the fact that he had been in the mountains during this period of time, to test him on cross examination. [6746]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think you have that right on cross examination it having been brought out on direct. I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: If it were only for the purpose of cross examination we would make no objection. Our objection is not directed to that. Our objection is directed to the protection of the witness.

Presiding Inspector: How can it protect the witness not to——

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, the witness has testified that he expects to return to this——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Suppose he does?

Mr. Del Guercio: He doesn't want to be bothered by either Mr. Gladstein or the Communist Party or anybody else.

Mrs. King: Or the FBI.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will take this testimony. It is in relation to what you brought out on direct. You showed he went up in the mountains and stayed there. There were subpoenas out at some time for him and they weren't served until later. Now, we will find out what there was about that in view of your examination in chief.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Where did you stop first in the mountains?

A. Up in the Quinalt district.

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: Q-u-i-n-a-l-t. [6747]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. And where in that district?

A. Well, that is hard to say because the mountain is just covered with hundreds of trails.

Q. Well, suppose you describe it to me as if you were telling me how to get there?

A. I wouldn't be able to describe it to you.

Q. Well, do the best you can. Start from the last city or town you went through and tell me how you get to where you got for your first stop?

A. Well, all I can say, if you get to Quinalt

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

there is a road leading up the mountainside and there is no name on the road. You have to be out there; you have to get a guide if you don't know that country; you have to get a guide to take you there, and I couldn't off-hand say the name of a place. There is no names to any of those trails; it is all trails that was built by the CCC and, you see, the average person doesn't go up there in that section because it is a Government reservation, it is a national forest, and about the only ones that have any business up there would be forest rangers on the lookout for fires, and so I couldn't possibly explain just how to get up there. All I know, I can take you up there in a car and show you where I went.

Q. Did you go to a place that has a mailing address? [6748] A. No.

Q. Did you go to a cabin or a house or hotel of any kind?

A. No. You see, up in—they have shelters strung all through that Olympic forest, the national forest that the CCC have put up and you can—— Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Shelters for trampers?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Tourist trampers?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Excursions, pleasure seekers?

The Witness: No; it is in case somebody gets lost in the woods. It is a log cabin, three-sided log cabins that the CC boys have put up there.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Fireplace on the open side?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think we know about that sort of thing.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. And you stayed at one of those shelters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you stay in one of those shelters every night that you were up in the mountains?

A. Oh, no; I slept out quite a few nights. [6749]

Presiding Inspector: Are there provisions in some of these shelters?

The Witness: No, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You bring your own provisions?

The Witness: I had all my own provisions.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Had you ever been up there before in that district?

A. Oh, yes. See, I have got a place out in Hood Canal; that is just the other side of the mountains in the same section. Behind Brannon is the Olympic Mountains.

Presiding Inspector: Was that the name of the mountain or is that the name of the village?

The Witness: It is the name of a village. [6750]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you go to your own place at all when you were up in the mountains on this occasion?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No.

Q. During the entire time until you came down from the mountains on last Thursday or last Wednesday—I mean, Thursday or Wednesday of last week—were you in that district the entire time?

A. Yes, the Olympic mountain district.

Q. I mean the smaller district than the Olympic mountain district.

A. What?

Q. That smaller district that you named.

A. The Quinalt.

Q. Yes. Were you in that district the entire time?

A. That's where I turned in. It's the Olympic National Forest, yes.

Q. You were in that district the entire time until you came down from the mountains until Wednesday or Thursday of last week?

A. Oh, no, no; not the entire time. I made a trip to Port Angelus.

Q. When did you make your trip to Port Angeles? A. I don't recall what day it was.

Q. What did you do in Port Angeles? [6751]

A. I took a run into Port Angeles and picked up some more grub.

Q. Did you get any newspapers? A. No.

Q. Did you have a radio with you?

A. Yes, I had my radio.

Q. Did you take any other trips out of that district? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Can you estimate when it was that you went to Port Angeles? A. No, I couldn't.

Q. Well, could you tell me whether it was last week? A. Yeah, last week sometime.

Q. It was last week sometime? A. Yes.

Q. Well, if you came out of the mountains Wednesday night or Wednesday P.M. can't you give us an idea of when it was that you were in Port Angeles?

A. I think I was there the Monday preceding the Wednesday I come out.

Presiding Inspector: You mean two days before?

The Witness: Yes, about two days before.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you see anyone in Port Angeles? [6752]

A. No.

Q. What did you do in Port Angeles, except buy grub? A. That's all.

Q. Did you go to any show in Port Angeles?

A. No.

Q. During the entire time that you were in the mountains did you listen in on any news broadcasts concerning what happened in the Bridges case or concerning the subpoena for your appearance?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk to anyone up to the time that you came out of the mountains back to Seattle concerning the Bridges hearing or a subpoena for your presence at the Bridges hearing? A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did you take up to the mountains with you enough food to last you until the time that you went to Port Angeles? A. Yes.

Q. And when you went to Port Angeles how many days' supply of food did you get?

A. Oh, I got about three days' supply.

Q. Did you run out of food before you went to Port Angeles? A. No, I didn't run out.

Q. Did you have enough food to last you for three days? [6753]

A. No, I was getting low on some of the staples.

Q. Where did you get your food supplies for the mountains in the first place before you went up there the first time?

A. I picked them up just before I went up in the mountains?

Q. Where? A. In a store.

Q. Where? A. In Aberdeen.

Q. Do you know the name of the store?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Why did you come out of the mountains to Seattle when you did?

A. For the simple season that, you see, I've—I had to take a physical examination for the Draft, and so I got figuring, well, I have been now a couple of weeks without reporting to the Draft Board; that it is time to go in and report; otherwise it will be pretty serious. I think it is a year in jail you get if you don't report at the right time to the Draft Board.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What did you understand to be the rules of the law governing the reporting to the Draft Board when you came out of the mountains?

A. I don't know what the rules was. [6754]

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute! I object to that.

Mr. Grossman: I am not trying to prove what they were. I am trying to show his understanding.

Presiding Inspector: He has already testified as to that.

Mr. Grossman: No, not as to when and how often.

Presiding Inspector: He said if you didn't report pretty soon that there would be a penalty. I don't think it is very material.

Mr. Grossman: I do, if that is the reason he came out. He stated it is.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see any materiality in it.

Mr. Grossman: I think I ought to be permitted to pursue it.

Presiding Inspector: If you really want it——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): Yes, I want it.

Presiding Inspector (Continuing): ——I will let you have it, but I think it is losing time here.

What were your ideas then?

The Witness: My ideas was, you see, your Honor, it goes back to when I was on the Clevdon and I reported to the Draft Board just before the ship sailed and I got a notice to fill out my first form in New Bedford, Mass., and I filled it out then. And then in Los Angeles I got a notice from them to go [6755] and see a doctor in Portland while the ship was down in Los Angeles. So I couldn't see no doctor in Portland. We had another week to go before. And then when I went back to Seattle from the trial here I reported again to them and they had set a tentative date for a physical examination two weeks ahead of time, and then I shipped on the West Cussetta, and the day I was supposed to see the doctor I was on the ship in Tacoma, out of the city. And so I had figured, well, I was supposed to see the doctor in Seattle and they generally give you about a month, is the way I figured it, before you could see him again because I wasn't in the city that they notified me. So when I got up in the mountains I got thinking about it and figured, well, if I don't come in pretty soon to the Draft Board that they are going to have me arrested like they do any Draft evader. I have read articles off and on, different fellows being caught evading the Draft and getting a year's jail sentence. And that's the reason why I came in. I didn't want to go to no jail for a year.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. And when you were in the mountains did you write any letters to anybody? A. No.

Q. From the time that you left the ship in Portland did you write any letters to anybody?

A. No.

Q. Was there anyone up there in the mountains with you? [6756] A. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Was there anyone living anywhere near you?

A. No.

Q. When you came back to Seattle what was the first thing you did?

A. The first thing I did, I took a bath.

Q. Go ahead. What was next?

A. Well, that's the first thing I did.

Q. What was the next thing you did?

A. The next thing I did was, I went down to the Naval Recruiting Station and I had known for quite a long time that they had been advertising, oh, a month ago over the radio for electricians. There was a heavy shortage of electricians in the Navy. So I had planned on going into the Navy over a year ago, and so I figured, well, instead of doing a year with the Army on dry land that I would just as soon put in four years on a boat. So I went down to the Naval Recruiting Station and asked them, If I join up the Navy does that exempt them from the Army Draft? And they says "Yes".

Q. All right. Now, up to the time that you went into this Recruiting Station did you know anything that had happened in the Bridges case since you left the ship in Portland? A. No.

Q. Did you know anything about what had been done in connection with serving a subpoena or attempting to serve a subpoena on you? [6757]

A. No.

Q. Weren't you interested in the question of this subpoena that you understood was out for you?

A. No, I wasn't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. After you left this Navy Recruiting Station did you go to this place on 115th Street?

A. No.

Q. What did you do?

A. After I left the Naval Recruiting Station I went and visited some people in the Fremont District, West 39th Street.

Q. What was the name of those people?

A. Whitcomb.

Q. What is the first name? A. Ralph.

Q. Who were the other people?

A. Well, that's the——

Q. (Interposing): You mean Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Whitcomb? A. Yes, his home.

Q. That is what you meant by "people"? Mr. and Mrs.? A. Yes.

Q. And after that what did you do?

A. I had a little lunch there and then I went home.

Q. Did you remain around 115th Street for a while; I mean, around this home there?

A. Well, that was about—I got home about 4:00 [6758] o'clock and I just got in the house and I had a cup of coffee, and just as I started to drink this coffee in comes Mr. Madala of the FBI.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. He says—he mentioned that they were looking for me and that the Immigration was looking for me to serve a subpoena. That was about 4:30.

Q. Did he explain why he had come to see you

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

when he didn't have the subpoena to serve on you? Did he explain what his interest in you was?

A. Yes. He explained that he wanted to see me and he mentioned—asked what I left the ship for and why I was hiding out? And so I told him.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. Just what I have told you.

Q. You didn't tell him anything else?

A. And then he said he thought that there should be somebody with me as protection, and if it was all right if he'd stay with me. And I says "Yes". And so supper was about ready to be served and I invited him to have supper.

Q. Why did he say someone ought to stay with you?

Mr. Myron: Why did he?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

A. Because he felt——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Now, if the Court please, [6759] he is asking the witness here why Mr. Madala——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Interposing): Did he state why?

Presiding Inspector: He amended the question.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did he state why someone ought to stay with you?

A. Yes. He stated that he felt that I needed some protection.

Q. Against what? A. Against what?

Mr. Del Guercio: (Inaudible)

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Del Guercio has told you.

A. What did he say?

Presiding Inspector: Never mind.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Against what? A. Against what?

Q. Yes. A. Against bodily harm.

Q. Against whom? Protection from whom or against whom? A. Well, he didn't state.

Q. He didn't state? A. No. [6760]

Q. Did you ask him anything about the Bridges hearing?

A. I believe I did. I asked him, "How's the Bridges hearing was coming?" And I believe he mentioned in connection with me, he asked me why I ran away and— (Pause).

Q. What else did he say about the Bridges hearing?

A. That's all that I remember that he stated.

Q. Did you admit that you had run away from the ship? Did you deny it, admit it or say nothing about it? When he asked you why you ran away from the ship did you reply to that?

A. I don't get that.

Q. When he asked you why you ran away from the ship what was your reply?

A. I told him that there had been a carload of fellows parked across the dock.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. When he mentioned the subpoena what did you say?

A. I says "Well, that's fine." I says "They can serve it any time they want to".

Q. Did he tell you who had asked for the subpoena? A. What?

Q. Did he tell you who had asked for the subpoena?

A. I don't believe he mentioned who had asked.

Q. Did he tell you that there was testimony in the Bridges hearing concerning statements made by you to Mr. Craycraft? [6761]

A. I believe he did mention that.

Q. Did he tell you what Mr. Craycraft had testified to? A. No.

Q. Didn't you ask him?

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Did he tell you that a Mr. Shoemaker, a Court Reporter, had testified concerning a statement given in the office of Mr. Lord?

A. I believe he did say that.

Q. Did you ask him what was in that statement?

A. Yes. I think I asked him what was in it, and he mentioned the Mann Act. And I looked at him and I says "Christ! they're crazy, aren't they?"

Q. Did he tell you that Mr. Craycraft testified that you had admitted testifying falsely in the Bridges case?

A. No, I don't think he did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You would remember it if he had, wouldn't you? A. I might have, yes.

Q. Wouldn't you remember if Mr. Craycraft—if you had been told that Mr. Craycraft had testified that you had admitted testifying falsely in this case, wouldn't you remember a thing like that?

A. I believe I would remember. No; he just gave a [6762] brief outline of this testimony of these witnesses and asked me if it was true. And it's like I just told you. I thought it wasn't.

Q. Did he say what his plans were for you, if any?

A. No. He asked me if it was all right if he and another agent would be with me at all times, and I says "Yeah, it is O.K.".

Q. Will you state all that you can remember that you told Mr. Madala after he had told you what the testimony of Mr. Craycraft and Mr. Shoemaker had been?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I will object to that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I want all your reply after he had informed you what Craycraft and Shoemaker had testified to.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as already having been asked and answered.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think I have all of it, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is immaterial in any event.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it, although I don't know that you ought to have the whole conversation.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: All dealing with this subject.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

A. I don't think he specified Mr. Crayeraft or [6763] Shoemaker.

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall this having been covered.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall this having been covered.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When I say "Shoemaker" I am referring to testimony——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Was this covered, Mr. Grossman?

Mr. Grossman: No, it wasn't.

Mr. Del Guercio: Gladstein covered it.

Mr. Grossman: No. Just a moment. The subject generally was gone over. I am not repeating any questions, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: I submit it is the same question in a slightly different form.

Presiding Inspector: Well, whereabouts is it? Have you got it? Look at it and see how much you went into this.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, do you want me to go ahead on a different subject while you are looking, to save time?

Mr. Gladstein: This subject, my recollection is, your Honor, that Mr. Del Guercio brought it out on direct that Mr. Madala had met Mr. Cannalonga.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [6764]

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't go into any conversation on cross examination; conversations between them at that time.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't remember that you did.

Mr. Gladstein: The only conversation that I went into was at the time that Mr. Cannalonga met Mr. Connelley in San Francisco.

Presiding Inspector (Examining transcript): Go ahead, Mr. Grossman.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was all you said to Mr. Madala after he had told you that Mr. Craycraft testified that you had admitted false testimony when you testified here? I want your entire reply to him.

A. He never specified.

Presiding Inspector: I think the question is a little confusing.

Mr. Myron: Will you repeat the question?

Mr. Grossman: All right. I will rephrase it.

Mr. Myron: Will you read the question?

Presiding Inspector: No, it isn't necessary. He is going to rephrase it. He has withdrawn it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is your best recollection of what Mr. Madala told you about the testimony in the Bridges case during the time that you were absent? [6765]

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered, if your Honor please. Now, he has already testified as to what some of it was. Now, "Is there anything else that Mr. Madala said?" would seem to me to be the proper question.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think that perhaps that would be better.

Mr. Grossman: I think this is also proper. Then there is no misunderstanding. I want everything that was said by Mr. Madala. There wasn't much.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, you went into part of it.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, I know. But so there won't be any confusion I want everything Mr. Madala said about what had happened in the Bridges case after you left the ship.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. I will allow it.

The Witness: Will you read that question again, please?

Presiding Inspector: What did Madala say to you about what had happened in the Bridges case? Tell it all as far as you recall.

The Witness: He had asked me if I had read any papers and I told him "No", I hadn't. And he says—he says "They have brought in some testimony that I was supposed to have made in Portland". And I says "I never made no statement in Portland". And then he asked me why I left the ship. [6766]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment! On the Bridges——

Mr. Myron: Let him tell it. You asked him.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, they know as well as everyone in the Court room that that is not responsive.

Mr. Myron: He has asked for the entire conversation and he should be allowed to testify as to the entire conversation.

Mr. Grossman: I don't see why they are so frightened that their witness is going to have to answer questions.

Mr. Myron: He should be allowed to answer the questions that are asked.

Presiding Inspector: Wait just a moment!

Mr. Grossman: The question, if it is read by the reporter, will show that it deals only with what transpired in the Bridges hearing.

Presiding Inspector: That is right.

Mr. Grossman: And he is now going to talk about the Bridges case.

Do you get that, Mr. Myron?

Mr. Myron: Do you know what he is going to testify to? I am listening to the entire conversation he had.

Mr. Grossman: Will the reporter read the last few words by Mr. Cannalonga before I cut him short?

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. [6767]

(The portion of the answer referred to was read as follows:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

"* * * * and then he asked me why I left the ship.")

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about why he left the ship.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Grossman is inquiring for the benefit of the Inspector here as to what was said by Mr. Madàla to you and what you said about what had transpired in the Bridges trial. Now, you have told some of it.

Mr. Myron: If your Honor please, may I ask that the question be given by the Reporter?

Presiding Inspector: No. The question is clear to him, I am sure.

You understood the question?

The Witness: Yes, and I answered it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Not fully, did you?

The Witness: Yes. To the best of my knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Didn't Mr. Madala tell you what was supposed to have been said in this Portland statement?

A. No, I don't believe he did.

Q. Didn't you ask him?

A. Yes, I did ask him. I says, "Well, what was in the statement?" And he says "Well," he says—he says—he men- [6768] tioned something about where I had claimed that the FBI had put pressure on me. And I looked at him and I kind of grinned. I says—I says "I don't ever remember you people putting pressure on me". And then he asked me if I was ever involved in a Mann Act, and I says "No, I never was".

I think that's about the whole thing. [6769]

Q. You are sure, though, he didn't mention anything about Craycraft testifying you had admitted giving false testimony?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. He has asked for the entire conversation.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but after exhausting his recollection he may suggest matters so as to refresh the witness' recollection on subjects that he has not testified to.

A. I believe he asked me if I had made that statement that Craycraft—I told him, I says "No." I says "I don't see why I ever want to make a statement of that sort."

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did he ask you whether you had made any statement at all to Craycraft?

A. I don't believe he did.

Q. How long did this conversation with Mr. Madala last?

A. Oh, it was only a couple of minutes.

Q. Then, did he remain there or leave?

A. No. He had asked me if it was all right if he and Mr. Ross stay with me and I said "Yes," and then we had supper and after supper I said, well, I says, "I would like to go to a show, and if you guys want to come you can," and so we went out and we got back to the house at eleven o'clock. There was no extra bed and I suggested, I says, well, I says, "No place for you fellows to sleep out here." I said, "If you want we [6770] can go down to a hotel." So we went down to the Olympic Hotel, got adjoining rooms and I slept in one room and he and Mr. Ross slept in another room.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did Mr. Madala tell you how he knew you were in Seattle? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did you ask him? A. No.

Q. Who paid for the hotel?

A. I paid for half of it.

Q. And what did you do in the morning?

A. We went back out to the house in the morning. We had breakfast first and then went out to the house.

Q. What did you do out at the house?

A. I was—picked up a book and started to read.

Q. Did you do anything important at the house?

A. No.

Q. When did you leave the house?

A. We left about—oh, it was about one o'clock.

Q. Where did you go?

A. Down to the—down to the Federal Building.

Q. With Mr. Madala and Mr. Ross?

A. To the Courthouse, and we went up there and then I was served a subpoena; then, after I was served the subpoena.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Just one moment. Before you were served with a [6771] subpoena had anyone mentioned the fact that there was a subpoena for you?

A. Yes. Mr. Madala had mentioned it.

Q. When did he mention it for the first time?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is gone over now. Counsel asked him about the subpoena the first time that Mr. Madala saw him.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is so. Isn't it, Mr. Grossman?

Mr. Del Guercio: It is going back and forth.

Mr. Grossman: All right, withdraw that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Irksome.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you do anything at the FBI office except receive the subpoena?

A. That is all, just received the subpoena.

Q. How long were you up at the office?

A. Oh, a few minutes.

Q. Then, where did you go?

A. Then, I wanted to go to a show again and I told him that I was going to a show and so both Mr. Madala and Mr. Ross went with me to the show and after the show we had supper again, and in the meantime we made arrangements to get this train to come down to San Francisco. He explained to me that it meant forthwith, that if I wanted to go that I [6772] should leave for San Francisco and——

Q. (Interposing) Just a minute. Who explained that to you? A. Mr. Madala.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. He explained that what meant forthwith?

A. He explained that the subpoena—that I had to start for San Francisco as soon as possible after I received the subpoena.

Q. When did he make this explanation?

A. When it was received.

Q. When you were served with it?

A. Yes; this guy that handed it to me.

Q. Had you asked him or did he volunteer this information?

A. I asked him. I asked him, "Well, what does 'forthwith' mean?"

Q. Didn't you testify yesterday that you didn't even know when the subpoena asked you to come to San Francisco? A. What is that?

Q. Didn't you testify yesterday or the day before that you didn't even know when the subpoena required you to come to San Francisco?

A. I didn't at the time, no, until—it is like I told you, I had that subpoena up in the hotel room. I had two of them. I didn't know what was in both of them until I [6773] had seen it and then I could tell you.

Mr. Grossman: Miss Reporter, will you read the last answer, please?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Q. What hotel room are you referring to?

A. I was referring to the Sutter Hotel. When he asked me if I had another subpoena from the one he took away from me the first time on the stand here—he asked me if there was another one and I told him "Yes," and he wanted me to search my pockets and see if I had it on me.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Don't go over that. We have heard all that. The Sutter Hotel is all you need to say.

Go ahead.

The Witness: He asked me that.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Grossman, ask the next question.

Mr. Grossman: Just one moment.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, the day before yesterday when you were asked at the beginning of your cross examination about this subpoena that was served on you in Seattle you were asked this question: "When did it say that you were supposed to be here?"

Your answer was: "I don't recall." [6774]

The next question was: "Did you have any discussion with anybody as to when you were supposed to be here? A. No."

Were those answers correct that you gave the day before yesterday?

A. At the time, if you will recall it, there was quite a squabble here over the subpoenas.

Q. Yes or no, were they correct or not correct?

A. Well, you had me all confused at the time.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Wait a moment.

Did you have an objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: I have.

Presiding Inspector: What is it?

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness should not be instructed by counsel there to answer the question "yes" or "no". Moreover——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) If they call for a "yes" or "no" answer he may ask that they be answered "yes" or "no".

Now, the question is, as I understand it, if there is no other objection, in substance is that correct, "yes" or "no"?

Mr. Del Guercio: There is another objection on the ground that the matter has already been covered.

Presiding Inspector: No, whether that is correct or not has not been covered as I understand it. I will take it. [6775]

Do you want to make any correction? You can do so after saying is that correct, "yes" or "no".

Read it to him again. Let the reporter read it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. "When did it say you were supposed to be here? A. I don't recall.

"Q. Did you have any discussion with anybody as to when you were supposed to be here?

"A. No."

Mr. Del Guercio: That is as to when the subpoena was supposed to tell you to be here.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: No. Was there any discussion with anybody, it says, as to when you, Cannalonga, were supposed to be at this hearing. Now, that is the question. Now, was that correctly answered?

The Witness: No, not at the time, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to make an explanation?

The Witness: I would.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Well, make the explanation.

The Witness: You see, at the time I had two subpoenas on me and he asked me for one of them and I gave it to him and the other one was in the hotel room, and he kept insisting, and there was quite an argument over that subpoena, and he had me search myself to see if I had it on me, and I told him that I would bring it to him the next morning, that I didn't know [6776] what it said, that subpoena, what it said. Then, he asked me about it, this subpoena, this other subpoena, in regards to whether I had talked to anybody on this other subpoena. That is how I got the question, and I says, "No."

Presiding Inspector: All right, ask the next question.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You mean you understood the questions after the day before yesterday to refer to the subpoena that was served on you in San Francisco?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes. You people had me all confused on the subpoenas asking me to shake myself down and search myself for one, and I told you it was up in the hotel room, and the next morning I brought it to you and I had a chance to look at it and see what it said.

Q. Well, now, let's get this clear. When you gave the testimony the day before yesterday that you didn't recall the date on the subpoena and that you didn't have any discussion with anybody as to when you were supposed to be here you thought at that time that you were being asked about the second subpoena; is that your testimony?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that as being already covered.

Presiding Inspector: No, I think I will allow it. It is cross examination.

By Mr. Grossman: [6777]

Q. Is that your testimony?

A. It is like I say, Mr. Grossman——

Presiding Inspector: Is that it?

Mr. Grossman: Yes or no.

Presiding Inspector: Is that it? We have got to finish this some time.

The Witness: Well, your Honor, I was so confused about both of these subpoenas.

Presiding Inspector: He says he was confused on both of the subpoenas.

Mr. Grossman: Well, I still have a right to know whether he thought I was referring to the San

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Francisco served subpoena, or, rather, what Mr. Gladstein was referring to as the San Francisco served subpoena. That seemed to have been his response and I wanted it clear.

The Witness: I don't know which one you were referring to.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. To what subpoena were you referring when you replied in the way that I am going to read: "When did it say that you were supposed to be here?

"A. I don't recall.

"Q. Did you have any discussion with anybody as to when you were supposed to be here.

"A. No." [6778]

To what subpoena did you think Mr. Gladstein was referring when he asked those questions and when you replied? A. Well, I——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Your Honor, I think at this time the record should show what happened, what subpoena Mr. Gladstein had in his hand when he asked those questions.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think he had any subpoena.

Mr. Myron: I think he did. He gave him the subpoena and he had it in his hand.

Presiding Inspector: There was only one subpoena introduced up to that time.

Mr. Myron: That is right. I think the record should show it.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: That is the one that was served after he got down here in this city, as I understand it.

Mr. Myron: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: Now, the other subpoena at that time had not been produced.

Mr. Myron: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Now, it seems to me this is all very clear and doesn't need very much further examination, but if you wish to ask anything more I will allow it.

Mr. Grossman: I still don't have an answer.

I got the impression clearly that Mr. Cannalonga was saying that this testimony that I read him was given because he [6779] confused the first with the second subpoena. Now, I want that clear. I want to know whether he intended it to apply to the first subpoena or not. I haven't got it clear whether he intended it to apply to the first subpoena or the second subpoena or neither.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What subpoena did you think Mr. Gladstein was referring to when he asked you these questions?

A. Well, Mr. Grossman, if you will read back further—after all, I can't say off-hand right now. It is like I told you, that these two subpoenas, I handed him one. He kept insisting I had another one in my pocket and asked me to shake myself down, until everything was all jumbled up. I didn't know which one he meant or anything else. He kept waving one subpoena at me and asked me to produce another one and I told him it was up in the hotel room, that I would get it for him and show it to him the next day.

Presiding Inspector: Now, let's see; we are now up in Portland. A subpoena was served on you.

The Witness: Seattle, you mean.

Presiding Inspector: Seattle. A subpoena was served on you.

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Was there or was there not any discussion with the person who served it on you, or with Mr. [6780] Ross as to when you were required under the subpoena to be here in this hearing?

The Witness: Well, there was discussion on the subpoena. I had asked the question what "forthwith" meant. No, it was not Mr. Madala; it was the man that served it to me.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I say any one of the three.

The Witness: Uh huh. He had said—well, he says, "You are to leave as soon as you can for San Francisco," and that is what I did.

Presiding Inspector: Now, if the other testimony is to other effect you have the full benefit of it.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Now, did you have any discussion with this man who served the subpoena as to what the subpoena required you to do in addition to leaving immediately? A.. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. What did you think at that time the serving of the subpoena on you required you to do?

Presiding Inspector: I don't believe he can understand that. You will have to make that a little clearer.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

By Mr. Grossman: [6781]

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, a subpoena is served on you. You understood, did you not, that it was an order of some kind for you to do something; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you think it was an order for you to do?

A. Like I did the last time I had one served on me.

Q. What?

A. To come down here to San Francisco and report to the—for the Government like the original one, the first time I come down to court.

Q. Did you understand that the subpoena required you to report to the FBI? Was that your understanding when you were served in Seattle?

A. What do you mean "report to the FBI"?

Q. Tell me this: Did you believe when you were served with that subpoena in Seattle that it ordered you to appear in this hearing or in this court room?

A. No, not in the court room. To come down here and report in——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. (Interposing) Where?

A. San Francisco like I did the first time.

Q. Where in San Francisco?

A. At the FBI office.

Presiding Inspector: Well, no witnesses have appeared in the Court room that I know of in pursuance to a subpoena [6782] unless they were in the other room when they were served because all witnesses have been excluded from this hearing.

Mr. Grossman: All I know is the subpoena orders them to appear here.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but no one——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) I am not referring to what others do.

Presiding Inspector: That has not been required as to any witness.

Mr. Grossman: I want his understanding.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you are entitled to it. You have got it.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, with reference to the witnesses for the defense as opposed to the witnesses for the prosecution there were a number of them that came here and waited in the witness room.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but they didn't appear in the court room.

Mrs. King: No, they appeared at the court.

Mr. Grossman: Appeared at the court.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know where they were. They didn't, any of them, report to the Presiding Inspector.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mrs. King: No, I understand that. As I say, that is merely for the record.

Presiding Inspector: That may be; I don't know, except [6783] I don't know where any subpoenaed witness reported.

Mrs. King: The only thing we want——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) The only thing I know, witnesses were kept in the adjoining room and very soon afterwards they appeared in the court room. Of course, we have excluded all of them.

Mrs. King: The only thing we wanted to make clear was that witnesses for the defense did not ordinarily report to the FBI office.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think that statement is unnecessary.

Mrs. King: I don't think it is at all necessary.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is a fair statement.

Mr. Grossman: Especially considering some of the subpoenas that have been issued by the FBI.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is very important to show where a witness has reported as long as the witness reported to the counsel in this case. If they reported to the wrong counsel, why, I suppose they would be transferred. I don't know what the subpoena says, whether it says—it probably says he was to give testimony in the case without any reference on whose behalf.

Mr. Gladstein: May I see the subpoenas, please?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: This man was at all times the Government's witness. [6784]

Mr. Grossman: That is not true.

Presiding Inspector: He can't be anything else. Having been once called he remains the Government's witness throughout the hearing.

Mr. Grossman: It was our subpoena, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference. He doesn't become your witness because you call him back for further cross examination.

Mr. Grossman: The Government doesn't have control over the subpoena.

Presiding Inspector: He does.

Mr. Grossman: They can extend the subpoena.

Presiding Inspector: No, they can't extend the subpoena. He must come here, of course, but he still remains the Government's witness. You couldn't cross examine if that weren't so.

Mr. Grossman: Oh, I agree——

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: (Continuing) But the reason is because the FBI, instead of letting him appear here forthwith, as he was ordered to do by the subpoena, took him in to their custody——

Presiding Inspector: That may be.

Mr. Grossman: (Continuing) ——to destroy the effect of that——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You have got the full benefit of that. [6785]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: May I see the subpoena that was offered for identification?

(The documents referred to were handed to Mr. Grossman by the reporter.)

Presiding Inspector: The subpoenas very, generally, as I have been accustomed to see them, say to give testimony on behalf of such and such a side.

Mr. Gladstein: That is what a subpoena usually says, as a witness for plaintiff or defendant.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, that is the subpoena that I have usually seen but I didn't notice that it said that on these.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) May I see those subpoenas, please?

(The documents referred to were handed to Mr. Del Guercio by Mr. Grossman.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I refer, if the Court please, to the two subpoenas issued——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) When we come to that——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) But in view of counsel's argument, this is a reply to it because I would like to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We don't need any reply. There is no conclusion. [6786]

Mr. Del Guercio: In order to get the record straight.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: All right, if you want to put something in you may.

Mr. Gladstein: The subpoenas speak for themselves.

Mr. Del Guercio: There are two. One is dated May 6, 1941. As I told the Court some time before——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) What is that? I beg your pardon; I didn't catch that.

Will you read it, please.

(The statement of Mr. Del Guercio referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: It requires the appearance of Cannalonga at room 276, Federal Court House, Post Office Building, 7th and Mission Streets, San Francisco, California, not that it would have made any difference whether it required him to appear at Sutter Street, or whether it required him to appear at Los Angeles or any place else.

The other is dated May 10, 1941, requiring Cannalonga to appear at room 276, Federal Court House, Post Office Building, 7th and Mission Streets, San Francisco, California.

Now, where counsel got the idea there that the subpoenas that this man produced required him to appear at the FBI office I don't know.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, the thing was this: The testimony simply went to, or the questioning of the witness went [6787] to—as to his understanding as to where he was to report.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, if counsel wants to know where I got the idea——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Oh, no, I don't think counsel wants to know anything from any statement except from the witness.

Mr. Grossman: I can back up the statement the FBI is issuing subpoenas to appear at the FBI office.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am telling you I have issued them, will continue to issue them from the FBI office.

Mr. Grossman: They are null and void.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you have a discussion with anyone, Mr. Cannalonga, as to whether or not the subpoena served on you in Seattle required you to come to the hearing room as soon as you got to San Francisco? A. No.

Q. At the first opportunity after you got to San Francisco? A. No.

Q. When you were served with this second subpoena were you told anything as to the reason why a second subpoena was being served on you?

A. No. [6788]

Q. Did you ask? A. No.

Q. Were you surprised that a second subpoena was served on you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Not a bit. I am not surprised at anything that happens to me.

Q. Are you in court in response to a subpoena?

A. I am.

Q. Which subpoena?

A. That first one, I believe.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object.

Presiding Inspector: That is a mere legal conclusion: He is in court, or, at least, in a hearing. It is a court room.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were you ever told by anyone that the defense had had a subpoena issued for you?

A. No, no.

Q. At any time before you came back to San Francisco with Mr. Madala had you seen a transcript or a portion of the transcript of the testimony given by Mr. Crayeraft in this proceeding?

A. No.

Q. At any time did Mr. Madala summarize for you or state for you what the testimony of Mr. Crayeraft was in [6789] addition to that first day when he spoke to you in Seattle? A. No.

Q. Did anyone give you any information about what testimony had been given in this hearing before you talked to Mr. Connelley except Mr. Madala on Thursday in Seattle? A. No.

Q. Is it true, then, that when you talked to Mr. Connelley in San Francisco you knew no more about what had been testified to in this hearing by Mr. Crayeraft than what Mr. Madala had told you?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, your Honor, I will object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: Will you read it, Miss Reporter?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.) A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[6790]

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Grossman, we are ready.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, did you tell Mr. and Mrs. Emel where you were going when you left Seattle?

A. No. What period is this now? Is this on the subpoenas?

Q. When you left Seattle to go to the mountains did you tell Mr. and Mrs. Emel where you were going? A. No.

Q. Did you give them any statement as to where you were going? A. No.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. Uh-huh (affirmative).

Q. When you came back did Mr. and Mrs. Emel tell you that anybody had been looking for you at their place? A. Yes.

Q. What did they tell you on that matter?

A. They said that the Draft Board had been out to the house and some members of the Draft Board wanted to know where I was, and that the FBI agent was—agents were looking for me as there was some kind of a subpoena out for me, and I believe the Immigration man went out there, too.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did they tell you what they had replied to these FBI men and Immigration men? [6791]

A. No.

Q. Did you tell the Emels when you were coming back? A. No.

Q. Did you give them any ideas as to when you were coming back? A. No.

Q. How did you know when to appear in this court to testify on this occasion, this present occasion?

A. What do you mean by that, Mr. Grossman?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that. It goes to the same matter here. He is here.

Mr. Grossman: That is not enough. He can be kidnapped and brought here and, if so, we want to know it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not the Communist Party.

Mr. Grossman: Just a minute! If he came because he recognized that the subpoena obligated him to come at a particular time I would like to know that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is very material, but you may have it. He is here.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How did you know when to come to this court in this hearing this time?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, the subpoena said I had to come down to 'Frisco and I just followed the same procedure that I had done previous.

Q. That is not what I mean. You arrived in San Francisco [6792] Sunday? A. Yes.

Q. How did you pick the day before yesterday, Wednesday, to come to this court, instead of Monday? A. How did I pick that out?

Q. Yes. How did you happen to pick Wednesday to come?

The Witness: I don't get what he means.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he wants to know why you didn't come the first day, or what did happen.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Why didn't you come Monday? Why did you come Wednesday?

A. Well, here's what happened. Sunday I made out a question-and-answer statement to Mr. Connelley and then I was told that I would be told when to come.

Presiding Inspector: You were relying on the Government agents to tell you when to come?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Who told you that?

A. Who told me that?

Q. Yes.

A. One of the Government agents.

Q. Who was it?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. I don't know who it was. It's like I said on [6793] the stand here once before, that at all times I have been in San Francisco I have had a couple of agents with me and the Bureau felt that I needed protection and I was free to go wherever I wanted and that I would be notified when to appear on the stand.

Q. Did Mr. Connelley tell you that?

A. I don't recall if it was Mr. Connelley who said that.

Q. They told you they would notify you when they wanted you, is that right?

A. Yes, I would be notified and told.

Q. When you received that second subpoena did you look at it to see when it required you to come to testify? A. No.

Mr. Myron: This has been gone over twice, I think, already, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: The second subpoena? There hasn't been a question asked about it.

Presiding Inspector: This was the subpoena that was received here?

Mr. Del Guercio: I refer to page 6343, your Honor, in cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: 6343. I haven't that here.

(Whereupon a copy of the transcript was passed by Mr. Del Guercio to the Presiding Inspector.) [6794]

Presiding Inspector: At the top of 6346 there is an answer. The last question is on 6345. No.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

that is the other subpoena. Well, I don't seem to find this particular question.

Mr. Grossman: I think there is some doubt whether it refers to the first or the second. It may refer to the second. But since there is doubt I think there is no question but what we should go into it and clear up the doubt.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. You may ask this particular question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. No, I didn't give it any particular notice. I just signed it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you find out at any time up to now when the second subpoena ordered you to appear to testify? A. No.

Q. Did you have any discussion with anyone from the FBI or the Immigration Service as to when the second subpoena required you to testify?

A. No.

Q. Were you ever told by anyone that the subpoena served on you in Seattle—withdraw that.

Were you ever told by anyone that you should get in [6795] touch with defense counsel when you were in San Francisco because of the service of this first subpoena on you in Seattle? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: May I see that Seattle subpoena?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Grossman: The first one, your Honor, is this one (Indicating).

Presiding Inspector: That is the only one I wish. I might look at the other, too.

(The subpoenas referred to were passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You stated the day before yesterday that on Sunday when you arrived in San Francisco you were introduced to a friend of Mr. Madala. Can you state his name?

A. Did I say a friend of Mr. Madala?

Q. Yes. When you were asked about the various people that you had talked to you said Mr. Madala introduced you to a friend of his.

A. Well, when we got in——

Q. (Interposing): Do you know his name?

A. Well, I am trying to——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, do you know his name?

The Witness: Yes. [6796]

Presiding Inspector: Then give his name.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What's the name? A. Joe.

Q. Joe. You mean that is the FBI man that was one of those who was with——

A. (Interposing): Uh-huh (affirmative). No, not with me. He come down and met the ferry in a car.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. I mean was with you for the next few days? Wasn't Joe one of the FBI men that——

A. (Interposing): Oh, yes.

Q. (Continuing): ——stayed with you all the time?

A. No, not all the time.

Q. Half the time for the next few days?

A. Yes.

Q. Except when you went to sleep.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, he is not giving the witness a chance to talk.

Presiding Inspector: I guess he has in between the spaces answers here.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When was the first time you found out that there was in evidence in this case a statement that was supposed to be a sworn statement by you made in a lawyer's office in Portland?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, there is no such evidence [6797] that he ever made a sworn statement.

Mr. Grossman: Will you read it back, please, Mr. Reporter?

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Witness: I don't know what he means by that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, the question is. When did you first learn of there having been produced here what purported to be a sworn statement made by you in Mr. Lord's office in Portland? When did you first hear about that? [6798]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: Sunday afternoon when Mr. Connelley was asking me when I made out this question-and-answer statement for him.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When was the first time that you had heard that Mr. Jackman had testified here to a conversation with you?

A. When I made out this question-and-answer statement to Mr. Connelley.

Q. All right. Now, when did you first see Mr. Connelley?

A. It was the same day I got into San Francisco; in the afternoon of Sunday.

Q. Did you have any discussion with Mr. Connelley before he started taking this statement with a stenographer taking it down? A. No.

Q. Do you mean the moment he started to talk to you the stenographer started taking it down?

A. Yes.

Q. And he had no discussion with you except a question-and-answer type of discussion?

A. That's all.

Q. In this question-and-answer type of discussion did he ask you whether or not you had made certain statements to Mr. Crayeraft? [6799]

A. He did.

Q. Did he ask you whether or not you had been to an attorney named William Lord's office in Portland?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. He did, in this question-and-answer statement.

Q. Did you admit that you had been to this attorney's office in Portland?

A. No. I told him to the best of my recollection I didn't know who this Lord was and that I had gone up in some kind of an office building.

Q. Did you admit the making of these statements to Mr. Crayeraft that Mr. Connelley asked you about? A. What was that?

Q. Did Mr. Connelley ask you whether you had made certain statements to Mr. Crayeraft?

A. He did.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Connelley as to whether you had made those statements?

A. That I didn't.

Q. That you hadn't made any of them?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Connelley that you had had various discussions with Mr. Crayeraft?

A. I did.

Q. Did Mr. Connelley ask you whether you had a certain discussion with Mr. Jackman? [6800]

A. I believe he asked me that.

Q. What did you tell him as to whether or not you had that discussion?

A. That I didn't know who this Mr. Jackman was, that there was a possibility that I spoke to the man.

Q. Did Mr. Connelley ask you why you left the ship on Wednesday? A. He did.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did Mr. Connelley show you a copy of the transcript of the testimony of either Mr. Craycraft, Mr. Shoemaker or Mr. Jackman? A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Connelley read you what he claimed was a portion of the transcript or any portion of the transcript of this hearing?

Mr. Myron: Now, I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Myron: What he "claimed" it to have been. If you will read from a transcript——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): I am asking the questions, Mr. Myron.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Myron: I will object to the form on the question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is anything offensive in the form or intended to be.

Mr. Myron: No objection if there is no intention. [6801]

Presiding Inspector: "Claimed" means "stated to be."

The Witness: I didn't hear this question. I don't understand it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You don't object to changing the word "claimed" to "stated"?

Mr. Grossman: No.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question with the change in it, Mr. Reporter.

(The question referred to, as amended, was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did Mr. Connelley read you what he stated was a portion of the transcript or any portion of the transcript of this hearing?")

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Well, when he asked me these questions that I answered he had a sort of a book in front of him.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You got the impression that he was reading to you from the testimony of someone at this hearing? A. Yes.

Q. Did you deny making all the statements that he read to you from Mr. Craycraft's testimony?

A. No.

Q. You admitted making some of them?

A. I denied that there was—I told him that there was a possibility I could have made some of the statements and there was a possibility I couldn't.

[6802]

Q. Did he also appear to be reading to you from a transcript of the testimony of Mr. Jackman when he asked you questions about Mr. Jackman?

A. Well, I don't know whether it was a transcript of Mr.——

Q. (Interposing): No. Did he appear to you to be reading from a transcript of Mr. Jackman?

A. What was that again?

Q. When he asked you questions about Mr. Jackman did he appear to be reading from a transcript of the testimony of Mr. Jackman?

A. I don't know whether it was the testimony of Mr. Jackman.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: No, of course you don't.

A. (Continuing): He was reading off like one of those books that you have in front of you.

Presiding Inspector: What you took to be the testimony of Mr. Jackman?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did he also ask you questions about what you said in this meeting in the lawyer's office? Did Mr. Connelley ask you what you had said in this meeting in the Portland lawyer's office?

A. Did he ask me what I had said?

Q. Yes. [6803]

A. He asked me if I had been up to this office and I told Mr. Connelley the same thing I said on the stand here: That I was pretty drunk and I don't remember saying anything up in this office.

Presiding Inspector: Well, did he ask you these particular questions? Did he read particular questions and answers to you and ask you——

The Witness (Interposing): I believe he did.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When was the first time that you told anyone at all that you were very drunk on Saturday and Sunday, May 3rd and 4th? When was the first time that you told anyone that you were very drunk on those two days? A. When?

Q. Yes.

A. When I made out this question and answer.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You mean last Sunday?

A. Last Sunday.

Q. In the presence of Mr. Connelley?

A. Yes. Mr. Connelley and Mr. Means and Mr. Weeks was in there and the stenographer.

Q. Do you keep your discharges? A. Yes.

Q. Will you examine your discharges and tell me whether your did any shipping during 1940 and, if so, on what ships for what periods?

A. I haven't my discharges on me. [6804]

Q. Can you state from memory generally whether you did any shipping in 1940?

A. No. I would have to look up the discharges, different ships.

Q. Don't you have any recollection as to any ships you might have been on?

A. I am liable to say a ship and it could have been a year ahead of that.

Q. Just assume that this is your best recollection and you won't be held to it. I would like the names of any ships that you think you shipped on in 1940.

A. I would rather have my discharges.

Presiding Inspector: We want to finish as much as we can today. Give your best recollection. You are not going to be held to this exactly.

The Witness: In 1940? You see, I don't recall if I was on one of the Alaska Steamship Passenger ships in January of 1940 or not.

Presiding Inspector: What is your best recollection?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The Witness: I could possibly have been on there around that time.

Presiding Inspector: What was her name?

The Witness: That was the—let's see. The sister ship to the Baranof. Mt. McKinley.

Mrs. King: We couldn't hear it. [6805]

Presiding Inspector: He said "The sister ship to the Baranof. Mt. McKinley".

The Witness: The SS Mt. McKinley. I could have possibly been on there in the earlier part of January for about a week.

Presiding Inspector: She was an Alaska passenger ship.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You mean you were on that ship in 1939?

A. I was on there around the holidays, the Christmas holidays.

Q. Of 1939?

A. Of 1939 and possibly part of '40.

Q. Can you think of any other ship that you were on in 1940 or might have been on in 1940?

A. Yes. Then I was on the Branch in 1940; went up to Bristol Bay and then I was on the Clevdon in 1940.

Q. If you had your discharges here could you give me the complete list of ships that you had shipped on in 1940 and the periods on which you had shipped? A. Yes.

Q. Where are your discharges?

A. In Seattle.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. How long would it take you to get them down here?

A. Oh, I could pick up a telephone and phone up to Seattle and have them sent down to me and, oh, I would get them tomorrow sometime by Air Mail Special Delivery. [6806]

Q. Now, were you on the beach in Seattle or Portland or any other place during 1940?

A. Yes, in Seattle.

Q. Any other port? A. No.

Q. Do you know what period you were on the beach in Seattle?

A. Yes. The period that I wasn't on the ships.

Q. Then for the entire period that you were not on ships in 1940 you were on the beach in Seattle, is that correct? A. Yes, correct.

Q. Now, when you were in port in Seattle did you register regularly in the union?

A. Yes.

Q. How often would you register in the union?

A. Every time you get off a ship you register.

Q. You mean you just register once when you get off the ship? A. Yes.

Q. You don't register every two weeks or anything like that?

A. No. You have your card stamped every two weeks; your shipping card.

Q. Which card?

A. When you register they give you a shipping card [6807] you see, and this shipping card—you go to a meeting and you hand the card in as you go into the meeting, and the following day you go down the hall and pick it up. They stamp it, the date on the back of it, showing that you had been to that meeting. If you don't do that you go to the bottom of the list.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. You don't carry that shipping card with you?

A. No. When you ship they pick it up at the hall and issue out a new one when you come in again.

Q. Have you ever taken an automobile trip from Nevada to California? A. No.

Q. Have you ever taken an automobile trip from California to Oregon? A. No.

Q. Have you ever taken an automobile trip from Oregon to Seattle? A. No.

Q. Have you ever stayed——

A. (Interposing) Now, Mr. Grossman, these automobile trips—are you referring to the year 1940 or are you referring to back in 1900? I don't know what years.

Q. All right. Suppose we take the last three years. What is your answer with respect to the questions I have just asked you?

A. The answer is the same. [6808]

Q. It is "No" with respect to all these questions? A. Yes.

Q. For the last three years?

A. Yes, for the last three years.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Have you ever stayed in an auto camp in South San Francisco? A. No, never.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, we have been all over that in the specific questions and now we are going into the general.

Presiding Inspector: No. I don't think they covered it quite in this form.

Mr. Grossman: No, we didn't cover it in this way.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is a little different date.

Presiding Inspector: No. He wants to test the possibility of his having been there according to the testimony.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever stay in an auto camp in Roseburg, Oregon?

A. Never. In fact, Mr. Grossman, I have never stayed at no auto camp in my life, if that will help you out.

Q. Have you ever been at Coulee City or the Coulee Dam?

A. I have been out to the Coulee Dam when they first started building it and made a short trip with a friend of mine. [6809]

Q. And not since then?

A. Not since then.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, may I make a suggestion? And I make it subject to whatever Mr. Del Guercio wishes:

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

The witness has been on the stand for cross examination now for two days. We cannot possibly, I believe, finish our redirect today. There are some things I should like to check over myself, and in a great deal of the time Mr. Gladstein has talked so loud that I have been able to hear him. Now, I think that it would serve no useful purpose to proceed with the redirect now and it would serve the purpose of perhaps shortening it if it might go over to the next session.

I make that suggestion subject to the wishes of Mr. Del Guercio.

Presiding Inspector: How do you feel about it, Mr. Del Guercio? This suggestion was made subject to your wishes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Having been made, I will adopt it.

Presiding Inspector: You would prefer to have it go over?

Mr. Del Guercio: I join.

Mr. Grossman: We have no objection if they want to put on another witness and withdraw him temporarily. We have no objection to anything of that kind. [6810]

Presiding Inspector: Well, they perhaps wouldn't like to do that.

Mr. Gladstein: Since the witness will be here on Monday for redirect, could we ask the Court to ask him, if he has no objection—there was a question that came out during cross as to whether he would send for his discharges.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Will you send for the discharges?

The Witness: Yes, I will.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will telephone at the expense of the Defense.

The Witness: Who is going to pay for the phone call?

Mr. Grossman: We will pay for it.

(Remarks outside the record.)

Presiding Inspector: Then we will take a recess until Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon at 4:00 o'clock P. M. an adjournment was taken until 10:00 A. M. Monday, June 9, 1941.) [6811]

Court room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,
June 9, 1941.

Met, pursuant to adjournment at 10:00 A. M. [6812]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio, you may proceed.

The witness, Cannalonga, was excused, wasn't he?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I believe he was to appear on redirect this morning.

Presiding Inspector: Oh.

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Redirect Examination

Presiding Inspector: I will say to the witness that he understands, I suppose, he is still under oath?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, had you, prior to Saturday, May 3, 1941, been in a hotel room with an attorney like Mr. Gladstein and a 225 pound man? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you, prior to May 4, 1941, that is on a Sunday, been in an office with an attorney, with two attorneys like Mr. Gladstein and Mr. Lord, a court reporter and a 225 pound man?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, when you testified on cross examination that you were being watched while you were on the West Cussetta, who did you have in mind watching you? [6813]

A. Well, I knew it wasn't any Government men; private individuals.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Well, now, did you think that they were friends of Mr. Gladstein and the alien here?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. And did you ever see this carload of men —I believe you said "carload"? A. No, sir.

Q. Who called your attention to the fact that there was a carload of men there?

A. The night Mate.

Q. Just what did he tell you about that?

A. Well, it is like I said when I was cross examined, that the night Mate said there was a carload of fellows that had been watching me ever since we were at that particular pier; that is, Terminal 1. [6814]

Q. Is that where your ship was docked?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is there any doubt in your mind, or—strike that, please.

I believe you also testified on cross examination that you left the West Cussetta for Seattle because you were afraid of the Communist Party: is that correct? A. Correct.

Q. Is there any doubt in your mind but that the Alien here is connected with the Communist Party?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as being immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is material.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, it is material in this way, that the——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, you have already been over it.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——disappearance of the witness from the West Cussetta was due to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I know, but whether he has any doubt or not, I think is immaterial.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, do you know where the West Cussetta is at the present time?

A. I believe she is out around Shanghai right now.

Q. When did she leave Portland or any U. S. port, if you know? [6815]

A. She left after I left the ship, one or two days later.

Q. One of two days later. Now, I believe you have testified that Crayeraft and Mowery and another person saw you, or came to see you on the West Cussetta on Monday and Tuesday and that you were in communication, or had seen Crayeraft on Wednesday morning; is that correct?

A. I didn't see Crayeraft Wednesday morning because I had left the ship.

Q. Did you see anyone Wednesday morning?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is, anyone connected with Mr. Gladstein?

A. No.

Q. Well, now, when you saw Crayeraft Monday morning did he say anything to you about wanting to show you a transcript of the alleged statements you made in the hotel? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Did he say that Mr. Gladstein wanted you to read over what you were alleged to have stated in that lawyer's office on Sunday morning?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you saw Mr. Craycraft again Tuesday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he at that time say that Mr. Gladstein wanted you to read over the alleged statement that you made on that [6816] Sunday in the attorney's office? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he say Mr. Gladstein wanted you to sign that statement that you were alleged to have made in the lawyer's office on Sunday?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone else, anyone either on Monday or Tuesday——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Is there any such claim?

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: Is there any such claim?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, there is not.

Presiding Inspector: Well, you are negativing something which isn't in the evidence. I wouldn't devote much time to it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you have been in the protective custody of Agents of the FBI since Thursday, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Since last—well, a week ago from last Thursday, is that correct?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. Until you appeared here on the stand to testify? A. Yes, sir. [6817]

Q. During that period of time have you been free to go and come? A. I have.

Q. Has your custody, so-called custody been voluntary? A. It is.

Q. Who paid for your expenses while you were in such custody? A. Myself.

Q. Who paid for your room? A. Myself.

Q. Who paid for your amusements?

A. Myself. [6818]

Q. Who paid for your food? A. Myself.

Q. Why were the agents with you during all this period of time?

A. For my own mutual protection.

Mr. Grossman: May I have the answer?

The Reporter: I am not sure I caught it correctly—"for my own mutual protection".

Presiding Inspector: No, no. The answer was: "Because they thought I needed protection."

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was that your answer? A. Yes.

Q. Because you thought who needed protection?

A. No—I said because the Bureau thought I needed protection.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: I think he used the word "they" instead of "Bureau".

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you say "Bureau" you mean the FBI agents, don't you? [6819] A. I do.

Q. Are you sure you saw Craycraft on Tuesday, May 6th?

A. No, I am not, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. As a matter of fact, you didn't see him at all on that day, did you?

A. No, I don't—I don't recall if I saw him.

Q. The last time you saw him was Monday evening, May 5th, when he told you he was going to San Francisco, isn't that correct?

A. I don't believe he told me he was going to San Francisco.

Q. That is the night you gave him the note to Harry Bridges—that is the last time you have ever seen him, isn't it?

A. I believe that is it.

Q. Now, you say the ship was to leave a day or so after the date when you left it?

A. I don't know when she left. I didn't know the itinerary, the exact day she was to leave the Columbia River.

Q. But your understanding, that is on the day you left it, that is, Wednesday morning you left the ship, your understanding was the ship was going to leave port in a day or so?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. That she was going to move down, was supposed to move down to the mouth of the Columbia, Astoria.

Q. And then to the Far East? [6820]

A. No. She was to come back up the river again to a lumber dock.

Q. And ultimately to the Far East?

A. Yes.

Q. You say you were afraid of the Communist Party and that is why you left the ship?

A. Yes.

Q. Why didn't you stay on the ship? Did you think the Communist Party was going to come on the ship and hurt you?

A. Yes; they could have come aboard the ship.

Q. Did you really feel that? A. I did.

Q. Who did you have in mind as possibly coming on the ship?

A. Nobody in mind; no particular person.

Q. Now, the first Mate, or the night Mate, who talked to you about this, about this carload of men, did you regard him as your friend?

A. I did.

Q. Were you sober when you were discussing this with him? A. I was.

Q. Were you aware of the fact that there were Government agencies to whom you could appeal?

A. I was.

Q. Did you do that? A. No. [6821]

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. How long had this ship been at Terminal No. 1 before you left it?

A. Oh, three or four days.

Q. During all that time you had come off and on the ship a number of times, is that correct?

A. No.

Q. You had been to town on a Saturday, you had been to town on a Sunday, you had been to town on a Monday—aren't those things correct?

A. You say I was at town Monday? I went up to the electrical shop, yes.

Q. I mean you were off and on that ship from time to time during the period that the ship was at Terminal No. 1, correct? A. Yes.

Q. And prior to that time, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you, yourself, never saw any carload of men watching you, did you?

A. No; I never gave it any particular notice.

Q. How did you know you weren't watched by Government men? A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't the Mate tell you that an Immigration man had made inquiry concerning you?

A. He did. [6822]

Q. When did he tell you that?

A. He said that the Immigration man came aboard ship to see that I was all right.

Q. When did he tell you the Immigration man had come aboard ship?

A. During the night when I was asleep.

Q. Did he tell you who the man was?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. No, he didn't.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have been all over this before.

Mr. Gladstein: This is something brand new.

Mr. Del Guercio: The testimony was it was a Custom man.

Mr. Grossman: The testimony is both, a Custom man and an Immigration man.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What else was said in this conversation?

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you been over that?

Mr. Gladstein: It is true; I think so.

Presiding Inspector: They haven't gone into that. I think you have been over it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You testified that you took a Greyhound bus to Tacoma? A. Yes. [6823]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. It has all been gone over before.

Mr. Gladstein: I want to ask one or two questions on this, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: If you want to add something I will allow it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, we have the information that the Greyhound Bus people do not run a bus on the route that you say you took one. Would that in any way affect your testimony—do you want to change it?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. There is evidence here——

A. (Interposing) Well, Mr. Gladstein——

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute.

Presiding Inspector: I will let him inquire as to how he knows it was a Greyhound bus.

A. It is a subsidiary of the Greyhound, the North Coast—it was the North Coast. That is the outfit that runs between Portland and Seattle.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. It wasn't the Greyhound bus, but some other kind?

A. The regular bus outfit that runs between Portland and Seattle. [6824]

Q. Did you bring your discharges?

A. Yes.

Q. May I see them?

A. (Producing discharges) You may—and if you want a copy of them you can, Mr. Gladstein. But like I told you, these papers are——

Q. (Interposing) I won't deprive you of them. You don't mind if I take them to the desk?

A. No.

Q. There are three of them?

A. Three of them; yes.

Q. You have handed me three certificates of discharge, Mr. Cannalonga, in response to our request that you produce your discharges?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are these all of the certificates of discharge which you have for the years 1940 and 1941 to date? A. Yes.

Q. Now, for the record——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Is there 1941 there?

The Witness: Yes; there is a 1941 here.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. For the record, I want to show that the witness has a discharge——

A. (Interposing) Here is the first one. (Indicating). [6825]

Q. Which one? A. This one here.

Q. The earliest date is——

A. (Interposing) 5/31/40.

Q. May 31, 1940 to August 5, 1940?

A. Correct.

Q. On the ship——

A. (Interposing) David——

Q. (Continuing) ——David W. Branch. The next——

A. (Interposing) Here (indicating) is the next one.

Q. The next is also on the ship, David W. Branch, and dated from August 12, 1940 until September 2, 1940? A. Yes.

Q. And the third is on the Clevdon——

A. (Interposing) Date of shipment——

Q. (Continuing) The shipment was from November 7, 1940 to April 16, 1941?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

A. Correct. [6826]

Mr. Gladstein: That is all. Just a moment. I have one or two more things.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, do those three discharges that I have just read from into the record represent all the ships on which you sailed or worked during the years 1940 and 1941 to date?

A. Yes, with the exception of the West Cussetta.

Q. Yes, and the only time that you were ever on the West Cussetta is the date you have indicated in your testimony heretofore?

A. Yes, correct, and I called up the Union Hall and they are making out my shipping card and it has not come down yet.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, your Honor, we would like the letters of Mr. Bonham for the purpose of asking a question or two of this witness if those letters are now available.

Presiding Inspector: What letters are these?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, there was one letter of Mr. Bonham which referred to this question of Mr. Cannalonga——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Are these the letters that I was supposed to have?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Have you found them?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't have them. Now, the letter that he refers to from Mr. Bonham is one in which Mr. Bonham advised me, as I recall it, that he was continuing to make [6827] efforts to locate Mr. Cannalonga and that, in his opinion, Mr. Cannalonga's disappearance was caused by the Communist Party, and this was the usual——

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, we can't take the evidence——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) That is what counsel has in mind. He may question the witness on that.

Mr. Grossman: We wonder why the carbon copies of the letters haven't been produced because Mr. Del Guercio assured us he could at least get carbon copies of these letters since they were sent by Mr. Bonham and Mr. Norene.

Presiding Inspector: Can you produce carbon copies?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will apply for copies of them.

Mr. Gladstein: Don't you have any now, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, it is simply my recollection in the Bonham letter—I am not sure about the Norene letter—I think it is also true of the Norene letter—there is a reference of a specific character regarding the search and my recollection is that Mr. Bonham names at least one person to whom he has made inquiry concerning Mr. Cannalonga, and that this occurs in the letter prior to his final conclusion in which he makes the kind of statement that Mr. Del Guercio has just made. It is that information contained in that letter that I desire to ask this witness about.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, do you want to ask him now? [6828]

Mr. Gladstein: I don't have the letters, your Honor, so I can't ask him specifically. I do not recall whether Mr. Bonham said——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Mr. Bonham did not say in that letter——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You better produce the copies. You can do that in a few minutes. Can't you send for them?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, I can send for them.

Presiding Inspector: If you will do that.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't have any questions other than those.

Mr. Del Guercio: One was from Portland and one was from Seattle.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. If you will produce the copies, that is all right.

You step aside, then, Mr. Cannalonga. The next witness.

The Witness: Do I leave the Court Room now, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: No. You can sit over there. I want you about because they want to ask you a few questions when they get these letters.

The Witness: All right, sir.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want him to leave the Court room?

Mr. Del Guercio: Those letters will have to come down from Portland and Seattle.

(Witness temporarily excused.) [6829]

Presiding Inspector: I thought you said you had copies of them.

Mr. Del Guercio: No; I said we would send for copies.

Mr. Grossman: It seems to me we can get them over the telephone with a stenographer on each side taking them down.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps you could do that this noon. I would like to get through with this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: We would too.

Presiding Inspector: You have taken a lot of time about it.

Your next witness.

J. W. FARMER

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: J. W. Farmer, F-a-r-m-e-r.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio.

A. So far as I know, yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Mr. Grossman: May we have about one minute, please, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, of course.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Farmer, how did it happen that you heard these [6833] discussions or had these discussions with respect to the reputation of Mr. Honig for truth and veracity?

A. William Raymond, who is the Executive Secretary of the Seattle Newspaper Guild, died, I believe, in February, and at that time we wanted to appoint an interim secretary to take his place. Nat Honig had volunteered to serve in that capacity without pay and it was discussed among the Executive Board members in the Executive Board meeting. He was subsequently asked to serve as interim secretary, that is, Executive Secretary of the Seattle Guild.

Q. Is that the occasion when there was a discussion of his truth and veracity?

A. There was very much discussion then.

Q. Isn't it unusual to discuss truth and veracity in considering whether a man will make a good secretary of a labor organization?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. Not at all; it is very important, I would say.

Q. And how many people on that Executive Board expressed opinions as to the reputation for truth and veracity of Mr. Honig?

A. Oh, I would say six or eight, something like that.

Q. Did any express the view that his reputation for truth and veracity was not good?

A. Yes, there was one person who made a remark that she questioned—she personally questioned whether he would [6834] make a good secretary or not.

Q. I am talking about his reputation for truth and veracity.

A. I don't recall that any remark was made against him, no, in that respect.

Q. Is it your testimony that six or eight people there said that Honig had a good reputation for truth and veracity?

A. I would say that was implied. I don't know whether they used those exact words or not.

Q. By what was it implied?

A. By things that they said.

Q. What did they say?

A. That Nat had been a good Guild member and that he was working part time on the P.I., had plenty of time to devote to the job.

Q. Now, was there any member of that Executive Board who made the statement either in these words or in substance that Nat Honig has a reputation, a good reputation for truth and honesty, or rather, truth and veracity?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. I don't recall that those words were used.

Q. In substance?

A. I mean certainly it was implied that he did have.

Q. What do you mean by truth and veracity?

A. I mean that the man could be believed under oath if he made any statement under oath or that his spoken word could be believed. [6835]

Q. All right. Now, can you remember what any single individual at that Executive Board meeting said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, name his name and state what he said.

A. I recall one was Burt Sparks, an Executive Board member. When we were discussing who we should have and whether or not Nat would be all right he said that he had known Nat for a long time and certainly thought that he would be very capable in that job.

Q. Do you remember anything else he said?

A. Not at the moment.

Q. Can you think of anything that anyone else in that Executive Board said on this question of truth and veracity?

A. Yes, I can recall that Bill Schultze said substantially the same thing, that he was—Bill also stated that he enjoyed a very good reputation among the fellow workers on the copy desk of the Post Intelligencer.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. Reputation for doing what?

A. As a newspaper man.

Q. Can you think of anything that anyone else there said?

A. Well, they all said—I mean the whole trend of the conversation was substantially the same, but I recall those two particular ones. [6836]

Q. Was there any other occasion when you heard any discussion of the reputation of Nat Honig for truth and veracity?

A. At what particular time?

Q. Any other time? A. Yes.

Q. What was the occasion?

A. I recall one time that Nat Honig had come out to my house, at his own invitation, and at that time, that night, it seems to me there were five or six persons there, other persons there—Burt Sparks was there, Fred Niendorff—N-i-e-n-d-o-r-f-f—was there, Al Brock was there, and Bill Schultze—S-c-h-u-l-t-z-e—was there, and Howard Barnes, who is now Advertising Manager for the Seattle Star, was there. This was prior to the convention, the Guild Convention at Memphis, and we were discussing candidates, and Nat Honig joined in the conversations.

I remember there were a few of us who went into the kitchen, and we were talking in the kitchen and Nat was out in the living room. At that time we discussed Nat, just how he stood: we discussed whether or not, because of his acknowledged change of affiliation, if he was sincerely a good Guild member, if he could be trusted, if we could believe things he said that he had told us at that meeting. It was the opinion among all of us then that that was true, we could.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. That what was true?

A. That he could be believed. [6837]

Q. Who was in that kitchen?

A. Fred Niendorff, Burt Sparks, Al Brock; myself, and there may have been others, but I don't recall who.

Q. Did everyone in the kitchen agree on all those things? A. That is correct.

Q. Do you think of any other occasion—let me ask you this before you answer the last question: Has there been any discussion since this testimony here in this Bridges' hearing concerning his reputation for truth and veracity?

A. Yes, sir; there has been informal discussions.

Q. Have you discussed with anyone his reputation for truth and veracity after he testified here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you name an occasion?

A. Yes; it was after a Guild meeting—I don't recall which meeting—that there must have been, or, 25 or 30 of us went up to a restaurant after the meeting. We sat at a big long table, and were all seated together, and Nat Honig and his testimony down here was the subject of conversation.

Q. I am concerned with whether his reputation for truth and veracity was discussed?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. I don't recall whether it was or not. It was generally conceded by all of us.

Q. What do you mean by "It was generally conceded by all of us"?

A. We never had occasion to doubt anything that Nat [6838] Honig had ever said.

Q. You mean you had never had any occasion to doubt his truth and veracity? A. Right.

Q. Do you know whether the other 25 there had had any occasion to doubt it?

A. I couldn't speak for them. I can speak only for myself.

Q. You are only speaking for yourself when you say that.

A. In that particular case; yes.

Presiding Inspector: Did they express any doubt?

The Witness: No. There was no doubt expressed.

Presiding Inspector: And so that far you speak for all of them?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: They didn't express any doubt?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you ever heard that Nat Honig was accused of stealing books from the Frederick & Nelson Department store? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever hear that he had been accused of stealing books for a long period of time from that department store? A. No.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object to that unless [6839] counsel states what he means by "accused." Certainly the testimony here is that there was no charge made against Nat Honig?

Presiding Inspector: I think I will allow it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever hear of an occasion when Nat Honig was arrested, or taken into custody, by a store detective in connection with a charge of stealing books from the Frederick & Nelson Department Store?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't quite the evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not the evidence.

Presiding Inspector: As I understand it, a definite statement was made by Honig that he was not arrested.

Mr. Grossman: I said "taken into custody."

Presiding Inspector: That is "arresting"—I don't understand the difference.

Mr. Grossman: Detained, then.

Presiding Inspector: No; that he voluntarily went to the Police Station.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember hearing about an occasion——

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that right?

Mr. Grossman: I will put it that way—I want to describe the occasion simply for the present.

[6840]

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever hear of an occasion when Nat Honig, in connection with a charge of stealing some books, went to the Police Station and the books were supposed to have been stolen, if from anyone, from the Frederick & Nelson Department Store? Do you remember that occasion, or have you ever heard of it?

A. I remember an incident of that type; yes.

Q. Did you ever hear of it? A. Yes.

Q. Was there ever any discussion among these people whom you have mentioned as having discussed his reputation for truth and veracity of that incident?

A. Yes; no lengthy discussion.

Q. Did you ever discuss his reputation for truth and veracity after that incident?

A. I don't know whether there had—I don't recall any occasion where that came up.

Q. Did you ever hear, that before this occasion that I have referred to, Nat Honig had taken books regularly from the Frederick & Nelson Department Store without paying for them?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not in evidence at all.

Presiding Inspector: There is no such testimony.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no such evidence in the record and—— [6841]

Presiding Inspector: I have ruled in your favor, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment, your Honor.

On the question of whether in cross examining a

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

character witness who testifies as to the good character of a witness, whether you can go into matter that hasn't yet been proved, which may be rumor, so far as this witness is concerned, Mr. Wigmore has quite a bit of discussion——

Presiding Inspector: I don't care what Wigmore says.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Wigmore states the general rule, and let me state the reasons why he takes——

Presiding Inspector: Let me see that.

Mr. Grossman: Section 988.

("Wigmore on Evidence" was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Grossman: As a matter of fact, he doesn't agree with part of the rules——

Presiding Inspector: Pardon?

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Wigmore states it is the rule in many jurisdictions, though he disagrees with part of them. I am not quoting Wigmore, but his quotation of decisions, rather.

Presiding Inspector: You haven't established that he knows of any such rumors.

Mr. Grossman: I have a right to ask him.

Presiding Inspector: Why don't you ask him? You [6842] haven't asked him.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Farmer, have you ever heard of a story, or a rumor, or a charge, that Nat Honig had taken many books, without paying for them, from the Frederick & Nelson Department Store before this occasion when he went to the Police Department?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. He said "No."

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you ever heard that mentioned?

Presiding Inspector: He said "No."

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you ever heard, Mr. Farmer, that Nat Honig asked certain Executive Officers of the National Office of the Newspaper Guil to write a reference for him that he had worked for certain newspapers, for whom he had not worked?

A. I will say on that, that I read an account of it in the paper.

Q. When did you read an account of it in the paper?

A. I don't remember the date. It was during his testimony here at this trial. [6843]

Q. Did you ever check that story after reading about it?

A. I had no occasion to.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Honig about it?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss it with any of these people that expressed to you, according to your testimony, the view that his reputation for truth and veracity was good?

A. No.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. Mr. Farmer, can you state to me how you can testify here that his reputation for truth and veracity is good without having investigated such a story when you read it?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question, if your Honor please, as being improper.

Mr. Grossman: Let me ask a preliminary question and I will come back to that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you consider that if Mr. Honig did what you read in the newspaper he did, that it was consistent with his being a man of truth and veracity?

A. Are you asking for an opinion?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't in evidence, and that isn't what the newspaper said.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know about that, but I will allow this question, although I don't know how you are going to [6844] go any further with it.

Go ahead. I will allow this anyway.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. If what you read in the newspaper was correct about a false reference, would you say that was consistent with the truth and veracity of Mr. Honig?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that unless counsel tells the witness that this so-called slander appeared in a Communist newspaper.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Grossman: Let the witness testify now, and perhaps he will so testify after hearing that.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Presiding Inspector: I think both statements are out of order.

I will allow the question.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember my question?

A. No.

Q. I ask you whether such an application for a false reference would be inconsistent with the truth and veracity of Mr. Honig as you knew it?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will state it—not inconsistent with his reputation, but inconsistent with being a man of truth and veracity. [6845]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Whether you would think that he could be a man of truth and veracity and do that?

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no evidence on that.

Presiding Inspector: But he is testing his idea of what truth and veracity is. I will allow it.

A. May I answer it in this way: That if a man had given me his spoken word on something, and later had been proved that what he told me was not true, then certainly I would question his truthfulness.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You haven't answered the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: That answers the question.

A. (Continuing): You are asking an academic question.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Assuming the truth of what you read in the newspaper, would you say that Mr. Honig was a man of truthfulness and veracity?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is highly improper.

Mr. Del Guercio: What newspaper is he referring to?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I am going to repeat the facts and forget the newspaper. Would you say that a man could ask for a reference from the National Offices of his organization to the effect that he had worked on newspapers that he had not worked on, [6846] and still be a man of truth and veracity?

A. Not if that were true.

Q. Now, you say you made no investigation whatsoever as to the truth of this charge——

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said.

Mr. Del Guercio: What charge?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are you friendly with Nat Honig?

A. What do you mean "friendly"?

Q. How friendly are you with him?

A. I have know him over a long period of time. I have known his wife very well. I knew her when she was working at the Star before they married.

Q. How long have you known her?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. I would meet him at Guild meetings and various caucus meetings where I met Nat. I discussed—we were fellow delegates to the Washington State CIO Convention in 1941. He rode with me in my car to that convention. We were together all the time during that convention. I think we were there a day and a half.

Q. Have you ever met him socially?

A. Yes. I have had dinner at his house.

Q. How many times? A. I don't recall.

Q. About how many times? [6847]

A. Four or five times, I would say.

Q. Did he ever eat at your house, come to your house? A. Yes.

Q. About how many times?

A. Four or five. I might add that my dinner dates, because of the hours that I work, I very seldom have friends in for dinner or go out. I work right over the normal dinner period. I work from 12:00 to 9:00.

Q. That being true, this would be a large number of occasions, considering your program wouldn't it?

A. I would say so.

Q. Then you would consider yourself rather friendly with him, by your definition of the word "friendly"? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you know his wife before he married her? A. Yes.

Q. Were you friendly with her before you ever met him?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. What do you mean by that?

Q. Your own definition of "friendliness."

A. I never had dinner with her; no.

Q. No implications. I want to know whether you considered yourself a friend of hers before you ever met him?

A. I organized her into the Guild.

Q. Have you ever run on the same slate in the union with Mr. Honig? [6848]

A. Yes; yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Twice, as I recall.

Q. When was the last time?

A. I think the last time was for delegates to the Washington State CIO Council, as I recall.

Q. When was the first time?

A. I believe he was on the—he was on the slate of officers. He was nominated for Secretary, I believe, for the Guild in 1941.

Q. When was that? A. 1941.

Q. 1941?

A. That is right. The election was held in January of 1941.

Q. It was an election when you were elected?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was the entire slate elected?

A. Well, I don't quite understand your definition of "slate." I mean all these persons were nominated for office.

Q. I thought there might have been a slate of candidates, that is, all you candidates got together and said, "We are all running on the same program and believe in the same things. Vote for all of us." Did that take place?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. As I recall it, there was a pamphlet, or something of that type, gotten up. I didn't participate in it. I [6849] didn't know of any candidate for office who did participate in it.

Q. I see. Was everyone on that list elected?

A. I don't recall if I saw the list.

Q. Was Mr. Honig elected Secretary?

A. No.

Q. When did you first believe that Mr. Honig had a good reputation for truth and veracity?

A. Well, that is rather hard to answer because I never thought otherwise. I never had had any occasion to doubt whether he was. I mean, as far as I am concerned, a man's truth and veracity is above question until it is proven otherwise.

Q. That being true, can you explain why there was a discussion of why he was a man of truth and veracity in this Executive Board meeting?

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no such testimony.

The Witness: I think I answered that as a matter of going to the qualifications of a person for that job.

Presiding Inspector. I will take it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How long have you known Mr. Honig?

Mr. Del Guercio: He has already testified to that.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. Since 1937, approximately. [6850]

By Mr. Grossman.

Q. Do you know Mr. Honig was a Communist during part of the time you knew him?

A. Do I know he was a Communist?

Q. Yes. A. I had heard he was.

Q. When was the first time you heard he was a Communist?

A. I don't recall the occasion.

Q. Well, you believe that he was a man of truth and veracity during the time that you heard he was a Communist, isn't that correct?

A. I had heard nothing to the contrary.

Q. Who talked to you for the first time about testifying in this proceeding?

A. Mr. Roth.

Q. Mr. who? A. Roth.

Q. Do you know who he is A. Pardon?

Q. Do you know who he is?

A. He said he was a special agent from the FBI.

Q. When did he first talk to you?

A. Last Friday.

Q. Did he, or anyone else, tell you how he happened to go to you? A. No, [6851]

Q. What was the first thing he said to you?

A. He questioned me about a story that had appeared in the Guild Reporter. The story in the Guild Reporter—I mean, there was a tag line on another story. It was sent in by a Seattle newspaper. As President of the Newspaper Guild, I sent the story to Fred Meyer, who was editor of the Guild Reporter. My name appeared in that story as having sent the story to the Guild Reporter.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. What did he say about that story—how did he say that the story—withdraw that.

What was your discussion on this story, in addition to what you have stated?

A. Whether or not the story had been written, whether or not it was approved by the Chapter meeting.

Q. When did he begin to discuss with you your testifying here?

A. Well, it was during that same conversation. He asked me about the story, I mean the meeting at which the story was approved and passed by the membership, and if I had seen the story in the Guild Reporter as it came out and was published.

Q. Are you leading up to the question of how he mentioned your testifying here—that is what I am concerned with? A. Yes.

Q. And that is when he first mentioned you testifying here? A. Yes. [6852]

Q. What was his first words here with reference to your testifying here?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the witness remembers.

A. As I recall, he asked if I would testify here.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. As to what?

A. As to the story as it appeared in the Guild Reporter. And he also asked about Nat Honig, asked how long I had known Nat Honig, what I knew of him, how long he had been a member of the Guild, what was his record in the Guild. And after I made these statements he asked if I would testify to that effect.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. Did he ever use these words—withdraw that. Did he ever ask you what the reputation of Nat Honig was for truth and veracity in those words?

A. I don't recall whether he did or not in those words. [6853]

Q. Did he ever ask you whether you had discussed with anyone whether Nat Honig was a man of truth and veracity?

A. I don't recall that he asked it in that way. He asked if I had ever had any discussion with any Guild members about Nat and I told him yes, we had had much discussion.

Q. Is he the only one that you discussed the question of testifying with?

A. Before I got to San Francisco?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever discuss it with Nat Honig?

A. No.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. I told—no, there was no discussion. Nat was working on the desk. I might state that when Mr. Roth asked if I would testify I told him that I was awfully busy—it was just before the Guild Convention—I was awfully busy and that I would go if I was subpoenaed. I would have to go. I mean, there was nothing else I could do.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. I am concerned with Nat Honig now.

A. When I saw Nat it was late Friday afternoon. He was on the copy desk on the P. I. I didn't go up to see Nat; I was up there to see the Chairman of the P. I. Unit, Bernie Jacobson.

The Reporter: Spell that, please.

The Witness: B-e-r-n-i-e Jacobson.

We were discussing some contract matters on the P. I. Nat [6854] was sitting over on the copy desk. I went over and spoke to him and some of the other boys on the desk. I told him that Mr. Roth had been to see me and had said that I might be subpoenaed to testify in this hearing.

Q. Have you had any social contact with Mr. Honig after he testified here?

A. When did he testify here? Sometime in May, wasn't it?

Mr. Grossman: Do you know, Mr. Gaiser?

Mr. Gaiser: I can probably approximate it from this list of the reporters.

Mr. Gladstein: It was in April.

Mr. Grossman: It would be in April.

Mr. Gaiser: The first document introduced on Honig's testimony was April 21st.

Mr. Grossman: Approximately April 21st.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Could you describe those occasions for us?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I don't believe that is necessary.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. As I recall it——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take it briefly.

The Witness: Beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: Have you been to his house? [6855]

The Witness: Not to his house.

Presiding Inspector: Or the theatre with him? Had luncheon with him?

The Witness: Yes, after Board meetings and after Guild meetings we would all go out and have coffee together.

Presiding Inspector: These are merely suggestive kind of things.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you had any social contact with him outside of social contact after Guild meetings?

A. No.

Q. You haven't had lunch with him?

A. No.

Q. He hasn't been to your house for dinner or vice-versa?

A. No; I mean, I am in the midst of moving so I don't have any place where anybody could come.

Q. You haven't been to his house?

A. No; he just moved and I don't know what his present address is.

Q. Have you ever worked with Nat Honig?

A. What do you mean by that?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. Worked closely with him in the newspaper business?

A. No; he has always—I have always been on the [6856] Star while Nat was in Seattle.

Q. And he has always been——

A. (Interposing) On the Timber Worker or the Post Intelligencer.

Q. He has never worked on the Star?

A. No, not so far as I know; I mean, he has not in the last five and one-half years.

Q. You stated that you had participated in certain caucuses with Nat Honig. What were these caucuses?

A. Well, they were caucuses of Guild members. They were not in any sense of the word closed caucuses. They were usually held, in most places—I mean, they were held before a Guild meeting or between Guild meetings. The policy was discussed, organizing problems were discussed.

Q. Were these official meetings of the Union?

A. No; they were caucuses.

Q. Well, they weren't recognized by the Union as an official part of its activities?

A. I don't understand what you mean by that.

Q. I mean, the Union—let me put it this way:—

A. (Interposing) It was not called by the—I mean, I didn't call the caucuses as President of the Guild.

Q. Let me put it this way: There are many different types of Union meetings. There are meetings where the whole Union meets in a membership meeting. Then, you may have committee meetings of the Union. You may have units, the Post Intelligen- [6857] cer and Star Units. All are official meetings of the Union although they may not take in all the members.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

In that sense were these caucuses official meetings of the Union? A. No.

Q. These caucuses were meetings of certain members of the Union to draft and put over a certain policy of the Union; is that what they generally were for?

A. What do you mean by "draft and put over"?

Q. What were they for?

A. Nothing could be passed without the majority of the membership.

Q. What was the reason for these caucus meetings?

A. Discussion of organizing problems.

Q. What was the need for meetings?

A. There is always a very great need in any Union to discuss organizing.

Q. What was the need of discussing these things in non-Union meetings?

A. Many times——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Your Honor, I object.

The Witness: (Continuing) —particularly in the copy section of the Post Intelligencer where there are twenty men, there they are not only able to get to——

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

By Mr. Grossman: [6858]

Q. (Interposing) This was activity conducted with Mr. Honig. I want to know its detail.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is perfectly obvious a group met previous to meetings.

Mr. Grossman: I want to know the detail, what kind of a group it was.

Presiding Inspector: Why don't you ask him that?

Mr. Grossman: How closely it worked, and so on. I think it is of some relevance.

Presiding Inspector: We had the same thing, in a way, in these Albion Hall caucuses.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, and we went into detail. I want a little more detail here.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was the need for these meetings?

Presiding Inspector: Not the need of them.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What did you feel to be the need?

Presiding Inspector: Whom did they consist of? How was this caucus gotten up?

Mr. Grossman: Answer the Judge's question, now, to take the place of mine.

The Witness: How were the caucuses called?

Presiding Inspector: Who were the members of it?

The Witness: They were called. There is no membership [6859] in a caucus, or these caucuses. Any person who is a Guild member may attend these caucuses. They are pretty widely known, I mean, it is known through all the plants that a caucus is going to be called to discuss certain matters, organizing, for instance, or what we shall do on the current time situation. Some situation will come up, some particular situation will come up and some of the boys on the P. I. or the Times or the Star will contact other persons and ask them to invite other people; I mean, it is rather a mushroom effect to discuss particular problems which come up.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were there no limitations or qualifications as to who could attend and participate in these caucuses?

A. Yes, limitations and qualifications in that they must be Guild members.

Q. That is the only one? A. That is right.

Q. They didn't have to believe in a certain policy or anything like that? A. That is right.

Q. Did Nat Honig play any active part in these caucuses?

A. As I recall, he attended most of the caucuses. When he was not working he would attend the caucuses.

Q. Who arranged the caucuses? Did you?

[6860]

A. No.

Q. Did Nat Honig? A. No.

Q. Was it out of such a caucus that this slate came into being that we were talking about?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. I don't know——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Will you read that, please?

Presiding Inspector: "Was it out of such a caucus that this slate came into being that we were talking about"?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You stated some printed matter was put out listing all these candidates, all these particular candidates and asking that they all be voted for. Do you know whether the caucuses had anything to do with printing that printed matter?

A. No caucuses that I ever attended did.

Q. Well, do you believe that the caucuses had something to do with that?

Mr. Myron: He said he didn't.

A. Do I what?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you believe that the caucuses had something to do with that?

Mr. Myron: I object to that question.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. I don't know of every caucus there is in Seattle. [6861]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you believe that the caucuses had something to do with putting out that printed matter?

A. I have no belief that a caucus did that.

Q. Have you any idea as to who put out that printed matter establishing a slate?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor, as being immaterial and irrelevant, not even remotely connected.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

Can you tell anything about how this slate got out or where it came from?

Mr. Del Guercio: He testified that there wasn't any slate, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: He said that certain people were nominated ,and we popularly call those who are nominated the slate if they were nominated by a group at all.

A. I don't—I mean, as far as that printed matter is concerned I don't recall whether it carried a name. I think it did carry a name of some kind as to who put it out. If we had a copy of it, I mean, I would recognize what it was.

Presiding Inspector: You don't recall?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: Did you have anything to do with it?

The Witness: No. [6862]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you object to it when you saw it ?

A. No, I didn't object to it because there was printed matter, I think—oh, at various times in the Guild there has been printed matter which has been distributed.

Q. Did these caucuses meet regularly.

A. No.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. About how many caucuses would you say you have attended with Nat Honig?

A. I have attended with Nat Honig?

Q. Yes.

A. Over what period?

Q. Since you have known him?

A. Beg your pardon?

Q. Since you have known him?

A. Well, I don't have any way to determine that.

Q. How long have these caucuses been in existence?

A. As long as the Guild, I would imagine.

Q. Well, do you know how long you have known about them?

A. Since I have been a Guild member I have known there has always been caucuses.

Q. Have you attended caucuses since you have been a Guild member?

A. Yes, off and on.

Q. The same kind of caucus that you are now describing? [6863]

A. Yes, I mean, where a group of individual members of the Guild will get together: I mean, we call it a caucus, if four or five Guild men were to meet on the street, or get through their run in a particular time and they go down to have a cup of coffee together and they discuss Guild matters; that would be a caucus.

Q. Now, did these caucuses ever decide on a program to carry out in the Union meeting?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. Well, a caucus itself has no standing so far as legality of the Union is concerned. When they meet together they meet to discuss certain problems which they think will probably come up, or which have developed, and they get a general agreement among those persons who attend the caucus. Thus caucuses—I recall one caucus where, I think, there was some 80-odd Guild members present at this caucus. It so happened that that caucus was larger—the caucus itself was larger than a previous membership meeting. At this discussion that took place it was decided—certain things were decided, I mean, one of which was that the organizing drive on a particular paper must take place. That discussion was held before the—during—in this caucus before a general membership meeting so that when they attended the general membership meeting these persons had the benefit of discussion previous to the meeting.

Q. Didn't you understand that all the members of the [6864] caucus were to carry out the decision of the caucus in the membership meeting?

A. Not at all, not at all. There is nothing binding at all.

Q. Did you feel that it bound you?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

A. (Interposing) Not at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) I think we have reached the limit here in connection with this. We have been very patient.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, there is no question pending now.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is not even remotely connected with the subject under inquiry, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: Apparently this witness and Mr. Honig have been working together in a type of work——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You have got that all shown.

Mr. Grossman: (Continuing) —in a type of organization. I am concerned with exactly how much of an organization it was.

Presiding Inspector: How does that make any difference? Isn't that pretty remote?

Mr. Grossman: I don't think so. I think that is the reason he is testifying here, your Honor. I think that connection with Mr. Honig carried through in various ways, his [6865] social life, his trade union and so on.

Presiding Inspector: If he weren't connected with Mr. Honig he wouldn't know anything about his reputation.

Mr. Grossman: There is much more to it than that.

Presiding Inspector: That is your contention, of course, that there is more to it than that.

Mr. Grossman: I mean, there is a lot closer connection than just——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Why don't you bring it out instead of beating around the bush.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Grossman: Then don't object to it when I am bringing it out.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, it was a theory of this caucus after a decision was made that the members of the caucus, or most of them, or the good members of it would carry out the decision in the Union meeting?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

A. Absolutely not.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever go into a meeting and take a different position than this caucus took?

A. Frequently.

Q. Do you know whether Nat Honig did? [6866]

A. Frequently.

Q. Can you explain why you took a different position in the Union than you took in the caucus?

Mr. Del Guercio: Is it necessary to go into the reasons also as to why he took a different attitude——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take it. I think it will be shorter.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Why did you depart from what decision there may have been in the caucus in the Union meeting?

A. Because I didn't believe the same as some people.

Q. Why did you hold the caucus in the first place if you weren't going to carry out the decision reached in the caucus in the membership meeting?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is within the scope of this inquiry.

The Witness: Will you restate the question again, please?

Mr. Grossman: Will you read it, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. A caucus was held, as I think I said——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) I object. He has already stated the purpose of the caucuses, what happened in the caucuses. [6867]

Presiding Inspector: State it again.

The Witness: The caucus was for general discussion.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are you claiming you couldn't have general discussion in your membership meetings of your Union? A. Not at all.

Q. Why couldn't that discussion suffice without a private meeting to have such a discussion?

A. Because of the length of time——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I object to that as being a debate between counsel and the witness.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

The Witness: There is a matter of time involved. Meetings are called at 8:30 and there are many times when discussions—you can have previous discussions on any subject, and then, you can go in informed on all sides of that particular question. It takes up less time in the membership meeting. However, our meetings have not been too notable for their lack of time or their shortness of duration.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When you had caucuses did you take steps to get all sides of the questions you intended to discuss represented in your caucuses?

A. Did I take steps? [6868]

Q. Did anyone who formed the caucuses, to your knowledge?

A. There were many differences of opinion.

Q. I am asking you whether any steps were taken to see to it that the opposite views on the questions you were going to discuss would be represented in the caucus?

A. I would say yes.

Q. Did the Union ever approve the policy of holding caucuses before the meetings?

A. Yes, that has been generally approved. I don't know that it ever was put as a motion and accepted.

Q. You know how things are decided in Unions, don't you.

A. By membership vote, yes.

Q. That is right. Did your Union ever officially take any action approving the policy of holding a caucus before or between meetings?

A. I think I might state that the policy——

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Q. (Interposing) Just a moment. Answer yes or no.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute.

Mr. Grossman: Then you may explain all you wish.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is proper.

Mr. Grossman: Yes or no first. Then you may explain if it needs explanation.

The Witness: Whether or not——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I don't think he can [6869] answer yes or no.

Presiding Inspector: If he can't, he can say so.

The Witness: I can't answer yes or no to that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did the Union ever pass a motion or resolution approving the policy of holding caucuses between meetings or before meetings?

A. I should say that it has been generally approved.

Q. Yes or no?

A. I can't answer yes or no to that.

Q. You don't know whether a motion or resolution was passed?

A. Approving caucuses?

Q. Approving these particular caucuses, yes?

A. I mean, the question is negative in itself.

Q. All right. You can't answer the question, is that it, yes or no?

A. I can answer it, yes, if you give me an opportunity——

Q. (Interposing) Can you answer it yes or no? That is the question.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, he is not required to answer a question yes or no.

Mr. Grossman: I am not required to listen to an explanation if he says it can't be answered yes or no. [6870]

Mr. Del Guercio: If you don't want an answer to the question——.

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) If he doesn't know if a motion was passed by the Union I don't want his answer.

Presiding Inspector: You say you don't know whether or not a motion was passed?

The Witness: Well, a motion was never made, to my knowledge; a motion was never made to allow or disallow caucuses.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

The Witness: May I add to that question? May I add to the answer?

Presiding Inspector: Your answer, yes.

The Witness: I recall that a recess was called at a meeting so that a caucus might be held and that motion was made, put on the floor and was seconded and was passed and a caucus was held.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You mean a temporary recess in a meeting?

A. That is correct.

Q. For a few minutes?

A. I don't know that there was any stated time.

Q. Do you consider that approval of this policy of conducting caucuses that you were holding?

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

A. I would say so.

Q. All right. What was the question that was to be [6871] discussed at this caucus?

A. I don't recall.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, now we are going pretty far afield, I believe, certainly nothing connected with the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) He says he doesn't recall.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I think we could proceed more rapidly if we had the recess now.

Presiding Inspector: No, I think we will go right along and finish this subject, if we can.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did the Seattle Newspaper Guild ever pass a resolution against caucuses? A. No

Q. You are sure of that now?

A. Not that I recall. I beg your pardon?

Q. You are sure of that?

A. To my knowledge no resolution has ever been passed against caucuses.

Q. Is there some doubt in your mind?

A. No.

Q. Have you yourself ever taken any position openly before the meetings of the Seattle Guild opposing caucuses before or between meetings?

A. No. [6872]

Q. You are sure of that now? A. Positive.

Q. I am not concerned with opposing your particular policies——

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He has just answered the question.

Presiding Inspector: He is asking if he is sure of it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I am not referring to your caucuses. I am referring to the question of caucuses generally. Have you ever taken the position against the holding of caucuses between meetings or before meetings?

A. No; I have always believed it a very democratic procedure.

Q. Do you know whether Honig has ever taken that position in your local Union?

A. I don't know whether he has ever taken any position on it at all. I don't know that it ever came up.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just one question. Counsel referred to a story.

Mr. Gladstein: Counsel did not refer to a story, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: No, he referred to a rumor.

[6873]

Mr. Del Guercio: No, I have in mind, if your Honor please, when counsel cross examined as to when he was first contacted by an FBI Agent and the witness said it was because of a story that appeared——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, yes.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing)——In some paper. I am asking him about that story.

Mr. Gladstein: The witness mentioned it; counsel did not.

Presiding Inspector: Do you think that is of any materiality?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, your Honor.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What story was that, Mr. Farmer?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think we want to go into that. Show whether or not it referred to Honig.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did it refer to Honig? A. Yes.

Q. In what way did it refer to Honig?

Mr. Gladstein: That is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: No, we can't get into that.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [6874]

Q. Was it in connection with a resolution passed by the Seattle Newspaper Guild?

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it.

Mr. Gladstein: It is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: We don't know anything about it. It doesn't matter.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, on cross examination counsel there asked a question as to whether or not Honig's reputation for truth and veracity had ever been brought up.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, can't I go into that matter?

Mr. Gladstein: In so far as redirect refers to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) In so far as they went into it, but they haven't gone into——

Mr. Guercio: (Interposing) They brought out this story.

Presiding Inspector: No, they didn't bring out the story. They said simply there was something in the newspaper that brought this man into contact. Now, it doesn't make any difference what it was. It may be that he kept a chicken farm; we don't care; it doesn't make any difference.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I desire to make an offer of proof at this time.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. [6875]

Mr. Del Guercio: I desire to show through this witness that at a certain time——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) One moment. I will object to the offer of proof as being immaterial and improper.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you should do anything more. Do you want to offer the statement in the newspaper?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not the statement in the newspaper, if your Honor please, but a resolution that was passed by the Seattle Newspaper Guild relative to Nat Honig with reference to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We can't take such proof; it would be hearsay.

(Testimony of J. W. Farmer.)

Mr. Grossman: We can produce lots of resolutions.

Presiding Inspector: We could not take a resolution of that kind.

Mr. Del Guercio: No more questions.

Mr. Grossman: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, we will take a recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The next witness is being called.

Presiding Inspector: Are you a witness?

Mr. Eigner: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Come right over here.

[6876]

W. A. EIGNER

called as a witness in rebuttal for the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your name?

A. W. A. Eigner.

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: E-i-g-n-e-r.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Eigner?

A. In Portland.

Q. And a subpoena was served upon you to bring a certain document. Did you bring it?

(Testimony of W. A. Eigner.)

A. Yes sir.

Q. May I see it?

A. (Handing document to Mr. Del Guercio).

Q. I will ask you first where are you employed?

A. At the State Liquor Store.

Q. State Liquor Store where?

A. Broadway, Portland, Oregon.

Q. How long have you been so employed?

A. Two months.

Q. And where is that store located?

A. On Broadway and Davis. [6877]

Q. Broadway and——

A. (Interposing): Davis.

Q. Broadway and Davis. Were you so employed on May 3rd, 1941? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at what hours were you employed at that place on that date?

A. From 3:30 in the afternoon until 11:00 at night.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I have a document here from the Oregon Liquor Control Commission dated May 3, 1941; 41887-36 to Store No. 23 showing that on that date there was sold—I will ask the witness here.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. This document shows—what does it show was on that day, Mr. Eigner?

A. No. 495-B, that is a Government House rum.

Q. How much?

A. A Fifth, Government House rum.

(Testimony of W. A. Eigner.)

Q. Government House rum. Who purchased that?

A. A fellow by the name of Craycraft.

Q. Now, did Craycraft sign that receipt?

A. Yes sir, as far as I know.

Q. Now, under the law of the State of Oregon can anyone—who could purchase liquor?

A. Nobody unless they got a permit.

Q. Does the permit have the name of the purchaser, [6878] the person? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it have the signature?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you compare the signature on the permit with the signature on that slip?

A. No, we don't hardly look at the name on the permit.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence, if your Honor please.

Mr. Grossman: We object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Putting in evidence like this which has only the purpose of corroborating a minor part of the witness' story we think is completely irrelevant in any case.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is it denied that——

Mr. Grossman: You are making a legal argument, Mr. Del Guercio.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it at present. It isn't disputed.

Mr. Grossman: It hasn't been testified; it isn't disputed.

(Testimony of W. A. Eigner.)

Mr. Del Guercio: When Craycraft was on the witness stand he didn't say anything about purchasing some liquor for Cannalonga, as a matter of fact, he said he never purchased a drink for Cannalonga. He was asked that question. [6879]

Mr. Grossman: Does this prove he purchased liquor for Cannalonga?

Presiding Inspector: No; it proves that he purchased liquor——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He purchased liquor on May 3, 1941.

Mr. Grossman: It has not been disputed, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is any dispute. I don't think it reaches any issue in the case.

Mr. Del Guercio: It contradicts, I think, in a way, Craycraft's testimony.

Presiding Inspector: Have it marked for identification. I will consider whether I will receive it or not.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we ask that a photostatic copy be substituted?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: This is a public document.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but I don't see its materiality.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is to contradict Roseo Craycraft's testimony on the stand here that he at no time purchased a drink for Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: This doesn't show that.

(Testimony of W. A. Eigner.)

Mr. Del Guercio: In a way. Cannalonga's testimony is that Rosco Craycraft stopped at a certain liquor store in [6880] Portland, Oregon, and purchased for him a quart of Government House rum. Now, on May 3, 1941, we have here a document which shows that on that day Rosco Craycraft did purchase some Government House rum. It doesn't show, of course, that he purchased it for Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: But it does have some connection.

Presiding Inspector: Very remote, very remote, indeed.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, there is some connection certainly. I believe we are entitled to show and to produce this evidence even though it may be a little remote.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, may I suggest what this opens up? If this is permitted, then there has been no contradictory evidence on this, it means that Mr. Craycraft, for example, for all the details of his testimony can produce such corroboration, produce a street car conductor to show he was on a street car, produce a gas station man to show he stopped and bought some gas if he happened to testify to it. We think it is completely irrelevant, not only remote, unless it is in dispute and it isn't at the present time.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is in dispute.

Mr. Del Guercio: I thought counsel wanted the whole truth.

(Testimony of W. A. Eigner.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is any dispute. [6881]

Mr. Del Guercio: Will that be stipulated?

Presiding Inspector: You don't expect to put in testimony denying that Mr. Craycraft purchased rum at the——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) We assume not. We will ask him to identify——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Is Mr. Craycraft going to be here?

Mr. Grossman: He will be here.

Presiding Inspector: I will reserve that until Mr. Craycraft comes. If he denies it it can be introduced in evidence.

Very well, have it marked for identification.

(The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 291 for identification.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you want this back? Are you required to return this slip?

The Witness: Well, you can send it back.

Presiding Inspector: You can send it back. Is that all from this witness?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, that is all.

Mr. Grossman: No questions.

Presiding Inspector: You may be excused.

(Witness excused.) [6882]

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

You have been sworn, haven't you, before?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: I mistook you for another witness.

LAWRENCE F. SHIRLEY

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your name? A. What?

Presiding Inspector: State your name.

The Witness: Shirley.

Presiding Inspector: Where do you live?

The Witness: Seattle.

Presiding Inspector: What is your first name?

The Witness: Lawrence F. Shirley.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. By whom are you employed?

A. Libby, McNeil & Libby.

Q. Where is that?

A. They are out on Lake Union in Seattle.

Q. In what capacity are you employed?

A. Assistant Office Manager out there.

Q. What kind of an outfit is that Libby, O'Neil & Libby? [6883]

A. Well, they pack salmon.

Q. Is it Libby, McNeil & Libby?

A. Libby, McNeil & Libby.

Q. In what capacity are you employed there?

A. Assistant Office Manager.

Q. How long have you been so employed?

A. I have been with them around 25 years now.

Q. In what business is that firm engaged?

A. Salmon canning, in the branch that I am in.

(Testimony of Lawrence F. Shirley.)

Q. Now, Mr. Shirley, were you served with a subpoena to produce certain papers? A. Yes.

Q. Did you produce them?

A. Yes (producing papers).

(The papers referred were passed by Mr. Del Guercio to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Will you describe the document that you have produced, Mr. Shirley?

A. This (indicating) represents our journal, which we charge on the ledger from the bills that the Captain turned in after he came back from the end of the voyage.

Q. What Captain? A. Captain Schade.

Q. On what ship? [6884]

A. The David W. Branch.

Q. The David W. Branch? A. Yes.

Q. For what period of time?

A. This is the last trip to Taku in the fall, September 2, 1940 to the 19th of September

Q. Will you speak a little louder?

A. Yes; I will try to.

Q. Now, does that show, the document you produced, show as to whether or not some amytal tablets were furnished to Captain Schade?

A. That is what the bill shows.

Q. What does it show?

A. That the Walker Drug Company, in Ketchikan, on September 16th, furnished to Libby, McNeil & Libby—because the Captain paid for it out of his own cash funds—1½ dozen tablets Amytal, 1½ gr.

(Testimony of Lawrence F. Shirley)

Q. Does it show anything else?

A. It shows on the bottom here that Captain Schade was buying them for M. J. Cannalonga, Fireman on the D. W. Branch.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence.

Mr. Grossman: It is objected to as heresay. It is obvious, if it has any credibility at all, it is only because it purports to show that someone, not one working in the office here, not showing in the office records, had given something to Mr. [6885] Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: And as being immaterial.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. These records were kept in the usual course of business? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how this is material. There is no dispute about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is a dispute. You will recall that when this alleged statement of Mr. Cannalonga was introduced in evidence——

Presiding Inspector: How does this witness know about it?

Mr. Del Guercio: This is a transaction in the usual course of business.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; between a man named Schade and this witness.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your firm's connection with Schade?

A. He is the Captain of our vessel.

Q. And the vessel belonged to——

(Testimony of Lawrence F. Shirley)

A. (Interposing): Libby, McNeil & Libby.

Q. And he is required to submit to the Company all expenses and bills in connection with that ship?

A. Yes, sir. [6886]

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is material, but if you think it is material I don't see that it will hurt anything. I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We do, and we ask that a photostat copy be substituted.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

(The documents referred to were received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 292.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Mr. Gladstein: No questions.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Raise your right hand.

Q. Did Cannalonga ever say to you, or to anyone in your presence, that he, Cannalonga, knew nothing about Harry Bridges' membership in the Communist Party? A. Will you repeat that?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. At no time did he say that.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Q. Did you make such an investigation at any time? A. No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: What was the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Q. Who was with you when Mr. Cannalonga signed these statements, Government's Exhibits No. 208 and 209? A. Special Agent Dickstein.

[6894]

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: The witness is yours.

Mr. Gladstein: One second, your Honor.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, we have this problem: We stated at the end of our case that because of the difficulty of getting Mr. Lord down here we would want to put him on afterward. Mr. Lord is now here and we wish, right after lunch, to ask your Honor if we couldn't put him on.

Now, this occurs to us: Whether, if we are going to ask that this witness go off and Mr. Lord go on, whether we should start our cross examination now or——

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes; I think so.

Mr. Grossman: And then ask, after lunch, that this witness be taken off temporarily?

Presiding Inspector: Yes—however, I hope you will finish by that time. Won't you?

Mr. Grossman: I don't think so. We are going to have to get the transcript.

Presiding Inspector: What transcript?

Mr. Grossman: The transcript of the previous testimony. We don't have all of the transcript with us that we want to ask him about.

Presiding Inspector: We will furnish it to you. [6895] We have them here in the office.

Go ahead. There has been a narrow examination.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How many different times did you see Mr. Cannalonga before he testified in this hearing?

A. Before he testified—I saw him on October 7th, I saw him on October 8th, I saw him on October 9th, and I may have seen him once or twice thereafter. Then I saw him when he was on the witness stand.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Q. What do you mean when you say you may have seen him once or twice?

A. My recollection is that I contacted him some time thereafter, but I don't know now whether I saw him in person or talked to him over the telephone.

Q. Do you recall what you cantacted him about?

A. No. It may have been with reference to locating someone. After the October 9th interview I was through with him as far as his statements were concerned.

Q. How did you happen to talk to Cannalonga in the first place?

A. How did I happen to talk to him?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. [6896]

A. I wanted to determine if he had any information——

Presiding Inspector: That question has been asked so many times.

A. (Continuing) I wanted to determine whether he had any information in connection with this instant case.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Who told you he might have?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How do you know he might have?

Mr. Del Guercio: You have noted my objection?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it.

A. I believe at the time I interviewed a Mr. Davis, he indicated to me that Cannalonga had been connected with the Communist Party, and had been a waterfront organizer for the Party in Seattle, and that he may have some information about this case.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Which Davis is that?

A. John Ryan Davis, the man who testified at the previous hearing.

Q. When did he give you this information?

A. I interviewed him, I believe, on September 12, 1940.

Q. Is there any other reason why you went to see Davis except the information given you by Mr. Davis? [6897]

A. No. I believe Mr. Bridges testified in the previous hearing he knew Cannalonga as a waterfront organizer and I thought he may know something about Bridges.

Q. Any other reason?

A. No. I think those are the two basic reasons.

Q. Before you went to see Mr. Cannalonga did you have, or had you read, the report of previous investigations of Mr. Cannalonga?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

A. There were no previous investigations.

Q. By representatives of the Immigration and Naturalization Service?

A. Had I read about it—no.

Q. Had you read any report purporting to be a report of an investigation or meeting with Mr. Cannalonga before you went to see him?

A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that now?

A. I am positive.

Q. Did you discuss with Mr. Boyd, before you went to see Mr. Cannalonga, his discussions, or discussion, with Mr. Cannalonga? A. Yes.

Q. When did you see Mr. Boyd on this question first?

A. That is hard to say; it was some time between the time I interviewed Mr. Davis and the time I interviewed Mr. [6898] Cannalonga.

Q. How did you happen to talk to Mr. Boyd about this? A. How?

Q. Yes. Did you go to him, or did he go to you?

A. I was in frequent contact with Mr. Boyd during this period, and how his name came up I don't know. I do remember that he said that he had talked to Cannalonga at the time of the previous hearing and tried to get him to come down to testify; but that Cannalonga didn't want to become involved in this case and refused to come.

Q. Did he tell you that Cannalonga gave him

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

information before the previous hearing, that would have justified his testifying in this case?

A. No.

Q. Did he tell you that Cannalonga told him, when he talked to him, that he didn't know anything that would be of any use to the Government in this case?

A. No. I don't believe we went into detail as to the results of his contact with Cannalonga. I do remember him saying that he tried to get him to come down and testify, but that Cannalonga didn't want to become involved in this proceeding, or the previous proceeding.

Q. Didn't you make notes of what Mr. Boyd told you about Mr. Cannalonga?

A. No. There was nothing to make notes about.

[6899]

Q. Did Mr. Boyd tell you whether he had any written memorandum of his meeting with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. That Mr. Boyd had a written memorandum?

Q. Yes. Did he tell you whether he had any?

A. I am sure he didn't.

Q. You are sure because he didn't mention it to you, is that why you are sure, or have you some other reason for being sure?

A. I don't recall seeing a memorandum.

Presiding Inspector: I think you misinterpreted his answer—"You are sure Boyd didn't tell you such?"

The Witness: That he had a memorandum?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: I know he didn't tell me that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You didn't mean to say that you were sure Boyd did not have a memorandum?

A. I don't know whether he did or not. I know I didn't see one.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Boyd for all the information he had on Mr. Cannalonga?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Boyd said that Cannalonga refused to discuss the matter with him. He had contacted him, but he refused to give him any information, and I would have no reason for asking for a memorandum. I believed him. [6900]

Q. How did you happen to get in touch—I mean, how did you happen to get in touch with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Well, at the time I talked to Mr. Boyd I asked him to be on the alert for Cannalonga, and if he should get any information that might lead to his location to give me a telephone call; that at the same time Agent Dickstein and I would look for him up there in Seattle.

Mr. Boyd did call and told me that he had located Cannalonga.

Q. What did you do to arrange an appointment with him?

A. As I recall it, Mr. Boyd called the Seattle office on Saturday, October 5th, and left a message for either Mr. Dickstein or myself to get in touch with him. We were out of town that day. I got in touch with Mr. Boyd the first thing Monday morning on October 7th, at which time he told me that he had been in touch with Mr. Cannalonga, and that he had arranged for Cannalonga to come to his office at 9:00 or 9:30 that morning, and if we wanted to talk with Cannalonga we could find him over there.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

So Agent Dickstein went over to Mr. Boyd's office and brought Cannalonga over to our office immediately.

Q. What day was this?

A. That was on Monday, October 7.

Q. At what time of day?

A. Shortly after nine.

Q. Then did you have a discussion with Mr. Cannalonga? [6901] A. That day?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, quite a discussion.

Q. Immediately after he got there?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. About how long did this discussion last?

A. Well, we talked briefly at the office, and then it was suggested we go over to our room at the Roosevelt Hotel. We felt there would be more privacy over there; and Mr. Cannalonga at that time had a hip injury, and I thought perhaps the hard chair might be uncomfortable for him, so I suggested that we go over to the hotel where he would be more comfortable. We proceeded to the hotel.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Q. The entire conversation with him lasted how long? A. In the office.

Q. Yes, in the office.

A. Oh, twenty minutes, I would say.

Q. At the hotel, how long?

A. Well, on the way over to the hotel we stopped and had a cup of coffee—he is a great coffee drinker—and then we went up to the hotel and we got there about, oh, between 10:00 and 10:30. I talked to him up until noon. We had lunch. He said he had an afternoon appointment with Dr. Buckner and wanted to know if he could get off to keep that appointment. I said, "Sure." [6902]

I believe we left him go about 3:00 or 3:30.

Q. Did you take notes of what he said?

A. I took copious notes; yes.

Q. Do you take shorthand?

A. No, sir. I wrote it out in longhand.

Q. Now, who was present at all times during this stay?

A. All the time there was Cannalonga and Agent Dickstein present.

Q. No one else? A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga seem willing to tell you everything that he said, or did he have some reluctance?

A. No; he didn't show any signs of reluctance. My recollection is that when we got down to the hotel we started right in interrogating him and he supplied the answers.

Q. Did you ask him, or did he explain to you,

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

why his attitude had changed between the last hearing, or before the last hearing, and before this hearing?

A. I didn't even bring up the previous contact he had with Mr. Boyd.

Q. Was that discussed at any time in the various conferences you had with him?

A. Yes; yes, he brought it up for the first time after he signed the second statement, which was on October 9th. At that time he pulled out a long-hand statement and showed it to me, and told me the circumstances under which that statement [6903] was taken. That was on October 9th, after he had signed the second statement, and was prepared to leave.

Q. Did he explain the difference between his attitude on the previous occasion and his attitude at this time when you were questioning him?

A. If he did, I don't recall. It wasn't important to me.

Q. You are familiar with this statement of October 8, are you not?

A. That is the first statement?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, very familiar with it.

Q. On the first occasion that you talked to Mr. Cannalonga in your office and in the Roosevelt Hotel, did he give you all the information which is contained in this statement?

A. All the information that is contained in that statement; yes, sir. Later on I talked to him and he elaborated on some of the points which I didn't include in the statement.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Q. What do you mean by "later on"?

A. When I talked to him—probably the previous day, or the day after.

Q. When was this statement drawn up?

A. When was it dictated and transcribed, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. On the evening of October 8—no. October 7, after the initial interview. [6904]

Q. Who drew it up?

A. I dictated it from my notes.

Q. Did Agent Dickstein participate in the dictation?

A. The dictated statement, no. I dictated the statement myself in its entirety.

Q. Now, is all the information that is contained in this statement information that was given to you on that day by Mr. Cannalonga?

A. On that day; yes, sir.

Q. At the time you talked to Mr. Cannalonga did you tell him that you already had information about this meeting in the Gowman Hotel?

A. No. We were told about that meeting in the Gowman Hotel and this was the first time I ever heard it.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. I am positive.

Q. When you talked to Mr. Cannalonga about a certain Top Fraction meeting in San Francisco, did you tell him at the time that you already had some information about that meeting?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

A. No; because that was the first time I had heard of that Communist Top Fraction meeting.

[6905]

Q. Before you talked to Mr. Cannalonga had you talked to any other persons that are in his statement said to have been in the Gowman Hotel meeting?

A. I talked to Laddie Hope and Edward Fisher about the Gowman Hotel meeting, which they confirmed, but that was after the interview with Cannalonga.

Q. I said before you talked to Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Oh, before? No, sir.

Q. Had you talked to anyone that, according to Cannalonga's statement, was at the Gowman Hotel meeting? A. No, sir; not before.

Q. Had you talked to Eugene Dietrich before you talked to Cannalonga?

A. I don't know Eugene Dietrich.

Q. When did you see Cannalonga again?

A. What do you mean?

Q. Referring now to after your discussion with him in the Roosevelt Hotel?

A. The first day?

Q. Yes. A. I saw him the next morning.

Q. You didn't see him any more that first day after he left to go to the doctor?

A. Not after he left to go to the doctor, no sir.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Q. Did you have an appointment with him to see you the [6906] next morning?

A. Yes, sir; I told him to be up at our hotel room at 10:00 A. M. the next morning.

Q. Did he show up at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present?

A. Agent Dickstein and I were in the room waiting for him.

Q. Did you have another discussion with him at that time? A. Yes, I talked with him.

Q. How long did it last?

A. Probably 2:00, 2:30. We took an hour off for lunch.

Q. Did you also take notes?

A. As to this second interview? Yes, sir.

Q. And did you dictate this second statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you dictate it?

A. I dictated it that afternoon after he left.

Q. Is everything contained in the second statement information that was given you by Mr. Cannalonga at this second meeting?

A. With particular reference to Bruce Hannon, yes, sir. [6907]

Q. I asked you whether everything in that statement, rather, whether all the information in that statement was given you by Mr. Cannalonga on the second day that you talked to him?

A. No, some of the information was given to me at the time of the first interview. When he came back the second time he elaborated on some of that first information.

Q. Were all the facts contained in the second statement given to you by Mr. Cannalonga either in the first or the second interview?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you see Cannalonga again?

A. The next day.

Q. Had you an appointment to see him again?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you meet him the next day?

A. The next day I met him in our hotel room in the afternoon.

Q. Who was present?

A. Agent Dickstein and myself.

Q. What happened?

A. Well, I presented him with the second statement to read and certify and it was at that time that he told me about this statement that he had made for Mr. Meehan.

Q. When did he sign the first statement? [6908]

A. The first thing Tuesday morning, October the 8th. After he came into our room I gave him the statement to read and he signed it and then I questioned him as to the facts contained in the second statement.

Q. Did you question Cannalonga any further on the third occasion with respect to any matters except the statement that he had given Mr. Meehan?

A. Well, I may have; I don't know.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Q. Did you make any notes of any other questioning? A. I may have; I don't know.

Q. At least, you don't remember any subject matter that you discussed?

A. No, I don't remember any particular subject matter that was discussed the third time. Everything that we wanted I fully covered in the first two interviews. I may have asked him one or two additional questions; I don't recall at this time.

Q. Are you a graduate of a college?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What college? A. Northwestern.

Q. When did you graduate? A. '31.

Q. Did you attend a law school?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you immediately after leaving college go to work [6909] for the FBI? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What generally has been your position with the FBI? Have you had any title of any kind?

A. I at first was a clerk; then, I was appointed Special Agent in January, 1933.

Q. For how long a period—withdraw that.

When did you first begin to work on investigation of the Bridges' case?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that as immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: That is this case, you know. I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Only we produced this witness in connection with the Cannalonga matter. We confined it to that. We think that the cross examination should be confined to that particular thing.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take this.

When did you first——

A. (Interposing) On or about September 1, 1940.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you make the statement on direct examination that you know that Cannalonga was not investigated by the FBI for an alleged Mann Act violation?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that was not the [6910] question on direct examination.

Mr. Grossman: Did or did you not? I am entitled to have an answer.

Presiding Inspector: You are not entitled to ask him what the——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Interposing) Do you know whether the FBI conducted an investigation of Mr. Cannlanga with respect to the Mann Act?

A. I know we did not.

Q. How do you know you did not?

A. Well, that information certainly would have come to my attention at the time I was working up there in Seattle.

Q. You mean when you went to talk to a witness about his testimony or possible testimony in this case you had before you any possible criminal investigation of that man; is that what you mean?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

A. Positively, yes.

Q. In other words, when you went to speak to a potential witness you had in your hands any criminal record he might have had or any investigation then being conducted by the FBI?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. It will be a clarification. [6911]

The Witness: Will you repeat that?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. No, I never had no such criminal record when I talked to Cannalonga.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. We are not talking about Cannalonga. I am talking about generally. A. No.

Q. Didn't you testify that the reason you know there was no investigation being conducted by the FBI was because you hadn't been told about it before you went to talk to Cannalonga?

A. I know there was not; I know there was no investigation conducted regarding Cannalonga.

Q. Didn't you testify, Mr. Madala, that the reason you knew there was no investigation was that you hadn't been given information about it before you talked to Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Myron: That was not his testimony.

A. No information was called to my attention.

Mr. Myron: He didn't say "before".

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was your testimony as to why you knew or how you knew that Mr. Cannalonga——

[6912]

A. (Interposing): I don't know how to answer that. I just don't know of any investigation. I know there was no investigation conducted.

Q. How do you know?

A. Because it was my responsibility up there to locate Cannalonga and interview him and I know I didn't conduct any investigation with respect to Cannalonga.

Q. Is that all you know about an investigation with respect to the Mann Act, that you didn't conduct it?

A. Yes; I know the FBI didn't conduct an investigation.

Q. How do you know the FBI didn't?

A. Because it didn't come to my attention.

Q. How would it have come to your attention?

A. Well, it would be in the file in this case.

Q. You mean in this case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean that before you had gone to see Cannalonga if there had been an investigation already conducted or being conducted with respect to the Mann Act that that would be in the file of this case?

A. Not this case. Not at that time, no, but it certainly would have come to my attention.

Q. Where would it be? How would it have come to your attention?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is argumen- [6913] tative now.

Presiding Inspector: I will let him answer.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How would it have come to your attention?

A. It would have been told to me for my information.

Q. You mean it was the practice to give you all information concerning criminal investigations of these witnesses or potential witnesses before you talked to them? A. Criminal or other.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. It is obvious counsel is not questioning the witness regarding this matter but to find out how the FBI operates. We are not going to permit that.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think that is true at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: He should be limited and restricted.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is his purpose.

Mr. Del Guercio: He has no right asking questions of that kind.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no, Mr. Del Guercio. This man has said that he had no information about it. Now, he wants to know if it happened whether he would have information. I think that is proper.

Mr. Grossman: Will you read the last question and answer?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't go into the general [6914] matters of the practices in general of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Of course, we are not going into that, but we are going to allow this witness to testify fully as to his knowledge about Cannalonga or any investigation.

You may answer that.

Mr. Grossman: Will you read the last question and answer?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: He is asking for the general practice.

Presiding Inspector: No; he is asking in relation to the Bridges' case.

Mr. Grossman: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: Only in relation to the Bridges' case.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you discuss with Mr. Cannalonga whether he would be called as a witness in this case? If so, when was the first time?

A. I probably mentioned it to him during one of the three interviews I had with him up there in Seattle on October 7th, 8th or 9th.

Q. Do you know what you said to him?

A. I said that if we have a hearing you will probably be called as a witness, yes.

Q. Did he reply to that?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

A. I don't recall what he said about it. He didn't [6915] have any reluctance at the time.

Q. Before he testified did he ever have any reluctance to testifying as a witness?

A. At the time—I didn't see him after——

Q. (Interposing): I don't care when you saw him. I am asking you whether you know whether he expressed any reluctance to you to testifying in this case? A. No, I am sure he didn't.

Presiding Inspector: Now, I think we better stop here until two o'clock.

(Whereupon at 12:40 o'clock P.M., a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock of the same day.) [6916]

After Recess
2:00 O'clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: Did you want to interrupt the present witness and put on Mr. Lord?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, we did. Mr. Lord is here now.

Presiding Inspector: I think we had better have Mr. Lord. We have not been very strict about the orderly procedure.

Stand up here and raise your right hand.

WILLIAM P. LORD

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. William P. Lord.

Q. Your residence?

A. Dunthorpe, Portland, Oregon.

Q. And your occupation or profession, Mr. Lord? A. Attorney at law.

Q. How long have you pursued that profession?

A. I was admitted to practice, I believe, in the year 1908 by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon.

Q. Of what courts, or to what courts are you admitted to practice? [6917]

A. The courts of Oregon, United States District Court of Oregon, the Court of Appeals to this District.

Q. Of this Federal Circuit?

A. Yes; the Federal Circuit.

Q. Do you hold a Commission as a Notary Public? A. I do.

Q. How long have you held such a commission?

A. Those commissions are renewable. Mine has been renewed from time to time for many years. I wouldn't undertake to say how many years I have had a commission.

Q. Did you, on Sunday, May 4, 1941, hold a

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Commission as a Notary Public in the State of Oregon? A. I did.

Q. Mr. Lord, calling your attention to the 4th day of May, 1941, at approximately noon of that day, did a proceeding occur in your office involving yourself, myself, Rosco Craycraft, Ray D. Shoemaker and Maurice J. Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question, if your Honor please, to the use of the term "proceeding." There is no such evidence that there was any such proceeding at all.

Presiding Inspector: It can't be, or should not be referred to as a legal proceeding in any sense. The question is whether, at that time, a statement of Mr. Cannalonga was taken. Whether it is a proceeding or not is a legal question.

By Mr. Gladstein: [6918]

Q. All right. Use the Judge's language. Would you answer that question, Mr. Lord?

A. There was a statement taken of Mr. Cannalonga under oath in my presence and in my office at suite 405 Guardian Building, Portland.

Q. At approximately what time of the day did the beginning of that statement or the beginning of the taking of the statement occur?

A. Well, it was around twelve o'clock.

Q. Before any statement was taken was Mr. Cannalonga administered an oath?

A. He was.

Q. By whom? A. By myself.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Will you state what occurred in that connection?

A. Well, he was sworn in accordance with the usual swearing of a witness to tell the truth, and nothing but the truth.

Q. Did you ask him to do anything?

Presiding Inspector: Ask him what?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ask him to raise his hand?

A. Oh, yes, he raised his hand and was regularly sworn as a witness would be sworn in a court proceeding.

Q. Thereafter what took place? [6919]

A. You proceeded to ask him questions and he thereupon gave answers, or didn't give answers as it suited his whim or caprice.

Q. About how long did this entire incident take?

A. Well, I should judge it was concluded by one o'clock, possibly a little bit after.

Q. Did you have a good opportunity to observe whether Mr. Cannalonga appeared to be under the influence of liquor or stimulants or intoxicants of any kind? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state what that opportunity consisted of?

A. Well, in the first place I don't use intoxicating liquors myself.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, I move that be stricken, your Honor, as not responsive, as to whether he uses intoxicating liquors or not.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that is so. I will strike that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you proceed, Mr. Lord, and tell what that opportunity you had to observe Mr. Cannalonga consisted of?

A. Mr. Cannalonga was not six feet away from me at any time except as he may have left the room, so I heard him testify. I was very, very close by him, sitting in a chair or standing up while he was sitting down in one of these old-fashioned office chairs, and I observed him very closely as [6920] he was testifying. Now, if he had liquor on his breath I would have known it. If he seemed under the influence of drugs, I think, as a practical individual, I would have known whether or not he was under the influence of opiates or drugs of any kind, and I am convinced that he was not.

Q. At any time during the entire time Mr. Cannalonga was in that office giving that statement on Sunday, May 4, 1941, did he at any time appear to you to be drunk? A. He did not.

Q. What would you say was his apparent condition as to sobriety during all of that time?

A. He was perfectly sober. His deposition speaks for itself.

Mr. Del Guercio: His what speaks for itself?

The Witness: Deposition or his statement.

Mr. Myron: I ask that be stricken out, your Honor.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Presiding Inspector: Which?

Mr. Myron: That the deposition speaks for itself.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose it is a deposition in a sense; he deposes and says.

Mr. Myron: Well, that is a conclusion of the witness there.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does it make? It doesn't give it any greater significance. It is a statement made under oath.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no evidence that he has seen [6921] the deposition.

Presiding Inspector: He doesn't have to.

Mr. Del Guercio: Or whatever it was.

Presiding Inspector: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. During the hour that Mr. Cannalonga was in your office did you have occasion at any time to talk with him personally?

A. I did out of the presence of yourself and Mr. Crayeraft.

Q. Will you state how that occurred?

A. Well, I was rather disposed to feel that this individual was not responsive to the questions, or he was not answering the way that a witness ordinarily would answer a question that was put to him, so I then, the first opportunity I had, I got him aside in my law library and talked to him, and asked him if he was laboring under any sort of strain, that he didn't want to talk.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. How close were you to him when you had that discussion or conversation with him?

A. Oh, we were not but a few feet apart, I should say three, four feet apart.

Q. Tell us what that discussion or conversation consisted of, Mr. Lord?

A. Well, I had, as I say, a feeling that the man may not [6922] be a willing witness, that there was something that—in the back of his mind, that constrained him to answer the questions that you put to him with a degree of ease and frankness that a witness ought to reply to a question, so I wanted to find out if the man was being coerced in any way to come to the office and testify or give the statement that he was giving, and I thereupon asked him if he was, and he told me that he just—that he was not, that he was just kind of, you know—I can't explain it to you—he just simply didn't talk.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment. We are relating a conversation here, your Honor——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): Just a moment. I object to counsel interrupting. If he has an objection to make he may make it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I do have an objection to make.

Presiding Inspector: Let him finish his answer, Mr. Del Guercio. You may then move to strike.

The Witness: I trust I am not indulging in an impropriety. It was a question of the demeanor of the witness, your Honor.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Presiding Inspector: He didn't say anything?

The Witness: He didn't exactly respond. At the same time there was an opportunity for the man to speak and he didn't speak and thereupon I told him that "If you are—" I had never seen the man before but I said "If you are—you [6923] probably don't trust me because you don't know me, but if you—but I am acting as a man giving you an oath here, but if you want to find out what your rights are, if you don't want to give this testimony you don't have to give it. If you want to consult with a lawyer I will select one of the leading lawyers of the Portland Bar who will be very glad to advise you, men who have been in the United States District offices or otherwise, and they will give you the advice that you need and you can speak out your mind freely to those men, if you want to."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he reply to that?

A. He didn't. He just sort of, if I may be permitted to state my own conclusion about the matter, he just sort of remained mute.

Mr. Myron: I don't think we want his conclusion.

Presiding Inspector: Let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After that discussion did Mr. Cannalonga return to the room and refuse to answer questions that I put to him? A. He did.

Q. Now, at any time while Mr. Cannalonga was there in that office did you, Mr. Craycraft or Mr.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Shoemaker, or I, do or say anything which appeared to you to be an effort to coerce or intimidate, or force Mr. Cannalonga in any manner? [6924]

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that. He is asking for a conclusion, and not asking for the acts.

Presiding Inspector: You asked the same question in relation to Mr. Madala.

Mr. Del Guercio: If, in his opinion.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. That is all he is giving.

Mr. Myron: He asked Mr. Madala if he did anything.

Presiding Inspector: Did he coerce him?

Mr. Myron: That is not his question.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he is asking, not whether it appeared to the witness to be a threat or coercion, but whether he did anything. He can say whether he saw anything which, in his opinion, amounted to intimidation or coercion.

That is all you want, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Did you see anything on the part of any of those gentlemen, or in pairs or triplets, which, in your judgment, tended to coerce or intimidate Mr. Cannalonga?

The Witness: Not a thing. As a matter——

Presiding Inspector: That answers it.

The Witness: I might say that part of the time——

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): There is no question.

Presiding Inspector: Wait until the next question is asked. [6925]

The Witness: I want to make an explanation.

Presiding Inspector: You may make an explanation.

The Witness: The point is that for a period of time Mr. Craycraft was not in the office at all. He went down on the street to my automobile and talked to my wife down in the car because I knew she was sitting down there for quite a period of time and I asked him to go down and placate her.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Lord, do you recall whether, toward the end of the taking of this statement, Mr. Craycraft left the room, leaving yourself, Mr. Shoemaker and myself in the office?

A. That is correct; he did.

Q. And whether I completed a question in his absence, after he had got up and left the room, as I had begun that question?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor, as leading and suggestive.

Presiding Inspector: There is no question about his being there?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know. I question everything that went on in that room.

Mr. Gladstein: At first Mr. Del Guercio even questioned whether there had been such a meeting.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

and he made a direct statement, Mr. Del Guercio did, which I can prove to your Honor in the record, that he questioned whether Mr. Cannalonga had ever been in that office. He made that statement [6926] directly. He said, "I don't believe he ever was there."

Presiding Inspector: I know, but assume that is so——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I still say it.

Presiding Inspector (Continuing): ——Mr. Cannalonga testified that he was there.

Mr. Gladstein: I know.

Presiding Inspector: The question is whether you recollect, Mr. Lord, such an occurrence as Mr. Gladstein has specified in his question. It is leading, but I will allow it, in my discretion.

The Witness: Yes, your Honor. There was a moment there when a question was being put to him, asking him certain details as to a conversation he had the night before, whereupon this individual got up from his chair and bolted out of the office and I assumed that that concluded the taking of his testimony.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At all times prior to that incident, Mr. Lord, was Mr. Cannalonga present in that office while all my questions were asked of him?

A. As I recall it, there were two occasions when he left. You mean to say were you present when these questions and answers were given?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. No. What I mean to say, with the exception of this last question, in the middle of which you testified Mr. Cannalonga got up and left the office, and I concluded that question [6927] for the record after he had gone from the office, with the exception of that last question, was Mr. Cannalonga present in your office at all of the times that I asked him questions during the taking of the statement?

A. He was.

Mr. Gladstein: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Cross examine.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Myron will cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Mr. Lord, how long have you known Mr. Gladstein?

A. Well, I think I met Mr. Gladstein twice in my lifetime.

Q. When was the first time you met him?

A. I think the occasion of the trial in the United States Court in 1937. He was one of the attorneys, and I was an attorney for one of the defendants.

Then I met him in my office——

Q. (Interposing): Let us take that first occasion. Did you participate with Mr. Gladstein in the trial of that case?

A. Well, I might say Mr. Gladstein participated with me to the extent of one argument on a motion.

Q. Was this Mr. Gladstein's case?

A. No. It was a suit wherein the divers unions

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

and locals were involved. Who he represented it is not clear in my mind. I represented the Portland District—Columbia River District Council. [6928]

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein call you in?

A. He did not. I was employed by the District Council.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein participate in that case?

A. You know, I don't know these two gentlemen well enough to answer that. It may have been Mr. Grossman for all I know.

Mr. Myron: Well, I do not think Mr. Gladstein will mind standing up.

Presiding Inspector: You see Mr. Gladstein?

The Witness: I saw a good many people—there were several attorneys in that case.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Mr. Gladstein is the third man there at the table. A. I know him.

Q. Did he participate in that case?

A. My memory says he did. It may have been Mr. Grossman.

Q. Was he allowed to participate in that case by the Court?

A. I think he made an argument, if I recall correctly.

Q. Wasn't the purpose of your participating in this case because Mr. Gladstein could not participate and he asked you to come in and help him? A. No, he did not; no, sir.

Q. You are sure?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. I am very very certain of it; very certain of it. [6929] In fact, I don't believe I spoke a half dozen words to Mr.—whichever member of their firm was there. I only saw them in the court room. I had no conference with them.

Presiding Inspector: This was in Oregon?.

The Witness: In Oregon; yes.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And this was before Judge Fee?

A. That was before Judge Fee.

Q. And your testimony is now that Mr. Gladstein did participate in that case representing a different client than you represented, is that right?

A. That is my recollection. You see, I don't know your name——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): It isn't necessary.

Mr. Myron: I am the attorney for the Government.

The Witness: I understand, naturally.

Presiding Inspector: Myron.

A. (Continuing): I wanted to say that I don't know who represented the other people in that case, the other defendants and——

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Who did you represent?

A. I represented the Columbia District Council.

Q. Who did Mr. Gladstein represent?

A. I also represented Local 28-03, of Toledo.

[6930]

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. That is the case we are talking about before Judge Fee? A. Yes.

Q. Whom did Mr. Gladstein represent?

A. I don't know. I presume he represented the Committee of Industrial Organizations. I presume he did,—I don't know.

Q. Were these locals of the CIO——

A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. (Continuing): ——that you represented?

A. I represented the Toledo local and the Portland District Council.

Q. And Mr. Gladstein represented the CIO, is that right?

A. I don't know. I am only giving you what my assumption would be. I didn't discuss the matter with Mr. Gladstein, or whichever representative of Mr. Gladstein's office was present.

Q. Well, now, I just want to sum it up. Your testimony is now that you were not called in by Mr. Gladstein to take over, is that right?

Mr. Gladstein: That is objected to not as having been asked once or twice, but—— Presiding Inspector: I know—you are not bound by his answer—I will take it.

A. If he was I didn't know about it.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to explain?

[6931]

The Witness: No, I don't see anything to explain. I have nothing to apologize for.

Presiding Inspector: Let it stand.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

By Mr. Myron:

Q. What type of law practice do you follow?

Mr. Gladstein: That is objected to as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: No, if your Honor please, it is not immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is immaterial, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we argue the matter?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: To show that it is not immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Why do you think it is not immaterial?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have a situation up here in this hotel room that, in my opinion, should be placed before the Oregon State Bar. We want to know everything that occurred.

Presiding Inspector: This man administered an oath. That is about all he has testified to.

Mr. Del Guercio: We want to know all the circumstances surrounding the taking of that so-called statement there in that hotel room, or all the circumstances in connection with it, this witness' connection with it, and his connection and [6932] association with Mr. Gladstein—all about it.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is anything to be gained. Go ahead.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Mr. Gladstein: I call your Honor's attention to the fact that the witness has not testified to anything taking place in any hotel room.

Mr. Del Guercio: His office.

Mr. Gladstein: He has only testified to the proceeding in his office.

Presiding Inspector: I know that.

What was the last question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I renew my objection.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

The Witness: Shall I answer?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

A. I do a more or less general practice of the law. A great deal of it is centered around maritime employments. I have a great many personal injury claims. We have a compensation Act in Oregon, where there is a rejection, employers are allowed to reject the Act—many employees' cases.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Have you ever represented the Communist Party?

A. I certainly have not and will not. [6933]

Q. Have you ever participated with any other attorney in representing the Communist Party?

A. I certainly have not.

Q. Now, do your clients consist chiefly of the laboring class, longshoremen?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. Yes—not necessarily longshoremen. There are many longshoremen; yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Bridges?

A. Casually. I met Mr. Bridges a couple of times.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. I think I first met him here in San Francisco when I was down here on some business.

Q. How long ago was that?

A. It was after the '34 strike.

Q. Do you have card rooms available for longshoremen?

Mr. Gladstein: That is objected to as immaterial.

A. What do you mean?

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Have you provided rooms or space where card games are held by longshoremen?

Presiding Inspector: In his office, you mean?

Mr. Myron: In or out of his office.

A. I have not.

By Mr. Myron: [6934-5]

Q. When were you first contacted by Mr. Gladstein, or anybody else, in regard to making your office available and having you present?

A. Mr. Rosco Craycraft contacted me some time after nine o'clock.

Q. When was this, what date?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. What date was that deposition taken, may I ask? Was it May 2?

Presiding Inspector: It was a Sunday.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Do you know what day of the week it was when you were first contacted?

A. Yes. I know it was on Sunday; I can't recall the date.

Q. That was the first time that you knew anything about these arrangements, is that right?

A. The night before, on Saturday night, as I started to say, I was called by telephone by Mr. Craycraft asking me if I knew where I could get a reporter to take a deposition of somebody. I told him that I did, or would try and get him one. And that led up to the taking of this.

Q. That was all the conversation you had with Mr. Craycraft at that time?

A. Oh, I don't know. I know him well, you know. I might have had some—— [6936]

Q. (Interposing) Tell us your entire conversation with him over the phone?

A. I can't remember the conversation I had with a good friend of mine that I had known for years.

Q. I mean, in regard to securing or making arrangements for this statement to be taken?

A. He said they wanted to take a deposition, or a statement, and he wanted me to secure a reporter.

Q. He said "they" wanted?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. Well, I don't know how he said it—whether he said he wanted to take it or "they".

Q. Try to recall what was said?

A. He said Gladstein was there, or something to that effect—I don't know—and I was to arrange for a reporter. I was to take no part in the matter. It was a matter that didn't mean anything to me, but he wanted to get a reporter to take a statement, and he wanted it to be sworn to, and I said that I would secure him a reporter. That must have been around ten o'clock or it may have been after ten. [6937]

Q. This was the night preceding?

A. The night preceding, yes sir.

Q. And did you make arrangements to secure a reporter? A. The next morning I did.

Q. You made the arrangements the next morning? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And whom did you talk with the next morning?

A. I talked with Mrs. Roscoe Hunt.

Q. Mrs. who? A. Roscoe Hunt.

Q. Who is she?

A. She is the wife of the reporter, official reporter of one of the departments of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, Multnomah County, and then I called up Alfred P. Dobson who is Judge of the Circuit Court and asked him where I could get ahold of a young man by the name of Michelet who is assistant reporter in that department of the Circuit Court, and I couldn't—he didn't know where I could get ahold of that gentleman, so I then called up Ray Shoemaker and eventually secured his services.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Now, what time was this?

A. Oh, some time after nine o'clock, between nine——

Q. (Interposing) Sunday morning, is that right? A. Sunday morning.

Q. And Shoemaker agreed——

A. (Interposing) Reluctantly. [6938]

Q. What is that?

A. Reluctantly he agreed to.

Q. Now, how did you know where to have Mr. Shoemaker come? A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Where was Mr. Shoemaker to go?

A. I told him to go to my office.

Q. Who had made arrangements to have your office? A. I had.

Q. When?

A. Over the telephone the night before.

Q. Well, then, a part of the conversation the night before was to have the use of your office?

A. A part of the conversation was I would secure a reporter and he would come to my office and take the deposition or the statement and I would——

Q. (Interposing) Who asked you to make your office available for the taking of this statement? A. I think Mr. Craycraft did.

Q. Was there anything else said that Saturday night? A. Not that I can recall.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. There were only two things taken up then, that was first securing your office, the second a reporter, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Sunday morning you secured the services of Mr. [6939] Shoemaker? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was about 9:00 o'clock?

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said, I think.

A. It was between 9:00 and 10:00. I can't remember details so closely.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Now, did you get in touch with anyone after 9:00 or 10:00 o'clock when you secured Mr. Shoemaker's services? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you call Mr. Gladstein or Mr. Craycraft?

A. I did not. I didn't even know where Mr. Gladstein was staying at the time.

Q. Well, how did you let them know that you had secured a reporter?

A. They were coming in after, I thought 10:00 o'clock, but it seems that their appointment was 11:00 when they expected to be there, and they didn't get there until 12:00.

Q. Then, arrangements were made the night before, is that it, that Mr. Gladstein and Mr. Craycraft were to be at your office at a certain time?

A. I am not certain that I even knew that Mr. Gladstein was—maybe I did—but I told them my office would be available to them for the purpose of taking the deposition.

(Testimony of William P. Lord)

Q. You didn't know Mr. Gladstein was going to partici- [6940] pate in that, is that right?

A. Well, I didn't say that. You know, sometimes——.

Q. (Interposing) Saturday night?

A. You know sometimes details like this are not very significant to you. I wouldn't undertake to——

Q. (Interposing) Was there any mention about Mr. Gladstein Saturday night in your conversation with Crayeraft?

A. I am trying to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) He is testifying about that.

A. (Continuing) I am trying to give you the information. I really don't know. I think it is fair to say I understood there was someone from San Francisco representing Mr. Bridges who was going to take a statement of somebody.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. What did Crayeraft say about that?

A. Well, I don't know. He just simply wanted a place to take a deposition. He wanted somebody to swear a witness and he wanted a Court reporter.

Q. Crayeraft himself?

A. Crayeraft is the one that called up.

Q. And he wanted the room made available to him and a Court reporter made available to him?

A. Now, that isn't fair to——

Q. (Interposing) Well, I want to get the entire conversation you had. [6941]

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. You know, I wouldn't expect Mr. Crayeraft to take the deposition; you know that, an attorney. I expected——

Q. (Interposing) Well, what was the conversation?

Presiding Inspector: He has given you the conversation two or three times.

Mr. Myron: He has not mentioned——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I beg your pardon. He mentioned that he understood that some one from San Francisco was going to be there and he had the impression it was Mr. Gladstein that was mentioned; he isn't quite sure.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Did you know Mr. Gladstein?

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. You have been over that. You have searched his recollection on that.

Mr. Myron: My question now, your Honor, is did he know it was Mr. Gladstein who was coming there to take the statement.

Presiding Inspector: He has testified as to that. He has testified as to that, that he understood someone from San Francisco was coming and he has the impression that it was Mr. Gladstein. He isn't sure of it.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Did you get that impression from the conversation you had with Mr. Crayeraft Saturday night? A. Yes, yes sir.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Now, what time was the appointment on Sunday morn- [6942] ing?

A. Well, I thought it was 10:00 o'clock so I——

Q. (Interposing) And when did somebody arrive in your office?

A. Well, I got the reporter there; he came there along a little after 10:00.

Q. Is that Shoemaker?

A. That was Shoemaker.

Q. Did he come with you?

A. He came to the office.

Q. With you?

A. Oh, no; he lives on the other side of the river from where I live.

Q. What time did you get to the office?

A. Oh, I should judge just around 10:00.

Q. What time did Mr. Shoemaker get there?

A. A few minutes later.

Q. Now, when did Mr. Gladstein arrive?

A. Well, they didn't get there until somewhere around noon.

Q. About 12:00?

A. Uh-huh (Affirmative).

Q. Who was with Mr. Gladstein?

A. Well, I think he came in with Mr. Crayeraft.

Q. Mr. Gladstein and Mr. Crayeraft came into your office? [6943]

A. He may not have; I can't answer those questions definitely because I don't know. I didn't pay enough attention to it. It didn't seem signifi-

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

cannt to me and I didn't pay any attention to it as to who came in. I know that they all shortly arrived about the same time, that is, this man whose testimony was going to be taken and——

Q. (Interposing) Well, you know his name?

A. Well, I know it, but I can't say it very well. I don't speak——

Q. (Interposing) Were they all together when they came into your office?

A. Well, I don't know; I can't recall. They were there very shortly. If they may have come in together or not, I don't know.

Q. You don't recollect seeing Mr. Cannalonga come into your office, is that right?

A. Yes, I recollect the man coming in, yes.

Q. What was the first thing that took place in the office after they were all there?

A. Oh, the usual amenities were——

Q. (Interposing) Not the usual thing. I am talking about what happened at this meeting?

A. Well, I said "How do you do." They said "How do you do". And I said "How are you this morning, Rosco", meaning Mr. Crayeraft, and they introduced me to this fellow Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: That is right, pretty nearly right, [6944] as right as I can get it.

The Witness: And Shoemaker and I were discussing some books and the deposition started. I swore——

By Mr. Myron:

Q. (Interposing) They all sat down?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. Well, it is pretty hard for me to answer that question. I know that Mr. Gladstein sat down and I know that this fellow Cannalonga——

Presiding Inspector: Not so good that time.

The Witness: (Continuing) ——Sat down, and whether Mr. Craycraft sat down or not I don't know but I think he did.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And then what happened?

A. I swore this fellow Cannalonga and the reporter sat on one side and Mr. Gladstein on the other, and Cannalonga over on the other.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein speak to you before you swore Cannalonga in?

A. Not very much. He may have said a word or two.

Q. Did he tell you what the purpose of this meeting was?

A. I knew enough about it to know that they were going to take the testimony of a witness.

Q. Well, now, did he say anything to you?

A. Well, now, I couldn't answer that. You know how— [6945] I mean to say, he may have said something to me but there was no discussion as to whether this fellow was—he was a perfect stranger to me; I never saw him before.

Q. What is your best recollection? Did Mr. Gladstein say anything to you at all before you swore in Cannalonga?

A. He may have spoken in a friendly way, but nothing about who this individual was.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Nothing about this statement? A. No.

Q. And after you swore Mr. Cannalonga what happened?

A. Well, I stayed there in the room and these questions were asked and Cannalonga answered as he came around to it, or got around to it. He sat there taking everything in and looking around the room and answering questions when he got around to it.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein do all the questioning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when did Mr. Crayeraft leave the room?

A. Well, I don't know. He left it after a few minutes.

Q. Had Mr. Gladstein started to question Cannalonga? A. Yes, he had.

Q. How many questions—your best recollection on this—how many questions had he asked before Crayeraft left the room?

A. I think Crayeraft had—or, I think, this individual had got down to the point where he had related the circum- [6946] stances of his connecting up with the Government Intelligence Department and explained in detail how he had met those men, been called upon, how he had been involved with some——

Q. (Interposing) Was that shortly after Mr. Gladstein started his questioning?

A. Oh, it was quite a little while. He got up and——

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. (Interposing) Now, had Mr. Cannalonga left the room prior to Mr. Craycraft at any time?

A. He left the room twice, according to my recollection.

Q. Prior to the time that Mr. Craycraft left the room, is that right?

A. Well, I sent Craycraft downstairs to the street to do——

Q. (Interposing) You sent him down?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, did you answer my question?

A. No, I hadn't. Cannalonga said he wanted to go to the lavatory so I told Mr. Craycraft where it was and to take him down there.

Q. Is that the only occasion——

A. (Interposing) Well, then, he came back and I said "I want you to go down and talk to my wife because she will be getting pretty hot under the collar having to sit in the automobile so long", and so on.

Q. Then—— [6947]

A. (Interposing) So he went down there, you see, and then he came back after a while and he brought my wife back up into the office.

Q. Then, before Mr. Craycraft left the room Mr. Cannalonga went outside on one occasion?

A. Yes sir, one occasion.

Q. Is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who went with him?

A. Mr. Craycraft.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Was he the only one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were they gone on that occasion?

A. Oh, I should judge two or three minutes.

Q. And this was shortly after Mr. Gladstein had started to question Cannalonga?

A. Well, he had gone through quite a number of questions and answers.

Q. Now, after Craycroft left the room did Mr. Cannalonga leave again?

A. Well, one time he went out and didn't come back, as I understand it. I forget.

Q. He went out and didn't come back?

A. He left abruptly. He was asked a question and he just picked himself up and got out.

Q. Was that the only occasion that he left the room [6948] after Craycraft left?

A. Well, I would like to be more specific but I can't. You know, the matter didn't register in that sort of a way that I could be definite about the details of a thing of that kind. I didn't think it of sufficient consequence. I saw the man there. I thought he was disturbed and I sought to advise him as any attorney would.

Q. Now, did Mr. Gladstein leave the room at any time?

A. No, I don't think—no, he didn't to my knowledge.

Q. Did Mr. Shoemaker leave the room at any time? A. No, he did not.

Q. Now, you said, you testified that you did

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

leave the room and go out into the hallway with Mr. Cannalonga on one occasion.

A. Well, I talked to Cannalonga twice.

Q. When was the first time that you talked with Cannalonga with reference to the time Craycraft left the room?

A. Well, now, with reference to—I got him out in the hallway leading into my office which comprises a library, and there I talked to him.

Q. That was after Craycraft left the room?

A. Well, I think Craycraft came back with him from the lavatory—I may be mistaken on it—but the sense of it is that I talked to him and Craycraft was not there. I think Craycraft came into my office.

Q. Well, as I understood your testimony before Mr. [6949] Craycraft left to go down on the street he went out with Mr. Cannalonga on one occasion? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. To go to the lavatory? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, after Mr. Craycraft went down on the street you went out in the hallway with Mr. Cannalonga on two occasions, is that true?

A. Well, I talked to him on two occasions. I don't know about the details, whether Craycraft was in my office or had gone down on the street or not, sir.

Q. Well, when you talked with Mr. Cannalonga in the hallway outside the room was Mr. Craycraft with Cannalonga or with you?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. Mr. Cannalonga and I talked alone, sir.

Q. You were alone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was the occasion of Mr. Cannalonga going out with you the first time?

A. Well, I don't know; it isn't clear in my mind what it was. I think I may have asked him out there and talked to him.

Q. Well, why?

A. Why did I talk to him? [6950]

Q. Yes? What was the occasion for your going out in the hallway and talking with Cannalonga?

A. I wanted—I didn't want anyone to give a deposition or be a party to the giving of a deposition which might be coerced or be unwilling in any way to give a statement, or to give a statement that might be the result of any fear of any kind.

Q. And then you took Mr. Cannalonga out in the hallway and advised him of that?

A. I advised him that he didn't—yes, I will answer it that way, if you ask me if I advised him, yes, I advised him.

Q. You had the impression that he was being coerced and intimidated and you wanted to advise him that he didn't necessarily have to answer those questions?

A. Well, I didn't know whether he was or not. He was what you would call a reluctant witness.

Q. Well, that was your impression. That is the reason you took him out into the hallway and talked with him?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Mr. Grossman: What was his impression?

Mr. Myron: He can answer; he is an intelligent witness. Let him answer the question.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment. I think we are entitled to know what Mr. Myron means when he says "that was your impression."

Presiding Inspector: Read the question before that. [6951]

Mr. Myron: I will withdraw it and ask another

By Mr. Myron:

Q. As a result of certain things that happened in that room you brought Cannalonga out in the hallway and had this conversation with him, is that right?

A. Not as the result. It is the result of his own demeanor, not of anything else; his own demeanor in answering questions. I thought that——

Q. (Interposing): Well, can you describe his demeanor?

A. Well, I can, yes; but I don't want to.

Q. Was he reluctant? A. Well, it is——

Q. (Interposing): Hesitant?

A. No, I wouldn't say that he was hesitant. It was the typical Commie complex that——

Q. (Interposing): What is the "typical Commie complex?"

A. Oh, I can't answer it; you know it as well as I do.

Q. I don't know it. I want to find out what it is.

A. Well, he knows what is going on; he knows all about everything and he is just feeling his way around and not answering questions when he should answer them, and when he should answer them he won't answer them, or what-not. It is pretty hard to say.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Well, was Mr. Cannalonga bound to answer any questions at this meeting? [6952]

A. Now——

Q. What is that?

A. I couldn't force him to answer any questions. If he wanted to be as he is it isn't my fault. I just——

Q. (Interposing): Well, did it appear to you as though somebody else was forcing him to answer questions?

A. I didn't know what was happening, what was in the back of his mind. He was a funny individual.

Q. Well, did it appear to you as though somebody in that room was forcing him to answer the questions?

A. Certainly not, or there wouldn't have been any questions answered, sir.

Q. Well, then, why did you take him out in the hallway?

A. Because I thought the man had been guilty of some crime or something and that he was going to get himself into trouble. I wanted him to tell the truth about himself, or about what had happened in respect to Mr. Bridges. If he had made a mistake or if he had done wrong I wanted him to rectify the wrong.

Q. Well, what questions were asked in that room which indicated to you that he was guilty of any crime?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. Oh, his general demeanor. I didn't know who the man was. He was a——

Q. (Interposing): This is Cannalonga's demeanor? [6953] A. Yes, sir.

Q. What about his demeanor indicated to you that he might have been guilty, or thought he might have been guilty of any crime?

A. Oh, I don't know. It was just simply—I put that in. That is just that I didn't know what the man had been into. It struck me that something was funny about it.

Q. Then, why did you take him out in the hall and talk with him?

A. Because I want to see the man protected if there was anything wrong in his career.

Q. He needed protection there, didn't he?

A. He didn't need any protection, except if he needed protection, advice from a lawyer he should have it and he was going to get it. It was in my office and I was taking his deposition.

Q. The protection that you thought he needed was he needed a lawyer there?

A. If he couldn't—yes, I did.

Q. He was not in any condition, was he?

A. Certainly, he was in a condition. You mean to say what condition?

What do you refer to by "condition"?

Presiding Inspector: He means——

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

By Mr. Myron:

Q. (Interposing): To answer questions?

A. Oh, of course he was. It was perfectly——

[6954]

Q. (Interposing): And he didn't want to answer any questions, did he?

A. Well, I thought he did and he didn't.

Q. Now, did Mr. Gladstein force him?

A. Oh, I should say not.

Q. To answer?

A. I should say not. Mr. Gladstein treated him as courteously and as decently——

Q. (Interposing): Well, did you do anything?

A. You heard what I have done.

Q. Did you do anything in that room to force him to answer these questions?

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Well, did Craycraft?

A. No; Rosco sat over on the side, or stood over by the window.

Q. Then, can you tell us why you took him out in the hall?

A. For the same reason that you would as an attorney.

Q. Well, what is that reason? If you want my answer and on the record, why, I don't know whether it would stand or not, but what is your reason?

Presiding Inspector: Hasn't he given it two or three times?

The Witness: I thought my—— [6955]

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Wait, let's see if he has given it. He said he acted as a reluctant witness, there was something funny about him, and it impressed him that he might have some kind of psychological complex, he didn't understand it, and that it occurred to him that he might need advice.

Mr. Myron: Protection.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

Mr. Myron: And protection, I think, he said.

Presiding Inspector: Protection, yes. So he suggested that he might want to see a lawyer and he would arrange it.

I think you have covered it.

Mr. Myron: All right, your Honor. I will go on to another subject.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Now, after this meeting in the hall, or conversation in the hall with Mr. Cannalonga, did you go out again with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before the meeting broke up?

A. Well, I don't know whether I did or not. I know I talked to him a second time.

Q. Where was that conversation held?

A. In the hall leading to the elevator. [6956]

Q. Who was present?

A. Myself and my wife. Mrs. W. P. Lord.

Q. And what did you tell Cannalonga, or what conversation did you have with Cannalonga on that occasion?

A. I told him that I thought if he had done a wrong towards Mr. Bridges that he should rectify it, but if there was anything that prevented him from doing it that he ought to go and talk to an attorney about his rights and what was advisable for him to do, and I would be glad to name some lawyers who would give him the correct advice.

Q. And this was before the final question was asked?

A. Well, I think it was afterwards. I think that I went down the hall with him and my wife. We were anxious to get away. We had been there two hours and she was cold, it was a cold morning, and more than two hours had transpired, as a matter of fact.

Q. Where was Mr. Gladstein?

A. I left him in my office.

Q. And who was with Mr. Gladstein in your office?

A. Mr. Crayeraft. Maybe Cannalonga was afterwards; I don't know; I can't——

Q. (Interposing): Was Shoemaker there?

A. That is right; it was Shoemaker; that is right. I left the office. Cannalonga walked down the hall to the elevator.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga go out on this occasion before [6957] you did?

A. No. As I recall it, he went out with me, but I may be mistaken on that. It was not a matter that impressed itself on my memory at all, but I know I talked to him in the hallway there.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. Well, did you come back into the office after you had this conversation with Cannalonga?

A. No. The last conversation?

Q. This last conversation?

A. No, sir. I did not.

Q. You did not come back in the office?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you go?

A. Well, in order to make peace with my wife I took her up to restaurant——

Q. (Interposing): No, no. We are outside of your office near the elevator.

A. I went down the elevator and got into my automobile and drove up to a place called Henry Thiele's.

Q. Now, we are not——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We are not interested in that.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. We are not interested in that. Did Cannalonga go down in the elevator with you?

A. I think he did; he may not have. [6958]

Q. Your wife was with you at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: Craycraft?

The Witness: Craycraft was not, your Honor.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Then, you and Cannalonga and your wife, went down in the elevator?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. That is my recollection.

Q. To the first floor?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. Did you talk with Cannalonga in the elevator?

A. I think I had finished my conversation with him.

Q. Where did you leave Cannalonga after you got off the elevator?

A. In the—I am not going to answer that because I don't know. It isn't definite in my mind about what took place at that stage of the proceeding.

Q. Don't you remember this conversation you had with Cannalonga?

A. I remember the conversation, its general import; that was up on the fourth floor of this building near the elevator, but what—whether he went down in the elevator with me or not I can't recall definitely.

Q. Do you recall seeing Cannalonga leave the building? A. No, I don't.

Q. Well, in any event you left Craycraft, Shoemaker and [6959] Gladstein in your office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you and Cannalonga out in the hallway?

A. He bolted out; we were through. He was not going to answer certain questions apparently and he went out, so I said to my wife "We will go now", and I says "If you need any library facilities here, Mr. Gladstein, they are here for you." And I went down the hallway and there was Cannalonga waiting at the elevator and at that stage of the proceedings I talked to him again.

Q. Who told you the proceedings or the meeting there was over? A. Nobody.

Q. How did you realize that the meeting was over?

A. Well, when he came to the point where he was asked as to whether or not he hadn't been threatened he sat there in his chair and stared, and all of a sudden he jumped up and started down the hallway out of the office, so I proceeded——

Q. (Interposing): Didn't say anything, just jumped up and walked out?

A. Yes; I think I waited a minute or two.

Q. Just a minute. I am getting Cannalonga. You say he jumped up and bolted out; is that right?

A. Well, he just left.

Q. Didn't say anything? [6960] A. No.

Q. And then you took your hat and went out?

A. In a minute or two. When I got out he was there by the elevator and again I engaged him in this conversation.

Q. And you told Gladstein that he could have the use of your library and you left him with Crayeraft and Shoemaker in your office?

A. That is my recollection, yes.

Q. Now, when you got outside where was Cannalonga?

Presiding Inspector: You mean outside of that?

Mr. Myron: Outside of his office.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Presiding Inspector: He told you where he was.

Mr. Myron: I want to find out where he first met him.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Now, Cannalonga was out in the hallway, as I understand it?

Presiding Inspector: He has told you.

Mr. Myron: I would like to have it again, that one question.

Presiding Inspector: All right, tell him again.

A. I think he rang for the elevator. I was coming up to the elevator. The elevator was not very fast on Sunday and the result was that I talked to him again in front of the elevator door.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. How long a conversation did you have with him [6961] there?

A. Oh, just long enough to tell him that he was not compelled—you asked me how long? I should judge a minute and a half or two minutes. [6962]

Q. And you went immediately into the elevator and went downstairs? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Cannalonga had rung for the elevator?

A. He had what?

Q. You had rung for the elevator?

A. He had rang for it; yes, sir.

Q. And the three of you——

A. (Interposing): I say "Yes, sir." He was in front of the elevator door.

Q. Now, does it refresh your recollection as to whether he went downstairs with you in the elevator? A. It doesn't.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. You don't remember?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Have you talked—after you left the building did you get in touch with Mr. Gladstein again?

A. I didn't see him again.

Q. Did you talk with him?

A. You mean while he was in Portland on that trip?

Q. That is right. A. No, sir.

Q. Who had the key to your office?

A. I think it was turned over to—he had a key—I don't know whether I gave him a key or not. I might have [6963] given Craycraft a key.

Q. You gave Craycraft a key?

A. I might have. I can't recall whether I did or not.

Q. Did you talk to Craycraft about this meeting after you left the building?

A. What period of time are you referring to, sir?

Q. After you left the building.

A. On that day, no.

Q. Did you talk to him the next day?

A. I don't know. Those kind of matters are not clear in my mind. I don't think I did.

Q. Did he return the key to you?

A. He probably did; if he had it he did. I know I have it. I only have one key.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. You don't remember him returning the key to you? A. I don't recall the incident.

Q. You only have one key?

A. I only have one key and I know where it is right now.

Q. How did you get in the office the next day?

A. Oh, there are several other parties that have keys to my office. I don't get down there and open up the office myself, you know.

Q. When did you talk next to Mr. Crayeraft about this incident?

A. I don't know. I may have talked to him.

[6964]

Q. When?

A. Well, I think he was in my office Saturday morning—Saturday morning I talked to him.

Q. That is the first time you talked to him since this incident on Sunday?

A. No, no. He came out to my house one night.

Q. When was that?

A. That was some time ago. It was before he came down here to testify?

Q. Right after this Sunday meeting?

A. Well, it was some time afterwards.

Q. You talked about this incident?

A. He and his wife and children came out, drove out one Sunday night, as I recall it.

Q. You talked about this incident on one of the previous Sundays?

A. I don't think so much was said about that. I may have made some comment on it.

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Q. You stated on direct examination that Mr. Cannalonga was laboring under—you asked Mr. Cannalonga if he was laboring under any strain. Was that the first occasion, first conversation you had with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How close were you at any time to Mr. Cannalonga while he was in the room? [6965]

A. As close as this gentleman (indicating) here is to me.

Q. And during the——

Mr. Grossman: For the record, that is Judge Goodwin, who is about three feet away, is that correct?

The Witness: That is about correct.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And during the latter part of the questioning Mr. Cannalonga said nothing, is that right?

A. Yes; he refused—he didn't refuse, but he just looked through his glasses and didn't answer.

Q. And the questions which Mr. Gladstein was asking were leading questions, were they not?

A. I thought so, but that was a matter of opinion.

Q. Your opinion as an attorney is that they were leading questions, is that right?

A. They were.

Q. And it was in the course of this questioning that Mr. Cannalonga got up from his chair and bolted from the room?

A. Well, the word "bolted" is too descriptive.

Q. I thought you used that word?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

A. I may have used the word "bolted". He got up and out he goes.

Q. Now, while Mr. Craycraft was downstairs did Mr. [6966] Gladstein ask any questions?

A. Yes. The examination went right along the same.

Q. Well, how long would you say Mr. Craycraft was out of the room with your wife, I understood you to say. A. Yes. Some little time.

Q. How long? A. Quite some little time.

Q. How long would you say?

A. Oh, it would be very difficult to estimate.

Q. Half an hour? A. No, sir.

Q. Twenty minutes?

A. That would be very liberal.

Q. About fifteen or twenty minutes?

A. I think about fifteen minutes; maybe not that long.

Q. How many times did Mr. Craycraft go out of the room with Cannalonga, other than the first occasion when he went out to the lavatory?

A. He only went out once to my recollection.

Q. That was the time he went out to the lavatory?

A. Of course, he went out with him once and then he went out to get my wife.

Mr. Myron: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions. [6967]

Presiding Inspector: You don't want this witness any further?

(Testimony of William P. Lord.)

Mr. Grossman: No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused, Mr. Lord.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Grossman: May we have a recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I believe Mr. Madala was on the stand for further cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

JOHN L. MADALA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Madala, in the first statement, the October 8th statement, there appears the following language:

"The only time I ever appeared as witness in any civil or criminal litigation was in 1937 at Seattle, Washington. This was either in the Superior Court or Federal Court, I do not remember which. I testified as an expert witness for the plaintiff in the case of Golden vs. McCormick Steamship Company, wherein seaman Golden sued the McCormick Steamship Company for damages of a personal injury sustained by him [6968] while he worked on one of the company's ships."

Was the information contained in what I have read given to you by Cannalonga when he talked to you in the FBI office or in the hotel room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including the name of the case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Positive.

Q. Between the time that Cannalonga testified here—withdraw that. After Cannalonga testified here for the first time and left San Francisco, when was the next time that you saw him?

A. After he left San Francisco?

Q. That is right?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

A. Oh, on the late afternoon of May 29, 1941.

Q. Where did you see him?

A. I saw him at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emel, 3003 East 115 Street, Seattle.

Q. How did you know he was there?

A. I was watching the house.

Q. How long had you been watching the house?

A. I had been watching the house intermittently for ten days.

Q. What do you mean by "intermittently"?

[6969]

A. I would drive by every morning, every afternoon and every evening.

Q. How did you know he was there on this particular occasion?

A. Because I saw his car in the driveway that morning.

Q. Did you have a discussion with him that same day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him there was a subpoena out for him?

A. Yes; I told him they were trying to serve him with a subpoena, yes.

Q. Did you describe the subpoena to him?

A. No.

Q. Did you do anything to get that subpoena served?

A. Yes. I called Mr. Bonham and told him that we had located Cannalonga and that he was available if he wanted to serve him with a subpoena.

Q. Did you arrange with Mr. Bonham how and when the subpoena would be served?

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

A. Yes. I told him Mr. Cannalonga would be in our office at 2:00 P.M. on May 30th.

Q. And was he served in your office on May 30th? A. Served in my presence; yes, sir.

Q. At that time, or about that time, did you discuss with Mr. Cannalonga the meaning of the subpoena? A. No, sir. [6970]

Q. Did you ever discuss with Mr. Cannalonga what the subpoena meant? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Cannalonga that the subpoena required him to appear in San Francisco forthwith?

A. I guess that was written on the subpoena.

Q. Did you ever discuss that with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it discussed with Mr.—withdraw that. Did anyone in your presence, after the subpoena was served, discuss with Mr. Cannalonga his obligations under the subpoena?

A. Yes; Mr. Schwandt, the Inspector that served him.

Q. What did he say?

A. That it was a forthwith subpoena.

Q. Did he explain the word "forthwith" to Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I don't know that it was necessary; I am sure he didn't.

Q. Did he explain to Mr. Cannalonga where Mr. Cannalonga had to go? A. San Francisco.

Q. Is that all he said?

A. That is all I heard; yes, sir.

(Testimony of John L. Madala:)

Q. Did Mr. Schwandt say anything except that Mr. [6971] Cannalonga had to go to San Francisco forthwith in response to the subpoena?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Was there ever any other discussion in your presence with Mr. Cannalonga with respect to his obligation under that or any other subpoena?

A. There was no discussion about a subpoena at all. He knew he had to come down here, and when he was served he took the first available train out of there.

Q. Was there ever, outside of that occasion which Mr. Schwandt made the service, was there ever, in your presence, any explanation to Mr. Cannalonga of the effect of any subpoena that was served on him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have a discussion with Mr. or Mrs. Emel with respect to the whereabouts of Cannalonga?

A. Yes. I had a daily discussion with Mrs. Emel.

Q. What did she tell you about his whereabouts?

A. She told me that he left hurriedly at midnight May 9th, left in his automobile with his clothes, and she hadn't the slightest idea where he went.

Q. Did you have any discussion with Mr. Emel about it?

A. Mr. Emel was on the high seas at the time I was in Seattle, during that period. [6972]

Q. Did you ever have a discussion with Mr. Emel on this question? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of John L. Madala.)

Mr. Grossman: I would like to ask Mr. Del Guercio through you, your Honor, whether we have copies of those letters available at this time?

Mr. Del Guercio: I telephoned about them this noon and I haven't heard yet. I had to take a number of them. I didn't know which ones they were. I have phoned, but haven't heard yet.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Any redirect?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, your Honor. Just a minute.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Cannalonga after he got off the stand?

A. Nothing particularly; no, sir.

Q. Did you bawl out Cannalonga in the manner in which he testified? [6973]

A. No, sir; I thought he made a good witness.

Q. Did anyone in your presence bawl Cannalonga out? A. No, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Call the next witness. Raise your right hand.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Cannalonga sign these two statements that I have shown you, Government's Exhibits 208 and 209, the first one on October 8, 1940, and the second one on October 9, 1940, voluntarily?

A. I didn't get the last part.

Presiding Inspector: "Voluntarily."

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Cannalonga at any time, any place, anywhere, say to you, or anyone in your presence, that he would refuse to sign Government's Exhibits 208 or 209 because they contained false statements?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Cannalonga say to you, or to anyone in your presence, that Bridges and Schneidermann were not together at any Communist Party meeting? [6977]

A. He never said that.

Q. Did Cannalonga say to you or to anyone in

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

your presence that he would refuse to sign any statement because it contained a statement to the effect that Bridges and Schneidermann were together at a Communist Party meeting——

A. (Interposing) You will have to——

Q. (Continuing) ——because such a statement was false? A. No; he never said that.

Q. Did you, or anyone in your presence, say to Cannalonga at any time, any place, what had become of the girl that he, Cannalonga, had picked up at Reno? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, or anyone in your presence, at any time, at any place, make reference to any girl to Cannalonga? A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you say, or did anyone in your presence say to Cannalonga, "Oh, yes, you know who we mean," or words to that effect? [6978]

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say, or did anyone in your presence say to Cannalonga, say or mention the name of the girl and the various places, and the various states where Cannalonga had stayed with a girl?

A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Q. Did you describe, or did anyone in your presence describe to Cannalonga, the itinerary he was supposed to have taken with such a girl from the State of Nevada into the State of California, into the State of Oregon, and thence into the State of Washington? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, or did anyone in your presence compute, in the presence of Cannalonga, how much one would get for conviction under the Mann Act?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, or did anyone in your presence say to Cannalonga, that he would get 20 years under the Mann Act? A. No, sir.

Q. Or words to that effect? A. No, sir.

Q. Was any discussion ever had at any time, any place, with Cannalonga regarding a Mann Act charge? A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you know, at any of the times that you inter- [6979] viewed Cannalonga, or at any of the times that you were present with Cannalonga, that there was a Mann Act charge against him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know now? A. No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: That relates to your information, as well as your knowledge? You haven't any information about that matter?

The Witness: No; we have no knowledge of it. Our files would disclose if there was such a violation against him.

Presiding Inspector: What?

The Witness: Our Bureau files would disclose if there was such a violation against him. Our records would show if there ever was such a violation against him. There is no such record.

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. There is no such record of any such charges against Cannalonga? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Just one moment. We are going to object to that last question and answer because obviously it calls for hearsay; and if admissible we are going into the FBI records as to what they show. We submit we have a right to do it by subpoena. We consider this irrelevant [6980] because it is hearsay as to this person as to what the records show.

Presiding Inspector: I think what the records show is irrelevant—except his knowledge.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you have any information——

Presiding Inspector: Just his knowledge, his information. That is all that is really pertinent.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever have any information at any time——

Presiding Inspector: So the other answer may be stricken out.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing) ——that Cannalonga was violating the Mann Act or had violated the Mann Act?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Or the White Slave Act? A. No, sir.

Q. Was that subject ever discussed with Cannalonga or in Cannalonga's presence? A. No, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Cannalonga's condition at the times that you talked to him or were present when some other agent talked to him? [6981]

A. He appeared very normal and intelligent and coherent in his conversation.

Q. Did he, at any time during your interviews with him, or interviews in your presence, appear to be under the influence of any drug, narcotic, or liquor? A. No, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Cross examination.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Dickstein, at the time you first talked to Mr. Cannalonga did you give him information about this Gowman Hotel meeting before he gave you information? A. No, sir.

Q. When Mr. Cannalonga testified the first time he was on the stand that you gave him information about, rather, that you, or Mr. Madala, gave him information about this meeting before he gave you any, would you state that he is not telling the truth?

A. He is not telling the truth there. We didn't give him no information like that.

Q. You are sure of that now?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

A. We only heard it from him; we didn't give him that information. He gave it to us.

Q. You are sure of that? [6982]

A. I am absolutely positive that Cannalonga told us about the Gowman Hotel meeting.

Q. Before you told him anything about it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know anything about this Gowman Hotel meeting before you talked to Mr. Cannalonga?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you talked to any of the people that Mr. Cannalonga put in that meeting before you talked to Mr. Cannalonga? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know anything about this alleged meeting in San Francisco at which Schneidermann and Bridges were present before Mr. Cannalonga told you about it? A. No, sir.

Q. Would you say that when Mr. Cannalonga testified that you gave him information about that meeting before he told you anything about it, that he was not telling the truth?

A. Will you explain that question again?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know as——

Presiding Inspector: I think you have a contradiction if——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) There is a better way to bring this out. [6983]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. If I tell you that Cannalonga, when he was first on the stand here, stated that before he gave you any information about that meeting in San Francisco, you and Madala, or one of you, gave him information about that meeting, would that affect your testimony any?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't understand that question. I will object to it on the ground that it is not what the evidence is.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know, but I think that you have a complete contradiction if he did say he had.

Mr. Grossman: I want to know if he will change his testimony considering what Cannalonga testified to?

Presiding Inspector: Ask him, on the basis of whatever he did say, he would want to change his testimony.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Would you want to change your testimony if I told you that when Mr. Cannalong was on the stand here he stated that you and Mr. Madala told him about a meeting in San Francisco in which Schneidermann and Bridges were present, before he mentioned it to you?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question, I don't recall any such testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall.

Mr. Del Guercio: Let's get Cannalonga's testimony. That [6984] is not what he testified to.

Mr. Grossman: I submit he did.

Presiding Inspector: It will take a few minutes to look it up.

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Mr. Grossman: It will be about 20 pages. It will take some time to do it. It is in the volume that is on Mr. Gaiser's desk because I borrowed it.

Presiding Inspector: Is the testimony in that volume?

Mr. Grossman: Yes; in the beginning of my cross examination of him.

Mr. Del Guercio: Cannalonga testified twice concerning that.

(Whereupon the transcript was referred to.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think that was covered. It wavers somewhat—around about page 1086.

Mr. Grossman: Will the reporter read that last question that I asked?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I would not want to change my testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know about Schneidermann and Bridges. The particular meeting——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Interposing) The particular meeting in San Francisco. [6985]

A. I would not want to change my testimony.

Q. How many different times did you see Cannalonga before he appeared on Tuesday?

A. I saw him on October 7th, October 8th, October 9th and November 5, 1940; and the next time I saw him was down here.

Q. Have you seen him since he left San Francisco after testifying? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Q. How did you happen to see him on November 5th?

A. I called him up to come to the office.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. Well, when we interviewed him the first time he said the Gowman Hotel meeting took place in March, 1937. At the time that he stated that he gave two or three other names of persons who attended the Gowman Hotel meeting. We talked to one of them named Laddie Hope, and he placed the meeting as May 1937, at the time of the ILA convention in Seattle. I called Cannalonga to come to the office, and he did come on November 5th. I asked him was he sure that the meeting at the Gowman Hotel was held in March or May, 1937. He said there was a doubt in his mind after he left us and he feels now sure that the meeting was held at the Gowman Hotel during the month of May, 1937, during the time of the convention in Seattle. [6986]

Q. Who first raised the question of Eugene Dietrich? A. Cannalonga.

Q. When he was in your office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say about Dietrich?

A. When he got through talking there he said, "By the way, when I left you I was a little doubtful about Dietrich. I don't think he was present at that meeting."

In view of that I said, "Well, you had better put that in your statement if there is any doubt about how the name came up."

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Q. Did he explain why he was doubtful about Dietrich? A. He said, "I am not sure."

I said, "If you are not sure you had better put that in the statement."

Q. Did you give him a copy of the statement, the first statement he signed, after he signed it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who wrote out this statement that was signed on November 5th?

A. November 5th? Agent James A. Robey, in my presence.

Q. What work did you do before you went to work for the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. I was with the Immigration Service for about a year and a half. [6987]

Q. Where did you work in the Immigration Service?

A. I worked in Detroit, Cleveland, Los Angeles, New York, Chicago. The last place I worked was in Chicago in 1934.

Q. Where did you work before that?

A. Prior to that time?

Q. Yes.

A. I was with the George A. Atwell Foundation Company, Civil Engineers, New York, now known as Thompson-Starrett Construction Company.

Q. How long had you worked there?

A. Two years. [6988]

Q. When you first went to see Cannalonga did you have with you information on his previous criminal record?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

A. We had no record of the fact that he had a criminal record at all. We checked whether he did have a record or not before we talked to him to get his background.

Q. Before you went to see Cannalonga did you take steps to find out whether there was any investigation pending to determine whether he had committed any crime?

A. We merely checked the indices of our file in the Seattle office, in the town where Cannalonga lived. We found no record on him whatsoever.

Q. When you say "we" do you mean you participated? A. Agent Madala and myself.

Q. Uh-huh. (Affirmative)

A. I might add that we also checked the Seattle Police Department.

Q. Before you went to see Cannalonga?

A. Before we interviewed him.

Q. Did you check every investigation being conducted as well as for a criminal record?

A. There was no investigation being conducted.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know what he means by that question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. He may understand it.

By Mr. Grossman: [6989]

Q. Isn't it true that in the files of the FBI there is a record of investigations of people against whom there have not yet been filed or ever were filed criminal charges? [6990]

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Oh, your Honor——

A. (Interposing) No, sir.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you mean if an investigation is carried on and it doesn't result in a criminal charge no record is kept by the FBI?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as not being proper cross examination, immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: I will let him take the answer. He is bound by it.

A. There would be a record to show if he ever was investigated.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. All right. I am asking you whether you checked that kind of record before you went to see Cannalonga? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga express any reluctance at all at any time that you and Madala talked to him to give the statement you requested?

A. A little bit at the beginning; he was a little reluctant.

Q. How did he express that reluctance?

A. Well, he was afraid—he mentioned about the goon squad in the Communist Party, that they would beat him up if he talked about anybody. [6991]

Q. He said that.

A. Yes, he just mentioned that they would beat him up.

Q. Did you put that in his statement?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

A. I don't recall that it was put in the statement; it was not material to the statement; that is why.

Q. Where was he when he said that?

A. At the first contact. Agent Madala was not present. I met him in front of the Immigration Building and talked to him about a few minutes and asked him to come up to the office and he said "I would" and before we reached the office, while walking to the office from the garage he just mentioned "I will get hurt if I do any talking."

Q. Was that the only reluctance he expressed?

A. That is all I recall.

Q. Did he express any reluctance to give you the information you wished?

A. Well, just a little bit, as I stated before.

Q. Well, how did this express itself? Did he say "I don't want to answer that"——

A. (Interposing) No; just as I told you he was afraid to get hurt.

Q. After that did he do anything to indicate any reluctance? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you discuss with him why he hadn't given this [6992] same information when he was contacted before the last hearing.

The Witness: I beg your pardon. Can I get the question?

Mr. Grossman: Will you read it back, Miss Reporter?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

A. I didn't see him.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I am asking you whether you ever discussed —withdraw that.

Didn't you know that he was contacted before the last hearing by one of the Immigration men?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. The question is whether he knew.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, yes or no, did you know it?

The Witness: He told us he was—I only knew when we interviewed him he told us he was contacted by John P. Boyd, Jr., one of the Immigrant Inspectors in Seattle.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did Madala tell you that before you went to see Cannalonga?

A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Positive.

Q. Are you sure that this interview, or this contact [6993] that Mr. Boyd had with Mr. Cannalonga did not appear in your files?

A. No, sir, not in our files.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. Not in our files.

Q. When did he first mention it? When did Cannalonga first mention it to you? A. To us?

Q. Yes.

A. About being contacted by the Immigration Authorities?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Q. Yes. A. On October the 7th.

Q. Where was it; your office or the Roosevelt Hotel?

A. No; at the Roosevelt Hotel, Room 1214.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. Positively.

Q. How do you happen to remember when it was?

A. That is when we interviewed him. We didn't say much at the other office. We went over to a more comfortable place; we went over to our hotel.

Q. What I mean is this: You talked to him at least four different times. Why are you sure this was the place where he first mentioned his contact with Mr. Boyd?

A. Because that was the first contact with him and he repeated that the next day, on October the 8th after he signed [6994] the statement. He elaborated on his contact with Boyd.

Q. When he first mentioned his contact with Boyd what did he say about it?

A. Well, he said that at the last hearing Boyd wanted him to go down to San Francisco to testify, at the Bridges' hearing at Angel Island.

Q. Anything else?

A. That is all. He just didn't want to go because he was a little irritated. He thought they are trying to buy him off, or something, that they would give him a trip down to San Francisco, but he misunderstood them.

Q. Did he state whether he had any information he could testify about in San Francisco?

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

A. At that—when is this, Mr. Grossman?

Q. When Boyd contacted him?

A. When we first contacted him?

Q. No; when he described his contact with Mr. Boyd did he state whether he could have testified in San Francisco, whether he had information that would have allowed it?

A. No, he didn't tell Mr. Boyd anything.

Q. I want to know what he told you about it?

A. He told us he didn't tell anything to Mr. Boyd.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all, Mr. Grossman?

Mr. Grossman: Just one moment, please. [6995]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga ever mention a statement that he had given to Matt Meehan?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. When did he mention it?

A. That was on October the 8th.

Q. What did he say about it?

A. Well, he said that he left after he was contacted by Boyd. He was down walking through Seattle and he ran into Matt Meehan and he was all excited and he related to Matt Meehan his contact with Boyd, and that Matt Meehan invited him up to his office and asked him would he give a statement and he said he went up there and "I gave some sort of statement in the presence of Grace Corbin," who is the secretary of Matt Meehan, and that they had typed this statement up and he was given a copy of this statement. That is what he told us.

(Testimony of Abraham Dickstein.)

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: The next witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will have another witness tomorrow. May we adjourn now? We haven't any more at the present time.

Presiding Inspector: Why, I suppose so. We still have a minute.

Mr. Del Guercio: I could take it up in making a speech. [6996]

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Grossman: I wonder if we could find out if the Government has any idea when they will end so we could begin to make preparations for our witnesses?

Presiding Inspector: Finish tomorrow morning?

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we can finish tomorrow.

Mr. Grossman: Any idea of when tomorrow?

Mr. Del Guercio: Late tomorrow. It all depends on the cross.

Presiding Inspector: We will assume they will finish tomorrow morning early.

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: That is a safer thing to assume because you will have your witnesses here, if you have any more.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, we will have some.

Presiding Inspector: Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon at 4:00 o'clock P. M. an adjournment was taken until ten o'clock Tuesday, June 10, 1942.) [6997]

Court Room 267
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A. M.

[6998]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio, we will proceed.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are ready for another witness. Call Mr. Lundeberg, please.

Presiding Inspector: Stand up and raise your right hand.

HARRY LUNDEBERG

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: State your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: Harry Lundeberg; 59 Clay Street, San Francisco.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Were you ever connected with the—strike that. Did you ever hold any position in the Maritime Federation?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. I was the first President of the Maritime Federation.

Q. When was that?

A. That was in 1935; I was elected in April 1935. [7000]

Q. How many members does the Sailor's Union of the Pacific have at the present time?

A. The Sailor's Union of the Pacific at the Present time have between five and six thousand members active.

Q. Do you know a Mr. Melnikow?

A. Melnikow?

Q. Yes. A. Henry Melnikow?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Now, was he ever, I believe the word is retained by your union, the Sailor's Union of the Pacific?

A. Henry Melnikow was retained by the Sailor's Union of the Pacific by Mr. Paul Scharrenberg, a discredited faker who was expelled from the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

The Reporter: Will you spell that name, please?

The Witness: S-c-h-a-r-r-e-n-b-e-r-g. He was retained by Scharrenberg to help out in the negotiations and he was discharged——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Just a moment, please.

The Witness: (Continuing) ——discharged from the Sailor's——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Just a moment, please, Mr. Lundeberg.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

I think the question has been answered.

Presiding Inspector. I think so. [7001]

Mr. Gladstein: I move the last statement regarding the discharge be stricken as not responsive.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Why was he discharged, Mr. Lundberg?

Presiding Inspector: Wait a moment.

I think I will let it stand. It will only lead to other questions.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

The Witness: He was discharged——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Just a moment.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have a question there. It isn't necessary for counsel——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I want to make an objection to it, counsel.

Presiding Inspector: You are entitled to make an objection, of course.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the question as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Why is it material?

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Melnikow, when he was on the stand, testified as to why he was discharged from the Sailor's Union of the Pacific, for how long a period he set himself up as an expert on trade union matters.

Presiding Inspector: Was that on direct? [7002]

Mr. Del Guercio: It was on direct and cross both.

Presiding Inspector: How is that, Mr. Gladstein? I don't recall.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to check the record on that, if your Honor please. I am of the opinion that it was collateral matter brought out on cross.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is a collateral matter.

Mr. Gladstein: Brought out on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: If it was brought out on direct I think he may answer.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you have a reference to the direct examination, Mr. Del Guercio, in which you say that was brought out?

Mr. Del Guercio: I have both; I don't have the record here before me.

Presiding Inspector: Let's get it.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I withdraw that question temporarily and proceed?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have your activities in the trade unions for the past 18 years been mostly on the Pacific Coast, Mr. Lundeberg? A. On the Pacific Coast, yes.

Q. When was the Sailor's Union of the Pacific started?

A. The Sailor's Union of the Pacific was organized in [7003] 1885.

Q. And it has continued ever since?

A. Has been in continued existence since 1885.

Q. Do you know Harry Bridges?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Do you recognize him here in the Court room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out, please?

A. (Indicating) Sitting down there chewing gum.

Mr. Del Guercio: May the record show that the Alien has been identified by the witness?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes, no question about it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, when did you first meet the Alien here?

A. I met Bridges first in 1934 up in Seattle.

Q. And under what circumstances, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. I met him in a meeting of the Seattle Marine Council.

Q. And when did you next meet him?

A. Next I met him in February, 1935, in San Francisco in the Maritime Conference.

Q. Here in San Francisco?

A. Yes; I was a delegate from the Sailor's Union there.

Q. And when was the next time that you met him?

A. The next time I met him was up in Seattle in the first Maritime Federation Convention. [7004]

Q. Was that a conference or a convention of the Maritime Federation?

A. That was the first convention of the Maritime Federation.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. That is the one in which you were elected President? A. That is right. [7005]

Q. And when was the next time that you saw the Alien?

A. I saw him down in Frisco from time to time. After I became elected to the Maritime Federation I used to go up and down the coast, and I ran into him down in Frisco from time to time.

Q. Will you state under what circumstances you met him here in San Francisco at that time?

A. Well, just in the line of trade union business.

Q. Have you ever been to his home here in San Francisco? A. Yes. I was to his home once.

Q. And when was that?

A. Oh, in '35; some time during '35; the summer of '35, I guess.

Q. And will you describe the circumstances under which you went to the Alien's home at that time?

A. I was invited up there for supper.

Q. Who invited you? A. Bridges.

Q. And did you go up there?

A. Yes; I went up there.

Q. And who did you meet, if anyone, when you arrived at his home? A. I met Darcy up there.

Q. And did you have any conversation with Darcy and Bridges at that time in Bridges' home?

A. Well, yes; we talked a while. [7006]

Q. Did Bridges introduce you to Sam Darcy?

A. Well, he introduced me to Sam Darcy, first as Mr. Jacobson, a carpenter, but afterwards he said it was Darcy.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Will you relate all the conversation that you had in Bridges' home at that time with Darcy, yourself and Bridges?

A. Well, I don't remember the details. We talked about various things on the waterfront, and unions, and so forth.

Darcy asked lots of questions. It was a general conversation.

Q. Now, at that time you were the President of the Maritime Federation, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Did Sam Darcy ask you to do anything?

A. Well, he asked me to join the Communist Party.

Q. What did he say about joining the Communist Party?

A. Well, he gave me a lot of soft soap, saying that if I joined the Communist Party it would do me a lot of good and the Communist Party will give me a lot of support, and all the soft soap they peddle around.

Q. And this was in the presence of Bridges?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did Sam Darcy, in that conversation, say anything [7007] about Bridges being a member of the Communist Party in Bridges' presence?

A. He mentioned several people who was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Who was that, Sam Darcy? A. Yes.

Q. What did he say about Bridges?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Well, he said he was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. What did Bridges say?

A. Well, he says, "You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist Party if you join."

Q. Did Bridges join Sam Darcy in urging you to join the Communist Party?

A. No. Sam Darcy is the guy—Sam Darcy was the guy who wanted me to join the Party.

Q. Now, was anything said about that if you joined the Communist Party they would throw their whole support to you and make you as big a shot as they had made Harry Bridges?

A. Well, this guy, Darcy, said, "We will give you lots of publicity, and will build you up, and make a great labor leader out of you," and the blah-blah that the Communist Party always peddles.

I told them that I wasn't interested in joining the Party; that I belonged to a trade union and always did, and couldn't [7008] see why I should belong to the Communist Party.

Q. Now, did Sam Darcy say that if you joined the Communist Party——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) That is quite leading, all of this examination.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you are leading.

Mr. Gladstein: The last three or four questions have been leading and I haven't objected.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Be a little careful; be very careful.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was anything else said by either Sam Darcy or by Harry Bridges at that time?

A. Well, I can't remember. There was a general conversation.

Q. Now, did you join the Communist Party?

A. I should say not.

Q. Can you recall at this time anything else that Bridges may have said in the presence of Darcy and yourself at that time?

Presiding Inspector: That he did say.

A. I can't remember the details. It was a general conversation.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Generally, in substance, what did Bridges say? We [7009] don't expect you, of course, to remember the exact words or the——

Presiding Inspector: Have you given the substance as far as you remember it?

The Witness: Well, the substance was, as I told you, that Darcy asked me to join the Communist Party and Bridges says, "You don't have to be afraid because I am one too," and the old stuff, and the conversation was friendly all the way through, and I just laughed at it and forgot about it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, what was your attitude toward the Communist Party after that meeting?

A. My attitude toward the Communist Party,

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

and the organization I represent, is that we are fighting them both tooth and nail, and have been, and still are, and are going to continue to do so.

Q. Were you ever called down by members of the Communist Party because of your activities against them?

A. I was called down, and I was attacked by their press, and their sheets, and in meetings, publicly and otherwise; and I was called in some time during 1935 up to a meeting on Market Street, where there was at least five members, known members of the Communist Party, or Commissars—what they like to call themselves—and they tried to put the heat on me. [7010]

Q. Who were present at that meeting?

A. Elmer Hanoff, Walter Lambert, and a fellow by the name of Johnston, supposed to be from the Central Committee of the Communist Party.

Q. The Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party?

A. That is right; that is what he told me.

Q. How many persons were there there all together?

A. There were five, and myself was six.

Q. And you have mentioned Elmer Hanoff, Walter Lambert, Johnston. Do you recall anyone else?

A. I can't recall the names of the other ones.

Q. What occurred at that meeting?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see any materiality.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court pleases,——

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: You have shown that these three men were there, but they are recognized Communists. I don't know about Johnston.

Mr. Del Guercio: This was a meeting following an invitation extended by Bridges and Sam Darcy to join the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: I can't see the competency. I will exclude it. You have shown his——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I believe the Court will [7011] agree that we have a right to show, under the charges here made against the alien, the nature and character of the Communist Party, among other things.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you have.

Mr. Del Guercio: How it operates, what its aims are, and particularly in connection with this alien's connection with the Communist Party.

Now, we have a meeting here—Mr. Lundeberg has testified to a meeting where he and one of the leading Communists on the west coast here, invite a prominent labor leader to join the Communist Party. They urge him to join and told him, "If you join we will conceal the fact that you are a member of the Communist Party just like we have Harry Bridges." This, Mr. Lundeberg refuses. Thereafter the Communist Party takes certain action.

Now, if we can show, and if this witness will so state that that action taken by the Communist Party followed, or was a result of his refusal to join, the invitation to join extended by the Alien and Sam Darcy, I believe it is very material.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: If it is intended to show that the Communist Party favored the overthrow of the Government by violence and force, or if it is intended to show they favored the illegal destruction of property, or illegal action, or if it is intended to show that the Communist Party was [7012] distributing seditious literature, then I should take it. But I don't see how——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) These activities are directed toward that end.

Presiding Inspector: Remotely, I think. I will exclude it for the present. [7013]

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, I believe that while Mr. Melnikow was on the stand—and counsel will correct me if I am mistaken——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I beg your pardon?

Mr. Del Guercio: I say, I believe that Mr. Melnikow when testifying on direct examination spoke about——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We don't find it; I don't find it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Accused the Sailor's Union of the Pacific of engaging in job action.

Presiding Inspector: I don't remember that.

Mr. Gaiser: I think it was on cross.

Presiding Inspector: It was suggested to me by my Clerk that that may have been on cross too.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, while that is being found out I will pursue another line.

Presiding Inspector: While these matters were important, still, I didn't charge my mind with them as to whether they were on the cross or on the direct examination, but it now becomes important because if they were on cross examination, then, you are bound by the answers.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Lundeberg, do you know if the Alien here has ever been a member of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific?

A. Yes, he was a member. According to the records of [7014] the Sailor's Union he was a member of the Sailor's Union from April 20th; for four months he was a probationary member of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

Q. What is his record in the Sailor's Union of the Pacific? A. His record——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Object to it as calling for not the best evidence, immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Maybe he doesn't know anything about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has testified he is familiar with the record.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't heard that said.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is Secretary and Treasurer of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific, if your Honor please. He has been engaged——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Have you examined the records in that respect?

The Witness: Yes, we examine the records of every member that ever joined the organization and dropped out, and we have the records all in our office.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: I just heard the witness say the the records are available. I think they are the best evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I recall——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I wouldn't put much stress on that, on this collateral point. [7015]

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know how collateral Mr. Del Guercio intends to make it. It is collateral at the present time.

Presiding Inspector: It seems to be.

Mr. Gladstein: I think if the witness is going to testify as to the contents of records which are easily available to him that they should be produced.

Presiding Inspector: Where are these records?

The Witness: Down at the Sailor's Union.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is testifying, if your Honor please, from his recollection.

Presiding Inspector: Well, his recollection not of the fact but of certain records.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, we have permitted the Alien here to testify from that when the records were available. We made the same objection.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't — weren't those cases where the man had an independent recollection himself besides the recollection of the records?

Mr. Gladstein: And there were not any records available, or the record which had been offered had been objected to upon some technical ground.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: I think you better produce the record. It would be safer, more convincing.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7016]

Q. Have you discussed with anyone Harry Bridges' record in the Sailor's Union of the Pacific?

Mr. Gladstein: Object to that as immaterial.

A. That is a well known fact among——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will allow that. You have discussed it, yes or no?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And what is Harry Bridges' record in the Sailor's Union of the Pacific? A. It stinks.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, I am not speaking of record in the sense of the record, but the Alien here has testified that he has been a good trade union man from the very beginning of time.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, we have heard that.

Mr. Del Guercio: And, I believe, that we have a right to go into that.

Presiding Inspector: You have, but the question is whether you are going into it the right way, but I see no objection.

Go on, Mr. Lundeberg.

The Witness: You asked me how the record was of Harry Bridges?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, what is his record?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

The Witness: As far as the membership in the Sailor's Union is concerned and I am concerned it stinks. In 1921 [7017] Bridges shipped out on a ship out of New Orleans for twenty-five cents a month as a worker; that is against the union principles, and he was sailing without a union book in his pocket; that is also against the Sailor's Union principles. And he has been breaking through Sailor's Union picket lines on the Coast; that is against the Sailor's Union principles. And any man, in my opinion, who sails and works for a living should always pack a union book and he didn't do it; I did.

Presiding Inspector: When was all this?

The Witness: That was all in 19[illegible], from there on. 1921 he shipped out on the Steamer Eldorado out of New Orleans for twenty-five cents a month as a worker.

Presiding Inspector: What was the latest one of these events?

The Witness: April 1938 Mr. Bridges led a bunch of goons through the Sailor's Union picket line in Seattle and broke their picket lines on the whole Pacific Coast when we had a fight with the shipowners. He took the side of the shipowners.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, do you know the reputation of Mr. Melnikow among the members of your union for truth and veracity?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as immaterial and improper.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Improper? That is quite unusual [7018] coming from counsel. That is all they have been doing in this hearing.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that remark be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear it; I didn't pay attention to it; I was thinking about——

Did Mr. Melnikow have anything to do with your union except on one occasion?

The Witness: Well, he didn't have anything to do with it after I got in there; I got rid of him.

Presiding Inspector: Well, now, you have been asked whether you know his reputation among the men of your union. Of course, his business is as a trade union advisor. You know that?

The Witness: I know all about him.

Presiding Inspector: Has he ever done any business with your union?

The Witness: Do you want to know his reputation among the members of the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Not yet. I want to see whether the reputation is broad enough, whether your knowledge is broad enough to let you answer the question, you see. That is what I wanted.

Now, from among what people do you know his reputation? Among trade unionists in general?

The Witness: Yes, from the membership of the Sailor's [7019] Union; that is good enough for me; 6000 members.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And what is his reputation, Melnikow's reputation among those 6000 members for truth and veracity?

Mr. Gladstein: The same objection; incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, improper examination.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is a little doubtful. I will take it.

What is his reputation; good or bad?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is it good or bad? A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?

Mr. Gladstein: The same objection.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. I wouldn't.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I don't like to be put in a position of trying to press this point too much but I believe that we have the right——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It is quite all right for you to press it, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——to go into the question there of this man. This Witness has testified regarding this conversation there with the Alien and Sam Darcy.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have got all that there [7020] is in that, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: Don't you think we are entitled to go into it as to what followed that incident

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

there because it is directly connected. Here is an invitation, here is the Communist Party, a representative of the Communist Party and Bridges saying "You come in with our party, or if you don't, why, it will be too bad."

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, may I say something after Mr. Del Guercio has concluded?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, certainly, if Mr. Del Guercio yields the floor to you.

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, Mr. Del Guercio thinks that this is material to the Government's case.

When I was brought into this case by the Attorney General I advised the Attorney General that it was not only necessary that the Alien have a fair hearing but that the public should know that he had had a fair hearing. Now, I say at this hour and in this unlimited emergency it is not only necessary that the Government shall have a fair hearing but that the public should know that it has had a fair hearing.

As I say, Mr. Del Guercio has thought and thinks that this line of testimony is material. If it is excluded there is no remedy hereafter. If it is admitted and your Honor should think hereafter that it is immaterial or irrelevant your Honor may disregard it, but you have been very indulgent to the other [7021] side. We have asked no indulgence with you. I think the examination of this witness is crucial and I think we ought to be permitted to ask the questions, to have them asked and have them answered. If your Honor should think hereafter that they are immaterial or irrelevant there is no jury to be affected. I think your Honor should permit the answer of these questions as you have permitted the answer of other questions on behalf of the Alien with the right on their part to move to have them excluded hereafter.

For that reason I ask your Honor to permit Mr. Del Guercio to continue this line of examination.

Presiding Inspector: What is your theory about its relevance?

Mr. Goodwin: I leave it to Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I have another round upon which I believe this line of inquiry is proper. It is this: This will show how the Communist Party works with relation to trade unions, that it is part of their policy to, of course, infiltrate into trade unions and through their trade unions create such a situation as will ultimately lead to their final aims.

Now, this is an exact situation here, I believe, that will demonstrate that method, that infiltration into the trade labor unions and how they do it and how they work and for what purpose, and, I believe, that on that theory of law, on that [7022] ground the evidence would be admissible.

Presiding Inspector: As bearing on the question of whether a man could be a member of the Communist Party and a good trade unionist?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: No, not necessarily on that theory, but the policy of the Communist Party to show what the policy of the Communist Party is toward trade unions, how they bore into the trade unions, what they represent to bona fide trade unionists, how they go about trying to get bona fide trade unionists to enter the ranks of Communism, for what purpose and for what ultimate aim.

Mr. Goodwin: There is another point on which I think it is material. It has been the same at all times on their part, that this Alien, and he admits it, with the assistance of the Communist Party has accomplished great things for labor. I think on that theory also, the question of what their methods are, what they have done, is material at this time, but I leave it to the major argument projected by Mr. Del Guercio. Your Honor can reserve ruling on it and have it stricken out hereafter if on argument it appears to be irrelevant or improper.

Mrs. King: The suggestion originally made by Judge Goodwin that in this National Emergency rules of evidence change and that there is any difference from what there would be when there is not a National Emergency seems to me quite improper and also irrelevant to the situation which confronts us at this [7023] time.

It seems to me that it is also improper to suggest that great latitude has been allowed in the introduction of evidence on behalf of the Alien. We have been complaining for weeks of the fact that evidence that we have wanted to introduce in this hearing has been held to be irrelevant and we don't see that suddenly, because the Government charges that everything that we have wanted has gone in, they are entitled to put in everything that they want.

And finally, with reference to the operation of the Communist Party in trade unions it seems to me that the effort on the part of the Communist Party to get in any trade union from the time the Party began to the present time would be relevant if this testimony which is sought to be elicited at this time is relevant. It has no connection with Harry Bridges.

Now, at times it has been suggested that we forget that it is Harry Bridges that is having a hearing here. It seems to me that if there was a moment at which it is being forgotten it is right now in connection with this offer to introduce evidence and we claim that this is entirely irrelevant and that these emotional arguments made to your Honor with reference to this testimony should not be given any weight whatsoever.

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, what the Communist Party is, what its methods are is of vital interest, is a vital question in this case. We have a witness here who has first-hand knowledge on that question and we think that we have a right to [7024] examine him in regard to it, and I think that if we don't we are denied the right to present the entire case.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: We are only interested in the Communist Party so far as its party policies are seditious. We are not interested in any other way. I can't see how this evidence——

Mr. Goodwin: (Interposing) You are not interested in their methods?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, provided it is connected, directly connected with seditious purposes. Now, I don't see that they are asking this man to be a member or even threatening him if he isn't a member, that they will break him, or anything of that kind. I am merely imagining what he may say. I don't see how that is within the scope of the specifications in the warrant.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, that is my fault here because I didn't make it very clear. What we are trying to show by this evidence, we are trying to follow up this invitation extended to Mr. Lundeberg by Mr. Bridges and Sam Darcy. It follows it is a result of that, of that meeting, what I am trying to bring out now, this other occurrence. It is directly connected with it. I think it is admissible on that ground under any rule of evidence.

Presiding Inspector: That is another thought, that you want to introduce this as some corroboration of the fact that [7025] the request was made in the presence of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: Certainly, your Honor.

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, it is a ridiculous understanding and statement to say that the request was made. The pressure that was brought to bear, what happened in this meeting, all those things go to the methods of the Communist Party and go to the issues here, and if we don't connect it up in such a way as to make it material your Honor may strike it out.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: No, I will exclude it.

Go ahead. Ask the next question. [7026]

Mr. Del Guercio: May I make an offer of proof on this question?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to the offer.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think so. You made it very clear what you wanted to show. If you can in any way ask a question that will connect Mr. Bridges with this I will permit it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: If you ask a question that will in any way connect Mr. Bridges with this conversation I will allow it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, as a result of this meeting with Harry Bridges and Sam Darcy, and as a result of your refusal to join the Communist Party, did you have any further doings with the Communist Party, or with members of the Communist Party?

Mr. Gladstein: One moment. I object to this as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, and being improper and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will exclude that as calling for his conclusion on the matter, it not being shown that he would have any opportunity of knowing any facts from which to draw a conclusion.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was any further effort made by the Communist Party [7027] to induce you to join the Communist Party after this incident that you have related?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is just——

A. (Interposing) Yes——

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——the same question in another form.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude that question. If there is any other effort of Mr. Bridges to have him join the Communist Party I will permit it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was any further effort made by anybody who was present at Harry Bridges' house to thereafter induce you to join the Communist Party?

Mrs. King: That is objected to, your Honor.

A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: We withdraw the objection.

Presiding Inspector: You may answer the question.

The Witness: I said "No."

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear it.

The Witness: I don't know when I am supposed to speak because this gets mixed up.

Presiding Inspector: You are quite right.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

When an objection is made just wait until the Inspector rules, until I rule on it.

The Witness: Yes. [7028]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did either Sam Darcy or Harry Bridges tell you that someone else connected with the Communist Party would thereafter see you?

A. No; I don't think—no, they didn't. It wouldn't have done them any good anyhow.

Presiding Inspector: I want to give you full liberty, Mr. Del Guercio. If you can show in this conversation, which seemed to have been grouped, containing one member from the Central Executive Committee, if you can convey in any of this conversation that there was anything seditious, or in favor of sabotage, or the distribution of seditious literature, anything along the line of the accusations which are shown in the Warrant, of course, I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not the ground upon——

Presiding Inspector: I thought not, but I wanted to have it so there wouldn't be any misunderstanding.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will, however, show that there were threats made against an outstanding labor leader if he refused to join the Communist Party and follow the Communist Party line.

Presiding Inspector: Physical threats?

Mr. Del Guercio: Physical threats, if your Honor please—and this followed directly the invitation with a request made by Bridges and Sam Darcy to join the Communist Party. [7029]

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: If they threatened physical injury to this man, or anyone else, I will take that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, were you ever threatened with physical injury——

Presiding Inspector: No, no—at this time we are in, this conversation where Johnston was present. I confine it to that because what some independent person said, or who is a Communist, wouldn't be competent here. You have got to show that it was within the Communist line.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I show what occurred at that meeting in order that I may bring out this line?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where was this meeting held?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. The meeting was held up in a hall, up on Market Street, which was the headquarters for the so-called United Union Labor—something like that—some Communist front organization they had in '35 to elect themselves a Mayor in this town.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who invited you to attend this meeting?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: Object to that as immaterial.

[7030]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. They called me on the phone. I don't remember who.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And what was said at this meeting?

Mr. Gladstein: Same objection.

Presiding Inspector: Wait a second. What was said in relation to physical injury to you or any other person?

A. Well, they wound up by telling me that if I didn't go down the line that they would put the heat on me and move me off the Coast.

And one of the Communists got so excited that he grabbed me by the arm and said, "We will fix you, see."

I told him to shoot his best shot.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who grabbed you by the arm, Mr. Lundeberg? A. Commissar Hanoff.

Q. Elmer Hanoff? A. Yes.

Q. Were any other threats made upon your person at that meeting?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that and move that the previous answer be stricken on the ground that——

Presiding Inspector: I think I will let it stand.

A. Well, they all—at first, the conversation was soft, to kind of soften me up, telling me what they could do [7031] for me, and what a good guy I was.

I told them "Nothing doing."

They told me to go down and stop bucking the policy of the Communist Party in the Sailors Union.

I said "That is none of your business," because they are not members of the Sailors Union and as long as I have anything to say no Communist is going to stick their snouts into the Sailors Union.

They got up and finally said, "If you don't go down the line we will give you the heat."

I says, "They wasn't big enough to give me the heat."

They said, "The Communist Party is pretty strong in this country."

I said, "Yes? Your shoot your best shots, see, and try it." I said, "I am not going to be driven off the coast by a bunch of guys like you."

Then Hanoff got a little excited, I guess, and so he grabbed my arm and says, he says, "Well, we will see that the heat is on you, young fellow."

I told him to try it out. "You are not big enough to handle me anyhow. So that is that."

Q. Were any other threats made upon you at that meeting—strike that. How long did this meeting last, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. It lasted for five hours.

Q. Did they tell you at this meeting what they wanted [7032] you to do? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it, in view of what has now been said that these statements were conditioned upon membership.

A. (Continuing) They wanted me to stop bucking the Communist Party in the Sailors Union.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Thereafter were any other threats made upon you by members of the Communist Party?

A. Yes. On January 27, 1936——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I object to that as incompetent and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Threats of physical injury or destruction of property, I will take it. Of course, you have got to first show that threats were made by the Communist Party, a responsible person.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, your Honor.

A. (Continuing) On January 27, 1936, the Sailors Union lost their charter, was kicked out of the International Seamen's Union. There was a big meeting down in San Francisco. A resolution was passed to stick together and hold the organization together, regardless of what happened. It was carried practically unanimously by the membership. [7033]

About one o'clock in the morning, when I got into my hotel—I lived in a hotel right across the street here, the Grand Southern—it was one o'clock in the morning, and I was laying down, and then three guys came into my room, and among them was Walter Lambert. I asked them how the hell they got into my room at that time in the morning.

So they says, they started to abuse me right away about what happened in the Sailors' Union meeting. They said, "That is against the Communist Party policy because we must stay within the A. F. of L. That is the policy of the Communist Party."

I said, "What has the Communist Party got to do with the Sailors Union and what they do in their meetings? They know what to do themselves."

They says, well, they got a little tough so I kicked them out of there.

Mr. Gladstein: I move the entire answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did they threaten you, Mr. Lundeberg, with physical violence?

A. Well, they threatened physical violence with their mouth, but didn't do anything else. They talked, but they didn't try anything else because I was ready for them.

Q. You mean they didn't accomplish their purpose? [7034] A. Not yet.

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Cross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was this meeting held on Market Street?

A. It was some time during this labor campaign, United Labor Party campaign.

Q. What part of the year?

A. Probably it was in—you could probably find out that.

Q. You answer—what is your best recollection?

A. It was during '35.

Q. What part of the year, the early part or the latter part?

A. During the time of the City Election.

Q. What is your best recollection as to when those elections were held?

A. I can't say for sure.

Q. Was it in the spring?

A. No; probably in the summer, spring or summer. I can't remember.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I think counsel is misleading the witness. He knows when those elections were held.

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment. I object to counsel starting [7035] to make a speech for the purpose of coaching the witness on the stand. I have a right to ask that question.

Presiding Inspector: It leaves me cold on both sides.

Ask the next question.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, you——

Presiding Inspector: You may press him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Continuing): ——you say you were asked to stop bucking the Communist Party?

A. Yes.

Q. You were told that you ought to and that is when they threatened you?

A. They told me that I should; that I had to.

Q. Had you been bucking the Communist Party?

A. Well, I hadn't fought them at that time, but they were starting to put the heat on so I started fighting back.

Q. What kind of fighting back did you do?

A. I took on their stooges in the Sailors Union and weeded them out, for one thing.

Q. You attacked them openly, is that right?

A. Oh, yes; a union policy.

Q. When did you first become an officer of the Sailors Union?

A. I became an officer of the Sailors Union in 1934. [7036]

I was a patrolman in Seattle, and was elected by the membership.

Q. When did you become Secretary-Treasurer?

A. I became Secretary-Treasurer of the Sailors Union in 1936.

Q. What was your position, union position, in the Sailors Union during 1935?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. I was, up to April, 1935, I was a patrolman for the Sailors Union in the Port of Seattle.

Q. What were you after April?

A. I was President of the Maritime Federation.

Q. Did you hold an office in the SUP?

A. No, not while I was President of the Federation, but I was an active member.

Q. How long have you been fighting the Communist Party in the Union?

A. Well, I have been fighting them right along.

Q. Since you became a leading official in the Trade Union movement? A. Yes.

Q. Since you became President of the Maritime Federation? A. Absolutely.

Q. When did you become an American citizen?

A. 1933.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party? [7037] A. No.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the Industrial Workers of the World?

A. You mean the IWW?

Q. Don't you know what the full name of the IWW is?

A. I do; but I was never a member of it.

Q. Do you think a Communist can be a good trade unionist? A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. Lundeberg, you mentioned Mr. Scharrenberg, whom you called a discredited official? A. That is right.

Q. You meant discredited with the rank and file of your union membership?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Yes. He was expelled from the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

Q. He was rather a leading figure during the 1934 Maritime Strike, was he not?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Well, of course, you were not participating actively as a member of any Strike Committee, or as a trade union official, in 1934, were you?

A. I was on the Sailors Union of the Pacific Strike Committee in the Port of Seattle. I was active every day during the strike.

Q. In Seattle? [7038] A. Yes.

Q. Don't you know that Paul Scharrenberg was in San Francisco as an official of the ISU and was regarded as the leading figure among the conservatives in the trade union movement connected with that strike?

A. He might have been an official of the ISU, but he was not an official of the Sailors Union of the Pacific. George Larson was the Secretary of the Sailors Union of the Pacific. Mr. Scharrenberg was not active, and didn't attend meetings. He was uptown with the rest of them.

Q. What position—do you know what position Mr. Scharrenberg held with the ISU in 1934?

A. He didn't hold any position. I believe, to the best of my knowledge, I think he was an ISU West Coast representative of some kind of the International Executive Board, or something like that.

Q. Wasn't Scharrenberg also a member of the SUP? A. He was; but he is not now.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Wasn't he also then the Secretary of the California State Federation of Labor?

A. He was; but he is not now.

Q. Wasn't he also acting as the negotiator for the Sailors Union of the Pacific during that strike?

A. Against the membership's will.

Q. Now, don't you know that it was Mr. Scharrenberg [7039] who was the author of a resolution in the San Francisco Labor Council expressing opposition to the 1934 Maritime Strike and attacking the waterfront unions, including the ILA, as engaging in a Communist Strike?

A. I don't know, but I wouldn't put it past him.

Q. Now, Mr. Lundeberg, during or after that 1934 strike, the membership of the Sailors Union faced the problem of whether to expel, or not to allow MWIU members, previous MWIU members, to join the Sailors Union, isn't that correct?

A. Well, they didn't face—that was not a particular problem with the Sailors Union.

Q. You say it was not a particular problem?

A. No.

Q. Wasn't a demand made that the Sailors Union of the Pacific expel members who previously had been members of the MWIU?

A. No. I, myself, advocated in the Sailors Union that any active, bona fide seaman that participated in the strike become a member, regardless of what affiliation they had; and as long as a man was an active, bona fide seaman, nad participated in the strike, we didn't care where he came from.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Even including those who had previously been members of the MWIU?

A. There were lots of good men in the MWIU.

Q. As a matter of fact, isn't one of the reasons that the Sailors Union of the Pacific had its charter revoked by [7040] the ISU, the fact that the SUP refused to expel men whom you have called good seamen, who participated in the strike, who had previously been affiliated with the MWIU?

A. That had nothing to do with the expulsion of the Sailors Union of the Pacific. The Sailors Union of the Pacific was expelled, for one thing, because we expelled Paul Scharrenberg; second, because they claimed that we engaged in an outlaw strike. That is what they were expelled for, for refusing to take orders from the International Executive Board, who lived back east and didn't know what the score was on this coast.

Q. You say one of the reasons was not the refusal of the Sailors Union of the Pacific to comply with the demand of the ISU, or officials of the ISU, to expel men who had previously been affiliated with the MWIU?

A. Absolutely. I believe, and the chances are that—I believe that one of the reasons they expelled us from the International Seamen's Union was because they didn't like me, and a lot of other guys were fighting Scharrenberg, and had him expelled, and it had nothing to do with the MWIU.

Q. Isn't that one of the reasons given by Mr. Scharrenberg?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. No; I don't think so. I have all the records; I can find out by digging into the files.

Q. Wasn't part of the fight of the SUP against Mr. [7041] Scharrenberg, and the ISU officials, a fight to protect men in the SUP who had formerly been members of the MWIU?

A. No. It was not a fight, Mr. Gladstein, because I put the motion on the floor in a San Francisco meeting in 1932 to expel Mr. Scharrenberg from the Sailors Union. That was long before 1934. That has been a long fight in the Sailors Union.

If you want me to tell you the background I might do so.

Q. You say—the latest instance that you cited in your direct examination of Harry Bridges' record concerns the breaking of the SUP picket lines in April of 1938 at Seattle? A. That is right.

Q. Was that not a jurisdictional disute between your union and the National Maritime Union?

A. No; it was not a jurisdictional dispute. The Sailors Union of the Pacific had an agreement, a closed shop agreement, with that company, and has had since 1937.

Q. I asked whether it was a jurisdictional dispute between the National Maritime Union and the Sailors Union of the Pacific. You say "No"?

A. No.

Q. Isn't it true that the National Maritime Union had won an election conducted under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board for the right to represent the men working on that ship, or other ships of that company, involved in this [7042] incident that you are discussing? Answer "yes" or "no", please?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. I don't know. But I know we had a written agreement, closed shop, and that is good enough for me.

Q. Your picket line was thrown around a ship which had on it a crew belonging to the National Maritime Union, an affiliate of the CIO, isn't that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And your picket line was for the purpose of keeping CIO longshoremen off a ship being worked by a CIO crew, correct? A. No.

Q. Isn't that what you did? A. No.

Q. You were trying to get a crew off, weren't you?

A. Our purpose for the picket line was to tie the ship up so the ship owners will live up to an agreement signed with the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

Q. But you wanted that crew kicked off the ship, didn't you?

A. We wanted the shipowners to live up to their agreement.

Q. Please, Mr. Lundeberg——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) The witness has answered the question several times.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will let Mr. Gladstein press him on the matter. [7043]

Mr. Del Guercio: How many times?

Mr. Grossman: Until he answers the question.

Presiding Inspector: If the same questions are asked I suppose the answers will be the same.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was it not your purpose, by that picket line, to prevent CIO longshoremen from handling cargo on that ship, with the intention of achieving this result: That a CIO crew on that ship should be taken off and men of your union be put in their place?

A. We had no fight with the CIO longshoremen. The purpose of the picket line was to make the shipowners, Mr. Shepard, live up to the agreement and stop chiseling.

Presiding Inspector: How were you going to make him do that?

The Witness: To take the men right from the Sailors Union Hall, where he had a contract to hire our men, and live up to every agreement, to pay our wages and meet certain conditions.

That was what they was trying to get away from by getting a CIO crew there.

Presiding Inspector: What was the purpose of the picket line?

The Witness: The purpose of the picket line was to tie the ship up. [7044]

Presiding Inspector: How does the picket line succeed in tying the ship up?

The Witness: We tried to stop the ship from working.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean you tried to stop the longshoremen from working the ship?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. We didn't stop the longshoremen. We tried to tie up the ship.

Presiding Inspector: You tried to keep everyone from working?

The Witness: Right.

Presiding Inspector: Longshoremen and everyone else?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And your purpose was to have that CIO crew removed from that ship of the Shepard Line, and have your own men placed in their places, isn't that correct?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think it has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: I think so.

Mr. Gladstein: Other than by a statement that he wanted the company to live up to a contract. I am entitled to press him as to what he means by that.

Presiding Inspector: Ask him that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did you mean when you stated that the purpose of [7045] your picket line was to have the company live up to its agreement?

A. The Sailors Union had struck that company a year prior to that, for the purpose of cleaning the ships of scabs, nad we kicked the CIO men out of the Sailors' Union hall, and we insisted that the company live up to their agreement and hire Sailors' Union men and live up to the West Coast scale.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Is that O.K.?

Presiding Inspector: We will have a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, at the time you say you were invited to Mr. Bridges' house, and met Sam Darcy there, were you already the President of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific?

A. Yes; yes, I was.

Q. Now, going back to this Shepard Line incident, do you mean to say that you did not know whether there had been a Labor Board proceeding to determine whether the SUP or the NMU had the right to represent the men on the ships of that company?

A. No. As a matter of fact, the Sailors Union of the Pacific took no part in that. Their name was not on the ballot. They protested the election and —they held an election without putting the Sailors Union on the ballot.

Q. Do you know that there was an election and that the NMU won? [7046]

A. They had been trying to get an election.

Q. You do know there was an election held, don't you?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. It was pretty hard to follow the National Labor Relations Board in those days.

Q. Do you or don't you know there was an election at which the NMU won the right to represent the men on those ships of the Shepard Line?

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has answered that. He can't answer "yes" or "no". He has got to give an explanation. He can't give a "yes" or "no" answer without an explanation.

Mr. Gladstein: He has given his explanation.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think his explanation is very full.

Mr. Del Guercio: Ask for a fuller explanation, rather than pressing him.

Mr. Grossman: It seems this question is capable of a "yes" or "no" answer. He either knew it or he didn't know it.

Presiding Inspector: That implies that an election is something like a color on this well, dark or light, and the person is asked to answer "yes" or "no".

Mr. Grossman: That is not true in connection with the National Labor Relations Board with respect to this witness, who is a trade unionist. Either an election was held, or it wasn't, and he has had plenty of dealings with the NLRB, and it is obvious he is dodging the question. It isn't that he can't answer[7047] the question.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't it capable of the explanation that in his opinion this was not a legal election?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: I am willing to accept that kind of a response, but I want his knowledge as of that time. If he wishes to criticize the election he is entitled to do it. I am not going to hold him to that.

Presiding Insector: Then there is no misunderstanding.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, there are elections and there are elections. That is probably what the witness has in mind.

Mr. Grossman: This is a Government election.

Mr. Gladstein: You shouldn't have mentioned that.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, didn't you know at the time that you put your picket lines around that Shepard Line ship in Seattle that the National Labor Relations Board had conducted an election proceeding and had certified the National Maritime Union as the exclusive collective bargaining representative of the employees of that company?

A. I don't know if they had certified them.

[7048]

Q. Didn't you know that the NMU had won that election?

A. No, I didn't know because we was not in the competition.

Q. Didn't you take an interest to find out whether a branch of the United States Government had certified another union as against your own union with this Shepard Line?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. If they certified it they must have made a mistake because we have got the agreements today.

Q. Didn't you take an interest at that time to find out, Mr. Lundeberg, whether the National Labor Relations Board had conducted a proceeding in which the NMU had won an election to represent the men on those ships?

A. I found that out later on when they called me into Washington, D.C. to appear before the National Labor Relations Board in regards to that dispute.

Q. When did you find that out for the first time?

A. They called me into Washington, D.C.

Q. When was that?

A. It was during that Shepard Line beef.

Q. Before the picket lines were removed?

A. After; we didn't remove them until we won the beef.

Q. Was that the first time, when you were called into Washington, D.C., that you knew that there had been a Labor [7049] Board proceeding in connection with that Shepard Line?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the witness did not testify that he didn't know that there was a Labor Board decision, but that certification——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) If that is so he can say.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was that the first time when you were called into Washington, D. C. that you found out that there had been an election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that. That is not what the witness has testified.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't care what he has testified. I have a right to ask the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: You have no right to deceive the witness.

Presiding Inspector: You have no right to deceive.

The Witness: Ask me the question again.

Mr. Gladstein: Certainly, read it to him.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I think you will have the same trouble with that question as you did with the earlier ones, because, I think, the witness claimed that he did not know it was an [7050] election before that time.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't care whether he regards this as a valid or invalid election.

Presiding Inspector: Well, make that clear to him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You understand, Mr. Lundeberg, that by answering these questions you are not pinning yourself down as to whether you regarded that election as being void or valid or anything else. We are not asking you for your judgment, and nothing that you will say will make that election good or bad. You understand that?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that statement from counsel.

Mr. Gladstein: It is for the purpose.——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) This is merely my suggestion so that there will be no misunderstanding on the part of the witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: Then, I think the Court should address the witness, not counsel.

Presiding Inspector: I will accept it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, with that understanding, Mr. Lundeburg, will you please state whether at the time you went to Washington, D.C. that was the first knowledge you had ever gained that there had been an election conducted by the National Labor [7051] Relations Board to determine whether your union or the NMU—withdraw that—to determine who should represent the men on the Shepard Line?

A. I didn't know of any election; they never notified us, that is, the first time I knew about a certification was when I got into Washington, D.C.

Presiding Inspector: Did you know that something was going on, that some people considered it an election?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. A few moments ago you said that your union refused to participate in the election; is that correct? A. No, I didn't say "refused."

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. What did you say?

A. I said we were never even asked to participate. The National Labor Relations Board evidently handed out the Shepard Line beef to the CIO. We was not asked to get in on the election.

Q. And you never knew about the holding of the election until after you had gone to Washington, D.C. and found out that the NMU had been certified, is that correct?

A. I got to Washington, D. C. and they told me they had been certified and so forth and they wanted to make a compromise with us, the National Labor Relations Board, the Government wanted to compromise after they had an election. [7052] In other words, the election was phony.

Q. Do you mean to say you never knew until you got to Washington, D.C. and learned that the NMU had been certified to represent the men on the Shepard Line ships that an election was going to be held at any prior time?

A. I didn't know anything about that. They never told us they were having an election.

Q. Now, don't you know that the longshoremen in the Port of Seattle held a mass meeting to discuss the question of whether they should respect your picket line around that Shepard Line ship and that they voted not to respect that picket line because it was a jurisdictional picket line?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being testimony, not a question, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: It calls for his knowledge.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: I think counsel asks whether that is a correct statement. I am not sure that is the question, that the question is technically correct.

Mr. Gladstein: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: We will take it with that understanding.

Is that in substance correct?

The Witness: I didn't know; I wasn't in Seattle.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you hear to that effect? Weren't you informed to that effect, Mr. Lundeberg? [7053]

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, he is asking for hearsay.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I am asking him for his information.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) On a collateral matter.

Mr. Grossman: Just a minute.

Your Honor, Mr. Lundeberg would attempt to characterize Mr. Bridges as a trade union man on the basis of this picket line. Now, since he is going to make a judgment and he did make a judgment based on this picket line we have a right to know what he knew regardless of how he knew it.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have. I don't think you need to argue.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Del Guercio——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am going to allow it.

Mr. Gladstein: Is there a question before the witness? I think there is. I will repeat it.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Weren't you informed officially, Mr. Lundeberg—wasn't your union informed by the ILWU convention of the taking of such a vote and a determination on their part to disrespect your picket line on the ground, as they said, that it was a jurisdictional dispute?

A. I don't know anything about it.

Presiding Inspector: Do you mean you didn't get any [7054] official information?

The Witness: Absolutely not.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you get any information from any of your union officials or from any other source to that effect?

A. I didn't get any information from any of our union officials.

Q. Or from anyone else? A. No.

Q. And isn't it a fact that the Maritime Federation of the Pacific at the same time took action of a similar kind to that which I have described in my questions to you with respect to the ILWU?

A. The Maritime Federation of the Pacific caused—went on record to recognize no other union on the Pacific Coast for sailors than the National Maritime Union. Consequently, they regarded the Maritime Federation as a dual and hostile organization to the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

Q. Isn't it true that as of that time you learned that the Maritime Federation of the Pacific went on record with specific reference to the Shepard Line as to the effect that your picket line was a jurisdictional picket line? Yes or no, please?

A. I learned at that time that the Maritime Federation of the Pacific come out openly to break up the Sailor's Union, [7055] to replace us with the CIO on the Pacific Coast; that is what I found out.

Presiding Inspector: Well, that doesn't quite answer the question.

The Witness: Well, it is close.

Presiding Inspector: Well, you found what you say, but did you also find out that they had adopted the resolution of which Mr. Gladstein spoke?

The Witness: I didn't know anything about the resolution that they passed about jurisdictional picket lines. All I know about, they passed a resolution to recognize no other union but the National Maritime Union, the CIO, a dual and hostile organization to the Sailor's Union of the Pacific Coast.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was this an important incident to you, the Shepard Line incident? A. Well, it was.

Q. Were you on the Pacific Coast or in this country somewhere?

A. I was in San Francisco.

Q. Weren't you taking an interest in what was going on up there?

A. I led the Sailor's Union of the Pacific in San Francisco; at Pier 41 we slugged it out.

Q. "You slugged it out?" A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. That is the time you had a baseball bat in your [7056] hand?

A. I never had a baseball bat in my hand.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, that is uncalled for. I demand that counsel be censured.

Presiding Inspector: I think with that answer there would be some occasion for the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Lundeberg——

The Witness: (Interposing) For the records, I didn't have no baseball bat in my hand.

Presiding Inspector: No, I know.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, isn't it true that you knew while that dispute was going on that the ILWU Convention and the Maritime Federation of the Pacific adopted resolutions branding your picket line in Seattle, as jurisdictional?

A. No, I didn't know.

Q. And you didn't take any interest to find out?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I think he has pressed him enough on that point. He can go on to another subject.

Presiding Inspector: He didn't know.

Did you make any inquiries about this subject that you didn't know anything about? That is the question.

The Witness: I didn't make any inquiries about anything. [7057] I didn't know anything about— I was too busy taking care of the Sailor's Union business.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, didn't you care at that time——

A. (Interposing) Care for what?

Q. (Continuing) ——what position, official position the ILWU or the Maritime Federation of the Pacific took or might take on your picket line in Seattle?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: If he feels he took any interest he can say so.

A. To take any interest about what?

Mr. Gladstein: Read the question.

Presiding Inspector: Did you take any interest in the subject?

The Witness: Well, I took the interest to defend the rights of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific; that is my job.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I am asking you whether you took an interest in finding out the position that the Maritime Federation or the ILWU took or might take in connection with your Shepard Line picket line?

A. The Maritime Federation? I didn't have to take an interest in that. They have already gone on record to do away with the Sailor's Union of this coast; that is official knowledge. [7058]

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, please listen to the question. A. I heard you.

Mr. Gladstein: I will repeat the question so you can answer it.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, it isn't necessary that he repeat the question. The witness has already said he heard it.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the answers have not been responsive, your Honor. I wish to direct the—— Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am not quite sure. I will hear the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, I want to know whether you took any action to find out what position, if any, the Maritime Federation of the Pacific or the ILWU took or might take during that dispute with specific respect to your picket line in Seattle?

Presiding Inspector: Do you understand that?

The Witness: What action they took or did take, the Maritime Federation or the Longshoremen?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Yes, did you do anything to find out what action they took?

A. I went down to—I followed the instructions of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific membership to fight for our rights and our contracts in that company. [7059]

Mr. Gladstein: I submit the answer is not responsive. I move it be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: No. I won't strike it but I will ask the question.

Did you send a messenger down; did you write a letter; did you go yourself or did you send a telegram or telephone, find out what attitude this body took in respect to this strike?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

The Witness: No, I didn't do that. I was down there to fight for our rights.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Well, did you read anything in the newspaper about it?

The Witness: I didn't have time.

Presiding Inspector: That you remember?

The Witness: I didn't have time to read a newspaper those days.

Presiding Inspector: You knew that body was hostile, however, to your organization?

The Witness: Yes, I knew that.

Presiding Inspector: You had known it for some time?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you have been engaged in quite a number of trade union disputes in which you and Harry Bridges have been on opposite sides of the fence; isn't that true? [7060]

A. Trade union disputes? Opposite sides?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I guess our policies differ.

Q. Isn't it a fact that in 1937, the late part of the year, you were opposed in your position to Bridges in connection with the placing by the Teamsters Union in San Francisco of a mass picket line on the San Francisco waterfront for the purpose of forcing warehouse workers who were then in the CIO to go into the Teamsters Union?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. That I was opposed to Bridges?

Q. Yes.

A. The Sailor's Union of the Pacific—I just live up to the policy of the membership, that they always respect a picket line, and that was the policy of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

Q. Well, then, isn't it true that you supported the Teamsters and opposed Bridges and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union in connection with that embargo of the waterfront for the purpose of forcing warehousemen out of the CIO and into the A. F. of L.?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment, please, your Honor. I will object to the question. It is long, compound, ambiguous and it is difficult to follow.

Presiding Inspector: Well—— [7061]

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Do you understand the question, Mr. Lundeberg?

The Witness: Oh, I understand it very well.

Mr. Gladstein: He is smarter than his lawyer.

The Witness: Smarter? Perhaps, I am as smart as you are. You don't have to go to law to be smart.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I think the record ought to show the remark of counsel to which the witness has replied.

Presiding Inspector: I guess the reporter got it.

Do you understand the question?

The Witness: Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, what do you say about it?

The Witness: It has never been my position to try to force organized workers from one union into another. They stay in the union they wish as far as I am concerned, but we are very friendly with the Teamsters Union. They have been very good to us; they have been very good to the longshoremen and everything on this waterfront. As a matter of fact, if it hadn't been for the Teamsters we would not have won the strike in 1934; they are the ones that won the strike for us.

Now, is that good enough?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you know in the fall of 1937 that the only issue was the Teamsters were demanding that Warehousemen who were in the CIO leave the CIO and become members of the [7062] A. F. of L.?

A. No, that wasn't the only issue as far as I was concerned.

Q. What was the issue?

A. I understood they had a fight about the Cal Pack Plant, or something.

Q. What was the issue——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, the witness is answering that.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he has answered it, I think.

Do you want to go into the matter in dispute.

Mr. Gladstein: I am entitled to go into it if the witness denies the issue.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: I didn't know that you wanted to.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the issue, Mr. Lundeberg, if it was not as I have put it, that the Teamsters were trying to force warehousemen out of the CIO and into the A. F. of L.?

A. Not that I know of. I understood there was a dispute about a Cal Pack warehouse, about teamsters driving in there, and there was some trouble between the teamsters and the warehousemen. I didn't know and still don't, never heard that they were trying to force them into the A. F. of L.

Q. What did you hear the issue was?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, that is going into——

[7063]

A. (Interposing) I didn't hear because I didn't mix into other peoples' business. I take care of the Sailor's Union business.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you mean to say that your union and you refused to pass through pickets without your finding out what the issue was and why those pickets were there?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that as being argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Up to that time the Sailor's Union of the Pacific, it was their policy on this coast to respect all picket lines on the Pacific Coast, and the Sailor's Union was one organization who lived up to it, but after the CIO got into the picture they used to start to break picket lines. Well, it used to be the common thing after that.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, we are talking now prior to the Shepard Line incident.

A. Prior to the Shepard Line incident the policy of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific was to respect any picket line.

Q. Regardless of what the issue was?

A. That is right; a picket line was a picket line to us. [7064]

Q. Was that the reason that you supported the Tacoma longshoremen last year when they were striking against the National Labor Board decision to the effect that the ILU was entitled to represent the longshoremen on the Pacific Coast?

A. The Sailor's Union of the Pacific supported the Tacoma longshoremen for one specific reason, in their attempt to deal with the waterfront employers who refused to recognize them as a bona fide organization, or refused to deal with them, and they had a fight against the bosses and we backed them up. We will do it again.

Q. Didn't you know at that time you were backing up the Tacoma longshoremen, Mr. Lundeberg, that for several years prior to that time and as of that time there was in effect a decision of the National Labor Relations Board certifying the CIO Union, the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, as the exclusive collective bargaining representative for all longshoremen in Pacific Coast ports employed by ship owners?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute now. I lost sight of the question.

Presiding Inspector: Well, do you understand the question?

The Witness: Oh, very well.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you answer it?

Presiding Inspector: You may answer it. [7065]

A. I did not go into the details of what the National Labor Relations Board did. What was most in our mind there was a thousand men in Tacoma who wanted to get an agreement with the owners and the owners refused to—tried to make second class citizens out of them. We backed them up there and would do it again.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you know, Mr. Lundeberg, that there is in effect this decision of the National Labor Relations Board that I have mentioned in my previous question as of the time and before the time that you supported the Tacoma longshoremen's picket line?

A. I know there was a decision handed down but it has not been finally decided; it is still in the Courts, whether that ruling is right or wrong. The Tacoma longshoremen has that before the Court in Washington, D. C. now.

Q. Well, isn't it true, Mr. Lundeberg—and you have mentioned contracts a moment ago—isn't it true that as of the time you supported the Tacoma longshoremen and before your picketing activities there was in effect and had been for some time a Pacific coastwide collective bargaining agreement covering all longshoremen between the shipowners and the ILWU, the terms of which covered Tacoma longshoremen as well as those in other ports?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment. I will object to that if your Honor please. The witness has already answered the [7066] matter is still under litigation.

Mr. Gladstein: This is as to the contract.

Presiding Inspector: This isn't a decision; it is a contract now. I will take this if the witness understands it.

The Witness: Oh, I understand it perfectly, Judge.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you answer it?

The Witness: Sure, I can answer it.

Mr. Gladstein: Please do.

A. The Tacoma longshoremen are not part of the CIO. They are members of the American Federation of Labor; they are friends of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific and we always help our friends; that is good enough.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Even in a strike against the Government?

A. Oh, was it a strike against the Government now?

Q. I am asking you that. Do you help your friends even in a strike against the Government, Mr. Lundeberg?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Do you class the National Labor Relations Board as the Government?

Q. Will you answer my question? Do you help your friends in a strike even against the Government?

A. We never strike against the Government?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Just a moment. [7067] Has there been any such incident?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, there was such an incident.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Bridges' incident that he is talking about.

Mr. Gladstein: I will lay a more detailed foundation.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, isn't this incident in Tacoma when you supported the Tacoma longshoremen—isn't that the one concerning which Dean Wayne Morse was called to hold a hearing and which, in his decision, he branded the action of the Tacoma longshoremen as a strike against the United States Government?

A. Well, because Dean Morse said that, that doesn't say it is true, does it? Who is Dean Morse? He is paid by the CIO longshoremen, retained; they pay him so much dough a year. Naturally, he is going to say against the A. F. of L. longshoremen. He is going to talk for the ones that pay him, ain't he? That is what you are doing.

Presiding Inspector: The next question.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, last year there was another dispute, was there not, involving some fishermen, Mr. Lundeberg, in which you and Mr. Bridges were on opposite sides of the fence?

A. Where was that fishermen's beef? Can you explain what place it was? I might be able to remember it. [7068]

Q. I am referring now to an incident involving fishermen on ships going to Alaska.

A. Well, you——

Q. (Interposing) Were you not engaged in a dispute at that time in which both you and Bridges were on opposite sides of the fence?

A. I believe you and I were on the opposite side; you were down on Clay street on a sound truck telling the Sailor's Union members to go up and take away the union from me, you and Mr. Grossman, weren't you down on Clay street?

Presiding Inspector: He is not a witness.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Are you just as sure about that, Mr. Lundeberg, as you are about the rest of your testimony?

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein, let's have him answer the question that you put first.

Was there an incident about these fishermen in which you and Mr. Bridges were on two sides of the controversy, different sides?

The Witness: I didn't know that Bridges was a fisherman; he was not on that.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: You weren't either?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: In an advisory capacity were you on opposite sides? [7069]

The Witness: I used to fish mackerel on the Dover banks in the North Sea.

Presiding Inspector: We are not going into those things, or trout fishing or anything else.

You remember this thing, don't you, this controversy?

The Witness: There was no controversy with Bridges. There was a controversy with the fishermen's union down there; I remember it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is a CIO Union, the Fishermen's Union?

A. That is right. Do you want to know more about it? I think you know plenty.

Q. Wasn't the issue in dispute, Mr. Lundeberg, whether the members of the CIO Fishermen's Union should be ousted from their jobs on those ships going to Alaska to be replaced by members of your union?

A. No, that was not the issue.

Presiding Inspector: That answers it. Now, this is a collateral matter. We have got to make some progress. Do you want to know what the issue was, Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I would like to have the witness' understanding.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the issue, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. The issue was that the members of the Sailor's Union wanted to sail the ships, which is their job. The [7070] sailors, they sail the ships. The fishermen go up to Alaska and fish. We wanted to stop the fishermen from doing two jobs, one as a fisherman and one as a sailor. This job is distinctly a sailor's union jurisdiction. We sail those ships; the fisherman doesn't. They fish for salmon in the Bering Sea and they have no business to sail and take a sailor's job; they have no business to hold two jobs.

Q. Had your men ever done the work of sailing those ships during the past 40 years up to that date? A. Oh, yes.

Q. When?

A. They have sailed them up to the time they had squarerig ships going up there; members of the Sailor's Union sailed them.

Q. Up to what date?

A. Oh, to what did you say?

Q. I said during the last 30 or 40 years.

Presiding Inspector: Up to about what date?

A. They have sailed them for years, members of the Sailor's Union.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Up to when, Mr. Lundeberg? Had any members of the Sailor's Union sailed those ships that were engaged in this controversy last year at any time since, say, 1900?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Yes, they sail them every year, every spring and every fall they sail them. [7071]

Q. They used to as members of the Sailor's Union? A. We have contracts.

Q. As members of the Sailor's Union?

A. Yes, we have contracts with the Alaska packers, Libby, McNeil & Libby.

Q. What was the dispute about, then, if your men were occupying those positions? What was the dispute about?

A. The fishermen wanted to sail the vessels up on the fishing trips and we have an agreement with Libby, McNeil & Libby, for instance, the biggest packers on the Pacific Coast, where they retain the sailors from the spring to the fall of the year, from the time they start out until the finish, and they keep sailors aboard these vessels up in the Bering Sea while they are fishing, and the Fishermen's Union in Seattle recognized that right but the Fishermen's Union in San Francisco did not, and it is the same organization, and it was just trying to chisel in on the Sailor's work, that is what it is.

Q. Hadn't the Fishermen's Union members sailed the vessels up to Alaska in previous years?

A. Where? From where?

Q. From Seattle and San Francisco?

A. No, not from Seattle.

Q. How about San Francisco?

A. San Francisco? They had from time to time, yes; [7072] part of the time, not all of the time. But nevertheless it doesn't say it was their right to do so.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: You have answered it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, for some time, Mr. Lundeberg, there has been a running dispute between your union and the ILWU with respect to the performance of longshore work on steam schooners; isn't that true?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, there is no such evidence.

Presiding Inspector: No, he is asking him about it; he is going to ask him about it. He is showing bias; all this is proof directed to the question of bias.

Mr. Del Guercio: Has there been? Not that there is such a dispute; has there been such a dispute?

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask the reporter to read the question to the Court. If there is anything improper in it I will reframe it.

Would you read it?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I renew my objection.

Presiding Inspector: I will overrule it.

A. Longshoremen work on steam schooners? The sailors on the steam schooners?

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No; he just wants [7073] to know whether there has been a dispute about this.

The Witness: Well, it all depends on what you call longshore work, or what——

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes. Well, that is the question.

The Witness: You see, I have to explain.

Presiding Inspector: There has been some disagreement about the matter?

The Witness: About sailors' work, not longshoremen work.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. About the unloading of cargo while the steam schooners were in port; isn't that what the issue is? A. That is right.

Q. This issue has been of pretty vital importance as a matter of dispute between the Sailor's Union and the longshoremen even before there was an ILWU and while the longshoremen were in the ILA; isn't that true?

A. It has between various officials, yes, but I don't think the longshoremen themselves are interested in it.

Q. When you say "various officials" I suppose you mean including yourself and Bridges both of whom are on the opposite sides of the fence and have been on this issue; would that be correct?

[7074]

A. Perhaps you are right.

Q. And isn't one of the complaints made against you and the Sailor's Union in connection with that issue the charge that your men perform longshore work while the steam schooners are in port, that is, unloading cargo at wages far less than the established wage provided for longshore work on the Pacific Coast?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. There is no such a charge in the Sailor's Union against that. The Sailors on board steam schooners make more money than the longshoremen. They get their feed, they have rooms, and they get boarded; they get their wages and they average two hundred to two hundred and fifty-dollars a month. They get steady work.

Q. How much an hour do they get?

A. They work by monthly wages and overtime wages.

Q. Please break this down into the handling of cargo while the steam schooners are in port, not the performance of seamen's work while the vessels are at sea. I am referring now only to the doing of this handling of cargo work while the steam-schooners are in port. Isn't it true that the charges made by the longshore unions are that your members are performing longshore work at less than half the established scale of wages for longshore work on the Pacific Coast?

A. The charge may be so from some of the officials of the longshoremen, but it is not true. The sailors on the steam schooners are better off than the longshoremen. They [7075] get steady employment, more wages, and they can work month in and month out; they are not casual workers.

Q. How much an hour do your members get for performing this work of handling cargo while steam schooners are in port?

A. They work on a monthly base; they get overtime rates and certain working rules. Sometimes, they get as high as $2.20 an hour.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. What did you say the average wage of your members on these steam schooners including overtime is per month?

A. From $200 to $250 a month.

Q. How much does the overtime come to?

A. Well, that is pretty hard to tell, different rates all the time.

Q. Your best judgment?

A. Sometimes they get $1.10 an hour overtime, sometimes $2.20; it is pretty hard to say.

Q. What is the total monthly average earnings not counting overtime?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, your Honor I will object to that. We are going into a comparison now.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think the witness opened this subject.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: He opened this subject by testifying respecting the comparative advantages of the two positions. [7076]

The Witness: I didn't open it up. They opened it up.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. I have told you that the Sailor's Union gets—a man that goes to sea on deck in a steam schooner will get paid so much a month which is $90.00 a month. He gets his three squares a day, coffee time at ten and coffee time at three and coffee time at nine o'clock, three square meals, and they get a flop on top of it, a bunk.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. How many hours a month is that, how many hours a day, how many days a month, if you care to put it that way, for the $90.00 a month?

A. That is monthly wages.

Q. I know. How many hours of work per day, how many hours of work per week for the $90.00 a month?

Presiding Inspector: Let me put the question. How many hours does a sailor work a day while he is on the ship?

The Witness: On the ship he stands his watches, three watches, four on and eight off; that is the Government law.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is 12 hours a day, isn't it?

A. Is it? Four on and eight off? Four and four is eight; I didn't know it was twelve.

Q. They work eight hours a day, is that right?

A. Stand regular steamboat inspection watches; it is a [7077] Government law, see. You can't strike against the Government.

Q. And how many hours a day in port working cargo?

A. Working eight hours and the overtime.

Q. That is, if they work over eight hours?

A. Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: No overtime for the sailors during the voyage?

The Witness: It all depends on what kind of work you do. If you work outside of your regular watch hours, then, you get paid overtime. For instance, if I get a four to eight watch and I go to the wheel and steer the vessel from four to six, then, I come down from the ship and they tell me to go around the deck and paint, then, I get overtime for it.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that common?

The Witness: Yes, that is very common. We only do the regular navigation duties but any work outside of that is overtime and paid for.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Outside of overtime, then, is this correct, Mr. Lundeberg: That your men make $90.00 a month for eight hours of work a day?

Presiding Inspector: On the voyage?

Mr. Gladstein: In port or out?

A. They get $90.00 a month plus their meals and plus their room. [7078]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is in port or out; correct?

A. In port and at sea, $90.00 a month plus their meals plus their room.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

The Witness: (Interposing) I want to get that in, and they eat pretty good, too. I got to make a correction: the wages——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Just wait.

The Witness: The wages——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Wait until they have talked.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

The witness wants to make a correction.

The Witness: The wages is $97.50 a month. I forgot we raised the wages not so long ago. I must be slipping.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Lundeberg, have you ever been a party to any law suits brought against Harry Bridges?

A. Law suits against Harry Bridges? Me?

Q. Well, you or your union?

A. Against Harry Bridges?

Q. Against Harry Bridges as one of a number of defendants. Either personally against Bridges or naming him as a defendant?

A. We have not—the Sailor's Union has never brought a suit against Bridges.

Q. How about you? [7079] A. No.

Q. Have you recently brought suit against the Maritime Federation of the Pacific and certain officials including Harry Bridges?

A. The Sailor's Union of the Pacific have got a law suit against the Voice of the Federation for slander, and the Voice of the Federation—you probably know. You are the attorney, aren't you?

Q. Isn't Bridges named as a defendant in that case?

A. I couldn't tell you. The attorneys take care of that; I wouldn't mix into their business.

Q. For how much are suing, Mr. Lundeberg?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. I don't know what they are suing for at all. It is not—it doesn't make any difference what they are suing for. I don't even remember. It is in the hands of the attorney.

Q. When you went to dinner at Harry Bridges' house did you go alone? A. No.

Q. Whom did you go with?

A. I went there with—well, I went alone but I met people there.

Q. What other people did you meet there?

A. I met Bridges' wife and Bridges' secretary.

Q. Did you bring anybody? [7080]

A. No.

Q. What is the name of Bridges' secretary?

A. Norma Perry.

Q. Were there any other people who were there that evening? A. Darcy.

Q. Well, other than what you have already named? A. Not that I can remember.

Q. Where did this discussion take place?

A. In one of the rooms, in the kitchen.

Q. You say that was in the summer of 1935?

A. It was in 1935; I can't exactly say the date.

Q. Where did Mr. Bridges live at that time?

A. He lived up on Pine Street some place, somewheres around there. I have forgot the number now.

Q. Was it before—withdraw that.

Do you remember there was a time when Mr. Bridges went to the hospital in the year 1935? Do you recall that?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Yes, I remember Bridges went to the hospital.

Q. Now, was this——

A. (Interposing) That is the time I sent him flowers, isn't it?

Q. You remember that, do you?

A. Well, I guess I do. You told him, didn't you?

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, was this incident, this supper at [7081] Bridges' house before or after the time that Bridges went to the hospital?

A. I can't recall, but I think it was after.

Q. What trade union position did you hold, if any, besides President of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific? Is that the only one?

A. That is right.

Q. Who was present when this discussion took place?

A. Only me and Bridges and Darey.

Q. In what room of the house?

A. Oh, I don't know; I guess it was the kitchen. I can't recall.

Q. Before or after supper?

A. Well, I guess it was—I don't know whether it was before or after. It was during that night when we were there talking.

Q. Don't you know whether it was before or after supper?

A. No, I can't remember exactly.

Q. Where was Mrs. Bridges at the time?

A. I think she was in the other room.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Which other room?

A. Well, they had another room there.

Q. Well, which room, if you know?

A. Well, I don't know the different, how many rooms [7082] they had, and I don't know—but I know we were alone when we discussed this; that is all I know.

Q. Was the door open or closed?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Had you ever met Darcy before?

A. No.

Q. Was Mr. Bridges' daughter there?

A. I can't remember; she might have been in and out of there; I don't know.

Q. Now, you say you were introduced to Mr. Darcy by what name? A. Jacobson first.

Q. And where were you when this introduction took place? A. In Mr. Bridges' house.

Q. Well, where in the house?

A. Oh, I don't remember what room it was.

Q. Was it right after you came into the house?

A. Yes.

Q. When you came into the house you say you didn't bring anybody to the house with you?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Well, you came there and you found Norma Perry, Mrs. Bridges, possibly Mr. Bridges' daughter, Mr. Bridges and Mr. Darcy; correct? [7083]

A. That is right.

Q. Were you introduced immediately?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. You don't remember where you were introduced, is that right?

A. I was in the house, I guess.

Q. Somewhere in the house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what name was Mr. Darcy introduced by?

A. Mr. Jacobson, if I am not mistaken, that is what it was.

Q. You say if you are not mistaken. You mean you are not sure?

A. Well, I am pretty sure that that was the name, Mr. Jacobson.

Q. And for how long——

A. (Interposing) He was supposed to be a carpenter.

Q. For how long—withdraw that.

How long was it before you were later told that the man's name was really Darcy?

A. Well, that was just shortly afterwards.

Q. Well, how long afterwards?

A. I couldn't tell you; maybe half an hour, maybe ten minutes, maybe five minutes. [7084]

Q. Between those two points, that is, the time of the introduction of the man by the name of Jacobson and the time that you were told that the man's name was really Darcy there had been discussion among the people who had been there?

A. General discussion, general talk.

Q. This introduction then took place in front of the other people who were there, did it?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Well, I don't know whether they were right there when I shook hands with him or not, but they might have been there; they might not.

Q. Where were you when you were told that the man's name was not Jacobson at all but Darcy?

A. I was in Bridges' house.

Q. Where in the house?

A. I don't know; I don't remember the house; I don't remember the room. I was only in there once.

Q. Were you having supper at the time?

A. We were eating something there.

Q. You were eating something at the time?

A. I don't know if I was eating something at the time I was introduced to him or the time he told me his name was Darcy.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No; I remember I was told his name was Darcy.

Q. That was in front of the other people who were [7085] there? A. I didn't say that.

Mr. Del Guercio: He didn't say that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I am asking. Was that——

A. (Interposing) I don't remember.

Presiding Inspector: I think he said that before.

Mr. Del Guercio: Certainly.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You say you received an invitation to dinner at the house? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. From Bridges? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the circumstances under which you got the invitation?

A. Well, I don't remember exactly the circumstances. He asked me to come up to have dinner with him and a friend of his.

Q. Where were you at the time the invitation was extended?

A. I don't know. It must have been around the waterfront somewheres, probably around the Sailor's Union Hall.

Q. Did he tell you who the friend was at the time he extended the invitation?

A. No. [7086]

Q. Did you ask him? A. No.

Q. What else was the conversation about?

A. Oh, just general matters, union, waterfront, so forth.

Q. When did he tell you to come?

A. Oh, I don't recall; it was an evening. I can't remember the hour exactly.

Q. Just before you came up there; is that the idea?

A. I don't remember exactly what time the invitation was.

Q. Do you remember whether he made a date for a special day in the future or whether your impression is that casually or otherwise he asked you to come u to the house that evening for supper?

A. Oh, I imagine it was just a casual invitation.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Now, you say that that night Bridges said, admitted to you that he was a Communist?

A. Well, that is what I said. He stated "Nothing to be afraid of; I am a member of the Communist Party" and shrugged his shoulders and laughed. And I said "Well, it is O.K.; do what you like; I will do what I like."

Q. Have you ever told anybody about this?

A. Oh, I have mentioned that from time to time.

Q. This specific—this particular admission, Mr. Lundeberg? [7087]

A. Oh, I mentioned it to a lot of sailors from time to time.

Q. All right; who is the first person you ever mentioned it to? Do you remember?

A. Oh, I can't remember whom I have mentioned it to.

Q. Well, name any person to whom you have mentioned it?

A. Oh, to some of the officials and the members of the Sailor's Union. I can't tell who the first was.

Q. When is the first time that you ever mentioned to anybody that Bridges had admitted to you that he was a Communist?

A. Oh, I can't remember.

Q. When is the first time you ever told anyone [illegible]

A. I have never told the Committee anything that at any time

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. At any time up to the time that you took the stand? A. Well, I was——

Q. (Interposing) At any time up to the time you took the stand, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. I talked to Mr. Del Guercio last night. I was called in. He had a subpoena against me. Otherwise, I didn't want to go to jail for 60 days so I went up and saw him. [7088]

Q. I am not asking you anything as to the subpoena, I am asking you now when is the first time you ever told any representative of any Government agency that Bridges had told you that he was a Communist? Last night? A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you ever been approached prior to last night with respect to testifying in this case or in any case against Bridges?

A. Yes; I was approached here last fall by a couple of men from the FBI.

Q. Did they seek information from you?

A. Yes; they asked me to testify against Bridges.

Q. Well, did they ask you questions?

A. No.

Q. They asked you no questions at all?

A. They asked me lots of stuff and I told them "I don't know; I don't want to testify. I don't want nothing to do with it."

Q. Well, what did they ask you?

A. They didn't get the chance to ask me because I said "I want nothing to do with you."

Q. How long were they with you?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Oh, I would say about half an hour or so.

Q. Well, during that half hour they asked you some questions, didn't they?

A. Yes, they shot questions at me but I didn't —they [7089] didn't get any answers.

Q. You didn't answer any questions of any kind? A. I says "I don't know."

Q. What questions did they ask you, Mr. Lundeberg?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the witness has already testified that he didn't answer any questions. What difference does it make?

Mr. Gladstein: No; he has just testified——

Presiding Inspector: I think it might have some significance. I will take it.

A. They asked me if I wanted to testify in the Bridges trial and I says "No."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, that didn't take half an hour. What else did they ask you?

A. Maybe it was twenty-five minutes; I don't know.

Q. Well, didn't they ask you whether you had any information as to whether Bridges was a Communist?

A. I don't know what they asked me. They asked me if I would testify. I told them "No."

Q. Did they ask you whether you would testify before they asked you if you had any information as to whether Bridges was a Communist?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. They asked me whether I wanted to testify and I said "No." They kept on asking the same thing. I said "No." [7090] And I didn't give them any information and they left me in disgust.

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, do you mean to testify that for twenty-five minutes or half an hour some FBI Agents kept asking you just the question, "Do you want to testify?" And that you kept saying "No", and that there were no questions directed to you asking for information as to whether Bridges was a Communist?

A. Well, you know in twenty-five minutes you can waste a lot of time. See, first of all when people talk to me I want to know who they are, see; they have got to produce the stuff. And I asked them a lot of questions, see, so I didn't give them a chance to ask me so much, see.

Q. Well, now, will you please answer this: Did the FBI Agents ask you to testify against Harry Bridges before they asked you what information you had or might have that would prove Bridges was a Communist?

The Witness: Will you repeat that again?

Mr. Gladstein: Certainly. Read it.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. They asked me if I had any information and I says "No." Then they asked me whether I wanted to testify at the Bridges' trial and I said

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

"No". Whether I said that before or after I couldn't tell you. It is pretty hard to remember. [7091]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Let's see if I have this straight, Mr. Lundeberg. The two FBI agents asked——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He has the testimony of the witness. It isn't necessary—whether or not Mr. Gladstein has it. He can read it from the record.

Mr. Gladstein: That was simply——

Presiding Inspector: That is preliminary.

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) —— an expression; yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did the FBI men ask you if you had information that would prove Bridges was a Communist, and did you then say "No," and did they then ask you to testify against Bridges, is that the way it happened?

A. I don't remember if they asked me one question first or afterward.

Q. It might have happened that way?

A. Might and might not.

Q. Did either they, or you, mention this meeting, or this supper at Bridges' house?

A. No.

Q. Is last night the first time that this was mentioned in any discussion between you and a representative of the Government, or any branch of it? A. That is right. [7092]

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg,)

Q. When was the next time—withdraw that. You say these FBI agents came to you some time last fall? A. Yes.

Q. Can you fix the date, approximately?

A. Oh, it is pretty hard to—I can't say for sure what month it was. It was prior to the New Year; I know that.

Q. Was that the first time that any representative of that department of the Government approached you on the question of information concerning Harry Bridges?

A. Well, when they had this Angel Island trial the guy running the show over there asked me to testify.

Q. When was that?

A. When was it, was it a year or two years ago?

Q. With relationship to the hearing itself, how long before, Mr. Lundeberg, or was it during or afterward? A. It was during the hearing.

Q. When during the hearing, do you recall?

A. I can't recall.

Q. And who was it that saw you then, do you know?

A. Well, I think it was a guy by the name of Shoemaker or "Shoemacher"—or something like that.

Q. Was that the first time, Mr. Lundeberg, when you talked to Mr. Shoemaker during the previous deportation proceeding, that you have ever been approached by any representative of any branch of the Government concerning information on Bridges? [7093]

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. That is right.

Q. That is the very first time?

A. That is right.

Q. You weren't approached the previous year?

A. No.

Q. Where did you meet with Mr. Shoemaker, do you recall?

A. He came down to the office.

Q. And who else was with him, if anybody?

A. Well, I think he had another man with him. I don't know what his name was.

Q. How long were they with you?

A. Oh, I don't remember exactly how many minutes. They were there for a little while.

Q. Did they take a statement from you?

A. No.

Q. Did you have a discussion?

A. They asked me if I would testify in the Bridges trial at Angel Island and I said "No."

Q. Was that the first thing they asked——

A. (Interposing) Yes.

Q. (Continuing) ——before they asked whether you had any information that would help them, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And in that discussion neither you nor they mentioned this supper meeting with Mr. Darcy at Mr. Bridges' house, is that correct? [7094]

A. Absolutely correct.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Now, when was the next time, after meeting with Mr. Shoemaker, the one that you have just given, or was there any before that?

A. After meeting with Mr. Shoemaker they didn't bother me any more until the FBI agents came after me last fall.

Q. All right. Now, since the meeting last fall with the FBI agents—by the way, do you recall their names? A. One was Devereau.

Q. And the other? A. I don't remember.

Q. When was the next time that you met with any representatives of the Government?

A. The next time was when I was called up to the FBI office here about a month or six weeks ago by Mr. Schofield and Mr. Del Guercio. I was called up during the meeting of the Sailors Union on Monday night.

Q. How were you called? A. By phone.

Q. Who spoke to you?

A. I think Mr. Devereau; the same man.

Q. What did he ask you to do?

A. He asked me to come up there.

Q. To the FBI offices?

A. That is right. [7095]

Q. And did you go?

A. I went up there with the Assistant Secretary of the Sailors Union, Mr. Prevost.

Q. What took place there?

A. Well, they asked me to testify again.

Q. Was that the first question they asked you?

A. Oh, I don't remember that.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Did they ask you to testify before they asked you whether you had information and, if so, what your information was concerning Bridges? "Yes" or "No", please. A. I can't remember.

Q. You can't remember that?

A. No; I can't remember either way.

Q. How long were you there that time?

A. Well, we were there for some time.

Q. What is that?

A. I was there for some time. I don't remember exactly how long.

Q. Two hours? A. I don't know; maybe.

Q. Did they take a statement from you?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Were notes taken of your conversation?

A. No.

Q. Are you sure of that? [7096]

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you answer questions?

A. I answered what they asked me.

Q. What did they ask you about?

A. Oh, they asked me—it was a general conversation about Communism on the waterfront, and so on and so forth, and they were telling me that the Sailors Union—Mr. Schofield was telling me that the Sailors Union of the Pacific is known to be anti-Communist, a fighting outfit, and so forth, and a general conversation. And I was asked if I wouldn't help get rid of the Communists, and so forth.

I answered, "We are doing all we can to get rid of them in our own way."

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

And then they said, "Wouldn't you like the Government to do so," something along those lines.

I said, "Well, you fight them in your way and we will fight them in our own way. I don't believe in this testifying in any hearing for anybody in a case like that."

Q. What did they ask you to do, or to say, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. They didn't ask me to say anything. It was just a general conversation, and they asked me if I would testify.

Q. What did you say? A. I said "No."

Q. Was the Darcy meeting at Mr. Bridges' house mentioned by anybody on that occasion? [7097]

A. No.

Q. Now, did they ask you whether you had ever been a Communist?

A. No, I don't think so. They might have asked me. I don't remember all the details.

Q. Who were the other people who were present—name all who were present?

A. Well, I can name Mr. Schofield and Mr. Del Guercio. The other ones I might name if I see them.

Q. How many were there all together?

A. I think it was four. I know Mr. Devereau was there because I met him before.

Q. Was Mr. Connelley there?

A. I think that was the name. I can tell you if I see the man.

Q. What time of the day was it?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. After the Sailors Union meeting at night.

Q. What time?

A. I would say around ten o'clock at night.

Q. How long did the discussion last?

A. Oh, I can't recollect exactly. We were there for some time.

Q. What is that?

A. We were there for some time.

Q. Until after midnight?

A. Possibly [7098]

Q. What did they ask you with respect to Bridges?

A. Well, they asked me if I knew anything about him. I said "No."

Q. When was the next time that you saw any representatives of the Government?

A. Last night.

Q. How did you happen to see Mr. Del Guercio last night?

A. Because I, myself, went up and saw him. I had two subpoenas issued against me, one in San Francisco and one in San Pedro, and I was told in San Pedro if I didn't appear here that I will get slapped into jail for contempt. I sent Mr. Del Guercio a wire asking him to get an extension and I would contact him as soon as I got to Frisco. And I received a wire back saying the extension was granted. And as soon as I got into Frisco, and after the Sailors' meeting was over, I went up to see him.

Q. Who was present last night when you saw Mr. Del Guercio? A. Mr. Devereau.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Anybody else? A. No.

Q. Was a statement taken from you at that time?

A. No; no statement was taken.

Q. Were notes taken?

A. Well, maybe they took notes; but no statement. [7099]

Q. Did you see anybody taking notes, or what appeared to be notes, of your conversation?

A. No. They asked me a lot of questions, but didn't take any notes to my knowledge.

Q. How long were you there?

A. Oh, I would say about half an hour.

Q. What did they ask you last night?

A. Well, they first of all asked me why I was running around the country dodging subpoenas, and if I thought I could get by with playing around with the United States Government and not answer.

I told them that I intended to be there. I had to leave town on account of urgent business in San Pedro and that was why I did not appear the first time.

So they told me, "All right. You have got to go and testify tomorrow or else you might get into trouble with the law," which I know myself.

I said, "I will be there at ten o'clock in the morning."

They asked me about, did I know that Mr. Melnikow had accused the Sailors Union of sabotage. I said I read it in the paper, and I said it was a lie.

They asked me about the connection of the MWIU and the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

They asked me if I knew Bridges, and I answered. Then I left and said, "See you in the morning."

[7100]

Q. That is all that took place?

A. That is all.

Q. Did they tell you about this Darcy meeting at Bridges' house?

A. They asked me all the questions and told me to tell the truth.

Q. Did they ask you about this meeting at Bridges' house?

A. No, they didn't ask about the Darcy meeting.

Q. Did you tell them about it?

A. Yes. I told them about it. They told me to tell the truth and that is what I am going to do.

Q. What did they ask you?

A. They asked if I knew Bridges, where I met him, what place, and so forth, and if I mixed with him socially, if I had been to his house, or anything like that. Naturally, I told the truth. I am not going to tell the Government a lie, am I?

Q. Did they tell you about this meeting at Bridges' house?

A. No; they didn't know anything about it. Most of the questions were around the MW and the Sailors Union of the Pacific. They asked me how many members the MWIU had on the Pacific Coast during the '34 strike. I told them. I said, "I think the most they had on the Pacific Coast was 500 active [7101] seamen. The rest was cherry pickers."

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Now, what you testified to concerning Bridges in New Orleans, his record, which you characterized as, in your opinion that it stinks, what documents, if any, was that opinion of yours, or those expressions, based on?

A. I looked at—I went and looked at the Shipping Commissioner's records. You can always go to the Shipping Commissioner and look back to the records.

Q. When did you do that?

A. Well, that was for my own information.

Q. When did you do it?

A. I did it a long time ago. I done it for my own information.

Q. When?

A. People told me he was scabbing in 1921 and I wanted to find out.

Q. When did you go there?

A. A long time ago.

Q. Don't you know whether it was this year, last year, or five years ago? A. Years ago.

Q. When?

A. A couple or three years ago, I guess.

Q. Where did you go?

A. I went down to the Commissioner here, U. S. Commis- [7102] sioner, Shipping Commissioner, in San Francisco to look it up. I didn't tell him I was looking for Bridges' record. I went in to check up on something and I sneaked in and looked at it.

Q. Did you tell him what you were looking for?

A. I forgot even what I told him.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. What did you look for?

A. I was looking for Bridges' record.

Q. What kind of records do they have there?

A. They have the articles of ships, and all that stuff, their voyages, voyages of the ships, and so forth.

Q. As to the end of the voyage, articles to the end of the voyage? A. Sure.

Q. In San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to a 1921 voyage in New Orleans?

A. Yes. The voyage terminated in San Francisco.

Q. Did you see whether or not the records showed there if the men were paid off?

A. I don't remember. All I remember is the signing on for 25 cents a month.

Q. Was that before or after the ship sailed?

A. Well, you can check with the Commissioner. I know he signed at 25 cents a month.

Q. All that you said was based on what these records show, your recollection of what they show, is that right? [7103] A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: You will recall, your Honor, we raised the question of the records being the best evidence of this, and now it appears that the witness' entire testimony on that particular——

Presiding Inspector: It is only collateral. What difference does it make? The strict rule is to the integration of the best evidence rule. The matter being in a record isn't applied as strictly on a collateral matter. Furthermore, we are not confined to the rules anyway.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you ever told any union meeting, or anybody, that you have been a member of the IWW?

A. I never told any union meeting I was a member of the IWW.

Q. Have you ever told anybody that you have been a member of the IWW?

A. I have never told anybody I was a member of the IWW. If I was a member of the IWW, you don't have to be afraid, for I wouldn't hide behind a smoke screen and not say so.

Q. Have you ever told anybody at all, to your recollection, that you were a member?

A. No; I have never told anybody I was a member of the IWW. If I was I would tell the world about it. [7104]

Q. Did you ever sign a card to become a member?

A. Of the IWW?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. You say the first time you met Bridges was in Seattle in 1934? A. Right.

Q. At the Marine Council? A. Yes.

Q. And you say that you were a member of the Strike Committee at that time?

A. No. I didn't say that. The Marine Council was formed after the strike. This was in December, 1934, I believe, to the best of my knowledge.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Well, is that——

A. (Interposing) I was a member of the Seattle Strike Committee of the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

Q. During the waterfront strike of '34 you were a member of the Strike Committee? A. Yes.

Q. Of the Sailors Union? A. Yes.

Q. When did you go on strike?

A. I went on strike—I was on the steam schooner James Griffith out in the bay here, and we got in on May 30. I [7105] was the Third Mate and I took them off.

Q. What was the ship's name?

A. James Griffith.

Q. What is your best recollection, Mr. Lundeberg, as to the date when you first met Bridges?

A. Well, I believe that the first time I met him, as I stated before, was up in Seattle in December, around in the fall of the year, in the Marine Council.

Q. It was December, or earlier in December?

A. I can't say for sure. It was at a meeting of the Marine Council up in Seattle.

Presiding Inspector: It was in '34?

The Witness: In '34; yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Are you sure it was in 1934? A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: May we have our noon recess?

Presiding Inspector: I thought you might be able to close.

Mr. Gladstein: I think there are other questions I would like to give consideration to.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Before we adjourn I would like to ask if Mr. Cannalonga is needed any longer.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want him?

Mr. Grossman: We have this problem: The letters, as [7106] we thought, make it necessary for us to ask a minimum of questions. But we have some information, which we reasonably expect, and we have tried to get it here before, but which we reasonably expect will be here the first thing tomorrow morning. That will enable us to ask some further questions. We did our best to get it here before. We can't ask those questions at this time because it isn't in such form, until we get the written documents, and we think they will be here in the morning. Therefore, since he has waited this long, and since we want to ask those questions tomorrow morning, we ask that he remain over, and any expense involved we are perfectly willing to meet; which we think is reasonable considering the fact that he has remained this long, and there is nothing, so far as we know, nothing pressing, requiring his attendance elsewhere.

Presiding Inspector: How long will the matter take?

Mr. Grossman: We won't have many questions.

Presiding Inspector: Are you sure?

Mr. Grossman: Yes. We will be prepared as well as possible by tomorrow morning.

Presiding Inspector: I am in hopes that we may close the hearing tomorrow.

Mr. Grossman: In any event, we will be prepared on this tomorrow morning.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: I think he had better stay. We will take a recess.

(Whereupon, at 12:34 p.m. a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. of the same date.) [7107]

After Recess
2:00 o'clock P.M.

HARRY LUNDEBERG

called as witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: You continue under oath.

The Witness: Yes.

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, have you ever been convicted of any crime?

A. Not of any crime.

Q. Have you ever been convicted of anything?

A. Well, I was in jail for riotous——

The Reporter: (Interposing) I didn't catch the last of it?

A. (Continuing) I was in jail for riotous behavior in Australia during a strike.

Presiding Inspector: "For riotous behavior in Australia during a strike," he said.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What year was that?

A. It was in the early part of '23 or the latter part of '22.

Q. In connection with what strike? [7108]

A. We struck a couple of German ships coming down on account of scab wages, and we tried to force union wages on them.

Q. Where did the strike occur?

A. In the Port of Newcastle, New South Wales.

Q. What part of 1923 was that?

A. It was in the early part of it, of 1923.

Q. What other arrests——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) What, felonies or arrests?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. I don't suppose it makes much difference. It is riotous behavior. We don't know whether they have any such classification in New South Wales.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will ask this question: What were you charged with that time, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. I was charged with beating up a German Skipper.

Q. Do you recall what the exact charge was?

A. Fighting.

Q. What? A. Assault, I guess.

Q. Was there a trial? A. Yes.

Q. Were you convicted? [7109] A. Yes.

Q. What was the sentence?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. Three months. I didn't serve three months; they let me out afterwards.

Q. Have you been arrested on any other occasion? A. I was arrested in London.

Q. I didn't hear you.

Presiding Inspector: "Arrested in London," the witness said.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the charge?

A. Fighting scabs.

Q. Was that the charge? A. Yes.

Q. You mean that you were arraigned and the charge against you was fighting scabs?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the witness has answered it. He said he was fighting scabs. Mr. Gladstein knows that the witness said that. It isn't necessary to repeat it.

Presiding Inspector: That is a mere description, I suppose. I don't suppose it is a crime, under the English law, for fighting scabs. It may be.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the charge, Mr. Lundeberg? [7110]

A. Well, it was during the——

Q. (Interposing) What was the charge?

Presiding Inspector: What did they charge you with? A. They charged me with fighting.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we can properly exclude all of this line of inquiry here concerning these arrests and confine it to the question of whether he ever has been convicted of a felony.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: I know, but that hasn't been the plan under which either side has proceeded in this case.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did this arrest occur?

A. That occurred in London during the seamen's strike; the American seamen's strike and the European seamen's strike.

Q. What year, please? A. 1921.

Q. What part of 1921?

A. Well, that was—I was paid off in London from a three masted bark on the 8th of May in London, 1921; and I was on the beach in London during the American seamen's strike, and the Norwegian seamen's strike, and during the Swedish seamen's strike, and there was more or less a seamen's strike all over the world at the time.

Q. When did this arrest occur?

A. It occurred on the West India—— [7111]

The Reporter: Will you repeat the last of the answer?

A. It occurred on the West India Dock Road.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When? A. 1921.

Q. What happened in that case?

A. Well, I was bailed out and got out of it. I was only in a couple of days.

Q. Have you ever been arrested on any other occasion?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. I have been arrested in Bahia Blanca, South America, Argentina.

Q. What were you arrested for?

A. I had trouble with a Skipper. There was a fight between the crew on the dock and I was tossed in the bucket for a while.

Q. What were you tossed in the bucket for?

A. For fighting. I was complaining about food aboard ship, and was fighting for better conditions, and we finally had it out on the dock, and the Skipper had a warrant for me and a couple of other fellows and they put us in the jail.

Q. What did the warrant charge you with?

A. The warrant charged—I don't know what the warrant charged us with. I know they tossed us in jail.

Q. How long were you in jail?

A. For fourteen days.

Q. Have you ever been arrested on any other occasion? [7112]

A. Yes; once more and in Seattle.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, that was around 1927 or 1928, for a fight up in Belltown. I was on a sailing ship.

Q. What were you charged with?

A. Fighting.

Q. Were you convicted?

A. No. They let me out. I paid my fine and got out of there.

Q. You paid your what? A. Fine.

Q. Of how much? A. $10.00.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Then you were convicted and sentenced to pay a fine, is that right?

A. No. I paid—I didn't even go to court. I paid $10.00 and got out of there the next morning.

Q. Have you listed all the times you have been arrested or convicted of any misdemeanor or crime of any kind, or charge of any kind?

A. Well, that is all the times I have been arrested. You have got it all there now—whether you call it crimes or not—it was fighting.

Q. Now, did you ever meet with Sam Darcy at any time after this date in 1935? [7113]

A. No; not that I remember.

Q. That is the only time you saw him?

A. Yes.

Q. You were asked this morning by Mr. Del Guercio about this meeting that you say lasted about five hours at an address on Market Street, where you saw a Mr. Hanoff, a Mr. Lambert, and Mr. Johnston, and some others were present. Did you have that in mind?

A. Yes; I remember it.

Q. Now, I am interested in this question: How long after you were in Bridges' house did this Market Street meeting occur?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Approximately?

A. It is pretty hard to tell because I was in and out at that time all the time.

Q. Which one occurred first?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. To my knowledge the meeting in Bridges' house when I had dinner with him occurred first.

Q. How long before?

Presiding Inspector: Speak louder.

A. I can't remember how long before or how long afterward.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. With respect to the City Elections that were taking [7114] place, or were about to take place, at what part of the campaign, or the elections, would you place that meeting on Market Street?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Can you fix it with respect to the tanker strike in 1935? You are familiar with when that took place, are you not, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. The tanker strike took place from March 10 or 11, and was concluded in June.

Q. All right. With respect to that tanker strike would you say that this Market Street meeting occurred some time during the strike, or some time before, or some time after?

A. Really, I couldn't tell you for sure what time it did happen.

Presiding Inspector: Your best recollection.

A. I can't remember.

—Presiding Inspector: You haven't any recollection?

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, you remember when the Voice of the Federation began, don't you? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. When did it begin?

A. It began around May or June, I guess.

Q. Of 1935? A. Yes. [7115]

Q. All right. With respect to the beginning of that paper, did this Market Street meeting occur before or after?

A. It must have occurred after, I suppose.

Q. How long after?

A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. What makes you suppose that it was after? Do you have any recollection of it at all?

A. I have a very good recollection of the meeting, but I can't remember the date and the time it was. I know it was in '35.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Scharrenberg was expelled? You talked about that today?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when it was?

A. I was on the Trial Committee.

Q. Do you recall when it occurred?

A. In 1935.

Q. When in 1935?

A. I can't remember the day and the date, but we can find out from the Sailors' record.

Q. Did the Market Street meeting occur before or after the expulsion of Mr. Scharrenberg?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Can you remember any activity, any trade union [7116] activity, or other activity, in which you took a particular interest which was going on at the time that you had this Market Street meeting, or just before or just after, in order to enable you to fix the approximate date of that meeting?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. No. I can't remember any particular activity because there was a lot of activity in those days.

Q. What were you doing in San Francisco at that time?

A. I was down here as head of the Maritime Federation.

Q. Were your offices here?

A. No. My office was anywhere I happened to be on the coast.

Q. Wasn't there a central headquarters of some kind?

A. There was an office in Seattle and the central headquarters was at No. 24 California Street, San Francisco.

Q. And you have a distinct recollection that you were in San Francisco at that period in connection with the Maritime Federation of the Pacific business?

A. Yes, sir; I was in San Francisco on Maritime Federation business. We had—a tanker strike was going on and various other matters.

Q. Was the tanker strike going on while this Market,—when this Market Street meeting occurred?

A. I couldn't remember the date and the time of that. [7117]

Q. Do you know who the two other people were who were at that meeting?

A. I can't remember.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Can you describe them in any way?

A. No.

Q. Can you state whether they were trade unionists or had trade union connections of any kind?

A. No; I believe they were Commissars; they were all Commissars.

Presiding Inspector: "Commissars", he said.

The Witness: Or would-be Commissars.

Presiding Inspector: That is what you call them?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You have testified that the time that you had supper in Bridges' house was after he had got out of the hospital in 1935. That is correct, isn't it?

A. Yes, I am sure it was after.

Q. Do you recall how soon after he got out that supper occurred? A. I can't recall.

Q. Do you recall whether Bridges was convalescing at his home at that time?

A. Not that I remember; I am not quite sure.

Q. Do you remember there was a big parade in July of [7118] that year, Mr. Lundeberg, on July 5th to commemorate the events of "Bloody Thursday" of the previous year? You recall that, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now, was this meeting at Mr. Bridges' house prior to that parade or afterwards?

A. I can't remember, as I told you whether it was before or after the tanker strike or before or after the fifth of July.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. Have you ever been called a Communist?

A. They have called me anything that they can print in the paper, from a Communist——

Q. (Interposing): I say have you ever been called a Communist?

A. Well, the San Francisco Chronicle called me a Communist one time.

Q. Did Scharrenberg call you a Communist?

A. Well, he is bound to call me anything, that guy.

Q. Did Forsythe ever call you a Communist?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did Clyde Deal ever call you a Communist?

A. Clyde Deal?

Q. Yes.

A. He didn't get near enough to call me anything.

Q. Do you know whether he ever called you a Communist [7119] or not?

A. To my knowledge I don't know. He probably did, though, because I was fighting him all the time.

Q. Now, I want to direct your attention for a moment to this meeting that you had with Mr. Schomaker and someone else from the Immigration Department during the last Bridges trial. That was in 1939, Mr. Lundeberg. As I understand it, they were in your office?

A. They came down to the office, yes.

Q. They wanted you to testify against Bridges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time they asked you some questions, is that correct?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

A. They asked me if I knew anything about Bridges. I says "No."

Q. Well, when they asked you if you knew anything about Bridges they asked you, did they not, if you had any information that would tend to show that Bridges was or had ever been a member of the Communist Party; isn't that correct?

A. I don't remember them asking me that question whatsoever.

Q. Substantially wouldn't that be correct, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. That might be correct, yes.

Q. And that is the kind of question, or those were the kinds of questions to which you gave the answer "I don't [7120] know," is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Did the same thing, or substantially the same thing occur about six weeks ago when you were meeting in the offices of the——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) We have been all over that. We are not going over the same thing again.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know that Mr. Gladstein has been over it in any detail.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did substantially the same thing occur, Mr. Lundeberg, at the meeting you had about six weeks ago in the FBI offices? A. That is right.

Q. Now, Mr. Lundeberg, do you feel that the labor movement would be better off without Harry Bridges?

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it on the basis of bias.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: I will take it on the basis of bias.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I am quite sure I know what this witness' answer is, and I know what my answer would be, and I [7121] know what everybody else's answer would be.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that counsel's statement be stricken from the record as improper.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't amount to anything.

Mr. Gladstein: I realize it doesn't amount to anything but it is improper nevertheless.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

The Witness: Answer it?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: I have to?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

A. I say the trade union movement would be better off without him.

Mr. Gladstein: No further questions.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a few questions.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Lundeberg, did your union or your unions take any action with regard to your appearing here to testify today?

Mr. Gladstein: Object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Sustained; it is immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, counsel has gone into the motives of this witness appearing here to testify. [7122]

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about the motives of other people.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about the motives of other people.

Mr. Del Guercio: They are not the motives. It is what induced Mr. Lundeberg to appear here and testify today as he has.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think he needs any apology for appearing here.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not that he needs it, but I think the witness has a right to answer that question.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't see that it is material. I will exclude it. I think you have had him here and he has given his testimony.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is true. We are very glad to have him here.

Presiding Inspector: No reason why he shouldn't, that I can see. He doesn't need any apology for doing it.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, now, with reference to this 1934 strike, Mr. Lundeberg, was there a strongly organized Seamen's Union at that time?

A. It was not very strong, but there was one union that was functioning and organized on the coast; that is the Sailors [7123] Union of the Pacific.

Q. Sailors Union of the Pacific? A. Yes.

Q. Now, what was the Sailors Union of the Pacific membership with regard to the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. Well, the Sailors Union of the Pacific had 1600 members, active members in 1934. The Marine Workers Industrial Union had approximately 500 members on the whole coastwise scale, including firemen, cooks, stewards, longshoremen, what have you. That is about all they had, if they had that many.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What records are you relying on for the statement you have just made that the SUP had 1600 members in 1934?

A. The records of the Sailors Union.

Q. And what part of the strike are you referring to?

A. The beginning of the strike, prior to the strike.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Q. That the SUP had 1600 members in good standing?

A. That is right, on a coastwise scale.

Q. That is, you say, based on the records of your organization? A. That is right. [7124]

Q. Are they available? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Do you have any objection to having them examined? A. None whatsoever.

Q. Now, what kind of records are you referring to?

A. I am referring to the dues cards and so forth.

Q. Dues payments? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. So you are saying in effect—I want to have this straight—that your records in the SUP will show that at the beginning of the 1934 strike and prior, just prior to it, the SUP had 1600 dues-paying members on the Pacific Coast?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, what do you base your statement on that the MWIU had only 500 members?

A. By asking one of the officials of the MWIU who was active at that time.

Q. Who is that? A. Mr. Harry Prevost.

Q. And what did he tell you?

A. He told me that if they had 500 members that was tops.

Q. When did you ask him that?

A. I asked him that a long time ago; we discussed the MWIU and the Sailors Union of the Pacific. [7125]

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to ask one more question which should have been asked on cross rather than on recross.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At the time that you were in Bridges' house did he seem to be sick or was he completely recovered to your observation from his spell in the hospital, Mr. Lundeberg?

A. He didn't seem to be sick—I don't remember—but he was not sick; he was not lying down.

Q. Well, he had been sufficiently well so that he could invite you to that supper when he met you down town; is that correct? A. Yes, he was.

Q. So he was moving around and engaging again in normal activities at the time that this supper was held; correct? A. Possible.

Q. Well, what is your best recollection?

A. Well, the man was not laying down in bed; that is all I can tell you. He was on his feet and he sat down at the table eating.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, your Honor, I would like an opportunity to examine the records to which the witness has just made reference.

Presiding Inspector: He said that it was available to him. [7126] You can arrange it with him.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I will do that. And also there is something further which may require brief cross examination of the witness on another subject; it may not. We will not have this information until tomorrow so I would like this understood, if we may have it, the witness can be excused. We will ask that the witness be excused with the understanding that he is still under the subpoena of this court and that upon telephonic request from us he will agree to appear again tomorrow for further examination. And as to this other question of the records, I suppose that——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Let's take one matter up at the time, if your Honor please, so there won't be any confusion.

Now, on the matter of his appearing again I object to that for a number of reasons. Mr. Lundeberg here is a local man, well known in labor circles.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, it is quite customary.

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel here has had every opportunity to prepare for this examination here. There is no excuse or no reason for any delay or for recalling him. He is here. We presented him. They have their opportunity to cross examine him now, and they have had full opportunity.

Presiding Inspector: Still, I think it is very usual to arrange that witnesses remain through a hearing. This [7127] man is a local man, as I understand it.

You live here?

The Witness: Well, I live any place but this is the headquarters.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, this is your headquarters?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Presiding Inspector: You are going to be here until tomorrow anyway, aren't you?

The Witness: I expect to.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we will let it go that way. You come if you are phoned to. The subpoena holds over.

Mr. Del Guercio: If there is any communication it should come from the Court, I believe, rather than from——

Presiding Inspector: I will call him.

Mr. Gladstein: I was only going to accommodate the witness. I was going to agree to do this: To agree to call him before ten o'clock if we do not need him so it will save him a trip down here, but if the Government objects, of course, we won't do it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know if the witness has any objection.

The Witness: It is all right with me. Whose voice am I supposed to listen to, you or someone else's?

Mr. Del Guercio: You are not supposed to listen to his voice. [7128]

Presiding Inspector: Let the witness come here tomorrow morning unless Mr. Gladstein releases him by telephone before 10:00 o'clock or before 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. Grossman: Are you staying at the Sailor's Union Hall?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You stay there until the time to come down here.

(Testimony of Harry Lundeberg.)

Mr. Gladstein: As to those records will you make those available late this afternoon?

Presiding Inspector: You can arrange that off the stand.

Call the next witness.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you be in your office by 4:30?

Presiding Inspector: I think I heard that, Mr. Gladstein. Better make it a little later. You said 4:30. We might run along here this afternoon.

These arrangements need not be on the record.

(Discussion outside the record.)

(Witness temporarily excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Call your next witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have called him.

LEE BARLOW

called as a witness in rebuttal for and on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your full name and address to [7129] the reporter.

The Witness: Lee Barlow.

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: L-e-e B-a-r-l-o-w.

Presiding Inspector: Your address?

The Witness: 111 West Burnside, Portland Oregon.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, speak so all these gentlemen can hear.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Barlow, did you attend the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in April, 1935 in Seattle, Washington? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And in what capacity did you attend that convention?

A. A delegate from the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

Q. And while you were at that convention did you see the Alien, Harry Bridges? A. I did.

Q. And will you state under what circumstances you saw him?

A. Well, I saw him on the convention floor, that is the first time that I had met the man during the convention, and during that time an issue of Communism came up during the meeting, and afterwards I talked to Bridges outside the convention and Bridges stated to me that the only way that a young fellow could get ahead in the labor movement today was to [7130] join the Communist Party.

Q. Who was present when that conversation occurred?

A. Well, there was quite a few around there. The only one I could remember for sure is my dad; he was there.

Q. What is your father's name?

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

A. John Barlow.

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How long have you been a member of any union, Mr. Barlow?

A. I joined the SUP in 1931; I have been a member in good standing ever since.

Q. Out of which port did you ship?

A. I started going to sea out of Seattle. Since then I have sailed out of every port on the Coast.

Q. Did you say the first time you had ever met Harry Bridges was during this Federation convention? A. Before the convention.

Q. How long before the convention?

A. A couple of days, when I came in to town.

Q. How did you happen to meet him?

A. Through Lundeberg.

Q. Well, what happened? How did you happen to meet him?

A. Well, he introduced me to him before the convention, [7131] that was all.

Q. Was it at some kind of a meeting?

A. No, it was no meeting.

Q. What did Mr. Lundeberg say when he introduced you?

A. He said "This is Harry Bridges from San Francisco."

Q. Did you have any discussion at that time?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. When was the next time you saw him?

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

A. All during the convention.

Q. Did you sit in any caucuses with Harry Bridges? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you sit in any fraction or Communist meetings with Harry Bridges?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. This conversation you referred to about a young fellow getting ahead was held where?

A. Within the Labor Temple in Seattle.

Q. Is that where the convention was held?

A. That is right.

Q. Was it during a session of the convention?

A. No. It was after the day's proceedings, if I remember right.

Q. But after the convention had adjourned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where in the Labor Temple was this conversation? [7132]

A. It was on the stairs leading down to the basement there.

Q. Do you remember whether it was at the top of the stairs or the bottom of the stairs?

A. I don't recall whether it was on the first floor or the main floor.

Q. Were you walking down the stairs at the time the conversation took place?

A. No; we were standing there on the landing.

Q. Had you been discussing something with Bridges before the statement was made?

A. Oh, just discussing the day's proceedings all together there.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. About how many people were there?

A. Well, I couldn't say the exact amount. They were broken up in little groups talking there.

Q. About how many were within three or four or five feet of you?

A. Oh, I would say maybe six or seven; I don't know the exact amount.

Q. Can you name any except your father?

A. No, not to my knowledge, no.

Q. Do you have a hazy recollection of any except your father? A. No, I don't. [7133]

Q. Did you agree or disagree with Bridges at that convention?

A. I didn't make any comment one way or the other.

Presiding Inspector: No; he means during the convention had you been in general agreement with Bridges or against him or——

The Witness: (Interposing) As a matter of fact, I think that during the convention the longshoremen and the sailors voted pretty nearly in a block.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was your father a delegate to that convention? A. No sir, he was not.

Q. How did your father happen to be there?

A. He was attending the convention; they had a gallery there.

Q. Do you recall whether there were any introductions between Bridges or your father or any of these other people there?

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

A. That I couldn't say whether there was an introduction; whether my father was introduced to Bridges or not; I don't believe so.

Q. How did this subject come up out of which Bridges made this statement?

A. If my memory serves me right, it came up over the question of the delegate from the Fireman's Union being eligible [7134] to sit in the convention.

Q. Who was that delegate?

A. Walter Stack.

Q. You mean it came up on the convention floor? A. That is right, the issue.

Q. Now, I am concerned with how this particular statement came up in the convention? I assume this was not the first thing that was said in the conversation, was it?

A. No. If my memory serves me right, the question came up of a beef about Walter Stack being a delegate and being ineligible, and some members of the Firemen's Union accused him of being a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Now, when you were on the stairs with Harry Bridges were you discussing this question of Walter Stack being admitted as a delegate?

A. Yes, that was in the conversation; that is how it started.

Q. Did you express an opinion at that time as to whether Stack should have been admitted as a delegate?

A. No, I did not. It didn't concern me. I was a member of the Sailor's Union, not the Firemen's Union.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. What position did you take in the convention on that point?

A. It was not a question of the convention taking a position on it. It was his own local union.

[7135]

Q. Did it arise in the convention or not?

A. That is right.

Q. How did it arise in the convention?

A. I don't remember the exact way it came up but it was bounced around the floor.

Q. What action was the convention being asked to take on it?

A. I don't remember whether the convention was asked to take any action on it, but it was brought to the floor of the convention, if my memory serves me right.

Q. Can't you recall whether it was official business in the convention or not?

A. I would have to look the minutes up; that has been six years ago, five years ago.

Q. Your best recollection is, then, that the convention took no official action on this case?

A. That is right.

Q. All right. Now, do you remember anything else about the conversation between you and Bridges and the rest of this group?

A. No, because I left there that day.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I left there right after that.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. After what?

A. After I talked to Bridges there for a few minutes. [7136]

Q. I am talking now about the conversation involving Bridges on the stairs. You stated that you discussed in that conversation the question of Walter Stack?

A. Not Walter Stack alone; the Communist Party.

Q. All right. What was said about the Communist Party?

A. I don't remember in full. I think I asked Bridges what he thought about it.

Q. About the Communist Party?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall what he answered?

A. I gave my answer already.

Q. That was his answer to your question about what he thought of the Communist Party?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you remember anything else that he said?

A. No, I don't, not exactly, no.

Q. Do you remember whether anything else was said in this conversation?

A. No; that was—I didn't—I wasn't—I didn't leave the convention with Bridges. I was walking out of the convention and, as is generally the style, everybody breaks up and talks together.

Q. Did you ask Bridges whether you should join the Communist Party?

A. No, I did not.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. And be a Communist? [7137]

A. No. I did not.

Q. Now, can you remember any more detail of this statement of Bridges except that he said "The only way for a young fellow to get ahead is to joint the Communist Party?"

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that complete in and of itself?

Mr. Grossman: I don't know whether it is or not.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Grossman: It might or might not be, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Why don't you ask him, then, instead of suggesting there was more.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was there any more detail in his statement than that?

A. Not that I can recall, no.

Q. Do you remember whether the other people in your group were delegates to the convention?

A. Well, most of them that were around there were delegates to the convention.

Q. In your group?

A. I was not with any——

Q. (Interposing) In your group, for example?

A. I was not with any group.

Presiding Inspector: No, he means in the group, a few people. [7138]

The Witness: I would say that they were delegates to the convention, yes.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Now, your father was not a delegate?

A. That is right.

Q. But you are sure that the rest in this small group that were close to you were all delegates?

A. That is right.

Q. You haven't got the least idea who the others were? A. I don't recall, no.

Q. When was the first time you gave this information that you have just testified to to any representative of the Federal Government?

A. I haven't given any until now.

Q. Not before you testified?

A. No, I haven't. [7139]

Q. When was the first time that you were contacted by any representative of the Federal Government with respect to testifying in this case?

A. In the first Bridges hearing.

Q. Who contacted you and where?

A. Some Immigration official, when I was sailing at the time. I was on a ship at Astoria, Oregon.

Q. Do you know his name?

A. No, I don't remember his name.

Q. Do you know when it was?

A. It was in August, 1938.

Q. 1938 or 1939?

A. Well, I think it was 1939.

Q. Was it during the hearing? A. Yes.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. He just asked me if I knew anything about Bridges and I said "No."

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. Did he ask you whether you knew anything that showed or tended to show that Bridges was a Communist? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did he just ask you if you knew anything about Bridges? A. Right.

Q. Didn't he limit his question to whether Bridges was [7140] a Communist.

A. No, he didn't. He took me in the post office at Astoria, and my wife sat there during the time he was questioning me; and that is all there was to it.

Q. And your reply was you didn't know anything? A. That is right.

Q. About Bridges? A. Pardon?

Q. Your reply was you didn't know anything about Bridges? A. That is right.

Q. And you knew that he wanted information that would tend to show that Bridges was a Communist, didn't you?

A. That was my opinion; yes.

Q. When was the next time you talked to any representative of the Federal Government with respect to testifying?

A. When I was served with a subpoena.

Q. When was that?

A. It was last Friday.

Q. You are sure that was the first time?

A. That is right.

Q. Where were you served with a subpoena?

A. At my home in Portland, Oregon.

Q. Since then have you had any discussion with any representative of the Federal Government with respect to testifying? [7141]

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

A. Yes. I notified him last night I was in town.

Q. When you were served with a subpoena did you have any discussion with the man who served you, or anyone that was with him, about testifying in this case?

A. No. He was sitting in the lobby when I entered the hotel and I took him up to the room.

Q. Since being served with a subpoena have you discussed with any representative of the Federal Government what testimony you were going to give, or could give against Harry Bridges?

A. I did not.

Q. Have you told anyone at all about this incident that you have just described before coming to court? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you ever discussed this with your father? A. Yes.

Q. When was the first time?

A. After that happened.

Q. How long after it happened?

A. That night.

Q. And what was said?

A. He told me if I ever joined the Communist Party that he would disown me as his son.

Q. Did you ever have any other discussion with your father about that? [7142]

A. Yes, I did; — not about that subject — but about the subject of Communism.

Q. I am talking about the subject of this conversation.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

A. Not until lately, when we were both served with a subpoena.

Q. Was there any other discussion, when you discussed it with your father for the first time, except what you have related?

A. I have already told you what the discussion was.

Q. Was there anything else? A. No.

Q. After this statement made by Bridges on the stairs, did he leave first, or did you leave first, or did you leave together?

A. I left with my father.

Q. When was the next time that you discussed this conversation with your father?

A. I already told you when we were served with a subpoena.

Q. And what was said at that time?

A. We just discussed this that had happened before; and I told my father, in the event that I was subpoenaed, that I wasn't going to do any time in jail for perjury or anything else.

Q. Who raised the question of perjury? [7143]

A. I did.

Q. How did you happen to raise the question of perjury?

A. I made the statement to my father that I wasn't going to do any time, when I had a subpoena, and that I would answer it.

Q. Did anyone tell you that you would be guilty of perjury if you testified the way you have here? A. No.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. Was there anything else in the discussion between yourself and your father at that time?

A. That is all.

Q. Have you, at any other time, had a discussion with your father about this incident?

A. I have already told you "No."

Q. Now, have you discussed this incident with any other person, at any other time, except those that you have mentioned?

A. I have already answered that — No.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all?

Mr. Grossman: No.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you ever given any statement, written statement, to the FBI? A. I have not.

Q. Do you know whether your father has?

A. He will have to answer for himself. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether, at any time that you talked to [7144] the FBI, any notes were taken?

Presiding Inspector: Any what?

Mr. Grossman: Any notes taken?

A. I don't know — I didn't know that I talked to the FBI.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. At any time when you had contact with any representative of the Federal Government were any notes taken?

A. I didn't have any contact with the Federal Government in any case except the times that I have mentioned and to my knowledge there weren't any.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. At any of those times were any notes taken?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you hold any position in the Sailors Union of the Pacific? A. Yes.

Q. What is your position?

A. I am patrolman in Portland.

Q. Before coming here did you discuss with Harry Lundeberg your testifying?

A. I did not.

Q. Have you ever discussed with Harry Lundeberg this incident that you have described?

A. No.

Q. How long have you held that position in the Sailors Union of the Pacific? [7145]

A. This is the second year.

Q. Pardon? A. This is the second year.

Q. Have you ever been convicted of any crime?

A. No.

Q. Are you a citizen?

A. That is right; I am.

Q. By birth? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have lunch with Harry Bridges?

A. I did.

Q. Did you discuss your possible testimony in this case? A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell Lundeberg why you were —— withdraw that. Did you tell Lundeberg at any time what your were going to testify about in this case?

A. No, I didn't.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party? A. I have not.

Q. Have you ever sat in Communist meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. When? A. In Seattle.

Q. How many times? A. Once. [7146]

Q. How did you happen to sit in a Communist meeting?

A. Because they were trying to join me in the Party.

Q. Did you know it was going to be a Communist meeting before you sat in it?

A. I did.

Q. Why did you go?

A. I wanted to see what the layout was like.

Q. Was this before or after this conversation at the Maritime Federation Convention?

A. It was afterwards.

Q. When was it? A. It was in late '35.

Q. Did you sit through the entire Communist meeting?

A. I don't know whether it was a Communist meeting, but lots of them were members of the Communist Party.

Q. Didn't you say you went to the meeting because you wanted to see what the Communist Party was like? A. That is right.

Q. Didn't you think it was a Communist meeting?

A. I was invited by members of the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. Isn't it your present opinion that that was a Communist meeting?

A. I would say yes.

Q. Was that the only Communist Party meeting you have ever sat in?

A. That is right. [7147]

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You testified that up to today you did not discuss your testimony with anyone. You did talk to FBI agents this morning, didn't you?

A. Yes; when I reported in.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What transpired in the meeting this morning with the FBI agents?

A. They asked if I was prepared to take the stand.

Q. Is that all they said?

A. That is all.

Q. What did you reply to that?

A. I told them that I had driven 700 miles and that I was prepared.

Q. Did they ask you what you were going to testify to?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did they tell you what you were going to testify to? A. No; no they didn't.

(Testimony of Lee Barlow.)

Q. Was there any discussion as to what you would testify to? [7148]

A. No. They told me to be ready to take the stand.

Q. Is that all that transpired this morning?

A. That is all.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a recess first, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. We will take a short recess.

Mr. Grossman: Before we recess, if Mr. Del Guercio can tell us whether he is likely to finish his case before we conclude today that will help us in preparing our witnesses.

Presiding Inspector: What do you think about that, if you want to say?

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to discuss that now before I answer. I have some more witnesses, but there is a question.

Presiding Inspector: When you come back you can answer.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a conference in chambers, if your Honor please?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon followed a conference in chambers between the parties.) [7149]

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio, proceed with the case.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the Government rests its case except that particular——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) I beg your pardon. Before he goes on there is no objection to the witness being in the room, is there, the next witness?

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mrs. King: I beg your pardon.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, there is another situation which arose here since we have been in the chambers, and we do have another witness, but I don't know as to whether or not it will be necessary to call him until I first talk to him. I haven't talked to him as yet. I would like to do that before I close the Government's case. If I do call him I don't believe it will take very long either on direct or cross. It is on a material matter and it has already been brought in and it is in a way rebuttal.

Mr. Grossman: We would not object.

Presiding Inspector: Very well, then, no objection to your calling him tomorrow.

Mr. Del Guercio: Also we reserve, of course, the other matter——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That was have been talking about. [7150]

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——that we have been talking about in the chambers.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, at this time we wish to offer in evidence two letters. I need not describe them any further than to say that they are between officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and they deal with the service of subpoenas, or the attempt to serve subpoenas on Maurice Cannalonga. We claim that along the same lines that we have been permitted cross examination, that is, the line of the whereabouts of Cannalonga, the efforts of the Immigration Service and the FBI to find and to serve subpoenas on Mr. Cannalonga, and also the line of the actual service of a or several subpoenas on Cannalonga these letters are relevant.

In so far as they might be considered confidential documents of the service we claim they have lost this confidential character by the fact that they have been offered to and read by counsel for the Alien. We claim they are quite relevant and certainly considering what we have been permitted to go into on our cross examination on these questions I mentioned should be introduced in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to their introduction on a number of grounds, first of all they are interdepartmental communications and they were offered to the Court only in response to charges made by counsel that no efforts were being made at that time to locate the missing witness. Secondly, [7151] they are [illegible] in themselves complete. There are further reports and letters which, of course, we will not make available to counsel because they contain confidential matters, and third, and another ground, that, of course, the reports of themselves are irrelevant and immaterial. I think on either one of these three grounds they should be rejected. They were not, of course, offered to counsel; they were offered to the Court, and while it is true that the Court, perhaps, with my consent showed them to counsel they were not under any circumstances intended to be made public.

Presiding Inspector: Why can't a statement be made of the general disclosures in these letters?

Mr. Grossman: Except that it would probably be as detailed as the letters if everything important were included.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think so.

Mr. Grossman: This much we would like to say, your Honor: That though at the beginning of this hearing certain matters, or without this hearing certain matters might have been considered confidential we think by the very nature of this hearing, certain things that have developed, certain things become material to this case, whereas, otherwise they might be confidential. One of those matters is the disappearance of Cannalonga, the efforts made by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the FBI with respect to subpoenaing him and the ultimate subpoenaing of him. Now, it can't be said [7152] that they weren't involved in this case. I don't have to point out to your Honor the particular evidence and the particular theories that are involved, but whenever the activities of the FBI or the Immigration Service become involved and are subject to evidence, as they are in this case, then, obviously such letters as this lose their confidential character because otherwise what we are doing, in effect, is suppressing evidence that is relevant because we must assume this is relevant on the theory that it is inter-departmental communications.

I say that much of the doings of the Department or the Service definitely is relevant to this case, and if it is relevant these letters are relevant for the same reasons.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe there is any merit in any of counsel's argument, if your Honor please. Those reports, as they are, do not——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, they can't prove everything at one time.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: They can't prove everything at one time. I don't understand really the materiality of the matter. If you intend to prove that the Government concealed this witness I suppose you might prove it. On the other hand, the Government has proved that you made no attempt to get this witness. You took a statement from him without any attempt to bring him down here for several days. It seems to me that [7153] it lacks importance in the case, it lacks relevance.

Mr. Grossman: I would like to state this: If necessary, I am perfectly willing to give a foretaste of the argument we will make in our brief when we summarize all of these facts that have been brought out.

I will merely state this: That definitely our brief will indicate that we are establishing a theory along the general lines you suggest, without showing the details. But making an argument showing just how these particular letters fit in the picture would be very difficult at this time. I don't think it is required. I think they should be introduced because obviously they are relevant along the general theory that you have indicated. If the Government wants to make any argument from the fact that Mr. Cannalonga was talked to by some representatives of the Defense before the subpoena was issued they can make such an argument; and we can certainly make an argument from the fact that he disappeared in the way he did, and the subpoenas were served in the way they were, at the time they were. If we are permitted to make that argument in a brief, and to put in evidence, as we have been we are permitted what cooperation there is in these letters.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, this record will be reviewed by other persons than myself.

Mr. Grossman: Correct.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that these letters——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I believe those letters [7154] should be returned to me, if the Court please.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive them in evidence with the understanding that they are to be returned to Mr. Del Guercio. I will let Mr. Del Guercio keep them. They can be retained by you so that you can see there are no copies made of them. If they want them so as to get the facts out of them for their brief they can do that.

Mr. Gladstein: How will they be made available?

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio will make them available.

Mr. Gladstein: As exhibits in the case?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. So that you can comment on them in the brief. But they are not to be kept with the other exhibits because of the peculiar relation that they have in the files of the Department.

(The two letters referred to were received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibits Nos. 53 and 54.)

Mrs. King: Mr. Erwin.

Presiding Inspector: Raise your right hand.

CLAUDE ERWIN

called as a witness in surrebuttal on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter?

The Witness: My name is Claude Erwin — E-r-w-i-n. [7155]

Direct Examination

By Mrs. King:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Erwin?

A. Los Angeles.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. When were you first contacted, and by whom, to become a witness in this case?

A. It was in the latter part of April I was contacted by some men who showed me their cards to be FBI agents and they told me that they were investigators in the Bridges case.

Q. Did they tell you why they wanted you to testify?

A. They stated that they had investigated and found I had a good American background and, to their knowledge, had not been convicted of a felony and they thought I would be a proper witness for identifying literature.

Q. What kind of literature, Mr. Erwin?

A. Literature of the IWW, Industrial Workers of the World.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the IWW?

A. I have.

Q. Are you a member today?

A. I am; yes ma'am.

Q. Do you have with you your IWW membership card?

A. (Producing membership card) Yes ma'am.

Q. This card indicates, Mr. Erwin, that it was issued on July 25, 1919. Was that when you joined the IWW? [7156]

A. I first joined in 1912. I remained a member but this card was issued in 1919.

Q. Have you been a member continuously since 1912? A. Yes, ma'am.

Q. What offices have you held in the IWW?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. Well, the first — outside of being job Delegate, the first office I held was in 1919. I was elected on the District Organization Committee of California. I served until the early part of 1920 on that Committee.

Then I was elected District Secretary and served until about the middle of July. I think it was after the 1920 Convention. The Convention abolished the District form of organization and that automatically closed that office as a District office.

Q. Was that the last office that you held?

A. No. I was appointed — after I went out of office, I was appointed as traveling delegate or organizer, you might term it, for the construction workers, and I made a trip east in 1920.

Early in 1922 I was elected on the General Organization Committee for the oil workers.

Later, in 1927, I was elected Secretary of the General Recruiting Union with headquarters in Chicago. I served a term and a half on that, and they revised the structure of the organization; that is, the clearing house took the place [7157] of the Industrial Union offices, and then I went to Detroit as an organizer.

I have been on the General Executive Board.

Q. When were you on the General Executive Board?

A. I was on the General Executive Board in 1934.

Q. Do you hold any office at the present time?

A. I am credentialed as an organizer. It is an appointive job by the General Administration.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. From your knowledge gained, both as a member and as an officer of the IWW, will you inform me whether the IWW has believed in, or now believes in, has advocated, or now advocates, sabotage?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the question, as to its form. It contains in reality two questions.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that can be proved by oral testimony but through the Lodge.

Mrs. King: He was a member of the General Executive Board, which is the highest——

Presiding Inspector: He would have to have a resolution, wouldn't he, or something of that kind?

Mr. Gladstein: On that same question, your Honor, I recall the record shows that Mr. Gitlow, and other witnesses, were permitted to testify.

Presiding Inspector: No objection was made. Mr. Gitlow [7158] gave his testimony from beginning to end without any objection, as I recall it. I don't remember a single objection.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Mr. Erwin, I show you the Defense News Bulletin, issued in Chicago, Illinois, May 4, 1918, and ask you whether that was an official paper of the IWW?

Mr. Del Guercio: May I see it?

Mrs. King: Certainly.

(The publication referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: The question is, is that an official paper of the IWW?

A. (Examining publication) That was a newspaper put out by the General Defense Committee, and the General Executive Board of the IWW, that was the General Defense Committee, so it was the official IWW publication; yes, sir.

By Mrs. King:

Q. I show you a resolution appearing on the first page of this paper, and ask you if you remember the resolution at the time of its passage?

A. (Examining resolution) I do very clearly. I know what it is. The General Executive Board—it is regarding violence and sabotage. I remember the resolution.

Presiding Inspector: You were in the General Council at that time? [7159]

The Witness: I was—at that time I was not on the General Executive Board, but I was a member, and that was sent throughout the field to the membership.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Does this resolution set forth the policy of the IWW at that time? A. It does; yes.

Q. And do you know whether this resolution was adopted?

A. This resolution was adopted and widely circulated. It was adopted by the 1920 convention.

I might state, in that connection, that was adopted at that time and was reaffirmed at the 1920 convention.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: I shall read the resolution into the record——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I object to the reading of the resolution. I object to any further reference to the paper. There is no foundation laid for it. It hasn't been introduced or offered in evidence yet.

Presiding Inspector: I think—didn't you offer it?

Mrs. King: Not yet.

Presiding Inspector: You should offer it.

Mrs. King: I will offer it in evidence and ask leave to substitute a photostatic copy.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the offer in evidence. [7160]

First of all, it has not been shown that it was the official publication of the IWW. All that it has been shown to be is that it was a publication of the Defense Committee. The paper itself shows it was put out during the time of the Haywood trial, or some such trial when certain members of the IWW were being tried on charges of sabotage, and sedition, and they were convicted.

This is the paper that was put out by the Defense Committee in order to help the defense in that case. Certainly such a paper doesn't prove anything, establish anything.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: He says that this is the resolution which shows the policy of the IWW.

Mr. Del Guercio: But this man was not at that time, that is, he hasn't qualified himself——

Presiding Inspector: He was a member of some organization and that was officially sent to him. I will take the document.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I be heard further on it?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: He was not—in 1919 he said he held his first office as a District Organizer in California here and to the early part of 1920. Prior to that time he held no office. This is dated——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) 1918.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——1918, so it is prior to the time that he held any kind of an office in the IWW. [7161] And he never became a member of the Executive Board until some time in 1934.

Presiding Inspector: Let me see it.

By Mrs. King:

Q. May I ask him this one question: What was the relation of the General Defense Committee to the IWW?

A. The General Defense Committee is a part of the IWW. The Committee itself was composed of the General Executive Board of the IWW, and the General Secretary-Treasurer, and the officials of the Industrial Unions located in Chicago, headquarters there—strictly an IWW institution.

(Whereupon the resolution referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: May I add, your Honor, that this resolution was re-passed at the convention of 1920 when this man was an officer? [7162]

Mrs. King: Now, if your Honor pleases, the same resolution appears in Solidarity in 1920 when the thing was passed. However, I should like to have it appear as of 1918 when it was originally passed by the General Executive Board. I would like to have the witness identify this paper.

Do you want to see this?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, please. Is that a new one? Is that the same paper?

Mrs. King: No, this is Solidarity.

(Whereupon the document referred to was handed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mrs. King:

Q. What was the official paper——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Just a minute, please.

By Mrs. King:

Q. What was the official paper of the IWW?

A. Solidarity was the official paper at that time in 1920.

Q. I show you this copy, issued May 22, 1920, and ask you if that is a copy of Solidarity, the official paper?

A. (Examining paper) That is the official organ and so states on the front page.

Q. Do you find in this paper a report of the official action of the convention with reference to sabotage?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please——

[7163]

By Mrs. King:

Q. (Continuing) And I ask that you point it out, if you find it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that. This witness has not been qualified yet as being able to identify any such a resolution, and this is only a newspaper report of a resolution, and having in mind the reasons for putting out these articles during the pendency of a trial wherein an IWW member was charged with the very things that the Government contends and of which he was convicted, why, I believe that the paper has no value at all.

Presiding Inspector: That would go for the weight to be given to this item but I don't see how it would go to the competency of it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It also goes to the competency in that no proper foundation has been laid.

Presiding Inspector: He said he was a member of the Executive Council.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not at that time.

Presiding Inspector: In '20.

Mr. Del Guercio: No, not even in '20. He did not become——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) When did you become a member of the Executive Board?

The Witness: In the year 1920 I was a member of the [7164] District Organization Committee of California; later in the same year I was District Secretary.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: Then, when did you become a member of the Executive Board?

The Witness: The General Executive Board? I was a member in '34.

Mr. Del Guercio: '34, you see.

The Witness: But that was in an elective position.

Presiding Inspector: Now, were those documents, these resolutions sent to you and your councils?

A. They were sent to all the branches, yes, sir; the minutes of the convention. Later portions of it came out in the paper.

Mr. Del Guercio: The minutes are the best evidence, not a newspaper report.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Mr. Erwin, did you receive these as District Organizer in California? A. Yes.

Q. They were sent to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the office of the IWW in California?

A. Yes, ma'am.

Q. Because you were District Organizer?

A. Yes, they were sent there. Being organizer and also [7165] later secretary all of the papers and literature came to the office and were distributed to the field from that office.

Presiding Inspector: I will take this.

The Witness: Hundreds of copies were——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take so much of this paper of May 22, 1922 as contains the resolution.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: Isn't that May 22, 1920, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: What did I say? 1922?

Mrs. King: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: No, May 22, 1920. Not the rest of the paper.

Mrs. King: And may I also——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) As to the earlier one, we don't know anything about the organization or the powers of this committee that adopted this resolution.

Mrs. King: He said that the General Defense Committee——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, I know, but I——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) It is the same resolution, your Honor, identically.

Presiding Inspector: I know. I will reject that for the present.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I think you will find that when you were reading the Exhibit the witness was testifying on this Defense Committee.

Presiding Inspector: Was he? [7166]

Mr. Grossman: And explaining it. I don't think you heard it because it was going on simultaneously.

Presiding Inspector: Will you read what he said in that respect?

Mr. Grossman: Perhaps, the reporter can find it.

Presiding Inspector: Was this resolution adopted by the Defense Committee?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: By the General Executive Board, the highest body of the IWW.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't appear in the paper.

Mrs. King: It appears in the heading, G.E.B., which is the abbreviation for General Executive Board, resolution regarding sabotage.

Presiding Inspector: Let me read that.

(The paper referred to was handed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, I will take it for what it is worth.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, before you do that, I would like to know what article.

Presiding Inspector: Only the resolution. Nothing but the resolution.

Mr. Del Guercio: Where does that article appear?

Presiding Inspector: Nothing but the resolutions.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I ask at this time to [7167] substitute a photostatic copy.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, that may be done.

Mrs. King: Do you want the whole publication or just the first page, in view of your ruling?

Presiding Inspector: Just the first page and only the part with the resolution is received.

Mrs. King: Yes, I understand.

Mr. Del Guercio: The heading to identify the paper and the nature of the paper.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, the heading of it. Of course, if you want it all to go in——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Only that portion that you said. The other part is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: There are certain things in the editorials and so forth that I thought were immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. Of course, it is over our objection.

Presiding Inspector. Oh, of course, certainly, certainly.

Mrs. King: Major Schofield, can I have that marked in evidence and I will give it right back to you?

(Whereupon Major Schofield handed the document to Mrs. King.)

(Whereupon the papers referred to were received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibits Nos. 55 and 56. [7168]

Mr. Del Guercio: Am I correct in assuming this is the portion you pointed out to me?

Mrs. King: (Examining paper) No; in here (Indicating).

Mr. Del Guercio: May we request that all of Alien's 56 go in?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly, if you wish it, it may all go in.

Mr. Gladstein: We are only offering, if your Honor please, the resolution and so much of the paper to show that it is an official publication of the

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

IWW. We haven't offered the balance of the paper. We don't know what the materiality of the balance of it would be to this case.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know either, but it is a single——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Well, if the Government wants to offer anything else, that is, of course, up to them. We are only offering that portion which your Honor has admitted on our offer heretofore as the record shows.

Presiding Inspector: Well, do you want to withdraw the offer of the whole paper?

Mrs. King: Yes, I do, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Then, we will receive only that part.

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to its receipt.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, received over objection. I [7169] will take it.

By Mrs. King:

Q. I show you this and ask you what it is?

A. (Examining paper) That is a one—it is two pages of the Solidarity, the official organ of the IWW. I made an attempt to get the full paper but I couldn't get it. This is all that I could get ahold of. There is the minutes (Indicating) of the General Executive Board of the organization.

Q. You stated that it carries the minutes of the General Executive Board of the IWW. For what date?

A. August 16th to August 25th, 1920.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I offer this in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: How did you receive it?

The Witness: I had it in my own belongings.

Presiding Inspector: Where did you get it?

The Witness: From my trunk in Los Angeles.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I mean originally?

The Witness: Originally I got it from Chicago. That was one of the publications——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Did you get it as a subscriber or did you get it as an officer or member of this local?

The Witness: Well, I got it as an official of the organization. I used to receive hundreds of copies of them [7170]

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to its introduction. First, it is only a newspaper, of course; it is not the proper evidence. The minutes are still available; the organization is still functioning. Secondly, the witness here is not competent to testify in regard to whether or not that newspaper clipping carries the official minutes of the Executive Board. He was not at that time present there; he was out here on the West Coast. He was a minor official in the IWW.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, this is from the official paper which purports to carry the minutes of the General Executive Board of the organization for which it was the official paper. He received this as an official of the organization and he subsequently acted upon it, as we will show in a moment. It seems to me——

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Is this the same resolution?

Mrs. King: No; it is a different resolution.

(Whereupon the document referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: How many of these papers have we had introduced in evidence? How many of these various papers that they have here have been introduced in evidence?

Mrs. King: I don't know, your Honor. You mean of the ones——

The Reporter: (Interposing) Is this for the record? [7171]

Presiding Inspector: No, no; she is just pointing this out.

(Discussion outside the record.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take this.

By Mrs. King:

Q. I show you these minutes, Mr. Erwin, and ask if they show any action taken by the General Executive Board with reference to pamphlets dealing with sabotage?

A. (Examining paper) Yes, there is a motion to that effect in there.

Q. Will you read that motion, please.

A. "Moved by McClelland. Seconded by Brown. That all branches be instructed to destroy all copies.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

of the following pamphlets 'New Unionism.' 'Sabotage' by Flynn and Smith. Carried."

Mrs. King: I offer this in evidence as to that portion of the minutes, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Over our objection.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

(The paper referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 57.)

By Mrs. King:

Q. As a result of the passage of the resolution by the General Executive Board with reference to the destruction of [7172] pamphlets dealing with sabotage did you personally take any action?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What action was that?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I object to that question. That isn't the purport of this Exhibit that they have offered in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, it is.

Mr. Del Guercio: It means the pamphlet, one pamphlet; it doesn't say pamphlets.

Presiding Inspector: I thought she meant the copies of the same pamphlets.

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't the question, though; that is not the question.

By Mrs. King:

Q. After the passage of the resolution set forth in Alien's Exhibit 57 did you take any action personally? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. What action was this?

A. In the latter part of July, 1920, after the minutes had been mailed to the field from the convention I helped burn the pamphlets in Stockton, the ones that were in stock there.

Q. When you say you helped burn the pamphlets, which pamphlets are you referring to?

A. Well, there was Sabotage by Flynn and Smith—no, there was none by Smith. I have never seen any by Smith in [7173] circulation, but by Flynn, and that New Unionism by Tridon.

The Reporter: Will you spell that, please?

The Witness: T-r-i-d-o-n, I think is the way.

[7174]

Presiding Inspector: Was that introduced?

Mrs. King: It was not.

Presiding Inspector: We are not interested in any pamphlets except the one on "Sabotage" by Flynn.

Mrs. King: The pamphlet on "Sabotage" by Flynn was not introduced, but a pamphlet was introduced as Government's Exhibit 253 entitled "Sabotage, its History, Philosophy and Function," by Walker C. Smith.

Mr. Del Guercio: Neither of those were introduced by the Government.

Mrs. King: "Sabotage, its History, Philosophy and Function," was introduced as your Exhibit 253.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness here testified he never had seen one by Smith.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose there is any proof——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) He said he hadn't seen it in the field.

May I ask him if he has ever seen a copy?

By Mrs. King:

Q. Have you ever seen a copy of this pamphlet?

A. (Examining pamphlet) The only place I saw that pamphlet was in the Court room. I have never seen them in circulation in the field.

Q. When you say you have——

Presiding Inspector: I don't see what object there is in [7175] proving that they destroyed certain pamphlets which are not involved in this case.

Mrs. King: Because, according to his testimony, the pamphlets dealing with sabotage were destroyed, showing the general position of the IWW.

Presiding Inspector: The resolution says there had been no change in the policy in this respect.

Mrs. King: There was no change—let us ask the witness.

Presiding Inspector: The resolution itself says that. What difference does it make whether he destroyed pamphlets or not which are not before us in this case?

Mrs. King: I should like to ask about this pamphlet.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to put the pamphlet in evidence?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: No, I do not. I want to ask him what opportunity he has had to know whether this pamphlet was distributed by the IWW at any time.

Presiding Inspector: You can cover that if you can.

Mrs. King: All right.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Mr. Erwin, what opportunity did you have to know what pamphlets were being circulated by the IWW in 1921, and in the early part of 1922?

A. Well, in connection with all the official publications [7176] we used to have a literature list put out showing a list of the pamphlets for sale. I don't remember of seeing Walker Smith's pamphlet on that list. But I know I have never seen it in any of the halls, and I have been in a good many, at that time.

Q. When you say you have never seen it in any of the halls, can you estimate how many IWW halls you have been in?

A. Well, at that time I had been in, up until 1920, I should judge, probably 12 or 15 halls; but since then I have been in halls all over the United States, in every part of the United States.

Q. Have you ever seen this pamphlet?

A. (Examining pamphlet) I have never seen it in any IWW hall.

Q. Are you familiar with "The I.W.W., its History, Structure, and Methods," by Vincent St. John, introduced in this case as Government's Exhibit 252?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. (Examining pamphlet) I am.

Q. Was that pamphlet distributed by the IWW in 1921 and in 1922 as far as you know?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. I show you, "The Revolutionary I.W.W.," by Grover H. Perry, Government's Exhibit 257, and ask you whether you know whether that pamphlet was distributed by the IWW, or sold in any of its halls in 1921 and 1922?

A. (Examining pamphlet) It was not because I know it went out of print. It was circulated early, around 1914, I [7177] think, 1913, and then went out of print and there was no more stock.

Q. Have you ever heard any official of the IWW advocate sabotage, or the unlawful injury or destruction of property?

A. I have not.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that that is very material. It is a negative. He has never heard judged from, I suppose, by what they did say.

Mr. Gladstein: This is based on what he has heard them say as an official of the organization, and asking him whether in any of the statement they made officially or otherwise in meetings, at conventions, or otherwise, any of them, ever advocated the unlawful destruction of property. I think we are entitled to prove that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is any evidence that anyone did orally except as these documents may show it.

Mr. Gladstein: That is possibly true. I am not sure just what Mr. Reese's testimony was on that. There was someone else testified about the IWW and I am not sure what he said. Your Honor's recollection may be correct, that there isn't any testimony on that. In that event——

Presiding Inspector: Is there?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe there is. [7178]

Mr. Gladstein: If the position of the Government is to this effect, that the Government is not claiming that the IWW advocated the use or engaged in the use of unlawful destruction of property——

Presiding Inspector: I think it is claiming that.

Mr. Gladstein: This is the point I am trying to bring out: If that is their claim then we are entitled to this testimony. If their claim merely is that they distributed certain pamphlets, the evaluation of which is for your Honor, that is something else. If it is confined to distribution of certain pamphlets which they say come into conflict with the statute, that is another matter. But if their contention is broader then it seems we are entitled to this testimony.

Presiding Inspector: It may be broader in that the pamphlets indicate that they did advocate the unlawful destruction of property. I haven't read the pamphlets, except the song book. I haven't read all of that.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mr. Gladstein: The contents of that are supposed to be enjoyed most when they are sung to tune.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: Now, if your Honor please——

Presiding Inspector: I will take this witness' statement.

Mrs. King: May I restate the question?

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it amounts to very [7179] much. That is my present view.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Have you ever heard an official of the IWW advocate the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or sabotage?

A. I haven't. I have heard it the other way —that they advised against it.

Q. Is there anything in the literature of the IWW, subsequent to 1918, which was being distributed after that date, or after the 1920 convention of the IWW, which advocates the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or sabotage? A. No; there never was.

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor.

A. (Continuing) And there wasn't any before that.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it.

A. (Continuing) The literature was educational. It merely showed the workers what the workers in other countries were thinking about; just the same as the publishing houses today will print in the paper what is going on over in Germany, about the long range guns, and so forth. It was information for the workers on how the workers were carrying on their struggles. The IWW never advocated sabotage through those pamphlets, never went on record endorsing the action used in the pamphlets. It was merely a discussion of it. [7180]

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

By Mrs. King:

Q. Did the policy of the IWW, adopted at the 1920 convention, of not issuing any printed matter dealing with the subject of sabotage continue to be its policy from that time to the present time?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question. There is no such evidence.

To what resolution is that referred to?

Presiding Inspector: The resolution—that is the first resolution, the one on solidarity.

Mr. Del Guercio: Would you mind pointing out to me what resolution you have in mind?

Mrs. King: Here (indicating).

Mr. Del Guercio: I submit there is nothing in the resolution here stating any such thing—they were withdrawing literature.

Presiding Inspector: Where is that?

Mr. Del Guercio: This one here (indicating)—the one pointed out to me by counsel.

(Whereupon the Presiding Inspector examined the publication referred to.)

Mrs. King: I withdraw that question and will reword it.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Did the policy laid down in the resolution, which [7181] appears in Alien's Exhibit 55, on May 22, 1920, the issue of Solidarity, continue to be the policy of the IWW from that time to the present day?

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to that. There is no proper foundation laid for such a question of this witness.

Presiding Inspector: He has been an officer of this organization; a somewhat inferior officer. I will take it. The proof of the question is whether it calls for his opinion as to whether there has been any change in the policy of this organization from the time that this resolution was adopted.

A. There has never been any more——

Presiding Inspector: That is, in respect to sabotage.

A. (Continuing) ——literature dealing on the subject of Sabotage printed or circulated by the organization.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not responsive. There is no reference made to literature in that resolution, your Honor.

May I hear the question again?

Presiding Inspector: Read Mrs. King's question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. Yes; the policy as stated in that has never been changed.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Mr. Erwin, are you familiar with the requirements as [7182] to payment of dues by members of the IWW in 1921 and 1922?

A. I am.

Q. What were those requirements?

A. Well, a man—the dues would become due on the first of the month, and he had that month and 30 days to pay his dues; 30 days after the current month he was in bad standing. He had no voice in the meetings. He ceased to be a member until his dues were paid up.

Q. So that if he were 60 days in arrears he ceased to be a member? A. Yes, ma'am.

Q. Would it be correct, then, Mr. Erwin, according to your testimony, that, with reference to, let us say, the dues for June, that they are due and payable the first day of June, and they can be paid during the whole month of June and the whole month of July, and that if they are not paid by the last day of July you would then cease to be a member on the first day of August?

A. Yes. He would have no voice——

Presiding Inspector: That is all. He ceases to be a member on the first day of August.

Mrs. King: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Will you be able to close?

Mr. Del Guercio: No. But I think, unless you want——

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: I mean with this witness?

[7183]

Mr. Del Guercio: We won't be able to close.

Presiding Inspector: We will have to have him back in the morning?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. That is, it all depends on how long you want to remain.

Presiding Inspector: Not more than 15 minutes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe we will be able to close.

Presiding Inspector: Let us go as far as we can.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know Vincent St. John?

A. I can't hear.

Q. Vincent St. John, have you ever heard of him? A. Yes, indeed.

Q. Who is Vincent St. John?

A. Well, he was an organizer in the Miners' Union.

Q. Was he ever connected with the IWW?

A. He was. He came in with the Western Federation of Miners.

Q. What was his position with the IWW?

A. Well, he had held various positions. He was a general organizer.

Q. Is that all you know about Vincent St. John?

A. No. He was quite active among the Western Federation [7184] of Miners.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. I mean in connection with his relations with the IWW.

A. Well, the Western Federation of Miners was part of the IWW.

Q. Would you mind removing your hand from your mouth—I can't hear you.

A. The Western Federation of Miners became a part of the IWW.

Q. Yes. But what was Vincent St. John's position with the IWW?

A. He held the Secretaryship in early years. I was not in the organization at that time.

Q. As a matter of fact, he was General Secretary and Treasurer of the IWW?

A. Before I became a member; yes.

Q. That is the highest position in the IWW, isn't it? A. That is; yes.

Q. Have you read any literature written by Vincent St. John?

A. Yes. I have read his pamphlets.

Q. Have any of Vincent St. John's writings ever been repudiated by any convention of the IWW at any time, any place?

A. I don't think it is necessary to repudiate them. I have never seen any pamphlets that——

[7185]

Q. (Interposing) I didn't ask you that. Have any of St. John's pamphlets, or literature ever been repudiated? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you know William D. Haywood?

A. Yes; I have met him.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. What position did he occupy in the IWW?

A. He held the position of General Secretary-Treasurer, and organizer, and Secretary of the General Defense Committee.

Q. He occupied the highest position in the IWW, didn't he? A. At one time; yes.

Q. When was that?

A. That was back around in 1910 or 1911, I believe, when he was Secretary; and he was Secretary of the General Defense Committee in 1920.

Q. Did you ever hear Haywood speak on the policy of the IWW? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever hear him speak on the tactics of the IWW? A. Yes.

Q. Did Haywood ever preach sabotage?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never heard that? A. No.

Q. Did you attend his trial? [7186]

A. I did not attend the trial, but I read the minutes of it.

Q. Do you know what Haywood was charged with?

A. Yes. He was charged with the same as the other bunch was.

Q. What was he charged with?

A. I forgot the specific wording of it.

Q. Wasn't he charged with sabotage, among other things? A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Was he charged with sedition?

A. Sedition?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. Wasn't he charged with unlawful destruction of Government property?

A. I don't think so.

Q. What was he charged with?

A. I don't know the exact wording of it; I don't remember.

Q. Now, he was charged as an IWW member, wasn't he? A. Yes.

Q. And who were the other defendants?

A. Well, there was a good many of them; over 100, I think, all together.

Q. What were they convicted of?

A. They were convicted of opposing the draft; for one thing. I think they called it "sedition".

Q. What else? [7187]

A. I don't think there was anything else, to my knowledge, in the indictment. I don't remember exactly what it was.

Q. Didn't you follow it?

A. Well, I perhaps did at that time, but I have forgotten. That was a long time ago.

Q. You have identified these papers here, this Defense News Bulletin. What was that put out for?

A. That was put out by the General Defense Committee.

Q. In defense of whom?

A. The General Defense Committee was organized before Haywood was ever indicted.

Q. What were they organized for?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. They were organized at the time of a trial up in Washington.

Q. What trial was that?

A. When a Vigilante Committee beat up a bunch of members of the IWW, and there was shooting by the Sheriff's posse and members of the IWW were killed, and members of the IWW were arrested and acquitted. That was the formation of the General Defense Committee in 1916.

Q. Did it continue then until 1918?

A. That continues right to the present time.

Q. To the present time? A. Yes. [7188]

Q. At the time of this issue (indicating) Haywood was on trial, was he not, in 1918?

A. Well, I think the trial — I don't know whether it was going on right at that time or not, but it was around that time, or a little later.

Q. You, yourself, have been charged and convicted of criminal syndicalism, have you not?

A. I have not.

Q. You never have been convicted of it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Weren't you tried on that charge?

A. I was tried.

Q. Were you convicted in a lower court?

A. The upper court reversed the conviction.

Q. You were convicted in the lower court?

A. Convicted and the higher court reversed the conviction.

Q. What were you charged with?

A. Criminal syndicalism.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. Was that in connection with your activities in the IWW?

A. I was arrested as a member of the IWW and charged with criminal syndicalism; yes.

Q. Where were you tried?

A. In Los Angeles County [7189]

Q. In what year? A. 1923.

Q. Was Anita Whitney one of the defendants?

A. No.

Q. Was she subsequently tried?

Mr. Grossman: I object to that as immaterial —was she subsequently tried?

A. Well, I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what point there is to that.

Mr. Del Guercio: The name of Anita Whitney has appeared in this trial before as a Communist.

Mr. Gladstein: In other words, counsel has the right to ask the names of all the people who have ever been tried for criminal syndicalism? That must be his theory.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how it is material.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Vincent St. John is quite a respected author, isn't he, in the IWW?

A. Vincent St. John was—I don't know what you call a respectable author—but he wrote some very good works I think, including that book there (indicating).

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. What did Vincent St. John mean—strike that.

Did any body of the IWW ever repudiate this statement made [7190] by Vincent St. John in Government's Exhibit 252:

"I. W. W. Tactics or Methods.

"As a revolutionary organization the Industrial Workers of the World aims to use any and all tactics that will get the results sought with the least expenditure of time and energy. The tactics used are determined solely by the power of the organization to make good in their use. The question of 'right' and 'wrong' does not concern us."

Did any body connected with the IWW, at any time, any place, or by resolution, or otherwise, ever repudiate that passage?

A. No. If you read the whole pamphlet you will know what he means by that.

Q. They didn't repudiate that passage at any time, any place?

A. That passage has no meaning where you take it by itself. You must read the whole pamphlet. [7191]

Q. Will you answer as to whether they ever repudiated those words that Vincent St. John used?

A. No, because it is not necessary; there is nothing to it.

Q. Now, the IWW still distributes literature of Vincent St. John, do they not?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. No; I don't think there is any in circulation at the present time.

Q. Is it only because it isn't in circulation at the present time?

A. It is because Vincent St. John has been dead for a good many years and he hasn't written anything.

Q. Is his literature still being sold?

A. No, because there is none printed.

Q. When was the last printed?

A. I don't remember when the last issue was. It was early, around in 1918 or 1920 or so.

Q. So there is no 1921 issue by Vincent St. John? A. Maybe; I am not positive.

Q. What would you say?

A. I wouldn't say because I don't remember. But I know that I have seen those pamphlets since then.

Q. Where have you seen those pamphlets since then?

A. I have had them in my own possession.

[7192]

Q. Did you distribute any of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you have distributed Vincent St. John's literature since 1921?

A. I did. I wish I had some more. They are good pamphlets.

Q. Do you know who Flynn is, mentioned in Alien's Exhibit 57? A. Who?

Q. Flynn? In this motion that was moved and carried it speaks of establishing Sabotage by Flynn. Who was Flynn?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. Flynn, she used to be a member of the organization, and an organizer in the organization.

Q. Do you know why that motion was made and carried? A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. Because the members didn't agree with that, a lot of the members, or enough of them didn't agree with it, didn't think it was educational and voted against it.

Q. Were you there at the convention at that time?

A. I remember reading the minutes of the meeting in Philadelphia, Marine Transport Workers No. 8, passing a motion that that pamphlet, and some others, be destroyed; and that motion was later taken up on the floor of the convention and concurred with, and it was carried out. [7193]

Q. Isn't it a fact that that motion was made and carried because Flynn was a Communist?

A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Wasn't Flynn a Communist?

A. She wasn't a Communist at that time.

Q. She wasn't a Communist at the time that this motion was made here in—when was that motion made, do you know?

A. Well, the first action of the G. E. B. on that question was in 1918.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. I was referring to this particular motion that appears in this thing. (Indicating)

A. In 1920.

Q. You say Flynn wasn't a member of the Communist Party in 1920?

A. Not to my knowledge. I never knew she was a member until later years.

Q. Do you know if the members of the Executive Board, at the time they made this motion, knew that Flynn was a Communist?

A. I don't know yet that she was a Communist.

Mrs. King: I object to Mr. Del Guercio misleading the witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no misleading at all.

Mrs. King: Certainly there is, when you state to the [7194] witness——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Do you deny Flynn was a Communist, is that what you have reference to?

Mr. Gladstein: Simply that you are misleading the witness by the form of your last question and we make our objection on that ground.

Presiding Inspector: The witness has intimated that he later did learn that she was a Communist.

The Witness: I heard it—I didn't learn it—but I don't know how.

Presiding Inspector: You haven't heard it since 1920?

The Witness: No.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. This issue (Indicating) is dated September 4, 1920. A. Yes.

Q. Now, what is the feeling between an IWW and a Communist?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how that is material.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is material in this way: It gives a reason for passing this resolution taking out of circulation a pamphlet written by Flynn, a Communist.

Mr. Grossman: There is no evidence that this woman was a Communist at that time.

Presiding Inspector: No, I think not.

I don't think that advances the case any. [7195]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I am reading again from Government's Exhibit 252, the pamphlet by Vincent St. John. On page 16 he says:

"Failing to force concessions from the employers by the strike, work is resumed and 'sabotage' is used to force the employers to concede the demands of the workers."

Now, did the IWW or any official body of the IWW, ever refute those words of Vincent St. John as they appear on page 16 of Government's Exhibit 252?

A. I don't know as there is any refutation of it, but I think if you read the whole pamphlet you will understand what he means by the statement that he makes in there. It is the history, structure and methods.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. You have to read the whole book to know what he is trying to say? A. Absolutely.

Q. Is there any body of the IWW that, any official body of the IWW that passed a resolution, or any kind of a—withdraw that.

Did the IWW at any time withdraw this pamphlet by St. John?

A. I don't know for sure whether there was any of them left in circulation or not.

Q. Did they ever withdraw it from circulation?

A. If there is none out in the field there is no need [7196] of withdrawing it.

Presiding Inspector: He asked you whether you knew whether they had done that.

The Witness: No, I don't.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did they ever take any official action to withdraw this document?

A. I don't remember of any.

Q. Do you know of any?

A. If I don't remember I surely don't know.

Presiding Inspector: It is five o'clock now.

(Whereupon, at 5:00 P. M., an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, June 11, 1941, at 10:00 A. M.) [7197]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to wait for Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Grossman: We can start without him.

CLAUDE ERWIN

called as a witness in surrebuttal on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: You are to continue under oath.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio.

Cross Examination (Resumed).

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You testified yesterday that you never saw this book here, "Sabotage," by Walker C. Smith, is that right?

A. I said in circulation. I saw a copy of it in the court room in Los Angeles.

Q. Now, do you know if this book here was ever withdrawn by the Executive Board of the IWW, or by any official body of the IWW?

A. Yes. It was named in the resolution.

Q. Was this particular book named, or was it a book by Flynn and Smith that was withdrawn?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. I think—I know that all the sabotage books were withdrawn.

Q. Why were they withdrawn? [7199]

A. Well, because they thought it was of no interest to the organization, it was detrimental because the courts had misinterpreted the meaning.

Q. That was the only reason it was withdrawn, because of the Haywood trial, and for the purpose of camouflaging the policy of, and ideality of the IWW, was it not?

A. That is not a fact. In fact, the Sabotage pamphlets were of an educational nature to inform the workers what was going on in other countries. The pamphlet by Tridon was translated from French and printed into English.

Q. Did you ever read a book by Pouget on Sabotage? A. Yes.

Q. Was that ever withdrawn? A. Yes.

Q. When? A. At the same time.

Q. By what?

A. By action of the General Executive Board.

Presiding Inspector: You mean that resolution that was introduced?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: The series of resolutions?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever see this, "I.W.W. Songs"? [7200]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever sing any of them?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. I am not much of a singer.

Q. Was that ever withdrawn?

A. The songbooks,—the songs are changed from year to year.

Q. Was that book ever withdrawn out of circulation?

A. I don't know whether that particular one was or not. I don't know as any of those song books were withdrawn, but the songs were changed from time to time.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, this book here, "IWW Songs", Government's Exhibit No. 259——

A. (Interposing) May I see it, please?

Q. (Continuing) ——was never withdrawn?

Presiding Inspector: Of course, there is no claim it has been withdrawn unless you bring it up now.

A. That is one of the earlier editions; that was revised and reprinted. There has been a dozen songbooks out since then. I think it is up to the '25 edition now.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever practiced sabotage?

A. No, sir.

Q. What were you arrested for when you were arrested?

A. I was arrested in Los Angeles County in 1922.

Q. On what charge? [7201]

A. A charge of criminal syndicalism.

Q. What were you charged with doing?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. I was never charged with committing any overt act of any kind.

Presiding Inspector: What were you accused of?

The Witness: Criminal syndicalism.

Presiding Inspector: In what respect? It must have been a specification.

The Witness: No; it was belonging to an organization—I think the indictment read: "Belonging to an organization that advocated the overthrow of the Government."

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was that the only charge contained in the indictment?

A. I think it was also distributing literature that advocated the use of force and violence, but the case was reversed in my instance.

Presiding Inspector: You have told us about that. No use repeating it because we have heard about that.

The Witness: But there was never a member charged with criminal syndicalism. It was a charge of committing an act himself.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. The organization referred to in that indictment was the IWW, was it not?

A. What is that? [7202]

Q. Was the IWW referred to in the indictment?

A. Criminal syndicalism covers any organization.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. How many defendants were named with you in that indictment?

A. There were eight of us on trial in my case; all reversed.

Q. Was the IWW named in the indictment?

A. What is it?

Q. Was the IWW named in the indictment?

A. Yes, being a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, yes, in my specific indictment.

Presiding Inspector: Mrs. King, did you introduce in evidence all the resolutions in relation to withdrawals or only the one in relation to a sabotage book which is not in evidence?

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I introduced one with reference to a sabotage book in August of 1920 and, I believe, that the book is in evidence because it was "Sabotage" by Smith.

Presiding Inspector: Well, this is by Smith and somebody else.

Mrs. King: No; there were two sabotage books. That is just the wording of the resolution.

Presiding Inspector: I see. Well, but you [7203] didn't introduce those to show that any of these other books——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: You don't claim that any of the other books were specifically mentioned in those resolutions?

Mrs. King: No.

Presiding Inspector: No use introducing it in evidence if that is the understanding.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: Yes, we introduced the general resolution with reference to sabotage.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, you did? But there are a series of them, aren't there, a series of these resolutions?

Mrs. King: No; in those minutes we only introduced so much of it as related to the pamphlet by Flynn and Smith, just that one paragraph.

Presiding Inspector: But you don't claim there was any specific resolution in relation to these other books in evidence?

Mrs. King: We don't know that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: That is right. I just wanted to get clear what the purpose was, what the extent was.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know an attorney by the name of Henderson? A. (No response).

Q. An attorney by the name of Henderson?

A. Yes, sir. [7204]

Q. Did you consult with him before you appeared here to testify?

A. Why, Attorney Henderson told me that the Defense wanted me and asked me if I would come up here.

Q. Did you speak with Henderson before you came up here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go over your testimony with Mr. Henderson?

A. No. I didn't know just exactly what was to be covered here, but I went over it with the Defense attorneys.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. Well, did you meet with Mr. Henderson first?

A. I met with him before I was sure that I was going to be called. When he first asked me I met with Mr. Henderson.

Q. Where did you meet with Mr. Henderson?

A. I met him in Bakersfield in his home.

Q. Did he send for you?

A. He asked me to come up and talk it over.

Q. Who paid for your transportation?

A. I paid for it myself.

Q. Are you working now?

A. I am not right now.

Q. Where do you live?

A. I am stopping here in San Francisco. I worked a few days——

Q. (Interposing) Well, where is your place of residence? [7205] A. Los Angeles.

Q. Los Angeles. How did you get up here to San Francisco?

A. I came up of my own accord.

Q. You paid your own transportation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Defense here didn't pay for your transportation from Los Angeles? A. No.

Q. And Mr. Henderson didn't pay for it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have any income other than from employment? A. I don't.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. Huh?

A. I don't. I borrowed $20.00 to come up here.

Q. From whom?

A. From a friend of mine.

Q. What is the name of the friend?

A. Well, I don't care to give any names.

Q. What?

A. I don't care to give any names.

Mr. Gladstein: I object.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is immaterial.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How long have you been employed? [7206]

A. I have been laid up in the hospital for nearly four years from an automobile accident.

Q. You haven't been working for the last four years? A. No, with the exception——

Q. (Interposing) How do you support yourself?

A. The last three days and a half before I came into the city here I worked in Petaluma.

Q. How have you been supporting yourself for the last few years?

A. I told you I was in the County of Los Angeles Hospital for nearly four years.

Q. What were you doing in Petaluma?

A. Working on a chicken ranch.

Q. Working what?

A. On a chicken ranch.

Q. For how long a period?

A. Three days and a half before I was summoned to come in here.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. Is that the only employment you have had?

A. That is all since I have come out of the hospital.

Q. Were you in the hospital continuously for three years?

A. Hospital and rest home. I was in the rest home when the FBI man contacted me in April.

Q. Rest home of what?

A. Los Angeles hospital.

Q. How did you know that it was an FBI man that con- [7207] tacted you?

A. Because they showed me their credentials. They stated they were investigators on the Bridges' case.

Q. Did they tell you they were FBI men?

A. Well, no. They showed me their credentials with their pictures on it and I didn't read it over but they said they were investigators on the Bridges' case, representing the case.

Q. They didn't say they were FBI men?

A. Huh?

Q. They didn't say they were FBI men?

A. I don't exactly remember whether they said FBI or Immigration officials, but they nevertheless were Government officials. [7208]

Q. Now, what rest home were you staying at?

A. I was in Los Angeles County.

Q. That is the Los Angeles Farm?

A. That is—yes, it is a part of the General Hospital now.

Q. How long were you there?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. I was there about a year and a half or a little better.

Q. You had been there for a year and a half?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you expect to repay this $20.00 you borrowed from this friend?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Immaterial; yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: It goes to——

Presiding Inspector: No. We won't go into civil obligations.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: We won't go into civil obligations.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you expect to pay your own way back to Los Angeles?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how that is material.

Mr. Grossman: If Mr. Del Guercio is interested, we are [7209] going to pay all his expenses before he goes back.

Mr. Del Guercio: Why doesn't the witness say so?

Mr. Grossman: You haven't asked him.

Mr. Del Guercio: No further questions.

Presiding Inspector: That is all. Do you want to ask something further?

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon. I thought you had finished.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mr. Del Guercio: There is one other matter. I believe only a portion of one paper was introduced. I would like to offer at this time the rest of that paper if counsel has it.

Presiding Inspector: The whole of one paper was introduced.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is one exhibit that only a portion of it was introduced.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; the one the resolution was in.

Mr. Del Guercio: I would like to introduce the rest of that paper.

Mr. Gladstein: While we do not have any basic reason for objecting, it is simply a question of asking what the materiality of the rest of the newspaper is. If it is only to show the official character of the newspaper, we have no objection.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose, if it has anything in [7210] explanation of the resolution——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) That is it.

Mr. Gladstein: Anything material——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) There is an editorial appearing there and it explains the resolution, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: There is an editorial there.

Mr. Grossman: Though we may not have the paper here, and the photostatic copy, we will see that it is produced before the end of the hearing.

Mrs. King: I have the original of the paper. I don't have the other pages; but I will produce the other pages in the course of the day.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: The paper has been given an exhibit number so far as it relates to the copy of the resolution. Now, the same exhibit number can cover the entire document. The minutes will show that.

Mr. Grossman: May the record be clear as to which paper this is that is being introduced?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly; it should be.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I see the paper?

(The publication referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Presiding Inspector: One was fully received; the other one wasn't. [7211]

Redirect Examination

By Mrs. King:

Q. You testified on direct examination yesterday, Mr. Erwin, that the pamphlet, Government's Exhibit 252, "The I.W.W., its History, Structure and Methods," by Vincent St. John, was not being distributed by the IWW in 1921 and 1922 as far as you knew. Is that correct?

A. That particular copy, an exhibit here.

Q. You testified on cross examination, I believe, that that pamphlet was not withdrawn by the IWW. I should like to ask you whether any pamphlets bearing that name, "The I.W.W., its History, Structure and Methods," by Vincent St. John, were being distributed after 1921 and 1922?

Presiding Inspector: To your knowledge.

A. Yes, the History, Structure——

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Presiding Inspector: You can go into how much he knows.

By Mrs. King:

Q. After 1920?

A. Yes, "History, Structure and Methods" by Vincent St. John was revised in 1919 and circulated after that date.

Presiding Inspector: In the revised form?

The Witness: In the revised form.

By Mrs. King:

Q. I show you this pamphlet (indicating) and ask you whether that is the revised edition? [7212]

A. (Examining pamphlet) That is the revised edition; yes, ma'am.

Q. When was that issued, Mr. Erwin?

A. In 1919, 1920 and 1921 until they run out of the pamphlets. I don't think it was reprinted after —I don't remember of it being reprinted after '24: I am sure it wasn't, pretty sure. But I know it was revised and printed in 1919.

Q. As far as you know, Mr. Erwin, as far as you can recall, was the portion of the pamphlet read to you yesterday by Mr. Del Guercio incorporated in the revised edition, or was it omitted from the revised edition?

A. That was omitted from the revised edition.

Q. Is that true as to both the portions that were read, or only one of the two portions that were read yesterday? A. Both portions.

Q. That is your best recollection?

A. To the best of my knowledge; yes.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Mrs. King: Of course, the pamphlets can be compared.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. You had better introduce it in evidence.

Mrs. King: I offer this in evidence as Alien's Exhibit next in order.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received. [7213]

(The pamphlet referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 58.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The exhibit I referred to a moment ago is Alien's Exhibit 56, the entire paper. We want the entire paper introduced in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received, the entire paper, as Alien's Exhibit 56.

(The entire publication referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 56.)

By Mrs. King:

Q. Mr. Erwin, do you carry any credentials as a delegate or organizer of the IWW? A. Yes.

Q. May I see those credentials, please?

A. (Producing credentials) That is for 1941.

Q. May I have the earliest credentials that you have?

A. (Producing credentials) The earliest credential I have is for 1929, when I was Secretary-Treasurer of the General Recruiting Union.

Q. On the back of this credential, Mr. Erwin, there are instructions. Do you know whether the instructions— withdraw that question.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Did you have earlier credentials than the 1929 credentials?

A. Yes. I had credentials in 1927 and 1928.

[7214]

Q. Did you have any credentials as far back as 1920 or 1921?

A. I had credentials in 1920; yes.

Q. And in 1921? A. In 1921.

Q. And in 1922? A. In 1922; yes.

Q. Do you know whether the instructions on the back of those credentials are identical with the instructions on the 1929 credentials?

A. They were. All the general organization credentials carried those instructions.

Mrs. King: I offer the credentials of April 6, 1929.

Mr. Del Guercio: I haven't seen them yet. I object to their introduction as immaterial and irrelevant.

(The credentials referred to were passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take them. Mark them in evidence. I don't think they are of very great weight because whether he has had some similar credentials depends upon his verbal statement under oath. It is scarcely better than a later document.

(The credentials referred to were received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 59.)

Mrs. King: Do you think it would be of any pro-

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

bative [7215] value to show the instructions were the same in——

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what the instructions are.

Mrs. King: I ask leave to withdraw this and substitute a photostatic copy.

I would like to call your attention to this one paragraph:

"The I.W.W. in none of its doctrines in the past or present, has ever advocated the destruction of life or property, but has, in fact, always strenuously opposed such teachings, methods and tactics. Furthermore, it is against the principles of the Industrial Workers of the World to destroy anything in any way, shape or form."

By Mrs. King:

Q. I asked you yesterday, Mr. Erwin, how many halls, IWW halls, you had been in up to 1921. I should like to ask you how many halls, in addition, you were in during the year 1921, if you can recall—withdraw that question.

Can you tell me how many halls in all, IWW halls, you were in up to the end of 1921?

A. Well, I would have to count up on them. I can name them, perhaps.

Presiding Inspector: Give us a rough estimate.

A. I should judge 25 halls.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Was IWW literature sold in every one of those halls? [7216] A. Yes.

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

Q. Have you looked at the transcript of yesterday's testimony?

A. I glanced through it this morning; yes.

Q. And when you glanced through it did you observe a statement that you had been back east in 1922?

A. I said I went back east in 1920. In 1922 I was still there and elected to the General Organization Committee of the oil workers, and came west in 1922.

Q. Mr. Erwin, do you know the local number of the Agricultural Union of the IWW—did you know it in 1920 and 1921?

Presiding Inspector: Whereabouts? Is it all the same?

Mrs. King: In Kansas.

A. The Agricultural Workers Industrial Union has one number. It was 400 in 1918; and in 1920 they changed the number to 110.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Has it subsequently been changed?

A. It has remained 110 ever since to the present time.

Q. Do you know what Industrial Union Local 600 was in 1919 and 1920?

A. They are not judged as locals. This Industrial Union No. 600 was the Railroad Workers up until 1920 and it was changed to No. 520 instead of 600.

Q. After that change what union bore the designation [7217] of 600, if you know?

(Testimony of Claude Erwin.)

A. 600 is not in existence. There was no union of 600 after 1920.

Mrs. King: That is all.

The Witness: I might state that 600 represents a whole department——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) There is no question.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand that the witness wants to add something to his answer. I don't think——

Mr. Del Guercio: It wasn't to his answer.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want to add something to your last answer?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will hear it.

The Witness: In 1920, at the time the numbers were changed in the Industrial Unions, the charts were changed and No. 600 came under a department instead of an Industrial Union, the 600 Department?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mrs. King:

Q. Did these matters come to your attention in your official capacity? [7218] A. Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: The witness is yours, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all. No questions.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused.

Mr. Gladstein: We can put Mr. Cannalonga on now and finish with him.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. who?

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: You may take the stand, Mr. Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you have those letters which were received in evidence, but given to your custody, Mr. Del Guercio?

(The letters referred to were passed to Mr. Gladstein.) [7219]

MAURICE J. CANNALONGA

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Further Cross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, you testified that the Emel family, E-m-e-l, the Emels, were not in any way related to you. Isn't Mr. Emel a half brother of yours? A. He isn't.

Q. He what? A. No.

Q. Is either he or his wife in any way related to you by blood? A. No.

Q. Have you ever stated in any ship articles that you have signed or anywhere else that there was a relationship between you and Mr. Emel or Mrs. Emel? A. What is that again?

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I have.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I beg your pardon? [7220] A. I have.

Q. When did you first do that?

A. Oh, about five or six years ago.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. In case I died out at sea, that my possessions would be turned over to him.

Q. And what did you state the relationship to exist when you made that statement.

A. Step brother.

Q. Does Mr. Emel ever go by the name, to your knowledge——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) What is the purpose of all this? Those papers were not introduced for the purpose of contradicting this witness.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: No, I beg your pardon. I didn't so receive them.

Mr. Grossman: I said that is correct.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I beg your pardon.

Mr. Grossman: But the papers do show that, at least on the shipping articles——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, what difference does it make?

Mr. Grossman: That is what we want to know.

Presiding Inspector: Well, what difference does it [7221] make if they do? That is for you to know, whether they mean anything.

Mr. Grossman: It may or may not. The fact that this man had something to do with getting his clothes and his leaving the ship, and all that sort of thing, who, according to these papers was stated to be a half brother by him, and now said by the witness not to be any relation. It might have some——

The Witness: (Interposing) Well——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, we have had enough.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga, before the Shipping Commissioner on various occasions when you have shipped out have you given the name of Ernest Emel Cannalonga at 3003 East 115th Street, Seattle, Washington, as your half brother?

A. Not the way you just said it, I never.

Q. Well, how did you do it?

A. Just his right name, Ernest Emel, not Cannalonga.

Q. Now, when you saw Mr. Emel on Wednesday, that Wednesday, the day that you left the ship, did you give him any instructions as to what he should say in the event the Immigration Department or the FBI should make inquiries as to where your were?

A. I didn't.

Q. None whatsoever? [7222]

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Do you have any brother at all?

A. I have.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Q. Do you have a brother who lives in Seattle or anywhere in that vicinity? A. No.

Q. How many brothers do you have?

A. Two.

Q. And where do they reside?

A. Back in Massachusetts.

Q. Were both of them residing back in Massachusetts during all of April and May of this year?

A. They were. I haven't seen them since——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No, never mind. Just answer the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, before you left Mr. Emel to go on this trip that you have described did you ever tell Mr. Emel that you had recently been worked over by goons. A. No.

Q. Please speak up. A. I said "No."

Presiding Inspector: Of course, that letter wasn't introduced for any such purpose, to show any fact of that kind.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct. [7223]

Presiding Inspector: It was only introduced in relation to the action of the officials, the Government officials in trying to find——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Yes, I understand that.

Mr. Del Guercio: They are not, however, confining themselves to that purpose, if the Court please.

Mr. Grossman: We are not trying to impeach him.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Presiding Inspector: That was the sole purpose for which I received it.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, we are using the letter only for the purpose of getting ideas, not to impeach the statement.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move every answer of this witness and the questions be stricken from the record.

Presiding Inspector: No, I will let it stand. These questions are not going to be used in any way except—these answers, except as Mr. Grossman just said, to get ideas about what was done during that period.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you tell Mr. Emel at any time, Mr. Cannalonga,——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) The letters speak for themselves.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he is going to ask him now. The letters don't speak for Mr. Cannalonga. They report certain conversations and certain actions which related to the Government officials, that is, conversations which they had [7224] with other people and actions which they took.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, the letters show that he had no contact with——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, that is perfectly apparent; we all know that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you tell Mr. Emel or his wife that you were laying low? A. I didn't.

(Testimony of Maurice J. Cannalonga.)

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all from this witness?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused, Mr. Cannalonga.

(Witness excused)

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein handed documents to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Presiding Inspector: Those will be accessible to you, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Presiding Inspector: They will remain accessible to you under the rule.

Mr. Gladstein: Thank you.

Mr. Grossman: We would like to ask Mr. Cannalonga to be excused from the room. He has been sitting here without objection, but for the following witnesses we don't want him [7225] present.

Presiding Inspector: All right, that is perfectly proper. He may be excluded from the room.

Call the next witness.

Mr. Grossman: We are calling our next witness.

LOUIS E. YOUNG

called as a witness in surrebuttal on behalf of the Alien, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

The Witness: Louis E. Young, 0315 Southwest Nebraska Street, Portland, Oregon.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Young, what is your occupation?

A. Longshoreman, stevedore foreman.

Q. For how long have you been a longshoreman?

A. Since about 1918, October.

Q. Do you remember working on the West Cussetta in May of this year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what position did you occupy in that work at that time?

A. I had a gang on hatch No. 4.

Q. Were you foreman of the gang? [7226]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How large was the gang?

A. Eleven men; well, it was thirteen. I only carry eleven; they have two extra men, board men.

Q. When did you go to work for the first time on the West Cussetta?

A. Crown Mills at 8:00 o'clock in the morning on Saturday morning.

Q. Saturday, May 3rd? A. 3rd, yes.

Q. Do you know a man named Maurice Camalonga? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first meet him? I don't mean in 1941, but if you met him before that when was the first time?

A. Well, during the 1934 strike.

Q. Did you meet him on many occasions during the 1934 strike?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. Well, I seen him—he was a delegate; he was a committeeman, I suppose, a delegate from the Fireman's Union, I believe it was, and I seen him on the stand making reports several times during different meetings.

Q. Did you see Maurice Cannalonga on Saturday, May 3rd? A. Yes, sir. [7227]

Q. What was the occasion for your seeing him for the first time on that day? How did it come about?

A. Well, we had electric winches and they didn't function very good. It seemed like the port winch continuously broke down and I had to get him on several occasions.

Q. On the first occasion what happened? How did you come to talk to him?

A. Well, the winches wouldn't run when we started to work, so the walking boss, Captain Enstrom was standing—

The Reporter: (Interposing) Will you spell that, please?

The Witness: I don't know; it is a Norwegian name.

Presiding Inspector: Do the best you can.

The Witness: E-n-s-t-r-o-m, I think it is.

I asked the walking boss to go get the electrician because the winches wouldn't work, and he went and got him, or he had the Chief Engineer go get him, I don't know which, but anyway he came just a few minutes after 8:00.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. And did you then have any conversation with him?

A. Well, no, just the winches were haywire and I asked him to fix them.

Q. Did he then work on the winches?

A. Yes. [7228]

Q. Was it one winch or several that were bad then?

A. Well, the winches all over the ship, but our winches, it seemed to be the fourth winch was the worst one. He claimed it was full of water.

Q. Then, on this first occasion that you saw him Saturday morning he worked on the winch?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you estimate about how long he worked on the winch?

A. I presume around a five-minute interval.

Q. On any other occasion that day did you see Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Yes, I saw him. I called—I went to his room three or four different times to get him.

Q. What was the occasion for you going to his room?

A. Well, the winches would go on the bum and the fellows would start hollering in the hold, and the winch drivers would quit work and say the winches would either be fixed or they were going to quit, so I would go after him again.

Q. When you went to his room what did you find him doing on these various occasions?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. Well, I remember he was laying on the—he had a radio against the wall and he would be laying on a couch there listening to the radio. [7229]

Q. On any of these occasions did you find him drinking when you went into his room?

A. No, sir.

Q. Upon how many different occasions did you see Cannalonga working on one of the winches on that Saturday?

A. Oh, I should judge he must have been back there eight or ten times.

Q. Will you state whether Mr. Cannalonga was drunk or sober on Saturday, May 3rd when you saw him working on those winches?

A. Well, he was sober.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga—withdraw that.

Did you work on the West Cussetta the next day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you go to work the next day?

A. Seven o'clock in the morning at Terminal 1.

Q. Do you mean you were to start work at seven?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you personally arrive at the boat on Saturday morning?

A. I got there about fifteen, twenty minutes to seven.

Q. Did you find Cannalonga on or about the time —did you see Cannalonga on or about the time that you arrived [7230] at the boat that Sunday morning?

A. Yes, he was working on the winches.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Which winch was he working on?

A. He was working on the port winch—no, on the starboard—I beg your pardon. He was working on the starboard winch.

Q. Can you state what he was doing at that time?

A. Well, he was putting it back together again. He had several little plates out, whatever they are—I don't understand that—but he was drying it out.

Q. Did he say to you what he was doing or had been doing?

A. Yes, he said it was full of water and that he had opened it up and got the water out and was drying it out.

Q. For what period of time continuously did he work on that winch after you came that Sunday morning?

A. Well, he worked continuously up until 7:30 on the winch because we stood by. The men just sat there and waited until 7:30. We never moved a thing because we were taking lumber from the barge and we couldn't do anything because the top of the booms—we had to top the yard arm and lower the guide ship. We had to have the gear, the winches to do it with, so we couldn't do nothing.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga state anything to you as to whether he had worked the night before on the winches? [7231]

A. He told me he worked practically all night on them and he said "They ought to be in pretty good shape now."

Q. Do you remember, did the winches break down at any other time that day?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. Yes, at intervals, off and on practically the whole day. They——

Q. (Interposing): On any of these—excuse me. Continue.

A. Well, you know, they would stop probably for two or three minutes. We would go ahead and they would stop, and like you would bring a load in they would just stop, that is all, and you would have to pull them back and forth. They have a lever where it comes in back and forth, second and—to try and keep them—get them started, and they wouldn't work. Once in a while they would take hold, were liable to take hold going back or going forward.

Q. On any of these occasions when the winches broke down or wouldn't work well did you go after Cannalonga to fix them on Sunday?

A. Yes, I went after him Sunday a couple——

Q. (Interposing): Was there any occasion when you went after him and couldn't find him?

A. In the afternoon.

Q. And did you do anything—did you talk to any other [7232] worker on that ship when you couldn't find Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I will allow that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What efforts did you make—I will put it this way—what efforts did you make to find Cannalonga on that occasion?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Presiding Inspector: What day was this?

Mr. Grossman: Sunday.

Presiding Inspector: Sunday, Sunday afternoon?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Approximately what time was it that you unsuccessfully tried to find Cannalonga?

A. It was after lunch.

Q. What efforts did you make at that time to find Cannalonga?

A. I went to the Chief Engineer.

Q. Did you go to Cannalonga's room too?

A. Yes, and it was locked.

Q. Did you talk to the Chief Engineer about it?

A. Yes, I went to see the Chief Engineer.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga later that day?

A. Yes, I seen him in the afternoon and in the evening.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga work on those winches between [7233] three and six of that afternoon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you estimate about how much of the time between three and six that afternoon he worked on the winches?

A. Well, the winches were broke down practically half of the time from three to six.

Q. Was he working on the winches all the time that they were broken down?

A. Off and on, yes, back and forth.

Q. Do you have any procedure in your union which requires you to make any reports of the kind of work that is done and any breakdowns there may be in the operations of the winches?

A. Yes; the organization went on record as to that for the simple reason that the employers claim lots of times a gang don't put in any work. We will go on a job and you will have to top your gear and lower your booms and uncover and possibly go into two or three decks to take out fifteen, twenty tons of cargo. By the time you do all this and go below and cover up, and coming back up, well, maybe two hours is gone. Well, if you only move a little bit of cargo it showed before that there was a lot of argument over that. Therefore, the union took it on themselves for us to make out the slips, to give certain times, whatever they do, uncovering and loading general cargo, lumber, stand-by or dunnage, laying dunnage, [7234] which on the American-Hawaiian it takes you half of that time to lay dunnage. You do about half work and half dunnage.

Q. On May 3rd and 4th did you make a report showing what work was done by your gang and showing the time that the winches were not operating?

A. Well, the first day it was short time.

Presiding Inspector: No; did you make such a report?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you make such a report generally?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And to whom, if anyone, did you give copies of that report?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. The walking boss.

Q. Was the walking boss a representative of the company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give any copies to anyone else?

A. Only to the union. I turned in my slips, the same as the ones to the walking boss.

Q. Did you give any copies to anyone except the walking boss and the union? A. No.

(Whereupon Mr. Grossman handed documents to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I am through with these, if you are waiting for them.

By Mr. Grossman: [7235]

Q. Will you examine these papers I hand you and tell me what they are?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to them, your Honor. He has already testified from his recollection.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, that is true.

Mr. Del Guercio: Regarding the same matter.

Presiding Inspector: But this question doesn't go any further than asking him what they are.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you identify them, please?

A. (Examining documents) Well, these are the slips I made out for the six days that I was on the ship, like for rigging time, for the cargo and hanging tent and——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, is there one for each day?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are they made out in your handwriting?

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you need to go any further than that. Go ahead.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are they made out in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you make out the slip for May 3rd?

[7236]

A. I made it out on the job and hung it with the time sheets.

Q. On that same day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you make out the slip for May 4th?

A. On the 4th, on the job.

Q. Well, will you explain why the slip for May 3rd doesn't show these various short breakdowns that you referred to on the winches?

A. Yes; on account I went to the walking boss and asked him if I should report them and he told me if it didn't carry to fifteen minutes not to bother with it, because if it went over fifteen, went fifteen minutes they would get half an hour, and he said he would take care of that.

Q. Was that the general practice on the water-front there? A. Yes, yes.

Mr. Grossman: I want to offer in evidence, your Honor, the slip for May 3rd and the slip for May 4th.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to them.

Presiding Inspector: I will take these two. They were made in the course of duty.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

The Reporter: Separate numbers, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Separate numbers. [7237]

(The documents referred to were received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibits Nos. 60 and 61.)

Presiding Inspector: Anything further from this witness?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was Mr. Cannalonga drunk at any time when you saw him on Sunday? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you have tolerated or permitted, in so far as you had control over it, his working on those winches if you had thought he was drunk?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is proper. You have got his direct statement.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is the relationship between the safety of the men working cargo and the performance of the winches?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that perfectly obvious?

Mr. Grossman: I don't know whether it is or not. If you could stipulate it, all right. It is possible, I suppose, for some mechanical apparatus used by some workers to be defective without endangering the workers or without endanger- [7238] ing them to any great extent. I think the relationship here is quite different in the sense it is more extreme.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Presiding Inspector: Can't we take it in a single answer?

Mr. Grossman: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: Can't we get this all in a single answer?

Mr. Grossman: I think we probably can.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, then.

Mr. Grossman: I have to lead him to get it in a single answer.

Presiding Inspector: Well, lead him then.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether the improper functioning of these electric winches is dangerous to the workers who are handling cargo?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question, the form.

Presiding Inspector: Well, then, go into it in detail, if it is objected to. I thought we could expedite this.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't think it is material or relevant.

Presiding Inspector: I have ruled that this is competent. Go ahead. I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. Grossman: All right, we will have the general [7239] question, then. Will you read the general question again?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Presiding Inspector: I will ask it.

Is there danger to the longshoremen working, I suppose, in the hold——

The Witness: (Interposing) Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——if the winches are not properly operating?

The Witness: Yes, sir; there is.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether the owner of the ship has to meet any costs or expenses—withdraw that.

Do you know of your own knowledge whether the owner of the ship has to pay the stevedoring company something or receive less from the stevedoring company for such occasions when the winches or other equipment of the ship is not operating?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how that is competent.

Mr. Grossman: It goes, your Honor—it is a small matter—but it goes to indicate the importance to the company of keeping the records, of accuracy in them since it means financial obligations too. In other words, it tends to show that there would be a check by the company on his statement because his statement might mean great expense to the company if it showed a breakdown of the winches. That is what I mean. [7240]

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I think it is too remote.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Mr. Grossman: Well, I agree it is a small matter; it tends to corroborate to a small extent.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you see Maurice Cannalonga on Wednesday, May 7th?

A. Yes, I saw him about 11:30.

Q. How do you fix the time?

A. We went to lunch at 11:00 o'clock, and to relieve hatch 5, and the whole gang practically, all but three or four men was underneath the platform of the winch in hatch 4 talking, and it was raining, and we were eating lunch there on a pile of lumber and some ladders when he came by.

Q. Where did you see him first?

A. Well, he came down off the bridge, the lower bridge.

Q. On the ship?

A. The bridge deck, we call it. He came down off the bridge deck and stepped on the lumber, him and some other man, small man, and they walked aft and they turned right around and left again.

Q. Where did they go, or, rather, where was the last place that you saw them?

A. We saw them come off the bridge and go back to the after hatch, hatch 5, and turn right around and go off again. [7241]

Q. Still on the ship when you last saw him?

A. That is as far as we seen him. [7242]

Q. That was about what time?

A. It was around 11:30.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. In the morning of Wednesday, May 7?.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Grossman: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, we are speaking about Wednesday, May 7th. Are you sure you saw Cannalonga at 11:30 A.M. that morning? A. I am positive.

Q. Having in mind that Cannalonga testified that he got off that ship at about 10:00 or 11:00 and did not return——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) He didn't testify that way.

Presiding Inspector: You have the hour wrong.

Mr. Grossman: 7:30 was his testimony.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing) ——that he went off that ship at 7:30, if that is correct, and he did not return there, would your testimony be the same?

A. Ask that question again.

Q. Cannalonga testified ~~that~~ he went off that ship at 7:00 or 7:30 and did not return to it. Having in mind the testimony of Mr. Cannalonga, would you say that you saw him at 11:30 A.M.?

A. I would.

Q. You are positive of that? [7243]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who the man was that was with Cannalonga? A. No, I do not.

Q. Was he working on the ship?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know Mowery? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it Jack Mowery?

A. No, it wasn't.

Q. Now, describe the man that was with Cannalonga.

A. He was a little man, and he had on a dark pair of trousers; and he came down, him and Cannalonga came off of the lower bridge.

Q. Where were they when you first saw them?

A. I was sitting underneath the platform on the winches facing the forward end of the ship.

Q. Were they sitting there when you first saw them? A. Where?

Q. Were they sitting there?

A. No; I was sitting there.

Q. You were sitting—where were they?

A. They were walking.

Q. Walking from where to where?

A. Walking from the forward end of the ship aft, [7244] starboard side, coming down the bridge at hatch 4, and walked by the platform, and we were all sitting on a lumber pile eating our lunch. It was raining and we were sitting in the dry.

Q. This was Wednesday morning?

A. Wednesday morning, around 11:30, because we were having our lunch.

Q. It was raining? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you see them come on the ship?

A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Had you ever seen this man before, the short man that was with Cannalonga? A. No.

Q. Was he employed on the ship?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did you see him come on the ship?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga come on the ship that morning? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see him go off the ship?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time that day? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you have only described his height and the [7245] trousers he was wearing. Can you give us any other description of the man?

A. No, I can't. He was just a little man—that is all I know—because Cannalonga is a pretty big man and he was a small man.

Q. How tall is Cannalonga?

A. Well, I wouldn't say, but it is pretty good sized.

Q. Was he shorter than Cannalonga?

A. Yes.

Q. How much?

A. Well, I can't give no inches

Q. Were they standing up beside each other?

A. They were walking together.

Q. How did their heights compare?

A. Probably four or five inches difference and probably 100 pounds in weight.

Q. You mean this other man was about four or five inches shorter than Cannalonga? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Do you know how tall Cannalonga is?

A. I do not.

Q. If he were five feet four this other man would be about four feet nine?

A. I presume he would be.

Mr. Grossman: Just a minute. That arithmetic is bad. [7246] I don't think you have a right to——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I didn't have a slide rule.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you say he was 100 pounds lighter than Cannalonga? A. He looked about that; yes.

Q. How long did you see him?

A. It was just a few minutes, when they walked down there, just like to the end of this court room and back.

Q. You didn't see him again that day?

A. No.

Q. Did you see him before 11:30?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga at any time prior to 11:30? A. No, I didn't.

Q. How do you fix the time at 11:30?

A. I was having lunch between 11:00 and 12:00.

Q. Do you always have your lunch at 11:30?

A. I go to lunch at 11:00 to relieve Hatch 4 at 12:00 o'clock.

Q. Do you always go to lunch at 11:00?

A. No; 12:00 o'clock. But whenever you relieve a hatch you go to dinner at 11:00. [7247]

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Did you relieve the hatch on Wednesday?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know? A. Well, I know.

Q. Did you relieve the hatch on Tuesday?

A. I believe I did relieve a hatch on Tuesday—Tuesday and Wednesday I believe I relieved.

Q. Both Tuesday and Wednesday?

A. I believe it was; yes.

Q. Did you relieve a hatch on Sunday?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Were you working Sunday? A. I was.

Q. Did you relieve a hatch on Saturday?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Now, do you have any records of having relieved a hatch on Wednesday?

A. We always make records; yes.

Q. Do you have your records here?

A. I believe so.

Mr. Grossman: Here they are, Mr. Del Guercio. Here is the 7th.

(The records referred to were passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How long were you off work on Wednesday?

A. How long? [7248]

Q. Yes—for your dinner hour?

A. One hour.

Q. And when did you start?

A. We started in the morning and we were off——

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. (Interposing) When did you start your lunch hour on Wednesday?

A. 11:00 o'clock, I believe it was.

Q. When did you go back to work?

A. 12:00.

Q. From 11:00 to 12:00 you had your lunch hour? A. Yes.

Q. Were the winches all right then?

A. In which hatch?

Q. In all the hatches?

A. They was never all right in no hatch.

Q. Hatch No. 5?

A. No. We had trouble with them there.

Q. Was Cannalonga working on the winches then? A. No, he wasn't.

Q. Nobody was working on them?

A. No, sir.

Q. Trying to fix them? A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything wrong with the winches before 11:00 o'clock on Wednesday morning? [7249]

A. Are you speaking of Hatch 4 or 5 now?

Q. Any hatch?

A. In our hatch, yes, we had trouble with them off and on continuously from the time we started to when we finished.

Q. Who fixed them? A. Who fixed them?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, Cannalonga worked on them when he was there, I guess.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga work on them Wednesday morning? A. No, I did not.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Did you see anybody work on the winches Wednesday morning? A. No.

Q. Were they fixed?

A. They were not; they kept going like they were off and on.

Q. Then nobody worked on any of the winches that were not operating right Wednesday morning?

A. No, sir.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you known Cannalonga?

A. Well, I have seen him. To know him personally, I [7250] don't; but I see him.

Q. Do you know him to speak to him?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Would you say that he hadn't been drinking at all on Saturday?

A. No, sir; he hadn't been drinking to my knowledge.

Q. Would you say that he hadn't been drinking?

A. I would, yes.

Q. Did you smell his breath?

A. No. I never went that far to go up and smell his breath.

Q. How about Sunday?

A. Well, the man worked all night on the winches and he was there and I was with him practically for 40 minutes in the morning.

Q. Would you say he wouldn't be able to work on the winches if he had been drinking?

A. Yes; he wouldn't be able to work on the winches if he had been drinking.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Why not?

A. Well, a man—I have seen a few drunks and I have never seen one yet that could do anything.

Q. Do you ever get drunk?

A. Years ago; yes.

Q. But not since? [7251] A. No, sir.

Q. What union do you belong to?

A. Local 1-6, CIO; longshoremen's Union, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Q. That is one of Bridges' unions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is the President of that union?

A. Brother Bridges.

Q. Brother Bridges, you say?

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is Craycraft's position with that union? A. I can't hear you.

Q. What is Craycraft's—do you know Rosco Craycraft? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his position with the union that you belong to?

A. Well, I think he is second Vice President now.

Q. Second Vice President. Has he talked to you at all about this case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When? A. Monday morning.

Q. For the first time? A. Yes, sir. [7252]

Q. Had you talked to anyone else about the case?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. Yes, sir. I talked to the attorneys when I got in town last evening.

Q. Did you talk to anybody about Cannalonga or about the case at any time after May 7, 1941 up to the time you saw Roscfo Craycraft?

A. No, I didn't. I just seen the paper talk, or heard them talk, but otherwise, no.

Q. You had read the papers that Cannalonga had disappeared?

A. Yes; I seen that in the paper.

Q. You knew that on May—when did you know for the first time that Cannalonga had disappeared?

A. Oh, I don't know. I have been working nights ever since the 16th of last month, and I never got a day shift from then on. I have been working nights and I will tell you——

Q. (Interposing) When did you first learn that Cannalonga had disappeared?

A. Oh, I don't remember the date. I seen it in the paper. I don't know what paper it was or when.

Q. When with respect to the last time you saw Cannalonga on May 7, 1941?

A. Around 11:30 on that Wednesday.

Q. When did you read in the newspaper that Cannalonga had disappeared?

Presiding Inspector: With relation to that, when did [7253] you see it in the newspaper, that day, or two days later, or what?

A. I believe it was right that day or the next day.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you notify anyone that you had seen Cannalonga on Wednesday, May 7th?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you tell Rosco Craycraft?

A. No, I didn't say nothing to nobody.

Q. Did you tell that to any official? A. No.

Q. When was the first time you said to anybody that you saw Cannalonga the last time on May 7, 1941? A. It was Monday.

Q. And that was to whom?

A. Rosco Craycraft.

Q. Where? A. In Portland, Oregon.

Q. What conversation did you have with Craycraft at that time—first of all, where did you meet Craycraft on that day?

A. Where did I meet him?

Q. Yes.

A. They left word in the hall.

Q. Who left word?

A. Rosco Craycraft—for me to get in touch with him. [7254] I had been away on a vacation for four or five days. And I don't know—probably he was trying to get ahold of me before.

Q. You hadn't told anything about that to Craycraft prior to that time? A. No.

Q. And he had left word in the hall for you to see him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him?

A. I seen him on the corner of—I seen him——

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. (Interposing) Where were you to see him? Where did he tell—you say Rosco Craycraft left word to tell you to see him. You said he left word in the hall for you to see him? A. Yes.

Q. Where were you to meet him?

A. I was to meet him down in the Secretary's office.

Q. When? A. Monday morning.

Q. Monday morning? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to see him Monday morning?

A. I did, about 7:45.

Q. What was the first thing that was said?

A. Well, he had these time slips. He looked them up, I presume, to see on that ship what——

Presiding Inspector: What did he say to you?

[7255]

A. (Continuing) He asked me if I would come down here and testify.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That was the first thing he said?

A. Yes, sir. He asked if those slips were correct, and I told him, "Certainly. That is what we make them out for."

Q. What else was said?

A. That is all. He asked if I would come down to testify.

Q. Was anyone else present while you were talking to Craycraft on Monday?

A. No. There were two men in there but they walked out when I came in.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Tell us all that Craycraft said to you?

A. Tell you what?

Q. All that Craycraft said.

Presiding Inspector: Do you remember anything else besides what you have said?

A. No. He read these slips over and said we would go up to the employer's office and get an affidavit of them, and get the other time slips that corresponded with them.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did he ask you if you knew whether Cannalonga had been drinking on Saturday, May 4th?

A. Yes, I believe he did. [7256]

Q. I mean Saturday, May 3rd?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ask you if you knew Cannalonga had been drinking on Sunday, May 4th?

A. I believe he did.

Q. What did you say? A. I told him no.

Q. Do you know whether or not Cannalonga had been drinking on those two days—can you testify that Cannalonga was not drinking on either Saturday or Sunday?

A. He sure can hold his liquor if he was.

Q. If you knew that Rosco Craycraft himself had testified that he saw Cannalonga drinking on Saturday will you change your testimony?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as argumentative and improper, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well——

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

The Witness: (Interposing) I would like to answer that.

Presiding Inspector: He said he would like to answer. So you will withdraw your objection?

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. A man can take a drink, anybody can take a drink and not be drunk.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7257]

Q. Then Cannalonga might have been drinking Saturday and Sunday?

A. I would never say the man might not have had one drink.

Q. When is a man drunk in your opinion?

A. When a man is drunk he staggers.

Q. Is that the only time he is drunk, when he staggers?

A. Or laying down.

Q. So that when you testified that Cannalonga was not drunk on either Saturday or Sunday, you mean that he was not staggering and he was not laying down? A. Yes, sir—was on the job.

Q. Did Craycraft ask you on Monday as to when you had last seen Cannalonga?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Huh? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say?

A. I told him I saw him Wednesday.

Q. At what time—did he ask you the time you saw him?

A. He asked the time and I told him 11:30.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Did he suggest the time might have been 11:30? A. He did not. [7258]

Q. You knew it was 11:30 without him fixing the time? A. I did.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Anything further with this witness, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: Oh, yes indeed.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. To go back to this Wednesday morning to the time you saw Cannalonga, there is no question in your mind, is there, that you saw Cannalonga that day at 11:30? A. Not a bit.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not a bit.

Now, if the Court please, may I request that you explain to this witness the penalty of perjury?

Presiding Inspector: No, I shan't do that.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have conclusive evidence——

Presiding Inspector: Very well, but I can't make any explanation. Of course, false swearing in this proceeding is perjury, willful false swearing on any material point, at least.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you understand that?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, he understands that. They all understand it. [7259]

There is no suggestion from me of anything which should affect you in any way.

The Witness: Yes.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't want to threaten or coerce the witness in any manner. We want him to know——

Presiding Inspector: That is merely at your request.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, if you knew that Cannalonga got a bus for Seattle at 8:00 o'clock Wednesday morning, would that change your—between 8:30 and 9:00—would that change your testimony?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as being improper and argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: No foundation for it.

Mr. Gladstein: Correct.

Presiding Inspector: If he got on a bus at 8:00 o'clock why I suppose it would be inconsistent with his statement, unless he got off the bus and came back.

Mr. Del Guercio Do you allow the question?

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't allow the question. It is asking whether black is the same as white.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How was Cannalonga dressed when you saw him on Wednesday? [7260]

A. At what time, at 11:30?

Q. How many times did you see him on Wednesday?

A. Well, I didn't know whether you was speaking of Saturday, Sunday or Wednesday.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. I am speaking of Wednesday, May 7th.

A. I think he had khakis on.

Q. You didn't see him more than once on——

A. (Interposing) That is all I seen him on Wednesday.

Q. What kind of shirt was he wearing?

A. Khaki.

Q. Did he have a coat on?

A. No, I don't believe he did.

Q. Do you know what kind of a hat or cap he was wearing?

A. No, I don't. I don't believe he—he didn't wear a hat on the whole job.

Q. Did this other man that was with him have a hat?

A. No, he didn't. It was not noticeable if he did.

Q. Did either this short man or Cannalonga have anything in their hands?

A. No; they didn't have a thing.

Q. Do you know how much Cannalonga weighs?

A. Well, no, I don't; but I presume he weighs around 215 pounds.

Q. 215 pounds. And you say this other man that you saw weighs about 100 pounds less? [7261]

A. Yes. He was a small man; he was a little man.

Q. How many times had you seen Cannalonga all together, that is, from the time you were working on the ship?

A. Well, when I was on deck I saw him practically every few minutes running from one end to the other on them winches.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. How long have you known Rosco Crayeraft?

A. Well, I believe I have known him from about 1932.

Q. How many pounds does Rosco Crayeraft weigh? A. He weighs about 220 or 215.

Q. Cannalonga weighs more than Crayeraft, or about the same?

A. About the same, I presume; possibly a little bit heavier, fatter.

Q. About the same height, Cannalonga and Crayeraft?

A. Well, I wouldn't say as to the height; I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know.

Q. Compare their heights—you know both men.

A. Well, I couldn't say as to inches shorter or longer.

Q. Did you ever see Crayeraft with Cannalonga? A. No, I never did; I never did.

Q. Did you ever see Cannalonga and Mowery together? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Jack Mowery? A. No, sir. [7262]

Q. Did you ever see Crayeraft aboard the West Cussetta at any time?

A. No, I have never seen him on that ship. I heard he was down there, but I never seen him.

Q. Did you ever see Burt Nelson around that ship? A. I don't know him.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. You don't know Burt Nelson? A. No.

Q. Now, have you told us all the conversation you had with Crayeraft on Monday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can't think of anything else?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how long Cannalonga was absent from the ship on Sunday?

A. No, I don't. I know he was gone a while, but I don't know.

Q. Were the winches operating while he was gone?

A. No. They were the same way from the start to the finish on Sunday.

Q. Did you know that Crayeraft had taken him off the ship, or had requested that he go off on Sunday?

A. I told you I never seen Crayeraft and him together.

Q. Where was the ship docked on Monday—on Wednesday, May 7th? [7263]

A. Terminal 1 in the slip, at the old American-Hawaiian dock,

Q. What terminal were you working on on Thursday, May 8th? A. On Thursday?

Q. Yes.

A. We went to Terminal 4, but the ship didn't get there, so we stood by.

Q. Where was the ship on Thursday?

A. It was at the home dock.

Q. What terminal was that?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

A. That was Terminal 1 in the slip, now called the Pan-American.

Q. Were you working on the ship at all on the 8th?

A. No. That was Thursday. We didn't—we got two hours from stand-by time, from 7:00 to 9:00. They sent us home at half past eight.

Q. Where were you standing by?

A. Terminal 4.

Q. The ship was not there?

A. No; it didn't come in.

Q. Do you know where it was?

A. Yes; it was the Pan-American dock, Terminal 1.

Q. Were you on the ship Thursday night?

A. No. I didn't go back. A new gang came on. When [7264] you have any time, when you go on a ship, and get knocked off, they send in another gang.

Q. Do you know Rodman?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Do you know Rodman? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever heard that name before?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you spoken to anyone on the Harry Bridges Defense Committee?

A. Well, in what way do you mean?

Q. About this case?

A. No; only just to Rosco Crayeraft and to the attorneys last night; that is all.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Q. Did Crayeraft tell you that he was on the Harry Bridges Defense Committee?

A. Well, I presume he is. He is an official of the organization?

Q. An official of your organization?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you fix the time more definitely that Cannalonga was absent from the ship on Sunday?

A. No. The only thing I know, I think it was after lunch that I tried to get ahold of him, and I went to the Chief Engineer, and they were fixing the engines, and they had a bunch of men there working, machinists, and he said, [7265] "I have got all I can"——

Q. (Interposing) When did you see Cannalonga the last time on Sunday?

A. It was in the afternoon.

Q. Did you see him in the morning?

A. Yes; I seen him from a quarter to seven to seven thirty.

Q. When was the last time you saw him in the morning?

A. He came to the winches, I think, around 8:30 or 9:00 and he says, "How are they running?"

Q. Did you see him after 8:30 in the morning?

A. No; I didn't see him after that no more.

Q. What time did you see him again in the afternoon? A. Between 3:00 and 6:00.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all?

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Mr. Grossman: We have one or two questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: One question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your address in Portland?

Presiding Inspector: He has given it.

Mr. Del Guercio: He has?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How old are you? [7266]

A. 43 years old.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was Cannalonga's speech normal Saturday and Sunday?

A. Yes, it was, from what I talked to him.

Q. Could you understand him when you spoke to him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he seem to have control of his hands and his feet and all that?

A. Yes. He was very agreeable and he tried to do everything he could to help.

Q. Did you see anything abnormal about his physical behavior?

Presiding Inspector: Hasn't he already answered that?

Mr. Grossman: Not this question. The only reason I am going into it is because Mr. Del Guercio implies that this witness doesn't know when a man is sober or drunk. I am going into his physical characteristics, but this is the last question, your Honor.

(Testimony of Louis E. Young.)

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you see anything abnormal about his physical behavior at any time on Saturday or Sunday?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. [7267]

A. No; I never seen nothing wrong with him at all.

Mr. Grossman: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Gladstein: I will call the next witness.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I wonder if, especially considering the fact that Mr. Cannalonga has been sitting in the court room, whether Mr. Young can sit here after his testimony?

Presiding Inspector: I see no objection to it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We object. We have excluded Cannalonga and this witness should be excluded.

Presiding Inspector: I said I saw no objection to it. If counsel sees an objection he may be excluded.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have other reasons in mind that we don't care to disclose.

Presiding Inspector: You don't have to; you are well within your rights.

RAY D. SHOEMAKER

called as a witness in surrebuttal on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Shoemaker, you have already been a witness? A. Yes. [7268].

Q. You have already testified in this case, have you not? A. I have.

Q. I call your attention to the Sunday in May when you were present in the office of Mr. Lord, at which time there were present also Mr. Rosco Craycraft, Mr. Cannalonga and myself. Do you have that incident in mind? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, during that period of time did you have a good opportunity to observe whether or not Mr. Cannalonga exhibited anything indicating that he was under the influence of liquor?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being leading and improper.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think it is perfectly competent for a lay witness to say whether or not a person with whom he comes in contact is drunk or sober. That is what this question is directed to.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you have such an opportunity?

A. I did have that opportunity.

Mr. Myron: Is it your question that is pending, your Honor?

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Presiding Inspector: No; that he had an opportunity to observe him.

Mr. Myron: I think your question is a proper question, [7269] your Honor, and we won't object to it.

Presiding Inspector: That is a proper question.

Mr. Myron: Yes. Their question is not proper. It is very suggestive.

Presiding Inspector: He is telling what opportunity he had for observation.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state, Mr. Shoemaker——

Presiding Inspector: Although, I think we have had a great deal of this.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state what that opportunity to observe Mr. Cannalonga, as to whether or not he was in an intoxicated state, consisted of?

A. Well, he was introduced to me. I shook hands with him. I sat there across the table from him for about an hour taking shorthand notes of his statement.

Presiding Inspector: Was it directly across the table?

The Witness: Well, at about as far as from here to the stenographer, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Eight or nine feet, ten feet?

The Witness: About five feet, I believe.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you have an opportunity to observe his face? A. I did.

Q. His eyes? [7270] A. I did.

Q. His movements? A. I did.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to see him walk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have occasion to ask him to spell words for you? A. On one or two occasions.

Q. That is, during the taking of the statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Based on your observations that day, Mr. Shoemaker, will you state whether or not Mr. Cannalonga was drunk or sober?

A. He was sober.

Q. Now, at any time during that morning did Mr. Cannalonga exhibit to your observation anything that would indicate that he was under intimidation, or duress, or coercion of any kind?

A. He did not.

Mr. Gladstein: Cross examine.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Myron will cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Myron?

Cross Examination

By Mr. Myron:

Q. When were you first advised to come to Mr. Lord's [7271] office?

A. About 9:00 or shortly after 9:00 on Sunday morning.

Q. How were you advised?

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

A. By telephone.

Q. By whom? A. Mr. W. P. Lord.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. He said he wanted me to take a deposition in his office about 11:00 o'clock that morning.

Q. For whom? A. He didn't say.

Q. Did he say who was going to question the witness? A. He did not.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have that deposition, please?

By Mr. Myron:

Q. What else was said?

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. Mr. Del Guercio wants that deposition.

Mr. Del Guercio: I made a mistake. I didn't mean to say "deposition".

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference what it is called.

(Whereupon the exhibit referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Myron: Is there a question pending? [7272]

The Witness: Yes—what else was said, I believe.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Yes—in this telephone conversation.

A. Yes. I told Mr. Lord that my boy was going to play baseball that day, and I thought that I was going to have to take him out of town for the purpose of playing baseball, and I didn't want to take the deposition if I could get somebody else to do it. I tried to get ahold of John Michelet—M-i-c-h-e-l-e-t—who is a reporter in the court house in Portland. I couldn't get ahold of John so I asked my boy if he was going to play, if it was necessary to take him out to play ball. He said it was raining and the game was called off. So I called up Mr. Lord about 9:30 and told him I would be there at 11:00 o'clock to take the deposition.

Q. This is the second conversation you had with Mr. Lord? A. Yes.

Q. On the telephone? A. Yes.

Q. The second conversation? A. Yes.

Q. What was the first conversation?

A. The first conversation—he asked if I could take a deposition in his office about 11:00 o'clock.

Q. That was all? A. Yes. [7273]

Q. And you said you would find out?

A. I told him about my boy going to play baseball and I would see if I couldn't get somebody else.

Q. And you called him later on?

A. About five minutes later.

Q. What time was that?

A. Oh, it was between 9:00 and 9:30.

Q. What time did you arrive at Mr. Lord's office? A. Eleven o'clock.

Q. What time? A. Eleven o'clock.

Q. Who was there then? A. Mr. Lord.

Q. Anybody else? A. Nobody else.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Q. What conversation did you have with Mr. Lord at that time?

A. We sat there and talked about things in general. He was talking about a certain book he was reading, and just other things in general.

Q. Did he tell you who was going to be there?

A. He did not.

Q. Anything about the taking of this statement? A. He did not.

Q. He didn't mention the statement in the conversation [7274] with you? A. He did not.

Q. How long did you remain there before anybody else came into the room?

A. About an hour.

Q. That would be about 12:00 o'clock?

A. 12:00, or a little after.

Q. Who came into the room then?

A. Mr. Gladstein, Mr. Cannalonga and Mr. Crayeraft.

Q. The three of them together? A. Yes.

Q. Was that the first time that you learned that Mr. Gladstein and Mr. Crayeraft were to be there? A. It was.

Q. You are sure Lord said nothing to you about that?

A. I don't remember; if he did I certainly don't remember it.

Q. Were you surprised to see Mr. Gladstein?

A. I didn't know Mr. Gladstein. I didn't know what it was all about.

Q. Were you surprised to see Mr. Crayeraft?

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

A. I didn't know Mr. Crayeraft.

Q. What was done after they were all in the office?

A. They introduced, Mr. Lord introduced Mr. Gladstein to me, Mr. Crayeraft and Mr. Cannalonga. Then Mr. Lord swore [7275] Mr. Cannalonga and I started taking the statement.

Q. Mr. Lord introduced you to Mr. Cannalonga?

A. No. He introduced me to Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Mr. Gladstein? A. Yes.

Q. And then who introduced you to Cannalonga?

A. I believe Mr. Gladstein did; I wouldn't be sure.

Q. How did he introduce you?

A. He just said, "This is Mr. Cannalonga and this is Mr. Crayeraft."

Q. Then what was done?

A. Then Mr. Lord was asked to swear Mr. Cannalonga and to have his statement taken.

Q. After Cannalonga had been sworn did they start to question immediately?

A. As I recall, they did.

Q. What is that?

A. As I recall it, they did.

Q. Now, did anybody leave the room prior to the beginning of this examination, or inquiry?

A. I think Mr. Crayeraft went down to speak —I think Mr. Lord's wife was sitting out in front in an automobile, and I think that he told Mr.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Craycraft to go down and tell her that he was going to be there for a while, or something. I don't remember just exactly. [7276]

Q. When did he go out?

A. Well, it was right about the time we started taking the deposition.

Q. How many questions had been asked?

A. I don't know.

Q. Approximately?

A. I wouldn't be able to say. [7277]

Q. What is that?

A. I wouldn't be able to say that.

Q. Now, how long was he gone?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Approximately?

A. Well, I was sitting there taking a statement. I don't know when he came back.

Q. Well, did he come back?

A. I saw him in there later.

Q. How long afterwards, after he had left the room?

A. I saw him when we finished taking the statement.

Q. Is that the first time you saw him after he left the room at the beginning of the statement?

A. Well, I don't remember. I was taking that statement. I don't remember whether he——

Q. (Interposing) Now, give us your best recollection?

A. Yes, I think I saw him in there again. I think I glanced over and he was sitting there on the east window, by the east window just before we got through taking the statement.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Q. You don't remember him being in the room from the time that he first left, which was at the beginning of the statement, until towards the end of the statement; is that right?

A. I don't remember anything about it. My attention [7278] was directed to the taking of the statement from Mr. Cannalonga. I was not interested in Mr. Crayeraft at all.

Q. Now, did anybody else leave the room during the taking of this deposition?

A. Yes, Mr. Cannalonga left the room once for about three or four minutes.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, along towards the latter part of the statement; I imagine about, oh, ten minutes to one, something like that, about in there.

Q. That was the only time he left the room?

A. That is the only time that he left the room until he left for good.

Q. That was the only time he left the room from the beginning of the taking of this statement, is that right? A. Yes, as I remember it.

Q. And who was with Mr. Cannalonga when he left the room on that occasion?

A. Well, I think Mr. Lord went out with him?

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga come back then?

A. Yes, he came back.

Q. Did Mr. Lord come back?

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

A. Yes, I think Mr. Lord came back and stood in the doorway, both of them stood in the doorway after he came back.

Q. This was after the statement had been completed? [7279]

A. No, not after the statement had been completed, because Mr. Gladstein asked him two or three questions while he was standing there by the door.

Q. While Mr. Cannalonga was standing by the door? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was Mr. Lord at this time?

A. As I remember, Mr. Lord was standing right there by him.

Q. With Mr. Cannalonga? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Gladstein was asking him questions? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Asking Mr. Cannalonga questions, is that right? A. Two or three.

Q. And then what happened?

A. Well, then, Cannalonga refused to answer any more questions and walked out.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga go out there then?

A. Yes, he walked out.

Q. And who went with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Nobody.

Q. He went out alone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he come back? A. He did not.

Q. Now, did anybody else leave the room afer that? [7280]

A. Not—no. Mr. Lord and I—let's see—after

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Cannalonga left, then, Mr. Lord said he was going down to see his wife. I picked up my books and left. Mr. Craycraft and Mr. Gladstein were sitting in the room at the time I left.

Q. Where was Mr. Lord?

A. Mr. Lord went down to his wife.

Q. He left before you did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after Mr. Cannalonga, is that right?

A. And what?

Q. After Mr. Cannalonga?

A. A few minutes after, yes. We stood there for maybe three or four minutes after Cannalonga left and then Mr. Lord left and I left.

Q. Now, that was the only occasion that Mr. Cannalonga left the room during the taking of this statement, is that right.

Mr. Gladstein: What is the question? Will you read it?

Presiding Inspector: You mean the two that he has given, the two occasions?

Mr. Myron: He has already given one, I think, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: He has given one when he went out and came back and he gave the second when he went out and didn't come back. [7281]

Mr. Myron: May I question the witness on that, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: That is what you brought out yourself.

Mr. Myron: I don't believe so, your Honor. I would like to have his testimony.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, let me tell you what I understood.

Mr. Myron: It will only be one question. May I ask him that?

Presiding Inspector: Why, sure.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. How many times did Mr. Cannalonga leave the room?

Presiding Inspector: You mean and come back?

Mr. Myron: Before the statement had been completed.

Presiding Inspector: No, because that is a little doubtful, the meaning of that. The statement, in a way, went on afterwards, after Cannalonga went out; that is his testimony, and that is what appears in the deposition.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. When I say the completion of the statement I mean when you had finished writing.

A. Oh, I see.

Q. Now, how many times prior to that did Mr. Cannalonga leave the room? A. Twice. [7282]

Q. From the beginning?

A. As I remember.

Q. Twice? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the first occasion who accompanied Mr. Cannalonga out of the room?

Mr. Gladstein: It has been asked and answered, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think so. I will allow him to ask it again.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

A. As I remember, Mr. Lord went out with him.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And on the second occasion Mr. Cannalonga left the room alone? A. That is right.

Q. Now, how many times did Mr. Crayeraft leave that office during the taking of the statement?

A. Well, as I say, as I remember, Mr. Lord told him to go down and tell his wife that we were liable to be up there for some time. That is as I remember it and that is all I remember about it.

Q. I show you what purports to be a statement of Maurice Cannalonga designating you as a short-hand reporter and ask you if you can identify that as the record which you took on that occasion? [7283]

A. (Examining document): That is the carbon copy, yes.

Q. Now, you state there that "This statement was taken in the presence of William P. Lord and Richard Gladstein, attorneys; Rosco Crayeraft and Ray D. Shoemaker." A. That is right.

Q. Was that true? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Crayeraft there?

A. Well, he was there as far as I know.

Q. Well, isn't it your testimony that he left the room?

A. He left the room for a few minutes but I noticed him there again. I told you I noticed him again, didn't I?

Q. Then, he was not there when you took this statement, is that right?

A. Well, it is pretty technical.

Q. Well, isn't it true?

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

A. Yes, he was there.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the witness——

By Mr. Myron:

Q. (Interposing): He was not there during the taking of this statement, was he?

A. I say he was.

Q. Is it your testimony that he left the room to go down to the car where Mrs. Lord was sitting?

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I think it has gone far [7284] enough.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: Obviously being there is ambiguous. One might be there part of the time or all the time. I don't think Mr. Myron should be permitted to play on words that way.

Mr. Myron: I think that is uncalled for, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is perfectly clear, what he means, but you may ask.

Will you read it, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. It is.

Presiding Inspector: He has already testified to that half a dozen times. The next question.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And it is true, is it your testimony that you don't remember him coming back into that room?

A. No, I don't.

Q. And is it your testimony that it was sometime

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

after or near the close of the statement that you saw him for the first time again in that room?

A. As I said, I glanced over towards the east window and he was sitting there on a chair.

Q. Then, he was not present in that room during the taking of this statement, is that right? [7285]

A. As far as I know, he was.

Q. He was not there during the taking of a good portion of it?

A. Well, as far as I know he was; I saw him over there. I don't suppose it took him very long to tell Mrs. Lord what he was supposed to tell her.

Q. Well, you didn't see him there; is that true?

Presiding Inspector: He has told you that he didn't notice him for some little time. You have got all that in the testimony.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Did you see anybody else in that room at any time during the taking of this statement?

A. I did not.

Q. Other than the persons you have already mentioned? A. I did not.

Q. Where was Mrs. Lord?

A. As far as I know, she was sitting in the car down at the front——

Q. (Interposing): How do you know that?

A. Hearsay.

Q. What is that? A. Hearsay.

Q. Who told you?

A. By Mr. Lord telling Mr. Craycraft to go down and tell her that we were up there. [7286]

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Q. Now, did you see Mrs. Lord at any time after that? A. I did not.

Q. How soon after Mr. Lord left the room did you leave? A. About a minute.

Q. How long? A. Oh, about a minute.

Q. About a minute after?

A. Thirty seconds.

Q. How did you leave the building, leave the floor——

A. (Interposing): By elevator.

Q. (Continuing): ——on which this office is located? A. By elevator.

Q. Did anybody go down the elevator with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Lord or Mr. Lord after you left the room? A. I did not.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga? A. I did not.

Q. Did you see them at any time downstairs?

A. I did not.

Q. And you left about a minute after Mr. Lord left the office?

A. Just about; that is as I remember it.

Q. Was there any conversation in that room about [7287] finding a key to the lavatory at any time? A. I don't remember of any.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga leave the room for that purpose as far as you know?

A. Yes, I believe he did.

Q. When? A. The first time he went out.

Q. Now, who went with him on that occasion?

Mr. Grossman: Do you mean who left with him?

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

This witness may not have been in a position to know.

A. I think he left alone. I didn't notice anybody go with him.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And who was in the office at the time that he left to go to the lavatory?

A. Oh, yes, now I do remember. Craycraft was in the office at that time.

Q. Who else? A. Sir?

Q. Who else?

A. Mr. Gladstein and myself and Mr. Lord, and that is when Mr. Lord went out.

Q. Mr. Lord and Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Went to the——

A. (Interposing): They went out together.

[7288]

Q. Went out together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you recall whether Mr. Cannalonga said he was feeling sick at that time?

A. He did not.

Q. What was the conversation, if you can remember it?

A. He just said he wanted go to the lavatory is all.

Q. And then left the room? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Lord left with him?

A. Mr. Lord told him he would show him where it was, as I remember.

Q. Is that the occasion that you referred to previously when Mr. Lord and Mr. Cannalonga went out for the first time? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Q. And there was only one other occasion when Mr. Cannalonga left the room; that was the final leaving? A. That is the way I remember it.

Q. Now, this transcript shows, or indicate that on two occasions the witness left the room, and to refresh your memory I will show you the transcript.

A. (Examining transcript): That is right.

Q. Now, those are the two occasions that you refer to? A. Yes, sir. [7289]

Q. In your testimony here?

A. When he left the room I made a notation in my notes.

Q. And those were the only two occasions that he left the room?

A. As I remember. I put it in my notes at the time he left the room.

Q. Now, after the proceedings started and during the time they proceeded until the completion did you take down all the remarks, conversation that were made in that room?

A. All except those little conversations I told you about when he wanted to go to the toilet I didn't.

Q. Those were the only remarks that you didn't take down or put down?

A. As I remember, yes. Well, I was there to take down all the remarks and I attempted to do that.

Q. Well, what you mean by that is when you stated the witness left the room——

A. (Interposing): Well, of course, that is just a notation to show what happened, and to explain the transcript I put that in.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You didn't put down the request of Mr. Lord——

The Witness: (Interposing) No.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——to Mr. Craycraft [7290] to go down and see about his wife?

The Witness: No; I don't think that was a part of the transcript.

Presiding Inspector: But what you mean is that you put down all of the questions and answers as between Mr. Gladstein and Mr. Cannalonga?

The Witness: That is right, your Honor.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Was there any conversation between Mr. Lord and Mr. Cannalonga in regard to securing the services of a lawyer for Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Not in my presence.

Q. You didn't hear any such remark?

A. I did not.

Q. Was there any occasion during the taking of this statement when Mr. Lord took—strike that out.

Was there any indication to you that Cannalonga was laboring under any strain during the taking o this statement? A. No, not to my opinion.

Q. At the time that Mr. Lord took Cannalonga out of the room was there any manifestation on Cannalonga's part which indicated to you that Lord took him out of the room for the purpose of advising him that he needed a lawyer's advice?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I don't have any objection to the witness trying to answer that but I don't see how there could be any manifestation of the character called for in that [7291] question, your Honor. I don't see how that could be unless he is asking him for speech or conversation.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. Maybe the witness can answer.

The Witness: It would be merely opinion on my part, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, it is your opinion. They want your opinion.

The Witness: I don't believe the witness was under any strain whatever.

Presiding Inspector: That is all you want, isn't it?

Mr. Myron: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: Are you finished?

Mr. Myron: Just a minute.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Now, when did you transcribe your notes?

A. The same afternoon.

Q. Did you give a transcription of the record to anybody?

A. I sent two copies of it by Air Mail that same afternoon.

Q. To whom? A. To Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Did you give a copy to anybody else?

A. I did not. [7292]

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Lord about this case?

A. I have not.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Q. Did you talk with anybody prior ao the time you were called here to the witness stand?

A. I talked to Mr. Gladstein for about five minutes.

Q. That was prior to the time that you took the stand here before?

A. This morning. Oh, you mean——

Q. (Interposing): Well, you were a witness previously.

A. The other day, oh, yes, I talked to him about five minutes.

Q. Prior to that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You haven't talked with anybody else?

A. I have not.

Mr. Myron: I think that is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Shoemaker, at any time while you were in the office of Mr. Lord and while Mr. Cannalonga and the others whom you have named were there, or any of them were there, did Mr. Cannalonga ever say the following or in substance the following "What are you guys trying to pull or to pull off?"

A. I heard no such remark.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all. [7293]

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

The Witness: What is gentleman's name. May I answer a question that he asked?

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Myron.

The Witness: Mr. Myron. You asked me if I talked to anybody about this case since the time I was here and now, and there were two officers came out to my house a couple of weeks ago and talked to me.

(Testimony of Ray D. Shoemaker.)

Did you want to know about that?

Recross Examination

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Those were the only other persons you talked to? A. Yes, two Immigration Officers.

Mr. Myron: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all. I think you are finally excused.

The Witness: All right, thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, we are having him called, your Honor.

ROSCO GEORGE CRAYCRAFT

called as a witness in surrebuttal on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows: [7294]

Presiding Inspector: You have been sworn; the oath still is the same.

The Reporter: Your name, please?

The Witness: Rosco George Craycraft.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, you have already testified in this proceeding, have you not? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Now, I want to call your attention to Saturday, May 3rd and Sunday, May 4th. On any of the occasions when you were with, or when you saw Maurice Cannalonga on either of those two days did he appear to you to be drunk? A. No.

Q. Did he appear to you to be sober?

A. He did.

Q. On any of those days and at any time on either of those days did he appear to you to have normal possession of all his faculties? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you notice at any time on either of those two days whether he walked in a staggering manner or in a normal manner?

A. Well, I would say in a normal manner.

Q. Was there anything about his speech on either of [7295] those two days or at any time that you saw him or were with him that would indicate to you that he was not sober? A. No.

Q. Was there anything about his facial appearance, his eyes or any part of him which would indicate to you on either of those two days or at any time that you saw him or were with him that he was drunk? A. No.

Q. Now, I direct your attention to the first time that you spoke with him on Wednesday, April 30th, on that evening—I withdraw that—not the first time, but the second time that same evening, that Wednesday, April 30th. Do you have that incident in mind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On that occasion was it you or was it he who raised for the first time in your conversation that there was a Mann Act charge over Mr. Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, we have gone over that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you went over it with this witness. I don't think that Mr. Gladstein has been over it with this witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has appeared here before; he has testified.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but that has come up since. [7296]

Mr. Gladstein: You are right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Cannalonga has made certain statements about it. I think I will take this.

A. It was me.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In what way did you raise it?

A. When we first went back to the little tool shop Cannalonga started in telling me about Doctor Buckner at Seattle, and he seemed to be very sorry for the things he had done; he felt very badly about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike out what it seemed to him, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: No, I will let it stand. We are not being very sharp about these matters.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Continue, please.

A. (Continuing): "——that he felt very badly about it, so I told him at the time that I had heard a conversation down on the Embarcadero, a rumor that maybe they had a Mann Act charge against him. I said: 'Is there any truth in that?' He said: 'Yes, that is what the trouble is.'

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Did he say to you "Christ, man. You are crazy", or any words to that effect? A. No.

Q. Was it you or was it he in any of the conversa- [7297] tions that you had with him, Mr. Crayeraft, who mentioned the various places or states at which Mr. Cannalonga stayed or was supposed to have stayed in connection with this Mann Act charge?

A. He was the one that listed it to me.

Q. Was it you or was it he who mentioned the name of the girl that was, or was supposed to have been involved? A. He was.

Q. Now, what did he say to you? Do you recall the name that he gave you?

Presiding Inspector: I think we have been over this.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. Perhaps, we have, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Crayeraft, at any time while you were with Cannalonga on the ship West Cussetta did anybody direct a remark to you of this character "What is the status of Cannalonga", to which you replied, "Just holding everything up." Did any such incident occur? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, there is a question of recollection as to whether you struck out some of this testimony when it first came out.

Do you have a recollection as to whether——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You mean about this—— [7298]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Itinerary and the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes, I stated at that time that I didn't think the fact was material.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: It was only the fact whether there was conversation or something of that kind.

Mr. Gladstein: Surely, but didn't you rule on a motion to strike to the effect that the conversation on that subject matter was to be stricken from the record?

Presiding Inspector: I think not; I think not.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, if that is in the record, why, of course, there is no purpose in our going over it again.

Presiding Inspector: What is Mr. Del Guercio's recollection? I didn't strike that out.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe you did.

Presiding Inspector: I stopped the witness telling where these places, these alleged stopping places were because I said the fact at that time appeared to me immaterial.

Mr. Gladstein: Was immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: That is right, isn't it?

The Witness: It seems to me like it is. However, theer were so many objections.

Presiding Inspector: You can bring it out if you have any doubt about it.

By Mr. Gladstein: [7299]

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, was it on that Wednesday night or was it on a later night, on Friday of that same week that you first asked Mr. Cannalonga whether he would speak with me?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. That has all been gone over.

Presiding Inspector: I can't recall. Has that been gone over?

Mr. Gladstein: No; Mr. Cannalonga testified on that.

Well, of course, this witness did testify the first time he was here to a conversation on a Friday night with Mr. Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: Now, if you want to ask any specific question, why, I think it would be better to do it that way.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will call your attention to Friday night of that week—I want to go back to Wednesday night, that first Wednesday night. On that night did you ask Mr. Cannalonga whether he would be willing to talk with me? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: He says "No."

By Mr. Gladstein: [7300]

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga, on that night or any occasion say that he was willing to talk with me about an article in the Voice of the Federation?

A. No.

Q. Did he say that he was willing to talk with me concerning a rumor of any kind? A. No.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Now, calling your attention to Saturday, May the 3rd, at any time in my room did Mr. Cannalonga say or did anyone say anthing concerning working Mr. Cannalonga over?

A. Mr. Cannalonga did.

Q. What did he say in that connection?

A. Well, Mr. Cannalonga stated he felt so rotten and so miserable that he wished somebody would take him out and just beat the devil out of him.

Q. And do you recall what was said in that connection after he made that statement?

A. Yes; I told him that I thought that was a poor way to approach it. The sensible thing to do would be to come down to San Francisco and tell the truth and forget about everything else.

Q. Was anything else said during that entire conversation in any way concerning working him over or physical backing of any kind?

A. Only the one remark of Cannalonga, the one you have [7301] given, the one that I have given.

Q. At any time during that Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel was any statement made or did any incident occur indicating hostility between you and Cannalonga or between any of the parties that were in that room? A. No.

Q. At any time did Mr. Cannalonga say to you that he did not see how the FBI could have a Mann Act charge over him because he was never involved in one? A. No.

Q. At any time in your conversations with Mr. Cannalonga was it stated that "I would come to

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Portland for the purpose of helping Mr. Cannalonga out on the rap that the FBI had concerning the Mann Act?" A. No.

Q. At any time in your conversations with Mr. Cannalonga did you keep insisting that the FBI had a Mann Act rap on Cannalonga, and did he keep denying that?

A. No; he talked freely on that.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga tell you that Ed Fisher had turned him in to the FBI?

A. He said that Ed Fisher, a member of the SUP in Seattle, was the only one he could figure that could have turned him in.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, you forgot to mention this the [7302] last time, didn't you?

The Witness: No.

Mr. Gladstein: He was asked and not permitted, your Honor. [7303]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In your conversations with Mr. Cannalonga was it you or was it he who first mentioned the name of Dr. Buckner? A. Cannalonga.

Q. And in those conversations was there anything said regarding checking with Dr. Buckner?

A. He said if I go to Seattle and see Dr. Buckner that he could verify all that he had told me previously about him taking dope, or shots, as he called it.

Q. Was it you or was it Mr. Cannalonga who mentioned in your conversations that a Mr. Boyd, from the Immigration Department, had got ahold of Cannalonga last October?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Cannalonga.

Q. In your conversations did Cannalonga tell you how the FBI happened to get ahold of him last year?

A. Only the one reference he made to Ed Fisher.

Q. In his conversations with you did he tell you about the occasions when he was with FBI agents and conversations that took place between them?

A. The times that he went up to the Vance Building.

Q. Was there a conversation between you and Cannalonga concerning those occasions?

A. No; not on what transpired. He said they took him up to the Vance Building.

Q. Did he tell you about the conversations that took [7304] place up there? A. (Pause.)

Presiding Inspector: Your answer is "No"?

Oh, you haven't answered.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is thinking.

Presiding Inspector: Pardon me.

A. You still have reference to this Friday night, is that the night you mean?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On any of the occasions when you were with him?

A. On all occasions—only when he told us that Saturday.

Q. At any time in your conversations with Can-

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

nalonga did he deny that he had given false testimony in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that question.

Presiding Inspector: That is pretty broad.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was there ever a discussion between you and Cannalonga regarding his giving false testimony or false statements in this case?

A. Well, only as applied to the Mann Act charge and intimidation.

Q. When did the conversation occur, Mr. Craycraft?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to any inquiry along this line. If it is allowed then we have a right to call Mr. Cannalonga [7305] back and——

Presiding Inspector: He is still your witness, Cannalonga, and you called him.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will have to call Cannalonga back.

Presiding Inspector: No. They are negativing what he has recently said.

Mr. Del Guercio: Why wasn't that brought out on the cross examination of Mr. Cannalonga?

Presiding Inspector: I think it was brought out on direct examination down here. I am not sure about that.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor is correct. There were certain questions put to Mr. Cannalonga, and he gave certain testimony, and it is our purpose to negative that testimony.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: In the first place——

Presiding Inspector: This has to do with testimony given by Mr. Cannalonga on the last occasion.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: This witness was permitted to testify the first time because Mr. Gladstein represented that Mr. Cannalonga was not available.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: He testified.

Presiding Inspector: That is true; he wasn't available at that time.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7306]

Mr. Del Guercio: When did he testify—Wednesday? All right, he testified and he was cross examined.

Presiding Inspector: You asked him all about these things. You asked him when he was down here——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Counsel has had an opportunity to cross examine Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: Not since you have. They have the last word on these matters, because he is your witness. The cross examination follows the direct.

Now, if I am wrong about that, and if this did not occur on the last occasion that Cannalonga was called, then there may be another question. But did this occur, as I recall, on the last occasion when Cannalonga was down here.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read the last question?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Cannalonga was called to refute this witness' testimony.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, they are calling the witness again to refute Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: These weren't matters which this man had testified to. If he has already testified——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): He testified to all those situations. [7307]

Presiding Inspector: But subsequent to that you brought this out, and I am going to let him negative it.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the last question.

Presiding Inspector: That is, if he can. That is a matter that I don't know about.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On that Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel, or at any time, Mr. Crayeraft, has Cannalonga denied that he gave false statements to the FBI and false testimony in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know about that. This is what he didn't say. You are now asking——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): He testified that there was a conversation about it, and that he denied—he didn't give the exact language—so I am using just the transcript, using the word "deny", although at one time——

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you can do that. Because he gave a conclusion you can't show the negative of that conclusion.

Mr. Gladstein: I can't imagine what the words were that—I will put it this way:——

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you got it all?

Mr. Gladstein: There is on that—I think the record perhaps is clear enough on that. [7308]

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio is quite right in saying that we don't want to go over what this witness has already testified to.

Mr. Gladstein: I agree.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, on Monday night, Mr. Crayeraft, when Mr. Cannalonga wrote a note to Bridges, did Mr. Cannalonga show any reluctance to write that note?

Mr. Del Guercio: We certainly have been over that.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have been over that.

Mr. Gladstein: Only with Mr. Cannalonga on cross.

Presiding Inspector: You showed by this witness about that note.

Mr. Gladstein: But not as to whether there was any reluctance about writing it, or what was supposed to have taken place as to how the note came to be written, your Honor.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I thought you had gone all over that.

Mr. Del Guercio: He testified to all the circumstances around that transaction.

Presiding Inspector: I will have to look at his testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: I am rather certain I didn't ask Mr. Craycraft because I couldn't have anticipated at that time [7309] that there would be an occasion to ask Mr. Craycraft as to whether there was an argument, for example, on the question of how the name of Cannalonga should be signed. That is one thing.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that a very immaterial point?

Mr. Gladstein: I rather think so, but it is one of the points, you see, on which I think we are entitled to negative the testimony of Mr. Cannalonga. It is not very lengthy.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow you to ask him about the signature.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On the night when the note was written, Mr. Craycraft, was there any argument or dispute as to how the note should be signed? A. No.

Q. Was the note written by virtue of insistence——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I have the portion of the transcript on that.

Presiding Inspector: I will be very glad to see it.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Presiding Inspector: They have the portion of the transcript of Mr. Craycraft's testimony on this.

(Whereupon the transcript referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Gladstein: Would you like to read that during the noon recess? I notice it is after 12:30 now. [7310]

Presiding Inspector: No. I want to get along if we can.

Mr. Gladstein: We still want to eat lunch.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was that note, Mr. Craycraft, that was written by Mr. Cannalonga on that Monday night written by virtue of insistence on your part as against reluctance on the part of Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was there any argument or discussion as to whether Cannalonga, after having signed the name "Blackie" should sign his full name?

A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, at any time during any of these discussions that you had with Mr. Cannalonga did you ever say or do anything for the purpose of intimidating him? A. No.

Q. Or coercing him? A. No.

Q. Did you say or do anything which, in your opinion, could possibly have the effect of intimidating him?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to this, giving his opinion. [7311]

Presiding Inspector: You have got his conclusion already. I don't think you can force it any further.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, prior to coming down here on that Monday night, when you saw Mr. Camalonga for the last time, did you ask him for any further information? A. (Pause.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Let the record show the witness is thinking.

Mr. Gladstein: That is a little bit more, and I would like the record to show, than some of the Government witnesses have done; they have done no thinking.

Presiding Inspector: Let's not get into remarks like that.

A. I am not quite clear. Do you mean outside of the list of the places he is supposed to have stopped at, and the note to Harry Bridges?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I have reference particularly to the list of places. Do you recall that? A. Yes.

Q. How did that come up?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as already having been gone over. [7312]

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I excluded that. It may now be competent if you want to ask it on account of the testimony of Mr. Cannalonga, who said that there was no such occurrence. Therefore that he couldn't say or give any list of places. If you want to bring out this list of places I think it is competent.

The Witness: What is the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Mr. Cannalonga just started discussing the different places he stopped at since he left Reno, Nevada, so I just wrote the names down as he named them off.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you write these names down in his presence? A. Yes, sir.

Q. While he was talking? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this on the same night when you told him that you were going to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he know from the conversation that you had with him that night, Mr. Crayeraft, whether or not you were going to be a witness and testify in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor. How could this witness know what was in Cannalonga's mind? [7313] Maybe he does.

Presiding Inspector: Strictly that is objectionable.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: I said "From any conversations."

I will withdraw that.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was there any conversation that night, Mr. Craycraft, as to whether or not you were coming to San Francisco to be a witness in this case?

A. I told him that you had called me around five o'clock and requested that I come to San Francisco to be a witness, and I asked him if there was any further information he could give me before I left. That is when he gave me the list of the names, and the note to Harry Bridges.

Q. Now, on a prior occasion did you take notes of any of the things that Mr. Cannalonga told you? A. Once.

Q. When was that?

A. On Wednesday night, April 30th.

Q. And how did that occur?

A. Well, while he was giving me this information I made a few notes on it and then before I left I read it back to him and told him what I had down.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, your Honor, I have both of the documents that the witness has referred to; one is an envelope [7314] and one is a slip of paper. Except in so far as they are corroborative of the witness' testimony I don't know that they are of great importance.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think so. You have got the fact that he made these notes.

Mr. Gladstein: And read them back.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: The fact that he claims to have made the notes. I don't think the notes themselves are material. They weren't made in the course of business.

Mr. Gladstein: That is true.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On the Monday night before you left, Mr. Craycraft, did you read back to Mr. Cannalonga the notes that you made concerning the itinerary?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he make any corrections?

A. It seems to me—I haven't seen those since I have been here—it seems like there are one or two where I drew lines and added more information in. I believe there are one or two places on the notes.

Q. From what source did that information come?

A. Mr. Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: Have you nearly finished?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; almost. [7315]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga, before coming here to testify today did you have occasion to attempt to learn from the Portland Stevedoring Company, in Portland, Oregon, what their records showed as to the work done by certain stevedoring gangs aboard the ship West Cussetta on May 3 and on May 4? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. To whom did you speak?

A. I received a telephone call from you on Thursday noon of last week——

Presiding Inspector: Who did you speak to of the company?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who, at the company, did you talk with, Mr. Craycraft, concerning this? A. Mr. Webber.

Q. Who is he? A. Timekeeper.

Q. When did you have occasion to talk with him? A. Saturday morning.

Q. Of which week? A. Last week.

Q. Did you ask him for copies of the records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you discuss with him the manner in which those [7316] records are kept?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did that discussion consist of?

Presiding Inspector: This is the same as was given by the stevedore.

Mr. Grossman: These are company records prepared from the records, prepared by the foreman. In other words, the company takes his reports and makes up their reports and, therefore, this is what is in their files as their report of what happened.

Mr. Gladstein: I might state, your Honor, that I have here——

Presiding Inspector: Do you deem this of any great importance after you have these slips of this other witness?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: These are records, which are the company records.

Presiding Inspector: They are all made out from the original of those slips?

Mr. Gladstein: They are made up also in this respect, that is, they do show the breaking down of winches——

Mr. Grossman: They show this much, in addition, and only in addition: They show the company's acceptance of these records by incorporating them into theirs; otherwise they just represent a report of the foreman, such as we have had.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose there will be any [7317] contradiction of that except as already in the record?

Mr. Grossman: I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. You may go on.

It is now a quarter to one. We will recess until two o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:45 P.M. a recess was taken until 2:00 P.M. of the same date.) [7318]

After Recess
2:00 O'clock P.M.

ROSCO GEORGE CRAYCRAFT

called as a witness in surrebuttal on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Mrs. King told me that Mr. Bridges would be five or ten minutes.

Mr. Gladstein: What was the last question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Is the Alien's presence waived?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, we will waive it; we will waive Mr. Bridges' presence.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Direct Examination
(Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Crayeraft, in this discussion you had with this Mr. Webber of the Portland Stevedoring Company what did that discussion consist of with respect to how these daily time reports are made up and kept?

A. Those are made up daily.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to this line of inquiry.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I suppose this is really incompetent.

Mr. Gladstein: It is hearsay, I admit. [7319]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but it seems to me——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): And on a collateral matter, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, on a collateral matter. You are simply going to corroborate the testimony of the other witness?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, but if your Honor doesn't——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Oh, I will take it, then. I will take it over your objection. It will be just that they have taken their records from this and from, I suppose, the statements, perhaps, of Cannalonga, overtime statements.

Mr. Grossman: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not overtime statements.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes, the overtime records.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not of Cannalonga, as I understand it.

Presiding Inspector: He made out the overtime records.

Mr. Gladstein: Those are not involved here.

Presiding Inspector: They are not involved. The Cannalonga overtime record is not involved.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you answer that, Mr. Craycraft?

The Witness: Let's have the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did your discussion consist of with respect to how the records of the stevedoring company are made up and kept with respect to daily time reports just briefly? [7320]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. The gang foremen are instructed to put down the time they start, then, the amount of time they lose in rigging up or rigging tents and so forth, then the amount of time that is spent in hoisting cargo. Then, if there is a breakdown of the winches that runs a steady length of time they are to put that on the time sheet and that will be at the bottom of the time sheets. That shows any prolonged breakdowns, but any stoppage of the winch for just a few minutes doesn't appear on the time sheets.

Q. Now, what does the company do with the reports that are made by the gang foremen?

A. They take from those reports and charge back to the steamship company itself for the lost time.

Q. And does the stevedoring company make up records of its own based on the records made up by the men who were on the job?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to this, your Honor. It is certainly not the best evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Well, if we do this we will have to just wait until they have sent for someone from Portland. If you want to insist on it I will rule with you. It seemed to me that it was a very immaterial point.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if it is immaterial, then, of [7321] course——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Because they have already got it in the case. I will exclude it.

Mr. Gladstein: You may cross examine. [7322]

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You many drinks did you have with Cannalonga on Saturday night, May 3?

Presiding Inspector: Is that anything that has been brought in here?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Not how many he had.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to know whether this witness was——

Presiding Inspector: I am going to confine you closely to the Direct examination.

Mr. Gladtsein: I call your attention to the fact that there has been no testimony regarding Mr. Craycraft and Mr. Cannalonga being together on Saturday night.

Presiding Inspector: We are in a position now where only legal evidence is competent.

Mr. Del Guercio: I started to ask one question and before an objection was made——

Presiding Inspector: I exclude it because I think it is an improper question under the circumstances.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Myron will take over the cross examination.

Presiding Inspector. No. You started the cross examination. You can proceed. [7323]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How many drinks did you have with Mr. Cannalonga on Satruday night, May 3rd?

A. None.

Q. Did you purchase any liquor for Cannalonga?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Huh? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. On our way from Third and Couch going down to the ship we stopped at a liquor store on Broadway, right across from the old Post Office.

Q. Whose permit did you use to purchase that?

A. My permit. Mr. Cannalonga went in the liquor store with me and paid for it.

Q. Cannalonga went in with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you purchase.

A. A fifth of rum—I don't know what brand.

Q. Did you give it to Cannalonga?

A. We went out to the car and he took a notion that he wanted some Coca Cola, and he walked down the street a block to get his Coca Cola, and I got in the car and drove on down and picked him up that [7324] bottle?

A. I never got on the ship.

Q. Did you go on the ship?

A. I never got out of the car.

Q. Is that your signature appearing on that slip?

A. (Examining signature) That is correct.

Q. Did you purchase a B. Government House

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

fifth of rum at that place, at that time indicated on this receipt? A. I signed a receipt.

Q. Huh?

A. I signed a receipt and Mr. Cannalonga paid for the whiskey, or rum, rather.

Q. Are you permitted, under the laws of the State of Oregon, to purchase liquor on your permit for somebody else?

A. I wouldn't say as to that. I know we go in quite often together.

Q. With Cannalonga?

A. No; different people.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this receipt in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Received.

(The receipt referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 291.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is the name of the girl that you say Cannalonga told you he had been with?

A. He called her Duval. [7325]

Q. How long had you know this girl?

A. I never seen her.

Q. Where does she live?

A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you ask Cannalonga where she lived?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. You never saw her? A. No, sir.

Q. And I suppose you have made a check of these tourist camps that you say Cannalonga gave you?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Objected to as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Sustained.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you made a check of the tourist camps?

Mr. Gladstein: Same objection.

Presiding Inspector: Sustained..

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What was your purpose in asking Cannalonga for the various places in which he stopped, said, he stopped with this girl?

A. Well, at the time I can't say that I really had any purpose. The man more or less volunteered the information.

Q. For your own information?

A. Well, I knew that I was coming to Frisco at the time [7326] and he gave it to me.

Q. You testified here this morning that you were on the ship to see Cannalonga there on Monday night, and that you told Cannalonga that Mr. Gladstein had told you that you were to appear in San Francisco to testify, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. What were you to testify about?

A. I was to testify on what had transpired in Portland over the period from April 30, when I talked to Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. Was that what Mr. Gladstein told you?

A. I couldn't say whether he definitely told me I was supposed to testify to everything or not; but I was given to understand that I was to come to San Francisco to testify.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. And did Mr. Gladstein tell you that you were to tell Cannalonga that you were coming down here to testify as to what Cannalonga had told you?

A. I don't recall him saying anything in regard to that. [7327]

Q. Well, now, just what did Mr. Gladstein say in that connection?

A. He asked me if I would come on to San Francisco that night, that it might be possible that I would have to go on the witness stand the following day. I told him that I had already made arrangements with Mr. Cannalonga to go to Seattle, that I would have to go down and tell him it couldn't be done, and I would have to get someone else to take him to Seattle.

Q. Now, was this over the telephone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did Mr. Gladstein, at what part of the conversation did Mr. Gladstein tell you to go down and tell Cannalonga?

A. I can't say he told me any part; that was up to my own judgment.

Q. You testified, did you not, that Gladstein had told you to tell Cannalonga that you were coming down here to San Francisco to testify?

A. No, I didn't say it that way. I said that Mr. Gladstein had told me over the phone to get ready to come on to San Francisco that night, it looked like I might have to go on the stand the following day.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Now, Gladstein knew at that time that Cannalonga was up there in Portland, didn't he?

A. That is right. [7328]

Q. And he knew that you were going to see him?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, up to that time Cannalonga hadn't refused to come down to testify, had he?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Gladstein that Cannalonga had refused to come down?

A. No, sir. I told him that he was willing to come down, only he wanted to go to Seattle first.

Q. How many times were you on the ship with Cannalonga on Sunday? A. Sunday?

Q. May the 4th? A. Once.

Q. And were you in Cannalonga's stateroom?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you in Cannalonga's stateroom on Saturday at any time?

A. Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock when I went down to the Crown docks I found him in his stateroom.

Q. Now, did Cannalonga take any drinks then while you were with him? A. No, sir.

Q. Not a single one? A. No, sir. [7329]

Q. Now, going back to this office, Mr. Lord's office, in what building was that?

A. In the Guardian Building on the corner of Third and Alder.

Q. Now, you testified when you were on the stand here before that you were present throughout the entire proceedings that took place in his office?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That is correct.

Q. Is that still your testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you were not out of that room at any time while Mr. Gladstein was asking questions of Cannalonga; is that your testimony?

A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Lord didn't send you out of the room to see his wife during any time while Gladstein was asking questions?

A. That was before he started asking questions.

Q. Well, if Mr. Lord testified that you went out of the room at his request while questions were being asked, or during the time that questions were being asked of Cannalonga, Mr. Lord would be testifying falsely?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment. I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it. One witness can't characterize the testimony of another.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7330]

Q. Would you change your testimony if you knew that Mr. Lord had so testified?

A. No, sir.

Q. And is that the same thing for Shoemaker, if Shoemaker so testified? Would you change your testimony? A. No, sir.

Q. Who made the arrangements for securing Mr. Lord's office? A. I did.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. You did. When did you make those arrangements?

A. Ten o'clock Saturday night.

Q. Who asked you to, if anyone?

A. Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, all this has been gone into in the previous cross examination and has not been brought out at this time on the direct. Although, I don't have any objection to testing the witness' recollection I think it is wasting time in going over matters that have been covered.

Presiding Inspector: That may be true, but it was brought out under the testimony of Mr. Lord whom you brought back, or whom you swore. I will allow it.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, sir.

Presiding Inspector: You brought it into the case.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is there a question? [7331]

Presiding Inspector: You may answer.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you tell Mr. Lord that Mr. Gladstein had asked you to make arrangements to obtain his office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was that over the telephone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On Saturday night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At 10:00 o'clock?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you tell Mr. Lord about Mr. Gladstein?

A. I told him that we would have Mr. Cannalonga there in the morning and I also requested a Court Reporter, and Mr. Lord made the arrangements to get the reporter.

Q. As I understand it you also mentioned to Mr. Lord Cannalonga's name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you also tell Mr. Lord what you wanted to question Cannalonga about?

A. I don't recall whether I did or I didn't.

Q. Well, what is your best recollection?

A. Well, I requested him to be in his office; I re-
[7332] quested him to have a Court Reporter and I told him that we had Mr. Cannalonga coming up there.

Q. Now, did you tell Mr. Lord who Cannalonga was?

A. I could have told him he could have been the man who testified in a trial and wanted to change his testimony, but I wouldn't say for sure.

Q. That is in this telephone conversation on Saturday night?

A. That is the only time I talked to him over the telephone at any time.

Q. Did you talk to him more than once over the telephone on Saturday night? A. No.

Q. And did you arrange the time with Mr. Lord as to when you were to meet him in Lord's office?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what time did you say?

A. Eleven o'clock Sunday.

Q. Were you there—at one o'clock did you say?

A. No; eleven.

Q. Were you there at eleven?

A. No. I called Mr. Lord about eleven. I told him we would be a little bit late.

Q. Then you called him up again?

A. That was on Sunday morning, I called him at his [7333] office.

Q. Then, you called him twice; you called Mr. Lord twice, as I understand it, in relation to the taking of this statement in his office?

A. The one time——

Q. (Interposing) Once Saturday night and once Sunday morning?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you call him up any more times?

A. No.

Q. What did you tell him Sunday morning?

A. I told him that we would be a little bit late.

Q. You told who you would be a little bit late?

A. Mr. Gladstein, Mr. Cannalonga and myself.

Q. Did you mention Mr. Gladstein's name over the telephone Sunday morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you mention Cannalonga's name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you call from?

A. From the Clyde Hotel.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. And who was with you when you called?

A. Mr. Gladstein, Mr. Cannalonga and myself.

Q. Now, when did you arrive at Lord's room, or Lord's office?

A. I couldn't say exactly but it seemed like it was [7334] around 11:30.

Q. And who was there?

A. Mr. Lord and Mr. Shoemaker.

Q. Now, when did the questioning of Cannalonga begin with relation to the time you arrived in the office?

A. When I arrived in the office I introduced everyone around, and Mr. Lord requested I go downstairs and tell his wife that he had been detained a little while, for her to wait for him. Then, I came on back upstairs and I understood——

Q. (Interposing) How long were you gone?

A. Oh, I don't judge it would take over four or five minutes.

Q. To walk down?

A. No; fourth floor; two elevators.

Q. Now, had the examination of Cannalonga begun?

A. No; it just started when I came back.

Q. It had just started? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, what was being asked Cannalonga that long?

A. I just couldn't recall the exact question at the present time.

Q. But you do recall that a question was being asked? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. As you walked in?

A. When I came in they just started in because why I [7335] know it, they just started in, there was some little remark made at the time about—well, anyway, the remark was about in this way: "All you want to do is just give us what you did yesterday and tell us nothing but just the truth of it."

Q. And who said that?

A. Mr. Gladstein.

Q. And was any reply made by Cannalonga to that? A. That is what he did.

Q. What?

A. That is what he said he would do.

Q. And Cannalonga said he would?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did the reporter take that down?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Well, he was taking down everything that was said at the time?

Mr. Gladstein: That is calling for the conclusion of this witness.

Presiding Inspector: Ask him if he knows.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know if the reporter was taking it down? A. I couldn't say.

Q. That was the first thing that you heard when you came up to the office?

A. Yes, sir. [7336]

Q. You didn't hear anything else?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. I understood afterward while I was gone that in the meantime Mr. Lord had sworn Mr. Cannalonga in.

Q. Then you weren't there when Cannalonga was sworn in? A. No, sir.

Q. And you weren't there then at the beginning of the taking of the statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know?

A. I told you the remark that sets it in my mind.

Q. Have you seen the transcript?

A. I don't believe I have read it.

Q. The reporter's transcript?

A. I don't believe I have ever read it.

Q. I show you what purports to be, or has been introduced as the transcript of the questions and answers that were given, that were asked and given at that time. Will you show me where in this transcript you came back into the office?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as improper.

Presiding Inspector: If he can he may.

A. Well, it says here, "In the presence of Mr. William P. Lord, Mr. Richard Gladstein, Rosco Crayeraft and Ray D. Shoemaker." [7337]

Q. So what?

A. According to the transcript I was present when it started.

Q. That is the only thing that refreshes your memory, because that states there that you were present?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. No. I told you what refreshes my memory.

Q. This question that was being asked by Mr. Gladstein, can you find that anywhere in that transcript?

A. No. It don't say anything about it.

Q. Do you find Mr. Cannalonga's answer?

A. No.

Q. Now, isn't this the place where you returned into this room, when Mr. Gladstein was asking this question:

"Isn't that what you told me yesterday and isn't that the truth. I want you to answer only the truth and nothing else."

A. No. That was before any questions were asked at all when that statement was made.

Q. Well, I didn't finish. Will you wait until I finish:

"Isn't it true that before you signed even the first statement that you were under compulsion to do it and they knew it?"

Is that the question that Mr. Gladstein was asking when you came in?

A. No, because I know when I came in the room he [7338] was asking for the true statements, and what he had told us the previous day.

Q. He was asking those questions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to whether, what he had told you on the previous day was true? A. That is right.

Q. Then you weren't in the room when Mr. Gladstein asked him this question:

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

"Mr. Cannalonga, you were recently a witness in the Harry Bridges deportation case, were you not?"

You weren't there then, were you?

A. To the best of my recollection I was there from the time it began until it ended, outside of the couple of times that we stepped out.

Q. You just said that you got back in the office when Mr. Gladstein began asking questions as to what had occurred the previous day. Isn't that what you testified to?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you want to change that testimony?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the first question that appears in this transcript is this:

"Mr. Cannalonga, you were recently a witness in the Harry Bridges deportation case, were you not?" [7339]

And the answer appears:

"Yes."

Were you there then?

A. I heard all those statements, but here is one thing that makes it difficult to say this happened here and that happened then——

Q. (Interposing) What makes it difficult for you to say?

A. Because all those statements were made over a two-day period, on Saturday and Sunday morning, and then started in when I came up again.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. You were there for the purpose of noting everything that was said, weren't you?

A. That is correct.

Q. You were there because you knew Mr. Gladstein had told you that you would appear here to testify, weren't you?

A. No; not at that time.

Q. Isn't that why Mr. Gladstein wanted you in that room?

A. No, sir. Mr. Gladstein didn't request I stay or request I leave.

Q. You didn't take any notes then, did you?

A. No, sir; not with a court reporter taking it down.

Q. Now, you testified the last time you were on the stand here that when Cannalonga finally went out of that office you followed him out. Is that correct? [7340]

A. That is correct.

Q. You were with Cannalonga from the time he last left the office until the time he got on the elevator, weren't you?

A. No. There was a period of two or three minutes.

Q. When did you discover that interval?

A. Because he was talking to Bill Lord and I didn't want to break into it.

Q. What?

A. Because he was talking to Bill Lord and I didn't want to break into it.

Q. You saw him talking to Bill Lord?

A. At the elevator.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. At the elevator? A. Yes.

Q. Where were you?

A. I was down the hall.

Q. You were down what hall?

A. Well, it is about, oh, 60 or 75 feet, I guess, from the elevator to Bill Lord's office.

Q. Weren't you still holding on to Cannalonga?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you have your hands on him?

A. No, sir. Bill Lord was talking to him alone there. [7341]

Q. And you were how many feet away?

A. Oh, I was—I was out of earshot, but they were talking.

Q. Mr. Lord saw you, of course?

A. I imagine he did.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Lord?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he talk to you?

A. No, sir. I just passed Mr. Lord when he went on back in the office and I arranged with Cannalonga then to meet him that night.

Q. You went out the door with Cannalonga, didn't you—you were together when you went out the door? You testified in the last hearing you had your hands on his shoulder. Do you want to change that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have your hands on his shoulders as he was going out?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I don't think I had my hand right on his shoulder.

Q. What part of his body did you have your hand on?

A. On his shoulder, but not going out the door.

Q. Where did you go with Cannalonga when you went out?

A. We went down the hall.

Q. Toward what?

A. Toward the elevator. [7342]

Q. Did you stop at the elevator?

A. Cannalonga and Mr. Lord came by, and came out, and Mr.——

Q. (Interposing) You were with Cannalonga. When did Mr. Lord come out?

A. Well, I left Cannalonga there.

Q. Did Mr Lord come out before you?

A. I couldn't say. I wasn't paying any attention to Mr. Lord at the time.

Q. Who were you paying attention to?

A. I was talking to Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. Had Mr. Lord gone out of the room before you and Mr. Cannalonga stepped out?

A. Well, I wouldn't say for sure on that.

Q. Did he remain in the office?

A. I wouldn't say.

Q. Did I understand your testimony correctly the last time you testified, that Cannalonga jumped up and started out, and he was the first one to leave the office, is that correct?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: I think he is pressing him on this matter. I will allow it.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; but I think the question in its present form is objectionable.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps so, but I will allow it. [7343] Ask the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I believe there is a question pending.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: The question is whether that was your testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: That is why I think it is improper. The record speaks for itself.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is merely pressing him. Of course, ordinarily it isn't proper to ask what the testimony was. Under the circumstances I think Mr. Del Guercio is justified in asking that question.

By Mr. Del Guercio.

Q. Did you answer that last question?

The Witness: Let's have the question again.

(The question referred to was reread by the reporter as recorded.)

A. That is correct. He was the first one to leave the office.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And Mr. Lord remained behind in the office?

A. I wouldn't say to that.

Q. Had he gone out before Cannalonga? [7344]

A. I don't recall that. I know that Cannalonga and I were together, and I know when Mr. Lord came up to talk with him I went away because I didn't want to listen to the conversation.

Q. Did Mr. Lord come out when you were with Cannalonga? A. I couldn't say positively.

Q. How long were you with Cannalonga outside? A. At the elevator?

Q. Outside the office, before Mr. Lord came out?

A. I couldn't—before Mr. Lord came out?

Q. Yes.

A. There was only one thing that I was interested in myself, and that was what time I would see him that night to make arrangements for going to Seattle. I don't recall whether I was with him one minute or two minutes or not.

Q. Did you ask him that before Mr. Lord talked to him?

A. I talked to him after Lord left.

Q. You talked to him after Lord left?

A. About going to Seattle; yes.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then when you testified the last time that when you returned to the office after seeing Cannalonga go away, and you saw Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Lord, you weren't testifying [7345] correctly?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please explain that inconsistency?

A. Mr. Lord, Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Gladstein was in the office when I went back from the elevator.

Q. You just said Mr. Lord went down the elevator?

A. No, I didn't. I said Mr. Cannalonga went down the elevator.

Q. Where did Mr. Lord go?

A. He went back in his office.

Q. With you?

A. No, sir; I talked to Mr. Cannalonga after Mr. Lord did.

Q. Mr. Lord didn't go down the elevator?

A. No, sir.

Q. After he got through talking with Mr. Cannalonga he went back into the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you stayed out there and talked with Cannalonga for about how long?

A. Not over two minutes.

Q. And then you returned to the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Lord?

A. Yes, sir. And Mr. Lord gave me his key to his [7346] office and told me whenever we got ready to go to lock it.

Q. If you knew that Mr. Lored testified that right after he talked to Mr. Cannalonga he went down the elevator, would you want to change your testimony? A. No, sir.

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment. I want to point out that that is a misstatement in counsel's question of the record.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is not a misstatement, if your Honor please. We will check the record on that right now.

Presiding Inspector: I thought the testimony was that Mr. Lord did leave these people in his office.

Mr. Gladstein: As Mr. Crayeraft says; yes.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: There is no inconsistency there. But as expressed in the question of Mr. Del Guercio it is something along this line: He is asking, or saying that Mr. Lord testified that after talking to Mr. Cannalonga in the corridor Mr. Lord went down the elevator. That is not Mr. Lord's testimony.

Mr. Myron: That is a misstatement. The record will speak for itself.

Presiding Inspector: That was this morning. We haven't the record on that yet.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Lord didn't testify this morning. [7347]

Presiding Inspector: That is so; yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't have the transcript here on that, but the record will speak for itself.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

(Whereupon the Presiding Inspector referred to that portion of Mr. Lord's testimony referred to.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, what was the question? Let me hear it again.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I think that is the testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: I think that is the testimony. You take this and look at it.

(Whereupon the Presiding Inspector handed the document to Mr. Gladstein.)

Mr. Del Guercio: What page is that?

Presiding Inspector: Page 6958 and 9. I think I will allow that.

Mr. Gladstein: It has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: It has been answered? Will you read the answer?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Witness: Well, I never got a chance to finish it, though. [7348]

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, explain if you want to.

The Witness: The reason why I know he went back into the office and all of them were in the office, when he got back into the office Mr. Lord asked us how much longer we would be. They said

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

"Just a few more minutes." And Mr. Lord gave me the keys to his office to lock up the office, which I returned to him the next morning. Mr. Gladstein and Mr. Shoemaker then made arrangements on getting the transcript down to San Francisco. Mr. Lord did leave then after giving me the keys.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. So that what you are trying to say is that you are positive in your testimony as to that incident?

A. Yes; he got his hat and coat and gave me the key.

Q. And Mr. Lord is wrong?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment. That is improper.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw that.

Presiding Inspector: That is a conclusion which may or may not be drawn.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, how many times did you see Mrs. Lord in that office?

A. Mrs. Lord never did come in the office.

Q. At any time?

A. She just came to the door. [7349]

Q. She sent who to the door?

A. She just came to the door.

Q. When was that?

A. The door of the inner office.

Q. When?

A. Oh, not very long before we finished.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Before you arrived, then?

A. What is that?

Q. Before you arrived?

A. No; I was sitting in the room.

Q. You testified that Mrs. Lord took Lord to the office. A. Pardon? I don't understand.

Q. No, I am afraid you don't.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't see how anybody could.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't think you would either.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you explain the question?

Presiding Inspector: Ask the next question. Let's not have any by-play.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When did Mrs. Lord take Mr. Lord to the office?

A. I don't know. Mr. Lord was in the office with Mr. Shoemaker when we got there.

Q. How many times did you see Mrs. Lord in the office while this incident was going on? [7350]

A. Mrs. Lord only came to the door once that I ever seen.

Q. When was that?

A. That was along towards—well, just a little while prior to the time we finished she asked Mr. Lord "How much longer will you be?" He says "Not very much longer." She went on back down the hall.

Q. She was not there, then, at the beginning of the taking of the testimony?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. No; she was sitting in her car down on the street.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because I went down and seen her.

Q. All the time? A. No, sir, just the once.

Q. Now, how many times did you go out of the office while questions were being asked of Cannalonga? A. None.

Q. What? A. None.

Q. At no time? A. No, sir.

Q. How many times did you step out with Cannalonga? A. Twice.

Q. Twice. You have related those in your previous testimony? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't want to change any of that?

[7351]

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you went out twice with Cannalonga and brought him back, didn't you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Then, you went out with him again, the third time, when he finally left, Cannalonga finally left?

A. At the elevator.

Q. That is three times you went out?

A. That is right.

Q. Did Cannalonga leave the office at any other time than those three times? A. No, sir.

Q. You are positive of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I didn't quite get your testimony there as to when Mrs. Lord came up to the office. When was that? Would you mind repeating it again?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Well, it was sometime prior to the time, whenever it was, that we broke up; I couldn't say.

Q. Well, how long before?

A. Well, I couldn't say whether it would be ten minutes or fifteen minutes.

Q. And did she go out again?

A. She went on down the hall.

Q. Did she remain in the office any length of time? [7352]

A. She might have remained in the outer office. I didn't go out in the outer office to see.

Q. Well, did you see Mrs. Lord when you stepped out to the hallway with Cannalonga the last time? A. No, sir.

Q. She wasn't in the outer office then, was she?

A. I never seen her. There is three or four offices there. She could have been in any of them.

Q. Well, now, you saw Mr. Lord out in the hallway, you say, with Cannalonga?

A. That is right.

Q. Was Mrs. Lord there?

A. I never seen her.

Q. Did you see Mr. Lord go down in the elevator?

A. No sir; I stayed in the room with Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Gladstein after Mr. Lord left.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Crayeraft, the word "hall" has been used a number of times. Will you please describe the set-up of Mr. Lord's offices in order to explain to his Honor whether there is a hall within the suite of offices as well as a corridor in the building between the elevator and the suite of offices?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, he has already [7353] given a description of——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Interposing) Well, would you draw a picture of it? Do you think you could do that?

Mr. Del Guercio: He has already told——

A. (Interposing) Well, I can draw pretty close.

Presiding Inspector: When did he do that?

Mr. Del Guercio: In the questioning.

Mr. Myron: In the questioning.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) He was directing his attention to——

The Witness: (Interposing) Do you mean when you come up the elevator?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Leave out all the elevator part. Suppose you first of all draw your recollection of his suite of offices.

A. (Drawing on paper.)

Q. May I see it?

A. (Handing paper to Mr. Gladstein) I don't know; it is not very good drawing, but that is the way they are set-up.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. All right. Now, what does this represent (Indicating)?

Presiding Inspector: Better look at this, Mr. Del [7354] Guercio.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want to come up here and look at it?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What does this represent, Mr. Craycraft (Indicating)?

A. Mr. Lord's office is in the corner (Indicating). This is the hallway going down to the main floor (Indicating).

Q. Will you mark the hallway that goes between the main floor and Mr. Lord's office, draw a line through it and bring it out and mark an "X" on it, if you will.

A. (Witness marks drawing.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this redirect examination?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what this is.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, we object to it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you also——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) This is, I suppose, to elucidate this matter of there being, as it is claimed, two passageways that may have been called halls, only to cover that.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't question the witness at all on that. [7355]

Presiding Inspector: What?

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't question the witness at all on that.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but the witness has used "Going into the hall" and so forth. He wants to know what he means by that, if there is any possibility of error; usually there wouldn't be.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you have used the word "corridor" here on a portion of the drawing. What does that represent? A. To the elevator.

Q. And to the elevator from what?

A. To the elevator from Mr. Lord's suite, the entire suite.

Q. All right. Now, in what office room of the Lord suite did the deposition take place?

A. Mr. Lord's.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer this in evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object.

Presiding Inspector: Let me see that.

(Whereupon the witness handed document to Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think this will help any, Mr. Gladstein. [7356]

(Testimony of Roscoe George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think it clarifies the record in this respect, your Honor: There has been testimony with respect to Mrs. Lord coming to the door, for example. Now, in the cold record it can't be told whether Mr. Craycraft was referring to the door to the office suite or to the door to Mr. Lord's office.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think this will help either.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, then, I will ask him these questions.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you, in your testimony, Mr. Craycraft, referred to Mrs. Lord coming to the door to which door were you referring?

A. To the door in Mr. Lord's own office, or that is, his private room.

Presiding Inspector: From what? The door in the private office. What is the other side?

The Witness: Yes. Well, all of it belongs in a suite there.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but what is it there? Is it another office?

The Witness: No; that is going up the hallway.

Presiding Inspector: What hallway?

The Witness: When you come down the corridor and come into the reception room. [7357]

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: Then, there is a door going into a little hallway up past the three offices on the left-hand side. Then, Mr. Lord's office is the third door at the end of the hallway.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Now, when you say "hallway" you mean within the private office?

The Witness: That is it.

Presiding Inspector: And when you say "corridor" you mean the one that is outside of the private office?

The Witness: Going to the elevator.

Presiding Inspector: Going to the elevator.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not sure that the word "corridor" has been used by counsel on either side in this case.

Presiding Inspector: I am not either; I don't know that it has.

Mr. Gladstein: That is why I think this should be admitted in evidence, your Honor.

I will ask one more question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Does this document which you have just drawn, Mr. Craycraft, represent—is it, in your best judgment, and based on your recollection and upon your observations a fair representation of the set-up of the Lord suite of offices in the Guardian Building? [7358]

A. Yes, outside of I haven't drawn the dimensions correct.

Mr. Gladstein: I renew my offer.

Presiding Inspector: Well, if you want it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We haven't brought out any questions about the office.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I know. I will take it.

I will ask him a question or two further to clarify my mind on it.

Where are the elevators in this place?

The Witness: (Drawing on paper.)

Presiding Inspector: Where is the lavatory?

The Witness: Right in here (Drawing on paper).

Presiding Inspector: Across from the elevator?

The Witness: Right in here, on the same side (Indicating).

Presiding Inspector: The elevator is, as you go out the corridor, so-called outer hall from Mr. Lord's suite you find the elevators opposite the way you are walking?

The Witness: When you go right down the corridor and you get to the end of the corridor there is a little jog this way (Indicating). Your elevators are sitting there (Indicating).

Presiding Inspector: A little jog to the left where the elevators are; a little jog to the right where the lavatory is?

The Witness: Yes, sir. [7359]

Presiding Inspector: How far is it from the toilet room to the elevators?

The Witness: Oh, twenty, thirty feet, I judge.

Presiding Inspector: Twenty, thirty feet. I will take it.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 62.)

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that all, Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to ask anything more?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, we have no more witnesses except Mr. Bridges. In case the Government has another witness, which they indicated they might have, we suggest that it would be proper for them to put on the witness at this time because we intend to end the case with Mr. Bridges. If they put on another witness it will require us to put him on the stand again which we think is not desirable or in the regular order of things.

Presiding Inspector: That is a suggestion to you, Mr. Del Guercio: You don't have to accept it unless you wish.

Mr. Del Guercio: No; we would rather follow the usual procedure.

Presiding Inspector: Call Mr. Bridges, then.

[7360]

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES,

called as a witness in surrebuttal in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: The oath previously given,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

as I have told the other witnesses, continues to bind the witness.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever state at the time of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Convention in Seattle, 1935, to Mr. Barlow either in words or in substance "The only way that a young fellow could get ahead in the labor movement today is to join the Communist Party?" A. No.

Q. Did you at that time or that place make that statement to anyone?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Have you ever made that statement to anyone at anytime or any place?

A. Not that I ever remember; I am sure I haven't.

Q. Has Sam Darcy ever been at your home?

A. No.

Q. Has Harry Lundeberg ever been at your home? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall when Lundeberg was at your home?

A. Yes, in the latter part of 1935, September, around September. [7361]

Q. Is that the only time? A. Yes.

Q. Was he there for dinner?

A. I believe he was.

Q. Do you remember whether anyone else was there?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I am not sure; I think my wife, another woman and two children, the boy and the girl.

Q. During the course of the last few years, Mr. Bridges, have you had occasion to disagree fundamentally with Harry Lundeberg on trade union policies?

A. Yes, on numerous questions.

Q. When was the first time that you remember any fundamental disagreement with Harry Lundeberg on trade union questions?

A. October, 1935.

Q. What was that issue?

A. October or November.

Q. What was that issue?

A. On account of my taking a position against a policy that was called job action, that is, the type of job action that was taking place at that time, and I was instrumental in seeing that a special convention of the Maritime Unions was called, and at that convention I introduced a resolution against continuing the job action policy that was being carried on at that time in the way it was being carried [7362] on, and suggested a different type of policy, and that caused the first basic disagreement between myself and Harry Lundeberg. It came about, of course, the Maritime Federation had been formed in May, 1935 and I had sponsored and nominated Lundeberg and swung votes to him and he was elected, and the special emergency convention, we called, came about because of the policy he was following as the President of the Maritime Federation and the use of this particular method of job action on ships that would start with just a handful of men but involved us time and time again in what verged on a complete coastwise tie-up. For example, it might be over the grievance of one man. And this convention was called to stop that policy continuing any further.

I introduced the resolution and it developed into a pretty deep breach at that time and from then on, why, we have disagreed on practically everything else as far as trade union policy is concerned.

Q. Do you remember a dispute involving the ship called the Vancouver? Oh, excuse me. That was not the name of the ship.

Do you remember a hot cargo situation involving Vancouver hot cargo? A. Yes.

Q. Was there any disagreement in connection with any issue developing out of that dispute in which you and Lundeberg [7363] disagreed fundamentally?

A. Only towards the end. At first we both worked together on it. The dispute concerned a strike of a crew of a ship in Vancouver, British Columbia, one of Lundeberg's,—I mean one of the West Coast ships, and the crew of the ship following this job action policy struck the ship in British Columbia which was recognized, of course, as a foreign port. The longshoremen in that port struck in sympathy with them and they were discharged. Eventually they were locked out, and they discharged the crew of that ship and put a new crew on it later on when she was in San Francisco. I don't know if they discharged it before she got to San Francisco. And the ship was declared unfair. Well, the seamen had nobody on the ship and the only ones that were really affected were the longshoremen and it eventually developed to an entire—to a complete shut-down of the entire Port of San Francisco and began to spread up and down the Pacific Coast, and when I thought it was too hot to take it any more I wanted to call it off and Lundeberg insisted that it continue.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: When was this?

The Witness: November—October, 1935, October, 1935, October or November. I can't remember the exact date. I could check the records. I can check it because Judge Marcus C. Sloss was our coastwise arbitrator. Judge Sloss called in as arbitrator, had ruled against us and ordered the longshoremen [7364] to cease this support because they were in violation of their contract, and the only one that was affected and had their men out was myself as President of the San Francisco Local. None of the seamen's unions were affected; they had all their men working. We were the ones that were completely on the spot. It was very easy for them to say "Let the thing go until it cracks." They had no men affected and Lundeberg refused, as President of the Maritime Federation, where he was in an official position on a coastwise basis to do it, to aid me in calling off the dispute.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Vancouver was involved because the strike was called in Vancouver at that time and we were really supporting locked out men in British Columbia and we had San Francisco shut down in support of locked out——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Now, if your Honor please, we are relating disagreements here and the witness is relating the story.

Presiding Inspector: Well, the story involves the disagreement, I think.

The Witness: It was the basic disagreement, your Honor, that led up to everything, after that a complete disagreement on basic trade union policies.

Mr. Del Guercio: Disagreement by him, no doubt.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I am not sure. I think he is [7365] justified——

The Witness: (Interposing) Anyway, I had to move to get the matter straightened out, and I did, and the attitude taken by Lundeberg and certain other people he was working with was an act to move to see that I was condemned or criticised, which I was in some quarters, except for my own membership which supported me generally.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you have any disagreement with Lundeberg with respect to the steam schooner strike?

A. Yes, very definitely; that was in December, 1935. It was not a strike. Lundeberg had the coastwise ships under contract at that time. His membership on a coastwise basis had advocated to submit the issues on the coastwise ships, in this case the main one being a six-hour day, to arbitration. Although his membership had voted that way Lundeberg tried a maneuver, called job action. In other words, he tied up every coastwise vessel for a six-hour day and then tried to explain that it was not a strike, that the men just quit at the end of three a'clock every day, and as soon as the employers agreed that they would only work them six hours a day that everything would be all right. The publicity in the official leaflets that were put out at this time said "This is not a strike; this is merely a little job action we are taking"; in other words, a complete bad policy of trade unionism. [7366]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

You can't go after a major demand in conditions such as the reduction of work from eight to six hours work a day.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that be stricken, your Honor. He has given not only the cause of the disagreement but also his conclusions as to what was wrong.

Mr. Grossman: He is giving his views——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) He is giving his views as to how he was in conflict with Lundeberg. I think I will let it stand.

The Witness: Well, that was all. Of course, the results speak for themselves. He was completely whipped in the—I mean, the strike was completely whipped, although we swung in and tried to patch it up and support it as much as we could, but you were beaten before you start so, of course, that didn't strengthen any relationship between ourselves or our various organizations.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you have any disagreement with Lundeberg with respect to the question of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific becoming independent of the ISU?

A. Yes, very definitely. That started around the same time.

Q. What was the issue of that disagreement?

A. Lundeberg attempted to get me to work with him, to have the Sailor's Union expelled from the American Federation of Labor. The steam schooner strike, or job action, and [7367] all these other actions that he was taking were being taken deliberately.

Q. Did he state that to you?

A. He talked it over with me many times and attempted to have me support the program, and I was opposed to it, and he kept on advocating and building the set-up in such a way that—and the union was taking these actions in such a way that eventually the International Officials had no recourse but to expel the union, which they eventually did. The night the union was expelled—Lundeberg knew weeks before the union was going to be expelled. I knew three or four days before the Union was going to be expelled and I spoke to Lundeberg three or four days before the Charter was lifted and urged him to quit before it was too late and to try and keep the union and fight from within the American Federation instead of following the line he wished to follow, that was, have the union expelled, and it eventually happened. The night it was expelled he put a resolution on the floor of the meeting to form a new union closely following the lines of the IWW, called the Industrial Seafaring Union, or something like that.

Q. Did you express your complete disagreement with that policy to Lundeberg?

A. Very definitely, I did, yes; and to others. We were in complete disagreement on that because it affected us. He followed it up; the plans were pretty complete. He [7368] had a maritime—we had this Maritime Federation. His ideas run along the line of building an independent West Coast labor movement separate and apart from the American Federation of Labor and using the per capita tax generally paid to the American Federation of Labor to organize more workers in our independent industrial labor set-up for the Pacific Coast. Following the expulsion of the Sailor's Union he then proceeded, according to his plans, to call upon every union to support only the Sailor's Union of the Pacific as the West Coast seafaring union, and not to work any ships that the International A. F. of L. Unions would put any men on except his men. And, of course, the main and most powerful factor to enforce a set-up like that was only the longshoremen. He could not accomplish it any other way. He had to have our support; he had to have some agreement in the plan. When he could not receive any support, although he received the support of some other longshore groups, he went ahead anyway and the union was eventually expelled on January 1936.

Q. Did you openly oppose him on the question of a coastwise refusal to work on ships that did not employ SUP members?

A. I certainly did, because I knew what was behind the plan. We always agreed and always generally have supported a bona fide strike or tie-up, but in this case where I knew what was behind the plan, when he introduced the resolu- [7369] tion, for example, in the San Francisco Maritime Council, which was the largest and most powerful Council on the Coast—I was president of it—I opposed the resolution, and the resolution was defeated, and that resolution called to cease work on any ship that did not carry a crew of SUP workers.

The next thing, of course,—since the set-up had, of course, gone that far, the next thing I knew, because he discussed it with me, was to make a move to jump all ships whether they were East Coast or West Coast ships.

Q. Did you have any fundamental trade union disagreement with Harry Lundeberg in the 1936 Maritime Federation convention?

A. Oh, yes, I think we disagreed on almost everything there.

Q. Do you remember any of the major disagreements at that convention between you and him?

A. We disagreed on the selection of officers. We disagreed on the policies laid out to govern the official paper of the federation. We disagreed on the reports, for example, of the various activities that had gone in the year previous to the forming of the federation, some of them which I have related here. We disagreed on the future program for the federation and such things as what was going to be done when the agreements opened—when the agreements expires in September 30th of that year. The federation was in June. [7370] We disagreed on the position in regard to longshore work on coastwise vessels, and the most basic disagreement again was this question of job action which was at the root of the whole thing again, because I can recollect distinctly Lundeberg making the motion that any time the majority of a crew of a ship wished to take action to tie that ship up the entire coast swing in behind them with their support, and that official motion was made in the minutes and was defeated, but that was the basic matter below everything, although there were a few things that I think we agreed on.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

[7371]

Q. Did you disagree with him on any question involving the organization of certain racial groups or the abolition of certain racial discriminations?

A. That was in 1934. That question kept on bobbing up with the Sailors Union, not so much with Lundeberg, but when Lundeberg moved into the leadership of the Sailors Union he followed the same policy.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

But the question regarding the discrimination against racial groups stemmed back from 1934 and prior to 1934.

Q. Did you disagree with Lundeberg on that trade union question?

A. Oh, yes; always have.

Q. What was yours as against his position?

A. That is, against the refusal to organize negroes, Chinese, Filipinos, or Japanese; yes.

Q. What was your position?

A. We organized everybody that worked for a living.

Q. What was his position?

A. That is, if we can, if they will join our organization. We don't discriminate against anybody because of race or color.

Q. What was his position?

A. He excludes them and discriminates against them, and has tied up ships to drive them off, and has called upon us to support his tie-ups to drive them off the ships. [7372]

We have always refused.

Q. Did you have any fundamental trade union disagreement with Harry Lundeberg at about the beginning of the 1936 Strike with respect to the beginning of the strike? A. Very definitely.

Q. What were the issues of that disagreement?

A. Lundeberg refused to work with the other unions. Lundeberg did not want to see his members on our Joint Committee.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

He refused to take a strike vote, preferring to let a lockout occur.

He refused to cooperate with us in the postponement of the strike date or of the deadline date of the agreements expiring; and eventually, when the strike actually took place, he almost completely disrupted the beginning of the strike by beginning to tie up ships three or four days ahead of the actual strike date.

The way the situation developed was this: The agreements, all our agreements expired simultaneously on September 30. The waterfront employers and the steamship owners had notified us that unless agreements were reached on September 30 they would shut down and work would stop. They prepared to have the shut-down. There was a tremendous amount of activity for three or four months, day and night, prior to the actual expiration date. The employers had openly told us, [7373] "Everything goes down on September 30." Lundeberg agreed with them. He said, "Let the employers shut down and lock down, and the onus of the lockout, so far as the Government and the public is concerned, will be on the employers."

Our policy was different. We worked to demand an extension of the shut-down date, that is, the expiration of the agreements, which was September 30; and we worked in close cooperation with the national forces at that time—I mean the Government forces,—and eventually the employers, very much against their will, were forced to grant a 15-day extension of the agreements.

That had the effect, although they had made all plans for a shut-down, had stopped the shipment of all freight to the docks—there was barely a drizzle of freight going to the docks, and there was none on the docks at that time, and practically all the ships were at sea.

So the strategy of it was that when the 15-day extension was forced upon them they were required to practically renew operations, or begin operations all over again.

After the first 15-day extension we pushed for another 15-day extension and got it.

The strike took place at the end of the second 15-day extension.

So Lundeberg, he was following a different policy, and wanted to have the same shut-down September 30.

Then, of course, our policy basically disagreed on that. [7374] We won but, nevertheless——

Q. (Interposing) During the course of the strike was there any fundamental disagreement with him?

A. Yes; almost the entire strategy of the strike we had disagreed upon.

Q. What about the conclusion of the strike, was there any fundamental disagreement as to when and how the strike should end?

A. Very definitely.

Lundeberg, of the Sailors Union of the Pacific,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

and the Firemen's Union, negotiated agreements very suddenly without the Committees of the other unions knowing it.

First of all, all the Committees of the unions met together. We had an agreement among ourselves that every time there was a meeting with any group with the employers a report would be made to the entire committee.

The first thing we knew we found Ferguson, of the Firemen's Union, and Lundeberg, of the Sailors, meeting secretly with the employers and negotiating secretly for their particular groups. They reached an agreement and then tried to put their men back to work and leave the rest of us high and dry even though we had not yet had a meeting with the employers.

We took the matter before the rank and file of the Sailors Union and the Firemen's Union, and they went along with us, and they would not go along with their own officials [7375] until we had an agreement.

As soon as they had negotiated those agreements, and when we had almost arrived at agreements for the other groups, tentative agreements, at that time the Copeland Discharge Book, continuous discharge book, became an issue. It was passed by Congress——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If the Court please, I have been sitting by patiently here listening to all of this. I don't believe it is proper.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, this is to show bias on the part of Lundeberg.

Mr. Del Guercio: There should be some limit to it.

Presiding Inspector: It is to show bias against this witness. I think it is perhaps over-detailed. I think the substance of these disputes, to show bias is competent.

I think you are going pretty far in some of these matters.

Mr. Grossman: We need a certain amount of details so that the skeleton has some meat on it, especially, for the people who don't understand the situation.

Presiding Inspector: We are getting not only meat, but fat.

Mr. Grossman: The reason that there is so much is that there is such a basis, so much basis for bias on the part of Mr. Lundeberg, in other words, so much fundamental disagreement.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it, but I suggest [7376] to the witness——

Mr. Del Guercio: May I be heard on that?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe it shows anything of the kind. It is admitted, everybody knows that there is disagreement between this man and Harry Lundeberg. There is no question about that. Their policies do differ.

Presiding Inspector: But I think they have a right to put it in the record. Everybody may not know it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That is the purpose of it, I think Lundeberg should have the opportunity to come back and give his side of the disagreements.

Presiding Inspector: Of course he is, in the course of defending his side. That part, of course, is not particularly material.

I will suggest to the witness that he be as clear in showing what these disagreements are as possible without elaborating.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You were discussing the issue of the Copeland book. What was the issue on which you disagreed with Lundeberg with relation to the Copeland book?

A. After all the unions had reached tentative agreements on the strike issue, as to hours, wages and working conditions, Lundeberg proposed that we continue the strike until the Government abandoned the issuance of the Copeland [7377] book that had just become a law in Congress.

Q. What position did you take on that?

A. To return to work, since we won our strike demands, and deal with the Copeland book through the Governmental agencies and through proper amendments through Congress and through administration agencies, which was eventually done.

I think the point should be clear on all these points that I am enumerating here that in practically every case Lundeberg was defeated on them.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you state in this last instance that the sole disagreement at the end of the strike was the fact that Lundeberg wanted to continue the strike for that sole issue, and you were opposed to continuing the strike for that sole issue?

A. That is a matter of record with not only the Government agencies and the Department of Commerce, and the Department of Labor, but it is a matter of official record in the labor circles, and the labor council here.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that that be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: That is substantially what he said before. It is repetition, but I will let it stand. I think it adds very little to what you said before. It summarizes it.

By Mr. Grossman: [7378]

Q. Was there any disagreement on trade union questions between you and Lundeberg involving a ship called the Coloradian? A. Yes.

Q. What was the essence of that disagreement?

A. The Steamer Coloradian was in Puerto Rico and——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, this isn't anything to refute anything Mr. Lundeberg mentioned.

Presiding Inspector: But to show bias. There was an acrimonious controversy between these men at all times.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think that the fact that there was a dispute would be sufficient for that purpose, and not the details of the dispute. I believe that the details should be stricken out.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think that the extreme details should not be given, but what the general gist of it was I think should be taken.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is difficult to determine what are the extreme details and what aren't details.

Presiding Inspector: I will ask Mr. Bridges to confine it to the mere essence of the dispute.

The Witness: That is all I am doing.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. (Continuing): The Coloradian was in Puerto Rico, [7379] and the crew walked off, the entire crew, sailors, firemen and cooks, in support of a longshore strike there. The longshoremen were not affiliated with us. They were A. F. of L.

Lundeberg put a crew of strike breakers on that ship, in place of the crew that walked off, including his own men. He was condemned by every Maritime union.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was he condemned by you?

A. Not me personally. I had no personal animosity.

Q. I mean, did you make an open condemnation of the activity that you have described?

A. An official one, yes.

Q. Have you had any fundamental disagreement with Lundeberg on the question of longshore work being performed by members of the SUP on steam schooners?

Mr. Del Guercio: Inasmuch as this is being gone into I will object to the form of the question as being leading. The first question that was asked was if he had any fundamental disagreement with Lundeberg on labor matters; and the witness related them. Then counsel got into every specific one and is continuing to do so. We can keep this up all day and not get through.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it, though.

Mr. Grossman: It will save time by leading.

Presiding Inspector: You haven't much more?

[7380]

Mr. Grossman: No.

A. There is a very fundamental disagreement between both our organizations.

Q. What was the fundamental issues on which you disagreed?

A. Lundeberg and the employers wished to use seamen for longshore work at less than half the wages than they are required to pay longshoremen, and it has been a running battle for the last three or four years now. There is no question about the fact that the sailors work eight hours a day and we work a six-hour day, and they get less money per hour by far than our men. They work for less than half of the hourly wage we get, and the same applies on straight and overtime.

Q. Do they do the same work on the boat?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Exactly the same work.

Q. On the same boats?

A. On the same boats. They might work right alongside of each other. One man might be on one end of a piece of lumber, one of our men, and one of Lundeberg's men might be on the other end of the same piece of lumber.

I will admit that the relations are a little too strained for that now.

Q. Has there been any fundamental disagreement between you and Lundeberg on the question of whether the Sailors [7381] Union of the Pacific should affiliate, or should have affiliated with the CIO? A. Very definitely.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. At one time his membership voted by secret ballot to affiliate. There was no question of the vote that it was overwhelmingly in favor of the affiliation. The ballots were destroyed by Lundeberg, until such a time had elapsed where he could line the thing up and take another ballot, which carried against the affiliation.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the answer be stricken. It certainly couldn't have been a point of disagreement because the witness had no knowledge of this, and couldn't have, if it was a secret ballot.

The Witness: I had very definite knowledge of it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I am not asking you.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will allow it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Now, on these——

Presiding Inspector: The important fact is the attitude here.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Now, on these various issues that you have described, on which you fundamentally disagreed with Harry Lundeberg, [7382] have you taken an open, strong position against the position that Mr. Lundeberg has taken?

A. In every case, and I have generally been supported on them by my own union, and the majority of the other unions on the waterfront in those positions.

Q. Have you in many of these cases openly and severely criticized the position taken by Harry Lundeberg on these issues?

A. Only because of the issues and on the basis of the issues; yes.

Q. But have you made such criticism?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether and when Harry Lundeberg went on strike in 1934?

A. He didn't go on strike.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I know. His own testimony doesn't only show it here, but I happen to know the entire circumstances. After we tied a ship up they fired the whole ship's crew and she was laid up. We had her on strike. All he could do was to walk off after we had tied the ship up. He never did strike.

Q. Did you work on a ship for 25 cents a month?

A. No. I can explain that particular incident.

Q. All right, if you will. [7383]

Mr. Del Guercio: Do we want an explanation too?

Presiding Inspector: It was brought out, I think.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Lundeberg brought it out.

Mr. Del Guercio: He says "No." How is he going to explain that.

Mr. Grossman: To show how Mr. Lundeberg got a wrong impression.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. He does not need to explain that he didn't, but he can explain what he has heard about it here.

Be very brief.

A. Very briefly—that was a particular ship laying in New Orleans, and a friend of mine had a job on it. The ship had not signed on——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Interposing): You mean articles had not been signed by the crew?

A. Yes—and at the same time I was looking for a job. This friend of mine that was on that ship had a chance to go on another ship. Some Mate, or the Captain, wanted him to ship on another ship, but he didn't,—hadn't made up his mind at that time, but he preferred to take the other ship. There was some hitch in it, so I took his place on that ship while he went over and worked on the ship that he wanted to sail on. He was not sure until that ship signed on, left the [7384] port. He took the job and sailed with that ship. In the meantime I was standing by the Eldorado.

As soon as the ship signed on I signed on at full wages and was paid off in full wages, and the payroll will so show.

Incidentally, I have my union book, and the whole clearance is there. I have them with me now.

Mr. Del Guercio: I can't understand how that was in explanation of his negative answer, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: I will explain it to you.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know how Lundeberg got his idea about 25 cents? A. Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow you to show it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Where did he get that idea?

Mr. Del Guercio: I understand you have ruled against me and counsel is proceeding as though you hadn't.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Del Guercio wanted an explanation and he is going to get it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am not asking you. I am asking the court.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow him to explain.

A. The Master of that particular ship, we both happened to know him, my night Mate and I, and an examina- [7385] tion of that record will show that I was put down at 25 cents a month. It was for the purpose—I was getting paid every day. I was working stand-by. I was just standing by while we saw if this other fellow made the other ship. If he could have made the ship that was going to India why I was through and I would get off. So the Captain wouldn't carry another man on the payroll I still held the job for this other fellow. I was down for three or four days at $25 a month and at the same time on the regular payroll——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interrupting): You mean 25 cents a month?

A. 25 cents a month, yes—and I got the regular stand-by daily rate, and that shows on the payroll, and if anybody takes a look at the official payroll they will see it there. The records are available.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know during what dates you were in the hospital in 1935? A. Yes.

Q. What dates were they?

A. From May 25, I think from May 26 for the next two weeks after that date.

Q. In what hospital were you?

A. The St. Francis.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And did you have any period of convalescence after [7386] coming out of the hospital?

A. Yes, sir; three weeks.

Q. Did you remain home during that entire three weeks' period?

A. I was required to by the doctor.

Presiding Inspector: And you obeyed him?

The Witness: Yes, until I recovered.

Mr. Del Guercio: Did you recover?

Presiding Inspector: He said until he recovered. I asked him if he obeyed the doctor and he said, "Yes, until I recovered."

Mr. Del Guercio: I thought there was a question about his recovery.

The Witness: I still have my ulcers, if that is what you mean.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: The witness is yours.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a short recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio, we are ready.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I have one matter to clear up regarding your testimony [7387] when you were last on the stand that I forgot to ask you about. It is in connection with this resolution passed by the San Francisco Labor Council during the 1934 strike. Do you recall the resolution I read to you?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Which one?

Q. The resolution directing that all union members disavow their connection with the Communist Party.

A. That is right; I remember that one.

Q. You have the resolution in mind?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you testified that you opposed its adoption in the San Francisco Labor Council?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And did you also oppose its adoption in your own local?

A. I couldn't specifically remember. It is my belief that I did. I opposed it, that is, partly because of the person who introduced the resolution.

Q. Didn't you testify in the last hearing that you did oppose it in your own local?

A. I am not testifying any different now.

Q. Then your testimony now is that you did oppose its adoption in your own local, is that correct?

A. I am not sure whether I did or not.

Q. Was your memory any better in the last hearing [7388] than it is now? A. Yes.

Q. And if you so testified in the last hearing your testimony would be the same now?

A. I think it would be better to go by. I am two years older.

Presiding Inspector: He said that it is his best recollection now. That is right, isn't it?

The Witness: That is right.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: That is your best recollection, that is, that you did oppose it?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: In your own local?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: That is how I understood you.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your position in the CIO at the present time?

A. Director for the State of California. That is one position. I am a member of the Executive Board of the CIO, and I am a member of the Committee on Unemployment, and a member of the Pan-American Committee.

Q. Now, as State CIO Director, what are your duties?

A. General Organizational duties, general duties of Directorship in regard to the unions in the State of California, both the local and unattached unions. [7389]

Q. That is, all the CIO unions within the State?

A. Yes.

Q. They come within your supervision as State CIO Director?

A. General supervision up to a certain point. I am not allowed——

Q. (Interposing): What point?

A. I am not allowed to interfere, or have authority to interfere with a local union unless I am requested to do so by the International Union, or by the national officers of the CIO.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do your duties as such extend without the State?

A. No; I wouldn't say they did any more. They might in some cases in this way: It might be dealing with a situation where the union is concerned and is operating over a wide area, and you can't handle the situation in one place without taking care of it in another place.

Q. Supposing there was a situation arising in a local there of some CIO union in Detroit, would your duties as State CIO Director of California, require you to take any action in that situation in Detroit?

A. No, not unless I was especially assigned to do so.

Q. Could you do so? A. No.

Q. If you did what would happen? [7390]

A. I don't really know.

Q. Would any disciplinary action be taken by the national officers of the CIO?

Mr. Grossman: I object to that as calling for the conclusion of the witness.

Presiding Inspector: It calls for his conclusion, unless there is a rule.

Mr. Grossman: Only if there is a rule.

Presiding Inspector: If there is a rule to that effect.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What are the rules?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't know of any specific rule. Possibly the least that would happen would be that you would be pretty soundly criticized maybe removed from your position, your official position in that respect.

Q. Now, are you familiar with the strike at the North American Aircraft Corporation?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the conditions or the situation that resulted in the calling of the strike?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you know that in March—is it not a fact that in March of this year that the National Labor Relations Board named the UAW as the bargaining agent for the employees of the North American plant in Inglewood? [7391]

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor please, may we inquire as to the purpose of this line of examination? We do not see the materiality of it on the face of the question, and we feel it is objectionable for that reason, and immaterial. But if counsel can state a purpose that is material to the issues of this case we would like to have him do so.

Mr. Del Guercio: This is preliminary, your Honor. For that reason I don't like at this time to reveal the purpose.

Mr. Gladstein: Preliminary to what? It certainly isn't secret as to what the North American Aviation strike was, so it can't be preliminary to anything.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose he is going to ask something definite. I don't know. I think I will take it. We will see about it. It is subject to your motion to strike.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

A. Yes, I am familiar with it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What was the nature of the dispute between the North American Aviation plant employees and the corporation?

Mr. Gladstein: The same objection; that it is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will take your word that this is something definite.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, sir. [7392]

Presiding Inspector: Very well. And not to show the general attitude of the CIO. We don't care anything about that.

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: If you intend to show something definite I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: So I won't have to interrupt, unless there is a specific basis for an objection, may it be understood that this line is being objected to as immaterial?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But you must make your definite motion to strike at the end.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. The whole thing boils down to a question of wages and breaking of the 50-cent minimum.

The practice has been that the aircraft corporation for the first year refused to pay more than

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

50 cents an hour. It comes to $19.60 a week, less social security deductions.

The whole issue boiled down—there was an agreement reached on practically every issue, except the request for a wage increase from 50 cents to 75 cents an hour.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How long has that dispute been going on?

A. At North American?

Q. Yes.

A. It was in issue in the negotiations. There was an [7393] issue in negotiations, at least after the winning of the election, until the time the strike was called.

As far as the dispute going on, there has been a dispute between the workers and the management in that plant since the plant started operating.

Mr. Grossman: It must be understood that the testimony of Mr. Bridges is not from direct knowledge because I don't think he has contended that he has direct knowledge. I don't think it is contended, he personally participated in these negotiations.

The Witness: Up to this point it is from direct knowledge. I was down there and while I wasn't in the negotiations I know the issues involved up to a point.

Presiding Inspector: You have heard what he said while you were talking?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: He said up to this point it is from direct knowledge; that he was down there.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Up to what point?

Presiding Inspector: Up to the point that his testimony has gone.

I now suggest to the witness that when he passes beyond his direct knowledge that he call it to our attention.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When were you down there, Mr. Bridges?

[7394]

A. I was down there the week after this trial started, while I was away for the convention. I met with these people concerned in the negotiations at that time, and with the local officials, and, as I say, I caught up on the entire situation then and, of course, I was well aware of it previously.

Q. You talked with local officials?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you talk to?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it, although I don't where it is leading.

A. I talked with three International officials, Wyndham Mortimer——

Q. (Interposing): What was his position with reference to the local union?

A. International organizer.

Q. International organizer?

A. International organizer in the aircraft field in Southern California. Also Lew Michener, Western International Representative for the region,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Western Region, and that includes the entire Pacific Coast; and Jack Orr, another International Organizer; and then half a dozen of the local committee whose names I can't recall offhand.

Q. When did you talk with these people?

A. I met them just a couple of days before I returned [7395] to the hearing here after the trial recessed.

Q. Can you fix the date more definitely than that?

A. Let me see—if you can tell me the date the trial resumed I can fix it definitely.

Q. We resumed when—last week?

A. No; after I got a week off for the ILWU convention.

Q. Oh, that was sometime in May?

Mr. Gladstein: April.

Presiding Inspector: We took a recess on the 2nd day of May to the 13th day of May, as I remember it.

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: April.

Presiding Inspector: Wait a second. Wait a moment. I got that date wrong. From the 4th day of April to the 15th day of April.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Then, you were aware of the fact that the National Labor Relations Board in March had named the UAW as the bargaining agent for those employees of the North American Aviation Plant?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Very definitely. We discharged our union negot ating committee for a week to send them down there to help win the election; very aware of it.

Q. And was it after that that the UAW began negotia- [7396] ting for a new increase in wages?

A. Yes, with a definite program in mind, yes.

Q. Did you support that?

A. Very definitely, yes.

Q. And what was done about that?

A. Done about what?

Q. About negotiating for increases in wages?

A. You mean what was done?

Q. Yes?

A. Well, the committee negotiated with the AUWA.

Q. Negotiated with whom?

A. The management.

Q. Did they reach any agreement?

A. No.

Q. And what happened then?

A. The strike was finally—I mean, the matter was finally sent to the National Mediation Board.

Q. Well, now, before that was done, didn't Miss Perkins of the Department of Labor try to conciliate the matter?

A. I think there was a couple of conciliators on the job for a while.

Q. Didn't they thereafter certify the matter to the National Defense Mediation Board?

A. I am not too sure about that, that that occurred; [7397] it is possible. If that occurred that occurred since the hearing has been going on the second time. I have been pretty busy and I am not sure of that.

Q. Now, when was the strike called?

A. Oh, I think it was a week ago last Thursday.

Q. Did you regard the strike as being justified?

A. Very definitely.

Q. Had you talked to anyone about it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With whom?

A. I talked to the entire committee when I was down there and the officials there.

Q. Do you know Mr. Connelly?

A. Certainly; I talked to him, too.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Connelly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you talk with Mr. Connelly with respect to [illegible] the time the strike was called?

A. Wi respect to the time the strike was called?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I am in frequent communication with Connelly on this particular matter. Do you mean verbally or personally or over the phone?

Q. Verbally or otherwise, telegraph or telephone?

A. I have spoken to him on numerous occasions over the phone on other matters. Of course, this matter could have [7398] been mentioned or the entire conversation might be devoted to this matter. I wouldn't be able to fix that definitely.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you tell him that you would support his position in the strike?

A. You are talking now before or after the strike broke out?

Q. After the strike broke out or before?

Presiding Inspector: You can separate them, if necessary.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Separate them, if you want to.

A. Before the strike broke out—I didn't know that the strike was going to come as suddenly as it did. I knew that they were contemplating strike action. The committee had divided itself. A part of it was back in Washington; a part of it was still in Los Angeles. They were in daily telephone communication; they had a daily telephone meeting. Of course, at that time I was pretty busy up here and didn't keep in very close contact with it. The whole matter was handled—because after all, they had their own representatives in charge and it was not under my immediate supervision unless I was called in and requested to do something, and I was not so requested. However, in so far as the—it was certainly my position that if they thought it was necessary to strike, if there was no compromise could be arranged in negotiations [7399] or any other way and they struck to break that fifty-cent minimum I was certainly in support, or would support the strike.

Q. Did you communicate with Mr. Connelly?

A. At that time when—no, not before the strike

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

actually broke out. There was no occasion to do that. In other words——

Q. (Interposing) Did you after the strike was called?

A. After the strike was called? Yes, I discussed the matter with Connelly and with others, and I told——

Q. (Interposing) In what manner did you discuss the matter with Connelly?

A. I discussed all the details with Connelly over the phone.

Q. Over the phone? A. Yes.

Q. Now, when did you call Mr. Connelly over the phone?

A. Oh, I practically called—I might have called Connelly daily.

Q. After the strike was called when did you call the first time?

A. The first time? I really don't know. I could be specific as to those conversations that are very definitely fixed in my mind. [7400]

Q. When was the strike called?

A. I am trying to think of that now, too. I am not sure of the date.

Presiding Inspector: You said a week ago last Thursday.

The Witness: That is—yes, but thinking it over that date might be incorrect.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That was Thursday, was it not, the 5th of June?

A. That is right; it was just last Thursday.

Q. Yes. And did you call him up that day?

A. No, no; I have no recollection of calling Connelly specifically on this until I was speaking to him Saturday morning, I think, and then I tried 11:30 last Saturday night.

Q. Well, now, you said you talked to him Saturday morning the first time after the strike was called.

A. Yes, I am pretty sure I was talking to him on the phone Saturday morning.

Q. All right. Now, what did you tell him over the telephone Saturday morning?

A. I don't recall; nothing important. I think the conversation more or less was that I asked him "What does it look like? What is doing in the strike situation down there?" We discussed more than one matter.

Q. Did he ask for your support?

A. No, not at that time. [7401]

Q. In that telephone conversation?

A. Not at that time.

Q. When did he ask for your support?

A. At no time.

Q. When did he ask for your support of his position?

A. He never asked me for any support at any time. I tried to get him, as I said, Saturday night.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I tried for two or three hours to reach any of the officials down there. That was after the threat had come out that the troops were going to be used. I spent until 11:30 Saturday night trying to reach him and couldn't. I couldn't reach Connelly until Sunday morning; I reached him about 8:00 o'clock Sunday morning and talked the situation over at great length.

Q. What did you say to Connelly then?

A. I told him to pull in his horns and duck it, and not to call that strike.

Q. In those words?

A. Yes, in those words.

Q. You didn't tell him Saturday night that you would support his position in the strike?

A. I was trying to call him Saturday night to tell him that that strike was going to be smashed by the Federal Government and the troops.

Q. Now, did you understand my question?

A. I thought I did; maybe I didn't.

Q. Now, is it your testimony that you did not at any [7402] time after the strike was called communicate with Connelly by either telephone, telegraph, teletype or any kind of communication that you would support in substance—that you would support his position in that strike?

A. That is right; that is my testimony. The first time that I had done anything like that, or said anything like that was Sunday morning. When the meeting was coming up Saturday afternoon I said, "Well, tell the fellows best wishes and good luck from me." That was the only message of greeting or support that I sent down there; that was over the phone. There was no letters, telegrams, teletypes or anything else sent, and at no time did I support Connelly's position in the strike.

Mr. Grossman: We ask again, your Honor, what the relevance of this line of inquiry is?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I get that last answer, please?

Presiding Inspector: The conduct, I suppose, of the CIO official.

Mr. Grossman: What is there about the conduct, according to the theory of Mr. Del Guercio, that makes it relevant?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. That is all I can see.

The Witness: I am not sure, your Honor, what he is referring to.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he is asking you certain [7403] questions. You are answering it very fully.

The Witness: Well, he says "Connelly's position in the strike?"

Presiding Inspector: Well, that I didn't notice.

The Witness: Now, the position can change from day to day. There were certain positions that I supported fully.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let me substitute instead of "Connelly's position," did you support the strike or did you tell

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Connelly you would support the strike at any time after it was called?

A. No, I didn't tell Connelly that I can recall, no, but I was in full agreement with the strikers' demands, and if I had been requested—it just happened that I was not asked—I had been busy——

Q. (Interposing) You say you were in full agreement with the demands of the strikers?

A. Very definitely, yes, and still am.

Q. Did you express that to anyone?

A. I am sure I did.

Q. To whom?

A. Well, I would express it generally. If you are asking the question did I express it in any official way, no, I didn't.

Q. To whom did you express the statement that you have made, that you were in full agreement with the demands of the [7404] strikers?

A. Oh, I expressed that to the——

Q. (Interposing) Or with the strike?

A. After the strike was called.

Q. After the strike was called. Now, to whom did you express that?

A. I expressed that to local officials right here in San Francisco such as Goldblatt, Louie Goldblatt. He is the Secretary of the State CIO.

Q. And also a member of the Communist Party.

A. That is not so.

Q. Now, who else?

A. I am sure I expressed it to George Wilson who is the President of our Local CIO Council here, and other officials that I met with every day. I could name off all our Local CIO officials, and any of them that happened to come up from Los Angeles.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, who did happen to come up from Los Angeles connected with the strike?

A. Connelly was up here last week. I am just wondering if it was before or after the strike. He was up in the hearing here and I know I discussed the North American situation with him. If he was here after Thursday——

Q. (Interposing) Well, try and recall as to whether he was, now.

A. I really can't recall the exact day he was here, [7405] whether it was before or after Thursday. If it was after Thursday I certainly discussed North American with him, and if they were on strike at that time I would certainly have told him, and I still think that the strike demands were entirely justified.

Q. And that you would support it, throw your support to the strike?

A. Certainly. I was in support of the strike. If I haven't expressed it before I will now. So was the National CIO.

Q. Now, was your attitude, the one that you express now communicated to the strikers by anyone?

A. Only in the way I said that I know of, where I told Connelly last Sunday morning to give my regards and greetings to the strikers in the mass meeting that afternoon.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, what did you mean when you said "Give my regards and best wishes to the strikers"?

A. Well, that is the usual thing when there is a group of people on strike. Lots of times in a strike meeting, or even a union meeting the officer in charge will announce that, "We have received telegrams of greetings and best wishes from so and so," this and that and the other union.

Q. Now, that was an expression of your support of the strike, wasn't it?

A. That was Sunday morning.

Q. And you intended it to be that? [7406]

A. No, not particularly.

Q. What did you intend it to be?

A. I called Connelly Sunday morning to tell him to move to try and have that strike called off, because it was going to be smashed.

Q. I am speaking about the time that you sent this expression of your wishes, best wishes?

A. It was not, no; that is what I am saying, no, it was not.

Q. What was it?

A. Well, it was the usual thing. I think that—it is nothing unusual for me or many others to send a message of greetings and best wishes to any group of workers, and here was a group——

Q. (Interposing) Best wishes for what? For success in the strike, what they were striking for?

A. Yes, certainly; best wishes for success in what they were striking for, and they have still got them, my best wishes for that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. All right. Were picket lines formed?

A. If it was the kind of strike that we have they were.

Q. Were your longshoremen at San Pedro used in the picket line?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment. It is quite obvious that Mr. Del Guercio is now questioning about a subject [7407] matter that took place in Los Angeles on days that Mr. Bridges was here in Court. He is calling for hearsay of a character that certainly can't be material to the issues of this case. I think it is about time we put a stop to it.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is very harmful. What difference does it make?

Mr. Del Guercio: It won't be very long.

Presiding Inspector: It was a strike. I don't suppose it is necessary to——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing) Were longshoremen from San Pedro used on the picket lines?

A. I don't know of my own knowledge; I have heard it and I suspect it and I would favor it.

Q. Did you favor it?

A. Our union is on record to support that group down there. If they sent out a call for help and support on the picket lines I believe our locals would respond.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: He said he favored it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you knew, did you not, that late in May at the invitation of the National Defense Mediation Board representatives of the company and of the union went to Washington to thresh out the difficulties of the strikers? A. I knew that. [7408]

Q. And you knew that these representatives reached an agreement on May 27th, 1941 with each other and with the Board?

A. On what?

Q. Did you know the terms of the agreement?

A. I know nothing. I know that no such agreement was reached, that is, I do not know of it.

Q. Well, you are State Director of the CIO, are you not? A. That is right.

Mr. Gladstein: That has been asked and answered and is immaterial.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Would that be a matter under your jurisdiction?

A. Not particularly, no, unless it is called specifically to my attention, but it is a matter I would try to find out just for my own knowledge, that is all, but I know of no agreement that was reached between the representatives of the union and the management before the Mediation Board; I know the opposite.

Presiding Inspector: Did you hear the last phrase?

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: He said he knew the opposite.

The Witness: I should say, your Honor, I was informed of the opposite effect.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7409]

Q. Now, who informed you of the opposite effect?

A. I don't know whether it was Connelly or Goldblatt, one or the other, or both.

Q. And what did he say?

A. The union committee—there was a committee of nine in Los Angeles. Three of them were dispatched to Washington by the membership of the local union to meet with the Mediation Board and the management. The committee spent some time back there and eventually the Mediation Board told both the management and the union committee to get together by themselves in negotiations and see if they could reach an agreement. This was done, and the union committee——

Q. (Interposing) And that agreement provided for mediation of the demands?

A. What is that?

Q. And was mediation of the demands one of the agreements reached?

Mr. Grossman: Just a minute. Mr. Bridges has not stated any agreement was reached.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no; he has not yet said there was any agreement.

You may ask him if that was a subject that was discussed.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

The Witness: Yes. Naturally all the issues were discussed, and I am giving you now what I was told in this respect in the report, and I understand that everything was agreed to, [7410] or gotten around that is, all the issues were gotten around except the one issue of the wages, and the union committee and the management retired at the request of the Mediation Board to thresh the thing out, or to thresh this problem out alone by themselves, and they worked on it for two or three days and they got nowhere. Eventually the union committee in Washington telephoned the local committee in Los Angeles. They used to hold regular daily meetings over the telephone, the three in Washington and the six in Los Angeles. And the union committee in Washington telephoned the local union committee in Los Angeles that there was no chance apparently, from what they could see, of getting anywhere either in the Mediation Board or with the management on the question of wages, that it looked completely hopeless as the management had not budged an inch.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, the National Defense Mediation Board had made no recommendations up to that time, had it?

A. I don't think it had.

Q. And isn't it a fact, Mr. Bridges, and didn't you know that this agreement had been reached one, that there was to be no stoppage of work or interference in any way with production during the pendency of the case before the National Mediation Board and for three days after the Board's recommendations are made?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. When was that supposed to have been reached? [7411]

Q. At 7:00 P. M., May 27, 1941.

A. I don't know of it. Was that agreement reached with the union committee?

Q. Yes, didn't you know about that?

A. Was that agreement reached in connection with the first strike deadline?

Q. I will show you a copy of the agreement reached, Mr. Bridges.

A. I know this was done: The union committee went back with a strike deadline and there was an agreement reached to postpone that deadline, which the union agreed to, and in that respect, why, my office and other offices recommended to the local union that they respect the decision reached by the Mediation Board, and the deadline was postponed.

Q. Will you look at that agreement or that copy of that agreement and tell me if you have ever seen it?

A. (Examining document) That is in regard to the agreement, not to the strike. In the last paragraph there it shows you where the union membership voted to accept the agreement.

Q. Then, you knew about it, didn't you?

A. I not only knew about it but I supported it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And then you knew there was an agreement not to strike?

A. That is not so. Now, if you will read that thing you will see that the strike committee had—that the union [7412] had a strike deadline, and that on the basis of the management offering to——

Q. (Interposing) Wherein in this agreement do you see that the strike committee had a deadline or a date line?

A. (Examining document) "Union stated that membership would not permit deferment of strike action later than Tuesday, June 3, 1941." Right there (Indicating). Here is the paragraph about strike action (Indicating). There is the last where the union concurs with the Board's recommendation.

Q. Now, you referred to this No. 12 which reads as follows:—No. 12 there which is not the agreement reached, isn't that a fact, Mr. Bridges?

A. No, not the way I read it.

Q. Now, isn't this the only agreement that was made and reached: "1. Agreements when and if reached would be retroactive to May 1st."

A. Right, that is one point.

Q. "2. No stoppage of work or interference in any way with production will be permitted during the pendency of this case before the National Defense Mediation Board and for three days after the Board's recommendations are made."

"3. The issue of retroactive benefits is hereby removed from the list of items to be considered during negotiations, it being fully understood that this issue has not been settled finally.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"4. Failure in any respect to abide by the terms of [7413] Paragraph 2 hereof, automatically invalidates the Company's obligation expressed in Paragraph 1 hereof."

A. Yes, sir.

Q. "5. It is hereby agreed that neither the Union or the Company will make any statement to the press."

Now, isn't that the agreement that was reached?

A. Let me see. (Examining document) No.

Q. That is, the quoted portion?

A. Just a minute. You have read a proposal that was made to the union by the employers. It was presented to the union committee by the National Mediation Board. The union committee informed the National Mediation Board they would have to take it back to the membership, and it was agreed that they take that back to their membership. It was never accepted by the union. That is the way I read that.

Q. Now, how do you know that it was never accepted by the union?

A. Just according to what you have got there. I don't know any other way. I don't know whether it was accepted or not. I am just—you are asking me.

Q. Then, you don't mean what you said before that it was not accepted by the union?

A. Now you are pointing out certain language

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

there. If you are asking me what it means I can tell you. If you ask me what that says I have told you. [7414]

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I think at this time that should be marked for identification. Quite obviously we are going to have a lot of questions to ask on it.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think it should be marked.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will be glad to have it marked.

Presiding Inspector: Mark it for identification.

(The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 293 for identification.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, No. 17 on this document, on this copy of the paper that I have here, that has been marked Government's Exhibit 293 for identification reads: "Company representatives were later informed by Mr. Seward that union representatives had telephoned the Los Angeles Committee who had agreed to accept the offer, but because of the possibility of independent strike action being taken, the Washington representatives were urged to go to Los Angeles to present the matter fully to the membership at a meeting Saturday, May 31, 1941."

A. Right.

Q. Now, you knew about that, didn't you?

A. Well, no, I didn't in detail, only generally, but that is clear enough there. I explained how the committee was working, six in Los Angeles, three in

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Washington, and the three in Washington never had authority to accept that offer without the majority vote of the full committee and the membership. They could only accept it tentatively for presentation [7415] to the membership.

Q. Now, is it still your testimony that there was no agreement between the union and the company?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, and in view of the circumstances, namely, that he isn't a party to any agreement, if there was one, that he is not—

Mr. Del Guercio: He was a party inasmuch as he is the State Director, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: May I say this: Mr. Del Guercio is getting into this kind of a field where if he gets in he is going to be all the way before he gets through. On whether there is an agreement doesn't depend the legality of an agreement; it depends upon whether a particular body of men——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I suppose the pertinence of that—this is imaginative on my part—I suppose the pertinence of this is in relation to the conduct of the witness as the State superior officer of the CIO organization.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, but I mean asking——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) And so his attitude, his beliefs in it become material, if there is anything in it.

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment. I haven't explained what [7416] we mean by agreement. He has asked this question: Was there an agreement. Whether there was an agreement doesn't mean whether somebody offered an agreement.

Presiding Inspector: I think the question really means what was his understanding in that respect.

Mr. Grossman: All right. He should be asked that.

Mr. Gladstein: One more thing: Is it the Government's——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I think that is the purport of the question.

Mr. Gladstein: The witness has already testified as to this particular strike, and as he has described it, in various situations he would not have direct supervision unless he were requested to come in and participate, that he has certain duties which he has outlined in a general way. It doesn't appear from the testimony that he had any duties or powers of any special character with respect to this particular strike.

Presiding Inspector: That may be, except under his general office that is all. He has general supervision of the unions in the State, as I understand it.

Mr. Grossman: No supervision in the sense that he could control this union.

Presiding Inspector: What "supervision" means, I don't know.

Mr. Grossman: Well, it is understood, is it not, that before the word "agreement" can be used in a question it must be defined by—— [7417]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It isn't proof that there was an agreement.

Mr. Grossman: No, I mean before the word can be used, since there are a variety of definitions, it must be defined either by Mr. Del Guercio or by Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I think that Mr. Bridges understands this, that they are asking for his understanding of this.

That is right isn't it? You are asking for his understanding of this?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Of course, whether there was in fact an agreement may be outside of his knowledge, but you are trying to get his understanding of the matter.

Mr. Del Guercio: His understanding of the matter.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think we understand it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you say there was no agreement, that you had no knowledge of any agreement?

A. I was informed to the contrary; I checked on that.

Q. Well, where did you check; with whom?

A. I am not sure whether it was Connelly or Goldblatt. The way it works is this: Since I have been busy in the trial we have had to—we function through our other officials and the best I could do is to get reports from them from time to time as to what is going on. [7418]

Now, it was officially and definitely reported to me that there was no agreement reached in that Mediation Board, and the reason that I wanted to know is because of newspaper reports that there was confusion regarding the calling of the strike, and I was notified that no agreement had been reached.

Q. Now, who notified you of that?

Mr. Grossman: He has answered that question.

A. I am not sure whether it was Goldblatt or Connelly; it was one or the other, or both of them.

Presiding Inspector: He says he isn't sure.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you communicate with any other CIO official? A. Yes.

Q. Did you communicate with Mr. Murray?

A. I did.

Q. About this matter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did Mr. Murray tell you?

A. I talked it over with him, gave him my ideas.

Q. With regard to this agreement that had been reached?

A. Oh, no, I am sorry, not in—well, indirectly we discussed the workings on the Mediation Board but not specifically that agreement, I don't think.

Q. Well, what did Mr. Murray say to you?

A. Well, I called Mr. Murray to discuss the mat-

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

ter with him and give him my ideas on it and suggestions, and asked authority to do certain things. [7419]

Q. When was this conversation that you had with Mr. Murray?

A. I am trying to fix the—it took me 24 hours to get him. It was Monday, Monday night. I tried to reach him Sunday afternoon, and I didn't get him until Monday.

Q. Monday morning?

A. No. Monday, the first time—I had two or three conversations. The first time was definitely Monday night.

Q. You say you had two or three conversations? A. Yes.

Q. With Mr. Murray? A. Yes.

Q. When was the first one, the first conversation with regard to this matter?

A. I think that was Monday night.

Q. Monday night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is June, the——

A. (Interposing) It was last Monday night.

Q. Huh? A. This last Monday night.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Murray before the plant was seized by the Government?

A. I don't think so. That is what I was trying to remember. It shouldn't slip my mind. I don't think I did. I [7420] was still talking to the local people and trying to reach Frankensteen. I was trying to reach Frankensteen Saturday night, but they were all pretty busy and I couldn't get none of the people down there Saturday night. They were busy apparently in the meeting.

Q. You didn't talk to Frankensteen prior to the time the plant was seized?

A. What is that?

Q. Did you talk to Frankensteen prior to the time the plant was seized?

A. I couldn't get him at any time; I couldn't get him at any time.

Q. When did you talk to Frankensteen?

A. The first time I got him was Tuesday morning.

Presiding Inspector: Is there any evidence as to the position that Mr. Frankensteen holds?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have Mr. Frankensteen here, if your Honor please.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What was your conversation with Mr. Murray?

A. I asked him for authority to go down and settle that strike and get those workers back to work.

Q. Just what did you say?

A. I told him it was a bad situation. I didn't——

Q. (Interposing) Did you say in what way it was bad? [7421] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us?

A. 2500 troops are always bad in a strike for somebody.

Q. Well, just what did you tell Mr. Murray?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That is what I told him. I told him I had faced a few bayonets myself and I didn't like to see a young group of people like those people down there—they are all young unionists, and I didn't like to see them facing bayonets.

Q. What did Mr. Murray say? Is that all you told Mr. Murray? A. No; I outlined——

Q. (Interposing) Tell me all that you told Mr. Murray.

A. I outlined a plan for settlement.

Q. What is that?

A. I outlined a plan for settlement, that I would go down there. I made reservation on the seven o'clock plane Tuesday morning to go down there.

Q. Well, now, you didn't tell that to Mr. Murray, did you? A. I did.

Q. All right. What else?

A. And I had a—the thing had developed to the point then where there was quite a wide breach between Richard Frankensteen, who was the Aircraft Director, and the local [7422] leadership, and I told Mr. Murray that the best thing I could do was to get down there and try to go between the two groups and get those workers together and tell them to get back inside that plant and get to work and "Let's fight for the demands back in Washington." And I asked Mr. Murray if I could tell them, those workers, that he would pledge himself along with the rest of us that we would carry on the fight through all the other channels we could to get them their 75 cents an hour.

Q. What did Mr. Murray say?

A. He said "O.K." Generally he was in favor of the plan, and I made arrangements to call him next morning between 4:30 and 5:00.

Q. Now, did you have any discussion over the telephone with Mr. Murray regarding your action in connection with the strike prior to the time the army had seized the plant? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: The question is indefinite.

The Witness: I don't know what you mean by that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. None at all?.

A. Mr. Murray knows my action.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Murray that you had supported the strike prior to the time the army took it over?

A. No; he asked me my position; I told him my position. [7423]

Q. What was your position? What did you tell him was your position?

A. Well, I have just told you what that was; I told Murray.

Q. Prior to the time that the army had taken it over, had taken the plant over?

A. We didn't discuss that. There was no—we had other things to discuss. We weren't discussing the fact that the army had taken over. I didn't waste any time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you tell him what your attitude was prior to the time that the army had taken it over?

A. No, there was no necessity to do that. He knows what my attitude is.

Q. Well, how did he know what your attitude was?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as immaterial.

A. It was only two weeks ago I was back in New York talking to Mr. Murray, among other things talking about North American.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Mr. Murray support your action?

A. Mr. Murray is in favor of those workers' demands.

Q. That is not the question. I asked was Mr. Murray in favor of your supporting the strike?

A. I am sure he is, but it is up to what point you mean. Support extends to——[7424]

Q. (Interposing) Did Mr. Murray tell you he was in favor of calling a strike at the North American plant?

A. No, it hadn't reached that point. I don't think I discussed calling a strike.

Q. Did Mr. Murray say to you at any time that he would support the strike after it was called?

A. No, I don't think he did.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Murray that you had stated to three persons that you would support the strike after it had been called?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: That is a misstatement of the evidence. The witness hasn't said that he would support a strike in advance of the calling of the strike.

Mr. Del Guercio: There were three persons in Los Angeles that he was in agreement with; he told three persons——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Let's get this question cleared up. Does it mean tell someone before the strike took place or after the strike took place?

Mr. Del Guercio: After the strike was called. The witness knows what I mean.

The Witness: Your Honor, I just want to say this much: What is causing the confusion here is this: In addition to being CIO Director I am the President of an organization that is on record to support these people, and I can take a position as President of the organization, and Mr. Murray or [7425] nobody else in the CIO has got anything to do with it except that organization. Any position I wish to take in regard to that strike as President of the longshoremen, that is our business and nobody else's.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, your position—— A. Now——

Q. (Interposing) Well, just a minute.

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment.

Presiding Inspector: Let the witness finish his statement. I think this is an interesting statement.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Go ahead, Mr. Bridges.

The Witness: And as the President of the organization I sent greetings and wishes to the strikers and that is all.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Yes, best wishes, wasn't it?

A. Best wishes. Well, they weren't bad ones.

Q. Now, your position in connection with the strike was contrary to the position taken by Murray, was it not? A. No. In what respect?

Q. In that Mr. Murray was opposed to the strike being called at the time that it was.

A. Oh, that may be so.

Q. And in its continuation?

A. I don't know so much about that.

Q. Now, you know, as a matter of fact, that it is [7426] Mr. Murray's position and was Mr. Murray's position——

A. (Interposing) Against the strike being called?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, if we are arguing Mr. Murray's position, or whether I was in agreement with it or not——

Q. (Interposing) Were you against the strike being called?

A. Under the circumstances, yes.

Q. Did you express that to anyone?

A. To who?

Q. To anyone? A. Well, the strike——

Q. (Interposing) At the time?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. The strike was an unexpected occurrence to me. I was busy up here.

Q. After it had been called you sent them your best wishes.

Presiding Inspector: You have had that several times.

Mr. Gladstein: He said that six times.

A. Certainly. After the strikers—after the strike was called and the workers are meeting down there, and it was a tense and tight situation, you are not going to be able to have the confidence of those workers and be able to give them proper advice that they might respect and listen to if you go around acting a certain way. I was operating on the basis [7427] that I wanted to be in a position that when I advised those workers to do something they might listen to me, and eventually maybe they did.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And you had advised them to continue out on strike?

A. I had not at no time. The strike was called Thursday and on Saturday night I was trying to get in touch with all those leaders down there and couldn't raise one. As soon as I got a report Sunday morning I sent Goldblatt down there to try and do something about that strike because I knew the troops were going to move in.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio, it is perfectly apparent that we can't finish tonight.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I don't know why we can't finish tonight. If Mr. Del Guercio wants to turn this hearing into an anti-labor hearing because he is trying to make some point because Mr. Bridges supports strikers, I suppose we can't finish tonight. If we are going to discuss the issues of this case I suppose we can finish.

Your Honor, we have been trying since the beginning of this examination to get a statement of the theory. The only theory I can see, Mr. Del Guercio condemns Harry Bridges for sending his good wishes to those strikers on Sunday morning. Otherwise there seems to be no theory to this cross examination. [7428]

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what theory there is, but——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) What other theory is there?

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio assures the Inspector that he has a theory. I can imagine it is a conflict between the officers of the International Association and his position as the State leader. Now, I don't know.

Mr. Gladstein: Could we do this, your Honor: At the beginning of this examination we objected to it as being a lot of inquiry which did not appear to be material to any of the issues.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: And at your Honor's remark Mr. Del Guercio said that he did have a purpose and he implied at least that that purpose would show that the line of examination was material, but he didn't prefer to state it at that time.

Now, this was almost an hour ago and it seems to me that it is about time to find out now that he has covered this North American strike how he contends that it is material, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. At least, I don't know definitely.

Mr. Gladstein: Could we not have a statement?

Presiding Inspector: You could imagine as well as I. Of course, you have thrown into the arena here the conduct [7429] of this man as a trade unionist.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: And I suppose it has something to do with that?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You see, you have even gone and called expert witnesses.

Mr. Gladstein: So we have, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a recess until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, we have one witness here we would like to call.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. [7430]

Mr. Del Guercio: We have one witness here who would like to leave tonight, if possible. I don't believe it will take very long.

Presiding Inspector: How long will it take?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not more than fifteen minutes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: If it is Mr. Frankensteen it may take a long time because, I assume from the newspapers the subject matter that the Government intends to ask him about is the North American strike. They have gone into that with Mr. Bridges for an hour and Mr. Bridges wasn't personally involved or on the scene, and if they put Mr. Frankensteen——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't suppose what actually happened there except Mr. Bridges' attitude toward it is very material, if there is anything here.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, we suggested that Mr. Frankensteen be put on before Mr. Bridges. They refused to do that at that time. Now, they are complaining because we don't want to have him put on at this time of the night. If they wanted him on today why didn't they put him on before? Because they wanted to put Bridges in a hole is why they wouldn't do it.

Mr. Grossman: All they wanted to do is make a newspaper deadline; that is the only reason. We say this: We say this hearing can end today if they are going to stick to the issues. If they want to make it an anti-labor proceeding the issues are going to be longer and we are going to go into [7431] detail to show the anti-labor activities of the FBI and the pro-labor activities of Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: It isn't going to be anything of that kind.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: We made a motion to strike at the beginning. It was stated at that time that we would permit Mr. Del Guercio to ask a few questions so that he could take someone by surprise before we asked him to state his theory. At this time, after an hour, he is still not prepared to state his theory. It appears to us irrelevant. We renew our motion to strike all this evidence.

Presiding Inspector: I will still permit this to stand because I don't think the matter is fully clarified. I think the purpose of it is to show what kind of a labor leader the witness is, the Alien. I can't imagine anything else, and I suppose that inquiry is opened.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, now, how long does the Government think the witness will take?

Major Schofield: Fifteen minutes.

Mr. Gladstein: It may be forty-five minutes on cross.

Presiding Inspector: You may not want to ask him anything.

Mr. Gladstein: I doubt that very seriously. If the Government intends to put on a man whom we wouldn't be interested in asking any questions on cross examination, or very few, then, it certainly can't be to put in evidence that we are [7432] interested in or which could be regarded as important in any way.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is a CIO official, if your Honor please.

Mr. Grossman: But you are not going to bring out the facts that we have. That is what will take the time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mrs. King: We would suggest that his testimony is immaterial anyway.

Presiding Inspector: Step aside.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Call your witness, but I am not going to tolerate this lasting any length of time. [7433]

Presiding Inspector: Step up and raise your right hand.

RICHARD T. FRANKENSTEEN

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: Richard T. Frankensteen — F-r-a-n-k-e-n-s-t-e-e-n.

My home address?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: 18685 Roselawn Avenue, Detroit, Michigan.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Frankensteen, what position do you occupy in the CIO?

A. I am National Director of Aviation.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. What is the UAW?

A. United Automobile Workers, an affiliate of the CIO. However, in my capacity I represent the CIO directly.

Q. Are you familiar with the dispute of the North American Aircraft Corporation employees?

A. I am.

Q. And will you tell us what you know about that dispute? [7434]

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial. I think the Government's question should be confined. I would like to hear the story but——

Presiding Inspector: Are you going to show that Bridges knew of this, or was informed of it?

Mr. Del Guercio: He was informed of it.

Presiding Inspector: If he was informed of it I will take it, that is, to show that Mr. Bridges was informed of it I will take it.

Q. May I ask——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. First—what is the bargaining agent for the North American Aircraft Corporation employees?

A. The United Automobile Workers—CIO.

Q. When did they make it the bargaining agent?

A. Well, they were certified some two months, two and one half months ago.

Q. Now, after they were certified did they make any demands? A. They did.

Q. And what were those demands?

A. There were many different demands—seniority, bargaining rights, wage adjustments, minimum wage standards, union shop—and various things that go with any contract.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. And to whom were those demands stated?

[7435]

A. They were submitted to the management of the North American Company.

Q. Did they come to any agreement?

A. No.

Q. And what was the result?

A. It resulted in a strike vote being taken, after which the situation was certified to the Defense Mediation Board.

Q. Who certified it to the Defense Mediation Board?

A. It was certified by Madam Frances Perkins.

Q. What did Miss Perkins do—did she take any action?

A. No, except to certify the fact that the strike, or that the negotiations were not able to produce results through the Mediation Department, and asked the Defense Mediation Board to try to their hand at settling the case.

Q. Did the National Defense Mediation Board take any action?

A. They set up a panel in the City of Washington for the purpose——

Q. (Interposing) What did the panel consist of?

A. The panel consisted of Dr. Dykstra, Tom Kennedy, Secretary of the United Mine Workers, and I don't recall the third party to the panel, the representative of management.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. What action did the Mediation Board take?

A. I think I am a little bit ahead of my story—if [7436] I may go back a minute.

Q. Yes.

A. The first action that was taken, when the Committee arrived in Washington, I was present with the Committee, and we were unable to get a panel due to the fact that all panels were tied up in the various cases that were at that time before the Mediation Board. However, we did meet with the Secretary of the Mediation Board, Mr. Seward; and later in the afternoon we met with Judge Stacey, and were able to work out an agreement that any wages which resulted from the negotiations which would appear before the Board would be retroactive to the date of May 1st; and in return the Union agreed that during the time that the Board had this case before them, and for three days thereafter, there would be no strike in the plant of North American.

Q. Was that communicated to the union out here? A. It was.

Q. And who agreed to that?

A. That was agreed to by the three members of the Negotiating Committee who were sent to Washington by this union.

Q. Do you know the names of those?

A. Yes,—that was Mr. Wutanen—something of that sort.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. Walter S.?

A. Walter Wutanen; and Elmer Freitag, and Mr. Dave [7437] Simpson.

Those were the three, along with Lew Michener, Regional Director of the United Auto Workers, and myself, and Mr. Walter Smethurst, representing my office.

Q. Who represented the company?

A. For the company there was the President, Mr.——

Q. (Interposing) Mr. Kindelberger?

A. Yes, Mr. Kindelberger; and the Vice President of the company, whose name I don't know.

Q. Atwood?

A. Atwood is correct. And Mr. Neary, the Attorney for the company.

Q. McNary? A. No—Neary.

Q. Do you know the date this agreement was reached—do you have a copy of it?

A. Yes, I have. I have the original copy here.

Q. Mr. Frankensteen, will you compare it with what appears on Government's Exhibit No. 293 for identification and state whether it is the same, appearing on page 2 thereof, beginning with 1, 2, 3, 4, 5?

A. (Making comparison). That is correct; it is the same agreement.

Q. Now, among other things it was agreed that there was to be no strike? [7438]

A. That is correct.

Q. Until after what?

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

A. Until the Mediation Board had made its findings and then not until three days had expired if it was unacceptable.

Q. Had the Mediation Board made any finding?

A. Not yet.

Q. Have they yet made any?

A. They have not.

Q. And that was communicated to the officials out here, you say? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, do you know when the strike was called, Mr. Frankensteen?

A. Yes. It was called Thursday.

Q. Of last week?

A. Of last week. I believe it was June——

Q. (Interposing) Was that in accordance with the agreement? A. It was not.

Q. Was it in violation of the agreement?

A. It was in violation of the agreement.

Q. And do you know who called the strike?

A. The strike was called by the nine-man committee, Negotiating Committee, the three from Washington and the six who were left in Los Angeles. [7439]

Q. You named the three in Washington. Can you name the six out here?

A. Well, I would have difficulty in naming all them. There was Mr. Smith——

Q. (Interposing) Do you know his first name?

A. No, I don't. Have you anything that I might identify the names from?

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. Just a minute. Was it Irvin J. Smith?

A. Correct.

Q. Elmer Freitag, was he another one?

A. Correct.

Q. William Goodman? A. Right.

Q. James Backman? A. Correct.

Q. Robert W. Mallory? A. Right.

Q. Walter Hathcock? A. Correct.

Q. William J. Pupos? A. Right.

Q. David Simpson? A. Right.

Q. And Walter Wutanen?

A. Correct. [7440]

Q. Now, what was the position of the International that you represent in connection with the strike?

A. I knew nothing of any plans for the strike except I did know there was a lot of tenseness in the air. I knew that the workers felt very keenly about their demands, and that there was much tenseness around the entire picture. But I knew nothing of any plan for a strike until one o'clock in the morning—that was one o'clock Detroit time—of the morning that the strike was to be called.

At that time I got on long distance phone, and spoke for 45 minutes to the Committee in Los Angeles urging them to withhold any action.

I spoke to Washington. I talked to President Murray, of my organization, and President Thomas, of the Auto Workers. I acquainted them with the situation and told them that I was unable to prevail, over long distance wire, with the Committee to avoid calling the strike. I urged them, I threatened them, I practically begged them not to do it until we had a chance to exhaust the machinery that was set up before them.

I might say, if I may, that I also acquainted them with the fact that I thought that their demands were absolutely justified and that their demands could be met through the processes of collective bargaining with the Mediation Board.

I told them if they would stand solidly on their position that I thought we would come out all right and not be stampeded into wildcat action. But that was to no avail. [7441]

Q. What effect, Mr. Frankensteen, did the calling of the strike, and the strike have on the plant?

A. Well, the strike was 100 per cent effective in stopping production in the plant.

Q. Now, it resulted, did it not, in a complete shutdown of the plant? A. It did.

Q. And it was known that the plant had $200,000,000 in contracts for airplanes and other defense material? A. That is correct.

Q. And that is one of the reasons, is it not, that Mr. Murray, Mr. Hillman, and others in the National Defense Board, were opposed to the strike?

A. That is correct.

Q. What were they making in the plant there, Mr. Frankensteen?

A. Bombers and training planes.

Q. For the United States Army?

A. Correct.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. And also for Great Britain?

A. Also for Great Britain.

Q. What did the—the strike resulted, as you said before, in a complete shut-down?

Presiding Inspector: An absolute shutdown; 100 per cent effective. You can't get it any stronger than that. [7442]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How many planes a day are turned out of that plant a day?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think we have gone far enough into the question, however, the question of whether Mr. Bridges knew anything about it is still open.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Frankensteen, who, if you know, brought about this strike in the North American plant?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: If he knows.

A. Who brought it about?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I think a very bad management, who stalled was greatly responsible for creating the sentiment that became very difficult to control. But for the actual calling of the strike the Committee of Nine were responsible.

Q. What did you do when the strike was called?

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

A. I immediately made plans to fly out to the west coast.

Q. For what purpose?

A. For the purpose of getting the plant to,—in operation by Monday morning. [7443]

Q. When did your arrive?

A. I arrived in Los Angeles on Friday night.

Q. On Friday night? A. Yes.

Q. Did you take any action Friday night?

A. On Friday night I called a meeting—I believe I arrived on Friday morning. Let me get this right. Yes, I arrived on Friday morning. I left Detroit Thursday evening on the first plane that was available for me to go out on.

I arrived on Friday morning, at which time I immediately called a meeting of all of the International Representatives who were working on my staff. I told the staff just exactly what I knew of the situation; I told them that I had been acquainted with certain facts that involved the seriousness of this situation; I told them that it was my understanding that the sentiment in Washington was such that it might bring repressive labor legislation against, not only this group, but the entire working class of people in the plants of this country; I told them that it was my position that this strike must be ended and ended at once; I told them I had information which made it very clear to me that just what did happen would happen, that the troops would be called into this picture; I told them that we had a union there of 600 people up until the time of my arrival on the west coast when 6000 people came into the union during a three-weeks' period. I told them, in the first place that there was no justification [7444] for the strike, no justification of not exhausting the machinery we had at least until such time as we found out whether we had a chance to receive equity and justice before the Board, which I felt had been fair in their previous cases, such as the Mine Workers, Steel Workers, General Motors Workers, where decisions were rendered which were favorable to and equitable to the people involved.

I pointed that out to them and told them it was my position, the position of Mr. Philip Murray, President of my organization, that we should do everything within our power to see that that plant was put back to work on Monday morning.

I asked them to arrange a meeting, two meetings, rather, one for the following day with the members of the local negotiating committee and the chief stewards, and the Strike Committee leaders and all of the key people of the local union. I arranged that in my hotel.

I asked them if they would see to it that these people were there.

I asked them if they agreed with my position, and at that time all of them went down the line with my position completely. That includes the five men that I have since found it necessary to discharge from the payroll of my organization.

At that time they agreed to call this meeting, and to go out and arrange a mass meeting for Sunday at this field, [7445] known as the bean field, across from the North American plant.

On Saturday I had this meeting with the Committee of Nine, and this Committee was supplemented by certain other leaders from the Local Union. But they refused to come to the hotel and said they would not meet me there; that they would meet me in their own office.

I told them I wasn't very technical, or very proud, and I would go any place they wanted to meet; that it was perfectly all right with me.

I met with that Committee at their office, and I told them much of what I am saying here, and I think much stronger because I was speaking to my own people.

I thought I had a very good response from them. It seemed to me they were quite susceptible, until I called upon the Regional Director of my own organization who got up and took an opposite position.

Q. Who was that?

A. Lew Michener—despite the fact that he had been notified by the President of my organization, by Mr. Thomas, the President of his organization, that the position I was expressing was the official position of my organization, he took an opposition stand and stated that he disagreed and would not ask these people to return to work; after which Mr. Wyndham Mortimer, who was working for me as an organizer [7446] out here, also got up and took an opposition position.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

I then announced to the press that I was going over the head of the Committee. By that time, I might say, that the Committee joined in with these people who, after all, had had much more opportunity of working with these people and getting their confidence than I had had. They disagreed with my position.

I announced to the press that the meeting would be held on Sunday, at which time I would present the entire case to the workers themselves at the North American plant.

Q. This was all on Saturday?

A. On Saturday.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that on Saturday the President had declared that if the strikers did not open up the plant on Monday the War Department would take over and operate the plant?

A. Well, I am not positive as to my dates. I have lived a month in the last five days.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you covered this now?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just about.

Presiding Inspector: You have gone seven minutes over the time that you estimated. I don't want to hold you to it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you also make a broadcast on Saturday night? [7447] A. I did.

Q. And did you, in that broadcast, declare the strike was a result of the vicious underhanded maneuvering of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

A. I did.

Q. Upon what information was that based, Mr. Frankensteen.

A. It was based on the functionaries who were hanging around the office; based on the people who were writing the leaflets; it was based on information which came to me, and which I do not feel that I ought to go into at this time because I don't think it would help anything.

Q. Did you also state you were taking that opportunity to serve notice on the Communists that they must keep their hands off the policy and affairs of the Aircraft Division of the CIO?

A. I did.

Q. On the West Coast? A. I did.

Q. And didn't you also state that that went for any other groups which may have an interest in influencing the affairs of your organization?

A. I did.

Q. And you meant that, did you not?

A. I did, and I do. [7448]

Q. And did you also declare that the strike was contrary to CIO policy? A. I did.

Q. That they would lose their CIO charter?

A. I did.

Q. And of the UAW? A. That is right.

Q. And didn't you also say that you were speaking with the full support of Mr. Murray and Mr. Thomas? A. I did.

Q. When was this?

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Presiding Inspector: He said it was Sunday night.

The Witness: That was Saturday night, the broadcast.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When, on Saturday night?

A. Saturday night at seven o'clock, I believe, Los Angeles time; 7:00 or 7:30, I am not sure.

Q. Now, you say there was a mass meeting on Sunday? A. Correct.

Q. June 8th? A. Correct.

Q. What took place at that mass meeting?

A. Well, the mass meeting was called for three o'clock Sunday afternoon. There was a very fine turn-out.

Upon my arrival they started the meeting by putting on [7449] seven of the nine-man Committee ahead of me, who proceeded to harangue and point out the fact that I was trying to break their strike and lead them back to work, and break the morale of their workers, and sell them down the river. All seven of them took that approach.

I listened very patiently until it came my time to talk. When I attempted to speak, as soon as I was called to speak, a very well-planned demonstration was put on by hecklers, who were planted for that purpose. They had placards drawn with caricatures, which were not too complimentary to myself. These placards were waved at the same time, calling me a lot of things which I have never had to be called before in a meeting. Every time I attempted to speak I was howled off the mike until, finally, I had to give up.

I got over several remarks, one of which was that I urged all of these people to return to their jobs on Monday morning, and that I would again go on the air and make clear my point inasmuch as they didn't have the decency to permit me to make it there.

I also stated that it was my opinion that 70 per cent of the people in attendance at that meeting; if given an opportunity to hear a fair presentation of the case and a democratic right to vote their sentiment, would vote to immediately follow the instructions of their organization and their leadership which, in my opinion, I think is sub- [7450] stantiated by the record, has been an honest leadership and a leadership that has brought many millions of dollars worth of gains to the people who have supported that leadership.

Q. You also read a telegram from Philip Murray?

A. I did—I did not. I read a telegram from Mr. R. J. Thomas, President of the Auto Workers, which advised these people that their action was in contradiction to the policy of the organization; that it was a wildcat strike, and urging them to comply with my request and get back on the job.

I attempted to read a telegram from Philip Murray, but by that time it became impossible for me to proceed any further.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. Was Murray against the strike?

A. Murray was definitely against the strike, advising the people that it was contrary to the constitution, and urging them to support their leadership in going back to work.

Q. What did you do after that?

A. I left there and proceeded back to my hotel, after which I arranged a broadcast on the air that evening advising the workers to return to their jobs the following morning; that they were not strike-breaking, that there was no strike called; that they had not been given an opportunity of voting as to whether they wanted to return, and advising them [7451] I would not permit a minority of hecklers to thwart their legitimate interests by keeping them out on the street against their government, their union, and everything else, without an opportunity of voting. I advised them to go back in the plant.

After that I suspended the five International representatives who had refused to follow the policy of their organization, suspended the Committee, and appointed an Administrator to take over the local union.

Q. Who did you suspend?

A. I suspended Wyndham Mortimer—I fired Wyndham Mortimer and——

Q. (Interposing) Do you know whether he is a member of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know that.

I might say this, so there is no confusion on this point: I didn't fire any of these five people on the basis of any of their politics. I fired them on the basis that they refused to follow the policy of their organization, and on the basis that they had refused to accept orders from their superiors, and refused to carry out their assignments.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Q. But you were convinced that Communists were behind the calling of the strike?

A. That is correct.

Q. Who were the others?

A. Stan Douglas. [7452]

I want to say clearly all of these people are definitely not Communists.

Another was Stan Douglas—I wonder if I could get a little help on some of these—Arthur Kearns, John Orr, Sr., and John Orr, Jr.

Q. Irvin J. Smith?

A. The nine men that I have identified as members of the Committee I suspended from office in the local union.

Presiding Inspector: It is perfectly clear to me that if there is any cross examination at all it will take all day tomorrow.

Mr. Gladstein: I still don't see, your Honor, the point or the materiality of this.

Presiding Inspector: It has to be brought home to Bridges in some way.

The Witness: May I interject a point here?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: It is very urgent that I get back to Los Angeles. I think it is very dangerous for me to remain longer than tonight.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Presiding Inspector: They said that.

Mr. Gladstein: We would like to accommodate the witness and suggest that the hearing continue until the Government brings out whatever point it thinks is material in this case. [7453] It may be they will complete their examination and that there may not be any cross examination of any kind.

Presiding Inspector: We will go ahead for a few minutes longer.

I don't think they will get through with you, Mr. Frankensteen.

The Witness: I certainly hope so.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you suspend Irvin J. Smith?

A. I did.

Q. Do you know whether he is a Communist or not? A. I do not.

Q. Don't you know he registered as a Communist? A. I do not know that.

Presiding Inspector: He said he didn't.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you suspend Elmer J. Freitag?

A. I did.

Q. Do you know whether he is a Communist?

A. I don't.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does it make? Are you going to connect Mr. Bridges with all this?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes; we are going to show Bridges' connection was in support of this strike.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Presiding Inspector: You are going to connect him with [7454] all of these things?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Why doesn't counsel ask Mr. Frankensteen direct questions as to what connection, if any, Mr. Bridges has with all this?

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio is entitled to do it in his own way. Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think we have any questions at all.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused, Mr. Frankensteen. You may go.

The Witness: I would like——

Presiding Inspector: We will recess until tomorrow morning.

The Witness: May I make a statement?

Presiding Inspector: What is it?

The Witness: I want to make a statement regarding my appearance here.

A lot has been said as to why I——

Presiding Inspector: You are here under subpoena.

Mr. Del Guercio: He was subpoenaed by the Government.

Mr. Grossman: I believe he is entitled to make a statement.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. [7455]

The Witness: I would like to say that I was summoned here under a subpoena served on me in the City of Los Angeles by the Federal——

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Be seated.

The Witness: Surely.

I should like to make this statement: That it is my considered judgment that some of the patterns set in this hearing are ominous ones for the future——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) We object to the statement being made.

The Witness: (Continuing)——of legal action in the United States.

After one exhaustive trial in which Mr. Bridges was completely cleared of charges against him, there is a hollow——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I object to this.

Presiding Inspector: We will take it in the record. You have called the witness and I think you have gone far afield. I will take the statement. It doesn't make it facts. Let us hear what he has to say.

The Witness: I would like to go back and repeat the last paragraph.

After one exhaustive trial in which Mr. Bridges was completely cleared of the charges against him, there is a hollow mockery in this hearing and a double jeopardy which cannot but prejudice American workingmen against their [7456] government. They resent obvious unfairness and discriminatory practice whether it is practiced by the manufacturers for whom they work, or the government which they respect.

(Testimony of Richard T. Frankensteen.)

Attacks such as this one, aimed at a militant leader of labor who has made outstanding gains for the members of his union, and who has genuinely represented the interests of the American workers, exhaust the patience of citizens and causes them to seriously question the purpose of legitimate functions of government which may be exercised in the future.

Mr. Del Guercio: I ask that that be stricken from the record.

Presiding inspector: I will take that into consideration when the other motion to strike comes up.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: We will adjourn now.

(Whereupon, at 5:15 o'clock p.m. an adjournment was taken until Thursday, June 12, 1941, at 10:00 a. m.) [7457]

[7458]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio. You want to continue with Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I move that the unasked for statement of Mr. Frankensteen, after the direct examination and cross examination had been completed, be stricken from the record. It is not testimony in any sense of the word.

Presiding Inspector: It was not testimony. There is no objection?

Mr. Gladstein: We oppose the striking of that statement.

Presiding Inspector: Why?

Mr. Gladstein: For the reason that here is a witness called by the Government, and although we chose not to direct any questions to him on cross examination, he had a statement to make, which was more nearly related to the issues in this case than anything that was sought from him on direct examination by the Government. He had an opinion to express with respect to the hearing and the calling of the hearing.

Presiding Inspector: He expressed his opinion as to this entire proceeding and it is a criticism of the Congress of the United States and of the Attorney General acting thereunder. It has nothing to do with the evidence in this case.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to be heard on this, your [7459] Honor.

You will recall that during the testimony of Mr. Curran we sought to elicit from him what the position of the Congress of Industrial Organizations was with respect to the hearing; the second hearing in this case. Your Honor permitted that.

Presiding Inspector: Only in relation to his bias.

Mr. Gladstein: But your Honor permitted it.

Presiding Inspector: That was in relation to the bias of the witness.

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor regards it as material or admissible on that issue then your Honor may entertain this statement on the same basis.

Presiding Inspector: You mean it strengthens the Government's case?

Mr. Gladstein: I——

Presiding Inspector: Is that what you mean?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't mean that.

Presiding Inspector: That is the only conclusion that could be drawn from your argument.

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor thinks that is the basis of the admissibility, you are free to draw that inference, but we think the point is arguable. We don't think it establishes bias, but if that is the reason for which you allowed the other expression of opinion to be admitted we think this [7460] likewise should be permitted.

We think it comes queerly from the Government to put on a witness, build him up as the personal emissary of Mr. Philip Murray, head of the CIO, and obtain from him the facts concerning a strike, and which was charged yesterday, and we still feel is true, which indicates that the Government in a desperate last effort made an attempt to place the blame for what it considered an unjustified strike on Mr. Bridges shoulders.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't a matter that is before this tribunal.

Mr. Gladstein: Neither was all his testimony.

Presiding Inspector: If Mr. Bridges was acting in conflict with the leaders of the CIO an inference might be drawn from that that he was not a loyal labor man, and that is the only basis that I can see for all this testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: Is it not true that not one word was mentioned in all the testimony of Mr. Frankensteen, nor was one question asked him that in any way requested information concerning Mr. Bridges, or to connect him in any way with that strike mentioned by Mr. Frankensteen?

Presiding Inspector: You are quite right.

Mr. Gladstein: I say if the matter is immaterial at all then it seems to me that it is the position of the Government, if it wishes to have anything stricken from the [7461] record, it is the position of the Government, and its duty, to say frankly, "We have made a mistake. We thought there was material here that would be pertinent to the issues of the case, but we now see it is not and we ask that all of the testimony be stricken."

I think that should be the position of the Government if it moves to strike anything. [7462]

Presiding Inspector: Well, the time has not come for that——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): But he is now making a motion to strike portions of the testimony.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, because it is entirely irrelevant to this case.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, may I make a statement that I think is important?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I will hear you both, then Mrs. King, if she wants to.

Mr. Grossman: As I understand this case, rules of evidence—as I understand the law, rules of evidence apply both ways. In other words, a yes answer is really a no answer and a no answer is really a yes answer. If necessary, I can take the time of this Court to go through the transcript and find time and time again references in answer to questions on the part of the Government of their witnesses: Why are you testifying? Why do you think this should be done with Bridges? And the answer in every case is: I think Harry Bridges is a Communist; I think what he does is bad for the labor movement; that is the reason I am here. I am not anti-labor; I am here because I think Harry Bridges is a Communist and that is bad for the labor movement. That is one side of it.

Presiding Inspector: Wait a moment. Didn't those [7463] answers come in reply to your questions?

Mr. Grossman: No, they did not.

Mr. Del Guercio: On the contrary; they emanated from the Defense.

Mr. Gladstein: I can show from the transcript that Mr. Del Guercio asked these people while they were testifying: Do you think you are a good trade unionist? Do you think Bridges is good for trade unionism, and so on. I can find those. That is one side of it. Now, we have, too, in answer to the Government's questions, not ours, or rather, in response to questions of the Government witnesses, not ours.

we have the opposite of that, the direct opposite of that, the testimony of this witness that Harry Bridges stands for the contrary of that, stands for what is good in trade unionism. Then, that is considered irrelevant. I say it is the direct evidence and I can show in the transcript the direct opposite of the testimony of the Government witness.

Presiding Inspector: Well——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): Could I have one more thing?

Presiding Inspector: You want to allow this to stand?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: That means you want all the testimony he has given to stand? [7464]

Mr. Gladstein: Let is all stand.

Presiding Inspector: I said I would consider it together.

Mr. Gladstein: You pointed out when Mr. Del Guercio moved to strike the last remarks of Mr. Frankensteen—you pointed out that the Government had called the witness and that you thought the Government had gone far afield and you would allow the statement to be made. Now, I realize that statement on your part was made before the witness had completed his statement.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I thought he was going to make a pertinent statement.

Mr. Gladstein: I certainly think that part of it is.

Presiding Inspector: Maybe.

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor please, I call your attention to this portion of Mr. Frankensteen's statement: "Attacks such as this one, aimed at a militant leader of labor who has made outstanding gains for the members of his union, and who has genuinely represented the interests of the American workers—" and then he proceeded.

Now, there is a statement by a Government witness on an issue which definitely is pertinent in this case. Here is a witness who, pursuant to Government subpoena, showed himself as being opposed to Communists and Communism and against what he considered was the Communistic influence in a strike. [7465]

He was brought here, invited here and ordered here by the Government to establish that, and then, in effect, on cross examination, although he was not asked this, he expresses the kind of opinion evidence with respect to Mr. Bridges which already has been allowed in this case, your Honor. Therefore, on that theory his statement should not be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: He only says that incidentally.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, he says—of course, the entire statement is very short. It only consists of four or five sentences. That is one of the—— Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, I am surprised at your argument, Mr. Gladstein: I am surprised at your argument.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, we were surprised at the testimony.

Presiding Inspector: So was I.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, of course, if none of the testimony has any relevancy in the case, and very frankly from a legal point of view I think it doesn't —that was the position that we took yesterday— but I say this: Rather than have the Government go about it piecemeal and ask to strike out that which most glaringly is opposed to them, why don't they be fair and——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't think anything is opposed to them.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think the statement is.

[7466]

Presiding Inspector: I think it is more in favor of the witness. It shows the attitude which he takes when he testifies.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, all right. Then, I can't see why the Government would move to strike it. We may disagree.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I am giving you my view, not the Government.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand. We may all disagree as to what the appropriate inference is that should be drawn from that testimony, but we have our views on it, and we think first that none of that evidence was material and we moved to strike it yesterday but that motion was not granted, and we made our objections. Second, that if any part of it is to remain in the record it should all remain in the record. Third, if the Government wants to strike out any portion it should be fair and ask that it all be stricken out. That is our position.

Presiding Inspector: Well, the Court, or the Examiner, Inspector, whatever he may be, won't pass on this at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Proceed with your examination, Mr. Del Guercio.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in surrebuttal in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified as follows:

Further Cross Examination [7467]

By Mr. Del Guércio:

Q. Now, you stated here yesterday that you were in sympathy with the North American strike and that you would support the strike?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as a misstatement of the evidence. He has said he was in sympathy with the striker's demands.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I am not quite sure about that.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, the record shows that he said——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): What page, please?

Moreover, if your Honor will recall, there was a great deal of testimony as to whether Mr. Bridges supported the strike in advance or advocated it. The testimony is clear. He had nothing to do with the calling of the strike. His opinion was one that became material, if at all, after the strike had already been called and his testimony is repeatedly

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

—I have gone over the transcript this morning—that he was in sympathy with and in support of their demands.

And I call your Honor's attention to Mr. Frankensteen's testimony who said that he and Mr. Murray both felt that the demands of that union were justified.

Presiding Inspector: We are not trying the strike. [7468]

Mr. Gladstein: Well, the Government put this entire thing into issue.

Presiding Inspector: Only as bearing—the only pertinence here is its bearing on the conduct of Mr. Bridges after he had knowledge of this condition, what he did.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, the Government produced Mr. Frankensteen and didn't ask him one question concerning Mr. Bridges. What is the theory of the Government on this issue? Is it that Mr. Bridges because of his position as California CIO Director had the duty or the power to intercede in that affair, to prevent it, or after it began, to stop it, or attempt to stop it?

Presiding Inspector: Not to encourage it?

Mr. Gladstein: They haven't shown anything of any kind, nor did they ask anything of Mr. Frankensteen.

Presiding Inspector: They have shown, I think it was on Sunday, he sent a message. That was after the strike had been called. He sent a message of congratulation and best wishes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: No; of greetings and best wishes and at the same time advised them to call the strike off.

Presiding Inspector: That may be.

Mr. Gladstein: That is the testimony, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It may be.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not so, your Honor. We will [7469] prove and we will establish—— Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, go on and we will hear your examination. I don't know whether that question is correct.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did you mean——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): We will have to look up the transcript.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did you mean by sending your best wishes to Mr. Connelley and the strikers on Sunday, after the strike had been called and before the Army came in, that you would support the strike even before the National Defense Mediation Board had acted?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as being been asked and answered not once but several times yesterday and a great explanation was made as to what this kind of telegram in trade union circles means.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gladstein: When you send fraternal greetings and best wishes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think that is so, but I will let you sum it up in this one question.

A. No, that was not my position. I took no position [7470] on the strike at all. I had no detailed report. I was trying to find out what was actually taking place.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, you were in telephonic conversation with Mr. Connelly, were you not? A. Sure.

Q. During the strike?

A. Sunday morning.

Q. Yes, you knew what it was all about?

A. What was all about?

Q. What the strike was all about and what they were doing?

A. I knew what the strike was all about and I knew what was happening.

Q. Yes, and you knew and you were aware of the fact that Connelly told the strikers at this mass meeting in that field near the North American Plant on Sunday afternoon that you supported the strike and the strikers had your support?

Mr. Gladstein: Now, just one moment. I think that question is ambiguous. Obviously, Mr. Bridges —unless the Government claims he was in Los Angeles at the time this took place, and I am sure that they make no such claim——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein (Continuing): ——couldn't know what was taking place in Los Angeles on that day.

[7471]

Now, does the question refer to knowledge obtained after the event or to knowledge before the event or to authorization of the event, or to something that took place at the time of the event?

Presiding Inspector: You knew at the time? The question is as to your knowledge at the time that you sent the message.

The Witness: No. I called Connelly Sunday morning and we had a long discussion over the phone and I told Connelly that the troops were going to be in that plant, and I said "It looks bad and I don't think you can handle it", and advised him to tell the workers the circumstances, tell them that we thought that their strike was justified in so far as the demands were concerned but they were up against too much and he should advise them in the meeting that afternoon to go back to work.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Then, you did tell them that the strike was justified, didn't you?

Mr. Gladstein: I submit that has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: You can't make it any clearer, Mr. Del Guercio, than the answer does.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, have you ever repudiated what Connelly said to those strikers on Sunday?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I have——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): Just a moment, Mr. [7472] Bridges.

It assumes something not in evidence. There is no evidence as to what Connelly said to those strikers.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what Connelly said to the strikers.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I just asked him whether Connelly told the strikers on Monday, on Sunday afternoon, that Bridges supported the strike and that the strikers had his support and best wishes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there is any proof of that.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Del Guercio isn't testifying now.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am asking the witness if he does not know that.

Presiding Inspector: Let's find out what he knows. There is no proof on the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Didn't you know that Connelly had so stated to the strikers there on Sunday?

A. I didn't; I don't know yet.

Q. Didn't you read the newspaper accounts of what Connelly said?

A. That is the whole trouble; that is the whole trouble. You go too much by the newspapers. I have got the telegrams of Connelly in answer to me contradicting those newspaper accounts and notifying me that the story in the newspapers [7473] is incorrect, that he made no such statement.

Q. How many telephone conversations did you have with Connelly on Sunday?

A. Two or three.

Q. Was it before or after he had addressed the strikers? A. Only one before.

Q. How many after?

A. I think a couple.

Q. What did you tell him before the address?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as not having already been asked and answered once, but it has been gone into three times.

Presiding Inspector: This will be four. Go ahead.

A. I can give you the entire conversation that took place Sunday morning.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Give us that conversation.

A. I had spoken to Lou Goldblatt. We talked the matter over for two hours Saturday night, and we tried to get Connelly Saturday night; not only Connelly, but Frankensteen and any of the other leaders down there. I tried up to 11:30 in my office before I went home.

So I had two or three long distance calls pending Sunday morning.

I talked with Goldblatt again Sunday morning and we [7474] reached a decision Saturday night that the strike should be called off.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Sunday morning I called Connelly and asked him for a complete report on the whole matter, what the Committee had done back in Washington, what they had reported back to the local union, what, if any, commitments had been made, and what the whole thing looked like.

Connelly was enthusiastic. He said, "Well, I have never seen anything like it. There is eight thousand or nine thousand young people down here, all young people, and you will have to be a second generation of America to work in the aircraft plants. They are mostly southwesterners, people from Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas. They are plenty tough and they were pretty wild and determined to get that 75 cents an hour." They had been under terrific pressure down there on this $19.60 a week, for many reasons, and it was all they could see. I even knew that. He didn't have to tell me that.

Connelly said, "Well, yesterday my wife and I, and my daughter, spent all day with the strikers, their wives and children, talking to them, feeling out the sentiment, seeing what they stood for, and how they felt."

He said, "It seems to me it is 100 per cent." He said, "To try and chase those people back to work is dynamite." He says, "Gosh, they will lynch me." [7475]

We talked about the strike, going back to the time that the Committee was in Washington with the Mediation Board. I got the whole history of that up to date.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

It finally wound up by me telling Connelly, I said, "I am in this position: You are down there. I haven't been there lately. I have only the reports. You are on the job. You know what the feeling is. You know what the people think. You are much closer to the situation. So I guess your judgment might be a little better than mine, but I haven't changed my mind yet. I still think it is too hot, and you ought to advise the workers to go back to work."

Q. You didn't——

A. (Interposing): Just a moment.

Then I said, "I am going to call Michener, or Frankensteen."

Connelly says, "I don't know." he says, "If you call Michener I don't know what good it will do. He is pretty set and he is pretty determined." He says, "You will throw him in a state of uncertainty and I don't think you will do yourself any good. He will just ignore you."

Then I asked about Frankensteen. I said, "I think I will call Frankensteen."

So he said, "Well, after yesterday afternoon's meeting——" Frankensteen had gone to the meeting the day before and it had been a very turbulent meeting, and he had gone on the air the night before and criticized the strikers, the leaders and so [7476] forth, and, he said, "The feeling between Michener and the other local leaders and the members, is very bitter." He said, "I don't know if you will do any good by getting in touch with Franken-

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

steen. If you do why don't you notify the strikers you are doing it."

I talked about Michener or Wyndham Mortimer again.

The whole thing finally wound up by me closing my conversation with, "Well, maybe you fellows know what you are doing. But I still am of the same opinion. Anyway, I wish you luck. Say 'Hello,' to the strikers for me."

Now, that was all that was said.

Immediately then I got ahold of Goldblatt——

Q. (Interposing): Are you through with the telephone conversation you had with Connelly in the morning? That is all I asked you about.

A. Yes. I don't know if I had another one with him. I was thinking—I got hold of Goldblatt——

Q. (Interposing): Are we through with the telephone conversation with Connelly?

A. Yes.

Q. Let me ask you this: Then you knew Sunday morning what agreement had been reached before the National Mediation Board in Washington, D. C., didn't you?

A. No. Connelly told me, and Goldblatt told me that there had been no agreement reached.

[7477]

Q. No agreement reached? A. Yes.

Q. Isn't this what actually happened: You had received orders from the Communist Party to support this strike; and when you realized the asinine mistake you had made you tried to retract, but it was too late, isn't that what actually happened?

A. You are just a fool.

Q. You are the fool.

A. Do you want me to explain about the aircraft situation?

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. We must keep order in this proceeding.

Ask the next question.

Mr. Gladstein: Certain answers seem to be naturally called for to certain questions.

Presiding Inspector: No discussion.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You were aware that the President and the Congress of the United States had established this National Defense Mediation Board?

A. I am well aware of it.

Q. And you were aware that the Union down there, and the representatives of the Company, Company officials, had put this dispute before the National Defense Mediation Board? [7478]

A. I am aware of much more than that. I think I had ought to be allowed to explain what led up to that.

Q. And you——

A. (Interposing) I am aware of this much——

Presiding Inspector: You will have an opportunity.

The Witness: All right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And you professed, did you not, that you would only resort to a strike only after mediation and negotiations had failed?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: That is a misstatement of the evidence. The witness' testimony to that is—— Presiding Inspector: I don't think he is quoting the evidence. He is asking him independently.

Mr. Gladstein: We are now going into the question—if Mr. Del Guercio wants to open this up in detail—as to whether it is possible for a labor leader to say, "I am in favor of never striking until there has been mediation or until there has been arbitration"——

Presiding Inspector: That is argumentative. We will let him answer the question. It doesn't purport to be a quotation from the evidence.

Mr. Gladstein: Very well.

A. At the last meeting of the National Executive Council of the CIO, I think the action, of the vote on the [7479] proposal at that time was unanimous, and I voted for it. We discussed the entire defense situation and its relation to labor, and the Council worked out a plan that the facilities of all Government agencies would be used to the fullest extent before a strike was called. I followed that program absolutely.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. But you knew on Sunday, and before you sent your best wishes to the strikers, and your support, you knew then that this strike had been branded as an outlaw strike by Philip Murray?

A. I did not.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You hadn't read the newspaper account of it?

A. I received no word—and I can't go by the newspapers.

Q. You heard Mr. Frankensteen testify yesterday that it had. Do you believe Mr. Frankensteen?

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't proper.

Mr. Gladstein: That is argumentative and improper.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew, did your not, that this strike was a Communist inspired strike?

Presiding Inspector: Do you know that?

A. I don't, no—I am sure it was not. [7480]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You heard Mr. Frankensteen testify on the stand that it was a Communist inspired strike?

Mr. Gladsteen: I object to that as improper and I think counsel should be cautioned that that is not the proper method of questioning the witness: whether he heard somebody, and whether he believes him or not. As your Honor has ruled a dozen times, that is not proper questioning.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: This witness here is a CIO official. He is the State CIO Director.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Here is Mr. Frankensteen, who is also a higher official than this witness in the CIO ranks, who appears on the stand here and testifies, and states under oath that this strike at the North American plant was Communist inspired. He knew what he was talking about.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: But this man may not know. You already asked him and he said that he doesn't know. In fact, he says he knows it isn't.

Mr. Grossman: If anything——

Presiding Inspector: I have ruled in your favor.

Mr. Grossman: Did you say he could ask a question about it being Communist inspired?

Presiding Inspector: He did. [7481]

Mr. Gladstein: It was asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: And he answered it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you tell Connelly on Sunday, at any time on Sunday, that he should urge the strikers to go back to work and wait until the National Defense Mediation Board had acted? A. Yes.

Q. When was that? A. Sunday morning.

Q. Sunday morning.

A. Yes. Well, I didn't do it in this way—I didn't tell Connelly in effect, "Here is what I order you to do." I gave him my judgment. I said, "If I was handling this, this is what I would do, and advise the strikers that the circumstances"—the whole conversation turned around that point. I told Connelly that the men were 100 per cent right in their demands; that in so far as the strike was concerned, under ordinary circumstances it might be one matter; under the present circumstances it was an entirely different thing; and in view of all the facts and the conditions it was my judgment that the people down there in charge should work to call it off.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

You have got to understand I had no authority in that strike. I was never contacted, and interfered of my own volition. As a matter of fact, I exceeded my authority, [7482] and that is all you can do in these cases. I was not called into the strike by Frankensteen, or any of the local leaders, or Philip Murray. I went ahead of my own idea at that time, because I thought it had gone far enough, and I started to step in and see what I could do.

Q. Was it your own idea?

A. My own idea; no other except my own idea and that is where it came from.

Q. You sent a telegram on June 11, 1941, to Mr. Connelly, did you not, or did you send it to Lou Goldblatt to give to Mr. Connelly?

A. To the strikers.

Q. The strikers?

A. Yes. I sent a telegram down there to that Tuesday morning meeting.

Q. Did you state in that telegram in part as follows, on June 11th, after the army had taken over the plant:

"I sincerely and urgently advise the North American workers to return to work as an organized body in view of the extreme circumstances."?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you state that? A. Yes.

Q. Did you also state:

"There can be no question that their strike was for a [7483] just and reasonable demand."?

A. Right.

Q. Did you state that? A. Right.

Q. Did you also state:

"Expressly so when we recognize the tremendous profits being made by airplane manufacturers under Government contracts."?

Did you state that? A. I did.

Q. Did you also state:

"My recommendation to end strike takes into consideration the array of powerful forces aligned against the strikers and no body of workers, no matter how courageous and how just their fight is, can be expected to face such odds as the United States Government, its armed forces and the hysterical propaganda aimed at inciting the American people against labor's struggles."

Did you state that? A. And how I did!

Q. Did you also state:

"The striking workers should know that they have demonstrated their solidarity"——?

A. They have to.

Q. You got that in the Communist Party Manifesto, [7484] "Solidarity," didn't you?

(Laughter from spectators.)

A. (No answer.)

Q. Didn't you also state:

"* * * and fighting ability to the entire nation and that a return to work in face of the odds against them is no defeat but an organized and strategic retreat in the interests of their own membership and of all labor."

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Did you state that?

A. I certainly did. I stated a little more.

Q. Why didn't——

A. (Interposing) I stated a little more.

Q. Why did you state that they should return to work only because of the odds against them?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is a misstatement. I don't recall the telegram stating they should return only because of the odds against them.

Presiding Inspector: But he gave certain reasons.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Del Guercio is only entitled to quote from the telegram and ask, "Did you say that?"

Presiding Inspector: I think that is argument.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think the Court can draw the inference from the telegram.

Presiding Inspector: I think the evidence is in.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7485]

Q. You knew at that time when you sent this telegram that the North American Plant was engaged in turning out airplanes and other vital needs for the national defense, didn't you?

A. I have known that for years.

Q. Are you in sympathy with that?

A. Just what do you mean?

Q. With the turning out of airplanes and other implements of war in aid of national defense?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A That all depends.

Q. It all depends—you have a qualification, haven't you?

A. Those plants have been turning out airplanes for some years past. I know where some of them have gone. I can tell you we done something about it. You are asking me about aircraft, and outside of foreign influences, I can tell you something because I reported it to your department a couple of years ago. If you want my attitude on it I am ready to give it to you.

Q. You knew that the calling of that strike has paralyzed a vital defense industry?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is immaterial, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is immaterial.

The Witness: I want to get this clear.

Presiding Inspector: You are not to answer yet.

[7486]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And in spite of all that——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) All what?

Presiding Inspector: I excluded the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: You excluded it?

Presiding Inspector: It is all argumentative. I don't think there is any evidential value in the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did you mean to say in this wire that you sent Connelly, through Lou Goldblatt, that if the strikers were strong enough to resist the United States Army they should continue to encourage, that Connelly should continue to encourage them in remaining out on strike—is that what you meant to say?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. If you want an explanation of what I meant to say you will get it. I can explain the telegram, and how it was sent, and why, and in conjunction with who. That telegram was sent in conjunction with Philip Murray and Richard Frankensteen.

Q. Had you discussed this with Murray and Frankensteen?

A. Yes. They knew exactly what I was going to do.

Q. On June 11th?

A. Oh, yes, sir. I was talking with Philip Murray from 4:00 o'clock in the morning on.

Q. Had you been in contact with Mr. Frankensteen on [7487] June 11th?

A. I called him just before I sent the wire.

Q. And did you read the wire that you sent through Goldblatt to Frankensteen?

A. I told him exactly what I was going to send. I called Frankensteen twice and, in between times, I called the local leaders down there and advised them to do the same thing, and said the wire was going down in conjunction with Murray and Frankensteen, and I mentioned it in the wire. You didn't read it.

Q. This was after the army——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Do I understand that counsel has been reading only a part of the telegram and not all of it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: That is what the witness says.

Mr. Del Guercio: Unfortunately, I only have that portion of the telegram that was quoted in the People's World, a Communist newspaper.

Mr. Grossman: Do you consider it reliable?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, I do not, but your client here does, and has so stated.

Presiding Inspector: Let's not——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Evidently you consider it——

Presiding Inspector: Quiet! Go on with this pro- [7488] ceeding in an orderly fashion.

Mr. Del Guercio: That remark from counsel was unnecessary.

Presiding Inspector: Go on.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let's see what your attitude was in the lumbermen's strike in the northwest.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial. Now we are going into the lumbermen's strike.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that is on the same point.

Mr. Gladstein: So far there is no point at all. You practically said the same thing, your Honor, in agreement with our contention as far as the North American is concerned.

Presiding Inspector: I say, and I still say that the only point in all this testimony is as to the action of Mr. Bridges as a labor leader.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: And it may have some point. I am not saying whether it has or not. Of course, there is another implication which counsel seeks to draw; that, in view of the testimony of Mr. Frankensteen, there is action of this witness which the Government may claim indicates his affiliation with the Communist Party.

Now, you may say that is a far-drawn, far-fetched con- [7489] clusion. That is argumentative.

Mr. Gladstein: That would be the least by way of characterization.

Presiding Inspector: I merely intimated that that may be a possible claim. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is one of our claims.

Mr. Gladstein: Then that is the sort of thing that you can find in page after page of the Dies Committee hearings, nothing but that sort of thing. You cannot establish anything with legal probative value in this case by having one witness get up on the stand and say, "I believe, or I have information to the effect that a certain strike was Communist inspired," and then, without anything more, because Mr. Bridges sent a telegram of greetings and best wishes to the workers who were on strike against conditions of $19.60 a week, claim that an inference should be drawn that Mr. Bridges is affiliated with the Communist Party. It is not just a question of being far-fetched. I think we have simply exhausted all possible imaginative limits of probative value. If the Government is willing to say now that that is the theory of their case, and that is the kind of evidence that they intend to rely on in their effort to deport Mr. Bridges,—well, I suppose we have to sit back and listen to them do it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

But we still want to make our legal objection, and we want the record to clearly show it. [7490]

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel had full opportunity to cross examine Mr. Frankensteen concerning his statement here that this strike was Communist inspired. They apparently believed it and let it go because they didn't cross examine him on it.

Mr. Grossman: When we are talking about whether a strike is Communist inspired, we have what is considered in any court a legal conclusion. When we consider that Mr. Frankensteen stated clearly and positively that this strike was 100 per cent solid, what did he mean by that? He meant 12,000 workers who favored the strike. When he states it was Communist inspired, he didn't mean that they were all Communists. He was giving his legal conclusion. He is entitled to his opinion. We are not stating he is not. But to state that Mr. Frankensteen even intended to give something as factual testimony, is not correctly stating it. He was giving his opinion, solely his opinion, not purporting to be facts and it cannot be treated as if it were facts. Other people would reach a different conclusion from the same facts. Other people would say, "If 12,000 workers are solid, it couldn't be Communist inspired." Obviously, it is a conclusion.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: In addition, you must keep in mind the testimony of Mr. Frankensteen which he previously gave, and this was brought out in response to questions that were [7491] directed to him by the Government, that the leaders of the Strike Committee, for example, the men whom he found it necessary to discharge because they didn't obey the orders of the International Union, he said were not Communists.

Presiding Inspector: He said that in the case of some of them.

Mr. Grossman: All of them.

Mrs. King: Every one of them.

Presiding Inspector: He said that he did not discharge them because of any political views.

Mr. Grossman: He stated more than that. He stated those men discharged were definitely not Communistic and those, he stated, were the men who called the strike. That is according to his own testimony. Therefore, as Mr. Gladstein has pointed out, we are faced with this: That is whether one who merely thinks a strike is Communist inspired is enough to label anyone a Communist who supports it.

Mr. Gladstein: On page 7453 is part of an answer where Mr. Frankensteen is listing the people whom he suspended, or discharged. On the previous page it started:

"Q. Who did you suspend?

"A. I suspended Wyndham Mortimer."

Then he was asked:

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

"Q. Do you know whether he is a member of the Communist Party? [7492]

"A. I don't know that."

Then he went on to say:

"I might say this, so there is no confusion on this point. I didn't fire any of these five people on the basis of any of their politics."

Later on he was asked:

"Q. Who were the others that you fired?"

He answered by naming Stan Douglas, and then he said:

"I want to say clearly all of these people are definitely not Communists."

The Government, it seems, is bound by the testimony of their own witness on that.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I proceed?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, proceed.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, June 11, 1941, when you sent this telegram to Connelly, through Lou Goldblatt, was the first time since the strike had been called that you came out publicly urging the strikers to return to work, isn't that a fact?

A. I didn't even come out publicly then. I haven't yet.

Q. But your telegram was published, was it not?

A. I don't know what happened to it. I know it was read, according to my instructions to the person to whom it was sent. Whether it was published or not I don't know. [7493]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You intended it to be read, didn't you?

A. That is right. It was read to the members, strikers.

Q. Now, did you, on June 6, 1941, send this wire to O. M. Orton, President of the CIO International Woodworkers of America:

"You have our unqualified and wholehearted support in your stand against the union smashing proposals of the National Defense Mediation Board. Congratulations on your courage and determination in the face of the extreme pressure that is being put upon you to sign away the fundamental rights and living standards of your membership."?

A. Did I send that?

Q. Yes? A. No.

Q. Didn't you and Matt Meehan send that wire?

A. No.

Q. Who sent it?

A. Matt Meehan sent it and signed "Matt Meehan and Bridges." I knew nothing about it. I read an account of it in the press and I sent a follow-up wire and said, "The wire does not represent my sentiment or opinions." That wire, I am sure, was sent on the same date, a little later than that one you refer to, and it is in the possession of Orton, and I have a carbon copy of it. [7494]

Q. Do you have a carbon copy with you?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. May I see it?

A. I do not have it with me. I can get it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Does counsel have it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: No. We didn't anticipate questions of this kind. We will supply the telegram.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You are sure that this was sent the same day or the following day, on June 7th?

A. I am not sure. After all, we had our own strike——

Q. (Interposing) Let me refresh your memory. Is this the wire that you followed it up with:

"I.L.W.U. pledges full support to strike for improved hours wages working conditions of N. W. lumber workers against the notorious Weyerhauser. National defense should mean decent wage-hour standards just as important as large profits of industrial corporations. We regret that employer representatives on National Mediation Board were apparently able to influence Board against strike and sincerely hope you may be successful in urging C.I.O. Representatives on Board to offer reasonable basis for returning to work with substantial increase improvement for workers involved."

Is that the telegram you have in mind?

A. Yes. [7495]

Q. What is there in that telegram about you repudiating the one sent by Matt Meehan in connection with which he used your name?

A. I had better tell you the whole thing.

Q. Will you answer that question? What is there in that telegram wherein you repudiated everything sent in the earlier telegram on June 6th?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: The telegram speaks for itself.

A. There was another telegram. It is not in this telegram.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You sent another wire?

A. There is another wire; yes. Not only that, but I called Orton on the long distance phone, in the presence of Matt Meehan, as soon as the telegram came to my attention. I asked Meehan whether he sent the wire and he said "Yes." We had a discussion on it. I said, "I don't approve of the position taken by Orton, of any statements he has made carrying the implication that Philip Murray or Tom Kennedy were participating in the union's fight."

I called Orton immediately and I said, "I had no part in that telegram. It doesn't represent my sentiments and I advise you to wire Mr. Murray an apology if he has read that implication in your message." I said, "I am sending you a telegram to this effect, saying I had nothing to do with the [7496] sending of that telegram sent by Matt Meehan, and I will send you an official telegram expressing the opinion of our organization in connection with your strike."

You have got in there.

Q. The one I read last?

A. Then I have another telegram saying that the telegram sent and signed by Meehan does not in any way represent my sentiments, and so forth.

Q. Now, on the same day——

A. (Interposing) I can produce it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was the CIO represented on the National Defense Mediation Board? A. Sure.

Q. Who is that?

A. Philip Murray, Thomas Kennedy, they are the two ranking ones. There are panels and they change around.

Q. And you knew, prior to the sending of these telegrams to O. M. Orton, that O. M. Orton had had a conference with the National Defense Mediation Board in Washington, D. C., did you not?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the question as being vague. Three telegrams have been mentioned. To which are you referring?

Mr. Del Guercio: All the telegrams.

Mr. Gladstein: You see, that is the point. The third [7497] telegram, the one signed by Matt Meehan, the only evidence there is on that is that it was a telegram not authorized by the witness to have been sent.

Presiding Inspector: But there is the first one.

Mr. Gladstein: But the question, in its present form, attempts to put into the record a question which——

Presiding Inspector: Let me hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: It is put in a passive form. It doesn't imply that this man sent that Meehan-Bridges telegram. I will take it with that understanding.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I knew that they had been in Washington conferring with the Mediation Board; yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And in sending the wire that you did, even the wire on June 7th, not to say anything about the first wire, you were defying, were you not, the National Defense Mediation Board?

A. What do you mean, "defying the Mediation Board"?

Q. Opposing it.

A. Well, if it is going to be illegal to oppose the Mediation Board it is something new to me. Any time I think the Mediation Board is making a recommendation to a group of workers that is not going to do the workers any good, I hope [7498] we still have the right to oppose it—possibly that is going to end soon—but at least we still have that right, and that position.

Q. And you set yourself up as a one-man judge to judge the National Defense Mediation Board?

A. No, I didn't; oh, no, I didn't. I was requested—after all, our unions work closely with the Woodworkers and the——

Q. (Interposing) North American?

A. And the North American?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, yes.

Q. Pretty close together? A. Yes.

Q. You know what is going on all the time?

A. I try to. I know pretty much what is going on. I would like to have you go into some of it, but in the case of the IWA, the two unions work very closely together.

When a group of workers are on strike, at least, they think they are right. When you are going to change their mind you don't want to kick them around the ears, but to handle them decently, and because we have always done that they listen to us.

Q. You don't believe that the representatives of the CIO on the National Defense Mediation Board can properly take [7499] care of those matters?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as argumentative and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is pure argument.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Are you setting yourself up as superior to Sidney Hillman and to Philip Murray?

Mr. Gladstein: The same objection; it is argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: I thing that is argumentative.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You heard Mr. Frankensteen broadcast Saturday, didn't you? A. I didn't

Q. You didn't?

A. That is why I couldn't get him. I was trying to reach him on the long distance phone and he was broadcasting. I didn't hear him broadcast, nothing. I knew nothing about it until Sunday morning. I was tired and went home and went to bed Saturday night.

Q. Now, let's go back to your differences here, alleged differences with Harry Lundeberg. Isn't it a fact that your only differences with Harry Lundeberg have been that you are following the Communist Party line and that Harry Lundeberg is not, isn't that correct?

A. I don't think so. Lundeberg doesn't worry us much. [7500]

Q. That is the only fundamental difference between you and Harry Lundeberg.

A. All the differences I have had with Lundeberg have been on matters of policy in the Maritime industry, or in trade unions generally. But Lundeberg is not a large person; he is a small worry to us. [7501]

Q. And your only other difference with Harry Lundeberg is your disappointment that you were unable to get him into the Communist Party; isn't that a fact?

A. Well, after seeing him up here—he landed up here where I always figured he would land and it may be a good job he didn't get in, but I had nothing to do with it one way or the other.

Q. And Harry Lundeberg is not fighting you and has not been fighting you as an individual but is fighting you as a Communist; isn't that a fact?

A. I don't know. Lundeberg might be able to distinguish the difference.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Well, I think he can much better than you can.

A. Well, we might differ on that.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, we have got to have questions, Mr. Del Guercio, and not argument from counsel.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you admitted that you had Harry Lundeberg up to dinner just once; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. That was the only time you had him up to your house, just that one time? [7502]

A. That is right.

Q. You never invited him before for dinner and you never invited him afterwards for dinner up to your house?

A. Oh, I think it is possible I had invited him before, that either he couldn't make it or I couldn't make it.

Q. You say at the time you did invite him when he was up at your house your wife was present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say there was another woman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, who was that other woman?

A. I think Lundeberg's testimony was correct in that I think it was Norma Perry.

Q. And she was your secretary at that time?

A. Yes; I think she brought him up there.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. She was your secretary at that time, wasn't she?

A. She was my secretary.

Q. Employed by you?

A. No; employed by the union.

Q. And working under your supervision?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Have you ever heard of Harry Lundeberg having conferences with Communist Party leaders like Sam Darcy, Schneidermann, Morris Rapport, and others of that kind, Elmer [7503] Hanoff?

A. Heard from who? Heard it from——

Q. (Interposing) Do you know of your own knowledge whether he had conferences with those Communist Party leaders?

A. No, I don't know; I don't remember.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. There is a mistaken idea that Lundeberg has a lot to do with—that I keep track of him and all the rest of it, but I don't know what Lundeberg does. He is small potatoes.

Q. He is what?

A. He is not very important in our affairs, you know.

Q. As a matter of fact, he is a lot bigger than you are; isn't that a fact?

Mr. Gladstein: Now, I think——

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't mean physically, either.

Presiding Inspector: Just a minute. I am not sure but what the answer of the witness gave some basis for that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: What does the previous question say?

Presiding Inspector: The witness volunteered a statement as to the size of Mr. Lundeberg.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I understood that, your Honor, but nevertheless if an answer is not properly in the record, then, the appropriate thing to do is to move to strike it as being unresponsive.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose he cares to strike [7504] it.

Mr. Gladstein: It is not for Mr. Del Guercio to begin arguing with the witness and to phrase questions of the last kind.

Presiding Inspector: That is true.

Mr. Gladstein: Which certainly can't advance us.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am not trying to argue with the witness. I am trying to get the truth from him. I know I am not succeeding.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that be stricken as highly improper.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I will strike that out. I don't think this question helps any.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, yesterday I offered for identification a document, the agreement reached before the National Defense Mediation Board.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have today a certified copy of the agreement entered into before the representatives of the North American Aviation, Incorporated and the United Automobile Workers of America, CIO, Local 683, entered into May 27, 1941, furnished by or certified to as being a correct copy by Ralph T. Seward, the Executive Secretary of the National Defense Mediation Board. I desire to substitute this for the one I [7505] offered yesterday.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: You may put it in, but you have had a reference to the other in the testimony of Frankensteen. I wouldn't substitute it. This is merely corroborative or a little more official. I don't think it is really necessary.

Mr. Gladstein: It really isn't because apparently it is——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No, the same thing. It may be well, though, to have it in the record. I will take it but I don't think it can be substituted because it would affect the testimony of Mr. Frankensteen.

Mr. Gladstein: As well as portions of the other document which were referred to Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: That I don't remember.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 294.)

Mr. Del Guercio: And I also desire to offer at this time the Federal Register containing an executive order ordering the taking over of the North American Plant by the Army.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is very material. You have got the fact in.

Mr. Del Guercio: We want the executive order to show the exact situation here, a National Emergency existing, the public announcement of the President on Sunday. [7506]

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how it is any more harmful to you.

Mr. Gladstein: It isn't, your Honor. It is simply the question we raised yesterday.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 295.)

Mr. Gladstein: If the existence of a National Emergency means that rules of law must be suspended in this case and immaterial matters admitted, I suppose, it must be done.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: I notice the document substituted for the document that was introduced for identification doesn't seem to be the same. If there is any difference we wish the other document to continue for identification.

Now, isn't it true that it is not the same document?

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no difference in so far as the agreement is concerned, so far as I know.

Mr. Grossman: There is more to the other than the agreement you asked questions on.

Presiding Inspector: We didn't strike the other.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: Is it still in?

Presiding Inspector: Still in.

Mr. Grossman: I thought it was substituted.

[7507]

Presiding Inspector: No, I couldn't allow it to be substituted. That would affect the testimony of Mr. Frankensteen who made reference to the other.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all, if the Court please, except with the reservation of the other matter we have in mind.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: Yesterday, I believe Mr. Del Guercio, you wanted to introduce in evidence some other pages of an IWW publication. I brought those other pages with me. I didn't know which ones you wanted.

Mr. Del Guercio: All of them.

(Whereupon the documents referred to were passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I would like to suggest while this is being done, so we can go over our notes to see what, if any, redirect examination we wish to make, that we might take a short recess, our morning recess at this time.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, we will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Gladstein: We will only have a question or two, your Honor.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Shall we proceed?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. [7508]

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Has it ever been true that your only difference, or any difference between you and Harry Lundeberg has been the question of following the Communist Party line or the question of Mr. Lundeberg joining the Communist Party?

A. I have never had any single difference with him on that point at no time.

Q. Have your differences been other than those which have been described in your testimony yesterday?

A. No, simply trade union policies, that is all, tactics.

Q. Did you ever in your home or at any other place ever tell Harry Lundeberg that you were a member of the Communist Party?

A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been gone into, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I don't know that it has.

Mr. Grossman: No, that was not gone into.

Presiding Inspector: I thought that was answered.

Mr. Grossman: No, it was not. That was omitted. That is why it is asked today.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I think it was answered the same [7509] way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Or did you ever say in these words or in substance that he had nothing to be afraid of, that he should join the Communist Party?

A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further from this witness?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, excepting for that matter that——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes. You have finished with this witness?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, sir.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We have one other witness. We have a short witness here, about five minutes.

Presiding Inspector: Better call him.

Mr. Gladstein: Before we rest I wish to make this statement: I realize it is not in the nature of evidence, your Honor—you will recall during the cross examination of Mr. Lundeberg that a question was raised as to the membership of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific at the very start of the 1934 strike.

Presiding Inspector: The number of members.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, sir; and at our request Mr. Lundeberg agreed that a representative of our office or of the Defense could examine the files of that union. [7510]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gladstein: We have taken advantage of that opportunity and I simply point this out: Our representative, in the presence of Mr. Lundeberg and Mr. Prevost, an assistant of Mr. Lundeberg, and also in the presence of a third man, on June 11th at about 8:45 in the morning in the office of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific, was shown certain files containing certain cards, membership cards, and he was directed to three files in particular and was told that those files contained the membership cards indicating dues payments prior to 1934 and particularly prior to the 1934 strike.

These cards, all of the cards represented the total membership of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific for a long period of time and our representative was told that there were probably between two and three thousand cards in those boxes. It was impossible for him, in the time that he had, to examine all of the cards so he examined a sampling of one hundred cards at random. In the first group of 40 that he examined there were four which indicated dues payments during the month of May 1935, or during any of the three months immediately prior thereto.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this testimony?

Mr. Gladstein: No; I stated this is not testimony; I have stated that. I make this statement because of something that I wish to say for the record. [7511]

In the next group of 40 samples there were seven such cards.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose you ought to substantiate this if it is going to be of any effect.

Mr. Gladstein: I realize that it will not have probative effect.

Presiding Inspector: No probative value, but there is something you are coming to?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, sir. In the last group of 20 there were no such cards.

Now, in a great many of the cases of the cards, of the 100 cards that were examined the stamps indicated dues payments for such early years as 1919 or 1926 or 1928, and then there would be a lapse or gap between those early years and some later year such as 1936, and many of the cards bore notations to the effect that the member was reinstated upon the payment of four months dues and the date of reinstatement was given as some time in 1935 or late in 1934 or some later date.

Now, it would obviously be impossible, unless we wished to extend the hearing, to take the time to make a complete analysis of those cards.

We do not feel that the matter is of sufficient importance to warrant that and we don't feel that the hearing should be protracted for that reason, so I make this statement simply because if I did not do so the record would show that we had [7512] made a request of Mr. Lundeberg and that had we said nothing else as to what had been done with respect to that request an inference might be drawn that we had not taken advantage of it, or were apprehensive about doing so. That is the reason that I make this statement.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I think, of course, the entire statement should be stricken in view of counsel's statement that it has no probative value. It is argument of counsel.

Presiding Inspector: All they want it to appear, they took advantage of the offer but they could come to no conclusion on it.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is the only statement I think should be permitted to stand in the record.

Presiding Inspector: Well, that is the essence. I think, and that is what I will take from it.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we call our next witness?

Mr. Gladstein: What is this? Surrebuttal?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what this is. We have lost all track of——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) It seems to me your Honor, we should not be required to close our case before the Government calls its last witness because that witness may affect the future conduct of our case. [7513]

Presiding Inspector: All right, I will take that into consideration if you throw yourself on the mercy of the Inspector.

Mr. Gladstein: Is this the last witness, Mr. Del Guercio?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Call the witness.

FOSTER HAILEY,

called as a witness in rebuttal on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: State your name for the reporter.

The Witness: Foster Hailey, H-a-i-l-e-y.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Hailey?

A. Reporter.

Q. With what newspaper?

A. The New York Times.

Q. Were you present in Los Angeles on Sunday the 9th of May, 1941?

A. Is that Sunday.

Q. Yes. A. Yes, I was.

Q. And where were you in Los Angeles? [7514]

A. Well, I was at various places.

Q. Well, did you attend a mass meeting of the strikers of the North American Corporation on that day? A. I did.

Q. And did you hear—where was that held?

A. Well, it was held in what they call a bean field, a big open field to the north of the North American Aviation Company Plant.

Q. And who was present, that is, what kind of an affair was it?

A. Well, it was a meeting of the—supposed to be a meeting of the strikers at the plant.

Q. And who was addressing the strikers?

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

A. Well, there were several people addressing the strikers. First, there were the members of Local 683's Negotiating Committee; then, Mr. Frankensteen. Following that I went to telephone my story to that point to New York City, and then I returned and heard other speakers.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Connelly speak?

A. I did.

Q. Did you hear what Mr. Connelly—did Mr. Connelly say anything with reference to Harry Bridges? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as calling for [7515] hearsay, your Honor, of a secondary character and as being immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, this isn't hearsay. We have now that situation there at the strike. We have Harry Bridges' admission that he sent his best wishes and his support to the strikers. We have Bridges' admission that he was in telephonic conversation there with Connelly.

Presiding Inspector: Afterwards?

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: Afterwards?

Mr. Del Guercio: Afterwards. We say before, too.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Was he in communication with Connelly afterwards?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, before and afterwards.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, if your Honor please, as I understand it, the Government is now attempting to prove something that Mr. Bridges is supposed to have done or said by——

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, to Connelly.

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——by virtue of what Mr. Hailey says he heard Mr. Connelly say.

Now, if your Honor please, that is the kind of hearsay that is inadmissible particularly in view of the fact that the Government has not established the unavailability of Mr. Connelly. [7516]

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Then of course, the primary proof as to whether Mr. Bridges authorized anybody to say anything, if so, what would come directly from Mr. Bridges, that has been gone into. Now, if the Government wishes to claim any conflict, or that it wishes to finish the picture, if a man named Connelly is supposed to have said something, if there is no proof that he is unavailable—and there hasn't been any such proof—then, I think it is their obligation to produce Mr. Connelly, not somebody who happened to be down there and heard Mr. Connelly's remarks.

How can Mr. Bridges be bound by that sort of testimony?

Presiding Inspector: I don't think he can.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, you must understand that Mr. Connelly was speaking for Harry Bridges. He is also a representative of the CIO and a representative of Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: No, that doesn't make any difference. It is a question of evidence here. Shouldn't you produce Mr. Connelly?

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, of course, Mr. Connelly is unavailable to us on account of his position in the matter.

Presiding Inspector: That wouldn't make any difference. He is subject to subpoena. [7517]

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Frankensteen is one of the same kind of witnesses and he came in response to the subpoena.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am talking about the Communist Party.

Mr. Goodwin: May I say something?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, surely.

Mr. Goodwin: We are not obliged to call Mr. Connelly and rely on his testimony. I don't see that there is any limitation on the hearsay rule because we are having this witness repeat what Mr. Connelly said. Now, I think it sufficiently appears in the record that Mr. Connelly is an officer of the trade union, a trade union officer in the State of California and that Mr. Bridges is also an officer in the CIO in California. This strike occurred in California. Mr. Connelly was addressing a body of strikers, addressing them in his official position as an officer and advising them, reporting to them, in fact, with reference to the attitude of an official and the head of the longshoremen. Now, that is a fact. The question of what he said there is a fact, an evidentiary fact, and it is one that we have first had information in regard to by this witness.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Now, we are not obliged to call Mr. Connelly or be bound by what he says. If this witness says that Mr. Connelly said something that Mr. Connelly doesn't agree to, then, the other side may call him.

We object to being obliged to call a witness who may be [7518] a hostile witness. It is the fact of what he said there that is material.

Now, there is no limitation, as I understand it, your Honor, upon your right.

Presiding Inspector: No necessary limitation, no legal limitation, you are right about that. I may disregard the rules, the ordinary common law rules of evidence.

Mr. Goodwin: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: But I don't see what Mr. Connelly said there about what Mr. Bridges said, how it binds Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: If we could show that Mr. Connelly was speaking as an agent of Mr. Birdges.

Mr. Gladstein: But the testimony, your Honor, is that Mr. Bridges sent a Mr. Goldblatt down there personally to participate in a certain way in accordance with an agreement that Mr. Goldblatt and Mr. Bridges had. You recall that. And Mr. Bridges had already testified as to Mr. Connelly and the evidence is clear that Mr. Connelly has not been acting as a representative or agent of Mr. Bridges, and the evidence is that Mr. Connelly occupies a position in the CIO down there and he doesn't have to take orders from Mr. Bridges and Mr. Bridges didn't give him any orders.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Now, of course, what the real purpose of the argument is is not that which Judge Goodwin points to because that de- [7519] feats itself. As Judge Goodwin says, if you allow this testimony, then, it casts upon us the responsibility of finding Mr. Connelly, to bring Mr. Connelly into disagree—I assume that this is the possibility—disagree with what Mr. Hailey says Mr. Connelly said. What are we trying then? Are we trying what Mr. Bridges did in that particular case, what Mr. Bridges' attitude was? No; then, we are trying the issue as to whether Mr. Connelly said A, B, C, or whether he didn't say A, B, C; that is what it amounts to.

Presiding Inspector: How does Mr. Bridges know what Mr. Connelly said?

Mr. Del Guercio: It was given publicity, if your Honor please, and it was not repudiated.

Mr. Grossman: That is not true.

Mr. Goodwin: May I say something?

Mrs. King: It seems to me, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Let's hear Judge Goodwin first. Then I will hear Mrs. King. Is there anything else you wanted to say?

Mr. Goodwin: All I wanted to say, I think I said. What he said on that occasion as an official is an evidentiary fact even outside of hearsay.

Presiding Inspector: It might bind Mr. Connelly.

Mr. Goodwin: It is one of the things that has to do with the questions that are involved in this case.

[7520]

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Now, your Honor says——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Frankly, Judge Goodwin, I can't see how this will help me decide this case.

Mr. Goodwin: Undoubtedly, he said something in the course of his official business in connection with the strike, in connection with his duties as an official, and the only objection to the statement is that it is a statement of what he said and not——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing) It may prove that Mr. Connelly has been faithless in delivering a message, that is, it doesn't show what Mr. Bridges said to Mr. Connelly. It certainly doesn't show that. It doesn't show any proof which would be accepted in any Court that I know of or in any hearing as to what Mr. Bridges said to Mr. Connelly. It would show that Mr. Connelly quoted Mr. Bridges but whether he is correct would depend upon the credibility of Mr. Connelly of which we haven't the slightest information.

Mr. Goodwin: Yes. Well——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Permit me, your Honor, to make this observation:——

Presiding Inspector: Yes, certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is evidence that Bridges was in communication with Connelly before this purported conversation and after.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Well, he has told what he [7521] said.

Mr. Del Guercio: All right. Now, we have a statement on a vital public matter. Connelly, after a conversation with Bridges, makes a certain statement purporting to come from Harry Bridges. It is given publicity. He speaks as an agent of Bridges at that time. The matter is given publicity. Harry Bridges has been in communication, admittedly in telephonic communication with Connelly immediately afterwards, and there has been no repudiation of that statement. The witness has so testified.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Now, I think that under those circumstances we are allowed, or should be allowed to bring out what that statement was.

Presiding Inspector: Well, how does that bind Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, it binds Mr. Bridges in this respect: That here is a person down there who is speaking for him——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, no, no; he was not speaking for him. He was speaking——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Well, we will see what the testimony of this witness is. He said he was speaking for Harry Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: Then, show who he was speaking for. Who was Mr. Connelly? [7522]

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Connelly was an official of the CIO speaking to these strikers.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

Mr. Gladstein: Of which there are thousands, thousands of officials of the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: Not speaking for any particular——

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) May I ask this one question of the witness?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, certainly.

Don't answer it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was Mr. Connelly speaking for Mr. Bridges in connection with the matter?

Mr. Gladstein: Obviously that calls for the opinion and conclusion of this witness.

Presiding Inspector: How does this witness know?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, Connelly said——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Did Connelly say so?

Mr. Del Guercio: Here is an account that says "I authorize the speaker——"

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No; I have heard enough argument. I won't take this testimony.

Mr. Goodwin: May I say one thing before you finally [7523] close the door on that testimony?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, certainly.

Mr. Goodwin: The fact that this witness says here that Mr. Connelly reported there that Mr. Bridges had taken a certain position is logically evidentiary, is it not, just as much as any other hearsay evidence?

Presiding Inspector: I wouldn't say so.

Mr. Goodwin: Now, the only reason that testimony of that kind is excluded is for reasons of public policy, what somebody else said is not admissible in a Court of Law. The whole thing is historical. Now, you know and I know and everybody knows that when this witness testifies in regard to what Mr. Connelly says, what Mr. Bridges says, that has logically probative force, and if your Honor excludes it your Honor merely excludes it for the reason that you don't care to hear it because you think it is too remote.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Presiding Inspector: That is it.

Mr. Goodwin: Yes. Well, now, you are excluding it, just as in the case of any other hearsay when a Court of Law excludes hearsay evidence, and excludes it merely because—not because it is not logically probative but as a matter of public policy and for historical reasons.

Presiding Inspector: I excluded the book that they produced here about the IWW on exactly the same basis, that the [7524] author of that book only had hearsay information as to the policies of the IWW, under the objection of the Government.

Mr. Goodwin: I don't see that they are connected. Here is the witness, a credible witness, who says Mr. Connelly——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Because it depends on the truthfulness of various or here, perhaps, a single intermediary, and we have never seen Mr. Connelly. We don't know what he said, what Mr. Bridges said to Mr. Connelly. Maybe his statement would be his opinion on what Mr. Bridges' attitude was.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Mr. Goodwin: Well, he heard——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, I can't see how that would advance anything. No Judge would give it any particular credence even if it came in.

Mr. Goodwin: Yes. I think that in these hearings they have gone so far so to overrule an objection that the hearsay evidence is not only hearsay but it is hearsay on hearsay on hearsay evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think this is too remote.

Mrs. King: I think that you said what I wanted to say far better than I could have said it, your Honor. In other words, this isn't a question of hearsay. It is a question of what——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, if you can show that Mr. Bridges had any conversation with Mr. Connelly, [7525] conversation subsequent to this time about what occurred at that meeting, then, that might be another question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I will——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will ask Mr. Bridges, myself, if you don't object.

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: Did you have any later conversations with Mr. Connelly after this meeting occurred?

Mr. Bridges: Well, yes, I did.

Presiding Inspector: And you have discussed the attitude since, of the strikers?

Mr. Bridges: I have.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Presiding Inspector: With Mr. Connelly?

Mr. Bridges: After the meeting occurred; then, they began to agree with me.

Presiding Inspector: Did Mr. Connelly tell you that he had given your message to the strikers?

Mr. Bridges: He told—I spoke to him about that. He says "Well, all I told the strikers was that I had been talking to you and I would give you a full report" and I said that, anyway, I wished them luck.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, that is the conversation we want, your Honor, from this witness here. Now, we want to show that that is exactly what Connelly told the strikers here at that time. [7526]

Mr. Gladstein: That he wished them luck? Well, Mr. Bridges testified to that.

Presiding Inspector: He has already testified to that himself.

Mr. Del Guercio: All right, that is the conversation that Bridges has testified to. Now, we want to show that that message was sent to the strikers.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he said so. That is what he testified before.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, Bridges was not present when it was given to the strikers. Now, we want to show by an eye witness——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That the message was delivered?

Mr. Del Guercio: That the message was delivered to the strikers.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Presiding Inspector: If that is the purpose of it I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: If the message is identical.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, now, substantially, of course.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it need not be in the very same words.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. It seems to me it is a point for Mr. Bridges.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [7527]

Q. Now, Mr. Hailey, will you tell us what Mr. Connelly said concerning the message he had received from Harry Bridges to give to the strikers?

A. Well, Mr. Connelly made a very rhetorical approach. He said he had been talking with a great labor leader in San Francisco on the long distance telephone, that he had got him out of bed that morning to discuss the strike with him, and he was very harried and tired and worn but that nevertheless he had discussed this matter with him because he was interested in whatever happened to working men in this country, and he said that "That man sends you his best wishes and pledges his full and complete support", and he said "That man to whom I was talking was Harry Bridges."

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to ask this witness anything?

Mr. Gladstein: I think we may have a question or two. We are interested mainly out of curiosity, your Honor, but of course, it is material, I think.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Now if it is curiosity alone, your Honor, I will object before even a question is asked.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we will judge whether it is curiosity alone.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When were you subpoenaed, Mr. Hailey?

[7528]

A. Yesterday afternoon in the Court.

Q. Where? A. Out in this building.

Q. By whom? A. By a Mr. Holland.

Q. Who?

A. A Mr. Holland, an FBI Agent.

Q. Was anything said to you at that time regarding testifying here? A. No.

Q. What were the circumstances that led up to your being subpoenaed, if you know?

A. Well, I had flown up from Los Angeles with Mr. Frankensteen and the two Los Angeles detectives who had taken us to the plane had told us that Mr. Frankensteen was to be met by two FBI Agents at the San Francisco terminal. We were discussing on the way up what the effect might be on the members of Mr. Frankensteen's union, of his being subpoenaed in this case at this time in view of the charges that had been made against him by the strikers, that he was selling them out and was a stooge of the Aircraft Manufacturers and so on, and he asked me—he said "If I am met there will you go along with me?" and I asked him where his subpoena called for his appearance, and he showed it to me and it called for his appearance in this room. So when we were met at the airport by the two FBI men he asked them if it was all right if [7529] I came along with him, and I did, and when we got in the car he asked that he be brought here, and they said that they had been told to take him to the St. Francis Hotel to see Major Schofield and that he would rest there until they were ready for him in the Court room.

So I went along with Mr. Frankensteen to the hotel and in a general conversation there it was brought out that Mr. Frankensteen was not present when Mr. Connelly spoke but that I was, and I said, as I have testified here, as to what Mr. Connelly said to my best recollection, which I refreshed from the notes that I took at the time.

Q. And those are the circumstances that led to your being subpoenaed?

A. Yes, I told him that I had sent that same information to my paper on Sunday afternoon. And when I came to the Court at two o'clock with Mr. Frankensteen, why, I was served with a subpoena to appear.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think we have any—yes, there is another question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do I understand you to say that you telephoned to your paper on Sunday?

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

A. That is right.

Q. And that is when you telephoned the report, your news report of the meeting?

A. That is right. [7530]

Q. Now, have you ever had any subsequent—withdraw that.

Have you ever had occasion to discuss that report with anyone since last Sunday?

A. Well, yes, I have discussed it with other newspaper men, and on the following afternoon a reporter for the Los Angeles Times came to me in the Los Angeles Times News Bureau where I was writing my story on Monday and told me that the CIO headquarters had sent me a message that Mr. Bridges' position had been misrepresented and that he had taken no official position in the strike at all.

Q. From what source did that come?

A. Well, I can't swear as to that. Joe Parks, the Labor Editor of the Los Angeles Times, said that Slim Connelly's office had called and asked him if he knew where I was and he said that he didn't.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, we are making the same objection to this testimony as counsel——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Go ahead. I will allow it.

A. He said that he did not at the time but he would take any message for me. I believe the man who called was Jack—or the kid who was handling publicity for the strikers. I am not sure as to that because I don't remember, but that was the message that Mr. Parks delivered to me and which I [7531] carried in the newspaper the following morning.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all except we would like to point this out, your Honor: In so far as our argument has gone with respect to any difference that appears in the record between Mr. Bridges' testimony as to what he told Mr. Connelly to convey to the strikers, and what Mr. Connelly did say, according to this witness——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That is all open to argument?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; that is the only objection we have.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly, that is all open to argument.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, that is all.

Mr. Del Guercio: There are just two questions.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I believe this meeting, mass meeting was held on Saturday, was it now, June the 8th?

A. Sunday afternoon.

Q. Sunday, June the 8th.

A. Sunday afternoon.

Q. That was June the 9th, or June the 8th, rather.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, let's check a calendar.

Presiding Inspector: Sunday was the 9th—no, Sunday was the 8th. [7532]

Mr. Del Guercio: Sunday was the 8th.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

The Witness: It was during the 8th, then.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you said the FBI men had subpoenaed you or had met you?

A. That is right.

Q. As a matter of fact, they were Immigration Officers, were they not?

A. Well, now, I don't know about that. There was a Mr. Holland.

Q. Well, Mr. Holland is an Immigration Officer.

Mr. Gladstein: Is this a statement or a question?

Presiding Inspector: I don't see what difference it makes.

Mr. Del Guercio: They were Immigration Officers rather than FBI men.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that statement from counsel. It is not a question. It can't be testimony unless Mr. Del Guercio raises his right hand and gets on that stand. Let him testify.

Presiding Inspector: It is just the same as the statement you made a while ago; neither of them are evidence.

Mr. Grossman: What is the difference, Mr. Del Guercio thinks attaches——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't see what difference it makes. [7533]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will answer that if Mr. Grossman tells me what he has in mind with reference to the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: I am not interested in what is in either of your minds unless it comes into the record.

(Testimony of Foster Hailey.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That is the threat of the whole three of them. I can tell you what I have in mind.

Presiding Inspector: None of the thoughts of counsel are interesting to the inspector.

Mr. Del Guercio: I practice no policy of hypocrisy and deceit.

Presiding Inspector: No, no. We can't have constant argument here.

The Witness: May I say, Judge, I thought he was an FBI man. He showed me no credentials. He did show his credentials to Mr. Frankensteen.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all, then.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, is there anything further from you, Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Gladstein: One more thing if the Government has closed.

Have you closed, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: With a reservation, excepting a reservation. [7534]

Presiding Inspector: No further witnesses.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, we would like to make a statement; we think it is a kind of thing that requires a statement. We have a signed statement of a Portland longshoreman who has since the making of this signed statement died. The reason we make this statement is first because the material and the information contained in the statement is relevant to the proceedings.

Presiding Inspector: Let me see it.

Mr. Grossman: We are not offering it, your Honor, so may I just finish my statement?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. I thought you were going to offer it.

Mr. Grossman: No, we are not offering it. That is the reason we are making this statement. I will tell you generally what this information is. It will be clear after I make the statement. It is obviously not evidence.

This deals with the alleged presence or stated presence of Mr. Cannalonga on that boat after the time that he stated he left on Wednesday. Now, we consider, as we have stated, that this evidence is relevant. We are not offering this signed statement and, I think, the Court is entitled to a statement to that effect. We are not offering this because, although the Government has been operating on the theory in the introduction of the statement of Mr. Lovelace that statements, signed statements may be introduced in evidence in this proceeding though [7535] there is obviously no basis for cross examination when the man making the statement is dead, we continue to believe that that is a denial of constitutional rights even though the rules of the Department may permit it.

We have this statement. We are perfectly willing to have it examined but we are not introducing it because we still do not concede that that can be done without cross examination without denial of constitutional rights.

Mr. Del Guercio: Can I ask the purpose of this?

Mr. Grossman: The man's name for the record is—I will have to spell it. I am not sure of the pronunciation. S-v-e-r-d-r-u-p S-a-l-v-e-s-e-n.

Mr. Gladstein: The first name is S-v-e-r-d-r-u-p; the second name is S-a-l-v-e-s-e-n.

Presiding Inspector: That may be entered on the record.

Now, have we finished?

Mr. Gladstein: I believe we have no other matter.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: Any further taking of testimony here?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, your Honor. I was just about to say a prayer.

Mr. Gladstein: We are going into the chambers, I assume.

Presiding Inspector: A sort of salutary prayer?

[7536]

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: We will take it in silence.

Then, the taking of testimony is closed. [7537]

Presiding Inspector: I will state for the record that Alien's Exhibits Nos. 51 and 52 have been skipped in numbering.

Mrs. King: The Alien's offer of the parts of the testimony in the first hearing before Dean Landis, not already admitted in evidence, is withdrawn.

Presiding Inspector: I will deny the motions to strike made yesterday and today not previously ruled on.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer in evidence, as Government's Exhibit next in order, Declaration of Intention No. 103785, filed in the District Court of the United States at San Francisco, California, on the 28th day of March, 1939, by Harry Renton Bridges, and I ask that we be permitted to substitute a photostatic copy.

Mr. Grossman: No objection.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received and the photostat substituted.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 296.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I next offer in evidence Application for Certificate of Arrival and Preliminary Form for Declaration of Intention No. 22-56274, submitted at San Francisco, California, the certificate being dated May 2, 1936, by Harry Renton Bridges.

The application has attached to it the certificate of [7538] arrival showing the arrival of Harry Bridges at the Port of San Francisco, California, on April 12, 1920 on the SS Ysabel.

I offer a photostatic copy of the application.

Presiding Inspector: Received.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 297.)

Presiding Inspector: I would now like to ask the Alien some questions.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

the Alien, was questioned by the Presiding Inspector as follows:

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. What is you full name?

A. Harry Renton Bridges.

Q. Have you any other names?

A. Well, I have other first names. I am not quite sure about some of them. I have had what they call Confirmation names.

Q. In church? A. Yes.

Q. Those are not names. A. Well——

Q. (Interposing) They are not real names.

A. There is a custom, a certain custom.

Q. You gave your Patron Saint?

A. Yes. I have acquired a couple like that. They [7539] were used occasionally, but not for any great length of time.

Q. Used in your family?

A. As far as I know my name is Alfred, Renton, Bryant and Harry.

Mr. Del Guercio: Bridges?

A. Bridges.

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. You gave the place of your birth. Will you give it again? A. Melbourne, Australia.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And, of course, Melbourne is the name of the nearest town of importance because you were born in Melbourne itself? A. In Melbourne itself.

Q. And that is in what Province?

A. State of Victoria.

Q. And what country? A. Australia.

Q. Your religion? I suppose that means the religion you were brought up in—Roman Catholic?

A. Catholic.

Q. What is your religion now?

A. Catholic.

Q. The names and locations of the churches or schools you have attended. First, take the churches you have been a [7540] parishioner in?

A. In Australia?

Q. Yes. A. St. Brendans.

Q. Melbourne?

A. Melbourne. Flemington, Melbourne—that was the church we usually went to. That is the only one that comes to my mind. We went to Sunday School there and I also went to the St. Brendans School.

Q. How about after you came to this country?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not in this country. That means in the country of birth.

Presiding Inspector: Is that what that means?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. It doesn't say so.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. And the name and location of schools you attended? A. All of them?

Q. In Australia, yes.

A. Well, I attended for a short while, and some time, the public schools. I think you might call them the State School, one located in Kensington, Melbourne, a suburb of Melbourne; and another located in Moonee Ponds, Melbourne.

They were two Government schools, State schools.

I attended them for a short while. And I attended St. [7541] Brendans School, located in Flemington, Melbourne; and also Christian Brothers College, located in West Melbourne.

Q. And your last address in your native country, Australia?

A. I can give my father's business address. I don't remember the other. That would be 144 Bellair Street, Kensington, Melbourne.

Q. And did you reside in any country, except Australia, before you came to this country, or did you call any other country your residence? Of course, you were on the sea. A. No.

Q. From what country did you embark for the United States?

A. Do you mean the last port of call?

Mr. Del Guercio: That means the country from which you came when you decided to come to the United States.

A. Auckland, New Zealand. There were stops, of course, before I came here.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. You have given the date previously?

A. Yes.

Q. The correct names and addresses and citizenship, or nationality, of the Alien's nearest relatives residing in the country of his birth. That would be your father.

A. My father and mother. [7542]

Q. And you gave their names?

A. In this hearing, do you mean?

Q. I think you did, at the beginning of the hearing. Perhaps you had better give them again. Give your father's name and your mother's name.

A. My father's name is Albert Ernest Bridges, of Kensington, Melbourne; and my mother's name is Julia Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your mother's maiden name?

A. Julia Dorgan.

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. And the correct names and addresses of your nearest relatives residing in the United States, that is, other than your wife and child?

A. None that I know of. I have heard that there are some here, but I don't know where and I have never run across them.

Major Schofield: The address of your father and mother?

A. I could get that but I cannot give it right now. My father has been established for a long time. He has quite a large building at the address I gave. They are well known.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Major Schofield: Does he mean to say he don't know where his mother and father live?

A. No. They have a private address to. They do not live at the business address.

Major Schofield: You don't know where your own mother [7543] and father live?

A. I can't call it to mind, the exact address. There are reasons for that. They have quite a few places. They get around quite a bit. They own some hotels, and things like that, and I get mixed up on it. I can secure the address.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is necessary.

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. They can be reached by a letter sent to this address? A. Oh, certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: I suggest you should give him the warning.

Presiding Inspector: I am required by the regulations to warn you that the Act of March 4, 1929, of Congress, as amended, provides that any alien who, after arrest and deportation or departure from the United States in pursuance of an order of deportation, enters or attempts to enter the United States, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be liable to imprisonment for not more than two years or a fine of not more than $1000, or both such fine and imprisonment, unless such entry or attempted entry is made after one year from the date of such departure or deportation, and the alien, prior to his re-embarkation at a place outside of the United States or prior to his application in foreign contiguous territory for admission to the United [7544] States, has been granted by the Attorney General permission to re-apply for admission to the United States.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you understand that?

By Presiding Inspector:

Q. Do you understand that?

A. Yes. That means after I have gone.

Q. Yes; after you have gone.

Presiding Inspector: Now, I will ask respective counsel if they desire to file briefs in this matter?

Mrs. King: Yes, your Honor: I think our stipulation covers that.

Mr. Del Guercio: The stipulation takes care of that.

Presiding Inspector: It is stipulated between counsel for the Government and counsel for the Alien that, irrespective of the rules of the Department of Justice, the Presiding Inspector may submit to the Department, or proper officers therein, the full transcript of the hearing, as prepared by the reporter, as the official record of the hearing, without amendation or modification.

Mr. Gladstein: So stipulated.

Mrs. King: So stipulated.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is agreeable.

Presiding Inspector: It is also stipulated that briefs by counsel for the respective parties shall be exchanged between the parties, each furnishing the other with three carbon [7545] copies thereof, on or before the thirtieth day after the conclusion of the taking of evidence at the hearing.

And that the respective parties shall at the same time mail the original and one carbon copy of their briefs to the Presiding Inspector at his residence in Eden, Erie County, New York; and one carbon copy of said briefs to be mailed to Daniel W. Gaiser, care of Lands Division, Department of Justice, Washington, D. C.

Within two weeks after the day appointed by this stipulation for the exchange of briefs the parties shall exchange replies to the briefs already filed, each furnishing the other with three carbon copies thereof; and at the same time the original and one carbon copy of their respective reply briefs shall be similarly mailed to the Presiding Inspector, and one carbon copy thereof to Daniel W. Gaiser.

Mr. Gladstein: So stipulated.

Mr. Del Guercio: Agreeable.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

I would like to see the members of the press in chambers for a moment, if you will all come in.

(Whereupon, at 12:00 noon, the hearing in the above entitled matter was concluded.)

No. 10450

HARRY BRIDGES,

Appellant,

vs.

I. F. WIXON, as District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, Appellee.

STATEMENT OF POINTS ON APPEAL

The points on which appellant intends to rely on this appeal are as follows:

1. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made by the Attorney General that after entering the United States, Harry Bridges has been a member of the Communist Party of the U.S.A.; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

2. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made by the Attorney General that after entering the United States, Harry Bridges has been affiliated with the Communist Party of the U.S.A.; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

3. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made by the Attorney General that after entering the United States, Harry Bridges has been affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

4. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made in the warrant of deportation that Harry Bridges, after entering the United States, has been a member of an organization, association, society, or group that believes in, advises, advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

5. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made in the warrant of deportation that Harry Bridges, after entering the United States, has been affiliated with an organization, association, society, or group that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

6. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made in the warrant of deportation that Harry Bridges after entering the United States, has been a member of an organization, association, society, or group that writes, circulates, distributes, publishes and displays printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

7. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made in the warrant of deportation that Harry Bridges, after entering the United States, has been affiliated with an organization, association, society, or group that writes, circulates, distributes, publishes, and displays printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

8. There is no substantial evidence to support the finding made in the warrant of deportation that Harry Bridges, after entering the United States, has been a member of an organization, association, society, or group that caused to be written, circulated, distributed, published, printed, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; and the District Court erred in failing so to hold.

9. The deportation of appellant without substantial evidence to support the charges in the warrant of arrest and the findings in the warrant of deportation constitutes a denial of liberty without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

10. The construction and application of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Acts of June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940, to authorize the deportation of appellant in the absence of substantial evidence to support the charges in the warrant of arrest and the findings in the warrant of deportation, constitutes a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

11. The Immigration and Naturalization Service, by a warrant of arrest issued in 1938, and amended and reissued in 1939, charged Harry

Bridges with being found in the United States in violation of the Immigration laws thereof:

a. In that after he entered the United States he became and now is a member of an organization, association, society, and group that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;

b. In that after he entered the United States he became and now is affiliated with an organization, association, society, and group that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;

c. In that after he entered the United States he became and now is a member of an organization, association, society, and group that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;

d. In that after he entered the United States he became and now is affiliated with an organization, association, society, and group that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States.

After extensive hearings upon said amended warrant, Trial Examiner James M. Landis recommended on or about December 28, 1939, that said warrant of arrest be cancelled; and thereafter, on or about January 7, 1940, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins accepted said recommendation and cancelled said warrant of arrest.

The issues determined in said first proceeding are res judicata, or upon an analogous principle are conclusive, as to all the issues involved in the second proceeding (of which issues the determinations are set forth in the warrant of deportation dated May 29, 1942); and the reconsideration of said issues was and is a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

12. The second proceeding against appellant, in 1941 and 1942 as hereinabove set forth, constituted double jeopardy, or upon an analogous principle subjected appellant to trial twice for the same conduct and activities, and thereby denied and denies appellant of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

13. All of the activities of the Government designed to secure the deportation of appellant, and the proceedings to which appellant was subjected in that connection, were and are discriminatory and unfair, and thus constitute a denial of equal protection of the laws and a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

14. The Act of June 28, 1940, C. 439, Title II, §23, 54 Stat. 673 (i.e., the 1940 amendment to 8 U.S.C. §137) as applied to Harry Bridges, constituted an ex post facto law in violation of Article I, §8 of the Constitution of the United States, and a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; and, upon a principle of law analogous to the doctrine of ex post facto, according to which laws shall not be given retroactive or retrospective effect, constituted error of law.

15. Appellant was denied his liberty without due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, for the following reasons, separately and collectively:

a. The Government failed, refused and neglected to make available to him or his counsel the prior statements of Government witnesses, although demand therefor was duly and properly made, and the possession of such statements by Government counsel was not denied.

b. Appellant's motion for an order directing an examination of witnesses with respect to the use of wire-tapping by the Government in connection with its preparation and handling of the second hearing in 1941, and the use made by the Government of intercepted telephone messages, was denied.

c. The Government failed, refused and neglected to produce the witness Maurice Cannalonga in response to appellant's subpoena, but later produced said Cannalonga as a Government rebuttal witness after he had been subjected to improper inducements by Government agents for the purpose and with the effect of influencing his testimony.

d. The Government's knowing and wilful use of the false and perjured testimony of said witness Cannalonga tainted and vitiated the Government's entire case against appellant; notwithstanding, the Attorney General failed, refused and neglected to evaluate and judge the Government's case and evidence against appellant in the light of the Government's use of such false and perjured testimony, and also expressly relied in part upon the testimony of said witness Cannalonga in reaching his conclusions and order against appellant.

e. The Attorney General failed, refused and neglected to give prima facie or any weight or value to the cancellation of the first warrant of arrest against appellant and the proceedings based upon such warrant to which appellant was subjected. Said failure and refusal by the Attorney General was arbitrary, capricious, and error of law, and constituted a failure and refusal to consider and evaluate all the evidence material and relevant to a fair and full determination of the issues.

f. The Attorney General applied an erroneous rule as to the Government's burden of proof.

g. The Attorney General was influenced in reaching his conclusions and decision against appellant by Lemuel B. Schofield, special assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, who was in charge of the prosecution of the second proceeding against appellant, and who testified as a witness at said proceedings against appellant, admitting bias and prejudice against appellant, and declaring his intention to influence the Attorney General, not alone upon the evidence produced at the hearing against appellant, but upon views formed by said Schofield from his extra-judicial investigation of the case.

16. The Attorney General's assumption of jurisdiction, after appellant was cleared of the charges against him by unanimous decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals, was in violation of the rules of the Immigration Service, to the protection of which rules appellant was entitled; and the deprivation of such protection served to deny appellant due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

17. The Attorney General's determination of the case without according appellant an opportunity to be heard before him, as the deciding officer, constituted a denial of due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

18. The Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920, as amended by the Act of May 28, 1940 (8 U.S.C. §137) deprives appellant of his liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

19. The Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920, as amended by the Act of May 28, 1940 (8 U.S.C. §137) deprives appellant of his liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, in that said Act imposes an unreasonable and arbitrary condition upon appellant's continued residence in the United States.

20. The adoption of said Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920, as amended by the Act of May 28, 1940 (8 U.S.C. §137) was intended to and did discriminate against appellant, and served to deprive him of the equal protection of the laws, and thus deprived him of his liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

21. The construction and application of said Act so as to single out appellant for deportation from among thousands of aliens who had been members of or affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union or other unions affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, was error of law, and was deliberately and intentionally arbitrary and discriminatory as to appellant, and was part of a scheme, plan and intent, and served, to deny appellant equal protection of the laws, and thereby deprived appellant of his liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

22. The construction and application of said Act to authorize deportation of appellant for past affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union was error of law, and unreasonably and arbitrarily abridged appellant's rights of free speech, free press, free assembly, and free association without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

23. The construction and application of said Act to authorize deportation of appellant for past membership in or affiliation with any organization, was error of law, and is arbitrary and imposes an unreasonable, vague, and ambiguous limitation on appellant's past conduct, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

24. The construction and application of the said Act to authorize the deportation of appellant upon the evidence adduced would require appellant to relinquish his rights of free speech, free press, free assembly, and free association as guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and thus would impose a void, improper and unconstitutional condition upon appellant's right to remain in the United States, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

26. The construction and application of the said Act to authorize the deportation of appellant for beliefs or activities, without evidence or finding that such beliefs or activities presented a clear and imminent danger of any substantive evil which said Act was designed to prevent, deprived appellant of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

27. The construction and application of the said Act to authorize the deportation of appellant for mere membership in or affiliation with any organization, without evidence or finding that appellant had knowledge of the proscribed character of such organization, or of the proscribed character of its beliefs, activities, doctrines, or literature, or subscribed to the principles of said organization, was error of law, and constitutes a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

28. The construction and application of the said Act to authorize the deportation of appellant for membership in or affiliation with any organization distributing literature advocating the overthrow of the Government by force and violence, without evidence or finding that appellant participated in the distribution of such proscribed literature, was error of law, and constitutes a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

29. The construction and application of the said Act to authorize the deportation of appellant for affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, without evidence or finding that appellant had knowledge that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was a proscribed organization or was a part of the Communist Party or dominated or controlled by it, was error of law, and constitutes a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

30. The construction and application of the said Act to authorize the deportation of appellant for past affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, without evidence or finding that said organization engaged in anything but lawful and legitimate trade union activities, or that said affiliation consisted of anything but cooperation or support by appellant in such lawful and legitimate trade union activities, was error of law, and constitutes a denial of liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

31. The Attorney General and the District Court committed the following errors of law, each of which taken singly, or all of which taken together, deprived appellant of his liberty without due process of law, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States:

a. Gave and applied to the term "affiliation" a meaning in conflict with and contrary to law.

b. Interpreted the term "affiliation" in a manner so vague, uncertain and meaningless as to furnish no ascertainable standard of conduct whatsoever.

c. Relied upon, and partially based the decision against appellant upon, the testimony of certain Government witnesses solely on the basis of the volume of their testimony, despite the fact that the individual testimony of each of said witnesses was not accepted as establishing the facts to which each such witness testified.

32. The District Court held that the testimony given by and concerning Government witness James D. O'Neil relative to the question of appellant's membership in the Communist Party, was, as a matter of law, incompetent, and that it was erroneously admitted in evidence and erroneously given weight by the Attorney General in reaching his decision against appellant. Said testimony was so substantial, and so permeated the Attorney General's consideration of the case and the conclusions to which he came, that the District Court's affirmance of an order of deportation which originally issues in reliance upon such evidence, is error of law, and served to deprive appellant of due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

33. The District Court committed error of law in denying to appellant his right to challenge the appropriateness and the reasonableness of the statutory criteria for deportation of aliens in ruling that Congress has not confined itself to the deportation of alien members or affiliates of those subversive organizations only whose activities present a clear, serious or imminent danger of accomplishing the evil which the legislation is designed to prevent, and thereby deprived appellant of opportunity to challenge the constitutionality of said Act, and of due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

34. The District Court and the Attorney General committed error of law in refusing appellant an opportunity to establish that his deportation was arbitrary, discriminatory and unreasonable.

35. Each of the points hereinabove relied upon, taken separately, and all of said points taken together, constitute error of law, and serve to deprive appellant of due process of law, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

36. The District Court erred in not granting the writ of habeas corpus and discharging appellant from the custody and control of I. F. Wixon, as District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice.

37. The District Court erred in not holding that it had jurisdiction to issue the writ of habeas corpus as prayed for in the petition filed with that Court by appellant.

38. The District Court erred in not holding that the allegations set forth in the petition and amended petition of appellant for a writ of habeas corpus were sufficient in law to justify and require the granting and issuing of a writ of habeas corpus.

39. The District Court erred in holding that there was substantial evidence before the Immigration authorities to justify the conclusion that appellant was unlawfully in the United States.

40. The District Court erred in not holding that there was no substantial evidence before the Immigration authorities to justify the conclusion that appellant was unlawfully in the United States.

41. The District Court erred in holding that appellant was accorded a full and fair hearing by the Immigration authorities.

42. The District Court erred in not holding that appellant was not accorded a full and fair hearing by the Immigration authorities.

Appellant further states that he relies upon the entire record certified by the Clerk of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Northern Division, to this Court, and designates that said record, so certified, shall be printed as the record on appeal, and that the stipulation as to record on appeal made on May 5, 1943, and the order of the said District Court made May 6, 1943, both of which were filed in the said District Court and copies of which have been filed with the Clerk of this Court, shall be complied with.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT.

HARRY BRIDGES, Appellant, vs. I. F. WIXON, as District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, Appellee.	No. 10450
In the Matter of the Application of the COMMUNIST PARTY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, by WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, its National Chairman, and EARL BROWDER, its General Secretary, for leave to intervene.

PETITION TO INTERVENE

To the Honorable the Judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit:

The petition of the Communist Party of the United States of America by William Z. Foster, its National Chairman, and Earl Browder, its General Secretary, respectfully alleges:

FIRST: The Communist Party of the United States of America, hereinafter referred to as Communist Party, is a political party, a voluntary unincorporated association of citizens of the United States.

SECOND: William Z. Foster has been the National Chairman of the Communist Party since 1929, and Earl Browder has been its General Secretary since 1929.

THIRD: The aforesaid William Z. Foster and Earl Browder are fully familiar with the Constitution and By-Laws of the Communist Party, its organization, the proceedings of its several national conventions, the programs and platforms promulgated therein, the principles and activities of the said Communist Party from its inception to date, and are further familiar with the classic economic and political writings in the field of scientific socialism.

FOURTH: Upon information and belief, on May 28, 1942, Hon. Francis Biddle, Attorney-General of the United States, in a deportation proceeding entitled In re Harry Renton Bridges found that the Communist Party of the U. S. A., from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time is an organization which advocates the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States.

FIFTH: The findings were made by the Attorney-General without a trial or hearing, and without an opportunity being given the petitioner to present evidence, oral and documentary in its behalf.

SIXTH: The findings were made by the Attorney-General without notice to the petitioner.

SEVENTH: The findings made by the Attorney-General are unsupported by any evidence.

EIGHTH: The Attorney-General was without jurisdiction to make the findings.

NINTH: The findings made by the Attorney-General were arbitrary, capricious, and an abuse of administrative discretion, contrary to law, and the result of bias, prejudice and prejudgment.

TENTH: The findings made by the Attorney-General are unfounded and baseless in fact.

ELEVENTH: Upon information and belief, the Attorney-General on the said May 28, 1942, made an order of deportation against the said Harry Renton Bridges.

TWELFTH: Thereafter the said Harry Renton Bridges obtained from a Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California an order directing the said Attorney General and others to show cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not issue, and a proceeding was had thereon and the application denied. An appeal from the order denying the said application is now pending in this Court.

THIRTEENTH: Upon information and belief, at the time of the issuance of the aforesaid order of deportation, the Attorney General at a press conference stated that he desired the courts to pass on all features of his opinion including his conclusions on the Communist Party, and that he considered the matter a test case.

FOURTEENTH: Accordingly, on August 7, 1942, the petitioner requested the Attorney General, in writing, to consent to the petitioner's intervention in the aforesaid proceeding now pending in this Court and to the entry of an order remanding the Bridges matter to the Naturalization and Immigration Service of the Department of Justice so that proper inquiry could there be made concerning the objectives of the Communist Party.

FIFTEENTH: On August 12, 1942, the Attorney General, in writing, refused the aforesaid request of the petitioner.

SIXTEENTH: The petitioner, in the proceeding herein, does not speak for the petitioner in the main proceeding, Harry Renton Bridges, whose alleged membership in the Communist Party has been repeatedly denied by the petitioner; it is concerned solely with the attempt to inflict a corollary injury upon the Communist Party.

SEVENTEENTH: The Communist Party does not and never has from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time advocated the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States.

EIGHTEENTH: The petitioner respectfully submits to this Court that its application herein is not made for any partisan reasons; is not made for the purpose of defending the Communist Party as a party of socialism; nor is the said application made for any academic reasons or merely in the interests of abstract and historic truth. The petitioner is impelled at this crucial moment in the life of our country to take issue with the allegations made by the Attorney General against the Communist Party, a party of American workers, solely for the reason that it is convinced the unfounded charges made by the Attorney General must be answered in the interest of national unity.

NINETEENTH: The techniques of dividing nations and peoples by a hue and cry against the alleged danger of Communism and Marxism was a familiar and principal weapon of Hitler and his agents in every country that he conquered.

TWENTIETH: Through the complete distortion and falsification of the tenets of Marxism and Communism; by the false assertion that those tenets included a principle or policy of forcible overthrow of the state itself or the democratic institutions of a country, Hitler and his agents divided and blinded the people in each country, weakened the vigilance of the governments against the political activities of the treacherous fifth columnists, the spies and saboteurs, and thus paved the way for national demoralization and conquest, for the fascist rule of Hitler's agents, the Quislings and Lavals.

TWENTY-FIRST: It is common knowledge that the maintenance of the false charge against the Communist Party that it advocates the forcible overthrow of our government makes it possible for the defeatist elements to use the bugbear of Communism as a cover for their disruptive and anti-war activities by denoting every anti-fascist and progressive person a "Communist".

TWENTY-SECOND: Almost without exception, those persons who are now convicted or under indictment for treasonable activities aimed at disrupting national unity are agents of Hitler who for years have employed the method of hysterical red-baiting as a means of accomplishing their unpatriotic tasks.

TWENTY-THIRD: The false statement that the Communist Party controlled a union or "manoeuvred" a strike is dangerous to the independence and integrity of our trade unions and harmful to the welfare of the nation: the Communist Party has never controlled a union nor suggested a strike; it has, prior to the war, supported strikes called by trade unions because it sought to do everything possible to aid the workers of the nation and thus to aid the nation.

TWENTY-FOURTH: Since the war effort required it, the petitioner has been among the first to urge that the trade unions refrain from exercising their right to strike while the war continued, and it has consistently opposed all strikes during this period.

TWENTY-FIFTH: The petitioner submits that were the charge against the Communist Party permitted to stand together with the charge that domination of a union by the Communist Party makes membership in that union illegal, there would be nothing to prevent the Attorney General or his successor from considering past membership of aliens in unions as a deportable offense.

TWENTY-SIXTH: The petitioner submits that it would not be difficult, by the same line of reasons and legal conclusions, to charge existing unions and their present or past alien members with being subject to deportation since reactionary forces in our country have charged and continue to charge that many unions affiliated either with the American Federation of Labor or the C.I.O. are Communist organizations.

TWENTY-SEVENTH: The finding made by the Attorney-General that the Communist Party advocates the forcible overthrow of the Government of the United States is unsupported by any evidence of a single overt act of political violence or sabotage by any member of the Communist Party from the inception of the Party to the present day.

TWENTY-EIGHTH: The petitioner respectfully submits that the Attorney-General has been unable to cite such illegal act on the part of any member of the Communist Party because the tenets of the Communist Party are opposed to and inconsistent with advocacy of force and violence.

TWENTY-NINTH: Despite the fact that the petitioner has held six national conventions in the past decade; despite the fact that its governing body, the National Committee, has met even more often; and despite the fact that both bodies have adopted resolutions, programs and platforms and issued official statements of the position of the organization, the Attorney-General has not seen fit to refer to a single resolution, declaration, or statement made by the Communist Party or its elected officials during the past twenty years.

THIRTIETH: The Communist Party of the United States of America originated in 1919 when a large number of members of the Socialist Party, also an unincorporated political association, severed their connections with that organization to form separate political bodies.

THIRTY-FIRST: At the aforesaid period, there were formed two organizations, the one known as the Communist Party and the other as the Communist Labor Party.

THIRTY-SECOND: In or about December, 1921, the aforementioned organizations, together with the Workers Council, a group of persons who had remained in the Socialist Party, and various trade union groups, as well as other small associations of persons, united to form the Workers Party of America.

THIRTY-THIRD: The aforesaid Workers Party became known as the Workers (Communist) Party of America in 1925, and finally in 1929 assumed the name of Communist Party.

> "The Workers Party was the first united organization of the American Communists; it was a sharp break with the romantic 'Leftism' of underground days for which it accepted no responsibility." (Earl Browder, The Communist, September, 1939, p. 795.)

THIRTY-FOURTH: During this first decade, the development of the Communist Party was hindered by factional disputes engendered by persons within the organization who declined to adhere to the principles upon which the Party was founded. By 1929, these persons had been expelled from membership in the organization.

THIRTY-FIFTH: Thereafter, the Communist Party conducted its affairs under an unwritten constitution until 1938, when the general laws and rules which had been in effect during the past decade were codified in the Constitution of the Communist Party of the United States of America, adopted officially by the Tenth National Convention, the organization's highest governing body, in May, 1938. A copy of the Constitution of the Communist Party is attached hereto and marked Exhibit "A".

THIRTY-SIXTH: The Communist Party of the United States of America is an American political party; makes its own decisions; and maintains its own policies and activities guided solely by the needs and desires of the American people and based upon the social, political and cultural institutions of our country.

THIRTY-SEVENTH: The petitioner submits further, that its policies and activities are necessarily constantly undergoing changes as the basic conditions upon which these policies and activities were grounded are themselves altered.

THIRTY-EIGHTH: In formulating its policies and determining the nature of its activities, the petitioner studies the conditions prevailing in the nation at the given time, and the relation of those conditions to past events.

THIRTY-NINTH: The petitioner adopts this scientific method because it believes that present customs, institutions and ideas are the outgrowth of the historical development of our country.

FORTIETH: For the aforesaid reasons, the petitioner has studied and analyzed the history of our country, honors and endeavors to emulate the great leaders of the past, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Thomas Paine, and Abraham Lincoln.

FORTY-FIRST: From its study of the history of our country, the petitioner is fully cognizant of the opposition which the honored founders of our country encountered when they sought to establish a society consistent with the conditions that existed in their day—a society founded upon a democratic Constitution, a republican form of government, and the right of suffrage.

FORTY-SECOND: With equal understanding, the petitioner is aware of, and struggles against, those groups who oppose all efforts to improve our system of society, or fundamentally change that society appropriate to modern conditions.

FORTY-THIRD: The petitioner bases its principles and policies upon the scientific law that the economic development of an epoch or of a nation is the foundation upon which particular social, political and cultural systems are erected; that this economic foundation of society is in a constant state of motion and change; and that when the economic structure of society is materially changed, the superstructure of social, cultural and political institutions will also change and become more compatible with the material economic changes.

FORTY-FOURTH: The petitioner submits that this law of social development provides the scientific explanation for the history of past eras, and provides the only reliable guide for the progress of present and future society.

FORTY-FIFTH: Because of this scientific analysis the principles evolved by the Communist Party, and, therefore, its policies and activities, are constantly being developed and improved; and the Party does not hesitate to replace outdated propositions and conclusions with new principles which correspond to new historical conditions.

FORTY-SIXTH: The principle and viewpoint enunciated by the founders and exponents of scientific socialism that their theory is a guide to action and not a dogma emphasizes the need for the application of the theories of scientific socialism to the concrete settings of time and space.

FORTY-SEVENTH: Thus, prior to the attack at Pearl Harbor, the petitioner had officially stated that it did not make any proposals of a specific communistic or socialistic character during the war or the immediate post-war period, because such proposals would not, under present conditions, receive a majority support of the American electorate; and that such proposals could only have the effect of dividing the people on nearly all issues and thereby weakening the strength of the nation for whole-hearted prosecution of the war.

FORTY-EIGHTH: In accordance with the aforesaid official statement of the petitioner, and in the interest of national unity, it being clear that the so-called system of private enterprise would be the system under which the war would be prosecuted and reconstruction in the post-war world achieved, the petitioner pledged itself to give its full support to the fulfillment of these tasks under that system which obviously will prevail in this period—the system of capitalism; i.e., the so-called "private enterprise".

FORTY-NINTH: However, in the broad historical perspective, the petitioner seeks to convince the American people that a change from the capitalist to the socialist form of society has been made necessary by the enormous development of modern industry and the centralization of capital, and that the overwhelming majority of the American people would be benefited immediately—and the total of the people ultimately—by such a change.

FIFTIETH: The petitioner has not withdrawn, but continues to affirm, its conclusion that the economic development of human society has reached a stage in which the capitalist mode of production must be replaced within this historic epoch by a socialist form of organization, in which the large industrial and financial corporate properties, which have reached the state of monopoly and which constitute the chief social means of production, must become the property of the nation by the will of the majority of the American people, to be expressed at the ballot-box.

FIFTY-FIRST: The petitioner submits that in the aforesaid respect it may be compared to the formative period of the Republican Party, which came into existence with progressive aims in 1852.

FIFTY-SECOND: The founders of the Republican Party, believing that the feudal system prevailing in the South, and which the Southern slave owners sought to extend everywhere, hampered the development of modern industry and democracy, organized themselves into a political party to convince the American people of the truth of their views. Fortunately, the Republican Party, then under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln, met with success.

FIFTY-THIRD: The Communist Party respectfully submits to this Court that its democratic program and activities are based on the aforestated laws of social development and should be tested on that basis.

FIFTY-FOURTH: The petitioner submits that it seeks only an ever-increasing development and expansion of our productive forces, the mines, the factories, the farms, so that they may produce increasing quantities of material goods which can be utilized by all the inhabitants of our nation. The petitioner respectfully directs the attention of this Court to the preamble of its Constitution.

> "The Communist Party of the United States of America is a working class political party carrying forward today the traditions of Jefferson, Paine, Jackson and Lincoln, and of the Declaration of Independence; it upholds the achievements of democracy, the right of 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness,' and defends the United States Constitution against its reactionary enemies who would destroy democracy and all popular liberties; it is devoted to defense of the immediate interests of workers, farmers, and all toilers against capitalist exploitation, and to preparation of the working class for its historic mission to unite and lead the American people to extend these democratic principles to their necessary and logical conclusions."

FIFTY-FIFTH: The petitioner properly endeavors to put its principles into practice in every sphere of political and social life.

FIFTY-SIXTH: The petitioner has advocated the principle of unionism with collective bargaining and especially industrial unionism as a further advance for the workers of our nation.

FIFTY-SEVENTH: The petitioner has as one of its fixed policies the principle of equal rights for Negroes, believing that discrimination against thirteen million Negroes is a survival of an outworn and reactionary system, and a factor which retards social and political and economic advance of the entire nation.

FIFTY-EIGHTH: In the field of foreign affairs, the petitioner has adopted policies fully familiar to the American people.

FIFTY-NINTH: The petitioner has urged upon our government the adoption of a good-neighbor policy believing that a practice of repression of other nations is not only immoral, but stifles the growth of social forces in the oppressed nation, as well as our own, thus retarding social development and progress.

SIXTIETH: For nine years, since the Italian attack on Ethiopia in 1935, the petitioner advocated a policy of collective security among those nations who were prepared to resist fascism, a policy which was resisted by other groups and political associations.

SIXTY-FIRST: The petitioner submits that it is now historically verifiable that had the policy of collective security which it advocated been adopted, such a policy would have been in the true national interest of the United States and would have served to protect democracy everywhere; would have been the most effective method of preventing the outbreak of the present world war, and the resultant destruction of life and property.

SIXTY-SECOND: The petitioner has conducted election campaigns in accordance with constitutional and statutory provisions applicable to those who exercise the franchise.

SIXTY-THIRD: The petitioner has nominated candidates of its own choosing, seeking office on platforms which specifically set forth its views on the issues of the day and its program for the welfare of the nation, and its candidates have campaigned throughout the country on these platforms.

SIXTY-FOURTH: The petitioner submits that an examination of its platforms in the past three presidential campaigns, is ample proof that its policies were determined strictly on its analysis of prevailing conditions and are consistent with the general law of social development upon which its policies are based.

SIXTY-FIFTH: The petitioner understands that its principles, and the social system which it advocates for the United States, is opposed by groups who are interested in forestalling social progress, and that its views have as yet not been accepted by large numbers of persons. However, it states:

"We of the Communist Party never did and never will hold to a program of forcible establishment of socialism against the will of the people. While the majority of the people, and above all of the working class, do not yet accept the program of socialism, our program of socialist reconstruction of society is a matter for educational work to win the majority, while our practical and immediate political work is to be in the forefront in the organization of the majority of the workers and of the people generally, against the reactionary menace to their rights and interests, for a program of betterment of their lives such as the majority is ready to accept and fight for now—the program of the People's Front. If our understanding of history is correct, this is the surest and least difficult road to winning the majority for socialism in the long run."

SIXTY-SIXTH: The determined and unqualified support of the war of our country by the Communist Party of the United States of America; the readiness of every member of the Communist Party to make every sacrifice in defense of our liberties, our democratic institutions, and our country's existence and independence; to do everything possible to strengthen our armed forces; to develop to the maximum the production of war materials, all contradict and disprove the spurious charge that Communists advocate or seek to overthrow our government by force and violence, or otherwise.

SIXTY-SEVENTH: The position of the Communist Party of the United States of America, its support of the war policies of the Government of our country is not an accident, but is consistent with and flows directly from all the principles that have guided the activities of your petitioner throughout its existence. No Communist Party, no party guided by the principles of Marxism, could have adopted a different position, and, as will presently appear, this position is not newly acquired since Pearl Harbor.

SIXTY-EIGHTH: As early as 1933, soon after Hitler came to power, the petitioner called attention to the danger of Nazi aggression and urged measures to preserve world peace and collective security and to safeguard our national independence and democratic institutions.

SIXTY-NINTH: The alertness of the Communist Party to this world danger was made possible by the application of the scientific principles of Marxism, principles which are applied as a guide to action and not as dogma, and upon which principles the Party is founded.

SEVENTIETH: Unthinking persons are led by the Attorney-General to believe that the petitioner became alert to this world danger "only after June, 1941", when Russia was attacked, and from this false premise it is argued that petitioner's policy is shaped "in the interest of Russia"; both premise and conclusion are untrue, for the petitioner first made its demand for a policy of coalition to "Stop Hitler, Mussolini and Japan", not in 1941, but six years earlier—in 1935; it made the demand not on behalf of Russia, but directly on behalf of Ethiopia and, in a greater sense, it was made because of a view—now generally accepted—that this was the only sound foreign policy in the interest of our country; it made a second demand that our country join in forming such an anti-Axis coalition in 1936, in behalf of Spain; it made a third demand that our country adopt this foreign policy in 1938, in the hope of saving Czechoslovakia from Germany. There is no instance in which the petitioner has made a proposal concerning foreign relations that is not now generally conceded to have been sound policy from the point of view of the interests of the United States.

SEVENTY-FIRST: Based upon its understanding of world events and a policy dedicated to the welfare of the American people, the Communist Party exposed the Japanese attack upon China as a threat to our country's security and independence.

SEVENTY-SECOND: In similar fashion and for similar reasons, the Communist Party condemned the fascist invasion of Spain.

SEVENTY-THIRD: In similar fashion and for similar reasons, your petitioner exposed and fought against the policy of appeasement which led to the Munich betrayal.

SEVENTY-FOURTH: In similar fashion and for similar reasons, your petitioner urged collaboration between our country and the Soviet Union in order to safeguard peace.

SEVENTY-FIFTH: In similar fashion and for similar reasons, the Communist Party throughout the period from September, 1930, to June 22, 1941, struggled constantly against those forces which sought to come to an agreement with Hitler at the expense of the small nations for a war against the Soviet Union.

SEVENTY-SIXTH: The petitioner submits that its policies are based upon the natural concern of the American citizens who constitute it, that our country pursue a sound and democratic course. Its activities have served to create greater understanding among the American people concerning the danger of fascism and fascist aggression; to promote those policies now embodied in our national policy and the policy of the United Nations, and to foster the closest collaboration and alliance of our country with the Soviet Union, China and Great Britain.

SEVENTY-SEVENTH: The petitioner respectfully submits further that its policies through all the years of its existence on the domestic front; the struggle for labor organization; for greater social security; for equal rights for the Negro people; for the battle for production; for the exposure of the Hitler fifth column in this country, must now be recognized to have been helpful in the development of today's national unity.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH: The petitioner submits to this Court that at the present time when the entire country is engaged in a life and death struggle for its survival, the Communist Party subordinates all other activities for the one purpose of winning the war; all its work, all its activity, has this goal in mind and nothing else; all its proposals spring solely from the consideration of how to effectively strengthen the war effort; and in this war, which is not a war of socialism, but a war of national liberation, the Communist Party advocates and fights for the unity of all patriotic Americans regardless of class, creed, color, national origin, or political belief.

SEVENTY-NINTH: The most profound example of the petitioner's desire to strengthen the unity of all progressive and democratic forces in the nation in the support of the war effort and the solution of the problems of the post-war era, is a proposal recently made by its National Committee to a convention of the Party that it cease to call itself a "party" and adopt a probable future designation of itself as an "association". The significance of this proposed change is explained in a report of Earl Browder, the General Secretary of the petitioner:

> "It is around the concept 'party' rather than of 'Communist' that there exists today in America the most practical obstruction to our cooperative relationships with other democratic groups.
> "What is called the 'two party system' in the United States is an old tradition which dominates most American minds. It recognizes as a 'party' only that particular combination which is in power and the combination of the opposition which is an immediate alternative to take power. All lesser political groupings are contained within the 'two major parties', which in fact are coalitions of many groups which in most countries would be separate parties; or if the lesser group takes the name 'Party', and becomes one of the so-called 'minor parties', it is regarded as a sect which has withdrawn itself from the practical political life of the nation. * * *

"Obviously, to realize the promise of Teheran, the broadest democratic-progressive united front must be maintained in the United States. Equally obviously, the Communists will be a part of that united front. The Communist organization will be in a long-term alliance with forces much larger than itself.

"It follows from this fact that, in the peculiar American sense of the word, the Communists will not be operating as a 'Party', that is, with their own separate candidates in elections, except under special circumstances when they may be forced to act through 'independent candidates.' * * *

"All these considerations point to the expediency of a decision that the Communist organization in the United States should adjust its name to correspond more exactly to the American political tradition and its own practical political role.

"Such a decision would be that, instead of being known as 'The Communist Party of the United States', our organization should call itself something like 'American Communist Political Association' * * *

"Under such a name, we will find it much easier to explain our true relationship with all other democratic and progressive groupings which operate through the medium, in the main, of the two-party system, and take our place in free collaboration at their side."

EIGHTIETH: The petitioner submits that such a fundamental step could only be taken by a party which does not espouse the doctrine of force and violence as a means of effecting political and social change.

EIGHTY-FIRST: The petitioner respectfully addresses the Court in the words of the Manifesto of the National Committee of the Communist Party of the United States of America, addressed to the American people on December 8, 1941, the day after the treacherous attack upon Pearl Harbor and the Axis acts of war against our country:

> "Never in the history of our country has the need for unity of the nation been so great as now. The Communist Party pledges its loyalty, its devoted labor and last drop of its blood in support of our country in this greatest of all the crises that ever threatened its existence. In the tradition of the Communist leaders who in 1861 joined the United States Army under commissions issued by President Lincoln, 100,000 American Communists today step forward to support the bigger war against slavery, a war in defense of the whole world's freedom.
> * * * * * * *
>
> "All Americans must join in one mighty stream of national unity to assure that 'government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.'
>
> "Everything for national unity!
> "Everything for victory over world-wide fascist slavery!"

EIGHTY-SECOND: The Attorney-General in his decision has placed his reliance upon quotations from three documents dated, respectively, 1848, 1920, and 1921.

EIGHTY-THIRD: In the aforesaid decision, the following excerpt from the Communist Manifesto of 1848 appears:

> "The Communists disdain to conceal their views and aims. They openly declare that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions."

EIGHTY-FOURTH: The petitioner respectfully submits that the Attorney-General has torn the aforesaid quotation out of factual and historical context and created thereby a wholly erroneous and misleading impression.

EIGHTY-FIFTH: The Attorney-General failed to cite in his decision another statement which appears in the Communist Manifesto: "Finally they (The Communists) labor everywhere for the union and agreement of the democratic parties of all countries"; nor did he cite the statement on page thirty of the same Manifesto, wherein it is stated: "We have seen above, that the first step in the revolution by the working classes, is to raise the proletariat to the position of ruling class, to establish democracy."

EIGHTY-SIXTH: The apparent contradiction between these quotations in the same document gives the clue to the erroneous interpretation made by the Attorney-General of the political theories contained in the Communist Manifesto —the result of his unscientific method of tearing an isolated sentence out of context.

EIGHTY-SEVENTH: The petitioner respectfully submits that Karl Marx, in the Communist Manifesto, was setting forth the law of social development which he had evolved; that he was presenting the general principles of historical development of society and social systems, from the slave era of early Rome to the capitalist period of his day, 1848; that he was projecting the system of socialism as the next historical stage, and, at the same time, enunciating the specific policies applicable to the specific conditions which prevailed in 1848 in Germany, France, Poland and Switzerland, a period of revolution throughout Europe. (See Section IV of the Communist Manifesto entitled, Position of the Communists in Relation to the Various Existing Opposition Parties.)

EIGHTY-EIGHTH: The Communist Manifesto, upon which the Attorney-General relies, itself programatically negatives the idea of force and violence by its advocacy of social gains similar to those now existing in this country, such as collective bargaining, social security, and taxation based on ability to pay; the petitioner submits that the aforementioned social advances have been gained only after years of tireless effort by social minded progressive people, especially labor, whose opponents sought to discredit them by describing them as dangerous radicals who deserved, and who often suffered, imprisonment and death.

EIGHTY-NINTH: It is historically verifiable that Karl Marx prepared the Communist Manifesto as an official, and at the direction of the Communist League, in London.

NINETIETH: The petitioner submits further that it is also historically verifiable that the quotation culled from the Communist Manifesto by the Attorney-General was addressed to the peoples of the countries of Germany, Italy and other parts of Europe in the 1840's in support of their progressive struggles for democratic rights and the abolition of the remnants of the feudal system.

NINETY-FIRST: In other writings, Karl Marx specifically excepted the United States and Great Britain from those countries on the monarch-ridden mainland of Europe in which he believed the conditions at that time would lead to violent overthrow of states.

NINETY-SECOND: The historical conditions which existed at the time when the Communist Manifesto appeared containing the statement extracted by the Attorney-General is further exemplified in every history book used in American schools wherein the leaders of these revolutionary movements against feudalism, such as Carl Schurz and Louis Kossuth, are acclaimed as heroes and great pride taken in the fact that our country furnished them with asylum when they fled into exile.

NINETY-THIRD: The petitioner respectfully submits that Karl Marx, writing in a period of revolutionary upsurge against feudalism, and at a time when the peoples in Europe were striving and aspiring for democratic rights, would have been guilty of gross hypocrisy and sheer absurdity if he had maintained that these social changes could be brought about by peaceful requests and petitions to the then ruling autocrats, dictators, and tyrants.

NINETY-FOURTH: The petitioner further submits that such a fallacious conclusion would be equivalent to a statement by a leader of the United Nations counseling the people of the conquered nations to employ peaceful methods against Quisling or Laval or Hitler.

NINETY-FIFTH: The Attorney-General makes the fundamental error of tearing living facts out of their historical context.

NINETY-SIXTH: The fallacious and unscientific method used by the Attorney-General would condemn the Republican Party and its members because of the admirable and wholly correct theory of social change enunciated by Abraham Lincoln in his First Inaugural Address, a statement which if torn out of textual and historical context would similarly be used to establish that the great President who defended the United States during the Civil War adocated the forcible overthrow of our government:

> "This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing Government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it."

NINETY-SEVENTH: The petitioner respectfully submits that a fair and scrupulous historian would appraise the words and writings of Abraham Lincoln in their historical setting and would correctly conclude that Abraham Lincoln defended the government of the United States against those who sought its destruction, a position taken by other great Americans, patriotic Americans, including Communists.

NINETY-EIGHTH: On January 12, 1848, Abraham Lincoln, then a young Congressman from Illinois, arose in the House and stated:

> "Any people anywhere being inclined and having the power have a right to rise up and shake off the existing government, and form a new one that suits them better. This is a most valuable, a most sacred right—a right which we hope and believe is to liberate the world. Nor is this right confined to cases in which the whole people of an existing government may choose to exercise it. Any portion of such people that can may revolutionize and make their own so much of the territory as they inhabit. More than this, a majority of any portion of such people may revolutionize, putting down a minority, intermingling with or near about them, who may oppose this movement. Such a minority was precisely the case of the Tories of our own revolution. It is a quality of revolutions not to go by old ideas or old laws; but to break up both, and make new ones." (Stephens, Alexander H., The War Between the States, Vol. I, p. 520.)

NINETY-NINTH: The petitioner further submits that the Democratic Party and its principles would be chargeable, if the unscientific method of the Attorney-General were adopted, with unlawful conduct because Thomas Jefferson declared that: "A little rebellion now and then is a good thing and as necessary in the political world as storms in the physical," and "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is its natural manure."

ONE HUNDREDTH: The petitioner maintains that the words of great patriots and great leaders when abstracted from their historical setting, may be made to appear as the words of an enemy of democracy; but when placed in their appropriate setting, they become appropriate and encouraging guides for action by freedom loving peoples.

ONE HUNDRED FIRST: The words of Karl Marx, written for an Europe of 1848, spurred the peoples of that day to free themselves from the rule of tyrants and are appropriate again today for the enslaved peoples in countries controlled by the Axis powers.

ONE HUNDRED SECOND: While the Attorney-General erroneously transposes a statement of general principles from a document written in Europe almost one hundred years ago to the present historical conditions in the United States of America, he fails to mention the specific utterances made by Karl Marx concerning the capitalist system and the political institutions of the United States.

ONE HUNDRED THIRD: The Revolutionary War which gave us our national existence and independence, and the Civil War which saved and maintained the Union, were the sources from which Karl Marx drew inspiration and experience, as examples of progressive social development, consistent with his theories of social change.

ONE HUNDRED FOURTH: These historic struggles for democracy and the progress of our country have inspired the American people and the American Communists, as well as the Communists in the entire world.

> "As in the Eighteenth Century, the American War of Independence sounded the tocsin for the European middle class, so in the Nineteenth Century the American Civil War sounded it for the European working class." (Marx and Engels Selected Correspondence, p. 136.)

ONE HUNDRED FIFTH: The Attorney-General fails to mention the official records of correspondence between Karl Marx and President Lincoln, transferred through United States Ambassador Adams in London, in one of which letters Karl Marx wrote:

> "From the commencement of the titanic American strife the workingmen of Europe felt instinctively that the Star-Spangled Banner carried the destiny of their class." (Marx and Engels, Civil War in the United States.)

ONE HUNDRED SIXTH: The Attorney-General, while placing reliance upon the historic Communist Manifesto in support of his erroneous findings, ignored the fact that Karl Marx headed a world-wide movement organized to obtain popular support for the United States armed forces against the effort made to overthrow the Government of the United States by force and violence.

ONE HUNDRED SEVENTH: The interpretation of the Communist Manifesto made by the Attorney-General is completely inconsistent with the recorded facts that two of the closest political associates of Karl Marx, were Brig. Gen. August Willich and Col. Joseph Weydemeyer, both of the United States Army, prominent Communists, commissioned by President Abraham Lincoln, who served faithfully in the Civil War.

ONE HUNDRED EIGHTH: The patriotic conduct of these political associates met with the unstinted approval of Karl Marx, who found their conduct completely consistent with the principles enunicated in the classic document the Communist Manifesto.

ONE HUNDRED NINTH: The Attorney General failed to mention the article by Karl Marx published in the New York Daily Tribune on February 1, 1862, wherein our government, then headed by President Abraham Lincoln was admiringly termed "The only popular government in the world."

ONE HUNDRED TENTH: The petitioner submits that the Marxist theories of scientific socialism (Communism) do not advocate and are incompatible with the advocacy of force and violence except in the sense of organized military defense of democracy, which is a part of the philosophy of citizenship of every good American; no individual has the right to judge the petitioner by standards of the false philosophy of pacifism.

ONE HUNDRED ELEVENTH: The completely false theory of force and violence which the Attorney-General wrongfully attributes to the petitioner is the theory that social changes and advances can be accomplished by eliminating in coup d'etat fashion the persons, groups or classes who happen to possess political control.

ONE HUNDRED TWELFTH: The petitioner submits that the theories of Marxism have never embodied the absolute necessity or even the inevitability of force and violence to accomplish social changes in general, or the transition to socialism in particular.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTEENTH: In 1872, nearly twenty-five years after the appearance of the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx stated:

> "Of course, it must not be supposed to imply that the means to this end (the establishment of a new organization of labor) will be everywhere the same. We know that special regard must be paid to the institutions, customs and traditions of various lands; and we do not deny that there are certain countries such as the United States and England in which the workers may hope to secure their ends by peaceful means." (Stekloff, History of the First International (Eng. Tr.), p. 240.)

ONE HUNDRED FOURTEENTH: When the Czar was overthrown by the Russian people and the Provisional Government co-existed with the Soviets, Lenin advised taking advantage of the possibilities of the situation to "secure a peaceful development of the revolution."

> "The democracy of Russia, the Soviets and the Socialist-Revolutionary and the Menshevik parties, are now confronted with the opportunity, very seldom to be met with in the history of revolution, of securing the convocation of the Constituent Assembly at the appointed date without further delay, of saving the country from military and economic catastrophe, and of securing a peaceful development of the revolution.
>
> "By seizing power now—and this is probably their last chance—the Soviets could still secure a peaceful development of the revolution, the peaceful election of deputies of the people, the peaceful struggle of parties within the Soviets, the testing of the programmes of the various parties in practice, and the peaceful transfer of power from party to party.
> "If this opportunity is allowed to pass, the entire course of development of the revolution, from the movement of May 3 (April 20) to the Kornilov affair, points to the inevitability of a bitter civil war between the bourgeoisie, and the proletariat * * * On the other hand, the proletariat would support the Soviets in every way if they were to avail themselves of their last chance of securing a peaceful development of the revolution." (Lenin, V. I., Selected Works.)

ONE HUNDRED FIFTEENTH: The petitioner submits as another example of the application of the principles of scientific socialism the conduct of the Communist Party in Spain when it staunchly defended the country against the rebellion by force and violence initiated by Franco and the Fascists at the instigation of Hitler.

ONE HUNDRED SIXTEENTH: In similar fashion, the Communist Party of China has by its policies and deeds strengthened the unity of the Chinese nation and heroically in unison with the Chinese Government, is fighting and destroying the Japanese invaders; and at the same time adapting its program to the economic development and institutions of China.

ONE HUNDRED SEVENTEENTH: The terms "Communist" or "Communist Parties" are used in the foregoing paragraphs in respect to countries other than the United States in the same manner or sense as the term "democrat" or "republican" is used for all countries, without implying a necessary connection as between those of one country and those of another. As Lincoln said:

> "The strongest bond of human sympathy, outside of the family relationship, should be one uniting all working people of all nations and tongues and kindreds."

ONE HUNDRED EIGHTEENTH: The petitioner submits that the aforementioned examples of unswerving loyalty by the various Communist Parties of the world are the clearest evidence that "force and violence" are not inherent elements of the laws of scientific socialism.

ONE HUNDRED NINETEENTH: The Attorney-General places further reliance in his decision concerning the objectives of the Communist Party upon a quotation from a document allegedly adopted in 1921 as the program of the American "section."

ONE HUNDRED TWENTIETH: The petitioner maintains that the history of the development of the Communist Party in America conclusively establishes that it cannot and does not take responsibility for any document or activity of any group prior to the formation of the Worker's Party in December, 1921, and that the Communist Party since 1921 has repudiated the ideas and expressions contained in the quotation relied upon by the Attorney-General.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-FIRST: The petitioner has been compelled by reason of the unlawful conduct on the part of individuals and officials of government to protect itself against the spurious versions of Marxism foisted upon it, and has, therefore, adopted the following official resolution:

> "That the Convention formally and officially declares that the Communist Party of the United States is responsible for no political document, policy, book, article, or other expression of political opinion, except such as are issued by itself, through its regularly constituted leadership, on the basis of the Eleventh National Convention deliberations and decisions, and of this present special Convention." (Report to the Emergency National Convention of the Communist Party, New York, November 16, 1940.)

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-SECOND: The Communist Party has repeatedly denied the slanderous assertions made against it through its official spokesmen and by its very Constitution.

> "Because we are advocates of a future socialist system, which as yet is supported only by a small minority of the population, we Communists declare that it is the duty of adherents of socialism to join hands with all progressives not ready for socialism, on the basis of such a platform of democratic and progressive measures, which will guarantee our country from the horrors of fascism and war, and make the future social transformation less difficult and painful." (Browder, Earl, The People's Front [1938], p. 85.)

* * * * * *

> "Mr. Browder, we have heard a great deal of Communists advocating the overthrow of the United States Government by force. I think it will clarify the situation greatly were you to tell us just what the stand of your Party is on that particular question.

"The Communist Party does not advocate force and violence. It is a legal party and defends its legality. Communists are not conspirators, not terrorists, not anarchists. The Communist Party is an open revolutionary party, continuing under modern conditions the revolutionary traditions of 1776" (supra, p. 197).

* * * * * *

"The Communist Party repudiates now as in the past, all theories or proposals looking toward a forcible imposition of Socialism or any utopia upon the majority of the people. We repudiate the 'reckless resolve to seize power' by any minority. If there should arise in America anything similar to the situation in Spain, where the democratic republic while repulsing the fascist invasion was stabbed in the back by the 'uncontrollable extremists' (a minority of the anarchists and the Trotskyist F.O.U.M.), that we, like our brothers of the Spanish Communist Party would be in the forefront of the struggle to suppress such 'extremists,' who are really agents of fascism, and render them harmless" (supra, p. 239).

* * * * * *

"The Communist Party must smash once and for all the superstition, which has been embodied in a maze of court decisions having the force of law, that our Party is an advocate of force and violence, that it is subject to laws, (Federal immigration laws, State 'criminal syndicalism' laws) directed against such advocacy. The Communist Party is not a conspirative organization, it is an open revolutionary Party, continuing the traditions of 1776 and 1861; it is the only organization that is really entitled by its program and work to designate itself as 'sons and daughters of the American revolution')."

"Communists are not anarchists, not terrorists. The Communist Party is a legal party and defends its legality. Prohibition of advocacy of force and violence does not apply to the Communist Party; it is properly applied only to the Black Legion, the Ku Klux Klan and other fascist groupings, and to the strikebreaking agencies and the open-shop employers who use them against the working class, who are responsible for the terrible toll of violence which shames our country" (supra, p. 112).

* * * * * *

"The Communist Party of the U.S.A. upholds the democratic achievements of the American people. It opposes with all its power any clique, group, circle, faction or party which conspires or acts to subvert, undermine, weaken or overthrow any or all institutions of American democracy whereby the majority of the American people have obtained power to determine their own destiny in any degree. It condemns and opposes all policies and acts of sabotage, espionage, and all other forms of 'Fifth Column' activity. The Communist Party of the U.S.A., standing unqualifiedly for the right of the majority to direct the destinies of our country, will fight with all its strength against any and every effort, whether it comes from abroad or from within, to impose upon our people the arbitrary will of any selfish minority group or party or clique or conspiracy" (Constitution of the Communist Party of the United States of America, Article VI, Sec. 1).

One Hundred Twenty-third: The quotation contained in the decision of the Attorney-General from "The Thesis and Statutes of the Third International," a document formulated in 1920, is another illustration of the unscientific and illegal methods adopted by the Attorney-General.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-FOURTH: The petitioner submits that it is an historically verifiable fact that the Communists in America were not affiliated with the Third International in 1920; and the Petitioner is not at the present time affiliated with any international organization or association.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-FIFTH: The Communist Party of the United States of America is an American political party; makes its own decisions; and maintains its own policies and activities, guided solely by the needs and desires of the American people and based upon the social, political and cultural institutions of our country.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-SIXTH: Moreover, Communists do not even copy and blindly apply, regardless of time, place and consequences, the more extreme of the precepts on violence uttered by the founders of our nation—enunciated by them as guides to action against tyranny and in the defense of human progress under the different circumstances of an earlier time, because of the petitioner's belief that there can be no mechanical transposition of the precepts of one era to another, nor their application to all countries at the same time.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-SEVENTH: The petitioner submits that only the naive and biased would ascribe to humanity's leaders, past and present, the dogmatic advocacy of force and violence in all countries and under all conditions. Those who endeavor to create such misconceptions render the greatest disservice to the nation and the democratic process.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-EIGHTH: For all of the aforestated reasons, the petitioner submits that the charge made by the Attorney-General that it advocates force and violence, is untrue; that the issue of force and violence is one totally irrelevant to and unconnected with the nature of the Communist Party; that the Communist Party cannot and does not by reason of the tenets of scientific socialism which it upholds, advocate the forcible overthrow of the government of the United States.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-NINTH: The petitioner submits that American constitutional law guaranteeing the republican form of government and assuring popular suffrage and free elections, adopts as its very essence the principle that the electorate and the electorate alone passes judgment at the polls upon all political programs; and the same Constitution guarantees the free offering to the public by means of speech, press and assemblage of such political doctrines and programs.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTIETH: The petitioner submits that it was not within the province of the Attorney-General, as administrative official of government, to pass upon the merits of the program of any political party of American citizens; and that this function cannot be thrust upon a court by a subterfuge wherein it is pretended that a judgment is being passed upon an individual's qualifications as indicated by his affiliation with a political party in the United States.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-FIRST: The findings made by the Attorney-General concerning the objectives of the Communist Party deprived the petitioner of its constitutional rights of freedom of speech, freedom to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances, in violation of the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-SECOND: The aforesaid findings made by the Attorney-General denies to the petitioner the equal protection of the laws, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-THIRD: The aforesaid findings were made by the Attorney-General in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that it deprived the petitioner of its liberty and property without due process of law.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-FOURTH: As a result of the findings and order made by the Attorney-General concerning the objectives of the Communist Party, the petitioner has suffered and continues to suffer injury and damage, and is threatened with future injury and damage to its liberty and property as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-FIFTH: As a result of the findings and order made by the Attorney-General, damage is threatened to the reputation of the petitioner and its members and to the esteem in which they are held by large numbers of the American people.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-SIXTH: The legal and constitutional right of the American citizens who are organized in the petitioner party to disseminate ideas and principles and to promulgate platforms and programs has been violated by the aforesaid findings and order of the Attorney-General, and its ability to nominate and elect candidates of its own choice, or to support in its public activity other candidates deemed by it to represent the public interest and to present its views to the electorate, has been obstructed.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-SEVENTH: The findings and order made by the Attorney-General, unjustly attacking an American political party, are injurious to national unity and national morale, both essential to winning the war.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-EIGHTH: The petitioner has no adequate or other remedy, in any forum, at law or in equity, to restrain the continuing and threatened damages to its liberty and property.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-NINTH: On the 25th day of September, 1942, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus by Harry Renton Bridges was argued before one of the Judges of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California. Prior to such argument, your petitioner made efforts to be permitted to intervene in the said proceeding and applied by petition and notice of motion for such leave to intervene; said motion was argued orally on the said 25th day of September, 1942, and the said application was denied; the decision by the said Judge in the habeas corpus proceeding was not made until the 8th day of February, 1943; the petitioner has thus sought leave to be heard in an application to the Attorney-General of the United States and to the United States District Court; such leave has been denied, and justice requires that this application for leave to intervene herein be granted by this Circuit Court.

ONE HUNDRED FORTIETH: The interest of the petitioner and of its members is not represented by any party to the proceeding now pending in this Court, nor should the petitioner be required to entrust the defense of its interest to either party in the proceeding.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-FIRST: The adequate representation of petitioner's interest requires that it be permitted to intervene for the purpose of taking all such steps as may be appropriate for its protection in the proceeding.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND: If the findings and order made by the Attorney-General are sustained by a judgment of this Court, the rights of the petitioner will be prejudiced.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD: The petitioner's claim and the main proceeding herein have a question of law and fact in common.

WHEREFORE, the petitioner respectfully requests that an order be made granting the petitioner's application to intervene in the proceeding herein, and that an order be made directing the District Court to remand the deportation proceeding to the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Justice with directions to the said Department to give the petitioner a full and fair opportunity to be heard concerning the objectives of the Communist Party, including the right of confrontation and cross-examination and the right of the petitioner to present evidence, oral and documentary, in its own behalf, and such other and further relief as the Court may direct.

EXHIBIT "A"

The Constitution of the Communist Party of the United States of America adopted May, 1938, as amended.

PREAMBLE

The Communist Party of the United States of America is a working class political party carrying forward today the traditions of Jefferson, Paine, Jackson, and Lincoln, and of the Declaration of Independence; it upholds the achievements of democracy, the right of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness", and defends the United States Constitution against its reactionary enemies who would destroy democracy and all popular liberties; it is devoted to defense of the immediate interests of workers, farmers, and all toilers against capitalist exploitation, and to preparation of the working class for its historic mission to unite and lead the American people to extend these democratic principles to their necessary and logical conclusions:

By establishing common ownership of the national economy, through a government of the people, by the people, and for the people; the abolition of all exploitation of man by man, nation by nation, race by race, and thereby the abolition of class divisions in society; that is, by the establishment of socialism, according to the scientific principles enunciated by the greatest teachers of mankind, Marx, Engels, Lenin, and Stalin, embodied in the Communist International; and the free cooperation of the American people with those of other lands, striving toward a world without oppression and war, a world brotherhood of man.

To this end, the Communist Party of the United States of America established the basic laws of its organization in this Constitution.

SIXTH: The findings were made by the Attorney-General without notice to the intervenor.

SEVENTH: The findings made by the Attorney-General are unsupported by any evidence.

TENTH: The findings made by the Attorney-General are unfounded and baseless in fact.

ELEVENTH: Upon information and belief, the Attorney-General on the said May 28, 1942, made an order of deportation against the said Harry Renton Bridges.

[Title of Circuit Court of Appeals and Cause.]

Upon appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, Northern Division

OPINION

Before: Wilbur, Garrecht, Mathews, Stephens and Healy, Circuit Judges.

Wilbur, Circuit Judge:

The appellant, in custody of the respondent under a warrant for deportation, sought release by habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California. That court issued an order to show cause and, upon the showing made by the return and traverse, denied the petition and remanded the petitioner to the custody of the respondent. From that order the petitioner appeals to this court. The appellant attached to his petition for a writ a transcript of the entire proceedings before the Inspector who ordered deportation, the record of petitioner's appeal before the Appeal Board set up by the Attorney General, which recommended against deportation, and the final order of the Attorney General upon a review of the Appeal Board's decision ordering the deportation of the petitioner.

While the power of the District Court and of this court in such an application is well settled, in view of the wide range of the argument it is well to state again the limits of the court's authority in the premises.

The statute providing for deportation of undesirable aliens by the Attorney General provides that:

"In every case where any person is ordered deported from the United States under the provisions of this chapter, or of any law or treaty, the decision of the Attorney General shall be final." 8 U.S.C.A. § 155 (a).

Thus the court has no power derived from Congress to review or to inquire into the truth of the charge against the alien, nor into the manner in which the decision has been reached by the Attorney General. The right of the court to consider the validity of the order of deportation at all is derived directly from the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which prohibits a deprivation of liberty or property without due process of law.

The Supreme Court, in United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 255, stated the rule controlling the court in such a case as follows:

"Where the law has confided to a special tribunal authority to hear and determine matters arising in the course of its duties, a decision by it within the scope of its authority as to questions of fact is conclusive against collateral attack. Where the jurisdiction depends upon a question of fact which is the very gist of the controversy, the determination of that, is generally final. [citing cases]

"Where the decision of questions of fact is committed by Congress to the head of a Department, his decision thereon is conclusive; * * *".

This last statement is subject only to a court review upon the question of due process under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

In Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U.S. 272, 275, it is said, (Mr. Justice Pitney writing the opinion):

"It is entirely settled that the authority of Congress to prohibit aliens from coming within the United States and to regulate their coming includes authority to impose conditions upon the performance of which the continued liberty of the alien to reside within the bounds of this country may be made to depend; that a proceeding to enforce such regulations is not a criminal prosecution within the meaning of the Fifth and Sixth Amendments; that such an injury may be properly devolved upon an executive department or subordinate officials thereof and that the findings of fact reached by such officials, after a fair though summary hearing, may constitutionally be made conclusive, as they are made by the provisions of the act in question."

In Tisi v. Tod, 264 U.S. 131, 133, it is said, (Mr. Justice Brandeis writing the opinion):

"We do not discuss the evidence; because the correctness of the judgment of the lower court is not to be determined by enquiring whether the conclusion drawn by the Secretary of Labor from the evidence was correct or by deciding whether the evidence was such that, if introduced in a court of law, it would be held legally sufficient to prove the fact found.

"The denial of a fair hearing is not established by proving merely that the decision was wrong. Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U.S. 8, 13. This is equally true whether the error consists in deciding wrongly that evidence introduced constituted legal evidence of the fact or in drawing a wrong inference from the evidence. The error of an administrative tribunal may, of course, be so flagrant as to convince a court that the hearing had was not a fair one. Compare United States ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod,[1] 263 U.S. 149; Kwock[2] Jan Fat v. White, 253 U.S. 454; Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U.S.

[1] In the cited case [opinion of Justice Brandeis] the alleged alien was being examined in a deportation proceeding and statements made by him while confined by state authorities were introduced in evidence. In a subsequent habeas corpus proceeding it was claimed that this was not legal evidence. The Supreme Court rejected the claim.

[2] In the cited habeas corpus proceeding [opinion by Judge Clarke], had after the subject of the habeas corpus petitions had been denied entry to this country by immigration authorities, it was shown that the transcript sent the Commissioner of Immigration omitted evidence that the subject was confronted by three persons who recognized him as the person he claimed to be. The Supreme Court held the order denying entry void as the subject had not been accorded "due process."

272; Tang Tun v. Edsell, 223 U.S. 673. * * * Under these circumstances mere error, even if it consists in finding an essential fact without adequate supporting evidence, is not a denial of due process of law."

In U.S. ex rel. Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U.S. 100, 112, (Mr. Justice Stone, now Chief Justice, writing the opinion) it is said:

"But we find it unnecessary to consider this question, [a question of burden of proof] as we think that the record taken as a whole and without the aid of any statutory presumption prevents some evidence supporting the deportation order."

We have consistently followed the decisions of the Supreme Court in this circuit upon this subject. In Whitty v. Weedin, 68 F.2d., 127, in considering an appeal from a decision of the trial court denying release by habeas corpus where the defendant was held under a deportation warrant, it is said:

"The point to be determined by us is whether the appellant had a fair hearing, and, if it appears from the record that he had, we are not at liberty to disturb the decison of the lower court. The truth of the facts is for the determination of the immigration tribunals, and where its procedure and decision are not arbitrary or unreasonable, and the alien has had a fair hearing, the result must be accepted."

This decision was followed and quoted in a similar case: Monji Uyemura v. Carr, 99 F.2d., 729. See also, our decision in Chin Share Nging v.

Nagle, 27 F.2d., 848; Mui Sam Hun v. U.S., 78 F.2d., 612.

The Supreme Court applied the rule in the late case of Costanzo v. Tillinghast, 287 U.S. 341, 342, wherein it is said:

"The Circuit Court of Appeals properly negatived the asserted absence of any evidence to support the action of the Secretary of Labor, and therefore refused, as we do, to review that office's findings." [citing cases]

Under the Fifth Amendment, as these authorities clearly show, deprivation of liberty in the execution of the deportation statute without due process of law is not countenanced and victims of such practice may come to the courts for relief by filing petitions for the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus. The courts can act in no other manner.

The courts have uniformly held that Congress cannot authorize a deprivation of liberty without due process of law as provided in the Constitution by the device of making the fact findings of an administrative board conclusive on the courts. That is to say, findings made without supporting evidence or without a hearing before the administrative body or officer are held by the courts to be void. Hence, on this purely collateral proceeding in habeas corpus, the validity of the order of the Attorney General for detention for deportation may be questioned but only to the extent necessary to determine whether there has been a denial of due process by the Attorney General. The parties recognize the rule, but their argument of facts in some instance extends far beyond our power of examination. In effect they ask us to do what is condemned in Federal Trade Commission v. Algona Lumber Co., 291 U.S. 67, "pay lip service" to the statute.

The petitioner claims that the Attorney General applied an erroneous rule as to the Government's burden of proof and argues that the Government should establish its case beyond a reasonable doubt and that we are to judge whether or not this burden has been sustained. This whole contention is erroneous as the authorities hereinbefore cited indisputably show. The case of Schneiderman v. U.S., 320 U.S. 118, cited by appellant does not support this view and that decision has no application here. In that case the Supreme Court was reviewing a decision by a District Court and a Circuit Court of Appeals in equity revoking an order or decree admitting Schneiderman to citizenship. The rule there stated is for the guidance of federal courts exercising equity jurisdiction. The rule there applied by the courts is not applicable to a hearing on habeas corpus to determine whether or not the petitioner has had a fair hearing where the rule is that findings of the administrative body are conclusive if supported by evidence.

Congress, of course, could have given the courts jurisdiction over the subject of ordering aliens from the country as it gave the courts jurisdiction over the subject of naturalization of aliens and of the cancellation of naturalization decrees, but it did not do so. Instead, it set up elaborate official machinery for the handling of this subject, which formerly was under the operation of other executive departments of the Government but which is now operated by the Department of Justice, of which the Attorney General is the administrative head. Our decision upon this appeal must be against the appellant if we discover in the record any evidence supporting the finding of the Attorney General. Thus his decision as to the weight and effect of the evidence is conclusive.

Congress has provided for the deportation of aliens belonging to or affiliated with certain subversive organizations described in the statute (8 U.S.C.A. § 137), from which we quote as follows:

"Any alien who, at any time, shall be or shall have been a member of any one of the following classes shall be excluded from admission into the United States:

"* * * (c) * * * Aliens who * * * are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches: (1) the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States * * *.

"(e) * * * Aliens who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue or display, any written or printed matter of the character described in paragraph (d) [advising, advocating, or teaching the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States].

"(f) Definition of advising, advocacy, teaching, or affiliation.—For the purpose of this section: (1) the giving, loaning, or promising of money or anything of value to be used for the advising, advocacy, or teaching of any doctrine above enumerated shall constitute the advising, advocacy, or teaching of such doctrine; and (2) the giving, loaning, or promising of money or anything of value to any organization, association, society, or group of the character above described shall constitute affiliation therewith; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken as an exclusive definition of advising, advocacy, teaching, or affiliation.

"(g) Deportation.—Any alien who was at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in this section, shall, upon the warrant of the Attorney General, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided in sections 10, 102, 105, 108, 109, 113, 115, 116, 132, 136, 138, 139, 142-156, 158-166, 168, 169, 171, 173, 175, 177, and 178 of this title. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned therein, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States."

The Attorney General, acting under § 137 (g), supra, issued a warrant for appellant's arrest on February 14, 1941. Hearing was had before the Inspector, beginning March 31, 1941 and ending June 12, 1941, occupying substantially all of forty-two trial days. Appellant was there represented by three attorneys of his own choice and was accorded full opportunity to subpoena witnesses, introduce evidence, and cross-examine witnesses. Appellant testified extensively in his own behalf and, in addition, presented testimony of twnty-nine other witnesses and numerous exhibits. A shorthand reporter took down the entire proceeding; the transcript of his notes occupies 6972 pages of the printed record before us.

The Inspector decided in favor of the Government and appellant appealed to the Appeal Board which received further briefs and heard oral argument, and reversed the decision of the Inspector. Thereafter the Attorney General, upon the record, reviewed the matter and made the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

"* * * I make the following Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, proposed by Judge Sears, to wit:

/s/ FRANCIS RIDDLE,

"May 28, 1942. Attorney General."

As it is admitted that petitioner is an alien, a citizen of Australia, the only question before us is as to his membership in on affiliation with proscribed organization. As to that, the question, and the only question which we are authorized to decide, is not whether the petitioner is a member of the Marine Workers' Industrial Union or the Communist Party, or is affiliated with either, or whether such organizations are subversive organizations, but whether or not there was evidence in the hearing before the Inspector, and therefore before the Attorney General, from which inferences could reasonably be drawn in support of the facts found.

Harry Lundeberg, president of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, testified that the appellant had stated to him in the summer of 1935 that he was then a member of the Communist Party. This evidence was competent as an admission of the appellant. The question of the credibilty of this witness, and the weight of the suporting and the conflicting evidence, finally lie wholly within the conclusive fact finding power of the Attorney General and are beyond our power of review. For the same reason, if there is evidence to support the finding of affiliation with the Marine Workers' Industrial Union, or the findings that these organizations, or either of them, were subversive, we may not weigh it against the contrary evidence. As to the subversive character of the Communist Party of the United States, there is evidence that in July 1929 "The Communist", a magazine published and circulated by the Communist Party, contained the following statement concerning the purpose of the Communist Party in the United States which clearly shows its purpose to change our government by force and violence:

"When Communists urge strikes and crippling of industry in time of war we are accused of trying to bring about the defeat of 'our own' government. To that charge we plead guilty. That is precisely our aim. A government engaged in warfare is weaker than at other times in spite of the fact that its savage repressions make it appear strong to the superficial observer. At such a moment an organized drive to stop the production of war supplies, to cripple the transportation system may result in creating such difficulties that the imperialist forces may be defeated.

"But it is not sufficient in our drive against imperialist war merely to concentrate upon the war industries. We must be able to reach the masses in the armed forces of the nation with revolutionary agitation and propaganda calculated to cause defections and mutiny in the ranks.

"We do not indulge in the social, democratic twaddle about disarmament. We will not tell the soldiers in the army to throw away their guns and run home. We tell them to hold their guns in their hands and use them against their own capitalist oppressors. When faced with an imperialist war as an accomplished fact we must be able to popularize definite revolutionary slogans among the armed forces. In case of a war between imperialist nations we raise the slogan of fraternization with the soldiers of the opposing army, refusal to obey commands of officers, mutinies, and other forms of disruptive work. In case of a war against the Soviet Union our main slogan will be different. We will then urge the soldiers in the imperialist armies to desert the army and with their guns and as much ammunition as they can get, go over to the side of the Red Army against the imperialistic forces.

"While the capitalists prepare for another imperialist war, we prepare to utilize the difficulties for capitalism arising out of such a war in order to initate the next stage of the world revolution.

"We realize that such a conflict requires careful preparation under the leadership of a determined Bolshevik party. Turning an imperialist war between nations into a civil war against capitalism is not a simple matter, it is not a game for dilettantes to play. It requires the most highly developed revolutionary strategy and an ability to estimate the relative forces involved in the struggle as well as the precise moment for the launching of the insurrection.

"When a revolutionary situation is developing, as a result of war or from any other cause, the party of the proletariat must lead a direct attack against the capitalist state. The slogan put forth must be of such a nature as to guide the movement in its development, which will take the form at first of mass strikes and armed demonstrations. In that stage there arises the question of arming of the working class and disarming the capitalist class. Finally the highest form of struggle is reached wherein it culminates in the general strike and a merging of large sections of the military forces and the workers for armed insurrection against the capitalist state power."

There is a vast volume of evidence in the record upon this subject which we have painstakingly examined but which we do not discuss for the reason that when we have pointed out this extract from the Communist magazine, we need go no further since it unquestionably constitutes evidence in support of the finding that the Communist Party advocates rebellion. The record thus shows evidence, firstly, that the appellant had been a member of the Communist Party since he entered this country and, secondly, that the Communist Party believes in, advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States. Congress has authorized the deportation, upon warrant of the Attorney General, of aliens who belong or have belonged to such an organization. (8 U.S.C.A. § 137, supra)

Prior deportation proceedings were instituted against the appellant in 1938 under 8 U.S.C.A. § 137 as it then stood, providing for deportation of members of subversive organizations. During the progress of the proceedings the Supreme Court interpreted the statute to apply only to those who were members of such organizations at the time deportation proceedings were instituted. (Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U.S. 22). The Inspector who was in charge of the hearing concluded that the appellant had terminated his connection, if any, with the Communist Party prior to the institution of the proceedings and therefore dismissed the proceedings for the warrant of deportation. Thereafter, Congress, on June 28, 1940, modified the act to apply to any alien who was "at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter, a member" of an excluded class of aliens, including past or present members or affiliates of subversive organizations. (54 Stat. 673; 8 U.S.C.A. § 137 (g)). Thereafter the proceedings now under attack were inaugurated and were heard before a different Inspector. Such later hearing resulted in the order of deportation now under attack.

We recite this history as an aid to the understanding of a number of legal points raised by appellant which we shall now proceed to treat. It is claimed that the decision by the Inspector in the first proceeding is res judicata on the question now before us. The question before the Inspector in the earlier case relates only to whether or not the appellant was at the time of the institution of the proceedings a member of or was an affiliate of a proscribed organization and did not cover the question in the present case which is as to whether or not the appellant has been at any time since his arrival in this country a member or affiliate of such an organization.

It is also claimed that the appellant has been subject to double jeopardy in violation of the Constitution of the United States. The principle of double jeopardy applies only to criminal procedings. This is not a criminal proceeding.

It is claimed that the act of 1940 is an ex post factor law in that it permits deportation for conduct prior to the enactment of the amended law. The constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws applied only to criminal proceedings. A proceeding for deportation is not a criminal proceeding and is not intended nor designed to punish crime.

Appellant argues that the evidence of Lundeberg was so unworthy of credence that it should be held as a matter of law to be of no weight whatever. It is not for us to say whether or not the Attorney General was justified in accepting it as sufficient proof of the facts stated by Lundeberg, namely, that Bridges had stated to him that he was a member of the Communist Party. To assert that the Attorney General was bound to disbelieve the evidence of this witness would be to invade his province and to assume the obligation of determining the facts. Congress, acting within its legislative power, has effectively prohibited the determination of the facts by any court or any body other than the Attorney General. (8 U.S.C.A. § 155 (a),.supra). We do not mean to say that we would be bound to consider any testimony received in the case as beyond our question. Testimony, of course, could be so inherently impossible or improbable of belief that its receipt or its acceptance as proof would be an abuse of the administrative discretion but we have no such instance here. Because we cannot weigh the credence to be given the testimony of Lundeberg, we do not recite in detail the evidence which is claimed to discredit his testimony. Such evidence is to the effect that Lundeberg was hostile to the appellant, and that he had made prior statements that he did not know whether or not the appellant was a member of the Communist Party.

It was claimed by the immigration authorities that one O'Neil had made statements to them [one a shorthand reporter who claims to have taken the statements in shorthand at the time] that he had seen the appellant pasting stamps in his Party Book, such stamps indicating that the appellant was paying dues to the Communist Party. O'Neil was called as a witness by the immigration authorities and denied that he knew anything about appellant's relation to the Communist Party, although he claims to have told only the truth to the authorities. His contradictory statements made to the authorities were then admitted in evidence, including the transcription of the reporter's shorthand notes. Appellant claims that the admission and consideration of these asserted statements by O'Neil rendered the deportation proceeding unfair and void. Neither the Inspector nor the Attorney General is bound by the common law rules of evidence, and it is not true that the reception of incompetent or hearsay evidence is a ground for treating the decision of the Inspector and Attorney General as void. There being evidence to support the finding of the Inspector and Attorney General that the appellant was a member of the Communist Party the acceptance of additional evidence of less probative value by the Inspector and the Attorney General cannot avail the appellant in this collateral proceeding. The applicable rule was stated in Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U.S. 149, 157, as follows:[3]

"Morever, a hearing granted does not cease to be fair, merely because rules of evidence and of procedure applicable in judicial proceedings have not been strictly followed by the executive; or because some evidence has been improperly rejected or received. Tang Tun v. Edsell, 223 U.S. 673, 681."

We may add with propriety that it is a heavy burden to decide which person told the truth in the direct conflict occurring in the testimony of Lundeberg and Bridges and in the asserted statement of O'Neil and the testimony of Bridges. The statement by Lundeberg that Bridges claimed to be a Communist falls into a class of evidence that is easily given and hard to refute. In view of the authorities cited the danger of mistake which is undeniably present is for the administrative head and for him alone to take. Under the law that burden fell finally and squarely upon the Attorney General. The district judge, whose judgment we are reviewing, and this court would be exercising power we do not legally possess if we should essay to assume that burden. The courts do not have unlimited sanction to attempt the righting of every governmental act which the judges regard as wrong; their first duty is to act only within their limited power.

[3]It must not be assumed that the Lundeberg and O'Neil testimony is the only relevant testimony in the case. We discuss this testimony because of its importance and because of the attack made upon it by appellant.

During the progress of the deportation proceedings three opinions were written; one by the presiding inspector, Judge Sears, formerly of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, and another by the Board of Immigration Appeals; and a third by the Attorney General. Each of these sets forth in great detail the reasons and bases for the conclusions reached. The Inspector's findings were against the appellant; those of the Board were in his favor; and those of the Attorney General sustained the Inspector. A considerable part of the briefs deals with the reasoning and pronouncements of these various opinions. We are not concerned with the mental processes by which these conclusions were reached, although it is worthy of mention that the Attorney General stresses the fact that Inspector Sears, with whose determination he agrees, had the witnesses before him and was for that reason better able to adjudge of their credibility than one could be who has merely studied the record.

The briefs before us discuss the question whether or not the appellant was affiliated with the Communist Party or with the Marine Workers' Industrial Union. As the warrant for deportation is supported by the findings of the Attorney General that the appellant was a member of the Communist Party, it is not necessary for us to determine whether there is evidence to support the finding of the Attorney General that appellant was affiliated with that organization or with the Marine Workers' Industrial Union, or whether or not the latter named organization was a part of the Communist Party. However, lest we be misunderstood, we state that we have carefully reviewed all of the evidence regarding the relation of the Marine Workers' Industrial Union with the Communist Party and appellant's relation to these two organizations. This review has convinced us that there is evidence to support the findings of the Attorney General that the Marine Workers' Industrial Union was a part of the Communist Party and that appellant was affiliated with it during the period of the longshoremen's strike. It may be stated arguendo that appellant, in his management of that strike, was attacking most vicious and inhumane practices toward longshoremen and that he was justified in accepting help from any quarter. The very bad conditions referred to were amply established by the evidence but this circumstance does not lessen the fact that the evidence adduced before the Inspector supports the inference and the finding that appellant was in affiliation with the organization known as the Marine Workers' Industrial Union.

Likewise, we hold that the evidence supports the Attorney General's findings 4, 5 and 6.

A witness named Maurice J. Cannalonga, who testified in favor of the immigration authorities, and subsequently signed statements repudiating his testimony, was again brought before the Inspector by the immigration authorities after demand by the appellant, and again testified, as he had in the first instance, repudiating his conflicting statements on the ground that he was confused for the reason "he had been hitting the booze heavy then." The testimony of this witness was disregarded, as appears from the statement of the Inspector and the Board of Appeals. It is claimed, however, that when he was placed upon the stand the second time the immigration authorities were cognizant of the fact that he was intending to commit perjury on the stand. It is claimed also that the testimony of this witness was fabricated. In support of the suggestion that this invalidates the whole proceeding, the appellant cites the case of Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U.S. 103. That case holds that where the state, through its administrative officers, conspires to use the courts of the state for the purpose of convicting a man known to be innocent, by fabricated testimony, such conduct by the state constitutes a denial by the state of due process.

It is not shown how the government officials could know that a repetition of his testimony theretofore given was perjury even though it were known that after being interviewed by appellant's counsel he had given a statement contrary to the testimony first made under oath in the deportation proceeding. (See, Chiggeri v. Nagle, 19 F.2d., 875)

This aspersion upon the integrity of the Government's attorneys is wholly gratuitous and without foundation in fact.

Order affirmed.

Stephens, Circuit Judge, concurring:

I concur in the opinion prepared by Judge Wilbur and in the decision reached therein. To decide otherwise, as it seems to me, would be judicial usurpation of power to meet an unusual situation. One of the maxims of the law is that hard cases make bad law. It cannot be denied that the evidence in this case falls far short of the "clear, unequivocal and convincing" rule the Supreme Court has announced for the review of judgments in denaturalization proceedings. Baumgartner v. United States, ... US .... (June 12, 1944); Schneiderman v. United States, 320 US 118.

This proceeding, however, does not originate in a court action as those cases do but from an administrative decision. Not only has the Supreme Court never announced the "clear, unequivocal and convincing" rule for such a proceeding, it has never announced that any court in reviewing such a decision can decide whether or not the mere burden of proof has been or has not been sustained. When some evidence supporting the decision has been found, the reviewing court's decision is definitely fixed. See the quotations in the main opinion from Tisi v. Tod, 264 US 131, 133, written by Mr. Justice Brandeis, and from United States ex rel. Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 US 100, 112, written by Mr. Justice Stone.

In no case have I given the evidence more careful attention than in this one. However, such attention has not left in my mind the pleasurable satisfaction that, barring a very slight possibility of error, the truth has been revealed. Such satisfaction is beside the point here. The simple question this court must answer is: Is there some evidence to sustain the charges? There is.

I am authorized to say that Judges Wilbur and Mathews are in agreement with these expressions.

Healy, Circuit Judge, Dissenting

It was not charged nor is there evidence that the alien has advocated the forcible overthrow of the government of the United States. Nor was there charge or proof that he entertained views inimical to constitutional government, or that he at any time possessed or distributed literature subversive of the constitution. The accusation is that he was a member of or was affiliated with an organization, namely, the Communist party, which did those things. This accusation the alien has countered with a flat and unequivocal denial. For those who cherish traditions of American justice it is permissible to believe that the alien should not be deprived of his freedom to remain here unless the truth of the accusation be fairly established. That it was not so proven must be patent, I think, to any candid person who takes the trouble to examine the record.

I am aware that in a proceeding of this nature the court is powerless to review or weigh the evidence in the ordinary sense. It is not my purpose to do more than consider its adequacy in the light of the whole record. I desire particularly to point out what seems to me to be the fact, namely, that the crucial finding in the case was arrived at in reliance upon incompetent evidence—evidence, moreover, received and considered in violation of a regulation of the Department designed to insure fair hearings and to safeguard the rights of aliens. If this be true, I think it follows that the alien was not accorded due process.

Bridges is a native of Australia. He came to the United States as a sailor in the year 1920.[1] His entry was lawful and he had and has the legal right to remain unless he has transgressed some act of Congress authorizing his expulsion. Some years after his arrival he became a longshoreman in San Francisco where he was active in establishing the International Longshoremen's Association (affiliated with the American Federation of Labor) as opposed to company-controlled unions of longshoremen then functioning on the waterfront.[2] The ILA, as is conceded, was a legitimate union organized to combat practices toward longshoremen which my associates in the majority appropriately characterize as "vicious and inhumane." In the maritime strike of 1934 the union strove effectively to remedy these substandard practices.[3] During the strike the alien was chairman of the joint strike committee of the participating unions. He became, so to speak, a storm-center of bitter industrial controversy, accumulating many enemies and earning the hostility of powerful interests.

[1] In 1921 he filed first papers for naturalization. Application for final papers made in 1928 was denied on the ground that the 7-year period for filing had elapsed. He filed first papers again in 1928, but these were again permitted to lapse. He filed first papers for the third time in 1936 and this application was still pending at the time of the trial.

For a period of several years following the strike certain volunteer organizations, notably the Portland police and a committee of the American Legion headed by one Knowles, embarked actively on a far-flung search for evidence upon which the alien might be deported. The Immigration Service,

---

[2] Bridges was president of this union from 1934 to 1937, when it became affiliated with the CIO, changing its name to International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union. Bridges was then elected president of the Pacific Coast district for the CIO and apparently still occupies this post.

[3] The evils giving rise to the strike are described in detail by Presiding Inspector Sears who states that it was the company-controlled, or "Blue-Book Unions," which enabled the employers to perpetuate the practices described. "These company unions," said Inspector Sears, "were in existence on the waterfront until October, 1933, when they were forced out of existence by the newly revived and militant ILA Union, of which Bridges became an early member."

spurred on apparently by complaints of Knowles, itself made investigations and checked on information called to its attention by the private inquisitors. But in 1936 the Service reported its inability to discover grounds for deportation.

In 1938 a deportation warrant was issued on charges identical with those made in the later proceeding with which we are here directly concerned. Before the trial began the Supreme Court decided Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, whereupon the warrant was amended to charge that the alien "both was and is" a member of or affiliated with the proscribed organization. The hearing on the charges, conducted before Dean Landis as trial examiner, continued almost uninterruptedly over a period of eleven weeks, being finally closed in September 1939. In all forty-five days were occupied in the actual taking of testimony. The testimony covered 7,724 pages, exclusive of 274 exhibits. The examiner found that the evidence established neither the alien's membership in nor his affiliation with the Communist party. The report and proposed findings were accepted by the Department and the warrant of arrest was cancelled.

There followed the statutory amendment of June 28, 1949, designed to avoid the holding in Kessler v. Strecker, supra. From the legislative history of the amendment it is evident that its proponents had the Bridges case specifically in mind.[4] A second warrant was issued in February 1941 and a second hearing had, this time before presiding inspector Sears. This hearing continued over a period of two and a half months, the testimony adduced totaling 7,546 typewritten pages exclusive of 359 exhibits, 297 of which were introduced by the government. Much of the evidence taken at the prior hearing was read into the record, and the two inquiries largely covered the same territory. The trial eventuated as described in the majority opinion, the inspector's findings of membership and affiliation being set aside by the Board of Immigration Appeals and thereafter reinstated by the Attorney General.

[4] A private bill for the deportation of Bridges, "notwithstanding any other provision of law," ac-

It is notable that the alien, in one fashion or another, had been under almost continuous investigation for a period of more than five years. Prior to and during the course of the second trial the Service had enlisted the powerful cooperation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The country had been scoured for witnesses, every circumstance of Bridges' active life had been subjected to scrutiny, and presumably no stone left unturned which might conceal evidence of the truth of the charges which the alien so flatly denied. The most significant feature of the inquiry, as it seems to me, is the paucity of the evidentiary product as contrasted with the magnitude of the effort expended in producing it.

The finding of Communist party membership tually passed the House. It was rejected in the Senate after a protest by Attorney General Jackson, now a member of the supreme bench. S. Rep. No. 2031; 76th Cong., 3rd Sess.

presents the crux of the case. This finding rests upon two items of evidence. One of these is the testimony of the witness Landeberg concerning his recollection of a remark said to have been made by the alien in a conversation occurring six years before. The other consists of an unsworn and later disavowed oral statement of a man named O'Neil.

Before looking at the testimony of these two men I turn briefly to circumstances said to establish the alien's "affiliation" with the Communist party as distinguished from membership therein. In the main there is no dispute concerning these circumstances. The bulk of them had long been known alike to the authorities and to the general public, and were freely admitted by the alien himself. Nearly all of them had been evaluated and discarded by inspector Landis and by the Department upon the first trial. They relate to the alien's willingness to accept help from Communist quarters during the course of the longshoremen's strike; to the fact that there were Communists among Bridges' associates; to the alien's public denunciation of "redbaiters" as no true friends of labor; to his participation, before and during the strike, in the editing of a mimeographed sheet called the Waterfront Worker in which was printed news relating to the strike and articles designed to inform readers of the economic ills from which the longshoremen suffered. It is not claimed that the contents of this partisan paper were suggestive of Communist doctrine; the significance of the circumstance is said to rest in the fact that the paper had been started by the Marine Workers Industrial Union (an allegedly Communist organization), shortly abandoned by that group, and thereafter taken over by Bridges and his associates and issued from the former address. There is the related circumstance, heavily stressed by the Service, that Bridges' union and the Marine Workers Industrial Union, both of which were participants in the maritime strike, rendered mutual assistance in the course of it. Hence the finding of affiliation with the MWIU.

The alien, who was nothing if not a forthright witness, made no effort to minimize or excuse the facts. He pointed merely to the reasons impelling his conduct. He would, he said, "probably do the same thing again." His concern was not with the opinions of men, but to win the strike. If a man was a good unionist he was for him, if a bad unionist he was against him. If it is permissible to compare small things with great, one may remark that the bonds which today unite our people with the Soviet Union afford a striking analogy to those which in 1934 linked Bridges with the MWIU. Surely no one would suggest that a liaison dictated by the necessities of a common struggle for survival make of our people or of our government "affiliates" of the Communist party.

On this aspect of the inquiry the problem is not one of conflicting inferences to be drawn from conceded facts. Involved, rather, is the question of the meaning of the term "affiliation" as employed in the statute. The question is one of law. Dean Landis pertinently observed that "affiliation" means more than sympathy and implies a stronger bond than mere association. One must not here lose sight of the policy of the law. In condemning "affiliation" with a proscribed group it would seem that Congress had in mind a working arrangement of some sort designed, or at least having a substantial tendency, to further the subversive aims of the group. A temporary or occasional joinder of forces for the attainment of an end entirely legitimate in itself, as for example, the betterment of substandard conditions of workers in a given industry, can hardly be thought to fall within the legislative ban. I suppose that in every-day practice even Communists have their constructive moments.

For the most part the cases dealing with the term "affiliation" involve facts so much stronger than the present that they are of little aid to decision. Perhaps the fullest discussion of the term is found in Kettunen v. Reimer, 2 Cir., 79 F. 2d 315, 317. Said Judge Chase, who wrote the opinion: "In deciding this case, we shall not attempt to give a comprehensive definition of the word 'affiliation' as used in the statute. Very likely that is as impossible as it is now unnecessary. It is enough for present purposes to hold that it is not proved unless the alien is shown to have so conducted himself that he has brought about a status of mutual recognition that he may be relied on to cooperate with the Communist Party on a fairly permanent basis. He must be more than merely in sympathy with its aims or even willing to aid it in a casual intermittent way. Affiliation includes an element of dependability upon which the organization can rely which, though not equivalent to membership duty, does rest upon a course of conduct that could not be abruptly ended without giving at least reasonable cause for the charge of a breach of good faith. So tested we cannot agree that there was evidence to establish that this relator was affiliated with the Communist Party. His application for membership would indicate his then sympathy with its aims, but his reconsideration and failure to join shows his unwillingness to let his sympathy control his action, and there is no proof which shows any mutual recognition that cooperation was to be expected from him."[5]

---

[5] In United States ex rel. Yokinen v. Commissioner, 57 F. 2d 707, 708, Judge Augustus Hand said: "It is enough that the alien Yokinen, by pledging himself to perform certain tasks prescribed by the Communist Party in order to secure reinstatement, must be regarded as affiliated with it." And in an unreported opinion, Tolsky v. Wilson (S.D.N.Y.), June 22, 1920, Judge Learned Hand said: "As to affiliation the case is not so clear, and depends upon how one defines that word. I take it to mean a relation of cooperation between the members of two or more organizations. Perhaps it may also include an irregular connection of a single individual with the society, not amounting to membership. However this may be, it seems to me pretty clear that it involves a mutual recognition of permanent cooperation between the organization and the person affiliated and not a spasmodic or casual assistance. Mere sympathy with the aims of the society, even accompanied by efforts to further its aims, does not fall within that word."

The Attorney General was not at pains to explain his understanding of the statutory term. In arriving at his finding of affiliation he appears to have relied indiscriminately on every circumstance which might be thought to spell sympathy or to be indicative of an association however temporary or in pursuit of ends however legitimate. His finding on this issue is without substantial evidentiary support.

I turn now to the evidence of party membership. Lundeberg testified that in a conversation had in 1935 at Bridges' home the alien said "I am a Communist." This witness was the head of a rival union. His attitude toward the alien was admittedly one of implacable hostility. His story, under persistent leading questions, grew more specific with each repetition if it. The four participating members of the Board of Immigration Appeals unanimously rejected it as unworthy of credence. The Board called attention to the avowed enmity of the witness, to the enlargement of his story while on the stand under the prompting of government counsel, to his incurable evasiveness under cross-examination, to the man's prior inconsistent statements made under solemn circumstances and more than once repeated. On the other hand the presiding inspector and the Attorney General thought Lundeberg a credible witness. As a matter of course, the court, whatever its own view, is not at liberty to choose between the conflicting appraisals of credibility by the officials charged with the responsibility of determining the facts. I point to the disagreement as disclosing how closely the proof here approaches if it does not cross the borderline of inadequacy.

The remaining evidence on the point is that of O'Neil, a man whom the Board of Appeals, not without ample warrant, characterized as "a theatrical, sensation-loving braggart." O'Neil is reported as having said to representatives of the Service, in the course of their investigations, that in 1937 he entered Bridges' office in the middle of an afternoon and found the alien sitting at his desk openly posting stamps representative of Communist party dues. The statement to this effect, assuming it to have been made, was not given under oath, was not signed, nor does any effort appear to have been made to obtain the man's oath or signature. When called by the Service and sworn O'Neil denied having said the things attributed to him. Further, he categorically denied that the incident had ever occurred and declared that he had no information as to Bridges' membership in the Communist party. The alleged statement was thereupon offered and received in evidence over the alien's objection. It was accepted and relied upon by the presiding inspector and by the Attorney General as affording affirmative proof of party membership. The Board of Appeals thought the statement inadmissible for any purpose other than impeachment. That body was doubtful even of its admissibility for impeachment purposes, and I think properly so since the government was obviously not surprised and O'Neil had given no testimony damaging to the government's case. There was no point in impeaching him.

The field of use of ex parte statements in deportation proceedings is carefully delimited by Departmental rules. Such statements, when their possible use as evidence is cotemplated, are required by the rules to be taken under oath or affirmation, "recorded" (i.e. reduced to writing), and signed by the relator.[6] These precautionary requirements are elementary and may be said to prescribe the minimum of fairness.[7]

The rules, adopted as they were under authority and direction of law, are part and parcel of the regulations "governing the arrest and deportation of aliens.[8] They were disregarded here. The Attorney General so concedes in his decision. He excused their violation on the specious plea that they "were not called to the attention of the presiding inspector." However, they were called to the Attorney General's attention. One is left to wonder on what ground that high official condoned his own disregard of them. Upon him rested the inescapable responsibility of accepting or rejecting the evidence, as of ordering the deportation. The rules were obligatory on him if on anybody. To toss them aside for reasons deemed expedient in a particular case amounts to the substitution of a government of men for a government of law. There are numerous and persuasive decisions to the effect that the disregard by officials of departmental rules on which the rights of aliens depend amounts to a denial of due process.[9] I have found no au-

[6] Regulations §150.1 [c], [d]; §150.6 [i].

[7] The Board of Appeals, in commenting on the purpose of the rules, said: "Here a written statement at the Schofield interview would have guarded against mistake in hearing, memory or transition. As to both statements, the oath and signature of the maker would at least have shown O'Neil to be, on two occasions, willing to pin himself down, and to do so under oath, thus providing the safeguard of fear of perjury prosecution; and, contrariwise, had he been asked to swear and sign and refused, the fact of his unwillingness, on two occasions, so to pin himself down, would have been of no small weight in evaluating the truth of the statements made."

[8] Fed. Reg. January 4, 1941, p. 68. The revised regulations appear to have been the outgrowth of much study and experience. Consult report of the Committee on Administrative Procedure, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Dept. of Labor, May 1940.

Plichta, 3 Cir. 1922, 282 Fed. 795 (violation of Rule 5[b] relating to the reading to the alien of the evidence of which the warrant was based); United States ex rel. Chin Fook Wah v. Dunton, 288 Fed. 959, decision by Judge Augustus Hand (relating to Rule 3 providing that the alien might have a friend or relative present during the hearing); Mah Shee v. White, 9 Cir., 242 Fed. 868 (relating to Rule 5[c] governing the alien's right to forward new evidence to the Secretary along with the record); Ex parte Radivoeff, 278 Fed. 227 (violation of Rule 22 relating to examination by the alien of evidence on which warrant was issued). thorities to the contrary.[10]

Apart from non-observance of the regulations, the situation is no better. Of course the mere reception of incompetent evidence does not invalidate a hearing; but error in reliance upon such evidence may, in appropriate circumstances, go to the substance of a fair trial.[11] The real inquiry is whether the practice was "such as might have led to a denial of justice."[12] In this instance the remaining showing of party membership was of so flimsy a character as to lead the Appeals Board to reject it entirely. The Attorney General's acceptance of the O'Neil hearsay as probative evidence might easily have served to tip the scale. I am satisfied it did so.

To be sure, the ordinary rules relating to the reception of evidence are not generally applied in administrative hearings. The reasons underlying this departure from judicial practice have often been stated.[13] Administrative proceedings are in the main informal, are frequently not conducted with the aid of counsel or heard by men trained in the law, and of necessity they are often of a summary nature. None of these reasons obtained in this instance. The hearing was conducted before a trained judge, and both the Service and the alien were represented by experienced counsel. There was ample time and opportunity to observe the precautions thought by the courts to be essential to a fair trial. Moreover, the case, unlike the mine run of administrative hearings, was one in which the liberty of a human being was at stake. Surely it presented an occasion where "the more liberal the practice in admitting testimony, the more imperative the obligation to preserve the essential rules of evidence by which rights are asserted or defended."[14]

As applied to the situation here presented, arguments predicated on the "protective weapon" of cross-examination are without validity. A witness who denies ever having made an alleged prior statement and who denies all knowledge of the facts purportedly then stated offers no target against which the weapon may be employed. The infirmity of the O'Neil hearsay cuts across all rules. No amount of philosophizing can serve to make a silk purse out of this obvious sow's ear. Rather than deport the alien on evidence which would be condemned and proscribed without hesitation by any American court it would seem a more forthright procedure to do what was proposed in the first place, deport him by legislative resolution "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law."

I think the judgment should be reversed with directions to grant the petition.

I am authorized to say that Judge Garrecht agrees with this opinion.

OPINION OF STEPHENS, C. J.

Upon Petition for Rehearing.

Before: Wilbur, Garrecht, Mathews, Stephens and Healy, Circuit Judges.

Stephens Circuit Judge.

The petition for rehearing stresses the point that the majority and concurring opinions in this case state that there is "evidence" and that there is

"some evidence" which supports the order of deportation. The implication is that these terms were used as including a mere scintilla of evidence.

Federal courts do not regard a mere scintilla of evidence as effective for any purpose, and it is my understanding that in using the word "evidence" the idea of the mere scintilla was never considered.

Where there is evidence, more than a scintilla and not unbelievable upon its face, the administrative head must resolve the doubts as to its credibility. Upon this rule we have ordered enforced numerous orders for the exclusion and for the deportation of aliens without regard to our own views as to the fact finder's discretionary conclusions.

The advisability of liberalizing this rule is currently the subject of much discussion, but whatever the ultimate action may be upon such issue of policy by those having the power to change it, it is clear to me that this intermediary court must adhere to the rule as it presently exists. We cannot make fish of one administrative review and fowl of another. Therefore, I vote to deny the petition for rehearing.

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1944

No. .....

HARRY BRIDGES,

Petitioner,

against

I. F. WIXON, as District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES:

Your petitioner HARRY R. BRIDGES respectfully alleges:

A

Summary Statement of Matter Involved

Petitioner is an alien who entered legally as an immigrant seaman from Australia in 1920 and who since has continuously resided in the United States (R. 791-2).

In 1938, and after several exhaustive investigations of his status, none of which had resulted in action against him, a Labor Department warrant for petitioner's arrest was issued, charging him with membership in and affiliation with proscribed organizations (R. 503). Hearings on that warrant were held before Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School beginning in July 1939 (R. 504): Dean Landis declined to credit the testimony offered against the petitioner; his findings of fact and conclusions of law were accepted by the Secretary of Labor; and the warrant was cancelled (R. 75).

In June 1940 the applicable statute was amended (Act of June 28, 1940, 54 Stat. 673)—with petitioner's situation in mind (86 Cong. Rec. 9031). A second warrant for petitioner's arrest in deportation proceedings then issued, on February 12, 1941 (R. 771-2). Hearings were held before Judge Charles B. Sears, who differed from Dean Landis and proposed findings bringing the petitioner within the statute authorizing his deportation: that he had been a member of and affiliated with the Communist Party, which Judge Sears found to advocate violent overthrow of the Government; and that he also had been affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union (MWIU), found to be an affiliate of the Communist Party (R. 337-41).

Exceptions were filed pursuant to the regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service; briefs submitted, and the case argued orally before the Board of Immigration Appeals of the Department of Justice (R. 369). On January 3, 1942, the Board unanimously rejected the proposed findings (R. 367-492). The Board delivered a comprehensive written opinion (R. 367-492). The warrant of arrest was ordered cancelled and the case closed. Execution of the order was stayed pending further order of the Attorney General or of the Board (R. 492).

On May 28, 1942 the Attorney General reversed the order of the Board and directed the petitioner's deportation (R. 65-110). The Attorney General had not given notice that he had ever assumed jurisdiction of the case, and the parties had not been given opportunity to present their views to him. A petition for a hearing before him was promptly filed, on May 31, 1942, and was denied by him four days later (R. 679-87).

Appellant then petitioned the United States District Court for the Northern District of California for a writ of habeas corpus (R. 2-17; 21-62). The writ was denied by District Judge Martin I. Welch (R. 758-9). His opinion is reported in 49 F. S. 292 (R. 723-59).

Appeal was then taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit (R. 759). By a divided court (3 to 2), the order of the District Court was affirmed, on June 26, 1944 (R. 7810). Wilbur, J. wrote for affirmance in an opinion in which Matthews, J. concurred (R. 7770-7793). Judge Stephens delivered a separate concurring opinion in which Wilbur and Matthews, JJ. also concurred (R. 7793-4). Judge Healy dissented, in an opinion in which Judge Garrecht concurred (R. 7794-7809). The opinions are reported in 144 F. (2) 927 (also R. 7770-7809).

A petition for a rehearing was filed on July 26, 1944. It was principally addressed to the views expressed by the majority concerning their review of the evidence. The petition was denied in an opinion by Judge Stephens dated September 27, 1941 (R. 7811-2). Thereafter, and on November 1, 1944 Judge Stephens without further application by counsel amended the text of his opinion on rehearing.

Proceedings for deportation are stayed by order of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, pending the present petition (R. 7813).

Jurisdiction

The jurisdiction of this Court rests on section 240(a) of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925 (28 U. S. C. sec. 347).

C

Statute and Regulations Involved

Section 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940, so far as relevant to this proceeding, provides:

> Any alien who was at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act, shall upon the warrant of the Attorney General, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided by law. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned in this act, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States. (54 Stat. 673; 8 U. S. C. § 137[g].)

Section 1 of the Act thus referred to, enumerates the following aliens, among others:

> Aliens who * * * are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society or group that believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches: (1) The overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States * * *, (3) The unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or (4) Sabotage— (41 Stat. 1009; 8 U. S. C. § 137[c]).
> Aliens who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue, or display, any written or printed matter of the character described in paragraph (d). (41 Stat. 1009; 8 U. S. C. § 137[e].)

The text of the statute and of the pertinent Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service appear in the appendix to this petition (infra, pp. 53-70).

D

Questions Presented and Reasons Relied on for the Allowance of the Writ

Issues of far-reaching importance to every alien resident in this country are presented. Petitioner has been ordered deported upon evidence so unsubstantial that the finding against him is a denial of due process of law guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment. The order of deportation, moreover, is demonstrably the result of an unrelenting persecution of petitioner extending over almost a decade, in the course of which outstanding infractions of ordinary conceptions of due process of law have been committed. And the decision below in effect denies that the rights of free speech and association guaranteed under the First and Fifth Amendments extend to aliens in deportation proceedings; in fact it denies petitioner those rights.

I

The facts, which will be fully discussed in Point I of the accompanying brief, cannot support any finding against the petitioner of unlawful membership in or affiliation with any proscribed organizations.

The present proceeding is the second large scale trial of the charges against petitioner. Almost forty witnesses have appeared against him in the two proceedings; their testimony has been rejected, as untrustworthy, or false, or mistaken, with only these exceptions:

(a) A witness named Lundeberg, admittedly an enemy of petitioner, gave the evidence now principally relied on. He testified that petitioner had admitted membership in the Communist Party during a conversation with him in 1935. Lundeberg's own prior statements made on three separate occasions and in formal circumstances are in contradiction of his testimony on the stand, which was extracted from him only with difficulty and through repeated leading questions.

(b) Certain evidence against petitioner was ascribed to a witness named O'Neil, although it was completely repudiated by him on the stand. As we shall show, reliance upon this evidence, even assuming it had any weight, is error so flagrant as to offend due process of law.

(c) Certain actions and declarations by the petitioner, particularly his opposition to red-baiting in the labor union movement—a charge freely admitted by him—, and his association with known Communists were found to constitute a "pattern of conduct" demonstrating affiliation with the Communist Party.

(d) Evidence, also uncontradicted, that the petitioner, during the course of an important strike on the west coast waterfront in 1934 accepted the aid of the Marine Workers Industrial Union (MWIU), was held to show his affiliation with that organization. Evidence that the petitioner was once one of the editors of a newspaper, "The Waterfront Worker" which the MWIU controlled for some eight months was held to support that conclusion. The proof in this respect, which is most involved, is fully analyzed in the opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals where it is shown that petitioner did not become associated with the paper until MWIU control had ceased.

Such is the sum of the proof—of those fragments which survived unavoidable rejection of most of the Government's proof. The courts below were at pains to avoid endorsement of it; rather they disclaimed judicial responsibility. But an order of deportation must be based upon substantial evidence such as is capable of carrying conviction to a reasonable mind, and cannot consistently with the requirements of due process be justified upon evidence such as is here presented.

The administrative authorities have commented upon the present attitude of this Court in requiring substantial evidence to support findings requiring deportation (p. 23 infra, fn.). The courts below have failed to take note of that attitude.

II

Since 1934 when he demonstrated his abilities as an aggressive and effective labor leader, the petitioner has been subject to a series of departmental investigations looking to his deportation. Then in 1939 there was an elaborate trial of the issues before Dean Landis, and petitioner was cleared of all charges.

The matter was not permitted to rest there. The statute was then amended in order to furnish a pretext for further proceedings against him. When those proceedings transpired, they were res judicata because they embraced the same issues of fact, the same lines of proof, and even much of the same evidence which had been gone into fully before Dean Landis. Ordinary conceptions of fairness embraced in the due process, ex post facto and double jeopardy provisions of the United States Constitution were thus overriden. The bringing of charges based upon the MWIU constituted moreover gross discrimination in fact against petitioner.

The proceedings were conducted by Government counsel in a most prejudicial spirit, and inexcusable tactics were followed. Error was committed in respect of O'Neil so flagrant as itself to constitute a denial of due process of law. And Mr. Attorney General Biddle's manner of assuming jurisdiction of the case and disposing of it without notice or opportunity to be heard constitutes a further offense to accepted principles of common fairness and a violation of due process.

Petitioner was entitled to due process of law in these proceedings to deport him. Viewed in their totality and against their full background, the proceedings violated the due process provision of the Fifth Amendment. The double jeopardy and ex post facto provisions are also involved (Const. Art. I, sec. 8).

III

The deportation statute as here construed and applied denies the petitioner rights of freedom of speech and association guaranteed under the First and Fifth Amendments.

The Government expressly disavows any suggestion that the petitioner personally advocated proscribed doctrines. There is no proof that he subscribed to any such doctrines, or indeed understood the Communist Party to entertain them.* There is no suggestion that he committed any overt act. The statute has been applied simply to the bare fact of alleged membership. There is no proof of any clear and present danger, or—further—that the Communist Party advocates violent overthrow of government within the realizable future. To deport for membership in such circumstances, for mere association without more, is a denial of the essential liberty guaranteed by the First and Fifth Amendments, which liberty petitioner may not be denied because of his alien status. This Court has not had occasion directly to pass upon the constitutionality of a statute proscribing mere membership in an organization found to advocate violent overthrow of government—whether or not that advocacy threatens imminent danger to our institutions.

* Petitioner will also argue, if this petition be granted, that the proof does not justify the finding that the Communist Party or the MWIU advocates doctrines which the statute proscribes. The finding expressly rests upon excerpts from four documents, three of which were analyzed in Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, with conclusions in favor of the petitioner there.

That constitutional question becomes of acute importance in the light of the Government's further position, which the courts below seem to have sustained, that the petitioner may be deported for speech or conduct which in the case of a citizen would constitute an exercise of the rights of free speech and association guaranteed in the First and Fifth Amendments. Thus the status in this country of a large number of aliens is at stake—involving not merely their past associations or memberships, but also the manner in which they today conduct their lives in the community. Indeed the deeper issue is involved, whether the Constitution will thus permit of deportation for exercise of any traditional liberties—religious, political, or economic.

Nor may the order of deportation properly rest upon the findings as to affiliation. The evidence already stated so far as reasonably material, establishes no more than that the petitioner was active in promoting the legitimate ends of his union and that in so doing he cooperated on appropriate occasions with the Communist Party and the MWIU, along with other unions of unchallenged status. If the statute is to be interpreted so broadly as including such activity, then it is unconstitutional in that again it denies the essential liberties of speech and free association guaranteed by the First and Fifth Amendments, as well as the protection of the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment. The court below construed the statute as requiring petitioner's deportation for these activities. The decision is in conflict with the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in U. S. ex rel. Kettunen v. Reimer, 79 F. (2) 315, where the interpretation of the statute was such as to exclude intermittent association undertaken for independent purposes.

WHEREFORE, your petitioner prays that a writ of certiorari issue out of this Court to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit requiring that Court to certify and send to this Court a transcript of all the proceedings of such Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit had in this case; that the order of such Circuit Court of Appeals be reviewed and determined by this Court, and the order finally reversed; and that your petitioner be granted such other and further relief as may be proper.

HARRY R. BRIDGES,
By: CAROL KING,
His Counsel.

Dated: December 27, 1944.

BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The required references to the opinion of the court below, to the jurisdiction of this Court, and to the applicable statute and regulations are made in the accompanying petition (pp. 3-4, supra).

Petitioner was entitled to due process of law in these deportation proceedings (Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454 at 457-8; Chin Yow v. U. S., 208 U. S. 8; The Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86; Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22 at 34). Action against him may not rest upon arbitrary administrative fiat; evidence upon which the reasonable mind can justify action against him is required. We discuss the evidence and the applicable principles as to the necessary quantum of proof in Point I.

Due process embodies other fundamental principles of fairness: to be confronted by the witnesses and to have opportunity to cross-examine; to protection from prejudicial error committed through administrative reliance upon flagrantly incompetent evidence; to be free of the menace of successive trials concerned with the same issue; to equal administration of the law, without discrimination against him alone; to a fair hearing conducted in accordance with the rules of the administrative body; to a fair and dispassionate presentation of the evidence; and to representation by counsel in the tribunal which finally adjudicates his rights. We shall discuss in Point II the successive infringements of these fundamental rights committed against petitioner in the present proceedings.

That the essential liberties of free speech and free association, to which the petitioner as well as the citizen is entitled, were here denied him, is shown in Point III.

POINT I

Deportation upon the evidence presented in these proceedings offends due process of law.

The present proceedings, begun in 1941, have their roots in events antedating the present warrant. It was in 1934 that the petitioner took an active part in the waterfront strike, as chairman of the Joint Committee of the participating unions (R. 237). And it was then that "the interests which he had antagonized" began a relentless and determined effort to deport him.[1] As a result of continuous pressure from these sources, the authorities made several investigations even before 1938. They resulted in petitioner's favor:

> "In short, whenever any legal ground for the deportation of Bridges has been brought to the attention of the Department of Labor, it has been investigated, but invariably it has been found that he was in the clear, and that his status as an immigrant was entirely regular."[2]

Nevertheless a warrant issued for petitioner's arrest in 1938 for alleged membership in and affiliation with proscribed organizations (R. 503).

The hearings on the warrant, before Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School, ran for eleven weeks.

---

[1] The phrase quoted is from the report in 1936 of the Immigration Service (R. 659). The wide range of persons and organizations so involved is described in Dean Landis' opinion at R. 551-3: the Associated Farmers; the Industrial Association of San Francisco; the police departments of Los Angeles and Portland; several private undercover agents; a division of the American Legion under Harper Knowles; etc. See also Judge Healy, dissenting below at R. 7795-7.

[2] 1936 Immigration Service Report at R. 661; see also testimony of Commissioner of Immigration MacCormick, 74th Cong., 2nd Sess., in hearings before Appropriations Subcommittee (1936) 99-100.

Twenty witnesses were heard; the testimony taken covers 7,724 pages. Counsel were in attendance (R. 504); and written briefs were submitted. The nature of the proof suggests the reasons for the outcome of the earlier investigations. The evidence was given through a succession of perjurers, chronic liars, renegade Communists, and labor spies.

Dean Landis rejected the testimony of all of them.[1] He found no credible evidence to support the view that the petitioner had ever been a member of the Communist Party and found therefore that he was not a member at the time the warrant issued.

In 1940 the statute was amended so as to give pretext for renewed action against petitioner (see pp. 26-7, infra). Accordingly, on February 12, 1941 the present warrant issued.

The hearings, before Judge Sears, were of the same magnitude as before Dean Landis. Eighteen witnesses were heard; and equivalent time was consumed and testimony taken—two and one-half months and 7,546 pages. The subject matter of the testimony was substantially the same as that presented before Dean Landis. On the issue of membership, Judge Sears credited only one witness if we exclude the testimony of two departmental employees concerning the statement of a witness which the witness himself contradicted (cf. R. 256-9, 259-71). Nevertheless, Judge Sears drew conclusions bringing petitioner within the statute.

By 1941 the petitioner had been under virtually continuous investigation by efficient and determined if not vindictive groups for some seven years. Yet, out of the volume of evidence presented through two score witnesses in the two hearings, there remains as the basis for the finding against petitioner: (a) the evidence of petitioner's admitted enemy Lundeberg—evidence contradicted by Lundeberg's own prior statements and extracted from him with difficulty through repeated leading questions; (b) the incompetent alleged statement of O'Neil—acceptance of which, we shall show, itself offends due process; (c) certain charges centering on petitioner's part in editing the Waterfront Worker—charges neither supported by facts, nor consistent with a proper understanding of the scope of permissible union activities; (d) some proof of petitioner's cooperation in 1934 with the MWIU and his sympathetic attitude to some of its aims and of the Communist Party—most of which is freely admitted; (e) Mr. Attorney General Biddle's attempt to buttress the finding of membership by taking—"as a whole" and not individually—the testimony of certain other witnesses whose individual testimony had been found by Judge Sears to be (in the words of the Attorney General) "inconclusive, unreliable or contradictory" (R. 97).

---

[1] He described one as a "self-confessed liar" (521); the testimony of another as "almost unique" in "evasion, qualification and contradiction" (R. 549); another as having "almost pathological" tendency "toward prevarication" (R. 612); while another merely "lied when he dared to" (R. 556; see also R. 549, 588, 612, 556, 553, 571-2, 507, 575-6).

It is apparent that, as was said below by Judge Healy, "The most significant feature of the inquiry * * * is the paucity of the evidentiary product as contrasted with the magnitude of the effort expended in producing it" (R. 7798).

It is also apparent that each writer of an opinion below was quick to disclaim any responsibility for the finding upon the evidence here.[4] Instead the majority opinions put forward the apologia that the judicial function is limited to determining if "any" evidence (R. 7777) or "some" evidence (R. 7794) has been presented. Judge Healy for the dissenting members of the court below stated bluntly that one part of the evidence crucial to the Attorney General's conclusion "would be condemned and proscribed without hesitation by any American court" (R. 7809).

---

[4] Judge Wilbur said that his conception of the limited function of the Court prevents it from attempting "the righting of every governmental act which the judges regard as wrong" (R. 7790). Judge Stephens, in whose opinion the other two members of the majority concurred, stated that the evidence did not leave with him "the pleasurable satisfaction that * * * the truth has been revealed" (R. 7794).

The Attorney General's position in the administrative process did not invest him with special competence to reach a decision on the facts. Expert judgment upon matters foreign to ordinary judicial experience was not called for; if any expert competence were involved, it would rest with the Board of Immigration Appeals. Nor did the Attorney General see the witnesses; indeed he placed his conclusion in part upon the evidence of seven witnesses taken "as a whole", nothwithstanding that Judge Sears who had seen them had not seen fit to credit their evidence individually.

The finding of membership in the Communist Party.

1. Lundeberg. Lundeberg is a prominent west coast labor leader and is head of the union which in maritime affairs on the west coast is rival to the petitioner's. Judge Sears found Lundeberg "is strongly biased" against petitioner (R. 258). On three separate occasions over a period of years prior to the present hearing, he told the federal authorities that he had no information to indicate that petitioner had ever been a Communist (R. 7344-5; 7340-1; 7346; 7349). At the present hearing he gave testimony that in the summer of 1935, at a dinner in Bridges' home, Bridges asserted that he was a member of the Communist Party (R. 7265-7268). The statement is supposed to have been made during the course of an attempt to persuade Lundeberg to join the Communist Party. The petitioner denied any such statement (R. 7576).

Lundeberg related the conversation three times during his direct testimony. The story grew in the retelling. Not until the third version, and only after pointed and obviously leading questions, did he bring forward any assertion by petitioner of Communist Party membership. Discrepancies in his testimony, unnecessary to consider now, are closely considered in the opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals[5] (R. 468-89).

It is this testimony alone to which the majority of the court below pointed in support of their view that "some" evidence existed for the finding of membership (R. 7782-3, 7787-8).

2. O'Neil. The effort to find support for a finding against the petitioner in O'Neil's testimony is itself telling commentary on the nature of the proof.

O'Neil was called as a witness for the Government and was asked whether he had ever seen the petitioner pasting assessment stamps in a Communist Party membership book. O'Neil said he had not. He was then asked whether petitioner had ever reminded him to attend Communist meetings. He said petitioner had not. Thereupon the Government produced two witnesses who testified that O'Neil had made a statement to such effect to them—a statement neither sworn to nor signed by him. One of the witnesses was a stenographer employed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (R. 3102), the other was the Special Assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the Immigration Service (R. 5255). O'Neil did not deny having made a statement; he denied, however, that he had ever made the particular statement attributed to him, and emphatically asserted that his statement had been to the contrary (R. 2998-3072, 3090).

---

The Presiding Inspector was able to conclude from this proof that petitioner was a member of the Communist Party (R. 259-271).

Apart from its failure to carry conviction, this evidence seems plainly incompetent when employed as it was as affirmative proof (see p. 33, infra). The Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 433-68), and the District Court (R. 752-5), both rejected the evidence as wholly incompetent.

3. The evidence of membership "as a whole" (R. 98). Evidence was offered to show that the petitioner had attended Communist meetings. None of it withstood scrutiny at the hearings, and Judge Sears rejected it as "inconclusive, unreliable, or contradictory" (R. 97). Mr. Attorney General Biddle ruled, however, that "because of its volume", this evidence "taken as a whole * * * cannot * * * be completely disregarded", and he relied upon it.

4. There is no other surviving proof as to membership.

The finding of affiliation with the Communist Party

One witness testified that the petitioner had spoken favorably of the American Youth Congress and the National Students Union, in appreciation of their aid to his union in the 1934 strike (R. 1434-5). According to another witness, the petitioner once said that "the only way that a young fellow could get along in the labor movement was to join the Communist Party" (R. 7377). A third witness, supporting the ex parte written statement of her deceased husband, testified that the petitioner had discussed with some Communists the policy expressed in a telegram to one of his local union officials (R. 1961, 1991). Neither did he object to the publication of Communist releases in a trade union newspaper where the releases were helpful to his union (R. 5870). Admittedly, he has steadfastly opposed red-baiting in the trade union movement (R. 97).

From these circumstances—and particularly from petitioner's opposition to red-baiting which Judge Sears thought was consistent with the alleged Communist policy of "boring from within" (R. 326-8)[6]—Judge Sears drew the inference that the petitioner was affiliated with the Communist Party. In discussing petitioner's "pattern of conduct", Judge Sears did not refer to the many differences in policy—as expressed in action—between the petitioner and the Communist Party. (See the opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals at R. 427-31.)

Much of this evidence was first introduced at the hearing before Dean Landis (R. 75, n. 6), and was read into the record at the present hearing (R. 3217 ff.). Dean Landis found that it did not establish affiliation for he drew the proper distinction, not drawn in the present proceeding, between a casual intermittent relationship and one involving a continuing cooperation embracing mutual responsibilities (R. 513 and see p. 45, infra).

[6] Cf. the report of Dean Landis:

> "Bridges has also refused to adopt any policy whereby his unions would exclude or discriminate against any person upon the ground of membership in the Communist Party. Instead, he has actively sponsored a policy of nondiscrimination. The necessity for adoption of the policy of nondiscrimination arose. Bridges claimed, from employers' activities that charged every militant policy pursued by the unions was communistic. For that reason it was alleged that anti-red-baiting resolutions were commonly adopted by the various unions that Bridges influenced" (R. 627; cf. also R. 632-633).

The finding of affiliation with the MWIU

The MWIU was a trade union of American seamen and longshoremen (R. 3257) which went out of existence in 1935 (R. 205). Prior to 1934, because of its affiliation with the Trade Union Unity League (TUUL) which was considered a Communist organization, its members had been held deportable (R. 205-6; Greco v. Haff, 63 F. (2) 863—C.C.A.9). However, it effected a reorganization in its relations in 1933, and the Immigration Service ruled early in 1934 that membership in the MWIU was no longer ground for deportation (R. 60, 3689 ff. especially 3696). Whatever its dominating influences may have been, there is no question that it was an active trade union until shortly before its dissolution.

The evidence of petitioner's relations with it was in the main read into the record from the transcript of the first proceeding (R. 3245 ff.). It covers two separate items: the incidents of the 1934 strike (R. 421), and the "Waterfront Worker" (R. 380-420).

1. The 1934 Waterfront Strike. In 1934 the petitioner was an influential member of the International Longshoremen's Association, an AF of L union (R. 5739) (the Pacific Coast District of which has since been chartered by the CIO as the International Longshoremen & Warehousemen's Union—R. 238). The union participated in the coastwise strike which began May 9, 1934 (R. 5778)—a successful strike resulting in the removal of substantial grievances, the legitimacy of which is not denied (R. 84, 234-5, 325). Petitioner was chairman of the Joint Strike Committee, comprising all the unions involved (R. 5781).

During the course of the strike petitioner enlisted and accepted the cooperation of the MWIU (R. 5778-81, 5783). He similarly had the cooperation of a number of other unions not claimed to have been Communist dominated (5815, 5785), of Jackson, an MWIU organizer (R. 249, 3266); and of Darcy (R. 250). He accepted the aid of the Communist west coast paper, the Western Worker (R. 251), as he accepted the aid of the Catholic Leader (R. 6485). He urged seamen who were members of the International Seaman's Union, which was recalcitrant in supporting the strike, to leave that union and to join the MWIU (R. 3257, 3258).[7] He opposed a joint resolution of all unions repudiating Communist support, and he discussed his attitude with Darcy (R. 250). He sought to have MWIU delegates on the Joint Strike Committee (R. 6348).

Apart from the evidence as to the "Waterfront Worker," which we next consider, this constitutes the substance of the evidence on the question of affiliation with the MWIU.[8] Petitioner did not deny these facts, on the contrary he asserted that they illustrated his considered philosophy: that he is above all interested in the fortunes of his union; and that he will seek cooperation from any helpful source when its interests are at stake (R. 374-5) because effective trade union management requires no less.

The proof of these facts was also made before Dean Landis (R. 375). His conclusions were opposed to those reached in the present proceeding. "Persons engaged in bitter industrial struggles," he said, "tend to seek help and assistance from every available source" (R. 635). In truth an inference of affiliation can be drawn from them only through a conception of the meaning of affiliation so mistaken as to amount to a denial of liberties constitutionally guaranteed (cf. R. 5810-12).

---

[7] The petitioner changed his attitude when the ISU joined the strike. Then he was instrumental in the transference of many members from the MWIU to the ISU. In 1935, the MWIU disbanded (R. 3262-4).

[8] Judge Sears also relied upon subsequent writings of Communist apologists who sought to magnify Communist influence in the 1934 strike by claiming intimate association with the petitioner (R. 251-5).

2. The "Waterfront Worker." The Waterfront Worker was a mimeographed paper published in San Francisco from December 1932 until some time in 1936 (R. 238). It had no fixed editorial board, and the methods of editing and publishing it were most informal (R. 381n, 3234, 5761). At its start it was edited by members of the MWIU, and it was urged and found below that the petitioner, who admittedly participated in its editing and publication after September 1933, had worked with that group from the beginning in December, 1932. Petitioner's evidence was that from the outset and before his connection with it the paper was unsuccessful; that it had lapsed, and had then, around September, 1933, been revived by a group of which the petitioner was a member (R. 3234, 6172), and which neither included any member of the MWIU nor operated with financial or any other aid from the MWIU (R. 5772).

The proof offered on both sides of this simple question was most complicated. The Board of Immigration Appeals undertook the laborious task of unravelling it and by careful analysis of the objective facts, particularly the issues of the Waterfront Worker in evidence, demonstrated the errors of the Presiding Inspector's conclusions (R. 380-420).[9]

3. There is no other surviving proof or alleged proof as to petitioner's affiliation either with the Communist Party or the MWIU.

---

[9] A subsidiary finding was also made that the publication was an instrument of the MWIU and hence of the Communist Party until it ceased publication in 1936 (R. 244-5. The date here given by Judge Sears must be incorrect as the MWIU went out of existence in 1935—R. 205). However, the finding admittedly depends upon the numbers published before September 1933. The opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals examines the subsequent issues of the paper, and dispels all suggestion of support for the finding (R. 384-420).

Substantial Evidence is Required.

There should be no doubt as to the quantum of the necessary proof. The due process clause of the Fifth Amendment requires the Court to satisfy itself that substantial evidence, of a quality to carry conviction to a reasonable mind, supports any finding from which deportation follows.[10] Even where the finding of an administrative board is made conclusive "if supported by evidence", the reviewing court has the duty to examine the evidence to determine whether it is "substantial", that is to say, whether it has that quality which makes an impression on reason and can induce conviction. As was said in NLRB v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., 306 U. S. 292, 299-300:

> "Section 10(e) of the Act provides: '* * * The findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive.' But as has often been pointed out, this, as in the case of other findings by administrative bodies, means evidence which is substantial, that is, affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can be reasonably inferred * * * Substantial evidence is more than a scintilla, and must do more than create a suspicion of the existence of the fact to be established. 'It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion,' * * * and it must be enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the conclusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for the jury."

[10] The judicial attitude in deportation cases must accommodate the fact that aliens now present in this country are generally of long residence, that they have acquired American families and in general have put their roots down in this soil, and that their deportation should rest only upon adequate evidence and upon findings fairly reached.

There must be "enough evidence to fairly sustain the finding * * *" (Lewis v. Frick, 233 U. S. 291 at 297). (See also NLRB v. Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., 135 F. (2) 15 at 25— C. C. A. 3; "Administrative Procedure in Government Agencies", Final Report of the Attorney General's Committee 1941, p. 88.)[11]

Although language may be found in the opinions in deportation cases pointing in varying directions, this requirement for substantial evidence is illustrated in a number of decisions.[12]

Such a requirement is peculiarly acute when important constitutional rights involving fundamental personal liberties are involved[13]—and particularly where as here the hearsay evidence of Lundeberg and the incompetent evidence ascribed to O'Neil is offered in sole support for a

[11] In a contemporary comment of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, it was recognized that any distinction between deportation and other administrative proceedings if it ever existed no longer obtains—"The Immigration and Naturalization Service", Secretary of Labor's Committee on Administrative Procedure, 1940, at pages 122-3:

> "The reversal in the Supreme Court's attitude toward consideration of the evidence in immigration cases is the single most striking aspect of its general change of approach * * *."

As was said by the Ninth Circuit Court itself, substantial evidence "implies a quality of proof which induces conviction and makes an impression on reason" (N.L.R.B. v. Union Pacific Stages, 99 F. [2] 153, at 177).

finding (see 2 Pike and Fischer, Administrative Law, 48e, 521-8). Moreover, in the present case there is no occasion for judicial reluctance to intervene on the ground that the administrative findings involved expert judgment in fields foreign to judicial competence.

The Opinions of the Court Below.

The opinions for the majority judges below took a most curious course with respect to the necessary standard of proof. The view originally expressed was that "any" evidence will suffice (p. 15, supra). The petitioner then filed a motion for reargument in which the errors of this view were principally urged. Although reargument was denied, the accompanying opinion by Judge Stephens sought to clarify the position originally taken. The opinion states that "there is evidence, more than a scintilla and not unbelievable on its face" (R. 7812)—from which it is said to follow that issues on the evidence do not fall within the judicial province. Under that view, Judge Stephens added, "we have ordered enforced numerous orders for the exclusion and for the deportation of aliens * * *" (R. 7812).

A month later Judge Stephens filed an amendment to this opinion on reargument. The amendment states that the Court was accustomed to applying the views expressed "in habeas corpus proceedings and reviews from administrative orders"—i.e. assimilating the scope of review in deportation cases to administrative proceedings generally. But in review of administrative orders even the Ninth Circuit has held that there must be substantial evidence to support the findings (NLRB v. Union Pacific Stages, 99 F. (2) 153 at 177).

The testimony of Lundeberg alone is relied upon by the majority to sustain the finding of membership, and it is submitted that his testimony does not constitute "substantial" evidence in any intelligible sense of the term. Moreover, the majority overlooked that the Attorney General's findings depended upon all the evidence mentioned by him and not upon any single part of the evidence individually. The majority below relied upon Lundeberg alone, making the assumption that the findings must be sustained if any of the evidence could be credited, without regard to the fact that the findings were made upon all the evidence. But Securities and Exchange Commission v. Chenery (318 U. S. 80) establishes that judicial review of an administrative finding may only proceed in the light of the ground actually adopted by the administrative tribunal.

Viewed cumulatively, the surviving evidence relied upon by the Attorney General is only the debris of an elaborate and ambitious structure built upon the testimony of witnesses most of whom were the dregs of the waterfront, and whom the Government should have quickly recognized as such. The Court below was content to accept only a fragment of that debris as sufficient. We submit that the finding against the petitioner upon such evidence or any part of it is arbitrary and violates due process of law.

We turn to the other violations of due process of law committed against the petitioner.

POINT II

Deportation upon the procedures used here offends due process of law.

The making of the findings against the petitioner was not merely without evidence "to fairly sustain" them (Lewis v. Frick, 233 U. S. 291, 297; cf. Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272, 274); it was also accompanied by grave abuses of the fundamental considerations of fairness embodied in our concept of due process.

We have referred to the early departmental investigations of petitioner, in which he was absolved of all charges and to the formal hearing before Dean Landis in which all charges were found baseless, resulting in the cancellation of the warrant of arrest. At the time of the Landis hearings, and because of the decision of this Court in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, the deportation statute required a finding that the petitioner was a member or affiliate of a proscribed organization at the time of the issuance of the warrant. Immediately following the final disposition of the first warrant, there was renewed agitation and it resulted in legislative action seeking his deportation.

1. Legislative action directed to petitioner. The first attempt was in 1940, through a bill in Congress directing petitioner's deportation "notwithstanding any other provision of law." The bill passed the House, but died in Senate Committee (S. Rep. 2051, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess., H.R. 9766, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess.).

Then on June 29, 1940, Congress adopted the amendment of the law under which the present warrant was issued. Its purpose, both to nullify the ruling in Kessler v. Strecker, supra, and to furnish a ground for further action against petitioner, cannot easily be mistaken. It provides in effect for deportation by reason of past membership in or past affiliation with a proscribed organization. So far as the petitioner is concerned, the author of the measure, Congressman Hobbs, stated its purpose:

> "It is my joy to announce that this bill will do, in a perfectly legal and constitutional manner, what the bill specifically aimed at the deportation of Harry Bridges seeks to accomplish. This bill changes the law so that the Department of Justice should now have little trouble in deporting Bridges * * *" (86 Cong. Rec. 9031; see also Hearing before a Subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, U. S. Senate, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess. on H.R. 5138, p. 11).[14]

2. Successive hearings as denial of due process. To subject the petitioner, exonerated by Dean Landis, to a second trial before Judge Sears was in the light of the evidence presented a procedure so unfair as in itself to constitute a denial of due process.

The Government has suggested a formal distinction between the two proceedings—that before Dean Landis the issue was the membership or affiliation of the petitioner as of the issuance of the warrant, while before Judge Sears the issue was his membership or affiliation at any time following his admission to this country. The distinction will not survive examination.

No evidence was offered before Dean Landis as to present membership. All the proof was addressed only to past membership and affiliation, and the Government relied specifically upon a legal presumption of continuance to support its claim with respect to the time of petitioner's arrest in 1938.[15] As Dean Landis' opinion shows, his finding denying present membership or affiliation depends entirely upon

---

[14] Earlier there had been hearings upon a resolution seeking impeachment of Secretary of Labor Perkins and other officials in the Labor Department for an alleged conspiracy to refrain from enforcing the deportation law against petitioner (H. Res. 67, 76th Cong., 1st (Sess.). The resolution failed of passage (H. Rep. No. 311, 76th Cong., 1st Sess.; filed Mar. 24, 1939).

[15] The Government's own statement of its case before Dean Landis demonstrates the identity of the two proceedings.

"It is the Government's position that it has shown that prior to the arrest of Harry Bridges he was a member of the Communist Party and has continued as such. It contends, and submits it has been proved, that, the alien having been shown to be a member of the Communist Party, the obligation rested upon him to show that he had ceased to be such member, and in the absence of such showing there is a legal presumption he remained a member, and therefore is subject to deportation under the Act of 1918 as amended" (Government's Brief to Dean Landis, p. 100).

his rejection of the Government's evidence of past membership and affiliation (R. 634-6).

The proof itself, in each of the proceedings, followed identical lines. In each proceeding, the Government attempted, unsuccessfully, to prove that the petitioner attended Communist Party membership meetings; the witnesses were different persons, but the purport of their testimony the same. Similarly, proof was offered, in each case, of alleged admissions by petitioner of membership in the Communist Party; again, only the witnesses differed. Even more, the same miscellany of items offered as proof of affiliation with the Communist Party was all presented to and passed upon by Dean Landis (R. 604-7, 626-8). The Government saw fit to present a greater volume of testimony before Judge Sears than before Dean Landis, with respect to the further charge of petitioner's affiliation with the MWIU—principally concerning the "Waterfront Worker". But again all the subjects considered were mooted before Dean Landis; in fact most of the testimony in the first proceeding dealing with the MWIU was read into the record of the second proceeding (R. 75, f. 6, 624-8, 635, 3231 ff.). The Board of Immigration Appeals stated its opinion that "the same factual issues" were tried in both proceedings (432, n. 77). We annex in Appendix C a tabular statement showing how the same lines of testimony were given by the different witnesses in the two proceedings—the testimony covering the years 1934-1938 (infra, pp. 71-2).

The precise question here is not whether Dean Landis' findings and rulings were either correct or res adjudicata: it is whether, consistent with the requirements of due process of law, petitioner could be subjected to successive proceedings with respect to these identical matters.

The first hearing was no mere perfunctory proceeding, with only tentative conclusions. It was an extended and far-flung investigation in which the parties were represented by counsel; witnesses were subpoenaed, examined, and cross-examined; arguments heard and briefs submitted. The suggestion of the Government below, that the proceeding before Dean Landis was in the nature of an inconclusive investigation like that before a committing magistrate, is hardly appropriate. Nor is it relevant to urge, as the Government also urged below, that here were administrative proceedings in which the principles of res adjudicata are often said not to apply. Even if they did not—and we submit on the contrary that they do clearly apply[16]—petitioner's rights must be judged under the due process clause. Surely it is an intolerable proposition that there are no legal restraints upon governmental determination to try the same issues of fact against the petitioner, again and again, upon the same thin evidence, until success is achieved. Otherwise, the governmental force must ultimately prevail—regardless of merit.

Beyond this, petitioner is entitled to the protection of the double jeopardy clause (U. S. Constitution, Fifth Amendment). Deportation proceedings are not merely civil proceedings to which the double jeopardy provision is generally considered not to attach; their consequences run far beyond those flowing from ordinary civil litigation. Deportation "may result also in loss of both property and life; or of all that makes life worth living" (Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 284, per Brandeis, J.). This has [16] Two situations should be distinguished—first, where the prior proceeding was not a fully litigated adversary proceeding but was heard "in a summary way" as in Pearson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281 at 284; and second, where the administrative body is specifically charged by statute with the obligation to function in the public interest, and so proceeds without immediate emphasis upon questions of private law (compare N.L.R.B. v. Thompson Product, 130 F. (2) 363—C. C. A. 6).

---

On technical principles of res adjudicata—the decision under the statute as amended indisputably turns upon the same facts as were actually litigated before Dean Landis, so that his conclusions would plainly seem controlling in the present proceeding (Restatement of Judgments, sec. 68 esp. comment C).

often been judicially pointed out.[17] Indeed it will have that effect in the present case. Regardless of the form of the proceedings, a penalty is here sought to be imposed; thus double jeopardy is threatened within the meaning of the Constitution (United States v. Chouteau, 102 U. S. 603, cf. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657; cf. U. S. ex rel. Marcus v. Hess, 317 U. S. 537).

The concepts of double jeopardy and res judicata which in other situations would concededly bar successive proceedings are, we submit, not only specific constitutional protections within their own spheres, however defined, but are inseparable from fundamental due process; as so conceived no ground exists for withholding their protection from petitioner.

3. Ex post facto operation of the statute as denial of due process. The proceedings similarly offend common conceptions of fairness embodied in the ex post facto clause (Art. I, sec. 9[3]), since the statute was amended on June 28, 1940 with the specific purpose in mind of deporting the petitioner upon grounds admittedly not then existing.

Only upon the frank admission that it proposed to try the same case again, could the Government have renewed proceedings against the petitioner, after Dean Landis' decision. The amendment furnished a pretext for avoiding such an admission. Its effect, however, is not merely ex post facto but also retrospective—a distinction the importance of which has been indicated by this Court (e. g., Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585). It subjects aliens to

---

[17] E. g. Wallis v. Tecchio, 65 F. (2) 250, C. C. A. 5, classing deportation as "a penalty"; Browne v. Zurbreck, 45 F. (2) 931, C. C. A. 6; see also Dean Landis at R. 506. "If a banishment of this sort be not * * * among the severest of punishments it would be difficult to imagine a doom to which the name can be applied", Pres. James Madison, 4 Elliott's Debates (1830) p. 363.

deportation for membership in an organization, even though such membership had long since terminated when the amendment was adopted.

It is not necessary to argue here that the ex post facto clause applies in full vigor to the case of any alien affected by its retrospective operation.[18] It is with respect to this petitioner that the operation of the statute must be viewed. The purpose of the draftsman of the amendment, directed at petitioner, could not be carried out except by reaching back into the past and penalizing a status which, the prior proceedings had established, did not then exist.

Here again considerations of due process of law are clearly involved. Even granting the Government's narrow contentions as to the scope of the ex post facto clause, another basic source of the petitioner's protection is the due process clause. "The more limited ex post facto or contract clauses may now be regarded simply as encyclopedic subdivisions of the due process clause" (Shulman, Retroactive Legislation, 13 Encycl. of Soc. Science 355).

[18] It was ruled below that the ex post facto clause applies only to strictly criminal cases. The leading authorities, however, forbid any deprivation of fundamental rights which is based upon conduct antedating the penalizing statute. Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277; Pierce v. Carskadon, 16 Wall. 234; Cooley, "Constitutional Limitations" (7th Ed. 1903) 375-376; Black, "Handbook of American Constitutional Law" (1927) § 266; Blackstone Commentaries [3d Ed.] 11n.; McAllister, "Ex Post Facto Laws in the Supreme Court of the United States" (1927) 15 Cal. Law Rev. 269, 281-282.

4. Resurrection of the MWIU as denial of due process. The charge of affiliation with the MWIU represents a reversal of the Government's settled attitude towards that organization—a reversal made only in the petitioner's case.[19]

Membership in or affiliation with the MWIU has not been deemed cause for deportation since the ruling of the Department of Labor in 1934. Prior to the present proceedings, no alien was ever faced with such a charge—notwithstanding that, before the decision in Kessler v. Strecker, in 1940, it was believed that either past or present membership constituted cause for deportation; and since the proceedings, no alien—except the petitioner—has been charged with past membership in or affiliation with the MWIU (R. 705-715, 733). Only the petitioner has been held deportable for past affiliation with an organization which at the time of his affiliation with it had been authoritatively determined not to be included in the ban of the statute.

No legal arguments, however nice, concerning the power of the Department in 1934 to construe the statute so as to exclude any organization now found to be a proscribed organization can obscure the fact that there are today thousands of aliens in the United States who have been members of or affiliated with the MWIU, and other TUUL affiliates.[20] Clearly the statute has here been intentionally applied in a discriminatory manner.

[19] The warrant was simply in the language of the statute (R. 772-3). It was not until the opening day of trial that the Government disclosed that it was relying upon affiliation with the MWIU (R. 807-8). In prior hearings doubtless because of the Department's 1934 ruling, no such charge was made.

[20] The concept of equal protection is embraced in due process (compare U. S. v. Yount, 267 Fed. 861 at 863, D. C. Pa.); and due process of law may be denied equally by administrative interpretation or by legislation. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356; compare Sunday Lake Iron Co. v. Wakefield, 247 U. S. 350; Raymond v. Chicago Union Traction Co., 207 U. S. 20 at 35-6.

5. The O'Neil incident as denial of due process. Judge Sears placed reliance upon the alleged O'Neil evidence (R. 271). No one else has done so, other than the Attorney General (R. 92-6). The Board of Immigration Appeals rejected it (R. 451-461). The District Court ruled it out without hesitation (R. 753-5); and the Court below merely declined to invalidate the order because of the acceptance of this "additional evidence of less probative value" than Lundeberg's testimony (R. 778).[21] Judge Healy's trenchant observations adequately sum up this phase of the case (p. 15, supra).

A. The evidence ascribed to O'Neil was incompetent. Plainly the petitioner was deprived of any opportunity to cross-examine: the only testimony that O'Neil gave was that he had never made the statement put to him concerning the petitioner's assertions of membership in the Communist Party. There was nothing here for the petitioner to challenge. Yet the alleged statement, made out of court, not sworn to, repudiated by its alleged author, and originally accepted (even then erroneously) as impeaching evidence only (R. 525-6-7), has been transmuted into affirmative proof against the petitioner.

The Government's contentions as to the competency of this evidence are fully met in the opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals which made a careful and comprehensive review of the authorities (R. 451-461). There is no decision which suggests that such a statement may be used as evidence where the witness denies having made the statement.

[21] Mr. Attorney General Biddle took the view that he would accept the findings of Judge Sears because Judge Sears saw and heard the witnesses (R. 96). This is a truism of appellate practice hardly applicable here, for O'Neil's alleged statement upon which Judge Sears relied was not given under Judge Sears' observation. All that Judge Sears heard was O'Neil's denial.

The evidence was more than merely incompetent. The fact is rather that the evidence is vicious in tendency and that to accept it and rely upon it is to commit that "flagrant" error which the present Chief Justice indicated in Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, 106, would demonstrate the essential unfairness of the proceedings (see also Tang Tun v. Edsell, 223 U. S. 673; Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, and cases cited at pp. 133-4). The practice here followed would obviously permit of outright manufacture of evidence without effective opportunity for challenge.

The evidence is offensive to fundamental conceptions of what constitutes due process of law not only because of the absence of opportunity for effective challenge, —it also had a prejudicial effect which pervaded consideration of the entire case. It purports to be the only surviving circumstantial rather than hearsay evidence of the petitioner's membership in the Communist Party. Once credited, it could not fail to cause repercussions far beyond its own immediate purport, affecting the views of the trier of the facts upon the other evidence offered and in relation to the petitioner's own testimony.

The differences between the findings of Judge Sears and Dean Landis may well be ascribed to the prejudicial consequences of this most improper proof. Offered originally only to show that O'Neil was not telling the truth, it has been magnified so that with the evidence of Lundeberg it constitutes the only point upon which the finding of membership rests.

B. Violation by Mr. Attorney General Biddle of the Department's own rules is also clear. Those rules were adopted as part of the recent studied expansion of the administrative powers of the Immigration Service (Rules 150.1(c) and 150.6(i); Appendix, pp. 60, 65-6). They limit the manner in which ex parte statements may be taken and used in deportation proceedings; any statement procured during an investigation must be taken down in writing under oath and signed by the witness who must be informed of its prospective use as evidence. Although the Government argued to the contrary in the court below, the Attorney General conceded that the rules had been violated (R. 95).

The Attorney General sought to dispose of the violation on the ground that the rules were not specifically called to the attention of Judge Sears. But Mr. Attorney General Biddle was not entitled to rule, as an appellate court might do, that therefore the petitioner "waived the right to object" (R. 96). Judge Healy, dissenting below, quite properly observed that the rules

> "were called to the Attorney General's attention. One is left to wonder on what ground that high official condoned his own disregard of them. Upon him rested the inescapable responsibility of accepting or rejecting the evidence, as of ordering the deportation. The rules were obligatory on him if on anybody" (R. 7806).

Due process of law is denied when the Department violates its own rules (U. S. ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149 and especially authorities cited at 155 n. 3; Ohm v. Perkins, 79 F. (2) 533, C. C. A. 2). Here such violation resulted in the acceptance of evidence, offered without the traditional safeguards for testing truth and necessarily prejudicial to the whole case. Flagrant error was thereby committed.

6. Rejected evidence "taken as a whole" as denial of due process. Upon an assumption as to the nature of proof for which we can find neither precedent nor parallel, Mr. Attorney General Biddle also gave weight to the evidence of witnesses whose testimony Judge Sears had declined to credit.

Judge Sears rejected the testimony of seven witnesses who placed the petitioner at Communist meetings. The testimony of one of these was found to be "inherently improbable" (R. 310); of another Judge Sears said he "clearly falsified" (R. 307); and of the rest he held, as Mr. Attorney General Biddle summarized it, their testimony was "inconclusive, unreliable or contradictory" (R. 97).

The Attorney General, nevertheless, ruled as follows:

> "Although Judge Sears concluded that their evidence, for one reason or another, did not establish membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party, taken as a whole, it cannot, because of its volume, be completely disregarded" (R. 98).

The ruling, it is submitted, cannot be explained on any ground consistent with a genuine desire to accord the petitioner the fair consideration required by due process of law.

7. The Government's conduct as denial of due process. The atmosphere throughout the proceeding before Judge Sears was inexcusably one of red-baiting. A host of unfounded charges against witnesses and counsel, and attacks on their evidence and documents, were made solely on the basis of alleged Communist domination. We cannot here rehearse the full details. A quotation from the Government's brief will serve to illustrate the obscurantist nature of the Government's approach in the matter:

> "BRIDGES was and is a serpent, slithering into the trade union movement from a dark, unwholesome den of the past to practice in the movement the treacherous tactic of hypocrisy and deceit and to form with his 'comrades' a tyranny therein that might compare in its exercise of power with that most vicious one in Soviet Russia, where 9,000,000 human beings were slaughtered as a single project in the most cruel and inhuman program in the history of the world." [22] (Gov't Reply Brief to Presiding Inspector, p. 39.)

This attitude was reflected in the proof offered and in the evidence withheld by the Government. (a) It was learned during the course of the trial that witnesses had given statements to the Government inconsistent with the testimony they gave at the hearing (R. 1358; 1360, 1362, 1367; 745). Judge Sears believed he was without power to direct the Government to produce any documents, and he left the production of these statements to the discretion of Government officials. Counsel thereupon refused to produce them. This kind of concealment on the part of the Government, by suppression of documents, has always been condemned (Chief Justice Cooley in People v. Davis, 52 Mich. 569; People v. Schainuck, 286 N. Y. 161, 8 Wigmore Evidence, sec. 2224). In the language relied on by Dean Landis "ordinary considerations of fairness" (R. 507, n. 15) required that the Government produce these statements. (b) The Government presented the false testimony of its witness Cannalonga, which evidence was procured during his detention in "protective custody" (R. 6708-17) and in circumstances pointing to foreknowledge of its falsity.[23] (c) It was discovered that the Government was resorting to illegal wire tapping against petitioner after the hearings (R. 341-5).

[22] Similar attacks were made on the CIO: R. 1232, 1301-2, 2468, 925; compare R. 7687, 1732, 5672, 3803-3, 3921-3, 3960-1, 4551-2, 5059, 7496-7. The Government's briefs were vituperative; see Government's opening brief, pp. 239, 252, 258, 259; reply brief, p. 155. Armed guards were present at the trial, and FBI agents maintained a constant watch over defense attorneys.

[23] Cannalonga testified against the petitioner on April 17 (R. 1769-1909). On May 4 he gave a deposition under oath to petitioner's counsel in which he repudiated his testimony (Alien's Ex. 13, R. 3523-41). On May 7 a subpoena for his forthwith appearance was issued on petitioner's request (Alien's Ex. 48). Cannalonga disappeared, and was not found until May 29 (R. 6969-70). On the following day an FBI agent served him with the subpoena (R. 6694-6701). Instead of producing Cannalonga the FBI took him into "protective custody" for the next four days during which they obtained a statement repudiating his deposition (R. 6704-6717). He was produced by the Government on June 4 and presented as a Government witness (R. 6648). His story was that he had been drunk when he made his first repudiation (R. 6682-3)—a story which Judge Sears found to be clearly false (R. 307). The Government, however, had in its possession evidence showing the falsity (Alien's Exs. 59; see also Alien's Exs. 60, 61): Cannalonga's work slips for the day in question, as well as the record of an interview by Immigration inspectors of the stenographer who took Cannalonga's deposition (R. 7517).

8. Mr. Attorney General Biddle's procedure as denial of due process. The determination of the Board of Appeals was rendered on January 3, 1942 (R. 367). Mr. Biddle's decision was announced publicly on May 28, 1942 (R. 106). He had given no indication in the interval that he had the matter under consideration. Accordingly, there was no opportunity for counsel to appear before him and present arguments either orally or in writing. Since the oral argument before the Board was not taken down stenographically, the Attorney General could only have acted without benefit of the views of petitioner's counsel except to the extent that he may have had before him one or more of the briefs filed with Judge Sears or the Board of Immigration Appeals. The Attorney General did not confine his consideration to questions of law. He considered the facts in detail and as shown he took into consideration evidence which had theretofore been rejected (R. 97-8).[24] He also enunciated a theory of waiver (R. 94)

not previously suggested. In these circumstances the petitioner had the right to an opportunity to reach the mind of this public official who undertook to dispose finally of his case upon findings less favorable to him than those to which he had previously had opportunity to address himself (Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1; 304 U. S. 23; 298 U. S. 468). Petitioner's right to be represented by counsel before the official who finally decides is elementary (compare Glasser v. U. S., 315 U. S. 60, at 76). These considerations were emphasized when subsequently Mr. Attorney General Biddle denied a petition for a "hearing or rehearing."

The second Morgan case (304 U. S. 1; id. at 23) established that due process of law forbids any administrator from making a final determination against a party without giving him fair opportunity, by service upon him either of an intermediate report or of proposed findings, to learn of any new conclusions proposed to be reached against him and to furnish his arguments in answer. The rules of the Department itself emphasize this requirement for a hearing. In any case in which oral argument has not previously been had, the alien is afforded opportunity to present argument on any finding made by the Board less favorable than the recommendation below (Rule 90.11). Simple fair play dictates such a rule, which should have controlled the deliberations and actions of Mr. Attorney General Biddle.

In sum: the proceedings against this petitioner, viewed in their completeness, constitute a gross and cumulative abuse of due process of law. The petitioner, who has been the object of determined and persistent attention since 1934, was subjected to a trial on charges in 1940 notwithstanding that previous departmental investigations had disclosed no basis for action against him. That trial was conducted in a scrupulously careful and thorough manner, and it too resulted in findings fully in his favor. Nevertheless the underlying statute was amended specifically so as to permit of further proceedings against him, and as a result of the amendment, the petitioner was subjected to a second trial in which the same issues of fact were tried partly upon identical testimony and for the rest upon identical lines of proof. Plainly these proceedings ignored all considerations of fairness underlying the double jeopardy and ex post facto provisions of the Constitution. Moreover they were conducted in an atmosphere of hostility and prejudice. They depended in large measure upon resurrection of charges long overruled with respect to the MWIU; a resurrection, moreover, devised particularly for this case, and not since used against any other of the several thousand aliens in the same situation. The department's own rules were disregarded. The Attorney General did not see fit to hear the petitioner through his counsel. The Government resorted to marginal procedures and dubious evasions of ordinary understanding of due process of law at every step. And although some forty witnesses have appeared in the two proceedings against the petitioner, the case against him on the facts rests essentially upon the admittedly biased and self-contradicted testimony of Lundeberg and upon evidence ascribed to O'Neil which it was flagrant error to accept for any purpose. A finding against petitioner upon such testimony, in view of its paucity and its unreliability, is to substitute arbitrary fiat for reasoned conviction. The petitioner has been denied due process of law.

POINT III

The statute as construed and applied denies petitioner freedom of speech and association guaranteed by the First and Fifth Amendments.

It was denied below that the First and Fifth Amendments protect the petitioner from deportation for his exercise of the rights of freedom of speech and of association there guaranteed.[25] It was further urged by the Government that in any event the statute could constitutionally be applied, in the light of the finding of petitioner's membership in and affiliation with the Communist Party and his affiliation with the MWIU.

So far as the adequacy of the finding of membership to support the constitutional application of the statute is concerned—the Government made this explicit concession (R. 1527):

> "* * * we are not charging this witness with believing in the advocacy of the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence.
> "We are not charging the alien here with believing in the use of force and violence in the overthrowing of the Government of the United States."

There is, moreover, no proof that the petitioner understood that the Communist Party believed in or advocated violent overthrow of government—and there is no proof that any clear and present danger existed that advocacy by the Communist Party of violent overthrow of government might have been successful. In these circumstances, to deport petitioner for bare membership is to find guilt by imputation, for mere association, and is in contravention of the First and Fifth Amendments.

The same conclusions follow from the evidence presented to show petitioner's affiliation with the Communist Party and the MWIU (discussed above, pp. 17-21). The statute cannot constitutionally be applied to such proof as here involved. The proof is no more than that petitioner sought cooperation in pursuit of legitimate trade-union aims, as indeed Dean Landis determined upon virtually the same proof. "Bridges' aims are energetically radical", he said, but "the proof fails to establish that the methods he seeks to employ to realize them are other than those that the framework of democratic and constitutional government permits" (R. 635).

1. Petitioner's Rights under the Constitution.

According to the Government, "the First Amendment is inapplicable * * *" (brief below, p. 21). Presumably its position would be the same with respect to the Fifth Amendment to the extent that it guarantees liberty of conduct and association. The argument strikes at the tenure of the three and one-half million aliens lawfully resident in this country.

The Government does not challenge that, deportation aside, aliens are fully entitled to the rights guaranteed under the Constitution and specifically to rights of free speech.[26]

---

[26] The doctrine was fully stated in Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538:

> "While he lawfully remains here he is entitled to the benefit of the guaranties of life, liberty, and property, secured by the Constitution to all persons, of whatever race, within the jurisdiction of the United States. His personal rights when he is in this country and such of his property as is here during his absence are as fully protected by the supreme law of the land as if he were a native or naturalized citizen of the United States" (p. 547).

For example: Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356 (Fourteenth Amendment); Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228 (Fifth Amendment); Li Sing v. United States, 180 U. S. 486 (Fifth Amendment); Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244 at 282-3; Truax v. Raich, 239 U. S. 33 (Fourteenth Amendment); Terrace v. Thompson, 263 U. S. 197 at 216 (Fourteenth Amendment); Russian Fleet v. United States, 282 U. S. 481 (deprivation of property only upon just compensation, under Fifth Amendment).

The alien's rights of free speech are recognized in Abrams v. United States, 250 U. S. 616, and in Hague v. CIO, 307 U. S. 496.

Because some constitutional guarantees as to judicial procedure are not available in deportation cases,[27] it does not follow that the guarantees of free speech, or of liberty generally, are also precluded.

Congress may "exclude or expel all aliens * * * absolutely or upon certain conditions" (Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698 at 711; Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276; United States v. Smith, 289 U. S. 422). But the exercise of that power, like every other general power expressly or impliedly granted, is necessarily subject to scrutiny as to "whether the manner in which Congress has exercised this right * * * is consistent with the Constitution" (Fong Yue Ting v. United States, supra; cf. Monongahela Navigation Company v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 336).

Recent decisions have defined some of the boundaries of free speech—there is the right, in the absence of a showing of clear and present danger to our institutions, to speak freely in public places, however unpopular the views there expressed may be (Taylor v. Mississippi, 319 U. S. 583; Hague v. CIO, 307 U. S. 496); to utter religious propaganda (Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U. S. 296); and to distribute handbills or pamphlets, either from house to house, or in public places (Schneider v. State, 308 U. S. 147; Martin v. Struthers, 319 U. S. 141). There is the right to picket (Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88; Carlson v. California, 310 U. S. 106; Bakery Drivers Local v. Wohl, 315 U. S. 769); and to criticize the courts (Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252[28]). Is Congress free to deprive an alien of these [27] Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228; Li Sing v. United States, 180 U. S. 486; Lo Wah Suey v. Backus, 225 U. S. 460; Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272; Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276; United States ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149.

[28] This decision involved the present petitioner. The Government's position would seem necessarily to be that Congress would be competent to deport him for the conduct which in that case this Court held was done under the protection of the Constitution.

rights deriving from the First and Fifth Amendments by threatening deportation on pain of surrender of those rights? (Compare Western Union Tel. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1; Frost v. Railroad Commission of California, 271 U. S. 583).

The Government argues that Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, establishes that Congress may do so. This was not, however, a case of deportation, but one in which an alien who had illegally entered the country ten days before the warrant, was excluded. Of course a non-resident alien, illegally here, cannot claim constitutional guarantees. This Court made the distinction clear when it stated that "those who are excluded cannot assert the rights in general obtaining in a land to which they do not belong as citizens or otherwise" (p. 292).

The Government's contention that it will be "anomalous" if "Congress could not provide for the deportation of aliens bent on the overthrow of the Government by force • • •" (Gov. brief below, p. 21)[29] not only begs the question, it is also a poorly disguised denial of the fundamental principles underlying the guarantee of free speech. The premises upon which that right has been guaranteed do not admit of a distinction between aliens and citizens. Democratic institutions must stand or fall upon the free exchange of ideas. Our ruling concepts must be capable of surviving the test of free discussion in the market place. The quality of an idea is not affected by whether it is urged by alien or citizen.

In periods of reaction the first point of attack is upon minorities and particularly upon aliens. The argument of the Government in this case can be turned against any group of aliens, and would permit deportation for any form of conduct—religious, political or economic—guaranteed as part of our fundamental liberties.

[29] Compare the Government's concession with respect to the alien, supra, p. 41.

2. "Affiliation" has been Construed so as to Deny the Petitioner Due Process of Law and Free Speech.

Dean Landis recognized (R. 512-3), upon the authorities, that the statute does not interdict either mere association with Communists or the entertaining of beliefs in sympathy with those maintained by the Communist Party; that it does not apply where the connection between the alien and the proscribed organization, even when amounting to cooperation, is casual, spasmodic or intermittent; that affiliation implies some relationship of permanence, of mutual reliance and dependence, "which, though not equivalent to membership duty, does rest upon a course of conduct which could not be abruptly ended without giving at least reasonable cause for the charge of a breach of good faith" (Kettunen v. Reimer, 79 F. (2) 315, 317, per Chase, J.; see also Dean Landis at R. 513 and cases there cited, including Tolsky v. Wilson, unreported opinion by Judge Learned Hand, June 27, 1920).

In the present proceeding the concept of affiliation has been expounded in a manner not heretofore understood. The element of permanence has particularly been ignored. Judge Sears does not seem to have been guided by any principle, but proceeded simply upon the vague premise that the trier of facts must somehow determine where the weight of the evidence lies (R. 249-51; 326-38). Mr. Attorney General Biddle did not specifically discuss his understanding of the meaning of affiliation; and, as Judge Healy said below, "he appears to have relied indiscriminately on every circumstance which might be thought to spell sympathy or to be indicative of an association however temporary and in pursuit of ends however legitimate" (R. 7803).

We have already stated the substance of those circumstances (pp. 17-21, supra)—the petitioner accepted the cooperation of the MWIU; he aided in the editing and publishing of the Waterfront Worker; he resisted red-baiting in the affairs of his trade union; and he is said to have made statements evincing sympathy with some of the aims and purposes of the Communist Party. He permitted publication of Communist releases in a trade union newspaper—but again, as in all his activities, because those releases worked to the benefit of his union.

The statute must fall, under the First and Fifth Amendments, when it is construed and applied so as to proscribe legitimate activities of this nature. Activity itself legitimate cannot be condemned, under the Constitution, though it be carried on in conjunction with the Communist Party (DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353; Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359; and cf. the concurring opinion of Brandeis, J., in Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357). Nor does the statute define and measure the offense against which it is directed. It "sweeps within its ambit" (Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88, 97) a wide range of legitimate activity. So vague and broad an overhanging threat to the exercise of liberties guaranteed under the Constitution will not be sanctioned; speaking technically, due process of law is denied because the statute is indefinite and so applies ambiguously and indifferently to proper forms of behavior.[30]

Even if it were more precise than it is, it would constitute a practical denial of the right of free speech, since its exposition and its implementation in matters affecting expression of ideas are left to enforcement officers.[31] "The statute, as construed and applied, amounts merely to a dragnet which may enmesh anyone * * *" (Herndon v. Lowry, 301 U. S. 242 at 263).

Further, there is missing here the finding of clear and present danger to our institutions, in the absence of which the utterances imputed to petitioner through his associations may not constitutionally be proscribed (Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U. S. 88 at 104-5). The right of free speech "is subject to restriction * * * in order to protect the State from destruction or from serious injury, political, economic or moral." Such a situation arises only where "speech would produce, or is intended to produce, a clear and imminent danger of some substantive evil which the State constitutionally may seek to prevent" (Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, concurring opinion of Brandeis, J. at 373-4). That situation is not presented here, and no finding was made concerning it.

3. Deportation for Membership only, without Proof of Advocacy, Knowledge or Belief, Violates Freedom of Speech and Association.

It is immaterial whether the statute be judged on its face or as applied to the facts of the present case (cf. Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88 and Carlson v. California, 310 U. S. 106). In either event essential elements are lacking: that the petitioner either personally advocated improper doctrines, or believed in them, or at the very least understood the Communist Party so to advocate. There is not even proof that he ever attended a Party meeting. Consequently the statute on its face and as applied goes even further than to attack his right to hold beliefs when unaccompanied by overt action of any nature. It condemns him for the offense of association, and directs his deportation because of an imputation from the bare finding of membership—itself resting on the flimsiest of evidence.[2]

It is fundamental to our conception of due process of law that "guilt is personal" (Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 154 footnote 41 quoting Chief Justice [then Mr.] Hughes). The observation is most apposite in political matters. The dogma of any party varies from time to time. It is unfair to define it even by the considered utterances of the party leaders, assuming the consistency of their writings. It is for these reasons that the Schneiderman case dealt once and for all a death blow to the spurious doctrine of guilt by imputation—even though there the petitioner was secretary of the Party and active in its affairs.

None of the earlier authorities sustains the propriety of such an imputation. In previous cases the accusation has been of personal advocacy of clearly proscribed doctrines (e. g. Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47; Pierce v. United States, 252 U. S. 239; Gitlow v. New York, 268 U. S. 652), or of possession for distribution of proscribed material with knowledge and understanding of its contents (Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131; cf. Taylor v. Mississippi, 319 U. S. 583). In Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, the accused was one of the Party's organizers who remained active in its affairs after knowledge of the unlawful purposes to which it was found to have been dedicated. It was in that case that Mr. Justice Brandeis challenged the proposition that "assembling with a political party, formed to advocate the desirability of a proletarian revolution by mass action at some date necessarily far in the future, is not a right within the protection of the Fourteenth Amendment" (274 U. S. at 379).

[2] Some of the decisions in the Circuit Courts of Appeals have gone very far in authorizing deportation for membership in the Communist Party even where the alien did not subscribe to any proscribed doctrines and undertook only legitimate trade-union activities (e. g. Greco v. Haff, 63 F. (2) 863—C. C. A. 9; Jurgans v. Seaman, 25 F. (2) 35—C. C. A. 8; United States v. Wallis, 268 F. 413, S. D. N. Y.; cf. Murdoch v. Clark, 53 F. (2) 155—C. C. A. 9; compare however opinion of Hutcheson, J. in Strecker v. Kessler, 95 F. (2) 976). All assume the propriety of the imputation in the face of the proof, and none of them treat of the clear and present danger test.

This Court has not passed on the question of whether an alien is deportable for membership in the Communist Party or even any of the T.U.U.L. unions. In the Boric case (habeas corpus dismissed, 4 F. Supp. 965, appeal dismissed 67 F. [2] 1020) certiorari had been granted (290 U. S. 623) but was dismissed on request of the alien's attorney (290 U. S. 709) after the Immigration Service had reversed itself and determined that the alien should not be deported for membership in the National Miner's Union, one of the T.U.U.L. unions.

Petitioner's situation presents that question. He is not personally implicated either by conduct or by belief in any Communist Party doctrine. Bare identification with a proscribed organization—for example by speech-making under Party auspices—cannot constitutionally under the due process clause be deemed culpable (Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359; DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353; cf. Brandeis, J. in Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357; and Schaefer v. U. S., 251 U. S. 466).

There is a further infirmity in the application of the statute. As we have said (p. 47, supra), the recent decisions establish the constitutional impropriety of interdicting any form of conduct, by utterance or otherwise, in the absence of "clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent."[33] There is no claim here of any imminent or serious threat.

[33] Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47 at 52; Herndon v. Lowry, 301 U. S. 242; Hague v. CIO, 307 U. S. 496; Carlson v. California, 310 U. S. 106; Drivers Union v. Meadowmoor Co., 312 U. S. 287; Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252; Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U. S. 568; Bakery Drivers Local v. Wohl, 315 U. S. 769; Martin v. Struthers, 319 U. S. 141; Taylor v. Mississippi, supra; cf. Brandeis, J. in Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357 at pp. 374-8.

The Government is therefore confined to reliance upon the so-called presumption as to the validity of an implied legislative finding that such danger exists (see Gitlow v. New York, 268 U. S. 652). At the very most such a declaration has only presumptive and not conclusive weight (opinion of Brandeis, J., Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, 372; see Hague v. CIO, 307 U. S. 496 at p. 516). It is unavailing, for example, if applied to activity otherwise legitimate even though such activity be carried on under the auspices of a proscribed organization (Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357; Stromberg v. California, 283 U. S. 359; DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353; Fiske v. Kansas, 274 U. S. 380). Actually, as has been repeatedly stated, in matters affecting fundamental rights of free speech, no presumption of constitutionality obtains, and this Court will be "astute to examine the effect of the challenged legislation" (Schneider v. State, 308 U. S. 147 at 161) "* * * in view of the preferred position the freedoms of the First Article occupy, the statute in its present application must fall. It cannot be sustained by any presumption of validity". (Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U. S. 158, 167).

The presumption of legislative validity is in any event not applicable to a statute like the present which must be considered vague and uncertain.[*]

Here is not a statute which has placed a specific class of words "upon an expurgatory index", or indicted "a particular form of doctrine, carefully defined and after such definition denounced on reasonable grounds as fraught with peril to the state" (Herndon v. Georgia, 295 U. S. 441 at 450). Rather, this statute condemns utterances "by reference to the results that they are likely to induce" (Herndon v. Georgia, 295 U. S. 441 at 450); "readily lends itself to harsh and discriminatory enforcement by local prosecuting officials"; and "results in a continuous and pervasive restraint on all freedom of discussion * * *" (Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88 at 97-8). Here the statute condemns the bald fact of membership; it embraces any form of words, not actually defined, which may in the opinion of the local official be deemed to have a proscribed content.

Conclusion

This case presents important constitutional issues involving rights of free speech and association. The searching and fundamental question is presented whether aliens lawfully resident in this country are free to conduct themselves in reliance upon the constitutional guarantees concededly extended both to citizens and to aliens not being subjected to deportation proceedings—not merely the guarantees of speech, but also of religious and political beliefs. The case presents the further question, important under present conditions, whether deportation will be permitted to follow upon presentation of "any" evidence. The conclusion to deport petitioner, an end so persistently sought for a decade by vindictive private groups, has been reached through flagrant abuses of due process of law—both in the basic conception of the present proceedings involving successive hearings, dissolved relationships, and discriminatory legislation and administration; and in the manner in which the issues were tried and determined.

Judge Healy, dissenting below, correctly expressed the epitome of these proceedings:

> "Rather than deport the alien on evidence which would be condemned and proscribed without hesitation by any American court, it would seem a more forthright procedure to do what was proposed in the first place, deport him by legislative resolution 'notwithstanding the provisions of any other law' " (R. 7809).

behalf of the alien to the proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law and order of the presiding inspector. At the time of filing such exceptions, an alien or his counsel or representative shall state whether or not an opportunity for oral argument is desired and shall specify a date for such argument. The time for oral argument shall be fixed not less than 3 days nor more than 18 days after the date on which the exceptions are filed, except in cases where the alien is detained at the expense of the Government in which cases oral argument shall be set not more than 5 days from the date of the filing of exceptions. Part 150—Arrest and Deportation

* * * * * * * *

§150.1 (a) Investigation of aliens reported, or believed, to be subject to deportation. The case of every alien reported, or believed, to be subject to arrest and deportation, shall be thoroughly investigated by such officer as may be designated for that purpose.

(b) Investigations; purpose. The purpose of the investigation shall be to discover whether or not a prima facie case for deportation exists: that is, whether there is credible evidence reasonably establishing (1) that the person investigated is an alien, and (2) that he is subject to deportation.

(c) Investigations; interrogation of aliens under investigation. All statements secured from the alien or any other person during the investigation, which are to be used as evidence, shall be taken down in writing; and the investigating officer shall ask the person interrogated to sign the statement. Whenever such a recorded statement is to be obtained from any person, the investigating officer shall identify himself to such person and the interrogation of that person shall be under oath or affirmation. Whenever a recorded statement is to be obtained from a person under investigation, he shall be warned that any statement made by him may be used as evidence in any subsequent proceeding.

(d) Investigations; refusal to make recorded statement under oath or affirmation. Whenever, in the course of an investigation, admissions or statements are obtained from an alien or statements are made by any other person which indicate that the alien may be subject to arrest and deportation, but the alien or other person refuses to make a recorded statement under oath or affirmation or refuses or is unable to sign the recorded statement, by name or by mark, the investigating officer shall make a report in writing to the officer in charge, setting forth the facts admitted or stated as to the alien's status under the immigration laws. This report may be used in support of an application for a warrant of arrest, when the investigating officer certifies that no other evidence to establish the facts stated in the report can be readily obtained. Statements obtained in confidence may be included in such report, without disclosure of their source, only if the officer in charge certifies that in his belief such statements are trustworthy.

(e) Investigations; anonymous information. Information received from a person whose name or address is not disclosed to the investigation officer or is known or appears to be fictitious shall not be used to support an application for a warrant of arrest. Such information shall be used only as a guide to obtaining competent evidence to support the facts alleged.

(f) Investigations; extent of interrogation. Where an alien under investigation, after reasonable questioning, makes no admissions which bring him within a deportable class, interrogation shall cease, and the investigating officer, if he still believes that the alien is subject to deportation, shall attempt to secure from other sources the necessary evidence.*

150.6 (a) Hearing; when to be accorded under warrant. After the alien has been taken into custody under a warrant of arrest and has been given a reasonable time to arrange for his defense, including, if desired, representation by counsel, and after the formal warrant of arrest has been received, if arrest was accomplished under a telegraphic warrant, the alien shall be granted a hearing to determine whether he is subject to deportation on the charges stated in the warrant of arrest. A hearing under a telegraphic warrant of arrest, and prior to the receipt of the formal warrant of arrest, shall be held only on the request of the alien or his counsel, or when, in the discretion of the officer in charge, it is deemed impracticable to await the receipt of the formal warrant. The alien shall be informed of his right to request a hearing upon a telegraphic warrant prior to the receipt of the formal warrant.

(b) Hearing; presiding inspector to be other than investigating officer. The immigrant inspector assigned to conduct a hearing under a warrant of arrest shall be referred to as the "presiding inspector." The immigrant inspector who conducted the investigation in the case shall not act as presiding inspector unless the alien consents thereto. The presiding inspector shall rule upon all objections to the introduction of evidence or motions made during the course of the hearing. In cases to which no examining inspector has been assigned pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (n) of this section, the presiding inspector shall conduct the interrogation of the alien and the witnesses in behalf of the Government and shall cross-examine the alien's witnesses and present such evidence as is necessary to support the charges in the warrant of arrest. The presiding inspector shall see that all documentary or written evidence is properly identified and introduced into the record as exhibits by number, unless read into the record. He shall further make sure that, subject to the provisions of paragraphs (d), (e), and (g) of this section, the record is a verbatim report of everything that is stated during the course of the hearing, including the oaths administered, the warnings given to the alien or the witnesses, and the rulings on objections, except statements made off the record with the consent of the alien or his counsel.

(c) Hearing; procedure; notice of charges. At the beginning of a hearing under a warrant of arrest, the presiding inspector shall (1) permit the alien to inspect the warrant of arrest and inform him of the charges contained therein by repeating them verbatim and explaining them in language which will clearly convey to the alien the nature of the charges he must answer; (2) apprise the alien, if not represented by counsel, that he may be so represented if he desires and require him to state then and there for the record whether he desires counsel; (3) place the alien under oath or affirmation; (4) advise the alien of the penalty for perjury; and (5) enter of record as an exhibit, identified by number, the formal warrant of arrest, or a decoded copy of the telegraphic warrant if hearing is held thereunder. The presiding inspector shall further advise the alien of the provisions of paragraph (g) of this section concerning applications for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation under the provisions of section 19 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended, in all cases except those in which the alien is charged with being subject to deportation upon one of the grounds mentioned in section 19 (d) of the said Act. A continuance of the hearing for the purpose of obtaining counsel shall not be granted more than once, unless sufficient cause for the granting of more time is shown.

(d) Hearing; representation by counsel. If counsel be selected, he shall be permitted to be present during the hearing, to offer evidence to meet any evidence presented or adduced by the Government, and to cross-examine witnesses called by the Government. Counsel shall be permitted to state his objections succinctly, and they shall be entered on the record. Argument of counsel in support of his objections shall be excluded from the record. Counsel, however, may submit such argument in the form of a brief to accompany the record.

(e) Hearing; where representation by counsel waived. If representation by counsel be waived the alien shall be permitted to offer evidence to meet any evidence presented or adduced by the Government, to cross-examine witnesses called by the Government, and to make objections, which shall be entered on the record, but his arguments in support of the objections may, in the discretion of the presiding inspector be excluded from the record, in which event, however, the alien shall be permitted to submit such arguments in writing to accompany the record.

(f) Hearing; interpreters. Where the services of an interpreter are found necessary in the conduct of a hearing, the interpreter, if not an employee of the Service, shall be sworn to interpret and translate accurately.

(g) Hearing; application for departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation. At any time during the hearing the alien may give notice that he wishes to apply for the privilege of departing from the United States to any country of his choice at his own expense in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation under the provisions of section 19 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended. Such application may be made in the alternative for either type of relief, and a request for the privilege of preexamination may be made in conjunction with a request for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation. The alien's application shall be made in writing under oath or affirmation on Form I-255 accompanied by General Information Form I-55, duly verified, which shall be filed in duplicate with the presiding inspector. The original copy of such application and General Information Form, when received, shall be attached to and made a part of the record. The alien shall be warned that any statements made by him in such application or General Information Form may be used as evidence in any proceeding to determine his right to enter, reenter, pass through or reside in the United States and that false answers to any of the questions in such application or General Information Form may bar him from the relief which he requests. The presiding inspector may in his discretion assist the alien in filling out the General Information Form by explaining the questions to him, or he may ask the alien each question directly and record his answer upon the form, or he may require the alien to fill out the form and submit it to him within a reasonable period of time after the conclusion of the hearing. Explanations during the hearing or the reading of questions from the General Information Form need not be made a part of the record of the hearing.

(h) Hearing; order in which evidence shall be presented. The presiding inspector or examining inspector when interrogating the alien at the hearing, shall develop in order (1) the facts concerning his alienage and (2) the evidence relating to the charges in the warrant of arrest or to any additional charges applicable. If the alien has applied or given notice of intention to apply for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation as provided in §§ 150.6 (g), 150.8 (b), or 150.10 of this Part, the presiding inspector shall inquire thoroughly into all questions relating to the alien's eligibility to the relief requested insofar as such inquiry is necessary to supplement the General Information Form.

(i) Hearing; use of statements or admissions made during investigation. A recorded statement made by the alien

(other than a General Information Form) or by any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statements made during the investigation. An affidavit of an inspector as to the statements made by the alien or any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence, otherwise than in support of the testimony of the inspector, only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statement and the inspector is unavailable to testify in person.

(j) Hearing; record to contain personal history. All records of hearings shall fully set forth, either in the General Information Form if filed or otherwise, the name or names of the alien (correctly spelled); place of the alien's birth; the name of the nearest town of importance to such place of birth; the province and country in which such place is located; the alien's religion; the names and locations of churches or schools he has attended; the last address of the alien in his native country, in the country of which he is a citizen or subject, and in the country in which he has last resided; the country in which he embarked for the United States or for foreign contiguous territory; correct names and addresses and the citizenship or nationality of the alien's nearest relatives residing in the country of his birth, and correct names and addresses of all near relatives residing in the United States.

(k) Hearing; physical or mental disability cases; record to contain medical certificate. The record of the hearing accorded an alien who is suffering from any mental or serious physical disability shall be supplemented by a medical certificate showing (a) whether such alien is in condition to be deported without danger to life or health.

(l) Hearing; additional charges. If, during the hearing, it shall appear to the presiding inspector that there exists a reason additional to those stated in the warrant of arrest why the alien is subject to deportation, he shall notify the alien that such additional charge is lodged against him, and shall proceed with the hearing upon such charge in like manner as on charges contained in a warrant of arrest.

(m) Hearing; alien to be warned of disabilities respecting reentry to the United States. Before the hearing is concluded, the alien shall be warned by the presiding inspector that the Act of March 4, 1929, as amended, provides that any alien who, after arrest and deportation or departure from the United States in pursuance of an order of deportation, enters or attempts to enter the United States, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be liable to imprisonment for not more than two years or a fine of not more than $1,000, or both, such fine and imprisonment, unless such entry or attempted entry is made after one year from the date of such departure or deportation, and the alien, prior to his reembarkation at a place outside of the United States or prior to his application in foreign contiguous territory for admission to the United States, has been granted by the Attorney General permission to reapply for admission to the United States.

(n) Hearing; assignment of examining inspector in addition to presiding inspector; duties of inspectors. The officer in charge of the district in which the hearing is to be held may, in his discretion, assign a second immigrant inspector to act at the hearing as the "examining inspector". The examining inspector shall conduct the actual interrogation of the alien and of the witnesses in behalf of the Government and the examination or cross-examination of the alien's witnesses, present such evidence as is necessary to support the charges in the warrant of arrest, lodge such additional charges as he may find applicable in the manner hereinbefore directed, and, if the alien has applied for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation as provided in §§ 150.6 (g), 150.8 (b), or 150.10 of this Part, inquire thoroughly into the alien's eligibility for such relief. The presiding inspector in such cases, shall exercise all functions not herein assigned to the examining inspector, and he may, in addition, take such part in the interrogation of the alien and witnesses as he may deem necessary to assure that a proper hearing is accorded to the alien.* (Sec. 19, 39 Stat. 889, 54 Stat. 671; 8 U. S. C. 155; Sec. 1, 45 Stat. 1551, 46 Stat. 41, 47 Stat. 166; 8 U. S. C. 180, 181.)

150.7 (a) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; preparation by presiding inspector. As soon as practicable after the hearing has been concluded, the presiding inspector shall prepare a memorandum setting forth a summary of the evidence adduced at the hearing, his proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a proposed order.

(b) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; eligibility for departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation. If the alien has applied for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation as provided in §§ 150.6 (g), 150.8 (b) or 150.10 of this Part, the presiding inspector shall follow his conclusions of law as to the alien's deportability with a discussion of the evidence relating to the alien's eligibility for such relief and of his reasons for his proposed order. He shall then state in numbered paragraphs his proposed findings of fact and his proposed conclusions of law as to the alien's eligibility for the relief requested.

(c) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; proposed order. In the proposed order the presiding inspector shall recommend cancelation of the proceedings, deportation, departure under order of deportation, departure in lieu of deportation, or suspension of deportation in accordance with the judgment he has made on the basis of the evidence adduced at the hearing.

(d) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; service of findings of presiding officer. A copy of the presiding inspector's memorandum containing his discussion of the evidence, proposed findings of fact, proposed conclusions of law and proposed order shall be furnished to the alien or his counsel in all instances by personal service, if practicable, otherwise by registered mail, and a return receipt therefor shall be obtained. A copy also shall be furnished to the examining inspector, if an examining inspector has been assigned to the case.

(e) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; filing of exceptions. The alien or his counsel or representatives shall be allowed by the officer in charge a reasonable time (not to exceed 10 days except on showing of good cause that more time is necessary) in which to file exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the presiding inspector and to submit a brief, if desired. Reasonable extensions of time for the filing of exceptions or brief may be granted in the discretion of the officer in charge. The examining inspector shall promptly file exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions and order of the presiding inspector, or state in writing that he waives the filing of exceptions.*

For the duration of the War which the United States declared existed against Japan on December 8, 1941, and against Germany and Italy on December 11, 1941, alien seamen who entered the United States on or after September 1, 1939, or who shall hereafter enter the United States and against whom deportation proceedings have been or may be instituted shall be allowed a period of 3 days in which to file exceptions or waive the filing of exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Presiding Inspector to submit a brief, if desired, in lieu of the time specified in § 150.7 (e) of this title. If oral argument before the Board of Immigration Appeals is requested in behalf of such alien seamen, the time for such argument shall be fixed not more than 3 days from the day notice was given to the alien of the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Presiding Inspector in lieu of the time specified in § 90.5 of this title.

* Additional charges lodged against appellant at the hearing, based on his brief membership in 1921 in the Industrial Workers of the World, are now immaterial, inasmuch as the Attorney General found that such membership did not render appellant deportable. (R. 100.) The charge of deportability for affiliation with the MWIU is, while new, a by-product of the Communist charge, and is also subject to other legal infirmities.

 This evidence deals with appellant's association with the MWIU during the 1934 strike, the aid offered to appellant's union by the Int'l Labor Defense, the aid given by the Communists in the 1934 strike, appellant's associations with Communists, and appellant's policy of non-discrimination in labor unions by reason of political beliefs. See R. 431-432, n. 77, referred to in the opinion of the court below. (R. 732.)

 One item of evidence introduced by the Government, involving a strike at the North American Aviation Company, related to the year 1941. It is immaterial at this time since the Attorney General found that this evidence did not show either membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party, but only a "sympathetic attitude

HARRY BRIDGES,

Petitioner,

against

I. F. WIXON, as District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice.

ON CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF FOR HARRY BRIDGES

INTRODUCTION

This is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California. Bridges is an alien who entered legally as an immigrant seaman from Australia in 1920, and since then has continuously resided in the United States (R. 791-2).

The Attorney General has ordered Bridges deported on the ground that after entering the United States he "has been" a member and affiliate of the Communist Party of the United States, found to be an organization advocating the violent overthrow of the Government of the United States and that he "has been" an affiliate of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, found, in turn, to be an affiliate of the Communist Party.[1]

The petition for the writ of habeas corpus charges, in broad, that deportation upon the evidence which survived the hearing and upon the procedures used offends due process, and that the statute, whether viewed on its face or in its application, is unconstitutional. The writ was denied by District Judge Welsh (R. 758-9), whose opinion is reported in 49 F. Supp. 292 (R. 723-59).

THE DECISION BELOW

Appeal taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit led to affirmance of the District Court's order by a 3 to 2 decision (R. 7810). Wilbur, J. wrote for the court in an opinion in which Mathews, and Stephens, JJ. concurred. Judge Stephens delivered a separate concurring opinion in which Wilbur and Mathews, JJ. also concurred. Judge Healy dissented in an opinion in which Judge Garrecht concurred. The opinions are reported in 144 F. (2d) 927 (also R. 7770-7809). A petition for rehearing, addressed principally to the views expressed by the majority as to scope of review was denied in an opinion by Judge Stephens[2] (R. 7811-2).

Proceedings for deportation are stayed by order of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit pending the present review (R. 7813).

---

[1] There are also charges and findings that the Communist Party circulated printed matter advocating proscribed doctrines (R. 772, 63, 81, 103). In the view we take of the case these charges and findings call for no special treatment.

[2] Thereafter Judge Stephens, without further application by counsel, amended the text of his opinion on denial of rehearing (R. 7815).

JURISDICTION

The jurisdiction of this Court rests on Section 240(a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925 (28 U. S. C., Sec. 347). This Court has granted its writ of certiorari for review.

STATUTE AND REGULATIONS INVOLVED

Section 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940, so far as relevant to this proceeding, provides:

> Any alien who was at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act, shall upon the warrant of the Attorney General, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided by law. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned in this act, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States. (54 Stat. 673; 8 U. S. C. § 137[g].)

Section 1 of the Act thus referred to, enumerates the following aliens, among others:

> Aliens who * * * are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches: (1) The overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States * * * (3) The unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or (4) sabotage— (41 Stat. 1009; 8 U. S. C. § 137[c]).
> Aliens who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue, or display, any written or printed matter of the character described in paragraph (d). (41 Stat. 1009; 8 U. S. C. § 137[e].)

The text of the statute and of the pertinent Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service appear in the appendix to this Brief (infra, pp. 105-23).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The questions presented, in part, reach deeply into the heart of administrative justice, operating—in the treacherous field of belief and advocacy—under a statutory delegation of far-reaching power over the destiny of more than three and a half million aliens. These are whether, in arriving at factual conclusions upon the evidence in this record, on issues of membership and affiliation in organizations supposed to believe in and advocate forbidden doctrine, the standards have been appropriate and appropriately applied; and whether, from a reading of the procedures here used to arrive at the result, there emerges a record that challenges the standards of procedural due process which have become inseparably welded to "the cherished judicial tradition embodying the basic concepts of fair play".[3]

In other part, the questions presented uncover crucial issues of constitutional law. The statute, said to support deportation here, is challenged as invalid in its construction and application because it offends guarantees of free speech, free assembly and of liberty embodied in the Bill of Rights and bears no reasonable relation to the purpose for which governmental power to deport exists. The Government's contention that an alien may be deported "for utterances, beliefs or associations in which he would be protected from punishment by the First Amendment",[4] strikes decisively at the "area of allowable thought",[5] of allowable assembly and of allowable liberty of three and a half million aliens lawfully resident in this country.

[3] Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1, 22.

STATEMENT

Background of Case

This comes here in the appearance of a proceeding to deport an alien charged with being a member and affiliate of a subversive organization. But its appearance covers over many troublesome facets of American life. These facets have place here because the case against Bridges springs from his emergence more than a decade ago as an important labor leader at a time and on a scene of historic industrial conflict. Hence, to do justice here under the law and the constitution, these must be taken into account. The evidence and the history of this case must be viewed together and in context.

Bridges, prior to 1933, an undistinguished, anonymous longshoreman, is today, as he has been since 1934, an important leader of American labor (R. 84).[6] He first came to authority among workingmen in 1933-4, a turbulent period on the west coast waterfront. In few sectors of American industry were conditions of work as oppressive as here to the basic rights of workers. The "black list," the "shape-up", the "kickback", the "company union", the "speed-up" (R. 234-5),—these suggest the industrial jungle of the west coast waterfront in 1933. In June 1933, Bridges joined the International Longshoremen's Association (I.L.A.), a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; by October 1933 this Union was newly revived and militant; early 1934 saw the organization of a coast committee for maritime workers' unions, and May of that year, the decisive strike (R. 235-7).

> "The I.L.A., the longshoremen's union of which Bridges was an influential member, was a legitimate union, with legitimate grievances. The strike was legitimately directed to removing the grievances. It did. * * * That much is unquestioned." (R. 421).

Bridges emerged from the strike, settled July 31, 1934, "as a recognized leader in the Pacific Coast labor movement" (R. 237).

But Bridges also emerged as the outstanding target of union haters. "He became, so to speak," observed Judge Healy below, "a storm center of bitter industrial controversy, accumulating many enemies and earning the hostility of powerful interests" (R. 7796). For this the documentation is rich.

On February 2, 1935, the District Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service of San Francisco reported:

> "* * * I have maintained a very close contact with the crime prevention detail from a period long antedating the general strike in S. F. until the present date. I, therefore, know that the officers of said detail have made constant effort to obtain evidence that would in any way connect the alien with radical organizations, or show his membership therein, but with the results heretofore set forth" (R. 660).

A 1936 memorandum for the Commissioner of Immigration, signed by the legal advisor to the Service, a member of the Board of Review and the Chief Examiner, says:

> "* * * Mr. Knowles reverts again and again to the case of Harry Bridges, leader of the S. F. Waterfront strike and the general strike of 1934, whose deportation was then and later urgently sought by the interests which he had antagonized.[7] His record has been exhaustively investigated * * *" (R. 659).

Commissioner of Immigration David W. McCormack, testifying on February 28, 1936 before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee,[8] said:

> "The San Francisco Police Department has followed him [Bridges] unremittingly for years, and our men have also."

The result of the first,—"constant effort to obtain evidence", the second,—"exhaustively investigated", the third,—"followed him unremittingly"? Simply, "failed to show that he is in any manner connected with the Communist Party or with any radical organization" (R. 660), "invariably * * * found that he was in the clear, and that his status as an immigrant was entirely regular" (R. 661), "there is no shred of evidence in our files or in the files of the San Francisco Police Department to indicate that he is in any way subject to the provisions of the immigration law because of his radical views".[9] Yet, on the issue of affiliation in this case (tried in 1941), virtually every crucial item of testimony as to Bridges' activity is placed in the period 1933-1936, the very period of these constant, exhaustive and unremitting investigations.

But the "hostility of powerful interests," to use Judge Healy's phrase, was irreconcilable. Its influence persisted. The result,—a warrant in March 1938, seeking Bridges' deportation on the ground that he was a member and affiliate of a proscribed organization.

Because in Kessler v. Strecker; 307 U. S. 22, decided in 1939, this Court held that statutory authority for deportation requires a finding of membership or affiliation at the time of issuance of the warrant, the 1938 warrant was amended to charge that he "was and is" such member or affiliate (R. 503). Before the hearings opened, a resolution was introduced in the House, but failed of passage, to impeach the Secretary of Labor and other officers in her department for supposed conspiracy to refrain from enforcing the deportation law against Bridges.[10]

Beginning in July 1939, hearings on the 1938 warrant were conducted before Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School, as trial examiner. They ran for eleven weeks; twenty witnesses were called by the Government and the testimony taken covers 7724 pages (R. 504). But the testimony of all the witnesses, given, as Dean Landis found, through a succession of perjurers, chronic liars and labor spies, was rejected.[11] He found no credible evidence for a conclusion that Bridges had ever been a member or affiliate of the Communist Party and, therefore, concluded that he was not a member or affiliate at the time the warrant issued. The report of Dean Landis and his proposed findings were accepted by Secretary Perkins and the warrant of arrest was cancelled January 8, 1940. (R. 75).

The "hostility of powerful interests" was still irreconcilable; it joined other like forces in the 1940 Congress. Together they drove first against radical aliens, then against all aliens, and, finally, and logically, against radical citizens.

> "Once Congress had lashed itself into such anger against supposedly subversive aliens, it is small wonder that it made a clean job by throwing citizens into the statute too. Representative T. F. Ford of California remarked during the debate:
> > 'The mood of the House is such that if you brought in the Ten Commandments today and asked for their repeal and attached to that request an alien law, you could get it.'"

Bridges was the unwilling gadfly. in which would be ground for deportation.[13] Witness: a bill actually passed by the House by a vote of 330 to 42 (only to die in Senate committee), splendidly to the point, directing the Attorney General "notwithstanding any other provision of law" forthwith to take into custody and deport Harry Bridges, an Australian, "whose presence in this country the Congress deems hurtful".[14] Finally, witness: a bill that did become law on June 28, 1940, the so-called Alien Registration Act, the first such law since the Alien and Sedition Act of 1798. Among other things (see Chafee, Free Speech in the United States, 1941, pp. 446 et seq.) this law in its Section 23 nullified this Court's decision in the Strecker case (supra) by requiring deportation of an alien who "has at any time" after entry (no longer necessarily at the time of the warrant) been a member or affiliate of a proscribed organization. "* * * after this bill becomes law it will be perfectly clear that any alien * * * if at the time of his entry or at any time thereafter he has been, even for 1 minute a member of such an organization, he shall [13] H. R. 3455, 77th Cong., 1st Sess.

[14] H. R. 9766, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess., Senator Russell, Chairman. Committee on Immigration, received a communication from Attorney General (now Mr. Justice) Jackson which said, in part:

> "If this bill were to become law it would be an historical departure from an unbroken American practice and tradition. It would be the first time that an Act of Congress has singled out a named individual for deportation. It would be the first deportation in which the alien was not even accused either of unlawful entry or of unlawful conduct while here. It would be the first time that Congress, without changing the general law, simply suspended all laws which protect a named individual and directed the Attorney General to disregard them and forthwith to deport 'notwithstanding any other provision of law.' And it would be the first time since the Alien and Sedition Laws a century and a half ago that any law would provide for a deportation without a hearing, or without, indeed, the slightest pretense toward giving the accused what our Nation has long known as 'due process of law'." (S. Rep. No. 2031, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess., p. 9.)

be deported." [15] This provision was quite frankly aimed at Bridges. Said Congressman Hobbs, the author of the bill:[16]

> "It is my joy to announce that this bill will do, in a perfectly legal and constitutional manner, what the bill specifically aimed at the deportation of Harry Bridges seeks to accomplish. This bill changes the law so that the Department of Justice should now have little trouble in deporting Bridges. * * * ". (86 Cong. Rec. 9031).

Accordingly, on February 12, 1941, a new warrant of arrest issued,[17] premised on the June 1940 amendment of the deportation statute. This time, it was said, the issue was altogether different, namely, not Bridges' membership or affiliation at the time of the issuance of the warrant, but his membership or affiliation at any time since entry. There was a cavalier oversight—the sweep of the 1939 Landis hearing had, in truth, embraced the whole period of Bridges' residence in this country.

Hearings were held on the new warrant before former Judge Charles B. Sears. They were of the same magnitude as before Dean Landis. Nineteen witnesses were called by the Government and equivalent time was consumed and testimony taken—2½ months and 7546 pages (R. 143-4). New witnesses there were, but the subject matter of the testimony was substantially the same as that presented before Dean Landis. On the issue of membership, Judge Sears credited only one witness, if we exclude the testimony of two departmental employees concerning the unsworn, unsigned statement of another witness which that witness himself, when sworn, denied having made. On the issue of affiliation he relied primarily upon incidents rooted in Bridges' leadership of the 1934 waterfront strike, substantially all of which had been before Landis. Nevertheless, Judge Sears—different from Dean Landis—drew conclusions bringing Bridges within the statute.

The recommendations of Judge Sears were reviewed by the Board of Immigration Appeals,[18] Department of Justice, and were rejected by unanimous vote of the Board (R. 367-492). The Board delivered a comprehensive written opinion. The warrant of arrest was ordered cancelled and the case closed. Execution of the order was stayed "pending further order of the Attorney General or of this Board" (R. 492).

The Attorney General, without notice that he assumed jurisdiction of the case, and without providing Bridges an opportunity to be heard, reversed the decision and order of the Board and directed his deportation (R. 67-110). A petition for a hearing before him was promptly filed, and was denied by him four days later (R. 679-87).

We refrain from ourselves characterizing this background. We suggest the characterization made by others:

Evidence and Findings

The Attorney General said (R. 90):

> "Judge Sears examines in detail the evidence of fifteen witnesses as bearing on Bridges' membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party. Much of this evidence is rejected as being untrustworthy, contradictory or unreliable. However, the evidence of two witnesses is accepted as showing that Bridges was a member of the party. If this evidence is believed—and Judge Sears believed it—the doubt is decided."

Of these thirteen rejected witnesses, the testimony of six was taken by Judge Sears and the Attorney General as indicating a "sympathetic attitude" towards communists (R. 96-7; 271; 272; 287; 288; 291; 326-7). The remaining seven rejected witnesses had testified to Bridges' supposed attendance at communist meetings; these were characterized by the Attorney General, generally, as "inconclusive, unreliable or contradictory" (R. 97), and by Judge Sears, with particularity, as "not impressive" (R. 295), containing "conflicts" and "not established" (R. 300), "too much chance of mistake in identification" (R. 302), "at times • • • he clearly falsified" and his testimony is "without value"; "I cannot tell where the truth lies in any uncorroborated statement of Cannalonga" (R. 307-8), "inherently improbable", "deep seated and violent bias" (R. 310), "indefinite" and "somewhat self-contradictory" (R.

312) and "not established" (R. 317). As to these last seven witnesses, however, the Attorney General stated (R. 98):

> "Although Judge Sears concluded that their evidence, for one reason or another, did not establish membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party, taken as a whole it cannot, because of its volume, be completely disregarded."

The two witnesses who—out of fifteen—were, according to the Attorney General, "accepted" and found not to be "untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable" (R. 90) were:

(a) Harry Lundeberg, a west coast American Federation of Labor labor leader, by his own admission "a biased witness" (R. 474) bearing "embittered" "enmity" (R. 468, 475) towards Bridges, who testified, in flat contradiction of statements he gave to government investigators on three previous occasions, that in the summer of 1935, six years earlier, Bridges had remarked that he was a member; and

(b) James D. O'Neil, who, on the stand, denied he had previously made an unsworn, unsigned statement to government investigators to the effect that he saw Bridges pasting assessment stamps in a party book. O'Neil's denial on the stand, under oath, was found false, but his prior statement, unsworn, unsigned hearsay, untested by cross-examination, admitted in conceded violation of the "published Departmental Regulations" (R. 95), was found true.

The Board of Immigration Appeals, which, naturally, considered in detail only Lundeberg and O'Neil, rejected these two also. Lundeberg was found "not worthy of belief" (R. 375) on the record. With respect to O'Neil his unsigned, unsworn, out of court statement, which on the stand he denied having made, was found not only "not worthy of belief" (R. 375) on the record, but its admission as affirmative, probative evidence was held a violation of published Departmental regulations and also reversible error on other obvious evidentiary grounds (R. 446).

* * * * *

The pivotal evidence on "affiliation" in the Marine Workers Industrial Union (MWIU) related to Bridges' connection with the "Waterfront Worker", a mimeographed paper published in San Francisco from December 1932 until sometime in 1936, comprising no more than a collection of news items, essays and letters, prepared without headquarters, without consistently supervised policies, and without editing of submitted articles. Its so-called editors, some eight or ten in number, sometimes mailed in their own contributions; the staff did not remain constant, format varied, and publication days were irregular (R. 381 fn., 396, 5766-8, 6130-4, 6163-6, 6173-7). Bridges testified that he had been one of numerous longshoremen who took over this publication in September 1933 after it left MWIU sponsorship, and that this group of longshoremen edited it wholly independently of assistance from the MWIU. This testimony of Bridges is not controverted by any other testimony and there is no claim that the paper's content was subversive. But resting, nevertheless, upon supposed internal inconsistencies in Bridges' testimony and upon inconsistencies thought to appear between that testimony and the character of the paper as revealed by examination of the numbers introduced in evidence, Judge Sears and the Attorney General found that Bridges was an editor of the paper during the period of its conceded sponsorship by the MWIU (December 1932-August 1933); that further, there was no change in affiliation with the MWIU or the Party even after August 1933 until the time of the discontinuance of the paper in 1936; that, consequently, a forbidden affiliation by Bridges is demonstrated.

In contradiction to these findings, the Board of Immigration Appeals found that Bridges became associated with the Waterfront Worker only after it left MWIU sponsorship in September 1933 (R. 402), and that during the period of his association with the paper, it was not involved in any forbidden relationship (R. 420).

The administrative findings of the Attorney General rested also, though in far lesser part, upon other incidents which "in the main * * * cluster about the 1934 West Coast marine strike" (R. 89, 249, 421). The first was evidence of cooperation between the Longshoremen's Union and the MWIU, both of which were on strike; another was Bridges' opposition during the strike to a resolution by his own union "repudiating all Communist Organizations" (R. 250); and the third was the longshoremen's "acceptance of the services of the Western Worker, the Communist Party newspaper, to help the strike by publishing a daily strike bulletin free of charge" (R. 89). Some reliance is also placed upon the fact that in writings of "apologists" for the Communist Party, "its part in the strike is made larger by unsupported insinuation of association with the San Francisco labor leader, Bridges" (R. 425). The Board of Immigration Appeals, on the contrary, found that none of these items amounted to "some substantial evidence pointing toward affiliation or membership" (R. 426), saying:

> "Bridges and his union accepted MWIU support when it was useful to their union ends, helped the MWIU to get members only in order to help themselves, refused MWIU support when in their judgment such support was not helpful to their union ends, and finally, indeed, assisted MWIU only to its grave" (R. 424).

* * * * *

The forbidden membership or affiliation under the statute is not in the Communist Party, as such, but in an organization "that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches the overthrow, by force or violence, of the Government of the United States." The evidence primarily relied upon by Judge Sears and the Attorney General for proving that membership in the Communist Party of the United States was so forbidden consists of excerpts from three documents: The Communist Manifesto of Marx and Engels, published in Germany in 1848; State and Revolution, by Lenin, first published in Russia in 1917; and The Theses and Statutes of the Third International, first published in Russia in 1920 (R. 80-1). The oral evidence of government witnesses and an issue of the magazine "The Communist" dated July, 1921 were accepted as proving that the teachings of these documents were imparted by the Communist Party of the United States to its members (R. 81). Specifically upon this evidence was rested the general finding of the Attorney General that the Communist Party of the United States, from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, has been and is an organization that advocates overthrow, by force or violence, of the Government of the United States (R. 103-4).[19]

Neither the Attorney General, nor Judge Sears had drawn any conclusion or made any finding that advocacy by the Party of supposed forbidden doctrine, at any time during the relevant period, presented a clear and present danger of its realization. Indeed, Judge Sears plainly assumed the remoteness of any such danger. Thus, he concluded (R. 171-2), "the ultimate objective of Communism and of the Communist Party of the United States is that society shall be transformed", and that "this transformation can be accomplished only by the overthrow of all Capitalist Governments, the United States Government being in that category." The quotations Judge Sears relies upon from the oral testimony are of identical purport: The Communist Party policy was "to attract and influence this group of people to adopt their principles and ultimately join with them in the overthrow of the Government by force and violence" (R. 178); "all its aims are predicated to that ultimate aim" (R. 176); "ultimately use the unions for the purpose of accomplishing their ultimate aim and objective * * * which is—the overthrow of the Government of the United States" (R. 176-7).

[19] "Abundant" additional literature was introduced by the Government (R. 174). Of this the Attorney General said it was "to the same effect" (R. 81) as the documents thus referred to, but he made no findings of "underlying facts" with respect to them (cf. Schneiderman v. United States, 220 U. S. 118, 129-30).

* * * * *

The evidence relied upon by Judge Sears and the Attorney General for proving that affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union was a forbidden relationship rested upon (1) this Union's affiliation with the Trade Union Unity League, in turn said to be "controlled directly by the Communist Party" (R. 204-8), and (2) doctrine set forth in the preamble to the membership book of the MWIU (R. 208). A forbidden relationship with this union was not charged in the 1939 hearing and was not charged in the warrant leading to the second hearing; it was first charged in the Government's opening statement in the second hearing (R. 808).

The reason for prior absence of the charge is obvious. The Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization had ruled as long ago as January 1934, in conformity with the considered opinion of the Solicitor of the Department of Labor, that membership in a trade union was not ground for deportation merely because that union was affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League (R. 205). See United States ex rel. Boric v. Marshall, 290 U. S. 709 and R. 3689 et seq. An offer was made (but rejected) to prove that "despite the presence in the country of many thousands of members of such organizations, * * * since January 3, 1934, no proceeding has been instituted * * * to deport any alien for membership in or affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union" or any other union affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League (R. 148-9).

However, Judge Sears, in reliance upon testimony by the witness Honig that the Trade Union Unity League had not dissociated itself from the Red International of Labor Unions in 1933, but had only "ceased to acknowledge its affiliation" (R. 206), rejected the authority of the Service which had governed since January 1934.

The doctrinal material from the MWIU membership book independently relied upon for proof of forbidden doctrine had already been considered by Dean Landis in the first hearing; and this is what he said (R. 604):

> "Its constitution spoke in more radical and revolutionary terms of the necessity of remedying the plight of the worker and of the impossibility of doing so other than by resort to at least economic force. It dwelt upon the class struggle and the iniquities of the bosses in sharper and more bitter terms than the manner in which those subjects are today touched upon in the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. * * * It would be impossible on this record to determine the communistic or non-communistic character of the MWIU."[20]

Opinions of the Courts Below

The District Court:

Judge Welsh said (R. 754-5):

"If the statements of James O'Neil had been the only proof upon which depended the attribution of Communist Party membership and affiliation to petitioner, I would not hesitate to find a complete want of substantial evidence to support the order of deportation on that ground. The statements testified to were unsigned and unsworn and there is no proof that O'Neil was asked to sign or swear thereto, or being asked, refused to do so. Consequently, their introduction in evidence, as affirmative proof of the facts allegedly stated was violative of controlling departmental regulations. (Sec. 150.1 (c) of the Regulations of the Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service). The fact that no objection was made to the use of the statements in evidence on that ground, would not seem to justify their introduction by the Government contrary to its own regulations. Moreover, the statements were pure hearsay. The opportunity of cross-examining O'Neil was entirely lacking because he denied having made any portion of the statements attributed to him which was damaging to petitioner. In my opinion, the requirements of a fair hearing would not have been fulfilled if countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year and will work disastrous results to the toiling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit;

"It, therefore, behooves the representatives of the trade and labor unions of America in convention assembled, to adopt such measures and disseminate such principles among the mechanics and laborers of our country as will permanently unite them to secure the recognition of rights to which they are justly entitled."

> the order of deportation in this case had been based solely on this hearsay evidence, introduced in violation of departmental regulations, and consisting of proof of prior contradictory statements of a witness, offered as affirmative proof of the facts stated, with no opportunity of cross-examination being afforded the alien because the witness denies having made the statements attributed to him."

But the District Court denied the writ because it also found (1) Lundeberg's testimony not "so unsubstantial as to lend no support to a finding based thereon" (R. 756); (2) "other evidence * * * which, while not of itself sufficient to show proscribed membership and affiliation, does tend to lend credence to the testimony of Lundeberg that in 1935 petitioner had admitted to him Communist Party membership" (R. 756); and (3) the conclusion drawn from the evidence that Bridges' association with the Waterfront Worker amounted to a forbidden affiliation was not "unwarranted" (R. 757).

The Circuit Court of Appeals:

The majority opinion (three Judges) found (1) no "abuse of administrative discretion" in basing the finding of membership upon "the statement by Lundeberg that Bridges claimed to be a Communist", although it "falls into a class of evidence that is easily given and hard to refute" and "the danger of mistake * * * is undeniably present" (R. 7789-90), or in accepting the evidence of O'Neil, since there was other evidence (i. e., Lundeberg) to support the finding; and (2) "there is evidence to support the findings of the Attorney General that the Marine Workers' Industrial Union was a part of the Communist Party and that appellant was affiliated with it during the period of the longshoremen's strike",—this notwithstanding the Court's further view, "It may be stated arguendo that appellant, in his management of that strike, was attacking most vicious and inhumane practices toward longshoremen and that he was justified in accepting help from any quarter" (R. 7791, italics supplied).

Circuit Court Judge Stephens delivered a concurring opinion (joined in by Wilbur and Mathews, the other majority Judges) in which he said (R. 7794):

> "In no case have I given the evidence more careful attention than in this one. However, such attention has not left in my mind the pleasurable satisfaction that, barring a very slight possibility of error, the truth has been revealed. Such satisfaction is beside the point here. The simple question this court must answer is: Is there some evidence to sustain the charges? There is."

The dissenting opinion was written by Judge Healy, with concurrence of Judge Garrecht. The opinion observed that the finding of membership "rests upon two items of evidence" (R. 7799), saying as to the first item (Lundeberg), "proof here approaches, if it does not cross, the borderline of inadequacy" (R. 7804), and as to the second item (O'Neil), the admission of his unsworn, unsigned statement was not only incompetent, but "led to a denial of justice" (R. 7807). He concluded (R. 7809):

> "The infirmity of the O'Neil hearsay cuts across all rules. No amount of philosophizing can serve to make a silk purse out of this obvious sow's ear. Rather than deport the alien on evidence which would be condemned and proscribed without hesitation by any American court it would seem a more forthright procedure to do what was proposed in the first place, deport him by legislative resolution 'notwithstanding the provisions of any other law'."

The finding as to affiliation, he found "without substantial evidentiary support" (R. 7803).

The Alien, Bridges

There is no claim here that Bridges believed in forbidden doctrine, or that he advocated forbidden doctrine, or that he understood the Communist Party, an apparently legal political party, to believe in or advocate forbidden doctrine.[21] Deportation of Bridges rests only on the ground that he was found to have been associated, vaguely at some time prior to 1938, with a political party which, unknown to him, then believed in and advocated forbidden doctrine. The supposed forbidden beliefs and teachings of that political party are imputed to him.

And this "guilt by imputation" is fixed not at all because the record is barren of proof of doctrine and principles of action held by Bridges himself. On the contrary, Bridges' own trade union faith emerges from these extended hearings boldly. He sought support for his union in the 1934 strike in any quarter, and he took it where he found it; he found it with the MWIU but also he found it with the Teamsters, the Machinists, the Boilermakers (R. 422, 5785); he found it with the Western Worker (R. 6121-6), but he also found it with the Catholic Leader (R. 6485). He has friends and associates who are communists. He consistently attacked "red baiters" in the belief that they "are usually agents of the bosses and are the enemies of true trade unionists and should be treated with distrust" (R. 1130). He opposed purging unions of members simply because they were communists. Such suppression, he believed "tended too frequently to play into the hands of those who were outwardly battling against communism but inwardly directing their efforts under that facade toward the destruction of the trade-unionist movement" (R. 632-3).

[21] The Government stated (R. 1527):

"* * * we are not charging this witness with believing in the advocacy of the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence.

If it be said, as Judge Sears said and as the Attorney General said, that these associations and expressions of views are "consistent" with the conclusion of forbidden affiliation, it must also be said that, by them, the conclusion is far from proven. But, much more important, they comprise only one segment of the record, which, if taken as a whole, points, with no less persuasion, "the other way" (R. 428). On this point the Board of Immigration Appeals gathered together from the record a valuable summary (R. 4572-7; 4908-9):

> "Bridges supported 'Ham and Eggs', a bitterly fought political issue in California. The Communist Party was opposed to it (6169). In the last election, Bridges supported the position taken by John L. Lewis—contrary to the attitude of the Communist Party (6169). He differed with Walter Stack, a prominent Communist, on the question of affiliating the Maritime Federation of the Pacific (apparently to the C. I. O.). Stack opposed it. Bridges was for it (6163-4). A committee of which Bridges was chairman investigated and rejected, during the 1934 strike, an offer of legal assistance from the International Labor Defense (5917-21), found by the Presiding Inspector (P. I. 71) to be a Communist organization whose 'immediate purpose is to assist and defend Communists who encounter legal difficulties by providing bail, lawyers, and other assistance.' Bridges was opposed to the position of the MWIU that longshoremen, teamsters, engineers and seamen should all be in one union (2578-9). He refused Jackson's invitations to join the MWIU (5754). His stated beliefs are in favor of collaboration between capital and labor (2570) and opposed to the Communist policy of fomenting strikes (P. I. 46; 212; Gov. Ex. 239, pp. 60-3). Bridges believes in arbitration and direct negotiation to settle labor differences with the strike used only as a last resort (5519-23; 5527; 5530-2). That belief, according to other witnesses, has been practiced by Bridges with consistency."

The Attorney General states in perfect logic,—"Because Bridges was a 'good' labor leader, and thought that a communist could be a good labor man, hardly shows that Bridges was not a communist" (R. 101). The same logic should have kept the Attorney General from resting a finding that Bridges was a communist upon evidence that he was a good labor leader and thought a communist could be a good labor man. Bridges' standing as a good labor leader derives, in the beginning, out of his leadership of the 1934 waterfront strike. "I have no doubt", said even Judge Sears, "that Bridges' leadership was good in the eyes of his fellow-unionist. He helped to establish better employment and working conditions as a result of the 1934 strike. He undoubtedly greatly aided the maritime workers in securing higher wages. He is entitled to credit in these respects" (R. 325). Leadership during a strike comprises the leader's conduct of a strike—the associations and transactions necessary in his judgment to win it. And the record suggests no challenge to his judgment on this. Yet, concludes Judge Sears, from these associations and transactions—the very ones that made his leadership "good in the eyes of his fellow unionist"—"I find that Bridges was affiliated with the MWIU and the Communist Party at the time of the 1934 strike" (R. 255-6). And the Attorney General said: "I think this conclusion is not unwarranted" (R. 90).

On Bridges' political faith and convictions, Dean Landis summed up truly (R. 635):

"Bridges' own statement of his political beliefs and disbeliefs is important. It was given not only without reserve but vigorously as dogma and faiths of which the man was proud and which represented in his mind the aims of his existence. It was a fighting apologia that refused to temper itself to the winds of caution. It was an avowal of sympathy with many of the objectives that the Communist Party at times has embraced, an expression of disbelief that the methods they wished to employ were as revolutionary as they generally seem, but it was unequivocal in its distrust of tactics other than those that are generally included within the concept of democratic methods. That Bridges' aims are energetically radical may be admitted, but the proof fails to establish that the methods he seeks to employ to realize them are other than those that the framework of democratic and constitutional government permits."

Nature of Deportation

We defer discussion of relevant legal and constitutional doctrine, and its springs. Here we would only suggest the considerations of policy that must mould that doctrine.

It has been said, and there is no balder fiction, that deportation is a mere executive civil proceeding to determine whether an alien has forfeited the privilege of residence in this country. In the beguiling words of Judge Sears (R. 146):

> "Should he [Bridges] be found to come within a deportable class, he is not thereby adjudged in such a proceeding as this to have been guilty of criminal or even reprehensible conduct. A determination against him and a finding of ground for deportability simply means that he is found to have violated a condition of the privilege of remaining in this country, which he has been enjoying." (Italics supplied.)

Hence, it is said, many procedural safeguards included in judicial due process, civil or criminal, are not available. Hence, it is said, findings of fact, if supported by any evidence, are conclusive on the courts. Hence, it is said, the great substantive guarantees of the Bill of Rights are not available.

But life speaks differently. Bridges has lived here twenty-five years,—all his adult life. His ties, his friends, his work,—his roots are here. In the eyes of many good citizens, he has played a useful and important role in American progress. Now he is confronted with final separation from his family, his friends and his livelihood, with loss of all that makes life worth living, with banishment and exile. He is to be uprooted. This—because at some indefinite time in the indefinite past, he is found to have been associated with an organization holding supposed forbidden beliefs. In the determination of issues of belief, this Court has said, "proof is treacherous and objective judgment, even by the most disciplined minds, precarious." (Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, 675).

Surely, then, there is gravity in the decision, gravity of no less dimension than is implied in an attempt to reduce a person to the status of alien from that of citizen, and, certainly, gravity of no less dimension than is implied in the imposition of a fine or a jail sentence. There are over three million five hundred thousand aliens in this country, making up more than 3% of the total population (16th Census, 1940, Vol. 2, Part 1, p. 10). It is a fair presumption that many of these have been in this country for years, if not for the greater part of their lives. These people are an integral part of our population. They have established themselves and their families here; this is home to them.

We owe obligations to the alien lawfully admitted which the foreigner who has not been admitted cannot claim, and we exact duties from the alien which we cannot from the unadmitted foreigner. The resident alien is subject to all our laws and, equally with the citizen, is subject to military service in defense of this country. (Selective Training and Service Act; 50 U. S. C. A., Sec. 303).

Is there not strong reason here for full play to "the presuppositions of the democratic faith"? Or shall the illusory promise of an easy formula in deportation cases —"mere executive civil proceeding"—replace the duty of exercising judgment and of searching for solid proof?

Assignments of Error

These will be discussed immediately hereafter. In view of that discussion, they will not be repeated here.

For an itemized list of the assignments of error see R. 7747-62.[23]

ARGUMENT

The argument will be under the following heads—representing the three major issues in the case:

I. Deportation upon this evidence offends due process of law.

II. Deportation upon these procedures offends due process of law.

III. The statute as construed and applied offends the Bill of Rights and bears no reasonable relation to the purpose for which governmental power to deport exists.

I

DEPORTATION UPON THIS EVIDENCE OFFENDS DUE PROCESS OF LAW.

"* * * facts do not assess themselves * * * the decisive element is the attitude appropriate for judgment." Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, 666-7.

What, then, is the attitude appropriate for judgment here? The majority below joined in this formulation of its attitude appropriate for judgment: "The single question this court must answer is: Is there some evidence to sustain the charges? There is" (R. 7794). On denial of the petition for rehearing the majority below amplified this formulation as follows (R. 7812):

> "Where there is evidence, more than a scintilla and not unbelievable upon its face, the administrative head must resolve the doubts as to its credibility."

The attitude appropriate for judgment adopted by the District Court Judge is reflected in this phrase: "the testimony" is not "so unsubstantial as to lend no support to a finding based thereon" (R. 756).

We contend that these are not attitudes appropriate for judgment here.

This is not a review of a judicial proceeding. Nor is it a statutory review from an administrative order. There happens to be no statutory procedure for judicial review from the Attorney General's order of deportation. But in the language of Mr. Justice Stone, speaking for the Court, in Lloyd Sabaudo Societa v. Elting, 287 U. S. 329, 335-336:

"The action of the Secretary is, nevertheless, subject to some judicial review, as the court below held. The courts may determine whether his action is within his statutory authority, compare Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 1, Gegiow v. Uhl, 239 U. S. 3, whether there was any evidence before him to support his determination, compare Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, and whether the procedure he adopted in making it satisfied elementary standards of fairness and reasonableness, essential to the due administration of the summary proceeding which Congress has authorized. Compare Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454; Tang Tun v. Edsell, 223 U. S. 673; Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 12; The Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86, 100, 101; see United States ex rel. Iorio v. Day, 34 F. (2d) 929; Whitfield v. Hanges, 222 Fed. 745."

It will be noted that the Chief Justice relied upon no older case than Vajtauer, decided in 1927, to support his determination as to sufficiency of evidence. The reason is that the Elting and Vajtauer cases mark an historic development in the judicial doctrine of this Court. One need only compare them, for example, with Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, and Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, which turned on a conception of the immigration agencies as independent tribunals possessing virtually final authority with respect to all matters of construction and application of the immigration laws.

Thus, the fact now is that, notwithstanding the lack of statutory review in deportation, the powers attributed to its agencies by Mr. Justice Stone in the Elting case "are not materially greater than the powers admittedly possessed by many administrative agencies over essential interests of citizens. And the restraints to which they are declared to be subject are not materially less." Report,

The Secretary of Labor's Committee on Administrative Procedure, 1940, page 45.

And the Elting case viewed in this context is not static. It is to be read as in conformity with today's standards of judicial review of administrative findings of fact. These are clear. This Court must be satisfied that substantial evidence, of a quality to carry conviction to a reasonable mind, supports the crucial findings. We confine quotation to extracts from one decision in this Court and one decision in the Circuit Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit.

> "Section 10(e) of the Act provides: '* * * The findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive.' But as has often been pointed out, this, as in the case of other findings by administrative bodies, means evidence which is substantial, that is, affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can be reasonably inferred * * * Substantial evidence is more than a scintilla, and must do more than create a suspicion of the existence of the fact to be established. 'It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion,' * * * and it must be enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the conclusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for the jury." (NLRB v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., 306 U. S. 292, 299-300.)

> "It is suggested that this court should accept the findings of the Board; that contradictions, inconsistencies, and erroneous inferences are immune from criticism or attack by Section 10(e) of the Act * * * 29 USCA §160(e), which provides that 'the findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive'. But the courts have not construed this language as compelling the acceptance of findings arrived at by accepting part of the evidence and totally disregarding other convincing evidence • • •

"'Substantial evidence' means more than a mere scintilla. It is of substantial and relevant consequence and excludes vague, uncertain, or irrelevant matter. It implies a quality of proof which induces conviction and makes an impression on reason. It means that the one weighing the evidence takes into consideration all the facts presented to him and all reasonable inferences, deductions and conclusions to be drawn therefrom and, considering them in their entirety and relation to each other, arrives at a fixed conviction.

"'The rule of substantial evidence is one of fundamental importance and is the dividing line between law and arbitrary power. Testimony is the raw material out of which we construct truth and, unless all of it is weighed in its totality, errors will result and great injustices be wrought.' National Labor Relations Board v. Thompson Products Inc., 6 Cir., 97 Fed. (2d) 13, 15." (NLRB v. Union Pacific Stages, 99 Fed. (2d) 153, 177 (CCA 9).)

For deportation cases in accord, see: Strecker v. Kessler, 95 F. (2d) 976 (C. C. A. 5), affirmed on another ground, 307 U. S. 22, 34; Sullivan ex rel. Jee Gim Bew v. Tillinghast, 28 F. (2d) 612 (C. C. A. 1st, 1928); Mason ex rel. Lee Wing You v. Tillinghast, 27 F. (2d) 580 (C. C. A. 1st 1928); Lisotta v. United States, 3 F. (2d) 108 (C. C. A. 9th, 1916); Whitfield v. Hanges, 222 Fed. 745; Ex Parte Radivoeff, 278 F. 227, 231. See 2 Monthly Review, Immigration and Naturalization Service, 87, Jan. 1945.

A consideration which frequently comes into play in a determination to give approval to administrative findings of fact, namely, the assumed expertness and special competence of the fact-finder, operates here only to justify rejection of the administrator's action. The two fact-finders—Judge Sears and the Attorney General, who stand behind the deportation order,—claim neither expertness nor special competence in the field of administration of the deportation statutes. The relevant expertness and competency here may be presumed to lie only with the Board of Immigration Appeals because the Departmental Regulations have assigned to the Board the statutory authority of the Attorney General to issue orders of deportation and to order cancellation of warrants. Thus the fact here is that the only administrative body that may justly be said to have applied especially informed judgment and expertise to the record here has made findings which call for cancellation of the warrant.

Nor may we forget that this is a deportation case and its pivotal issue is imputed belief. Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, and Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, involve cancellation of citizenship,—but what were some of the pervading grounds for their rule that the evidence must be "so clear, unequivocal and convincing" as not to leave "the issue in doubt"? These: An attempt to reduce a person to the status of alien from that of citizen is one of utmost "gravity"; revocation of citizenship presents a different problem from denial of citizenship, for "new relationships and new interests flow once citizenship has been granted. All that should not be undone unless the proof is compelling that that which was granted was obtained in defiance of Congressional authority"; finally, when denaturalization turns on issues of belief, especially imputed belief (See Schneiderman, supra at p. 154) "proof is treacherous and objective judgment, even by the most disciplined minds, precarious. That is why denaturalization on this score calls for weighty proof * * *" (Baumgartner supra at p. 675).

'Need we transpose these considerations—tendered in a denaturalization case—to the case at bar to show that any difference in their application to the case at bar is surely not measurable? Deportation, no less than denaturalization, is a fate of utmost "gravity". ' President Madison, a framer of our Constitution said (4 Elliot, Deb. 555):

> "If the banishment of an alien from a country into which he has been invited as the asylum most auspicious to his happiness,—a country where he may have formed the most tender connections; where he may have invested his entire property, and acquired property of the real and permanent, as well as of the movable and temporary kind; where he enjoys, under the laws, a greater share of the blessings of personal security, and personal liberty, than he can elsewhere hope for; * * *—if a banishment of this sort be not a punishment, and among the severest of punishments, it will be difficult to imagine a doom to which the name can be applied."

Just as denaturalization presents a different problem from naturalization, so deportation presents a different problem from exclusion. Deportation, no less than denaturalization, seeks to undo the "new relationships and new interests" which flow from prolonged residence in this country. Finally, this case, like Baumgartner turns on issues of belief and, like Schneiderman, on issues of imputed belief. In this case, no less than in those, "proof is treacherous and objective judgment, even by the most disciplined minds, precarious".

But whether the standards be "solid proof which leaves no troubling doubt" or "weighty proof" or "clear, unequivocal and convincing" proof or "sufficiently compelling proof" (as in denaturalization), or "substantial evidence", it has not been applied. Indeed, the court below, here, unlike the court below in Baumgartner, did not even profess to apply it. On this ground alone, its decision must be upset. The situation would, of course, be no different even if the court below had professed to apply it, for ascertainment by the lower courts that an appropriate standard of proof has been satisfied on the whole record is also open to review here (Baumgartner v. U. S. supra, 671.)

We turn then to a consideration of the evidence "in the context in which that evidence is to be judged". And first, as to alleged membership of Bridges in the Communist Party, upon which the Government acknowledged below, this deportation "order rests basically" (Government Brief, below, p. 23):

Out of fifteen witnesses, said the Attorney General in adopting the report of Judge Sears, "the evidence of two witnesses is accepted as showing that Bridges was a member of the Party" and "much" of the rest "rejected" as being "untrustworthy, contradictory or unreliable" (R. 90). The surviving testimony was of O'Neil and Lundeberg. We deal first with O'Neil, characterized by the Board of Immigration Appeals and by Judge Healy below as "a theatrical, sensation loving braggart" (R. 7804).

Counsel for the Service read to O'Neil, in the course of his direct examination, a statement alleged to have been made by him to agents of the F. B. I. in an interview on October 7, 1940. The material parts of the statement read into the record are (R. 3109-13):

> "On another occasion I walked into Bridges' office, it always being my privilege to do so after first having assured myself that he was alone, and there on his desk was a new Party book, which had just been issued and into which Bridges was putting assessment stamps.

This was about two o'clock in the afternoon in Bridges' office in the Balboa Building, 593 Market Street, Room 509, in 1937. I expressed amazement that he was doing this openly with the book in plain view on top of his desk; however, he nonchalantly continued to put the stamps in place and then returned the book to his pocket. I knew this was a Communist Party book because I had one myself and it was just like it. It was the general practice to pay your dues to the Communist Party dues collector and, in return, to receive stamps which he tore off from a block and which you inserted in your book at your leisure. There is no doubt in my mind but what that was Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party.

* * * * *

"On several occasions Bridges reminded me that I had not been attending [Communist] Party meetings and asked me, 'What's the score?'.

* * * * * *

"It is my belief that Bridges never at any time attended any Communist Party meetings. He might have met with one or two of the trusted and highest officials of the Party, as that would be all that would be necessary to conduct any business he had with them.

"Bridges never stated to me that he was a member of the Communist Party. It was always tacitly understood and assumed that such was the case * * *

* * * * *

"* * * Bridges said that fraction meetings had been conducted in the room [Bridges' hotel room]. * * * By this he meant top fraction meetings of the Communist Party. * * *"

O'Neil on the stand, under oath, denied making and denied the truth of all the statements above quoted, with the exception of the sentence: "It is my belief that Bridges never at any time attended any Communist Party meetings" (R. 3024).

Gertrude Segerstrom, an F. B. I. stenographer, testified as to the contents of the statement above quoted, which, she said, she took on dictation from O'Neil in the presence of two F. B. I. agents (R. 3103).

Major Schofield, head of the Service, testified that the following occurred in an interview at the F. B. I. office on April 22, 1941, a few days before O'Neil testified, in the presence of himself and three other representatives of the Department (R. 437):

> "He [O'Neil] was asked whether he had been a Communist and stated he had been a member of the Communist Party and had been active in its behalf here in San Francisco. He was asked whether or not Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, and he said he was. He then said and volunteered this: That he, O'Neil, so far as he knew, was the only man who had visual evidence of the fact that Bridges was a Communist. We asked him what he meant by that, and he said that on one occasion he had actually seen Bridges pasting dues stamps in Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party."

It was found that, notwithstanding O'Neil's denial under oath, these statements were made to the stenographer Segerstrom and to Major Schofield. And it was also found by Judge Sears (who admitted the statements for impeachment only—R. 5256-7)[23] that the testimony of Seger-

[23] To an objection that the Government was improperly impeaching its own witness, the Inspector said: "I will take it. I think they may impeach their own witness. Of course, it isn't original proof of the matter" (R. 5256-7). Because the Inspector later indicated some uncertainty on the point, Bridges' denial was entered to protect him against the possible use of O'Neil's statement as affirmative evidence (R. 5880-3).

strom and Schofield proved O'Neil's prior statements and they constituted affirmative probative evidence in support of the Service's case. Judge Sears considered the O'Neil prior statements as "substantive proof", as "substantial evidence" (R. 269), as "truth" (R. 271) and found "in accordance therewith that Bridges was in 1937, a member of the Communist Party" (R. 271).

The Board of Immigration Appeals held that such use of the statements was forbidden (1) as improper under the published Departmental Regulations (R. 446), (2) as improper because the alien had no opportunity to cross examine as to the truth of the statements denied and so was deprived of "cross examination on highly material evidence at the very heart of the case" (R. 452-3), adding in support of this view (R. 458-9):

> "Some hearsay is undoubtedly permissible in deportation proceedings, to what extent and under what circumstances we need not, and cannot decide here, for the nature of the subject allows of no rule of thumb. Suffice it as to the state of the authorities that no authority is cited, and we find none, that sanctions the reception in administrative deportation proceedings of unsworn, prior contradictory statements the making of which is denied on the stand."

and (3) "in any event, those statements are, on the record here, not credible, and we so find" (R. 462).

The Attorney General rejected the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals and accepted the recommendation of Judge Sears. Thus, prior unsworn, unsigned hearsay, untested by cross examination, admitted in avowed violation of the published Departmental Regulations, was found true and was found "substantive", "substantial" proof, but denial on the stand under oath by the alleged maker of the statements that he ever did make them, was found false.

But the Attorney General was wrong on his ground and on any grounds. The District Court below has already said so with all the vigor at its command (R. 754, quoted supra, pp. 20-1). The majority below did not dispute the District Court's view; and as to the dissenting Judges in the court below, one sentence at least from Judge Healy's opinion justifies repeating:

> "Rather than deport the alien on evidence which would be condemned and proscribed without hesitation by any American court it would seem a more forthright procedure to do what was proposed in the first place, deport him by legislative resolution 'notwithstanding the provisions of any other law'."

The published Regulations of the Department are reprinted in the Appendix to this Brief.

The reading of these provisions by the Board of Immigration Appeals is as authoritative as it is unassailable (R. 449-50):

> "It is clear from the provisions of Section 150.1(c)(d) that the investigating officer in obtaining a 'recorded statement,' that is, a statement 'taken down in writing,' must seek by specific request to obtain the statement over the signature of the maker and by interrogation under oath (or affirmation). When Section 150.6(i)(c)(d) is fairly read in conjunction with Section 150.1 it is such a 'recorded statement,' so safeguarded, that is permitted as evidence under Section 150.6(i) when the maker of the statement gives contradictory testimony on the stand. The O'Neil statement testified to by Major Schofield was received as an oral statement. Neither the O'Neil statement to Major Schofield, nor the O'Neil statement to Segerstrom was by interrogation under oath; neither was signed by O'Neil; and in neither case is there any showing that O'Neil was asked to swear and sign, or that being asked he refused to swear and sign (2430-1)."

The Attorney General himself agreed with the Board's reading of the Regulations, saying (R. 95):

> "Had the alien raised the question at the time of the hearing, compliance with the Departmental Regulations would have been obligatory and a deliberate rejection of a request to exclude the testimony would have rendered appropriate the objections now raised by the Board."

However, he also said (R. 95-6):

> "No objection having been raised by the alien throughout the hearing, however, he waived the right to object on the technical ground that the statement was not taken in accordance with the rules."[23a]

One answer to the Attorney General's point of waiver is that the defect was more than "technical." Another answer is that even had this specific defect been called to Judge Sears' attention, obviously it could not have been cured. Again, Judge Sears was not unaware of objections on the broadest grounds by the alien's counsel. He said in his report (R. 267):

> "It was strenuously urged by Counsel for the alien at the hearing, and similar argument is made in the alien's brief, that the admission of the statement taken by Mrs. Segerstrom was error and that the statement itself, under the circumstances, was without probative value, and that the testimony of Major Schofield was erroneously received and was without probative value."

Finally, the Board of Appeals, the original deciding body (as distinguished from Judge Sears, merely a recommending body) was made aware of the specific objection. And so, obviously, was the Attorney General. Thus, the conclusive answer to the point of waiver raised by the Attorney General is the one given by Judge Healy, below (R. 780-6):

> "The rules, adopted as they were under authority and direction of law, are part and parcel of the regulations 'governing the arrest and deportation of aliens'. They were disregarded here. The Attorney General so concedes in his decision. He excused their violation on the specious plea that they 'were not called to the attention of the presiding inspector.' However, they were called to the Attorney General's attention. One is left to wonder on what ground that high official condoned his own disregard of them. Upon him rested the inescapable responsibility of accepting or rejecting the evidence, as of ordering the deportation. The rules were obligatory on him if on anybody. To toss them aside for reasons deemed expedient in a particular case amounts to the substitution of a government of men for a government of law."

Disregard of published rules of the Service is error in a fundamental sense. These rules "in so far as consistent with law, are themselves law, and, be it noted, law for government—for the department—as well as for aliens. In connection with the general law of the land, the rules constitute for aliens in deportation proceedings the due process of law guaranteed by the federal Constitution to all men" (Ex Parte Radivoeff, 278 F. 227, 229). In Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, 155, Brandeis, J., wrote:

> "It may be assumed that one under investigation with a view to deportation is legally entitled to insist upon the observance of rules promulgated by the Secretary

[of Labor] pursuant to law" (citing many authorities in a footnote).[24]

The Attorney General would not agree with the Board of Appeals "that the fundamental requirement of a fair hearing required that the statements be excluded," saying: "They were not submitted in the absence of the witness but only after he had taken the stand, admitted that he had made them, said he had spoken the truth when he made them, and denied merely that he had been correctly reported" (R. 94). In all deference, the only accurate assertion in this extract is the first clause. O'Neil did not admit he made the statements; he strongly denied he made them (R. 3002-3). O'Neil did not say he had spoken the truth when he made them; he said that the statements he did make to the investigators were the truth, but that the proferred statements were not the statements he made to them and they were not the truth (R. 451). O'Neil's testimony that the statements made to the Government agents were the truth was given on the basis of the twice repeated explanations of Judge Sears that such testimony would not mean the statements that the Service claimed he made (R. 3080-1; 451). As the Board of Immigration Appeals said (R. 451): "O'Neil swore to 'Nay!' No process of reasoning can make it an oath to 'Yea'!" Finally, O'Neil did not deny "merely that he had been correctly reported," but as the Board of Appeals said: "O'Neil undeviatingly denied making to Government agents any of the material statements claimed by the Service" (R. 451).

Also, apart from the published Rules of the Department, the O'Neil statements are incompetent as affirmative evidence. Certainly, this would be so in judicial proceedings.[25] It is no less so in administrative proceedings[26] and, to the precise point, in deportation proceedings.[27]

O'Neil's denial on the stand that he had made the material parts of the statements prevented the alien from protecting himself by cross-examining as to the truth of the statements denied. As the Board of Appeals said (R. 452-3; 459-61):

> "* * * in the face of a completely favorable denial of the making of the statements, the Alien had no opportunity to cross-examine as to the truth of the statements denied. To receive the statements as affirmative evidence would deprive the Alien of cross-examination on highly material evidence at the very heart of the case.

> "The O'Neil prior statements were obviously highly material. They were equally unreliable. And there was no effective protection for the Alien. With the factors of high unreliability and lack of protection present, the materiality of the statements all the more requires their exclusion as evidence."

The authorities are uniform that deprivation of cross-examination in deportation cases constitutes reversible error, rendering the hearing unfair.[28]

On the issue of substantial basis for credibility of these statements, assuming them to be admissible, we rely upon the treatment of the point in the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 462-8).[29]

---

[28] See cases cited in fn. 27 supra and Gonzales v. Zurbrick, 45 Fed. (2d) 934. See also Rule § 150.6 (d) providing that counsel for the alien be permitted "to cross-examine witnesses called by the Government."

[29] The Board's finding against O'Neil's credibility is partly based on the inherent improbabilities (R. 462-5) and the internal inconsistencies (R. 466) of the very statement upon which Government reliance is placed. The inconsistencies include the following: (1) While the statement says that O'Neil saw a Communist Party membership book in Bridges' possession, that he saw the name in the book, and that it was "Bridges' right, his own name", elsewhere the statement says that it was not Bridges' name, but the name of Dorgan; and still elsewhere that O'Neil did not see the name in the book at all; (2) While in one part of the statement O'Neil says that he attended at least five Communist Party meetings with Bridges, that Bridges held top fraction Party meetings in his room, and that Bridges reminded O'Neil that he (O'Neil) was not attending Party meetings, elsewhere in the same statement O'Neil says: "Bridges never at any time attended any Communist Party meetings"; (3) While the statement says that Bridges discussed Bridges' membership in the Party with O'Neil, it also says that Bridges never stated to O'Neil that he (Bridges) was a member of the Party (R. 466).

The O'Neil incident involves more than the admission of incompetent evidence or of evidence taken in defiance of published Departmental Regulations. The error, in any event, went to the substance of a fair trial.

It is not difficult to see why this is so. Out of this entire record of some 7500 pages, this was the only item of evidence on which Judge Sears was content to rest a specific finding of membership. He said (R. 271):

> "* * *I conclude that it is established that the narrations contained in O'Neil's statement to Mrs. Segerstrom and in his conversation in the presence of Major Schofield are the truth, and I find the fact that in accordance therewith that Bridges was in 1937, a member of the Communist Party" (italics supplied).

The Attorney General chose a different form of expression, but only a slightly expanded content (since he bracketed Lundeberg with O'Neil), saying: "If this evidence is believed * * * the doubt is decided" (R. 90).

O'Neil, "the theatrical, sensation loving braggart," was the rock of the entire case. Can there be any question of the pervading quality of this error? Judge Healy below, in writing for the dissenting Judges, said (R. 7807):

> "The real inquiry is whether the practice was 'such as might have led to a denial of justice'. In this instance the remaining showing of party membership was of so flimsy a character as to lead the Appeals Board to reject it entirely. The Attorney General's acceptance of the O'Neil hearsay as probative evidence might easily have served to tip the scale. I am satisfied it did so."

Once credited, the O'Neil statement could not fail to excite repercussions far beyond its immediate purport, affecting the view of the trier of the facts upon the other evidence offered and in relation to Bridges' own testimony. Recall the nature of the statements. He, O'Neil, was "the only man" who "had actually seen Bridges pasting dues stamps in Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party." He, O'Neil, "was the only man who had visual evidence of the fact that Bridges was a Communist" (R. 437). If this is error it is not "mere error"; it is deadly poison to the high concept of fair hearing. "If it is true of juries it is not wholly untrue of judges that they too may be 'impregnated with the environing atmosphere' (Mr. Justice Holmes, in Frank v. Mangum, 237 U. S. 309, 349)". Mr. Justice Frankfurter, in Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252, 300.

Harry Lundeberg's is the remaining direct testimony on membership which survived here. Its net content is an alleged admission of membership made by Bridges to Lundeberg in 1935.

Lundeberg occupies a position in the American Federation of Labor somewhat comparable to that occupied by Bridges in the Congress of Industrial Organizations (R. 468). The two men disagreed as early as October, 1935 on fundamental union policy and their differences long ago deepened into bitter enmity (R. 259, 475). On the stand, as Judge Sears noted, Lundeberg "characterized Bridges' labor record with a damaging phrase, saying, 'It stinks'," and expressed the view that the trade union movement would be better off without him (R. 259).

Lundeberg testified that, following a casual invitation by Bridges "to come up to have dinner with him and a friend of his" (R. 7338; 7265), he did so sometime in the summer of 1935; and that during that evening, he had a conversation with Bridges and the friend, who told Lundeberg his real name was Darcy, a Communist. The examination of Lundeberg by counsel for the Service was fairly presented in the opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 470-2):

> "'Q. Will you relate all the conversation that you had in Bridges' home at that time with Darcy, yourself and Bridges?
> A. Well, I don't remember the details. We talked about various things on the waterfront, and unions, and so forth. Darcy asked lots of questions. It was a general conversation.'

After a few intervening questions on another point, counsel returned to the subject with a specific question as to whether Darcy asked Lundeberg 'to do anything.' This elicited the information that Darcy asked Lundeberg to join the Communist Party, and stated that the Party would aid him by giving him support (7007). A further specific question as to whether Darcy said 'anything about Bridges' being a member of the Communist Party in Bridges' presence' brought forth the response: 'He mentioned several people who was a member of the Communist Party' (7008). Counsel persisted. The record continues:

> 'Q. What did he [Darcy] say about Bridges?
>
> A. Well, he said he was a member of the Communist Party.
>
> Q. What did Bridges say?
>
> A. Well, he says, "You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist Party if you join."
> Q. Did Bridges join Sam Darcy in urging you to join the Communist Party?

A. No. Sam Darcy is the guy—Sam Darcy was the guy who wanted me to join the Party' (7008).

Lundeberg went on to state that Darcy promised him lots of publicity and to 'make a great labor leader out of' him. Lundeberg replied that he wasn't interested in joining the Party, that he had always belonged to a trade union, and couldn't see why he should belong to the Party (7008-9). After an admonition by the Presiding Inspector that the examination was leading and to be very careful, Mr. Del Guercio, Service Counsel, continued his direct examination (7009-10):

'By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was anything else said by either Sam Darcy or by Harry Bridges at that time?

A. Well, I can't remember. There was a general conversation.

Q. Now, did you join the Communist Party?

A. I should say not.

Q. Can you recall at this time anything else that Bridges may have said in the presence of Darcy and yourself at that time?

Presiding Inspector: That he did say.

A. I can't remember the details. It was a general conversation.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Generally, in substance, what did Bridges say? We don't expect you, of course, to remember the exact words or the—

Presiding Inspector: Have you given the substance as far as you remember it?

The Witness: Well, the substance was, as I told you, that Darcy asked me to join the Communist Party and Bridges says, "You don't have to be afraid because I am one too," and the old stuff, and the conversation was friendly all the way through, and I just laughed at it and forgot about it.' "

Bridges testified that Lundeberg was at his home for dinner once, but not Darcy (R. 7576-7); and denied any admission of membership or advice to Lundeberg to join the Party (R. 7709-10).

The meagerness of Lundeberg's contribution to the Department's case needs little pointing.[30]

(a) He gave three successive growing versions of the conversation—all on direct examination by counsel for the Service. The first version touches Bridges not at all. The second touches him slightly. Only in the third version, given in response to highly suggestive, leading questions on direct, and after admonition by the Presiding Inspector to examining counsel that the examination was leading and to be very careful (R. 7267), does Lundeberg say that Bridges said, "You don't have to be afraid because I am one too", adding "I just laughed at it and forgot about it".[31]

---

[30] The Attorney General drew against Bridges an inference from his failure to call Mrs. Bridges and Norma Perry as witnesses (R. 91). But as the Board points out (R. 473-4 fn. 105), the Government's burden of proof may not thus be transferred to the alien. Moreover, since Mrs. Bridges and Norma Perry were not present at the conversation in which the alleged admission of membership was made, they cannot even be presumed to have had material testimony to offer (cf. Mammoth Oil Co. v. United States, 275 U. S. 13, 51-3, and other cases cited (R. 474 fn. 105). As to Norma Perry, the record also indicates her hostility to Bridges (R. 6447-8), and if any inference was appropriate, it was, as suggested by the Board, against the Government.

[31] This last sentence is highly significant. A comment of precisely similar purport made by witness Kelley (R. 317-18) led Judge Sears to conclude: "Inasmuch as it did not impress Kelley as serious at the time, I hold it too equivocal to base a finding of membership or affiliation thereon". Compare the similar effect of such statements upon weight of testimony in the decision of Dean Landis (R. 602). He said: "It is difficult to take seriously hearsay testimony that Detrich himself at the time it was given believed to be mere talk."

(b) Lundeberg gave the Government representatives, on three different occasions, statements in contradiction of his testimony. The first was in 1939, during the first hearing (R. 7344), when Lundeberg told Government prosecutor Shoemaker, who interviewed him as a potential witness, that he had no information to indicate that Bridges had ever been a Communist (R. 7344-5). The second was in the fall of 1940, when he made similar statements to the F. B. I. (R. 7340-1). In the spring of 1941, he again informed Government representatives, including Major Schofield, that he possessed no information to indicate Bridges had ever been a Communist (R. 7347, 7349). These prior statements were made under the most solemn circumstances, during the course of official investigations conducted by representatives of the Government.

(c) The Board of Immigration Appeals found: "On the record here, Lundeberg impresses neither in truthfulness nor in forthrightness" (R. 479); when giving testimony as to his role in an important labor controversy he was "impressive in evasiveness", "unresponsive and at times incredible, backing and filling of a witness who was not forthright" (R. 484).[32]

(d) Value must also be ascribed to improbabilities in Lundeberg's story. Lundeberg says without hesitation (R. 7293) that "absolutely" he has openly fought Communists ever since he became president of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in April, 1935, which is at least two months before the date of the dinner at which he is supposed to have been invited to join the Communist Party. Considering the alleged policy of concealment pursued by communists in labor organizations, it would be strange indeed that a man openly hostile to the Party should so readily be provided with evidence that Bridges, over whom the threat of deportation proceedings hung, was a member. Indeed, at the time of the conversation, Lundeberg was perhaps the most powerful figure in maritime labor matters on the Pacific Coast. Yet he states that the inducement offered him to join the Party was that he would be "built up" and made "a great labor leader out of" (R. 7267).

---

[32] For example, Lundeberg's vagueness concerning the time of the dinner at which Darcy was alleged to have been present (R. 7265, 7334, 7362-5, 7366, 7373). The dinner occurred some time between the end of June and September, 1935 (R. 473 fn; 5902, 5905, 5910; 6445-6; 7576). The date is important, because another Government witness gave uncontradicted testimony that Darcy attended a convention in Moscow from the last week in July until late in August (R. 2175-6). Lundeberg fixed the dinner as occurring in the summer of 1935 after Bridges left the hospital (R. 7265, 7366). He was still in the hospital as late as June 22, 1935 (R. 5902, 5905, 5910).

What weight then in the scales appropriate for this case is to be ascribed to testimony by a bitter enemy, of an equivocal admission, in the circumstances here described, made six years previously and which at the time it was made the witness "just laughed at it and forgot about it"![33] Even the majority judges below noted the admission falls into a class of evidence that is easily given and hard to refute and fraught with "danger of mistake" (R. 7790). Its unsubstantiality as a matter of law is equally clear.[34]

---

[33] Compare the weight given by this Court in Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, 677 to "the statement of one witness that Baumgartner had told him that he was a member of the Bund."

[34] In Nagle v. Eizaguirre, 41 F. (2d) 735 (C. C. A. 9), the order of deportation was based upon the uncorroborated testimony of a prostitute who held strong bias against the alien, and had testified falsely to material facts. The Court held that whether her testimony was entitled to any credence was a matter of law. Refusing to be bound by the findings of the Immigration Service, the Court voided the deportation order. See also Consolidated Edison Co. v. N.L.R.B., 305 U. S. 197, 230.

As shown, Lundeberg concededly gave testimony fundamentally inconsistent with prior statements he had made to government officials. Since these inconsistencies were upon highly material matters, this fact alone justifies rejection of his testimony. (Chin Ching v. Nagle, 51 F. [2d] 64, 65 [C. C. A. 9]).

Testimony of two other witnesses, Barlow and Kelley, was relied upon by the Government as being of "corroborating significance in relation to Lundeberg's testimony" (Government's Brief below, p. 96).

Barlow's (R. 271-2)—that Bridges remarked to him at the end of the session of the Maritime Federation convention in 1935, in a conversation occurring on the stairway of a hall in the presence of "quite a few" others (R. 7377), that the only way a young fellow could get along in the labor movement today was to join the Communist Party. Bridges denied having made such a remark. Barlow, an official of Lundeberg's union (R. 7390) when sought by agents of the Government as a witness at the 1939 hearing

The existence of inherent improbabilities in Lundeberg's testimony also militates against acceptance of his word. "There may be such an inherent improbability in the statements of a witness as to induce the court or jury to disregard his evidence, even in the absence of any direct conflicting testimony. He may be contradicted by the facts he states as completely as by direct adverse testimony; and there may be so many omissions in his account * * * as to discredit his whole story." (Quock Ting v. United States, 140 U. S. 417, 420-1.)

Lundeberg's testimony of a claimed admission of Communist membership by Bridges is subject to the familiar rule that alleged oral admissions should be cautiously regarded. (Idaho Etc. Co. v. Cahill, 52 F. [2d] 70, 74 [C. C. A. 10].) The reason for this rule, as expressed by Justice Story, is that an alleged admission "is in all cases most unsatisfactory evidence, on account of the facility with which it may be fabricated, and the impossibility of contradicting it. Besides; the slightest mistake or failure of recollection may totally alter the effect of the declaration". (Smith v. Burnham, 22 Fed. Cas. 465, 466.)

against Bridges, said he had no information tending to show Bridges was a Communist (R. 7385-6). At the 1941 hearing, he testified that up to the moment of taking the witness stand, he had never related his 1935 conversation with Bridges to any representative of the Government (R. 7385-7, 7389, 7392-3). The Board of Immigration Appeals held the remark in question was not made (R. 427-8, fn. 76); Judge Sears held it was, but that it no more than "indicates a sympathetic attitude toward Communism" (R. 272). The Attorney General held only that it "tended to associate Bridges with the Communist Party" and "has some significance in the general picture" (R. 96).

Kelley's—a report of a conversation with Bridges and one Dietrich,[35] supposedly containing an implied jocular admission by Bridges of membership, was held by the Presiding Inspector as not having impressed the witness as "serious at the time" and therefore > "too equivocal to base a finding of membership or affiliation thereon" (R. 318).

This testimony was not even mentioned in the decision of the Attorney General.

We turn to evidence on "affiliation" which, equally with membership, is forbidden by the statute. But here, more is needed than determination of whether the appropriate standard of proof has been satisfied. Also needed is agreement as to the meaning of the statutory words "affiliated with."

Certainly, affiliation means something less than membership (Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22) and it doubtless covers that relationship with an organization which is equivalent to membership but which may fail to constitute membership for technical reasons. Probably, as Dean Landis said: ". . . this was the main purpose underlying the original introduction of the phrase into the statute" (R. 512).

While legislative history of the statute seems to shed no light on this (R. 512) judicial authority is helpful. Thus employment as managing editor of a paper published by the Communist Party, and being an instructor at an official Communist school and soliciting funds for the Party, was held to constitute affiliation (Branch v. Cahill, 88 F. (2d) 545). Selling the Daily Worker, a Communist paper, copies of which were received directly from the Communist Party, desire to become a member (although thwarted in this desire because considered not sufficiently intelligent to join), membership in the Unemployed Council, an organization indirectly associated with the Communist Party, and finally contributing money to the Communist Party, were held to establish affiliation (Wolck v. Weedin, 58 F. (2d) 928. An alien who pledged himself to perform certain tasks prescribed by the Party in order to secure reinstatement was held affiliated (U. S. ex rel. Yokinen v. Commissioner, 57 F. (2d) 707).

On the other hand, the phrase has been regarded as unfulfilled on evidence showing sympathy with a proscribed organization or even willingness to aid the organization in a casual and incidental way. The most satisfactory expression of the line drawn is that of Judge Chase in U. S. ex rel. Kettunen v. Reimer, 79 F. (2d) 315.[36] This case involved an alien, previously a distributor of the Daily Worker, who attended a meeting of the Communist Party, executed an application for membership, paid the admission fee, but who later changed his mind about becoming a member and asked that his application be not formally submitted. Judge Chase held the facts were insufficient to constitute an affiliation, saying (at page 317):

[36] Counsel for the Service at the opening of the hearing argued that the doctrine of the Kettunen case was unsound: "There is nothing which indicates and supports the conclusion at which Judge Chase arrived" (R. 802).

> "In deciding this case, we shall not attempt to give a comprehensive definition of the word 'affiliation' as used in the statute. Very likely that is as impossible as it is now unnecessary. It is enough for present purposes to hold that it is not proved unless the alien is shown to have so conducted himself that he has brought about a status of mutual recognition that he may be relied on to cooperate with the Communist Party on a fairly permanent basis. He must be more than merely in sympathy with its aims or even willing to aid it in a casual, intermittent way. Affiliation includes an element of dependability upon which the organization can rely which, though not equivalent to membership duty, does rest upon a course of conduct that could not be abruptly ended without giving at least reasonable cause for the charge of a breach of good faith. So tested we cannot agree that there was evidence to establish that this relator was affiliated with the Communist Party."

In an unreported decision, U. S. ex rel Tolsky v. Wilson (S. D. N. Y., 1920), a similar opinion was expressed by Judge Learned Hand (R. 381):

> "However this may be, it seems to me pretty clear that it [affiliation] involves a mutual recognition of permanent cooperation between the organization and the person affiliated and not a spasmodic or casual assistance. Mere sympathy with the aims of the society, even accompanied by efforts to further its aims, does not fall within that word."

Dean Landis offered this statement of his own views after study of these authorities (R. 513):

> "The language of Judge Chase seems appropriate. 'Affiliation' is plainly a word that speaks in terms of a stronger bond than 'association.' In the corporate field its use embraces not the casual affinity of an occasional similarity of objective, but ties and connections that, though less than that complete control which parent possesses over subsidiary, are nevertheless sufficient to create a continuing relationship that embraces both units within the concept of a system. In the field of eleemosynary and political organization the same basic idea prevails. Thus thinking in terms of affiliation as distinguished from membership must have regard to a bond of this general nature existing, explicitly or implicitly, between the alien and the proscribed organization."

Judge Sears, however, did not seem to have been guided by any principle, but proceeded simply on the vague premise that the trier of the facts must somehow determine where the weight of the evidence lies (R. 349-51; 326-38). The Attorney General did not specifically discuss his understanding of the meaning of affiliation at all; and, as Judge Healy said below, "he appears to have relied indiscriminately on every circumstance which might be thought to spell sympathy or to be indicative of an association however temporary or in pursuit of ends however legitimate. His finding on this issue is without substantial evidentiary support" (R. 7803). Judge Healy added (R. 7801):

> "In condemning 'affiliation' with a proscribed group it would seem that Congress had in mind a working arrangement of some sort designed, or at least having a substantial tendency, to further the subversive aims of the group. A temporary or occasional joinder of forces for the attainment of an end entirely legitimate in itself, as for example, the betterment of substandard conditions of workers in a given industry, can hardly be thought to fall within the legislative ban."

This then, we submit, is the frame of reference on affiliation: Does it show a status of mutual recognition between the Party and Bridges that Bridges could be relied upon to cooperate with the Party for its purposes on a fairly permanent basis? Does it show a relationship of continuing dependability upon which the Party was fairly entitled to rely? And, of course, the evidence needed to answer these questions affirmatively must be no less than "substantial evidence" (supra, pp. 31-2).

The central evidence on affiliation relates to affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union (MWIU) and, by that cord, affiliation with the Communist Party. The MWIU was held, it will be recalled, by the Immigration and Naturalization Service on January 3, 1934, to be not a proscribed organization (supra, p. 18), was liquidated in 1935 (R. 205). Consequently, virtually all this evidence relates to the years preceding that date. That the Communist Party is not a proscribed organization within the statute, we argue later (infra, pp. 92-7).

The time span on this evidence, 1933-35, suggests rightly that it all springs from the 1934 maritime strike, its preparation, conduct and consequences.

The most crucial evidence, to the mind of Judge Sears and of the Attorney General, was that relating to Bridges' connection with the mimeographed paper, the Waterfront Worker (supra, p. 15). This paper was avowedly published from December, 1932, to August, 1933, under the auspices or with the assistance of the MWIU, and avowedly published from September, 1933, to its demise in 1936 by an independent group of longshoremen, including Harry Bridges, without any apparent assistance from the MWIU. Judge Sears and the Attorney General concluded, contrary to the flat denial by Bridges (R. 3234), that Bridges was associated with the paper during the period of its avowed sponsorship by the MWIU and, further, that during the subsequent period of avowed sponsorship by Bridges and his group of independent longshoremen, the paper in reality continued an instrument of the MWIU and the Communist Party. There is no testimony in the entire record to support this conclusion. All that is relied upon is the supposed internal inconsistency in Bridges' testimony and supposed internal inconsistencies between his testimony and the paper itself.

Apparently everything turned on whether Bridges and his group took the paper over in December 1932 or, as Bridges testified at the hearing, on September 15, 1933, because four or five of the issues preceding September 15, 1933 acknowledged the assistance of the MWIU, while the September 15, 1933 issue and subsequent ones did not (R. 242). Was Bridges an editor of the paper during the period from December 1932 to August 1933 when it acknowledged assistance of the MWIU—was therefore the crucial question. Bridges said, no, and there is no witness for the Service to contradict him. However, Judge Sears and the Attorney General said, yes. The explanation of how they came to this conclusion is very important.

In the 1939 hearing Bridges had testified as follows (R. 239-40):

> "There was really no start toward real organization until September 1932, when we started our waterfront paper. The waterfront paper generally dealt with the ills of the longshoremen. In other words, these various straw bosses or gang foremen along the waterfront, who we used to call slave drivers, they were written up in the paper in their various habits. The paper immediately found wide interest among the longshoremen.

Then, of course, we had no set plan. All we used to say in the paper was 'to organize.'

* * * *

Q. Do you know how long the Waterfront Worker had been running at the time when you first took it over?

A. Not very long. It is pretty hard to remember. If I recall, we took it over around September or October 1932, or it was running then and we took it over later. I can't set the exact date. I would have to get the original issues and check it up.

Q. I think you said, Mr. Bridges, in your prior testimony, about September 1932. Something like that. But the point I want to know is about how long it had been running prior to that time.

A. I can't remember. Maybe a month or two. My first recollection of ever seeing it was September of 1932."

This 1939 testimony was read into the 1941 hearing. In his 1941 testimony, however, Bridges said that the September or October 1932 date he had given in the previous hearing was a mistake (R. 6133), and that the date he and his group took the paper over was September or October 1933 (R. 6133). Judge Sears disbelieved the 1941 testimony, but from the 1939 testimony above quoted he selected some phrases, obviously giving them a more precise quality than did the witness, rejected others, and added an assumption wholly unwarranted by the record,—coming out with the conclusion that Bridges became an editor in December 1932. Thus, from Bridges' testifying with uncertainty in 1939—"It is pretty hard to remember. If I recall, we took it over later in September or October 1932, or it was running then and we took it over", Judge Sears concluded—with certainty—it had been running in September or October 1932 and taken over by Bridges in December 1932 (R. 241). Bridges' 1939 testimony in answer to an immediately succeeding question to the effect that his group had taken the paper over in September 1932 and it had been running "maybe a month or two prior to that time", Judge Sears rejected. And his amplification —without a shadow of warrant in the record—brought in to make his version fit with Bridges' consistent testimony that the paper had run sometime before he and his group took it over—was that the Waterfront Worker was in existence before December 1932. The December 1932 issue was Vol. 1, No. 1 of the Waterfront Worker and was the first issue that appears in the record to have been published by anyone under anyone's sponsorship. Hence, if Bridges' testimony be credited, as Judge Sears did credit it, that there was a lapse in publication before he and his group took the paper over, Bridges, on this record, simply could not be tied to Vol. 1, No. 1 (Dec., 1932).

Judge Sears' (and the Attorney General's) conclusion further is flatly opposed by every item in the record and Bridges' testimony is completely supported. The record is unchallenged that Bridges began to participate in the editorship in connection with his activities in the Longshoremen's Union (R. 388), an organization which did not exist on the coast in 1932 and which he did not join until June 1933 (R. 388). Bridges tied the date of his group's taking over the paper to the Matson strike which occurred in October 1933, and in the September 15 issue that proposed strike is the subject of much of the material (R. 6181-94). The hiatus in publication dates referred to by Bridges did occur just prior to September 1933 .(R. 388-9). The significant change in the masthead of the paper—edited by a rank and file group of the I. L. A. without reference to the MWIU—occurred on September 15, 1933 (R. 6181). There was a sharp drop in the size of the paper on September 15, 1933, to four pages (R. 390) (corresponding, incidentally, to Bridges' statement given earlier in his testimony [R. 760]).

Little wonder that the Board of Immigration Appeals concluded (R. 402):

> "We accordingly conclude that Bridges became connected with the 'Waterfront Worker' on or slightly before September 15, 1933, after the former staff had abandoned the enterprise.
> There is then, in our view, no connection between the Alien and the prior publication, admittedly sponsored by the M.W.I.U. And there is no deliberate untruth to impugn other sections of his testimony."

But Judge Sears and the Attorney General concluded that the Waterfront Worker, even after September 1933, remained an instrument of the MWIU. Keeping in mind any fair definition of affiliation, this conclusion is wholly without record support. We need but enumerate the items relied on.

(a) There was similarity in substance in the issues before and after the crucial date (R. 243); but as the Board of Appeals said: "Of such similarities in substance as appear it may be said that they relate almost exclusively to the grievances of the waterfront. And insofar as they do so they have but little relevance" (R. 403).

(b) There was continued "favorable treatment" of the MWIU, TUUL and other Communist sponsored organizations (R. 86) and "extremely cooperative attitude with regard to the MWIU" (R. 243). Again the Board's opposite conclusion is demonstrably plain on the cold record—"They contain no reference to the T.U.U.L. There are fewer and less favorable references to the M.W.I.U. in the period prior to and during the 1934 strike than might have been expected in view of the assistance that organization rendered the I.L.A. in supporting the I.L.A. strike position. After the end of the strike, but one reference to the M.W.I.U. appears, and that is in a letter to the editors" (R. 404-5).

(c) Favorable treatment was accorded "other Communist sponsored organizations" (R. 245, 405). Still less appears to support this, rightly said the Board with conclusive demonstration from the cold Record (R. 405, fn. 43).

(d) "Consistent attacks upon the so-called 'reactionary' leaders of the A. F. of L." (R. 245). This we pass.

(e) "Support of the Communist candidates for political office" (R. 245). On this, the papers in evidence show only one single instance, and there, as the Board said, "the support given • • • was based solely upon the platform on which they ran. No element of that platform had any apparent relation to forbidden doctrine" (R. 407).

(f) The Waterfront Worker advised the reading of Communist literature (R. 245). The three instances of such advice were the Western Worker, the Daily Worker, and a pamphlet of the 1934 strike written by William F. Dunn, supposedly a Communist official. As to these, the Board said (R. 410-11):

> "We find in these three instances no warrant for concluding that the 'Waterfront Worker' advocated the reading of Communist literature generally, or for any purpose other than that stated in its own columns and in the Alien's testimony at both hearings. That purpose, to call attention to publications treating accurately labor matters of peculiar concern to longshoremen, we cannot hold to be one which shows that the editors who entertained it maintained the forbidden degree, or any degree, of relationship to the Communist Party."

(g) The paper used as mailing addresses (not offices, since it had none) a hall and a post office box, each of which was rented by a Communist. On this point we refer to the treatment by the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 411-18).[37]

---

[37] That even on examination of the thirteen issues (out of no less than eighty published) selected by the Service for the specific purpose of attempting to demonstrate forbidden affiliation there are "specific indicia that point the other way" is shown decisively in the following summary of the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 418-20):

"The explicit denial of M.W.I.U. sponsorship has been mentioned and it is thought to be not wholly without weight here (see 5391-2). So also the rapid abandonment of foreign news items and discussions of broader theoretical matters in favor of concentration on local and coastwise matters directly affecting the San Francisco union longshoremen is significant. Finally, the paper taken as a whole conveys an impression quite the opposite of that reflected by analysis of the minutiae upon which the Service's case was founded and which were made the basis of the proposed findings. From September 15, 1933, on, it was unquestionably an informal organ only of the I.L.A., which voted confidence in it (6152). Enumeration of the items selected for unfavorable emphasis draws attention from the overwhelming predominance of concern exhibited in the paper's columns for matters of interest only to members of that organization. Infrequent and casual mention of the M.W.I.U., the I.S.U., and other organizations, suspect or otherwise, constitutes an infinitesimal portion of the subject matter treated. And we cannot conclude that it shows on the part of the editors a purpose to subvert their readers through the medium of a trade union paper which was such in seeming only.

"That the paper displayed a militant attitude cannot be questioned, but that its militancy went beyond anything consistent with a legitimate, if embittered, labor viewpoint on the controversies involved in a sharp labor struggle does not appear from the issues in the record. Strident name calling appears in plenty. Incitement of tempers already overheated may have passed the bounds of judgment or taste. But adherence to a broader and deeper philosophy of revolt by violence is not shown."

The finding of affiliation rests in some part also on other minor items of evidence. We enumerate all of them elsewhere (supra, p. 16 and infra, p. 98) and we regard the enumeration as adequate support for our position,—that they fall far short of meeting the test of affiliation.

This is the case against Bridges on membership and affiliation. The order rests, as the Government conceded below, "basically upon membership" (Govt's Brief, p. 23). And the finding of membership rests basically upon evidence taken in avowed defiance of published Departmental Regulations and in defiance, not avowed, of every traditional safeguard for testing truth. The finding of "affiliation" rests upon a fundamental misconception of the term. Of this record, we submit, this Court must say, as did Judge Healy below (R. 7798):

> "It is notable that the alien, in one fashion or another, had been under almost continuous investigation for a period of more than five years. Prior to and during the course of the second trial the Service had enlisted the powerful cooperation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The country had been scoured for witnesses, every circumstance of Bridges' active life had been subjected to scrutiny, and presumably no stone left unturned which might conceal evidence of the truth of the charges which the alien so flatly denied. The most significant feature of the inquiry, as it seems to me, is the paucity of the evidentiary product as contrasted with the magnitude of the effort expended in producing it."

This is not substantial evidence; this is not evidence which can induce conviction; this is not evidence to support a determination with consequences so grave as here; and, upon it, deportation may not rest without gross offense to the Fifth Amendment.

II

DEPORTATION UPON THESE PROCEDURES OFFENDS DUE PROCESS.

We begin by reminding that action to deport is subject to judicial review to determine whether the procedures "offend the fundamental principles of justice embraced within the conception of due process of law". See cases cited supra, p. 30.

The appropriate object of inquiry here is not alone whether this or that particular point in the procedural history of this case is the constitutional vice. Rather, we submit, it is on portrayal of this history in whole purport, whether the final chronicle that emerges is one of vitiating unfairness, whether the atmosphere, in entire, demonstrates the unfairness of its parts. (See Colyer v. Skeffington, 265 Fed. 17, Gellhorn, Cases on Administrative Law, 1940, pp. 525-6). It is, in sum, whether the Attorney General has accredited himself "by acting in accordance with the cherished judicial tradition embodying the basic concepts of fair play" Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1, 22.

The argument here is deeper than that Bridges has been denied due process—

—because he has been subjected to successive hearings on essentially the same evidence in the face of a prior considered determination of his innocence, or —because he is being subjected to ex post facto and retrospective operation of a statute, or —because the attempt to deport him on a ground which the Government since January 1934 has avowed to be no ground for deportation is discriminatory to the point of arbitrariness, or —because the Department has violated its own rules in acceptance of the most prejudicial and flagrantly improper piece of evidence in the entire case, or —because the Attorney General gave weight to evidence which he agreed was "inconclusive, unreliable and contradictory" on the theory that "taken as a whole it cannot because of its volume be completely disregarded", or —because the Attorney General reversed a decision favorable to Bridges rendered by the normally deciding body, the Board of Immigration Appeals, without giving Bridges notice or opportunity to reach his mind.

The basic argument is that—whatever may be said in a constitutional sense of each of these elements, singly,—a procedure which exhibits all of them cannot survive this Court's inquiry.

We have referred to the early departmental investigations of Bridges in which he was absolved of all charges and to the formal hearing before Dean Landis in which all charges were found baseless, resulting in the cancellation of the warrant of arrest (supra, p. 6 et seq.). At the time of the Landis hearings, and because of the decision of this Court in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, the deportation statute required a finding that the petitioner was a member or affiliate of a proscribed organization at the time of the issuance of the warrant. Within six months following final disposition of the first warrant, and on June 28, 1940, Congress adopted the amendment of the law under which the present warrant was issued. Its purpose, both to nullify the ruling in Kessler v. Strecker, supra, and to furnish a ground for further action against Bridges was obvious (supra, pp. 10-11). It provides in effect for deportation by reason of past membership in or past affiliation with a proscribed organization.

The ground thus furnished was availed of; and Bridges, exonerated by Dean Landis, has here been subjected to a second trial before Judge Sears.

The Government has suggested a formal distinction between the two proceedings—that before Dean Landis the issue was Bridges' membership or affiliation as of the issuance of the warrant, while before Judge Sears the issue was his membership or affiliation at any time following his admission to this country. The distinction will not survive examination.

No evidence was offered before Dean Landis as to present membership. All the proof was addressed only to past membership and affiliation, and the Government relied specifically upon a legal presumption of continuance to support its claim with respect to the time of Bridges' arrest in 1938.[38] As Dean Landis' opinion shows, his finding denying present membership or affiliation depends entirely upon his rejection of the Government's evidence of past membership and affiliation during the entire period 1932-1938,—precisely the period deemed relevant in the second proceeding (See table, p. 68a, infra).

[38] The Government's own statement of its case before Dean Landis demonstrates the identity of the two proceedings.

"It is the Government position that it has shown that prior to the arrest of Harry Bridges he was a member of the Communist Party and has continued as such. It contends, and submits it has been proved, that, the alien having been shown to be a member of the Communist Party, the obligation rested upon him to show that he had ceased to be such member, and in the absence of such showing there is a legal presumption he remained a member, and therefore is subject to deportation under the Act of 1918 as amended" (Government's Brief to Dean Landis, p. 100).

The proof itself, in each of the proceedings, followed identical lines. In each proceeding, the Government attempted, unsuccessfully, to prove that Bridges attended Communist Party membership meetings; the witnesses were different persons, but the purport of their testimony the same. Similarly, proof was offered, in each case, of alleged admissions by Bridges of membership in the Communist Party; again, only the witnesses differed. Even more, the same miscellany of items offered as proof of affiliation with the Communist Party was all presented to and passed upon by Dean Landis (R. 604-7, 626-8). The Government saw fit to present a greater volume of testimony before Judge Sears than before Dean Landis, with respect to the further charge of Bridges' affiliation with the MWIU—principally concerning the "Waterfront Worker". But again all the subjects considered were mooted before Dean Landis; in fact most of the testimony in the first proceeding dealing with the MWIU was read into the record of the second proceeding (R. 75, fn. 6, 624-8, 635, 3231 ff.). The Board of Immigration Appeals stated its opinion that "the same factual issues" were tried in both proceedings (432, fn. 77), adding, "there is a serious question whether an administrative agency should relitigate time after time the same factual issues in the same type of proceeding" (ibid.). We annex in the adjoining pages a tabular statement showing how the same lines of testimony were given by the different witnesses in the two proceedings—the testimony covering the years 1934-1938.

The precise question here is not whether Dean Landis' findings and rulings were either correct or res adjudicata; it is whether, consistent with defensible standards of fairness, Bridges could be subjected to successive proceedings with respect to these identical matters.

The first hearing was no mere perfunctory proceeding, with only tentative conclusions. It was an extended and far-flung investigation in which the parties were repres-

[3] Additional charges lodged against Bridges at the second hearing, based on his brief membership in 1921 in the Industrial Workers of the World are now immaterial, inasmuch as the Attorney General found that such membership did not render Bridges deportable. (R. 100) The charge of deportability for affiliation with the MWIU, while new, is largely a by-product of the Communist charge.

[4] In addition to calling Bridges as its witness at both hearings, the Government at the second hearing introduced in evidence excerpts from his testimony at the 1939 hearing. This testimony deals with Bridges' association with the MWIU during the 1934 strike, the aid offered to his union by the Int'l Labor Defense, the aid given by the Communists in the 1934 strike, his associations with Communists, and his policy of non-discrimination in labor unions by reason of political beliefs. See R. 431-2, n. 77.

[5] At least five of these witnesses had been interviewed by the Government as potential witnesses for the 1939 hearing (Chase, R. 1330-2, 1356-9; St. Clair, R. 2480-7; Cannalonga, R. 7171, 7255; Lundeberg, R. 7344; Barlow, R. 7385). A sixth witness, Kelley, testified to hearsay statements made to him by Detrich, who was a Government witness in the 1939 hearing.

[6] One item of evidence introduded by the Government, involving a strike at the North American Aviation Company, related to the year 1941. It is immaterial at this time since the Attorney General found that this evidence did not show either membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party, but only a "sympathetic attitude toward a strike denounced as a Communist maneuver." (R. 99) ented by counsel; witnesses were subpoenaed, examined, and cross-examined; arguments heard and briefs submitted. The suggestion of the Government below (Government brief, p. 33), that the proceeding before Dean Landis was in the nature of an inconclusive investigation like that before a committing magistrate, is hardly appropriate. Nor is it relevant to urge, as the Government also urged below (idem., pp. 30-1), that here were administrative proceedings in which the principles of res adjudicata are often said not to apply. Even if they did not—and we submit on the contrary that they have vital relevance,—it is an intolerable proposition that there are no legal restraints upon governmental determination to try the same issues of fact in deportation, again and again, upon the same thin evidence, until success is achieved. Otherwise, the governmental force must ultimately prevail—regardless of merit.

Again, deportation proceedings are not merely civil proceedings to which the double jeopardy provision is generally considered not to attach; as we have shown (supra, p. 26) their consequences run far beyond those flowing from ordinary civil litigation. Deportation "may result also in loss of both property and life; or of all that makes life worth living" (Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 284, per Brandeis, J.). Again, the easy formula—"This is not a criminal case"—is "too subtle when the problem is one of safeguarding the humane interests for the protection of which the double jeopardy clause was written into the Fifth Amendment." Frankfurter, J., U. S. ex. rel. Marcus v. Hess, 317 U. S. 537, 554. Regardless of the form of the proceedings, a penalty is here sought to be imposed. "Punitive ends may be pursued in civil proceedings." Frankfurter, J., U. S. ex rel. Marcus v. Hess, supra. Thus it is that double jeopardy is here imposed within the meaning of the Constitution (United States v. Chouteau, 102 U. S. 603, cf. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657; cf. U. S. ex rel. Marcus v. Hess, 317 U. S. 537).

The concepts of double jeopardy and res judicata which in other situations would concededly bar successive proceedings are, we submit, not only specific constitutional protections within their own spheres, however defined, but are inseparable from any concept of fundamental fairness. Double jeopardy in particular is "part of the protection of the Constitution against pressures and penalties that offend civilized notions of justice." Frankfurter, J., U. S. ex rel. Marcus v. Hess, 317 U. S. 537, 555. The Constitution guards against attempts "to wear the accused out by a multitude of cases with accumulated trials" (ibid.).[39]

* * * * *

The proceedings similarly offend common conceptions of fairness embodied in the ex post facto[40] (Art. I, sec. 9[3]),

---

[39] Even on the Government's theory that it may proceed to a second hearing on the same general charge and the same type of evidence, the least that fairness requires is that the first adjudication be not wholly disregarded. For the administrator to fail, as here, to give appropriate weight to the authority of the prior exoneration partakes of such arbitrariness as to render the second hearing unfair (cf. Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 283, 284). The lower courts have expressed this principle in terms of a duty to accord prima facie weight to the prior determination on pain of violating the Fifth Amendment (Yuen Boo Ming v. United States, 103 F. [2d] 355 [C. C. A. 9]; Wong Chow Gin v. Cahill, 79 F. [2d] 854, 857 [C. C. A. 9]; Wong Yee Toon v. Stump, 233 F. 194, 196 [C. C. A. 4]; Leung Jun v. United States, 171 F. 413 [C. C. A. 2]).

[40] It was ruled below that the ex post facto clause applies only to strictly criminal cases. The leading authorities however forbid any deprivation of fundamental rights which is based upon conduct antedating the penalizing statute. Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277; Pierce v. Carskadon, 16 Wall. 234; Cooley, "Constitutional Limitations" (7th ed. 1903) 375-376; Black, "Handbook of American Constitutional Law" (1927) § 266; Blackstone Commentaries [3d ed.] 11n.; McAllister, "Ex. Post Facto Laws in the Supreme Court of the United States" (1927) 15 Cal. Law Rev. 269, 281-282.

Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, is relied on as establishing that statutes may apply retrospectively in deportation proceedings. The statute there did not however apply retrospectively, for the decision and due process clauses since the statute was amended on June 28, 1940 with the specific purpose in mind of deporting Bridges upon grounds admittedly not then existing.

Only upon the frank admission that it proposed to try Bridges on the same charge again, could the Government have renewed proceedings against him, after Dean Landis' decision. The amendment furnished a pretext for avoiding such an admission. Its effect, however, is not merely ex post facto but also retrospective—a distinction the importance of which has been indicated by this Court. (e. g., Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585). It subjects aliens to deportation for membership in an organization, even though such membership had long since terminated when the amendment was adopted.

It is not necessary to argue here that the ex post facto clause applies in full vigor to the case of any alien affected by its retrospective operation. It is with respect to the particular circumstances of this case, to which the whole of this brief points, that the retrospective application of the statute to Bridges is unfair. The purpose of the draftsman of the amendment, directed at Bridges, could not be carried out except by reaching back into the past and penalizing a status which, the prior proceedings had established, did not then exist.[41] was that a finding of present undesirability was prerequisite to deportation. The language relied on is therefore dictum, which fails moreover to recognize that the consequences of deportation are too serious to permit classifying it as merely a civil judgment—a fact more clear under present day conditions.

[41] As construed below; the amendment of the statute in 1940 deprived Bridges of the immunity from deportation proceedings under the law as it then stood (Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22) and under the facts as ascertained in the 1939 hearing. Statutory constructions with similar effect have been condemned as ex post facto in criminal cases (Lindsey v. Washington, 301 U. S. 397), as when they constitute a new rule of evidence in aid of conviction (Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221); and a violation of due process in civil cases, as when they seek to free a cause of action from the bar of a statute of limitations which has run (Stewart v. Keyes, 295 U. S. 403).

If we leave the essential character of this second proceeding, as such, against Bridges and examine its conduct, the impression of vitiating unfairness is only deepened.

The charge of affiliation with the MWIU represents a reversal of the Government's settled attitude towards that organization—a reversal made only for Bridges.

Membership in or affiliation with the MWIU has not been deemed cause for deportation since the ruling of the Department of Labor in January 1934 (supra, p. 18). The warrant was simply in the language of the statute (R. 772-3). It was not until the opening day of trial that the Government disclosed that it was relying upon affiliation with the MWIU (R. 808).[42] In the prior hearing, doubtless because of the Department's 1934 ruling, no such charge was made. Since 1934, no other alien was faced with such a charge—notwithstanding that, before the decision in Kessler v. Strecker, in 1939, it was believed that either past or present membership constituted cause for deportation; and since the 1941 hearing (as shown before the district court—R. 733-4, 758-9) no other alien has been charged with past membership in or affiliation with the MWIU. Only Bridges has been held deportable for past affiliation with an organization which for substantially all the time of his supposed affiliation with it had been authoritatively determined not to be included in the ban of the statute.

No legal arguments, however nice, can obscure the fact, which counsel for Bridges offered to prove (supra, p. 18) that there are today thousands of aliens in the United States who have been members of or affiliated with the MWIU, and other TUUL affiliates, against whom no proceedings have ever been brought. The statute has here been intentionally applied in a discriminatory manner.

Whether or not the specific guarantee of equal protection is part of the due process guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment, it is certain that a discriminatory application of legislation "may be so arbitrary and injurious in character as to violate the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment". Detroit Bank v. United States, 317 U. S. 329, 338. And the denial of the guarantee is properly supported on the showing, as here, that Bridges "has been singled out for invidious treatment". See Hysler v. Florida, 315 U. S. 411, 422. "* * * if there is an existing rule which protects certain rights, it violates every sense of decency which is the very heart of due process, to repeal that protection just for the purpose of the ends of the case which comes before the administrative authority." Colyer v. Skeffington, 265 Fed. 17, 48, quoting from the argument made by Mr. (now Mr. Justice) Frankfurter.

* * * * *

A like discrimination by virtue of effective repeal of a fundamental rule of evidentiary procedure designed as broad protection for the rights of all aliens, to support a result in this particular case is embodied in the O'Neil incident discussed in an earlier part of this brief (supra, pp. 35-46). In the acceptance of the O'Neil statement traditional safeguards for testing truth and published rules of the Department were flagrantly disregarded. Judge Bourquin reminded twenty years ago that the Department's rules "constitute for aliens in deportation proceedings due process of law guaranteed by the Federal Constitution to all men". Ex parte Radivoeff, 278 Fed. 227, 229; See Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, 155; United States ex rel. Ohm v. Perkins, 79 Fed. (2d) 533.

* * * * *

Consideration of the Attorney General's novel notion of weight to be given to testimony flatly rejected by the presiding Inspector adds more dark shadow to this recital. Seven witnesses testified as to Bridges' proposed attendance at Communist Party meetings. Such testimony, if credited, would properly weigh heavily against Bridges. But this is what the presiding Inspector said about each of these seven witnesses:

1. Diner—"not an impressive witness" and the episode to which he testified "not established" (R. 295-6).

2. Honig—testimony contains "conflicts", and episodes to which he testified "not established" (R. 300).

3. Laurence—"too much chance of mistake in identification" and episode to which he testified "not established" (R. 302-3).

4. Cannalonga—"I cannot tell where the truth lies in any uncorroborated statement of Cannalonga. At times, in my judgment, he clearly falsified * * *" His testimony "is without value" (R. 307-8).

5. St. Clair—"inherently improbable", "deep-seated and violent bias". "His vanity * * * influences him toward the sensational" (R. 310).

6. Wilmot—"indefinite", "somewhat self contradictory" and "not established" (R. 312, 315).

7. Thompson—"not established" (R. 317).

It is with respect to these seven witnesses that the Attorney General, while fully accepting the judgments made by Judge Sears, nevertheless said "* * * taken as a whole * * * it cannot be completely disregarded" (R. 98).

If one sow's ear cannot be made into a silken purse, several can, if "taken as a whole".

* * * * *

And if there be anything lacking in this mosaic of mischief, we turn attention to the process used by the Attorney General for arriving at his final adverse decision.

The presiding Inspector, Judge Sears, is not a departmental person; he was designated especially for this case to hear evidence and to make recommendations. The Board of Immigration Appeals, on the other hand, is the body created by the Regulations of the Attorney General, expressly vested with the power of the Attorney General. It is vested with power—

> "To issue orders of deportation after proceedings in accordance with law and regulations; to order the cancellation of warrants of arrest issued in such proceedings; and in connection therewith to exercise such of the discretion conferred upon the Attorney General by law as is appropriate to the disposition of deportation proceedings," 8 Code of Federal Regulations, Sec. 90.3 (1).

See Appendix, p. 108. This Board possesses "quasi-judicial jurisdiction" with "authority to render final decisions in all cases involving the disposition of deportaton proceedings" (Annual Report of the Attorney General, June 30, 1941, pp. 225, 234). Administrative review of the Board's decisions by the Attorney General is provided for in the following limited cases:

> "In any case in which a dissent [of a Board member] has been recorded; in any case in which the Board shall certify that a question of difficulty is involved; in any case in which the Board orders the suspension of deportation pursuant to the provisions of Section 19(c) of the Immigration Act of 1917 as amended, or in any case in which the Attorney General so directs • • •." 8 Code of Federal Regulations, Sec. 90.12.

In these four categories the Attorney General has the right of review, but "in all other cases the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals is not subject to administrative review" (Annual Report of the Attorney General, supra, p. 235).

The only category of permissible review by the Attorney General applicable in this case was under the heading "in any case in which the Attorney General so directs." No notice of any such direction ever reached Bridges.

Up to the time of adverse decision against Bridges by the Attorney General, the only advice of governmental action which Bridges had received was the wholly favorable public decision of the Board cancelling the warrant of arrest (R. 492). True, execution of the order was stayed "pending further order of the Attorney General or of this Board" (R. 492); but such a stay, by itself, could reasonably have been construed as intended only to provide a period during which the Service, in accordance with its rights under the rules, could request reopening, reconsideration and reargument before the Board (Rules 150.8(a); 90.10), or the Attorney General could consider whether he should, under the rules, direct that the case be referred to him for review. It does not appear anywhere in this record that the Attorney General directed that the case be referred to him for review, or that the Board did so. Yet such referral to the Attorney General, as in fact seems to have occurred, could only have followed upon a direction from the Attorney General that the case be so referred to him. So far as Bridges knows, there never was any such direction by the Attorney General or referral of the case to the Attorney General.

Now Bridges' complaint here goes far beyond the failure to give him advice that the Attorney General directed the Board to pass the case on to him for review. It goes to the very heart of fair procedure:

> Bridges never knew that in his particular case the power of decision had been withdrawn from the Board and had been taken by the Attorney General.
>
> Bridges never knew that the Attorney General was considering reversal of the Board's decision.
>
> Bridges never knew that the Attorney General proposed to reverse the Board's decision.
>
> Bridges never knew that the Attorney General proposed to order his deportation.
> Bridges was never given an opportunity to reach the mind of the man who had newly taken to himself the power of decision.

The springs of the Morgan cases (298 U. S. 468; 304 U. S. 1) did not water this procedure. "The requirements of fairness are not exhausted in the taking or consideration of evidence but extend to the concluding parts of the procedure as well as to the beginning and intermediate steps." Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1, 20.

We submit that in application here, this at least is the teaching of the Morgan cases,—that when issues are freshly brought to focus before a new deciding officer the specific grounds upon which he proposes to overturn an existing public decision (if such be his disposition) be given the person to be adversely affected and that an opportunity be provided to reach the deciding officer's mind. Otherwise, there is essential unreality in the concept of "fair hearing."

The Rules of the Department itself,—on the level of relationship between the presiding Inspector and the Board of Appeals,—give depth and authority to this view.

Section 90.11 provides as follows:

> "Whenever, in any deportation case in which no exceptions have been taken to the proposed findings, conclusions of law and order of the presiding inspector, the Board of Immigration Appeals after consideration of the record believes that an order less favorable to the alien than that proposed by the presiding inspector should be entered, it shall prepare its own proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law, and order and shall forward them to the district director of the district in which the case arose for service upon the alien or his counsel or representative. The alien or his counsel or representative shall be given opportunity, within a time fixed by the Board of Immigration Appeals, to file exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Board. If exceptions are filed, further procedure in the case shall be in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 90.5 hereof * * *"

Here is procedure that acknowledges the fundamental condition of fair hearing, namely, that before deciding adversely to decisions theretofore made, fresh opportunity for hearing be given to the person sought to be newly adversely affected.

Advice to Bridges that the Attorney General had directed the case to be referred to him for review, and advice to Bridges as to what the Attorney General proposed to do, and why, with fair opportunity to meet the proposal, would in no way have crippled or embarrassed the exercise of the Attorney General's functions. On the contrary, the Attorney General, by so doing, would have accredited himself "by acting in accordance with the cherished judicial tradition embodying the basic concepts of fair play." Morgan v. United States, supra, p. 22.

Have the standards appropriate to the performance of quasi judicial functions in the sensitive area of deportation been maintained in this case? We submit no fair reading of this record can sustain the answer yes.

Bridges, who has been the object of determined and persistent attention since 1934 upon grounds only of belief and imputed belief, grounds which cut across the roots of the most profound American traditions, was subjected to a trial on those grounds in 1939, notwithstanding that previous exhaustive departmental investigations had disclosed no basis for action. That trial was conducted carefully and thoroughly and resulted in findings wholly in his favor. Nevertheless, the underlying statute was amended specifically to support new proceedings against him. And he was subjected to new proceedings, a trial in which the same issues of fact were encompassed in part upon identical testimony, and for the rest upon identical lines of proof. Not only were considerations of fairness implicit in the double jeopardy and ex post facto provisions of the Constitution and in the concept of res judicata, designed to prevent an accused from being worn out with accumulated trials, ignored, but Bridges was singled out for invidious treatment. Finally, a decision adverse to him was arrived at without true opportunity to be heard by the person who did the deciding.

Is this a chronicle that is "characteristic of democratic rule"? Is this a chronicle in conformity with "the amenities that distinguish a free society"? Is this a chronicle that shows avowed attention to the "necessary and salutary checks on the authority of government * * * (that) provide a standard of official conduct which the courts must enforce"? (Murphy, J., Goldman v. United States, 316 U. S. 129, 142.) We submit it is not. As Mr. Justice

Murphy said in the Goldman case:

> "At a time when the nation is called upon to give freely of life and treasure to defend and preserve the institutions of democracy and freedom, we should not permit any of the essentials of freedom to lose fidelity through legal interpretations that are restrictive and inadequate for the period in which we live."

III

THE STATUTE AS CONSTRUED AND APPLIED OFFENDS THE BILL OF RIGHTS AND BEARS NO REASONABLE RELATION TO THE PURPOSE FOR WHICH GOVERNMENTAL POWER TO DEPORT EXISTS.

The First Amendment provides that Congress shall pass no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press * * * or the right of the people peaceably to assemble.

The Fifth Amendment provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

The Government contends that an alien may be deported "for utterances, beliefs or associations in which he would be protected from punishment by the First Amendment," (Government Brief below, p. 20 and Government Memorandum in opposition to petition for certiorari, p. 3[43]). The Government's contention strikes at "the area of allowable thought" of three and a half million aliens lawfully resident in this country. By this contention, the Government tells these three and a half million aliens—the Bill of Rights is for you as well as for citizens, but if you use it, we can deport you. "Of what avail are such guarantees", asked Mr. Justice Brewer fifty years ago. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 743.

---

[43] The District Court, sustaining the Government's contention, wrote paradoxically: "If the result is a curtailment of their [aliens'] freedom of speech while in this country, it is a curtailment consonant with the constitutional guarantees of the Bill of Rights" (R. 737). The court below did not see fit to discuss the constitutional issues here considered.

We contend simply, that a ground which would not support punishment because offensive to the great guarantees of the Bill of Rights may not validly be a ground for deportation. If we are right in this, we contend further that the statute in question, as construed and applied here, denies guarantees of the First and Fifth Amendments. In any event the statute as construed and applied bears no reasonable relation to the purpose for which governmental power to deport exists.

The power of Congress to provide, on any grounds it sees fit, for the expulsion even of aliens with an established domicile here, was asserted in sweeping terms in 1895. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698. This was a Chinese expulsion case. But even at the moment of decision, three members of the Court—Chief Justice Fuller, Justices Brewer and Field—dissented pr[illegible]ndly. Said the Chief Justice (p. 763):

> "* * * it contains within it the germs of the assertion of an unlimited and arbitrary power, in general, incompatible with the immutable principles of justice, inconsistent with the nature of our government, and in conflict with the written Constitution by which that government was created and those principles secured."

Eight years later, in the Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86, 100, this Court rejected the full sweep of Fung Yue Ting. Mr. Justice Harlan for the Court, overruling Government contentions strikingly similar to those advanced here, said:

> "But this court has never held, nor must we now be understood as holding, that administrative officers, when executing the provisions of a statute involving the liberty of persons, may disregard the fundamental principles that inhere in 'due process of law' as understood at the time of the adoption of the Constitution."

That the fundamental principles of procedural due process have full rein in deportation has since become settled doctrine, notwithstanding "the plenary power of Congress to exclude or deport aliens" (quoted phrase taken from Government's brief below, p. 21). Lloyd Sabaudo Societa v. Elting, 287 U. S. 329, 335. Rejection of the Government's argument of "plenary power" in the Japanese Immigrant Case, forty odd years ago, has left the Republic unshaken.

But the Fifth Amendment embodies substantive, as well as procedural guarantees,—and these, "to any person". And the First Amendment prohibits "all laws" abridging freedom of speech and of the press or the right of people peaceably to assemble, "not merely some laws or all except" deportation laws or all except laws within the "plenary power of Congress". See Stone, C.J., in Jones v. Opelika, 316 U. S. 584, 609.

The Bill of Rights is distorted if we see it only as a bill of privileges that are a good for the person who desires to use them. These rights are called "the great, the indispensable democratic freedoms" (Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 322) for a deeper reason. It is because these freedoms are "indispensable to the effective and intelligent use of the processes of popular government to shape the destiny of modern industrial society". Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88, 103. It is because through their free use in a free society "the remedial channels of the democratic process remain open and unobstructed". Minersville School District v. Gobitis, 310 U. S. 586, 599. It is because the exercise of these freedoms is "so vital to the maintenance of democratic institutions". Schneider v. State, 308 U. S. 147, 161. It is because "the ultimate good desired is better reached by free trade in ideas—that the best test of truth is the power of thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market.". Holmes, J., dissenting, Abrams v. United States, 250 U. S. 616, 630. "Therein," said Chief Justice Hughes, "lies the security of the Republic, the very foundation of constitutional government." DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353, 365.

Surely this foundation for the Bill of Rights does not admit of a distinction between citizen and alien.[*] The quality of an idea "to shape the destiny of modern industrial society" or its possibility of contributing to the "ultimate good" does not turn on whether it springs from alien or citizen.

This case bears no different cast from any other case which, though involving a citizen, confronts this Court with the duty of deciding where an asserted freedom ends and the sovereign's power begins. The proffered phrase—"plenary power of Congress" is no solving phrase. If it were, it "would resolve every issue of power in favor of those in authority and would require us to override every belief thought to weaken or delay execution of their policies". Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U. S. 624, 636. The Court there said:

> "Government of limited power need not be anemic government. Assurance that rights are secure tends

---

[*] On this question the attitude appropriate for judgment must take into account a fact of broadest implication. The treatment accorded to aliens lawfully resident here is naturally regarded, by the countries of which such aliens are nationals, as an expression of policy. No branch of our Government is warranted in ignoring the international repercussions of a policy of discrimination. (See Wasserman, "The Challenge of Our Immigration Laws" III Journal of Legal and Political Sociology, 100, 112-114.)

to diminish fear and jealousy of strong government, and by making us feel safe to live under it makes for its better support. Without promise of a limiting Bill of Rights it is doubtful if our Constitution could have mustered enough strength to enable its ratification. To enforce those rights today is not to choose weak government over strong government. It is only to adhere as a means of strength to individual freedom of mind in preference to officially disciplined uniformity for which history indicates a disappointing and disastrous end.

* * * Observance of the limitations of the Constitution will not weaken government in the field appropriate for its exercise."

The challenge of "plenary power", sometimes in another guise,—that of "police power"—has faced this Court in every decision involving issues of freedom. Authority confronts freedom. And freedom has a preferred place in our scheme, it has a "sanctity and a sanction not permitting dubious intrusions." Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 322. "And it is the character of the right [i. e., the freedom asserted], not of the limitation [i. e., the State's power], which determines what standard governs the choice." (ibid.).

In Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, 292, this Court held the First Amendment is not secured to excluded aliens:

"It is, of course, true that if an alien is not permitted to enter this country, or, having entered contrary to law, is expelled, he is in fact cut off from worshipping or speaking or publishing or petitioning in the country, but that is merely because of his exclusion therefrom. He does not become one of the people to whom these things are secured by our Constitution by an attempt to enter forbidden by law. To appeal to the Constitution is to concede that this is a land governed by that supreme law, and as under it the power to exclude has been determined to exist, those who are excluded cannot assert the rights in general obtaining in a land to which they do not yet belong as citizens or otherwise." (Italics ours.)

The reason for the decision appears plain from the extract. An alien who has not yet lawfully entered "does not become one of the people to whom these things are secured by the Constitution". But if he "belongs" as a citizen "or otherwise",[45] he is one of the people to whom these

---

[45] Valuable light in this connection is shed in the dissenting opinion of Justice Brewer in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 736:

"Indeed, there is force in the contention of counsel for appellants, that these persons are 'denizens' within the true meaning and spirit of that word as used in the common law. The old definition was this:

'A denizen of England by letters patent for life, entayl or in fee, whereby he becomes a subject in regard of his person.' Craw v. Ramsay, Vaughan, 278.

And again:

'A denizen is an alien born, but who has obtained ex donatione regis letters patent to make him an English subject. * * * A denizen is in a kind of middle state, between an alien and a natural-born subject and partakes of both of them.' 1 Bl. Com. 374.

In respect to this, after quoting from some of the early constitutions of the states, in which the word 'denizen' is found, counsel say: 'It is claimed that the appellants in this case come completely within the definition quoted above. They are alien born, but they have obtained the same thing as letters patent from this country. They occupy a middle state between an alien and a native. They partake of both of them. They cannot vote, or, as it is stated in Bacon's abridgement, they have no "power of making laws," as a native-born subject can, nor are they here as ordinary aliens. An ordinary alien within this country has come here under no prohibition, and no invitation, but the appellants have come under the direct request and invitation and under the "patent" of the Federal government. They have been guaranteed "the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions in respect to * * * residence" (Burlingame Treaty concluded July 28th, 1868) things are secured by our Constitution. That the "otherwise" includes lawfully resident aliens has not been questioned since Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356. See, Truax v. Raich, 239 U. S. 33; Abrams v. United States, 250 U. S. 616; Hague v. C. I. O., 307 U. S. 496.

And by a dramatic turn, the very alien at bar, Bridges, has been told by this Court that he is one of the people to whom the Bill of Rights is secured by our Constitution. Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252. Is he now to be told that the Government is competent to deport him for the conduct which this Court held was secured by the Bill of Rights? The answer to this question is the full answer to the Government contention in this case that "the First Amendment is inapplicable".

If banishment from the land overhangs free exercise of the Bill of Rights, what did this Court decide in the Hague case, in Truax v. Raich, in Yick Wo, in Bridges v. California? And did this Court except the alien in the Thornhill case,[46] in the Pamphlet cases,[47] in the Religious Freedom cases,[48] in DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353, in Herndon's Case, 301 U. S. 242? No person "with such a threat hanging over his head could be free". Cf. Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 167.

as that enjoyed in the United States by the citizens and subjects of the most favored nation. They have been told that if they would come here they would be treated just the same as we treat an Englishman, an Irishman, or a Frenchman. They have been invited here, and their position is much stronger than that of an alien, in regard to whom there is no guaranty from the government, and who has come not in response to any invitation, but has simply drifted here because there is no prohibition to keep him out. They certainly come within the meaning of 'denizen' as used in the constitutions of the states."

[46] Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88.

Assuming then that the substantive freedoms guaranteed by the Bill of Rights are applicable here, we contend they are violated by Sections 1 and 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended (supra, pp. 3-4), if these sections be construed and applied to authorize the Attorney General's order deporting Bridges. We assert offense to the guarantees of free speech and free assembly and of liberty.

The order of deportation rests upon a finding that Bridges "has been" a member of the Communist Party, an organization found to advocate the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence. There is no evidence or finding that Bridges personally believed in or advocated such doctrine, or understood the Communist Party so to advocate, or ever himself subscribed to such views or himself ever committed or attempted to commit any overt act in the direction of realizing any such views. It is proposed to deport Bridges by imputing to him the supposed forbidden doctrine of the Communist Party, and the imputation rests on the ground only of bare membership.

Consequently, the order of deportation, upon the record here, necessarily gives the statute the construction that, for an alien, mere one time membership in the Communist Party, without his having advocated or subscribed to its supposed forbidden doctrine or understood it to hold such doctrine, is ground for deportation. The question is whether this construction and application of the statute deprives Bridges of the right of freedom of speech and of assembly and of the liberty guaranteed by the First and Fifth Amendments.

The constitutional infirmity we urge here is that the statute as construed and applied strikes not at advocacy of forbidden doctrine, but at innocent, even casual, assembly with those who may so advocate. See Mr. Justice Brandeis, Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, 373.

There is a profound tradition in American life to which all notion of guilt by imputation is abhorrent. It holds that responsibility is personal, that no man shall suffer penalty for the deed of another. No decision of this Court has heretofore rested a conclusion of guilt upon innocent assembly or association. So-called syndicalism laws, when sustained in this Court, have turned decisively on the relation fixed in the statute between membership and knowledge of the unlawful doctrines advocated by the organization. See Whitney v. California, supra; Burns v. United States, 274 U. S. 328, and cf. Gitlow v. New York, 268 U. S. 652, and Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47.

By the deportation law of 1918, however, guilt by association alone was introduced for the first time into a federal law. Neither the Sedition Act of 1798 nor the Espionage Acts of 1917 and 1918 had drawn upon such a conception. As Mr. Chafee has said: "We got safely through the Civil War and the World War without finding it necessary to create group guilt outside the limits of an actual conspiracy" (Free Speech in the United States, 1941, p. 470). Professor Chafee has noted significantly that even the two lawyers charged by the Department of Justice with the enforcement of the Espionage Act during the First World War had publicly condemned statutes penalizing men for mere membership in an organization. Alfred Bettman pronounced such a proposal an "absolutely complete departure from our traditional American doctrines," adding "one of the fundamental conceptions of Anglo Saxon law is that guilt is personal and not by association." John Lord O'Brian said: "Abandonment of the doctrine of personal guilt" in our deportation statute presented an "anomaly in our jurisprudence." The Menace of Administrative Law, 25 Reports, Maryland State Bar Assn., 1920, p. 163. Chief Justice Hughes reminded in 1920, when opposing the expulsion of the Socialist Assemblymen in New York: "It is the essence of the institution of liberty that it be recognized that guilt is personal" (quoted by this Court in Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 154, note 41).

This Court has also drawn lines relevant to judgment here.

DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353, brought to this Court a conviction under the Criminal Syndicalist Law of Oregon. The Act made it a criminal offense to preside at or to assist in the conducting of a meeting of an organization which advocates violence as a means of effecting industrial or political change. A finding that the Communist Party as such did advocate the forbidden doctrine was not disputed on this appeal. DeJonge, a member of the Party, was charged with assisting in the conduct of a meeting called under the auspices of the Communist Party, and, on this charge, convicted. The State contended the gist of the offense was conducting a meeting called by an organization that advocated forbidden doctrine, regardless of what was advocated at the particular meeting so conducted, and that proof of illegal advocacy at such meeting was immaterial.

This Court, in an opinion by Chief Justice Hughes, reversed the conviction. Notwithstanding that it was not disputed on the record that the Communist Party was an organization which advocated forbidden doctrine, this Court held that failure to charge or prove that the Party had advocated forbidden doctrine at the particular meeting was fatal. "His sole offense as charged," said the Court, was "that he had assisted in the conduct of a public meeting, albeit otherwise lawful, which was held under the auspices of the Communist Party" (ibid. 362).

"• • • consistently with the Federal Constitution • • • [such conduct] cannot be made a crime" (p. 365).

Thus, advocacy of forbidden doctrine by the Communist Party was held not imputable even to a meeting called by it and held under its auspices. Legality of the meeting was not affected by the illegality of the Party which called it and held it. Lawful assembly was not made unlawful by virtue of its having been called or managed by groups or persons who in other relations or in other utterances had unlawful objectives. In short, guilt by association was rejected.

In Herndon v. Lowry, 301 U. S. 242, Herndon was convicted under a statute making it a crime to induce others to join in violent overthrow of government. He was a member of the Communist Party, assumed in this case to advocate some unlawful tenets. The conduct at the basis of the criminal charge was his holding of meetings for the purpose of recruiting members in the Party, procuring such members and soliciting contributions for the support of the Party. Although some of the tenets of the Party were assumed to be seditious, and although the persons Herndon had induced to become members of the Party "agreed to abide by the tenets of the Party," the conviction was reversed as a constitutional invasion of the right of free speech. Basic among the reasons for reversal was that there was no proof that Herndon "brought the unlawful aims [of the Party] to their notice" or "that he approved them" (at p. 260).

Thus, again we see rejection of all notion of guilt by association. This Court declined to associate Herndon with the unlawful aims of his Party because it was not shown "he approved them." Nor were Herndon's converts, even though they agreed to abide by the tenets of the Party, associated with any of its unlawful tenets because there was "absence of proof that he [Herndon] brought the unlawful aims to their notice."

In Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, where a conviction was sustained under a state syndicalist law which forbade "knowingly" being a member of a proscribed organization, Mr. Justice Brandeis, with concurrence of Mr. Justice Holmes in a separate opinion, nevertheless said: "The novelty in the prohibition introduced is that the statute aims, not at the practice of criminal syndicalism, nor even directly at the preaching of it, but at association with those who propose to preach it" (p. 373).

The meeting in DeJonge's case was not infected with the supposed illegal character of the Party which called it, absent proof of illegal advocacy at the meeting. Herndon's proselytizing of members into an illegal party was not made crime, "absent proof that he brought the Party's unlawful aims to their attention." Even Miss Whitney's knowing membership in a party preaching criminal syndicalism was said by Mr. Justice Brandeis to be "a right within the protection of the Fourteenth Amendment" (274 U. S. 357, 379). The instruction of this Court then can only mean, in application here, that any relationship between Bridges and the Party may not be transmuted into legal sin, that Bridges in assembling with the Party did not exceed the bounds of free assembly marked by the Constitution,—unless at least it be proven in addition that he had knowledge of the Party's forbidden objectives or doctrines and himself subscribed to them.

Freedom of Speech and assembly are "cognate rights." Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 323. As freedom of speech must not be stifled by threats overhanging its exercise, so freedom of assembly must not be paralyzed by one's fear of being tied to some hidden ultimate aims of others. A "liberty-loving society" sees in assembly the same "command of broadest scope" it sees in speech. Cf. Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252, 263.

There is a second, and by itself decisive, constitutional infirmity in the statutory application here by reason of its necessary dependence on the finding that the Communist Party is a proscribed organization under the statute. If the Court reaches this issue, it will be passing upon it for the first time. See Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 147-8, and inferior federal court cases there cited.

The Communist Party as such is not proscribed by the statute. Indeed, bills to write a definition of "Communist" into the Immigration and Deportation Act of 1918, as amended, and to provide for the deportation of "Communists," as such, failed of passage in Congress in 1932 and again in 1935. Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 132, footnote 8. A similar recommendation by the Attorney General in 1940, the very time of enactment of the operative statute here, got nowhere (supra, pp. 9-10). Even the Nationality Act of 1940 (8 U. S. C. § 705) does not in terms make Communist beliefs or affiliation grounds for refusal of naturalization. In 1936 the Communist Party appeared on the political ballots of thirty-three states, including Arkansas, Delaware, Indiana and Tennessee, where statutes exclude from the ballot parties advocating violent overthrow of government. See 48 Yale Law Jnl., 111, 116, footnote 35, and 37 Columbia Law Review, 86.

We are confronted here, however, with an administrative finding of fact that the Communist Party is an organization that believes in and advocates overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States. Now this "finding of fact" is plainly in the category of "most general conclusions of ultimate fact" and its significance for this Court turns only upon the "underlying facts" relied upon by the fact-finder. Schneider- man v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 129-130. Indeed, in this case the finding of fact implies not only the application of standards of law, but the application of the Constitution. The fact-finder is not permitted to drain the Constitution of its meaning "while this Court sits." As Mr. Justice Jackson said in Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 330:

> "If this Court may not or does not in proper cases inquire whether speech or publication is properly condemned by association [with some variety of 'sedition'], its claim to guardianship of free speech and press is but a hollow one."

Thus, again, easy formulas will not do. This is not at all an issue of whether an administrative finding is so lacking in evidentiary support as to amount to a denial of due process. The administrative finding we are talking about here goes to the jugular of the Bill of Rights.

This Court has, in a long series of decisions, developed a crucial "working principle" for cases in which the scope of constitutional protection of freedom of expression is in issue. That principle is that to justify restriction upon speech or press or assembly, nothing less must be shown than that the danger apprehended from the exercise of those rights is imminent.

> "What finally emerges from the 'clear and present danger' cases is a working principle that the substantive evil must be extremely serious and the degree of imminence extremely high before utterances can be punished. Those cases do not purport to mark the furthermost constitutional boundaries of protected expression, nor do we here. They do no more than recognize a minimum compulsion of the Bill of Rights. For the First Amendment does not speak equivocally. It prohibits any law 'abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press.' It must be taken as a command of the broadest scope that explicit language, read in the context of a liberty-loving society, will allow." Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252, 263.

And the justification for restriction must be affirmative. For "the freedoms of the First Article" occupy "the preferred position" and legislation impinging upon these freedoms "cannot be sustained by any presumption of validity". Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U. S. 158, 167. These "freedoms * * * are to be presumed to be invulnerable and any attempt to sweep [them] away" is "prima facie invalid" (ibid. at p. 173).

The questions here are, has the right "working principle" been applied, and is there substantial ground for believing that it was rightly applied? The only answer possible to the first question, on the record here, is enough to discharge Bridges because it is not even professed by anyone in this case that the clear and present danger test has here been applied to the Communist Party, since it now is and always has been the position of the Government that the Bill of Rights is inapplicable to this case.

Do the fact-finders' subsidiary conclusions nevertheless supply the defect? And may it fairly be said that, although unwittingly, the test has, by them, been met? We have already examined the recommended findings of the presiding inspector adopted by the Attorney General (supra, pp. 16-18). Those pages bear re-reading here. Judge Sears, and after him the Attorney General, not only found no imminence of substantive evil, but, on the contrary, affirmatively found its remoteness. Any objective of overthrow of government by force and violence was specifically said in the Sears report time and again to be "ultimate".

"I am unable to assent to the suggestion," said Mr. Justice Brandeis, "that assembling with a political party, formed to advocate the desirability of a proletarian revolution by mass action at some date necessarily in the future, is not a right within the protection of the Fourteenth Amendment". Whitney v. California; 274 U. S. 357, 379. And see Shaw v. State, 76 Okla. Crim. 271, 303-8, 315-16. Nor, we believe, will this Court assent to the suggestion.

If we examine the actual evidence relied upon, the result is no different. The opinion of the Attorney General and the recommendations of Judge Sears disclose (1) specific reliance upon the Communist Manifesto of 1848, Lenin's State and Revolution, first published in 1917, the Theses and Statutes of the Third International (R. 172-4), and (2) general reliance upon "abundant" "similar expressions in Communist literature" (R. 174), and (3) general reliance upon oral testimony of witnesses to corroborate "the documentary expressions of the teaching of the Communist Party" (R. 175).

Little is to be gained by detailed analysis of this material. It has already been studied by this Court in the Schneiderman case. The Court there said (pp. 157-8):

> "A tenable conclusion from the foregoing is that the Party in 1927 desired to achieve its purpose by peaceful and democratic means, and as a theoretical matter justified the use of force and violence only as a method of preventing an attempted forcible counter-overthrow once the Party had obtained control in a peaceful manner, or as a method of last resort to enforce the majority will if at some indefinite future time because of peculiar circumstances constitutional or peaceful channels were no longer open.
> There is a material difference between agitation and exhortation calling for present violent action which creates a clear and present danger of public disorder or other substantive evil, and mere doctrinal justification or prediction of the use of force under hypothetical conditions at some indefinite future time—prediction that is not calculated or intended to be presently acted upon, thus leaving opportunity for general discussion and the calm processes of thought and reason."

While it is true that in the same opinion, this Court also stated that it was not saying that a reasonable man could not possibly have found that the Party in 1927 actively urged the overthrow of the Government by force and violence (at p. 153), there is a basic distinction that must be kept in mind in any attempt to relate the passage to this case. The narrow question for decision in the Schneiderman case was whether advocacy of such doctrine was incompatible with the statutory requirement of attachment to the Constitution at the time the privilege of naturalization was being extended, and not, as here, whether such advocacy, without more, transcends the guarantees of the Bill of Rights. The Court by this passage did not mean to say that such advocacy, without more, if viewed in the frame of "clear and present danger" or, more largely, in the frame of the Bill of Rights, might reasonably be held outside the area of constitutionally protected speech. The same Court's subsequently drawn line against only "agitation and exhortation calling for present violent action which creates a clear and present danger of public disorder or other substantive evil" (at p. 157) and its suggested comparison with Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 352, Justice Brandeis' concurring opinion in Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, 372-80, and Taylor v. Mississippi, 319 U. S. 583 (at pp. 589-90), is striking proof that the Court's previous indication that a reasonable man could possibly have found forbidden advocacy on the basis of the relevant documents alone was far removed from an indication that a reasonable man could possibly have found, on the same basis that the "clear and present danger" test had been transcended by the Party.

The Schneiderman case did hold, however, that such proof as here did not support denaturalization.

Is it to be said that virtually the identical proof does support deportation of a man who has been here twenty-five years? Like denaturalization, deportation is a fate of utmost "gravity", it seeks to undo "new relationships and new interests" which flow from prolonged residence in this country, and when, as here, it turns on issues of belief, the proof is no less "treacherous". See Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, 675.

There is a third, and by itself sufficient, constitutional infirmity in the statutory application to the extent that it rests on the finding that Bridges "has been affiliated with" supposedly proscribed organizations (R. 104).

We have already argued that the conduct of Bridges, even as stated in the findings of fact made by the Attorney General, does not legally satisfy any sound definition of the concept of affiliation (supra, pp. 53-64). Here we argue, more basically, that to proscribe such conduct as is here found to constitute affiliation is in any event offensive to freedom of speech and assembly and to due process of law.

As Mr. Justice Jackson recently observed, modern legislative attempts at inroads on the democratic freedoms are not "direct and candid" but avail of a flanking technique. They associate "the speaking with some other factor which the state may regulate so as to bring the whole under official control." Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 330. So, here, exercises of speech and association, if otherwise beyond the reach of government, as we contend, may not be brought within its reach by characterizing them as "affiliation." This Court must inquire whether the particular exercises of speech and assembly shown in the record are properly condemned by such characterization.

We have already summarized the substance of the evidence on this issue (supra, p. 16). These, in brief, are the items of speech and conduct which are said to add up to the forbidden relationship of affiliation: Bridges once spoke favorably of the American Youth Congress and the National Students' League (said to be Communist front organizations) in appreciation of their aid to his union in the 1934 strike (R. 1484-5); he once said (denied by Bridges [R. 7576]) that "the only way that a young fellow could get along in the labor movement today was to join the Communist Party" (R. 7377); he had once discussed with some Communists the policy expressed in a telegram to one of his local union officials (R. 1961, 1991) (denied by Bridges [R. 5849]); he did not object to the publication of Communist releases in a trade-union newspaper where the releases were helpful to his union (R. 5870); he steadfastly opposed red baiting in the trade-union movement (R. 97); he enlisted and accepted the cooperation of the MWIU during the 1934 waterfront strike; he accepted the aid of the Communist West Coast paper, the Western Worker; he urged seamen who were members of the International Seamen's Union, which was recalcitrant in supporting the strike, to leave that union and to join the MWIU (R. 3257-8); he opposed the joint resolution repudiating Communist support and he discussed his attitude with Darcy, a Communist (R. 250); he sought to have MWIU delegates on the joint strike committee (R. 6348); incidental to the preparation for and conduct of the 1934 strike he cooperated in the editing of a mimeographed paper distributed on the waterfront, said to be, but denied by Bridges to be, (R. 3234, 6169-72) published under the auspices of the MWIU (supra, pp. 57-63).

Bridges asserted that the above items of speech and conduct which he candidly avowed illustrated his considered philosophy: that he is, above all, interested in the fortunes of his union, that he will seek cooperation from any helpful source when its interests are at stake (R. 374-5), because effective trade union management requires no less.

Dean Landis, confronted with proof of essentially the same character, said (R. 635-6):

> "This evidence * * * falls short of the statutory definition of affiliation. Persons engaged in bitter industrial struggles tend to seek help and assistance from every available source. But the intermittent solicitation and acceptance of such help must be shown to have ripened into those bonds of mutual cooperation and alliance that entail continuing reciprocal duties and responsibilities before they can be deemed to come within the statutory requirement of affiliation. * * * To expand that statutory definition to embrace within its terms ad hoc cooperation on objectives whose pursuit is clearly allowable under our constitutional system, or friendly associations that have not been shown to have resulted in the employment of illegal means, is warranted neither by reason nor by law."

The speech and the action here pictured must be seen in the context in which they are set,—the important industrial conflict on the West Coast in 1934, its preparation, conduct and consequences. Of these, too, we have already spoken (supra, pp. 5-6). Bridges' strike leadership was surely militant, aggressive and effective. But there is no evidence in this record to call for even slight amendment of the judgment, on this issue, of Dean Landis (R. 635):

> "That Bridges' aims are energetically radical may be admitted, but the proof fails to establish that the methods he seeks to employ to realize them are other than those that the framework of democratic and constitutional government permits."

There is a related approach by which it is made equally plain that the statutory application here offends the Constitution. As we have said, the order of deportation upon the record here necessarily gives the statute the construction that for an alien mere one-time membership in the Communist Party "for no matter how short a time or how far in the past so long as it was after the date of entry" (Sen. Rep. No. 1721, p. 3 and Conf. Rep. H. R. 2683, p. 9, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.), without his ever having advocated or subscribed to its supposed forbidden doctrine or understood it to hold such doctrine,[49] is ground for deportation.

Presumably, the power of Congress over deportation is exercised so as to eliminate undesirable aliens. But must not this power of Congress, like any other of its admitted powers, be exercised in a manner showing some reasonable and justifiable relation between the statute and the purpose for which the power exists?

The "reasonable relation doctrine" is firmly established in this Court. It has been applied to determining whether (1) a prima facie presumption declared by a statute is justifiable, and (2) whether the conduct proscribed by a statute bears a reasonable relation to the purpose for which the power to legislate exists. Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 238, followed in Taylor v. Georgia, 315 U. S. 25, and Pollock v. Williams, 322 U. S. 4; Tot v. United States, 319 U. S. 463—involving presumptions created by statutes; and Cummings v. State of Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 319-20; Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U. S. 510, 534-35; and Yu Cong Eng v. Trinidad, 271 U. S. 500, 525—involving the application of the rule of reason to substantive statutory provisions.

Surely this elementary restraint applies as well to deportation statutes. Lest any irrelevant fact be selected as the statutory ground for deportation there must be a rational relation between the ground for deportation and the legislative judgment of undesirability.

[49] Two of the Government witnesses testified that they were members of the Communist Party for several years before unearthing its alleged basic purpose—the use of force and violence (R. 1523-30, 2228-32).

The proper approach to the statute and its application, in light of its construction, is again found in the approach adopted by this Court in DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353. Chief Justice Hughes said (pp. 362-3):

> "The broad reach of the statute as thus applied [by the Supreme Court of Oregon] is plain. While defendant was a member of the Communist Party, that membership was not necessary to conviction on such a charge. A like fate might have attended any speaker, although not a member, who 'assisted in the conduct' of the meeting. However innocuous the object of the meeting, however lawful the subjects and tenor of the addresses, however reasonable and timely the discussion, all those assisting in the conduct of the meeting would be subject to imprisonment as felons if the meeting were held by the Communist Party. * * * Thus if the Communist Party had called a public meeting in Portland to discuss the tariff, or the foreign policy of the Government, or taxation, or relief, or candidacies for the offices of President, members of Congress, Governor, or state legislators, every speaker who assisted in the conduct of the meeting would be equally guilty with the defendant in this case, upon the charge as here defined and sustained. The list of illustrations might be indefinitely extended to every variety of meetings under the auspices of the Communist Party although held for the discussion of political issues or to adopt protests and pass resolutions of an entirely innocent and proper character."

Under the statutory application here if an alien became a member of the Communist Party without knowing of its alleged aims, never learned of them, and ceased to be a member many years ago, he would be deported. Again, if an alien joined the Party ignorant of its alleged purposes but resigned upon learning of them, he also would be deported, although in the eyes of many he would have demonstrated by his conduct his adherence to our constitutional system. In fact, every alien against whom some testimony may be adduced that he was once a "fellow traveler" can be exiled. The statute does not require even membership, and "affiliation," as we have seen, may be a broad term.

See also Chafee, Free Speech in the United States (1941), page 445.

The District Court below concluded that while probably aliens were protected against arbitrary statutes,[50] the statute, as construed, was not unreasonable (49 F. Supp. at 300-301; R. 735-7). The Court supported this conclusion by three grounds: First, the Court said that even if the aliens, one time members, have discontinued their affiliation, "they, nevertheless, have manifested a spirit of disloyalty; they have shown a willingness to accept the hospitality and protection offered them by this country, while participating in activities designed * * * toward the eventual revolutionary and violent overthrow of the government whose protection they have enjoyed". But can one fairly charge an individual with "disloyalty" and abuse of "hospitality" in one breath and in another assert that it is immaterial if the alien knew or did not know of the doctrines for which he is condemned? Second, the Court found support in decisions sustaining laws which make certain actions criminal without knowledge. No sound analogy can be drawn to such criminal statutes. The ends they serve are different. One of the recognized purposes of criminal laws is to deter the commission of crimes by others, and the effectiveness of the deterrence does not depend upon the knowledge of the man convicted. The purpose of deportation statutes, however, is to eliminate dangerous individuals, and even if deterrence could be regarded also as a purpose, it would hardly be served by a retroactive law. And third, the Court urged that proof of knowledge is difficult. It is no more difficult than in scores of other situations in which the law requires it, and the same argument was made and rejected by this Court in Tot v. United States, 319 U. S. 463, 469, where the attempt was made to sustain a prima facie presumption which had been written into the statute. A plea of difficulty does not excuse failure to prove an essential element. See Mr. Justice Murphy Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, 679-80.

Of the cases above cited, to which this Court has applied the rule of reasonable relation, Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, is of particular value. After the Civil War, the border state of Missouri sought to punish individuals who had been affiliated with the Confederate cause, and it did so by providing that no one might serve as an attorney, an officer of a corporation, a teacher, or a priest or minister, without first taking oath that he had never aided in the rebellion against the United States. A priest was convicted for performing his duties without first taking the oath, and he challenged the constitutionality of the law. This Court held the bill bad, both because it was an ex post facto law and because there was no reasonable relation between the oath required and the purpose for which the legislature alone had any right to legislate. Mr. Justice Field declared (p. 320):

"It is manifest upon the simple statement of many of the acts and of the professions and pursuits; that there is no such relation between them as to render a denial of the commission of the acts at all appropriate as a condition of allowing the exercise of the professions and pursuits. The oath could not, therefore, have been required as a means of ascertaining whether parties were qualified or not for their respective callings or the trusts with which they were charged. It was required in order to reach the person, not the calling. It was exacted, not from any notion that the several acts designated indicated unfitness for the callings, but because it was thought that the several acts deserved punishment, and that for many of them there was no way to inflict punishment except by depriving the parties, who had committed them, of some of the rights and privileges of the citizen."

The conclusion on this head of our Brief is that the alien Bridges may not be deported for thought, speech or conduct secured by the Bill of Rights, that the grounds for deporting Bridges comprise thought, speech and conduct secured by the Bill of Rights and bear no reasonable relation to the purpose for which governmental power to deport exists.

Conclusion

The order denying Bridges' petition for habeas corpus should be reversed, his release granted, and the warrant for his deportation cancelled.

At the time of filing such exceptions, an alien or his counsel or representative shall state whether or not an opportunity for oral argument is desired and shall specify a date for such argument. The time for oral argument shall be fixed not less than 3 days nor more than 18 days after the date on which the exceptions are filed, except in cases where the alien is detained at the expense of the Government in which cases oral argument shall be set not more than 5 days from the date of the filing of exceptions. The Board of Immigration Appeals may in its discretion, upon good cause shown in an application by the alien or his counsel or representative, grant permission to file exceptions and requests for oral argument after the time fixed by the officer in charge for such filing has expired. The Board shall have authority, upon its own motion or upon request, to fix or to change the date upon which oral argument is to be heard.*

90.11 Board of Immigration Appeals; service of proposed findings, conclusions of law and order. Whenever, in any deportation case in which no exceptions have been taken to the proposed findings, conclusions of law and order of the presiding inspector, the Board of Immigration Appeals after consideration of the record believes that an order less favorable to the alien than that proposed by the presiding inspector should be entered, it shall prepare its own proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law, and order and shall forward them to the district director of the district in which the case arose for service upon the alien or his counsel or representative. The alien or his counsel or representative shall be given opportunity, within a time fixed by the Board of Immigration Appeals, to file exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Board. If exceptions are filed, further procedure in the case shall be in accordance with the provisions of § 90.5 hereof. If no exceptions are filed within the time prescribed, the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Board of Immigration Appeals shall, subject to the provisions of § 90.12 hereof, be made final.*

Part 150—Arrest and Deportation

* * * * * * * *

§ 150.1 (a) Investigation of aliens reported, or believed, to be subject to deportation. The case of every alien reported, or believed, to be subject to arrest and deportation, shall be thoroughly investigated by such officer as may be designated for that purpose.

(b) Investigations; purpose. The purpose of the investigation shall be to discover whether or not a prima facie case for deportation exists; that is, whether there is credible evidence reasonably establishing (1) that the person investigated is an alien, and (2) that he is subject to deportation.

(c) Investigations; interrogation of aliens under investigation. All statements secured from the alien or any other person during the investigation, which are to be used as evidence, shall be taken down in writing; and the investigating officer shall ask the person interrogated to sign the statement. Whenever such a recorded statement is to be obtained from any person, the investigating officer shall identify himself to such person and the interrogation of that person shall be under oath or affirmation. Whenever a recorded statement is to be obtained from a person under investigation, he shall be warned that any statement made by him may be used as evidence in any subsequent proceeding.

(d) Investigations; refusal to make recorded statement under oath or affirmation. Whenever, in the course of an investigation, admissions or statements are obtained from an alien or statements are made by any other person which indicate that the alien may be subject to arrest and deportation, but the alien or other person refuses to make a recorded statement under oath or affirmation or refuses or is unable to sign the recorded statement, by name or by mark, the investigating officer shall make a report in writing to the officer in charge, setting forth the facts admitted or stated as to the alien's status under the immigration laws. This report may be used in support of an application for a warrant of arrest, when the investigating officer certifies that no other evidence to establish the facts stated in the report can be readily obtained. Statements obtained in confidence may be included in such report, without disclosure of their source, only if the officer in charge certifies that in his belief such statements are trustworthy.

(e) Investigations; anonymous information. Information received from a person whose name or address is not disclosed to the investigating officer or is known or appears to be fictitious shall not be used to support an application for a warrant of arrest. Such information shall be used only as a guide to obtaining competent evidence to support the facts alleged.

(f) Investigations; extent of interrogation. Where an alien under investigation, after reasonable questioning, makes no admissions which bring him within a deportable class, interrogation shall cease, and the investigating officer, if he still believes that the alien is subject to deportation, shall attempt to secure from other sources the necessary evidence.*

* * * * * * * *

150.6 (a) Hearing; when to be accorded under warrant. After the alien has been taken into custody under a warrant of arrest and has been given a reasonable time to arrange for his defense, including, if desired, representation by counsel, and after the formal warrant of arrest has been received, if arrest was accomplished under a telegraphic warrant, the alien shall be granted a hearing to determine whether he is subject to deportation on the charges stated in the warrant of arrest. A hearing under a telegraphic warrant of arrest, and prior to the receipt of the formal warrant of arrest, shall be held only on the request of the alien or his counsel, or when, in the discretion of the officer in charge, it is deemed impracticable to await the receipt of the formal warrant. The alien shall be informed of his right to request a hearing upon a telegraphic warrant prior to the receipt of the formal warrant.

(b) Hearing; presiding inspector to be other than investigating officer. The immigrant inspector assigned to conduct a hearing under a warrant of arrest shall be referred to as the "presiding inspector." The immigrant inspector who conducted the investigation in the case shall not act as presiding inspector unless the alien consents thereto. The presiding inspector shall rule upon all objections to the introduction of evidence or motions made during the course of the hearing. In cases to which no examining inspector has been assigned pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (n) of this section, the presiding inspector shall conduct the interrogation of the alien and the witnesses in behalf of the Government and shall cross-examine the alien's witnesses and present such evidence as is necessary to support the charges in the warrant of arrest. The presiding inspector shall see that all documentary or written evidence is properly identified and introduced into the record as exhibits by number, unless read into the record. He shall further make sure that, subject to the provisions of paragraphs (d), (e), and (g) of this section, the record is a verbatim report of everything that is stated during the course of the hearing, including the oaths administered, the warnings given to the alien or the witnesses, and the rulings on objections, except statements made off the record with the consent of the alien or his counsel.

(c) Hearing; procedure; notice of charges. At the beginning of a hearing under a warrant of arrest, the presiding inspector shall (1) permit the alien to inspect the warrant of arrest and inform him of the charges contained therein by repeating them verbatim and explaining them in language which will clearly convey to the alien the nature of the charges he must answer; (2) apprise the alien, if not represented by counsel, that he may be so represented if he desires and require him to state then and there for the record whether he desires counsel; (3) place the alien under oath or affirmation; (4) advise the alien of the penalty for perjury; and (5) enter of record as an exhibit, identified by number, the formal warrant of arrest, or a decoded copy of the telegraphic warrant if hearing is held thereunder. The presiding inspector shall further advise the alien of the provisions of paragraph (g) of this section concerning applications for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation under the provisions of section 19 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended, in all cases except those in which the alien is charged with being subject to deportation upon one of the grounds mentioned in section 19 (d) of the said Act. A continuance of the hearing for the purpose of obtaining counsel shall not be granted more than once, unless sufficient cause for the granting of more time is shown.

(d) Hearing; representation by counsel. If counsel be selected, he shall be permitted to be present during the hearing, to offer evidence to meet any evidence presented or adduced by the Government, and to cross-examine witnesses called by the Government. Counsel shall be permitted to state his objections succinctly, and they shall be entered on the record. Argument of counsel in support of his objections shall be excluded from the record. Counsel, however, may submit such argument in the form of a brief to accompany the record.

(e) Hearing; where representation by counsel waived. If representation by counsel be waived the alien shall be permitted to offer evidence to meet any evidence presented or adduced by the Government, to cross-examine witnesses called by the Government, and to make objections, which shall be entered on the record, but his arguments in support of the objections may, in the discretion of the presiding inspector be excluded from the record, in which event, however, the alien shall be permitted to submit such arguments in writing to accompany the record.

(f) Hearing; interpreters. Where the services of an interpreter are found necessary in the conduct of a hearing, the interpreter, if not an employee of the Service, shall be sworn to interpret and translate accurately.

(g) Hearing; application for departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation. At any time during the hearing the alien may give notice that he wishes to apply for the privilege of departing from the United States to any country of his choice at his own expense in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation under the provisions of section 19 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended. Such application may be made in the alternative for either type of relief, and a request for the privilege of preexamination may be made in conjunction with a request for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation. The alien's application shall be made in writing under oath or affirmation on Form I-255 accompanied by General Information Form I-55, duly verified, which shall be filed in duplicate with the presiding inspector. The original copy of such application and General Information Form, when received, shall be attached to and made a part of the record. The alien shall be warned that any statements made by him in such application or General Information Form may be used as evidence in any proceeding to determine his right to enter, reenter, pass through or reside in the United States and that false answers to any of the questions in such application or General Information Form may bar him from the relief which he requests. The presiding inspector may in his discretion assist the alien in filling out the General Information Form by explaining the questions to him, or he may ask the alien each question directly and record his answer upon the form, or he may require the alien to fill out the form and submit it to him within a reasonable period of time after the conclusion of the hearing. Explanations during the hearing or the reading of questions from the General Information Form need not be made a part of the record of the hearing.

(h) Hearing; order in which evidence shall be presented. The presiding inspector or examining inspector when interrogating the alien at the hearing, shall develop in order (1) the facts concerning his alienage and (2) the evidence relating to the charges in the warrant of arrest or to any additional charges applicable. If the alien has applied or given notice of intention to apply for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation as provided in §§ 150.6 (g), 150.8 (b), or 150.10 of this Part, the presiding inspector shall inquire thoroughly into all questions relating to the alien's eligibility to the relief requested insofar as such inquiry is necessary to supplement the General Information Form.

(i) Hearing; use of statements or admissions made during investigation. A recorded statement made by the alien

(other than a General Information Form) or by any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statements made during the investigation. An affidavit of an inspector as to the statements made by the alien or any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence, otherwise than in support of the testimony of the inspector, only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statement and the inspector is unavailable to testify in person.

(j) Hearing; record to contain personal history. All records of hearings shall fully set forth, either in the General Information Form if filed or otherwise, the name or names of the alien (correctly spelled); place of the alien's birth; the name of the nearest town of importance to such place of birth; the province and country in which such place is located; the alien's religion; the names and locations of churches or schools he has attended; the last address of the alien in his native country, in the country of which he is a citizen, or subject, and in the country in which he has last resided; the country in which he embarked for the United States or for foreign contiguous territory; correct names and addresses and the citizenship or nationality of the alien's nearest relatives residing in the country of his birth, and correct names and addresses of all near relatives residing in the United States.

(k) Hearing; physical or mental disability cases; record to contain medical certificate. The record of the hearing accorded an alien who is suffering from any mental or serious physical disability shall be supplemented by a medical certificate showing (a) whether such alien is in condition to be deported without danger to life or health, and (b) whether he will require special care and attention in case of deportation overseas.

(l) Hearing; additional charges. If, during the hearing, it shall appear to the presiding inspector that there exists a reason additional to those stated in the warrant of arrest why the alien is subject to deportation, he shall notify the alien that such additional charge is lodged against him, and shall proceed with the hearing upon such charge in like manner as on charges contained in a warrant of arrest.

(m) Hearing; alien to be warned of disabilities respecting reentry to the United States. Before the hearing is concluded, the alien shall be warned by the presiding inspector that the Act of March 4, 1929, as amended, provides that any alien who, after arrest and deportation or departure from the United States in pursuance of an order of deportation, enters or attempts to enter the United States, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be liable to imprisonment for not more than two years or a fine of not more than $1,000, or both such fine and imprisonment, unless such entry or attempted entry is made after one year from the date of such departure or deportation, and the alien, prior to his reembarkation at a place outside of the United States or prior to his application in foreign contiguous territory for admission to the United States, has been granted by the Attorney General permission to reapply for admission to the United States.

(n) Hearing; assignment of examining inspector in addition to presiding inspector; duties of inspectors. The officer in charge of the district in which the hearing is to be held may, in his discretion, assign a second immigrant inspector to act at the hearing as the "examining inspector". The examining inspector shall conduct the actual interrogation of the alien and of the witnesses in behalf of the Government and the examination or cross-examination of the alien's witnesses, present such evidence as is necessary to support the charges in the warrant of arrest, lodge such additional charges as he may find applicable in the manner hereinbefore directed, and, if the alien has applied for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation as provided in §§ 150.6 (g), 150.8 (b), or 150.10 of this Part, inquire thoroughly into the alien's eligibility for such relief.* The presiding inspector in such cases, shall exercise all functions not herein assigned to the examining inspector, and he may, in addition, take such part in the interrogation of the alien and witnesses as he may deem necessary to assure that a proper hearing is accorded to the alien.* (Sec. 19, 39 Stat. 889, 54 Stat. 671; 8 U. S. C. 155; Sec. 1, 45 Stat. 1551, 46 Stat. 41, 47 Stat. 166; 8 U. S. C. 180, 181.)

150.7 (a) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; preparation by presiding inspector. As soon as practicable after the hearing has been concluded, the presiding inspector shall prepare a memorandum setting forth a summary of the evidence adduced at the hearing, his proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a proposed order.

(b) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; eligibility for departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation. If the alien has applied for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation as provided in §§ 150.6 (g), 150.8 (b) or 150.10 of this Part, the presiding inspector shall follow his conclusions of law as to the alien's deportability with a discussion of the evidence relating to the alien's eligibility for such relief and of his reasons for his proposed order. He shall then state in numbered paragraphs his proposed findings of fact and his proposed conclusions of law as to the alien's eligibility for the relief requested.

(c) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; proposed order. In the proposed order the presiding inspector shall recommend cancellation of the proceedings, deportation, departure under order of deportation, departure in lieu of deportation, or suspension of deportation in accordance with the judgment he has made on the basis of the evidence adduced at the hearing.

(d) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; service of findings of presiding officer. A copy of the presiding inspector's memorandum containing his discussion of the evidence, proposed findings of fact, proposed conclusions of law and proposed order shall be furnished to the alien or his counsel in all instances by personal service, if practicable, otherwise by registered mail, and a return receipt therefor shall be obtained. A copy also shall be furnished to the examining inspector, if an examining inspector has been assigned to the case.

(e) Proposed findings, conclusions and order; filing of exceptions. The alien or his counsel or representatives shall be allowed by the officer in charge a reasonable time (not to exceed 10 days except on showing of good cause that more time is necessary) in which to file exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the presiding inspector and to submit a brief, if desired. Reasonable extensions of time for the filing of exceptions or brief may be granted in the discretion of the officer in charge. The examining inspector shall promptly file exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions and order of the presiding inspector, or state in writing that he waives the filing of exceptions.*

For the duration of the War which the United States declared existed against Japan on December 8, 1941, and against Germany and Italy on December 11, 1941, alien seamen who entered the United States on or after September 1, 1939, or who shall hereafter enter the United States and against whom deportation proceedings have been or may be instituted shall be allowed a period of 3 days in which to file exceptions or waive the filing of exceptions to the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Presiding Inspector and to submit a brief, if desired, in lieu of the time specified in § 150.7 (e) of this title. If oral argument before the Board of Immigration Appeals is requested in behalf of such alien seamen, the time for such argument shall be fixed not more than 3 days from the day notice was given to the alien of the proposed findings, conclusions, and order of the Presiding Inspector in lieu of the time specified in § 90.5 of this title.

150.8 (a) Reopening the hearing. At any time prior to the forwarding of the record of hearing to the Central Office, the officer in charge of the district may direct that a case be reopened for proper cause; and at any time prior to submission of the record to the Board of Immigration Appeals, the Central Office may direct a reopening thereof for proper cause. After the record has been submitted to the Board of Immigration Appeals, the case may only be reopened upon direction of the Board of Immigration Appeals. Requests by aliens, or their representatives, for a reopening of a hearing must be in writing and set forth the grounds for the application. If a request for a reopening made prior to the submission of the record to the Board of Immigration Appeals is denied by the Central Office or the officer in charge of the district of origin, a report setting forth the reasons for the denial shall be furnished the Board of Immigration Appeals with the record.

(b) Reopening the hearing; applications for departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation. After the close of a hearing and prior to the submission of the record to the Board of Immigration Appeals, an application by the alien for the privilege of departure in lieu of deportation or for suspension of deportation under the provisions of Section 19 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended, may only be made in conjunction with a request, pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section, that the hearing be reopened. After the submission of the record to the Board of Immigration Appeals, such an application may only be made in conjunction with a motion to reopen the hearing, made pursuant to section 90.9 of this title.* (Sec. 19, 39 Stat. 889, 54 Stat. 671; 8 U. S. C. 155.)

v.

I. F. WIXON, AS DISTRICT DIRECTOR, IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RESPONDENT

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion in the circuit court of appeals of Circuit Judge Wilbur (R. 7770–7793), the concurring opinion of Circuit Judge Stephens (R. 7793–7794), and the dissenting opinion of Circuit Judge Healy (R. 7794–7809) are reported at 144 F. (2d) 927.[1] The opinion of Judge Stephens

[1] The appeal was heard before a bench of five circuit judges (R. 7770). Judge Mathews agreed with Judges Wilbur and Stephens (R. 7794); Judge Garrecht agreed with the dissent (R. 7809).

(R. 7811–7812) rendered in connection with the denial of a petition for rehearing is reported at 144 F. (2d) 944.[2] The opinion and order of the district court (R. 723–759) are reported at 49 F. Supp. 292.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the circuit court of appeals was entered June 26, 1944 (R. 7810). A petition for rehearing was denied September 27, 1944 (R. 7811). The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed December 27, 1944. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether, by the tests applicable in a habeas corpus proceeding instituted to secure collateral review of a deportation order, the evidence adequately sustained the Attorney General's findings that petitioner, after entering the United States, was a member of the Communist Party and affiliated with that Party and with the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

2. Whether petitioner was denied due process by reason of alleged abuses committed in the institution and conduct of the deportation proceeding.

---

[2] Judge Stephens, on November 1, 1944, filed an amendment to his opinion (R. 7815).

3. Whether the deportation statute as construed and applied to petitioner denies him freedom of speech and association in violation of his constitutional rights.

> In every case where any person is ordered deported from the United States under the provisions of this Act, or of any law or treaty, the decision of the Secretary of Labor shall be final.[5]

STATEMENT

Petitioner is an alien,[6] a native and citizen of Australia (R. 778–780, 7736–7737), who entered the United States in April 1920 (R. 791, 7735). He has been in the United States continuously since that time, apart from several voyages as a seaman on American vessels, the last of which occurred in 1922 (R. 791–792). In March 1938, deportation proceedings were instituted against petitioner under Section 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920

[5] Since June 14, 1940, the immigration laws have been administered by the Attorney General. See footnote 3 (p. 4, supra).

[6] Petitioner has filed three declarations of intention to become a citizen (Gov. Exs. 277, R. 6070–6074; 279, R. 6089; 296, R. 7735). He allowed the first two to lapse (R. 508), and the last, which was filed on March 28, 1939, apparently is still pending.

(40 Stat. 1012, 41 Stat. 1008–1009)[7] on the ground that after his entry into the United States he had become a member of and affiliated with an organization that advised, advocated and taught the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States and that caused to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States (R. 73–74, 503). James M. Landis, Dean of the Harvard Law School, was appointed trial examiner for the purpose of hearing the case, and hearings were

[7] Prior to its amendment by Title II, Section 23, of the Act of June 28, 1940 (c. 439, 54 Stat. 673, pp. 4–5, supra), Section 2 of the 1918 Act (40 Stat. 1012) read as follows:

"That any alien who, at any time after entering the United States, is found to have been at the time of entry, or to have become thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section one of this Act, shall, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Labor, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided in the Immigration Act of February fifth, nineteen hundred and seventeen. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned in this Act irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States."

The 1940 Amendment changed only the first paragraph of Section 1 of the 1918 Act, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920 (c. 251, 41 Stat. 1008–1009). Prior to its amendment, the first paragraph read as follows: "That the following aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States." This was amended by the 1940 Act to read: "That any alien who, at any time, shall be or shall have been a member of any one of the following classes shall be excluded from admission into the United States:"

held from July 10 to September 14, 1939 (R. 74, 504).

On June 12, 1939, following the decision of this Court in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22,[8] the warrant upon which the proceedings had been instituted was amended to charge that petitioner both had been and then was a member of or affiliated with the organization described in the warrant (R. 503). At the hearings before Dean Landis, the Government claimed that petitioner was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States, and that the party was an organization of the character described in the 1918 Act (R. 503–504, 508). Petitioner denied that he was a member of the Communist Party or had ever been a member (R. 509), and in December 1939 Dean Landis concluded that the evidence established neither that petitioner "is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States of America" (R. 636). Accordingly, he did not pass upon the question of whether that party was an organization within the Act (R. 497). In January 1940, the Secretary of Labor sustained Dean Landis and dismissed the proceedings against petitioner (R. 75, 139).

On June 28, 1940, Congress amended the deportation statute in question so as to provide for deportation of an alien who was "at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter" a member of the classes of aliens specified (Act of June 28, 1940, c. 439, Title II, sec. 23, 54 Stat. 673; see pp. 3–5, supra). The sponsors of the amendment stated that it was designed to obviate the construction placed upon the statute by the Strecker case that only present membership or affiliation required deportation (86 C. R. 8343, 9031–9032). The Attorney General then directed the Federal Bureau of Investigation to determine whether under the statute, as amended, grounds existed for reopening the deportation proceedings against petitioner, and as a result of this investigation a second deportation proceeding was instituted against petitioner on February 14, 1941 (R. 76).[9] The warrant of arrest charged that petitioner was deportable under the provisions of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Acts of June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940 (pp. 3–5, supra) in that, after entering the United States, he had been a member of or affiliated with an organization (1) that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States; and (2) that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or (3) that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue or display, written or printed matter advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force or by violence of the Government of the United States (Gov. Ex. 1; R. 771–773; 142–143).

Charles B. Sears, a retired judge of the New York Court of Appeals, was appointed an inspector in the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Justice to preside over the hearings, take testimony, and make appropriate recommendations (R. 76, 141).[10] At the hearings before Judge Sears, petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party and subsidiaries or allies of the party, notably the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and his membership in the Industrial Workers of the World constituted the conduct claimed by the Government as grounds for petitioner's deportation (R. 144, 147, 799, 807–808).[11] Judge Sears held hearings in San Francisco from March 31 to June 12, 1941, at which the petitioner was represented by counsel and the public and press were admitted (R. 76, 143–145). The evidence covered 44 volumes of 7546 typewritten pages; and, in addition, the Government introduced 297 exhibits, and the petitioner 62 (R. 76, 143–144).

[10] The Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service provide in respect of deportation proceedings that the alien shall be accorded a hearing before an immigrant inspector to determine whether he is subject to deportation on the charges stated in the warrant of arrest, at which hearing the alien is entitled to representation by counsel and to offer evidence in his behalf. As soon as practicable after the hearing has been concluded, the inspector is required to prepare a memorandum setting forth a summary of the evidence adduced at the hearing, his proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a proposed order, which are to be furnished to the alien or his counsel, who may file exception thereto and submit a brief (8 C. F. R. 150.6, 1941 Supp.). Thereafter, the case is heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals, a body in the office of the Attorney General authorized in his behalf to perform his functions in relation to

deportation, but responsible solely to the Attorney General (8 C. F. R., 1940 Supp., 90.2–90.3). If exceptions have been filed, oral argument before the Board is permitted (ibid., 90.5). Where a member of the Board dissents, where the Board certifies that a question of difficulty is involved, or in any case in which the Attorney General directs, the Board must refer the case to the Attorney General for review, and, if the Attorney General reverses the decision of the Board, the Attorney General must state in writing his conclusions and the reasons for his decision (ibid., 90.12).

[11] During the hearings before Judge Sears, the warrant of arrest was amended to include the charge that petitioner was deportable because of his membership in the I. W. W., an organization claimed by the Government to fall within the provisions of subsection (c) of Section 1 of the 1918 Act, as amended, supra, p. 3, relating to organizations advising, advocating, or teaching "(3) the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or (4) sabotage" (R. 144).

On September 26, 1941, Judge Sears transmitted to the Attorney General a Memorandum of Decision, analyzing the evidence which had been adduced, and containing proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law and order (R. 76–77, 134–347). Judge Sears found that the Communist Party of the United States of America was "from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time * * * an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;" that it was an organization that "writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, and displays printed matter advising, advocating, or teaching" such overthrow; that it was an organization "that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching" such overthrow; that it was an organization that "has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue and display, printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching" such overthrow; that the Marine Workers Industrial Union "was a part of the Communist Party, dominated and controlled by it" and advocated a similar overthrow of the Government of the United States; and that after entering the United States, petitioner had been a member of the Communist Party and had been affiliated with both the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 337–338).[12] Accordingly, Judge Sears concluded that petitioner was subject to deportation under the statute involved (R. 338–339) and submitted a proposed order for petitioner's deportation to Australia (R. 340–341). Petitioner filed exceptions to the proposed findings (R. 348–365), and, briefs having been filed, the case was heard on oral argument before the Board of Immigration Appeals (see fn. 10, pp. 9–10, supra) on November 24, 1941 (R. 369). On January 3, 1942, the Board rendered an opinion rejecting Judge Sears' proposed findings on the issues of petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 367–489), and affirmatively found that petitioner had not been a member of or affiliated with those organizations at any time after he entered the United States (R. 490).

In view of its findings on the issues of membership and affiliation, the Board stated that it was unnecessary to pass upon the issues of whether those organizations were of the nature described in the deportation statute (R. 370–371).

[12] While Judge Sears in the course of his memorandum stated that petitioner had been a member of the I. W. W. (cf. fn. 11, p. 10, supra), for a period of six or seven months beginning June or July 1921 (R. 330), he found, however, that the I. W. W. during that period was not an organization that advocated the illegal destruction or injury of property or circulated documents so advocating (R. 334).

Accordingly, the Board entered an order cancelling the warrant of arrest and closing the proceedings, but stayed execution of the order "pending further order of the Attorney General" (R. 492). The Attorney General reviewed the decision of the Board, and on May 28, 1942, rendered an opinion and decision, in which he made findings in accordance with those proposed by Judge Sears and ordered petitioner's deportation (R. 73–106). Pursuant to the order of the Attorney General, a warrant of deportation was issued May 29, 1942 (R. 62–64), and petitioner surrendered himself to the custody of the respondent on June 2, 1942 (R. 27). On June 4, 1942, the Attorney General denied a petition seeking an opportunity to present argument and briefs to him for the purpose of reconsidering and reversing this decision (R. 678–687).

Petitioner filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California on June 2, 1942 (R. 2–17), and an amended petition on July 6, 1942 (R. 21–62). He attacked the legality of his detention on numerous constitutional grounds, claiming that he had not been accorded due process of law in that the deportation order was not supported by substantial evidence (R. 8–10, 53–58) and he had not been given a fair hearing (R. 43–53); that he had been subjected to double jeopardy (R. 11, 39–41); that the 1940 amendment to the deportation statute constituted as to him an ex post facto law (R. 11, 41); that he had been denied the equal protection of the laws in that he had been singled out and subjected to discriminatory treatment (R. 12, 28–36); and that the 1940 amendment, providing as a ground for deportation past membership in the described organizations, was an unreasonable limitation of his right to freedom of speech (R. 41–42). Petitioner also asserted that, except for the question of his membership in the I. W. W., the issues in the present deportation proceeding were the same as those in the earlier proceeding before Dean Landis, and those issues having been determined in his favor in that proceeding, the doctrine of res judicata, or at least an analogous principle, was applicable (R. 11, 36–39). On February 8, 1943, the district court, in a lengthy opinion (R. 723–759), denied the petition and remanded petitioner to the custody of respondent.[13] On appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, the order of the district court was affirmed (R. 7810), by a vote of three of the five judges who heard the appeal."[14] The dissenting judges thought that the conclusion that petitioner was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party was arrived at in reliance upon incompetent evidence received in violation of relevant regulations designed to insure fair hearings and to safeguard the rights of aliens (R. 7794–7809).

The evidence adduced in support of the findings of the Attorney General which are now challenged by petitioner may be summarized as follows:[15]

1. The finding of petitioner's membership in the Communist Party (Finding 9, R. 104).—Government witness Lundeberg, Secretary-Treasurer of

---

[14] A motion by the Communist Party of the United States of America for leave to intervene was denied (R. 7769). The Communist Political Association has filed a motion in this Court for leave to intervene.

[15] Petitioner does not now challenge the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings of the Attorney General that the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union are organizations within the description of the deportation statute (Findings 3–8; R. 103–104) but states (Pet. 8, footnote) that, if the petition is granted, he will argue that the proof does not justify these findings. The evidence in those respects is summarized in the Memorandum of Judge Sears (R. 157–231) and in the decision of the Attorney General (R. 79–84), and is, we believe, clearly adequate. Excerpts from "The Communist Manifesto" (Gov. Ex. 91, R. 1031–1032), Lenin's "The State and Revolution" (Gov. Ex. 182, R. 1486), and the "Theses and Statutes of the Third (Communist) International" (Gov. Ex. 94, R. 1036–1047) were characterized by this Court in Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 153, as lending considerable support to the proposition that the Communist Party advocates the overthrow of the Government by force and violence.

the Sailors Union of the Pacific, head of the Seafarers International Union of North America, Vice President of the California State Federation of Labor, and in 1935 president of the Maritime Federation (R. 7260–7261), testified that in the summer of 1935 he was at petitioner's home through petitioner's invitation, having supper (R. 7264–7265); that among those present were Sam Darcy, an acknowledged Communist, to whom petitioner introduced the witness (R. 7265–7266); and that Darcy, in petitioner's presence, asked Lundeberg to join the Communist Party, stating that petitioner was a member and that if Lundeberg joined the Party, it would build him up as a labor leader (R. 7266–7267). Lundeberg testified that petitioner then said: "You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist Party if you join" (R. 7267) and "You don't have to be afraid because I am one too" (R. 7268)—"I am a member of the Communist Party" (R. 7339). Petitioner admitted that Lundeberg was at his home in the summer of 1935 (R. 7576) and that he was aware of Darcy's party membership (R. 6091–6092), but denied that Darcy was present at the time (R. 7576–7577) or that he told Lundeberg that he (petitioner) was a member of the Communist Party (R. 7709–7710).

James O'Neil, who had been closely associated with petitioner from 1937 to 1939 as publicity director of the C. I. O. on the West Coast under petitioner's supervision and who had access to petitioner's office (R. 2993–2994), in a verbal statement made to the F. B. I. on October 7, 1940, said that on one occasion he walked into petitioner's office when petitioner was alone and saw "on his desk * * * a new Party book, which had just been issued and into which Bridges was putting assessment stamps * * * I expressed amazement that he was doing this openly * * *. However, he nonchalantly continued to put the stamps in place and then returned the book to his pocket. I knew this was a Communist Party book because I had one myself * * *. On several occasions Bridges reminded me that I had not been attending Party meetings * * * By this he meant top fraction meetings of the Communist Party" (Gov. Ex. 255, R. 3103–3104, 3145; R. 3109–3110, 3113). These remarks as transcribed by a stenographer present were introduced after O'Neil, called as a witness by the Government, testified that he had never seen petitioner putting assessment stamps in a Communist Party book (R. 2994–2995).[8] Petitioner denied that he ever told O'Neil that he had participated in Communist Party fraction meetings or that he had called to O'Neil's attention that O'Neil had not been attending such meetings (R. 5882–5883).

[8] O'Neil admitted that he was interviewed on October 7, 1940, but denied making the remarks in question (R. 3019–3024, 3076). He also testified that at an interview on April 22, 1941, at which Major Schofield, then Special Assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (R. 5255) and Mr. Del Guercio, chief

Government witness Kelley, proprietor of the Atwood Hotel in Seattle (R. 1917), testified that while petitioner was at the hotel on May 1, 1937 (R. 1917–1918) he heard one Dietrich say to petitioner at a conversation among the three in Dietrich's room: "Harry, you are one of the swellest guys I have ever known if it wasn't for the Commie outfit that you belong to," and that petitioner replied: "That is all right. You will see the time that you are damned glad to belong to our outfit" (R. 1920). Kelley later asked Dietrich what he had meant and Dietrich responded: "It is the Communists. Didn't you know that Bridges belongs to that outfit?" (R. 1920–1921.) Petitioner did not unequivocally deny having made the statement attributed to him, but testified that, if he did make it, it was government counsel, were present, he told them that the statements he had made to the F. B. I. were true and also that what he told Schofield and Del Guercio on April 22nd was true (R. 3032–3036, 3079–3081). He denied, however, that he told Schofield and Del Guercio that petitioner was a Communist and that he had seen him placing stamps in the Party book (R. 3036, 3051–3053). Mrs. Segerstrom, a stenographer in the employ of the F. B. I., testified that she was present at O'Neil's interview on October 7, 1940, and that he dictated a statement which she took down stenographically (R. 3102–3104). She read her stenographic notes of the statement and in these appeared O'Neil's remarks concerning petitioner's putting assessment stamps in a Communist Party book, etc. (R. 3104, 3109–3110, 3113). Schofield testified that at the interview with O'Neil on April 22, 1941, O'Neil stated that he had seen petitioner "pasting dues stamps in Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party" (R. 5255–5256).

not made seriously (R. 5849–5851), while Kelley testified that he was not impressed by the incident at the time it occurred (R. 1937–1938). Government witness Barlow testified that at a convention in Seattle in 1935 of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific petitioner told him "that the only way that a young fellow could get ahead in the labor movement today was to join the Communist Party" (R. 7377). Petitioner denied making this statement to Barlow (R. 7576).

2. The findings as to petitioner's affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (Findings 10–11, R. 104).—Judge Sears found that the "Waterfront Worker," a mimeographed newspaper published in San Francisco, was an instrument of the M. W. I. U. and the Communist Party from December 1932 until abandonment of the paper in 1936; that petitioner and his group were responsible for its publication during that period; and that this "demonstrates his affiliation with both the M. W. I. U. and the Communist Party, if not actual membership in either, or both, of those organizations" (R. 243–249). These findings the Attorney General accepted (R. 85–90). Four of the five issues of the "Waterfront Worker" published prior to September 15, 1933, expressly acknowledged the assistance of the M. W. I. U. (Gov. Ex. 204, R. 1592, 1591–1603; Gov. Ex. 205, R. 1621, 1638; Gov. Ex. 247, R. 2576, 2575–2593; Gov. Ex. 280, R. 6142–6159). The September 15, 1933, issue and succeeding issues, however, did not make this acknowledgement (Gov. Ex. 248, R. 2595–2618; Gov. Ex. 249, R. 2618–2640; Gov. Ex. 250, R. 2641, 2655; Gov. Ex. 251, R. 2665, 2682; Gov. Ex. 281, R. 6180, 6181; Gov. Ex. 283, R. 6250, 6251; Gov. Ex. 285, R. 6279, 6293; Gov. Ex. 286, R. 6326, 6336). The September 15, 1933, issue described the M. W. I. U. as "the only organization leading the struggles for better conditions" and praised its activities in prompting strikes (Gov. Ex. 281, R. 6180, 6184). In October 1933 the paper advised its readers to vote for Communist Party candidates in the municipal elections in San Francisco (Gov. Ex. 283, R. 6250, 6256, 6270–6274). The paper also recommended the reading of Communist literature in its March and November 1934 issues (Gov. Ex. 285, R. 6279, 6282; Gov. Ex. 286, R. 6326, 6336). In December 1934 it sponsored a meeting to which it invited as speaker William F. Dunne, whom it described as "one of the foremost trade-union authorities in America". (Gov. Ex. 250, R. 2641, 2643). Dunne was a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party and editor of its official publication, the "Daily Worker" (R. 1500).

The first address of the paper was the headquarters of the Needle Trades Workers Union, a T. U. U. L. affiliate (R. 1559–1561, 6222). The second address was a building occupied by an admitted Communist, and known by petitioner to be a Communist (R. 6222, 6225–6226; Gov. Ex. 219, R. 2047–2049). The third address was a post office box rented for the paper by an admitted Communist and M. W. I. U. organizer who was closely associated with petitioner (Gov. Exs. 211, 212, R. 1911–1914; R. 6091–6092, 6204, 6231–6242).

In the 1939 hearings before Judge Landis (see pp. 5–8, supra), petitioner testified that his group took over the "Waterfront Worker" in September or October 1932, although he was not certain of the exact time (R. 3217, 3231–3232, 3234–3237, 3242–3243). In the instant proceeding, petitioner testified on direct examination that the paper was started by the M. W. I. U. in January 1933, but that his group did not take it over until September 1933 (R. 5761–5764). On cross-examination he testified that the paper was not started until June 1933 and his group did not "first conceive" the idea of taking it over until October 1933 (R. 6160–6161).[17] When shown the September 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 281), petitioner admitted, however, that this issue was put out by his group (R. 6179). Judge Sears found that the first issue under petitioner's sponsorship was that for December 1932 (R. 241) and the Attorney General accepted Judge Sears' finding (R. 87).

[17] Petitioner explained that his group consisted of "longshoremen; just the fellows that stood there every morning day in and day out" (R. 6161).

Other additional items of evidence which support the conclusion of Judge Sears (R. 327), in which the Attorney General concurred (R. 100), that petitioner adopted a course of conduct "as an affiliate of the Communist Party, rather than as a matter of chance coincidence" are as follows: Petitioner actively induced seamen to join the M. W. I. U. (R. 6097–6098, 6503–6507). Over the opposition of labor leaders who feared Communist penetration of the labor movement, he unsuccessfully sought to secure the seating of M. W. I. U. delegates on the Joint Strike Committee in the 1934 San Francisco strike (R. 6348). He also opposed, without success, the adoption by the San Francisco Central Labor Council on June 22, 1934, of a resolution disclaiming all connection with Communist organizations, and particularly the M. W. I. U. (R. 6350), and he notified the Communist Darcy before its adoption that such action was contemplated (R. 6351–6352). Petitioner was in frequent contact with well-known Communists (R. 3266–3268, 6091–6092, 6095–6097, 6203–6204, 6353–6354, 6358–6360, 6377–6378, 6450, 6456–6482). On December 16, 1936, he addressed a meeting held in Madison Square Garden in New York (R. 6443). The rental for the Garden had been paid by the treasurer of the Communist Party for the New York District (R. 3488–3493). Government witness Rushmore testified that at an interview with petitioner, petitioner praised the Youth Congress of the Young Communist League, which was dominated and controlled by the Communist Party (R. 1429–1434). Likewise there is the testimony of Dawn Lovelace, supported by the signed statement of her deceased husband, both of whom were Communists but were not members of a trade union, that in August 1935, petitioner at their apartment, in the presence of the Lovelaces and two other Communist Party members, discussed the contents of a telegram which he proposed to send to an officer of his local union (R. 1949–1951, 1955–1967, 1990–1993, 2002–2003). Petitioner, while admitting that he had been at the apartment, denied discussing the contents of the telegram (R. 5849). He testified that he would not discriminate against union men because of Communist membership (R. 6534–6537), and that he was strongly opposed to "the slander and the publicity that was going on in Los Angeles at that time * * * to the effect that the CIO was a Communist organization" (R. 6028).

There is also the testimony of seven witnesses, all of whom were members of the Communist Party, that petitioner had attended Communist meetings (R. 1545–1559, 1707–1711, 1789–1800, 2158–2167, 2333–2340, 2410–2417, 2520–2525). Petitioner denied attending the meetings described by these witnesses (R. 5840–5841, 5843, 5845, 5853, 5869–5871, 5878, 6003, 6015, 6316, 6430). Judge Sears concluded that their evidence, for various reasons, did not establish petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party (R. 292–317). The Attorney General stated that such evidence "taken as a whole * * * cannot, because of its volume, be completely disregarded" (R. 98).

ARGUMENT

1. Adequacy of the evidence.—The controlling statute, Section [illegible] of the Act of February 5, 1917, p. 5, supra, provides that the decision of the administrative officers charged with the issuance of deportation orders shall be final. However, it is well settled that though no direct review of such decisions may be had in the courts, a collateral review by way of habeas corpus may be secured to the extent of determining whether the proceeding so lacked the elements of a fair hearing that it can be said that the alien was deprived of due process of law. In such a collateral review, the range of judicial inquiry is closely circumscribed; as this Court said in United States ex rel. Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, at p. 106:

> Upon a collateral review in habeas corpus proceedings, it is sufficient that there was some evidence from which the conclusion of the administrative tribunal could be deduced and that it committed no error so flagrant as to convince a court of the essential unfairness of the trial.

And in Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, at pp. 133–134, it was said:

> We do not discuss the evidence; because the correctness of the judgment of the lower > court is not to be determined by enquiring whether the conclusion drawn by the Secretary of Labor from the evidence was correct or by deciding whether the evidence was such that, if introduced in a court of law, it would be held legally sufficient to prove the fact found. * * * mere error, even if it consists in finding an essential fact without adequate supporting evidence, is not a denial of due process of law.[18]

See also United States ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149; Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454; Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272.

We do not understand that the principles laid down by the foregoing cases have in any way been modified by this Court. The petitioner, relying (see Pet. 22–23) upon more recent decisions under the National Labor Relations Act, insists that they have. But it is beside the point, we submit, to argue whether criteria relevant to the statutory form of judicial review provided by the National Labor Relations Act are applicable with equal force to a collateral review confined to the issue of the presence or absence of due process of law. No reliance was here placed by the courts below on the "mere scintilla of evidence" condemned by [18] The omitted portion of the passage quoted in the text deals primarily with the effect of lack of procedural due process upon the validity of the order. As we contend below, no substantial question of lack of procedural due process is presented in this case; but in any event that is a question separate from the issue of the adequacy of the evidence to sustain the order.

this Court as insufficient to sustain orders of the Labor Board (see National Labor Relations Board v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., 306 U. S. 292, 299–300). The district court concluded in express terms (R. 758) that the order for deportation was made "after a fair hearing on substantial evidence," and Judge Stephens, in his opinion in the court below on denial of petition for rehearing, pointed out specifically (R. 7812) that in both the majority and the concurring opinion "the idea of the mere scintilla was never considered." Both courts below thus held that the order of deportation was supported by "evidence, more than a scintilla and not unbelievable on its face," and that, being so supported, it could not be collaterally impeached in habeas corpus proceedings. In so doing, we believe it clear that they followed applicable principles repeatedly declared by this Court.

With respect to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the order, therefore, we do not believe that any question of law is presented which has not heretofore been unequivocally settled by this Court. In effect, the petition seeks to induce the Court to review the evidence and to determine that by accepted standards it was so inadequate to justify the deportation order that in legal contemplation the petitioner was not accorded a fair hearing. However, the evidence has now been fully considered five times. Judge Sears, the Presiding Inspector, is a noted and experienced jurist, who before his retirement sat for over twenty years on the New York bench, first as a member of the Supreme Court and later as a member of the Court of Appeals. Both he and the Attorney General regarded the evidence, taken as a whole, as establishing the essential allegations made against petitioner. The two courts below considered that the record at least contained evidence upon which Judge Sears, who saw the witnesses, and the Attorney General were entitled to rely.[19]

In support of the correctness of these conclusions, we respectfully refer the Court to the summary of the pertinent evidence given in our Statement, supra, pp. 15–23. After so thorough a process of hearing and review as has been accorded to this case, we submit that the factual issue as to the adequacy of the evidence to support the administrative action taken presents no situation warranting further review by this Court on writ of certiorari.

2. Procedural due process.—The petitioner's prayer for a writ of certiorari on the basis of procedural abuses amounting to a denial of due process is, we submit, equally clearly answered by previous decisions of this Court. As the majority of the court below held (R. 7786–7787), neither the principle of res judicata nor the constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy and ex post facto laws (see Pet. 27–31) have any place in deportation proceedings.[20] Nor is the scope of these doctrines to be enlarged by attaching them, as petitioner proposes, to the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment. The admission of an alien confers upon him, prior to naturalization, only a license to remain, terminable at the will of Congress. Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 713; Chae Chan Ping v. United States, 130 U. S. 581, 609. As has been said (Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 556–557), "sovereign states have inherent power to deport aliens, and * * * Congress is not deprived of this power by the Constitution of the United States." Petitioner's contention misconceives the nature of the deportation power.

[20] Res judicata: Pearson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281; Flynn ex rel. Ham Loy Wong v. Ward, 95 F. (2d) 742 (C. C. A. 1); White v. Chan Wy Sheung, 270 Fed. 764, 767 (C. C. A. 9). Double jeopardy: Sire v. Berkshire, 185 Fed. 967, 970–971 (W. D. Tex.); cf. Helvering v. Mitchell, 303 U. S. 391, 399. Ex Post Facto: Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, 39; Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591.

There is no merit in the suggestion of illegal discrimination against petitioner (Pet. 26–27, 32) in the amendment of the deportation statute following the first hearing before Dean Landis, and in the claimed failure of the authorities to proceed against other aliens on the basis of affiliation with the M. W. I. U. That Congress may be moved to the enactment of general legislation for particular reasons or for the correction of particular abuses which have been brought to its attention is too clear to require argument; and even if the due process clause may embody the equivalent of an equal protection clause (but see Helvering v. Lerner Stores Corp., 314 U. S. 463, 468; Sunshine Coal Co. v. Adkins, 310 U. S. 381, 401), there is no basis in authority for the theory that failure of enforcement officers to proceed against others within the reach of a statute constitutes a denial of the equal protection of the laws to one against whom proceedings are otherwise properly instituted under the same statute.[n]

Petitioner's further objections (Pet. 33–40) to claimed abuses in hearing procedure likewise raise no issue warranting review by this Court.

(a) The evidence as to the witness O'Neil's prior statements was at most cumulative, and even on the theory that its reception was improper, the court below correctly declined to invalidate the order merely because of acceptance of this "additional evidence of less probative value" (R. 7789). Moreover, there was no error, flagrant or otherwise, in accepting the evidence. Whatever may be the rule in judicial proceedings, in exclusion and deportation proceedings prior contradictory statements may be used not only for impeachment purposes, but also as substantive evidence.[22] No right of cross-examination was defeated; the petitioner was given full opportunity to cross-examine the Government witnesses who testified to the prior inconsistent statements, and to cross-examine O'Neil himself as to the circumstances of the interviews which, in spite of his denial of the statements attributed to him, he admitted had taken place (R. 3019–3024, 3076; 3032–3036, 3079–3081). Nor, contrary to petitioner's assertion (Pet. 34–35), was the reception of the statements in violation of the rules of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Rule

[22] United States ex rel. Ng Kee Wong v. Corsi, 65 F. (2d) 564, 565 (C. C. A. 2); Ex parte Ematsu Kishimoto, 32 F. (2d) 991 (C. C. A. 9); Johnson v. Kock Shing, 3 F. (2d) 889, 890 (C. C. A. 1).

150.1 (c) (8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.1 (c)), upon which petitioner relies, is merely directory of the procedure to be followed during the course of an investigation prior to the issuance of a warrant, to the end that warrants shall not be issued unless "there is credible evidence reasonably establishing (1) that the person investigated is an alien, and (2) that he is subject to deportation." Rule 150.1 (b) (8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.1 (b)). Rule 150.6 (i) (8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.6 (i)), on the other hand, which deals with hearings as distinct from investigations, specifically recognizes the right of an immigration officer to testify as to statements made to him, and in no way restricts his testimony. The testimony of Major Schofield and Mrs. Segerstrom (see note 16, supra) as to prior inconsistent statements made by O'Neil in their presence can scarcely be rendered inadmissible by the fact that it was supported by a stenographic record contemporaneously taken and authenticated to the satisfaction of the Presiding Inspector (R. 270).

(b) The charges of misconduct on the part of Government counsel during the course of the hearing (Pet. 36–37) rest, in part at least, on distortion of the record. Upon only one occasion was a request made for production of a prior statement by a witness, and on that occasion the record shows that Government counsel had no such statement had never seen it, knew nothing about it, and merely declined to make further inquiry as to the fact of its existence (R. 1360–1362). The charge regarding the presentation of false testimony by one Cannalonga was characterized by the court below as an "aspersion upon the integrity of the Government's attorneys—wholly gratuitous and without foundation in fact" (R. 7793). And a charge of wire-tapping following completion of the hearing, even if established, is so patently irrelevant to any issue of due process in connection with the hearing as to deserve no serious consideration.

(c) There is no substance to the charge that petitioner was deprived of due process by the action of the Attorney General in overruling the determination of the Board of Immigration Appeals without according an opportunity to petitioner to present written or oral argument. The Regulations make no provision for oral or written argument before the Attorney General;[23] and no principle of due process requires them. Oral argument as such is not essential to a fair hearing. Morgan v. United States, 298 U. S. 468, 481. Written (as well as oral) argument was fully made before the Presiding Inspector and the Board; and the Attorney General had before him not only the written conclusions of these respective hearing officials, but also the briefs of the parties filed with them. Since petitioner's objections to the findings and conclusions recommended by the Presiding Inspector were fully developed in his brief before the Board, as well as in the Board's own opinion which accepted petitioner's objections, the Attorney General had before him at the time of his decision all material necessary to a complete understanding of petitioner's contentions. Petitioner complains (Pet. 38–39) that the Attorney General in accepting the proposed findings of the Presiding Inspector advanced considerations in support of such findings which had not previously been urged by the parties; but it is a commonplace of judicial procedure that once the issues have been clearly posed by actual or proposed findings below, neither a court nor an administrative tribunal is confined to the arguments of counsel in stating on review the reasons for its decision whether to accept such findings.

3. Constitutionality of the deportation statute.—Petitioner contends (Pet. 40–51) that the deportation statute as construed and applied to him violates rights of freedom of speech and association guaranteed to him by the First and Fifth Amendments. We believe that this question also is settled against him by prior decisions of this Court. "It is thoroughly established that Congress has power to order the deportation of aliens whose presence in the country it deems hurtful. The determination * * * is simply a refusal by the Government to harbor persons whom it does not want." Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591. Naturalization may be denied to an alien on the ground of utterances, beliefs, or associations for which, by the protection of the First Amendment, he could not be punished (United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U. S. 644; United States v. Macintosh, 283 U. S. 605); and it would seem that the sovereign power of deportation (Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 556) would be subject to no greater restraint. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279; United States v. Parson, 22 F. Supp. 149, 154–155 (S. D. Cal.). The Turner case, like the case at bar, dealt with what may generally be described as civil liberties; and although, as petitioner points out (Pet. 44), it involved the deportation of an illegal entrant, it has been regarded as authority for the broad scope of the deportation power without any special reference to this asserted distinguishing factor. See Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 557; Douglas, J., concurring, in Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, at 165. The petitioner cites the doctrine of unconstitutional conditions (Pet. 43–44); but whatever the effect of this doctrine upon the civil rights of a resident alien in his status as such (cf. Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S.

228), we doubt that it extends to protect him against the orderly termination of that status for whatever reasons may seem to Congress necessary or desirable in the public interest. We know of no case in which this Court has denied or suggested limitations upon the plenary authority of Congress to determine the grounds upon which an alien may be deported.

Nevertheless, while we believe that a conclusion in favor of the constitutionality of the deportation statute in its present application flows directly from the previous relevant decisions of this Court, we know of no case in which this Court has squarely passed upon the precise question presented under Point III of the petition. Furthermore, the great number of aliens now lawfully resident in the United States lends importance to the issue involved. Therefore, we do not feel warranted in opposing the issuance of a writ of certiorari to review the decision of the court below in so far as that decision sustained the constitutionality of the deportation act as construed and applied in this case.

CONCLUSION

The petitioner's contentions with respect to the adequacy of the evidence to support the deportation order of the Attorney General, and with respect to asserted denial of due process in the institution and conduct of the deportation proceeding, present no issues warranting further review by this Court. If this Court should regard the constitutional question presented by Point III of the petition as being sufficiently in doubt to justify the issuance of a writ, we believe that the writ should be limited to that question.

v.

I. F. WIXON, AS DISTRICT DIRECTOR, IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF FOR THE RESPONDENT

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion in the circuit court of appeals of Circuit Judge Wilbur (R. 7770–7793), the concurring opinion of Circuit Judge Stephens (R. 7793–7794), and the dissenting opinion of Circuit Judge Healy (R. 7794–7809) are reported at 144 F. 2d 927.[1] The opinion of Judge Stephens (R. 7811–7812) rendered in connection with the denial of a petition for rehearing is reported at 144 F. 2d 944.[2] The opinion and order of the district court (R. 723–759) are reported at 49 F. Supp. 292.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the circuit court of appeals was entered on June 26, 1944 (R. 7810). A petition for rehearing was denied on September 27, 1944 (R. 7811). The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed on December 27, 1944, and was granted on January 29, 1945. The jurisdiction of this Court rests upon Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether, by the tests applicable in a habeas corpus proceeding instituted to secure collateral review of a deportation order, the evidence adequately sustains the essential findings of the Attorney General upon which the deportation order rests.

2. Whether petitioner was denied due process by reason of alleged abuses committed in the institution and conduct of the deportation proceeding.

3. Whether the deportation statute as construed and applied to petitioner denies him freedom of speech and association in violation of his constitutional rights.

---

[2] Judge Stephens, on November 1, 1944, filed an amendment to his opinion (R. 7815).

STATUTES AND REGULATIONS INVOLVED

The pertinent statutes and regulations are set forth in Appendix A, infra, pp. 126–130.

STATEMENT

Petitioner is an alien,[3] a native and citizen of Australia (R. 778–780, 7736–7737), who entered the United States in April 1920 (R. 791, 7735). He has been in the United States continuously since that time, apart from several voyages as a seaman on American vessels, the last of which occurred in 1922 (R. 791–792). In March 1938, deportation proceedings were instituted against petitioner under Section 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920 (40 Stat. 1012, 41 Stat. 1008–1009)[4] on the ground that after his entry into

[3] Petitioner has filed three declarations of intention to become a citizen (Gov. Exs. 277, R. 6070–6074; 279, R. 6089; 296, R. 7735). He allowed the first two to lapse (R. 508), and the last, which was filed on March 28, 1939, apparently is still pending.

[4] Prior to its amendment by Title II, Section 23, of the Act of June 28, 1940 (c. 439, 54 Stat. 673, Appendix A, pp. 126–127, infra), Section 2 of the 1918 Act (40 Stat. 1012) read as follows:

"That any alien who, at any time after entering the United States, is found to have been at the time of entry, or to have become thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section one of this Act, shall, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Labor, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided in the immigration Act of February fifth, nineteen hundred and seventeen. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of the United States he had become a member of and affiliated with an organization that advised, advocated and taught the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States and that caused to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States (R. 73–74, 503). James M. Landis, Dean of the Harvard Law School, was appointed trial examiner for the purpose of hearing the case, and hearings were held from July 10 to September 14, 1939 (R. 74, 504).

On June 12, 1939, following the decision of this Court in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22,[5] the aliens mentioned in this Act irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States."

Section 1 of the Act, referred to in the foregoing excerpt, deals with the admission of aliens. The 1940 Amendment changed only the first paragraph of Section 1. Prior to its amendment, the first paragraph read as follows: "That the following aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States." This was amended by the 1940 Act to read: "That any alien who, at any time, shall be or shall have been a member of any one of the following classes shall be excluded from admission into the United States."

[5] In the Strecker case, which was decided on April 17, 1939, the question was whether former membership in an organization described in the 1918 Act, which had ceased, was a ground of deportation. The Court held that it was not, stating (307 U. S. at 30) "* * * we conclude that it is the present membership, or present affiliation—a fact to be determined on evidence—which bars admission, bars nat-warrant upon which the proceedings had been instituted was amended to charge that petitioner both had been and then was a member of or affiliated with the organization described in the warrant (R. 503). At the hearings before Dean Landis, the Government claimed that petitioner was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States, and that the party was an organization of the character described in the 1918 Act (R. 503–504, 508). Petitioner denied that he was a member of the Communist Party or had ever been a member (R. 509), and in December 1939 Dean Landis concluded that the evidence established neither that petitioner "is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States of America" (R. 636). Accordingly, he did not pass upon the question whether that party was an organization within the Act (R. 497). In January 1940, the Secretary of Labor sustained Dean Landis and dismissed the proceedings against petitioner (R. 75, 139).

On June 28, 1940, Congress amended the deportation statute in question so as to provide for deportation of any alien who was "at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any uralization, and requires deportation." [Italics as in original.] Dean Landis stated (R. 508, fn. 17) that the decision "left uncertain the particular time as of which the facts of membership, etc., have to be proved, though the inference derivable from the opinion is that the significant time is that of the issuance of the warrant of arrest."

time thereafter" a member of the classes of aliens specified (Act of June 28, 1940, c. 439, Title II, sec. 23, 54 Stat. 673; see Appendix A, pp. 126–127, infra). The sponsors of the amendment stated that it was designed to obviate the construction placed upon the statute by the Strecker case that only present membership or affiliation required deportation (86 Cong. Rec. 8343, 9031–9032). The Attorney General then directed the Federal Bureau of Investigation to determine whether under the statute, as amended, grounds existed for reopening the deportation proceedings against petitioner, and as a result of this investigation a second deportation proceeding was instituted against petitioner on February 14, 1941 (R. 76).[1] The warrant of arrest charged that petitioner was deportable under the provisions of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Acts of June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940 (Appendix A, pp. 126–127, infra) in that, after entering the United States, he had been a member of or affiliated with an organization (1) that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States; and (2) that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or (3) that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue or display, written or printed matter advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force or by violence of the Government of the United States (Gov. Ex. 1, R. 771–773; R. 142–143).

Charles B. Sears, a retired judge of the New York Court of Appeals, was appointed an inspector in the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Justice to preside over the hearings, take testimony, and make appropriate recommendations (R. 76, 141).[1] At the hearings before Judge Sears, petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party and subsidiaries or allies of the party, notably the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and his membership in the Industrial Workers of the World, constituted the conduct claimed by the Government as grounds for petitioner's deportation (R. 144, 147, 799, 807–808).[8] Judge Sears held hearings in San Francisco from March 31 to June 12, 1941, at which the petitioner was represented by counsel and the public and press were admitted (R. 76, 143–145). The evidence covered 44 volumes of 7,546 typewritten pages; and, in addition, the Government introduced 297 exhibits, and the petitioner 62 (R. 76, 143–144).

On September 26, 1941, Judge Sears transmitted to the Attorney General a Memorandum of Decision, analyzing the evidence which had been adduced, and containing proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law and order (R. 76–77, 134–347). Judge Sears found that the Communist Party of the United States of America was "from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time * * * an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;" that it was an organization that "writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, and displays printed matter advising, advocating, or teaching" such overthrow; that it was an organization "that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching" such overthrow; that it was an organization that "has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue and display, printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching" such overthrow; that the Marine Workers Industrial Union "was a part of the Communist Party, dominated and controlled by it" and advocated a similar overthrow of the Government of the United States; and that after entering the United States, petitioner had been a member of the Communist Party and had been affiliated with both the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 337–338).[9] Accordingly, Judge Sears concluded that petitioner was subject to deportation under the statute involved (R. 338–339) and submitted a proposed order for petitioner's deportation to Australia (R. 340–341). Petitioner filed exceptions to the proposed findings (R. 348–365), and, briefs having been filed, the case was heard on oral argument before the Board of Immigration Appeals (see fn. 7, p. 7, supra) on November 24, 1941 (R. 369). On January 3, 1942, the Board rendered an opinion rejecting Judge Sears' proposed findings on the issues of petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 367–489), and affirmatively finding that petitioner had not been a member of or affiliated with those organizations at any time after he entered the United States (R. 490). In view of its findings on the issues of membership and affiliation, the Board stated that it was unnecessary to pass upon the issues of whether those organizations were of the nature described in the deportation statute (R. 370–371). Accordingly, the Board entered an order cancelling the warrant of arrest and closing the proceedings, but stayed execution of the order "pending further order of the Attorney General" (R. 492).

[8] During the hearings before Judge Sears, the warrant of arrest was amended to include the charge that petitioner was deportable because of his membership in the I. W. W., an organization claimed by the Government to fall within the provisions of subsection (c) of Section 1 of the 1918 Act, as amended, Appendix A, p. 126, infra, relating to organizations advising, advocating, or teaching "(3) the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or (4) sabotage" (R. 144).

[9] While Judge Sears in the course of his memorandum stated that petitioner had been a member of the I. W. W. (cf. fn. 8, p. 8, supra) for a period of six or seven months beginning June or July 1921 (R. 330), he found, however, that the I. W. W. during that period was not an organization that advocated the illegal destruction or injury of property or circulated documents so advocating (R. 334).

The Attorney General reviewed the decision of the Board, and on May 28, 1942, rendered an opinion and decision, in which he made findings in accordance with those proposed by Judge Sears and ordered petitioner's deportation (R. 73–106). Pursuant to the order of the Attorney General, a warrant of deportation was issued on May 29, 1942 (R. 62–64), and petitioner surrendered himself to the custody of the respondent on June 2, 1942 (R. 27). On June 4, 1942, the Attorney General denied a petition seeking an opportunity to present argument and briefs to him for the purpose of reconsidering and reversing his decision (R. 678–687).

Petitioner filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California on June 2, 1942 (R. 2–17), and an amended petition on July 6, 1942 (R. 21–62). He attacked the legality of his detention on numerous constitutional grounds, claiming that he had not been accorded due process of law in that the deportation order was not supported by substantial evidence (R. 8–10, 53–58) and he had not been given a fair hearing (R. 43–53); that he had been subjected to double jeopardy (R. 11, 39–41); that the 1940 amendment to the deportation statute constituted as to him an ex post facto law (R. 11, 41); that he had been denied the equal protection of the laws in that he had been singled out and subjected to discriminatory treatment (R. 12, 28–36); and that the 1940 amendment, providing as a ground for deportation past membership in the described organizations, was an unreasonable limitation of his right to freedom of speech (R. 41–42). Petitioner also asserted that, except for the question of his membership in the I. W. W., the issues in the present deportation proceeding were the same as those in the earlier proceeding before Dean Landis, and those issues having been determined in his favor in that proceeding, the doctrine of res judicata, or at least an analogous principle, was applicable (R. 11, 36–39). On February 8, 1943, the district court, in a lengthy opinion (R. 723–759), denied the petition and remanded petitioner to the custody of respondent.[10] On appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, the order of the district court was affirmed (R. 7810), by a vote of three of the five judges who heard the appeal. The dissenting judges thought that the conclusion that petitioner was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party was arrived at through reliance upon incompetent evidence received in violation of relevant regulations designed to safeguard the rights of aliens (R. 7794–7809).

The evidence relevant to the findings of the Attorney General is summarized in the Argument, infra, p. 18 et seq.

[10] On March 3, 1943, petitioner was admitted to bail by the district court and execution of the order was stayed pending final determination of petitioner's appeal to the circuit court of appeals (R. 763). The mandate of the circuit court of appeals was stayed for three months from September 27, 1944 (R. 7813), and has been further stayed pending final disposition by this Court.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

I

The deportation statute provides for the deportation of any alien who at the time of his entry into the United States or at any time thereafter has been a member of or affiliated with an organization that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches the overthrow of this Government by force or violence. Congress has entrusted enforcement of the statute to the Attorney General and has provided that his decision shall be final. The courts have no power to review his order, except insofar as they find that it has been issued without due process of law. If upon a fair hearing there is some evidence to sustain the findings of the Attorney General upon which the order rests, the requirements of due process have been satisfied. The record is amply sufficient to demonstrate the presence of the required quantum of proof as to each of the essential findings of the Attorney General.

A. The evidence is sufficient to support the finding that the Communist Party at all times material to the issues was an organization falling within the statutory description. This evidence consists of Party literature and of testimony of former members of the Party acquainted with its aims, teaching methods, and literature. From this evidence, a reasonable man could find that the Communist Party advocated the doctrine of overthrowing the Government by force and violence. The stricter requirement, applied in a proceeding to set aside a judicial decree of naturalization, that the evidence be "clear, unequivocal, and convincing" is inapplicable in a proceeding for collateral review of a deportation order by writ of habeas corpus: Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 125, 153–154.

B. Likewise, the evidence suffices to support an administrative finding that petitioner was a member of the Communist Party after entering the United States. The evidence in this respect consists of testimony and statements, by persons who were concededly acquainted with petitioner, that by words and conduct he had admitted his membership in the Communist Party. The evidence was competent in a deportation proceeding, and the only issues were issues of credibility, as to which the determination by the administrative officer is conclusive in a collateral judicial review.

C. The finding that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was a controlled subsidiary of the Communist Party and that the union advocated doctrines similar to those of the Party has the required evidentiary support. The union was shown to be chartered by the Trade Union Unity League, an organization which openly supported the Party's program and whose leading officials consisted of members of the Communist Party. There was evidence to show that the union itself was established by the Communist Party for revolutionary ends, and that its officials were prominent members of the Communist Party.

D. That the evidence is sufficient to support the finding of petitioner's affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union is also plain. The term "affiliation" as used in the deportation statute manifestly means something less than membership, and affiliation may be proved circumstantially by such conduct as assisting in the enterprises of an organization, securing members for it, and taking part in meetings organized and directed by or on behalf of the organization. Measured by this standard affiliation was amply proved both as to the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union. There was evidence to establish that petitioner was actively connected with a publication of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and there were additional items of evidence which, while perhaps not separately establishing affiliation with the Communist Party, nevertheless formed a pattern more consistent than otherwise with the conclusion that petitioner followed a course of conduct as an affiliate of the Communist Party, rather than as a matter of chance coincidence. He was well acquainted with Communist Party officials, and worked closely with them. He actively induced seamen to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union and opposed the action of labor organizations in seeking to disavow Communist support.

II

Just as lack of evidentiary support for a deportation order may amount to a denial of due process which may be corrected by habeas corpus, so may procedural abuses also constitute a denial of due process. No such abuses were present here.

A. The institution of the present deportation proceeding against petitioner following the dismissal of an earlier deportation proceeding against him on a similar charge was not in violation of the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy and the principle of res adjudicata. It is settled that a deportation proceeding, not being a criminal case, is not affected by the constitutional provision against double jeopardy. It is also settled that res adjudicata is inapplicable to alien exclusion and deportation proceedings by executive agencies. Nor is there any factual basis in the record to support an application of the principle of res adjudicata, since neither the issues nor the evidence were the same at the two deportation hearings against petitioner.

B. The constitutional prohibition against ex post facto or retrospective laws is likewise inapplicable in deportation proceedings, which are in no sense criminal in nature, but represent merely the exercise of a sovereign power of government to alter or terminate the conditions upon which it chooses to permit aliens to continue to remain.

C. There is no warrant for petitioner's assertion that deportation on the basis of affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union denies him the equal protection of the laws. When in 1934 the Secretary of Labor rendered an advisory opinion to the effect that membership in the Marine Workers Industrial Union was not a basis for deportation, she could not, and did not purport to, bind her successors in the administration of the deportation statute, and the record in this proceeding negates the factual premise upon which her advisory opinion in 1934 was based. A law enforcing agency is not precluded from enforcing the law by the fact that it may have failed to perform its mandatory duty of enforcing the same law against others falling within it.

D. There was no impropriety in the action of the Attorney General in overruling the determination of his intermediate reviewing body without according petitioner an opportunity to present further written or oral argument. The administrative regulations governing the proceeding did not require further argument, and oral argument as such is not a denial of a fair hearing. The requirements of due process were fully satisfied by the fact that the Attorney General had before him at the time of his decision all material necessary to a complete understanding of petitioner's contentions.

III

We do not believe that any constitutional issue of free speech or assembly is raised by petitioner's deportation in this case. Decisions of this Court point clearly to the conclusion that the sovereign power both to exclude and to deport aliens is unaffected by considerations of the extent to which freedom of speech and assembly may in other contexts be constitutionally abridged. Congress in its discretion could have transmuted the substantive constitutional guarantees of the First and Fifth Amendments into legal rights conferred upon aliens lawfully resident in the country, but it has not chosen to do so, and the choice is legislative, not constitutional.

ARGUMENT

I

THE EVIDENCE, TESTED BY APPLICABLE STANDARDS, ADEQUATELY SUSTAINS THE FINDINGS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Introductory

To authorize the deportation order it was necessary to find that petitioner, at the time of or subsequent to his entry into the United States, was a member of or was affiliated with an organization of one of the classes described by the deportation statute, Appendix A, pp. 126–127, infra. The Attorney General found that both the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union were such organizations; that subsequent to his entry into the United States, petitioner had been both a member of and affiliated with the Communist Party; and that subsequent to his entry, he had also been affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union. While we believe that each of the findings of the Attorney General has adequate evidentiary support, it is clear that under the deportation statute the deportation order would be valid even if less than all of those findings were held not to be adequately sustained by the evidence. Of course, the evidence must be sufficient with respect either to the finding that the Communist Party is an organization within the statutory description or to the finding that the Marine Workers Industrial Union is such an organization. However, since deportation follows from either membership or affiliation in any one such organization, it is sufficient that the evidence is adequate with respect either (a) to the findings that the Communist Party was an organization within the deportation statute, and that petitioner was either a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party, or (b) to the findings that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was such an organization, and that petitioner was affiliated with that union.

Under the controlling statute (Section 19 of the Act of February 5, 1917, as modified by Reorganization Plan No. V, effective June 14, 1940, Appendix A, pp. 127–128, infra) the decision of the Attorney General, the administrative officer charged with the issuance of deportation orders, is final. However, it is well settled that though no direct review of such decisions may be had in the courts, a collateral review by way of habeas corpus may be secured to the extent of determining whether the proceeding so lacked the elements of a fair hearing that it can be said that the alien was deprived of due process of law. United States ex rel. Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103; Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131; United States ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149; Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454; Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272. In such a collateral review, the range of judicial inquiry is closely circumscribed; as this Court said in the Vajtauer case, 273 U. S. at 106:

> * * * Upon a collateral review in habeas corpus proceedings, it is sufficient that there was some evidence from which the conclusion of the administrative tribunal could be deduced and that it committed no error so flagrant as to convince a court of the essential unfairness of the trial.

And in the Tisi case, 264 U. S. at 133–134, it was said:

> * * * We do not discuss the evidence; because the correctness of the judgment of the lower court is not to be determined by enquiring whether the conclusion drawn by > the Secretary of Labor from the evidence was correct or by deciding whether the evidence was such that, if introduced in a court of law, it would be held legally sufficient to prove the fact found. * * * mere error, even if it consists in finding an essential fact without adequate supporting evidence, is not a denial of due process of law."[11]

Nor need the evidence be such as would be technically competent in a court of law. Tisi v. Tod, supra; Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591; Jung Yen Loy v. Cahill, 81 F. 2d 809, 812 (C. C. A. 9); Skeffington v. Katzeff, 277 Fed. 129, 132 (C. C. A. 1); Hays v. Hatges, 94 F. 2d 67, 68 (C. C. A. 8); Nicoli v. Briggs, 83 F. 2d 375, 377 (C. C. A. 10). And, while the burden of proving the statutory requisites of deportation was upon the Government (Palmer v. Ultimo, 69 F. 2d 1 (C. C. A. 7), certiorari denied, 293 U. S. 570; Werrmann v. Perkins, 79 F. 2d 467, 469 (C. C. A. 7)), that requirement is to be read in the light of the established principle that questions as to the weight of evidence and the credibility of witnesses are "for the administrative officials and will not be reviewed by the courts unless the conduct of such officers reflect unfairness." Jung Yen Loy v. Cahill, 81 F. 2d 809, 812 (C. C. A. 9); Lindsey [11] The omitted portion of the passage quoted in the text deals with the effect of lack of procedural due process upon the validity of the order, a matter which we treat infra, pp. 93–115.

v. Dobra, 62 F. 2d 116, 118 (C. C. A. 5), certiorari denied, 288 U. S. 606; Tisi v. Tod, supra.

We do not understand that the principles laid down by the foregoing cases have been modified in any way by this Court. Relying upon decisions under the National Labor Relations Act, petitioner asserts (Br. 31–32) that the issue of the sufficiency of the evidence to support a deportation order is to be determined in accordance with a rule formulated by this Court in cases involving direct review of findings of the National Labor Relations Board. Under the National Labor Relations Act the test was stated by this Court in National Labor Relations Board v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., 306 U. S. 292, 299–300, to be whether the evidence is "substantial, that is, affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can be reasonably inferred. * * * Substantial evidence is more than a scintilla, and must do more than create a suspicion of the existence of the fact to be established. 'It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion,' Consolidated Edison Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, supra, p. 229, and it must be enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the conclusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for the jury." But even if criteria relevant to the statutory form of judicial review provided by the National Labor Relations Act are applicable with equal force to a collateral review confined to the issue of the presence or absence of due process of law, we believe that, judged by those criteria, there is substantial evidence to support the findings of the Attorney General essential to the validity of the deportation order.[12]

A. The findings as to the Communist Party (Findings 3–6, R. 103–104).—The Attorney General found that the Communist Party of the United States, from the time of its inception in 1919 to the date of his decision, May 28, 1942, was an organization (1) that believed in, advised, advocated, and taught the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; (2) that had written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter so advising, advocating, or teaching; (3) that had caused such printed matter to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed; and (4) that had such literature in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue, and display.[13] Any one of these findings, if supported by evidence, is sufficient under the deportation statute to make membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party an adequate basis for deportation.

[12] No reliance was placed by the courts below on the "mere scintilla of evidence" condemned by this Court as insufficient to sustain orders of the National Labor Relations Board. The district court concluded in express terms (R. 758) that the order for deportation was made "after a fair hearing on substantial evidence," and Judge Stephens, in his opinion in the court below on denial of petition for rehearing, pointed out specifically (R. 7812) that in both the majority and the concurring opinion in the latter court "the idea of the mere scintilla was never considered."

Petitioner offered no evidence at the hearing to controvert the Government's contention that the Communist Party was an organization within the description of the deportation statute, nor did the petition for a writ of certiorari challenge the sufficiency of the evidence in this respect. The petition did state (Pet. 8, footnote) that if certiorari should be granted petitioner would argue that the proof did not support the findings as to the Communist Party; but as we read his brief it seems doubtful that any such argument is seriously advanced.[14] Nevertheless, since the findings as to the Communist Party lie at the root of the Government's case, we deem it appropriate to state in some detail the more significant portions of the evidence supporting such findings. The evidence consists both of Party literature and of [13] The Communist Party was dissolved at a national convention of the Party held on May 20, 1944. See petition of the Communist Political Association for leave to intervene in this Court, p. 5.

[14] The discussion at pages 92–97 of petitioner's brief, which comes nearest to the point, appears to be directed to the proposition that the Government failed to establish any such "clear and present danger" from membership in the Communist Party as would constitutionally justify the statute in its proposed application to petitioner. This argument is discussed infra, at pp. 115–125.

testimony of former members of the Party acquainted with its aims, teachings, methods, and literature.[15] It may be summarized as follows:

A 1919 Convention in Moscow, representing Communist Parties of eight countries, resulted in the so-called "Third International,"[16] dedi-

[15] These witnesses and their qualifications were as follows: Benjamin Gitlow, a member of the Communist Party from its inception in 1919 to 1929, a member of the Party's Central Executive Committee, General Secretary in 1929, and its candidate for vice-president of the United States in 1924 and 1928 (R. 811–812); Nat Honig, a Party member from 1927 to November 1939, in 1934 Party representative in Moscow to the Red International of Labor Unions, managing editor of the official Party publication on the West Coast, and author of several Party pamphlets (R. 2065, 2067, 2070, 2071); Howard Rushmore, a Party member from the fall of 1934 to December 1939 and during that period managing editor of the official organ of the Young Communist League, organizational secretary of the Party for Iowa, and on the staff of the Daily Worker, official Party publication (R. 1421–1425); and Farrell Schnering, a Party member from January 1930 to May 1930 and from June 1931 to December 1935 (R. 1200–1201), during those periods the Party's State Secretary for Wisconsin and a director of the Milwaukee Workers School, editor of the official publication of the Party for Wisconsin, and in 1934 candidate of the Party for Attorney General of Wisconsin (R. 1167, 1169, 1194, 1200). Judge Sears' summarization of the qualifications of these witnesses appears at pages 164–170 and 296–297 of the record.

The documentary evidence, insofar as it is relied on in the following statement, is described in Appendix B, infra, pp. 131–135.

[16] The "Third International" regards itself as the successor of the "First International," which was established at London in 1864 and adopted the "Communist Manifesto" of Marx and Engels (Gov. Ex. 91, R. 1031) for its program. The "Third International" repudiated the "Second International," established at Paris in 1889, as a renegade movement cated to the creation of "a single World Party of the revolutionary proletariat" (Gov. Ex. 228, p. 8, R. 2089). A second World Congress in Moscow, in 1920, adopted the "Theses and Statutes of the Third (Communist) International" (Gov. Ex. 94, R. 1037). Fundamental tenets set forth therein are that the class struggle is entering the phase of civil war; that Communists can have no confidence in bourgeois laws and must everywhere create a parallel legal apparatus which at the decisive moment will assist the revolution; that Communist groups should be formed in every military organization to carry on persistent and systematic agitation and propaganda fomenting disloyalty; that where such agitation is unlawful it is nevertheless necessary to carry it on unlawfully; that for a Party to be affiliated with the Third International its program must be in accordance with the resolution of that body and approved by it (R. 1037–1046; Gov. Ex. 94, pp. 27–32; R. 1037); and that "The mass struggle means a whole system of developing demonstrations growing ever more acute in form, and logically leading to an uprising against the capitalistic order of Government" (Gov. Ex. 94, p. 47, R. 1037).

The Communist Party in the United States had its inception in 1919 (R. 818–820). From the beginning its aims and objectives "were the revolutionary aims and objectives as outlined later by the Communist Internationale. that is. working for organizing the forces to overthrow the Government of the United States and to set up in its place a new form of Government to be known as the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, patterned after the form of the government of Soviet Russia" (R. 819). It became a section of the International, and adopted a program in conformity with the program and policies of the latter, declaring itself to be "the most revolutionary part of the working class" and that it would "systematically and persistently propagate the idea of the inevitability of and necessity for violent revolution and [would] prepare the workers for armed insurrection as the only means of overthrowing the capitalist state" (Gov. Ex. 98, pp. 1, 5, 6–7, R. 1060). Late in 1921 the "Workers Party of America" was formed as the organized expression of Communism in this country, and it continued to function as the American section of the Communist International when in 1923 that body ordered the dissolution of the Communist Party of America (Gov. Ex. 99, p. 484, R. 1061; Gov. Ex. 108, preface and p. 20, R. 1074; Gov. Ex. 109, p. 5, R. 1075; Gov. Ex. 111, p. 5, R. 1077; Gov. Ex. 112, pp. 5–6, R. 1077–1078; Gov. Ex. 135, p. 295, R. 1445; Gov. Ex. 164, p. 795, R. 1476). In 1925 the Workers Party officially took the name "Workers (Communist) Party, the American Section of the Communist International," and declared its purpose to be the revolutionary overthrow of capitalism and the substitution therefor of a Soviet Government (Gov. Ex. 99, pp. 484–485, R. 1061; Gov. Ex. 104, pp. 26, 27, R. 1069; Gov. Ex. 135, p. 296, R. 1445). Since 1929 it was known as the "Communist Party of the U. S. A.," or simply as the "Communist Party" (R. 822–824; Gov. Ex. 135, pp. 296, 298, 300, R. 1445). To belong to the Party one had to agree to engage actively in its work and to subordinate one's self "to all the decisions of the Comintern and of the Party" (R. 823). A condition of membership was that the candidate "has reached the point where he understands that force and violence must be used to smash and destroy the capitalist Government" (R. 1186).

"undermined by opportunism and damaged by the treason of its leaders who have taken the side of the bourgeoisie" (Gov. Ex. 94, p. 4, R. 1037).

Government witness Gitlow testified that the interpretation currently placed by the Communist Party upon the "Manifesto" of Marx and Engels was that "in order to overthrow capitalism it is necessary to do it forcibly through a violent revolution" (R. 1032).[17] Use of the ballot by the Party, in order to get its "temporary demands" before the electorate, was regarded by it "as only [17] In the pamphlet "Why Communism?" (Gov. Ex. 120, R. 1117), more than 60,000 copies of which were published and distributed by the Party in the single year of 1934 (R. 1496), it is stated (R. 1114–1115):

"The capitalist State is a glaring fact. It is flesh and blood of the capitalist system. It stands in the way of the workers' progress towards a new, free life. Can it be abolished by gradual transformation? Those who say it can are the staunchest supporters of the capitalist robbers and the a make-shift at the best, and [as] only another means of building the influence and membership of the Communist Party" (R. 1989; also R. 1056). Lenin taught that "The replacement of the Bourgeois by the proletarian state is impossible without a violent revolution" (Gov. Ex. 182, pp. 19–20, R. 1486); that if the class struggle results in the sacrifice of "half a million or a million" lives, the sacrifice will be justified (Gov. Ex. 184, "A Letter to American Workers," by V. I. Lenin, p. 18, R. 1491). But a revolution "does not simply happen; it must be made" (Gov. Ex. 231, "What is Communism?" by Earl Browder, p. 125, R. 2093). To make a revolution "it is essential first that a majority of the workers (or at least a majority of the class-conscious, thinking, politically active workers) should fully understand the necessity for revolution and be ready to sacrifice their lives for it; secondly, that the ruling classes be in a state of governmental crisis which draws even the most backward masses into politics, * * * weakens the government, and makes it possible for the revolutionaries to overthrow it rapidly" (Gov. Ex. 183, pp. 43–44, R. 1490). The Communist Party conceived of itself most active promoters of imperialist wars. Their theory is not harmless, indeed. It is a poisonous theory. It is a smoke screen behind which cruel capitalist exploitation is hiding.

"We Communists say that there is one way to abolish the capitalist State, and that is to smash it by force. To make Communism possible the workers must take hold of the State machinery of capitalism and destroy it."

as the General Staff to organize and direct the workers to this end and, by precipitating or taking advantage of a governmental crisis, to bring about a revolution and carry it to a successful conclusion (R. 1174–1175)." "Only the revolutionary party of the proletariat can serve as this General Staff. A working class without a revolutionary party is like an army without a General Staff. The Party is the Military Staff of the proletariat" (Gov. Ex. 183, p. 109, R. 1490)." It

[18] In the July 1929 issue of "The Communist" (Gov. Ex. 232, R. 2097), a magazine officially published and distributed by the Communist Party, the following passage appears (R. 2099):

"When a revolutionary situation is developing, as a result of war or from any other cause, the Party of the proletariat must lead a direct attack against the capitalist state. The slogans put forth must be of such a nature as to guide the movement in its development, which will take the form at first of mass strikes and armed demonstrations. In that stage there arises the question of arming of the working class and disarming the capitalist class. Finally the highest form of struggle is reached wherein it culminates in the general strike and a merging of large sections of the military forces and the workers for armed insurrection against the capitalist state power."

The foregoing is a portion of a quotation which is set forth more fully in the opinion of Circuit Judge Wilbur, with the comment that "it unquestionably constitutes evidence in support of the finding that the Communist Party advocates rebellion" (R. 7783–7785).

[19] The booklet containing this excerpt ("Foundations of Leninism") was first published in 1934. In the first printing there were 100,000 copies, and there was wide distribution of the booklet by the Communist Party (R. 1488). The January 1938 issue of "The Communist" listed it for distribution and reading (Gov. Ex. 145, R. 1483, 1484, 1488).

was the theory of the Communists that "history has cast them in the role of those particular people who are going to lead, guide and direct this armed uprising which they speak of as the revolution" (R. 1175).

This conception of itself appears to have been the basis of the Party's policy toward the trade union movement. Demands "for better conditions such as shorter hours, higher wages, more relief to the unemployed, and all of the other demands raised in the various struggles organized by or under the leadership of the Communist Party" were merely "temporary demands or aims, and they are brought forward solely for the purpose of increasing the membership of the Communist Party and establishing the Communist Party as the leader of the working class and its allies" (R. 1988). The same purpose lay behind the Party policy of fostering and engaging in strikes (R. 964). "In this warfare of the masses developing into a civil war, the guiding party of the proletariat must, as a general rule, secure every and all lawful positions, making them its auxiliaries in the revolutionary work, and subordinating such positions to the plans of the general campaign, that of the mass struggle" (Gov. Ex. 94, p. 47, R. 1037, 1047). The capture of labor union leadership was regarded as "vitally necessary" to "the ultimate victory of the revolutionary struggle" and was recognized by the Party as its "first and foremost task" (R. 960). It was regarded as "necessary * * * to go to the whole length of any sacrifice, if need be, to resort to strategy and adroitness, illegal proceedings, reticence and subterfuge, to anything in order to penetrate into the Trade Unions, remain in them, and carry on Communist work inside them, at any cost" (Gov. Ex. 105, p. 50, R. 1070), for the reason that "ultimately, of course, if they [the Communists] control the trade unions, they control the economic lives of the country and if a revolutionary situation should develop they can use the trade unions very effectively to bring about a successful culmination of such revolution" (R. 836).[20]

The Party program contemplated that "where there are no labor unions the Party must take the initiative and form unions" (R. 965). It likewise contemplated the extension of the Party's influence among the unemployed, "in short, to build the revolution and to use, of course, the unem-

[20] According to the testimony of government witness Honig, the objective of the Communist Party regarding trade unions (R. 2131) "was either to utilize existing trade unions, such as the American Federation of Labor Unions, later on the CIO Unions when they came into being, or at various times to create unions in order to obtain a foothold in industries, particularly the basic industries, the heavy industries, such as steel, various mining industries, marine, textile, to obtain a foothold in those industries, and to set up nuclei groups of Communists in these industries to [sic] that when the time was considered right for a seizure of power by the Communist Party that they could already have the Communist Party groups in these industries, very active in these basic industries and, as a result, could move immediately to seize these industries."

ployed organizations" (R. 1184). Unemployed workers were taught that under the capitalist regime "there will be more and more millions of workers condemned to a relief standard of living"; that social insurance and freedom from unemployment in the Soviet Union were made possible only by the workers "having exercised their revolutionary power to overthrow capitalism in Russia and displace the capitalist government with the dictatorship of the proletariat"; and that the conclusion "that the American workers ought to draw was only until [sic] they had followed in the footsteps of the Russian workers and farmers would they be able to reach a solution for the problem of the worker on relief" (R. 1185–1186).

The two principal organizational devices which the Communist Party used in its program towards the trade unions were "fractions" and "front organizations." "Fractions" were described by government witness Gitlow as cells within trade unions which, by their unity of action and militancy, were able to elect candidates for office, direct union policies, and exert an influence disproportionate to their number (R. 838–840; see also R. 1109–1110, 1986). By exploiting grievances they were able to foment dissension and draw to themselves disgruntled elements. "Front organizations" were those whose true purpose of advancing the aims of the Communist Party was screened by ostensibly legitimate purposes (R. 836–837, 915–917, 1107–1112, 1176–1177; Gov. Ex. 120, p. 69,

R. 1117). Two such organizations were the Trade Union Educational League (T. U. E. L.) and its successor, the Trade Union Unity League (T. U. U. L.). These were American affiliates of the Red International of Labor Unions (R. I. L. U.), the international trade union organization of the Communist International, and were dominated by the Communist Party (R. 895, 1176–1181). The T. U. U. L., in addition to the "boring from within" strategy, emphasized the organization of previously unorganized workers into unions (Gov. Ex. 135, p. 218, R. 1445; Gov. Ex. 221, pp. 6–7, R. 2080). It announced that in the event of "an Imperialist War it will mobilize the workers to struggle against American imperialism and to transform this war into a class war against the capitalist system itself" (R. 2079). It became the central organization of a group of revolutionary unions which it chartered,[21] one of these being the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 1176–1181; Gov. Ex. 164, pp. 799, 810, R. 1476; Gov. Ex. 220, p. 31, R. 2074). The establishment of fractions and front organizations was regarded as work preparatory for "the time when the Communists believe they can seize power through revolution" (R. 842). For a similar purpose the Party conducted workers' schools, ostensibly as "non-political organizations, interested only in the education of the masses" (R. 1167; see also R. 1118–1120, 2511–2518), but designed "to educate as many workers as possible to the Communist Party without their knowing it" (R. 1167) and to persuade them that there would be no solution of the problems of American workers until they, as the workers had done in Russia, "had destroyed root, stem and branch, and left no stone standing of the old order" (R. 1171). The Party also sent students to the Lenin School in Moscow, established by the Communist International for the purpose of training professional revolutionists (R. 862–864).

To prevent exclusion or expulsion of its members from labor unions and similar organizations used as "front organizations", the Party encouraged such members to conceal the fact of their membership (R. 829, 840–841, 861, 926–928, 933–934, 1454–1456, 2132–2133; Gov. Ex. 9, pp. 2–3, R. 843; Gov. Ex. 15, p. 3, R. 859; Gov. Ex. 20, p. 1, R. 876). This was deemed especially important in the case of government employees, labor leaders, and teachers, whose known membership might cause loss of employment or of influence (R. 841, 927). It was a part of the Party's self-styled "policy of hypocrisy and deceit" (R. 928), which also included the giving of false testimony in "capitalist" courts (R. 927–929, 1156–1157, 1456, 2132–2133). In line with this policy, according to government witness Rushmore, the "Communists decided at the Communist International Convention at Moscow in 1935 that their old tactics weren't getting them very far" (R. 1461), and consequently adopted a self-styled "Trojan horse" policy whereby they "watered down the more revolutionary aspects of their program; at least temporarily" (R. 1472) and "even soft pedaled their attacks on religion" (R. 1462). Rushmore testified that, notwithstanding this change of policy, the Party never abandoned the basic technique and principles on which it was founded, and continued to circulate literature advising the overthrow of the Government by force and violence (R. 1484–1498). Government witness Gitlow likewise so testified (R. 1088–1089).

We submit that the foregoing evidence fully supports the Attorney General's finding that the Communist Party from its inception in 1919 until the date of his decision believed in, advised, advocated, and taught the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States. Administrative findings to this effect have been before the courts many times, and when based on comparable records have, without exception so far as we have been able to discover, been uniformly sustained.[22] force and violence are the necessary instrumentalities for its accomplishment and are contemplated, and that, if consummated, it would overthrow government as now instituted." This Court's decision in the Schneiderman case furnishes no support for a contrary view. There the Court was dealing with a proceeding to set aside a judicial decree of naturalization. Such a proceeding, the Court held, was analogous to the setting aside of a public grant of land, for the purpose of which "the evidence must be 'clear, unequivocal, and convincing'—'it cannot be done upon a bare preponderance of evidence which leaves the issue in doubt'" (320 U. S. at 125). Cf. Baumgartner v. United States, 322 U. S. 665, 670. The distinction between the criteria applicable to such a case and those applicable in habeas corpus proceedings to test the validity of deportation orders was clearly recognized by the Court in the Schneiderman case itself:

In the third, Ex parte Fierstein, 41 F. 2d 53 (C. C. A. 9), the only evidence adduced in support of the finding was the bare statement of the arresting detective that the Party did so advocate.

> * * * On varying records in deportation proceedings some courts have held that administrative findings that the [Communist] Party did so advocate [the overthrow of the Government by force and violence] were not so wanting in evidential support as to amount to a denial of due process, others have held to the contrary on different records, and some seem to have taken the position that they will judicially notice that force and violence is a Party principle. This Court has never

> The bombastic excerpts set forth in Notes 35 to 38 inclusive, upon which the Government particularly relies, lend considerable support to the charge. We do not say that a reasonable man could not possibly have found, as the district court did, that the Communist Party in 1927 actively urged the overthrow of the Government by force and violence. But that is not the issue here. We are not concerned with the question whether a reasonable man might so conclude, nor with the narrow issue whether administrative findings to that effect are so lacking in evidentiary support as to amount to a denial of due process. * * *[23]

In view of the difference in issues, the Schneiderman case would thus not be controlling even had the Court there determined, for purposes of the case then before it, that the Communist Party did not advocate the overthrow of the Government by force and violence. But the Court made no such determination; rather, it intimated that the evidence then before it could properly have been held sufficient to sustain a contrary determination in a case involving administrative findings. Here we have such a case, and more compelling evidence. The publications containing the four "bombastic excerpts" referred to in the foregoing quotation from the opinion in the Schneiderman case are all in evidence here,[24] as likewise are all the other significant documents which were introduced in the Schneiderman case on this issue. In addition, the record here contains a mass of similar material which, though not relied on in the Schneiderman case because published after the period which was there regarded as critical, is of unquestionable relevance in this proceeding.[25] On this record, which is certainly no less strong than that in the Schneiderman case, we do not believe that the propriety of the Attorney General's finding as to the aims of the Communist Party is open to the slightest question.

The title and translation of the last named work vary somewhat from those used in the edition referred to in the Schneiderman opinion (320 U. S. at 151, fn. 38), but the substance of the excerpts quoted by the Court will be found at pp. 53 and 103 of Gov. Ex. 183.

[25] For the convenience of the Court, we have set out in Appendix B infra, pp. 131–135, a brief description of each of the documents in the record which have been cited above as tending to establish the character of the Communist Party. Documents which were also introduced in the Schneiderman case are indicated in italics.

There can likewise be no doubt on the record that the Communist Party from its inception in the United States in 1919 until the date of the Attorney General's decision published and circulated, caused to be published and circulated, and had in its possession for the purpose of circulation, literature advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence. In substantial measure the record consists of such literature, circulated by the Party. The Presiding Inspector has summarized (R. 179–182), with sustaining exhibit and transcript references, the elaborate organization of the Communist Party's editing and publishing activities. As government witness Schnering testified: "The Party has a tremendous press. We used to brag that there was scarcely a language spoken in the country in which a Communist paper was not printed. They had many weekly papers; the Daily Worker which was the official publication of the Communist Party. They published many, many tons of pamphlets, books, through the Workers Library Publishers and the International Publishers. The Central Committee itself from time to time published pamphlets" (R. 1193). With respect to each of the government exhibits of Party literature, its Party sponsorship or approval and the fact of its distribution by the Party were brought out by the particular witness through whom the particular exhibit was introduced.[26] The excerpts from such literature to which we have referred show it to be of an inflammatory character and of general application, unmarked by any apparent distinction between advocating and predicting violence (cf. Schneiderman v. United States, fns. 40, 48, 320 U. S. at 153, 156). Taken in their ordinary sense they import the advising, advocating, and teaching of the forcible overthrow of the Government at an opportune time. Those to whom they were addressed could not reasonably have interpreted them as anything less than militant advocacy of this result. We submit that the findings of the Attorney General that the Communist Party was an organization within the description of the deportation statute are adequately supported by the evidence.

B. The finding of petitioner's membership in the Communist Party (Finding 9, R. 104).—There was adduced at the deportation hearings direct evidence of admissions by petitioner, by both words and conduct, of his membership in the Communist Party of the United States after his entry into the country. We outline below the more important of this evidence.

1. The testimony of Lundeberg.—Lundeberg, Secretary-Treasurer of the Sailors Union of the

of the Pacific, head of the Seafarers International Union of North America, Vice President of the California State Federation of Labor, and in 1935 president of the Maritime Federation (R. 7260–7261), testified that in the summer of 1935 he was at petitioner's home through petitioner's invitation, having supper (R. 7264–7265); that among those present were Sam Darcy, an acknowledged Communist, to whom petitioner introduced the witness (R. 7265–7266), petitioner's wife, his secretary Norma Perry, and perhaps his daughter (R. 7335); and that Darcy, in petitioner's presence, asked Lundeberg to join the Communist Party, stating that petitioner was a member and that if Lundeberg joined the Party, it would build him up as a labor leader (R. 7266–7267). Lundeberg testified that petitioner then said: "You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist Party if you join" (R. 7267) and "You don't have to be afraid because I am one too" (R. 7268)—"Nothing to be afraid of; I am a member of the Communist Party" (R. 7339). Petitioner admitted that Lundeberg was at his home for dinner in the summer of 1935 (R. 7576) and that he was aware of Darcy's party membership (R. 6091–6092), but denied that Darcy was present at the time (R. 7576–7577) and that he had told Lundeberg that he (petitioner) was a member of the Communist Party (R. 7709–7710). He also testified that his wife, another woman, and his two children were present (R. 7577).

Lundeberg's testimony of petitioner's admission would have been competent evidence in a court of law (Beckwith v. Bean, 98 U. S. 266, 280; Harrison v. United States, 42 F. 2d 736, 737 (C. C. A. 10); Crouch v. United States, 11 F. Supp. 232, 234 (N. D. W. Va.); Union Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Masten, 3 Fed. 881, 885–886 (C. C. D. Ind.); cf. Warszower v. United States, 312 U. S. 342, 348); and, of course, is competent evidence in a deportation proceeding (Chan Wong v. Nagle, 17 F. 2d 987 (C. C. A. 9)). The question then is purely one of credibility—whether Lundeberg or petitioner was to be believed. On this question the determination made by the Attorney General is conclusive in a collateral judicial review unless Lundeberg's testimony was so inherently improbable that as a matter of law it is not entitled to credence. In this respect the power of the courts differs from the power of the Board of Immigration Appeals to review Judge Sears' recommended findings. The Board was entitled to draw its own conclusions from the evidence. Rule 90.11 of the Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (8 C. F. R., 1940 Supp., 90.11).[27] So, likewise, was the Attorney General entitled to draw his own conclusions from the evidence. Rule 90.12, ibid., 8 C. F. R., 1940 Supp. 90.12, Appendix A, infra, p. 128.[28] But a court is not entitled to reject Lundeberg's testimony for the reasons relied upon by the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 468–489), since those reasons provide no legal basis for rejection of such testimony by a tribunal that is not a trier of fact.[29]

[28] Review by the administrative officer charged with the issuance of deportation orders "is not confined to ascertaining whether there is any evidence to support the board; he exercises a power to examine the whole record and ascertain where the truth lies". United States ex rel. Hom Yuen Jum v. Dunton, 291 Fed. 905, 906 (S. D. N. Y.).

[29] The first of such reasons was Lundeberg's conceded bias as a rival labor leader whose relations with petitioner since October 1935 had been unfriendly (R. 475). But such bias was recognized and given full consideration by Judge Sears (R. 258) and the Attorney General (R. 91) in evaluating Lundeberg's testimony. A second reason relied upon by the Board of Immigration Appeals was its conclusion that Lundeberg's testimony included "three successive, growing versions of the conversation at Bridges' home" (R. 475), coupled with the fact that in three different interviews with government agents in the preceding six years he had stated that he had no information that petitioner was a Communist (R. 476–478, 7340–7349, 7367–7368). Lundeberg's testimony on direct examination as to the conversation with petitioner covers less than three pages of the record (R. 7266–7268), and it is inaccurate to describe as "the third version" (see Pet. Br. 49) the answers, consistent with each other, given within such a short space of time to questions that proceeded in normal course from the general to the specific. While some of the questions were leading, we think that the record shows that Lundeberg did not testify to petitioner's admission itself in response to leading questions. The previous statements of Lundeberg to government agents that he had no informa-

We submit that no portion of Lundeberg's testimony in any way calls for its rejection as a matter of law; and that the crediting of such testimony by the Attorney General must be deemed conclusive upon the courts. Moreover, it should be noted that Lundeberg's testimony is corroborated, as Judge Sears and the Attorney General recognized (R. 258–259, 91), by petitioner's failure to call as witnesses any of the other persons admittedly present at his home when the conversation occurred. None of these persons was shown to be unavailable. It is reasonable to assume that petitioner's wife and daughter, as well as Darcy and Norma Perry, petitioner's secretary, were readily available to him as witnesses. Whether petitioner's wife and daughter heard the particular conversation is immaterial; they at least were in a position to corroborate or deny petitioner's assertion that Darcy was not present at his house that evening. Under these circumstances, petition that petitioner was a Communist, were given due consideration by Judge Sears in evaluating Lundeberg's testimony (R. 257–258). As emphasized by the Attorney General (R. 92) and Judge Sears (R. 258), Lundeberg had been reluctant to testify against petitioner (R. 7340–7349, 7367–7368). Not until the night before taking the witness stand, when he was already under subpoena, did Lundeberg state to a government representative that petitioner was a Communist, and the statement then made was consistent with his testimony (R. 7340). As the Attorney General commented (R. 92), "anyone who is familiar with witnesses, and their reluctance to testify, as referred to by Judge Sears, knows that such a contradiction frequently occurs."

tioner's failure to call any of these persons as witnesses was properly considered by the Attorney General as an inference corroborative of Lundeberg's testimony. 2 Wigmore, Evidence (3d ed., 1940), Sec. 288; United States v. Cotter, 60 F. 2d 689, 692 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 287 U. S. 666; Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Phipps, 125 Fed. 478, 482–483 (C. C. A. 8).

2. The testimony of Kelley and Barlow.—Government witness Kelley, proprietor of the Atwood Hotel in Seattle (R. 1917), testified that while petitioner was at the hotel on May 1, 1937 (R. 1917–1918), he heard one Dietrich say to petitioner at a conversation among the three in Dietrich's room: "Harry, you are one of the swellest guys I have ever known if it wasn't for the Commie outfit that you belong to." According to Kelley, petitioner replied: "That is all right. You will see the time that you are damned glad to belong to our outfit" (R. 1920). Kelley later asked Dietrich what he had meant and Dietrich replied: "It is the Communists. Didn't you know that Bridges belongs to that outfit?" (R. 1920–1921). Petitioner did not unequivocally deny having made the statement attributed to him. He testified that he doubted that he had made it, but that if he had it had not been made seriously (R. 5849–5851). Kelley testified that at the time he "never even gave it a second thought because [he] had no occasion to take it seriously and [he] paid no attention to it" (R. 1938).

Government witness Barlow testified that at a convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in Seattle in 1935, petitioner told him "that the only way that a young fellow could get ahead in the labor movement today was to join the Communist Party" (R. 7377). Petitioner denied making this statement to Barlow (R. 7576).

With respect to the Kelley incident, since it did not impress the witness as serious at the time it occurred, Judge Sears recognized that if it stood alone it was "too equivocal to base a finding of membership or affiliation thereon" (R. 318). It shows, however, that petitioner, on another occasion than that to which Lundeberg testified, not only did not deny but acknowledged the attribution to him of membership in the Communist Party; and therefore the incident, the occurrence of which was not denied, has a corroborating significance in relation to Lundeberg's testimony. Of somewhat similar significance is the Barlow incident which, although denied by petitioner, Judge Sears and the Attorney General found took place (R. 272, 96).

3. The testimony and prior statements of O'Neil.—James O'Neil had been closely associated with petitioner from 1937 to 1939 as publicity director of the C. I. O. on the West Coast under petitioner's supervision, and had access to petitioner's office (R. 2993–2994). O'Neil had failed to answer two subpoenas calling for his attendance as a government witness at the hearing; and he appeared only after he had been cited by a district judge for contempt (R. 2981–2982, 3078–3079). At the hearing the Government questioned him concerning a prior verbal statement he had allegedly made to the F. B. I. on October 7, 1940. O'Neil admitted that he was interviewed on October 7, 1940, but denied making certain remarks concerning petitioner which tended to show that petitioner was a member of the Communist Party (R. 3019–3024, 3076). He also testified that at an interview on April 22, 1941, at which Major Schofield, then Special Assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (R. 5255), and Mr. Del Guercio, chief government counsel, were present, he told them that the statements he had made to the F. B. I. were true and also that what he told Schofield and Del Guercio on April 22 was true (R. 3032–3033, 3079–3081). He denied, however, having said that petitioner was a Communist or that he had seen him placing assessment stamps in a Communist Party book (R. 3036, 3051–3053).

Mrs. Segerstrom, a stenographer in the employ of the F. B. I., testified that she was present at O'Neil's interview on October 7, 1940, and that he dictated a statement which she took down stenographically (R. 3102–3104). She read her stenographic notes of the statement (R. 3104–3113, 3145) and in them appeared the following remarks of O'Neil (R. 3109–3110, 3113):

On another occasion I walked into Bridges' office, it always being my privilege to do so after first having assured myself that he was alone, and there on his desk was a new Party book, which had just been issued and into which Bridges was puttting assessment stamps. This was about two o'clock in the afternoon in Bridges' office in the Balboa Building, 593 Market Street, Room 509, in 1937. I expressed amazement that he was doing this openly with the book in plain view on top of his desk. However, he nonchalantly continued to put the stamps in place and then returned the book to his pocket. I knew this was a Communist Party book because I had one myself and it was just like it. It was the general practice to pay your dues to the Communist Party dues collector and, in return, to receive stamps which he tore off from a block and which you inserted in your book at your leisure. There is no doubt in my mind but what that was Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party.

* * * * *

On several occasions Bridges reminded me that I had not been attending Party meetings * * *.

* * * * *

* * * Bridges said that fraction meetings had been conducted in the room [in the Multnomah Hotel at which he stayed during a Maritime Federation Convention at Portland, Oregon, in 1937] * * *. By this he meant top fraction meetings of the Communist Party.

Major Schofield testified that at the interview with O'Neil on April 22, 1941, O'Neil stated that he had seen petitioner "pasting dues stamps in Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party" (R. 5255–5256). Petitioner denied that he ever told O'Neil that he had participated in Communist Party fraction meetings or that he had called to O'Neil's attention that O'Neil had not been attending such meetings (R. 5882–5883).

Judge Sears accepted the statement of O'Neil as affirmative evidence of petitioner's membership in the Communist Party, although he recognized that it was hearsay and had not been made under oath, stating as to the one objection that "the sanction of cross-examination was present," and stating as to the other objection that there was "something equivalent" to an oath since O'Neil testified that he had told the truth in his interview with the F. B. I. and in the interview at which Major Schofield was present (R. 268–271). The Board of Immigration Appeals held that while the O'Neil statements were admissible for purposes of impeachment, they could not be considered as affirmative probative evidence. It also stated that the fundamental requirements of a fair hearing required their exclusion in that they had been received in violation of the regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service governing the reception of evidence at deportation hearings

(Rule 150.1 (c), 8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.1 (c) and Rule 150.6 (i), 8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.6 (i), Appendix A, infra, pp. 128–129, 130) (R. 446–451).[30]

The Attorney General agreed with Judge Sears. With respect to the asserted violation of the regulations, he said: "No objection having been raised by the alien throughout the hearing, * * * he waived the right to object on the technical ground that the statement was not taken in accordance with the rules" (R. 95–96). Likewise, the Attorney General was in accord with Judge Sears' finding that O'Neil's statements were credible (R. 96). For these reasons, he accepted the statements as substantive proof of petitioner's membership in the Communist Party. We submit that he was justified in so doing.[31]

O'Neil's testimony on the witness stand was in direct contradiction of the prior statements. He testified that he had made prior statements on the occasions in question, and that in them he had told the truth (R. 3080–3081), but denied that the statements in evidence represented what he had said (R. 3001–3073). The fact that prior statements were made is thus supported by the oaths of Segerstrom, Schofield, and O'Neil himself; and [30] These regulations were not considered by Judge Sears, since they had not been called to his attention (R. 451).

[31] For reasons of convenience we treat the question at this point, although it might equally appropriately be considered in our subsequent discussion of petitioner's contention that he was denied a fair hearing by reason of alleged procedural abuses, infra, pp. 93–115.

that the statements in evidence represent what he said is supported by the oaths of Segerstrom and Schofield as well as by Segerstrom's original stenographic notes (Gov. Ex. 256, R. 3145). On the record we submit that there can be no doubt that the Attorney General was entitled to conclude that O'Neil made the statements attributed to him, as had similarly been found also by Judge Sears and the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 92–94, 269–271, 443). The question thus presented is whether the fact of their acceptance by the Attorney General as substantive evidence bearing on the issue of petitioner's membership in the Communist Party constitutes a denial of a fair hearing.

We submit that there is no basis for the contention that prior statements of a witness contradictory of his testimony on the stand are not properly admissible for their substantive worth in an administrative proceeding of this character. That such statements are admissible in strictly judicial proceedings for impeachment purposes is well settled. Walker v. United States, 104 F. 2d 465, 470 (C. C. A. 4); United States v. Graham, 102 F. 2d 436, 441 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 307 U. S. 643; United States v. Block, 88 F. 2d 618, 620 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 301 U. S. 690; London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Woelfle, 83 F. 2d 325, 333 (C. C. A. 8); Curtis v. United States, 67 F. 2d 943, 946 (C. C. A. 10); Di Carlo v. United States, 6 F. 2d 364, 368

(C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 268 U. S. 706. In administrative proceedings they are admissible both for impeachment and for such affirmative evidentiary value as the trier of fact may assign to them. Thus the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, while rejecting such a statement for purposes of a criminal case on the ground that the court was "not free so to make over the law," pointed out that in other than criminal cases "such a statement would be accepted as evidence to be weighed against the retraction, and nobody would think it an injustice to make use of it." United States v. Block, supra, at 620. And in Ng Kee Wong v. Corsi, 65 F. 2d 564, 565 (C. C. A. 2), the court referred to the distinction between the use of prior contradictory statements for impeachment purposes and their use as substantive evidence as "an artificial doctrine" and refused to apply it to an alien exclusion proceeding, saying: "These administrative boards are not bound by common-law rules of evidence, and we see no reason why they should not be permitted to accept a witness' prior testimony as affirmative proof of the fact then asserted, provided it is thought worthy of credence."

The rule thus applied by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals has been recognized by other circuits in cases involving alien exclusion and deportation proceedings (Maita v. Haff, 116 F. 2d 337, 338 (C. C. A. 9); Ex parte Wong Foo Gwong, 50 F. 2d 360, 361 (C. C. A. 9); Ex parte Ematsu Kishimoto, 32 F. 2d 991, 992 (C. C. A. 9); Wong Wey v. Johnson, 21 F. 2d 963, 964 (C. C. A. 1); Moy Said Ching v. Tillinghast, 21 F. 2d 810, 811 (C. C. A. 1); Ghiggeri v. Nagle, 19 F. 2d 875, 876 (C. C. A. 9); Johnson v. Kock Shing, 3 F. 2d 889, 890 (C. C. A. 1), certiorari denied, 269 U. S. 558), and petitioner cites no authority to the contrary.[32] Nor is it material to their admissibility that the prior statements may not have been made under oath.[33] That factor does not preclude their admission in judicial proceedings for impeachment purposes, even though the jury may well attribute to them significance beyond that of impeachment alone. "The possibility that the jury may accept as the truth the earlier statements in preference to those made upon the stand is indeed real, but we find no difficulty in it. If, from all that the jury see of the witness, they conclude that what he says now is not the truth, but what he said before, they are [32] The cases cited at p. 43 of petitioner's brief, fn. 27, merely stand for the proposition that a deportation order cannot validly rest exclusively on unverified ex parte statements of persons who are not produced for cross-examination.

[33] See, e. g., Chan Wong v. Nagle, 17 F. 2d 987 (C. C. A. 9) (prior statements held admissible although it did not appear that they were made under oath); Chew Toy v. Nagle, 27 F. 2d 513, 514 (C. C. A. 9):

"The contention that the decision of the Secretary of Labor was unfair, because based on informal statements not taken under oath, and because the appellant's counsel had no opportunity prior to the decision on the appeal to meet the case made against the citizenship of Chew Young, is not sustainable."

none the less deciding from what they see and hear of that person and in court. There is no mythical necessity that the case must be decided only in accordance with the truth of words uttered under oath in court." Di Carlo v. United States, 6 F. 2d 364, 368 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 268 U. S. 706. And since the fact that such statements are unsworn does not preclude their admission in judicial proceedings for the proper purpose of impeachment, it should have no greater bearing upon their admissibility for the broader purpose for which it has uniformly been held that they may be admitted in alien exclusion and deportation proceedings. In either case, their unsworn character is a factor going merely to their credibility. Cf. Edison Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 305 U. S. 197, 229–230; National Labor Relations Board v. Remington Rand, Inc., 94 F. 2d 862, 863 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 304 U. S. 576; National Labor Relations Board v. Service Wood Heel Co., Inc., 124 F. 2d 470 (C. C. A. 1).

Petitioner urges strongly (Br. 38–42) that in any event O'Neil's prior contradictory statements were inadmissible under the regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service because not in the form of "recorded statements"—that is, because not made under oath and because O'Neil was not requested to sign the statements which he made. Although this view of the regulations was accepted by the Board of Immigration

Appeals (R. 446–450), the district court (R. 754) and Circuit Judge Healy in his dissent in the court below (R. 7805), we believe that it is erroneous, and is based on a misinterpretation of the pertinent provisions. Rule 150.1 (c) (Appendix A, pp. 128–129, infra), it is true, provides that statements secured during an investigation "which are to be used as evidence" shall be made under oath and taken down in writing, and the person interrogated shall be asked to sign the statement. Viewed in its context and in the light of other provisions of the regulations, this requirement is, however, merely directory of the procedure to be followed during the course of an investigation prior to the issuance of a warrant, to the end that warrants shall not be issued unless "there is credible evidence reasonably establishing (1) that the person investigated is an alien, and (2) that he is subject to deportation." Rule 150.1 (b) (8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.1 (b)). No provision of the regulations specifies that statements other than the "recorded statements" contemplated by Rule 150.1 (c) shall be categorically deemed inadmissible upon a deportation hearing; and, indeed, the contrary affirmatively appears from Rule 150.6 (i) (Appendix A, p. 130, infra), which deals with the admissibility of statements at hearings as distinguished from investigations. That rule provides inter alia that an inspector's affidavit as to statements made to him may be used to show prior contradictory statements by a witness at a hearing if the inspector is unavailable to testify in person—thereby clearly intimating that the inspector himself, if available, may testify as to prior contradictory statements made to him. Nor can it be assumed that under the rule the inspector may testify only as to prior "recorded statements" made in writing and under oath, for the same rule makes such "recorded statements" themselves admissible in evidence to show prior contradictory statements of a witness. Rule 150.6 (i) thus makes plain that, whatever limitations may be imposed upon the use, as evidence, of ex parte "recorded statements" and affidavits, no restriction was intended to be placed upon the use of sworn testimony in accordance with the ordinary rules applicable to deportation hearings. Under those ordinary rules, as we have shown, Major Schofield and Mrs. Segerstrom were fully competent to testify as to prior statements made to them by O'Neil in contradiction of his testimony on the stand; and the admissibility of their testimony can hardly be defeated by the fact that it was supported by a stenographic record contemporaneously taken and authenticated to the satisfaction of the Presiding Inspector.

We believe it clear, therefore, that no rule of the Service was violated in the admission of evidence as to prior contradictory statements of the witness O'Neil, either for impeachment purposes or as substantive evidence. Nor can it even be said that petitioner suffered from the usual vice of hearsay testimony—lack of opportunity for cross-examination to test the truth of the statements admitted in evidence against him. O'Neil, Major Schofield, and Mrs. Segerstrom, the stenographer, were all present at the hearing and available for cross-examination. On the issue of whether the statements were made petitioner had, of course, no reason to cross-examine O'Neil, for his denial of the statements on direct examination afforded petitioner all he could have secured by the most rigid cross-examination. On that issue, however, petitioner not only had but freely exercised the privilege of cross-examining Major Schofield and Mrs. Segerstrom (R. 3116–3156, 5259–5281). Moreover, O'Neil was available for cross-examination as to all the circumstances attending the interviews which he admitted had taken place, and as to any factors which would bear upon the question whether at those interviews he had in fact made the statements attributed to him.

Accordingly, the question, as we see it, is solely whether on the entire record the probability that the prior statements were in fact made and if made were true in fact was so remote that acceptance of them as evidence constituted a denial of a fair hearing. Passing the fact that in any event the acceptance of inadmissible testimony in a deportation hearing does not render the hearing unfair if there is—as there was here—other credible evidence of the fact in issue (cf. Seif v. Nagle, 14 F. 2d 416, 417 (C. C. A. 9), certiorari denied, 273 U. S. 737), we submit that there was no such inherent improbability that the statements were made and were true as to require their rejection as a matter of law. That the statements were in fact made was found not only by the Presiding Inspector and the Attorney General, who believed them, but by the Board of Immigration Appeals, which disbelieved them (supra, p. 54); and since the issue rested solely on the proper resolution of a square conflict of testimony, the conclusion of the administrative agency should be accepted as final. As to their truth, they are certainly not inherently improbable. O'Neil testified to the closeness of his association with petitioner (R. 2993–2994), as did petitioner likewise (R. 6460), and on this record petitioner's membership in the Communist Party is not so improbable as to make it unlikely that O'Neil should have seen him pasting assessment stamps in a Party book. Nothing in logic or experience suggests that a reasonable mind must necessarily rebel under all circumstances at accepting the truth of a prior unsworn statement later denied under oath. Such acceptance as a matter of fact occurs when the trier of fact accepts the prior statements for impeachment purposes. Di Carlo v. United States, 6 F. 2d 364, 368 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 268 U. S. 706, supra, pp. 56–57; Sworn denials of prior truthful statements are all too common in human experience. Moreover, the circumstances of the present case supply affirmative grounds for believing that the prior statements of O'Neil were true and his subsequent denials false. It is significant, as the Presiding Inspector pointed out (R. 268), that O'Neil insisted that what he said on the prior occasions was true, and that he was being misquoted, instead of admitting that he had deliberately made false statements on the prior occasions had that been the case. For had he done the latter, and given some plausible reason for making false statements on the prior occasions, there might be good reason for doubting the truth of the prior statements. But his insistence that he had never made such statements in the face of conclusive evidence that he had done so, coupled with the lengths to which he went to avoid taking the witness stand, properly indicated to Judge Sears and the Attorney General that such statements set forth the truth.

We therefore submit that there was adequate reason to believe the truth of such prior statements; that they are supported by normal guarantees of trustworthiness; that they are not to be excluded as substantive evidence unless this is required by some rule of law or policy stronger than the policy that the truth, as found by the trier of fact on entirely reasonable evidence, shall prevail; and that no such stronger rule or policy applies to this proceeding. It follows that the prior statements of O'Neil properly constitute substantive evidence in the case.

4. Supporting testimony.—We treat at greater length, infra, pp. 87–93, the evidence of other witnesses—including evidence by petitioner himself—tending to support the conclusion that petitioner was affiliated with the Communist Party within the meaning of the deportation statute. However, we cannot pass unchallenged petitioner's effort to foster a misconception of the record upon which Judge Sears and the Attorney General relied in determining the issue of membership as distinct from affiliation.

The only direct evidence relied on, it is true, was that of Lundeberg and O'Neil's prior statements. Much other evidence, it is also true, was rejected by the Presiding Inspector as "untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable" (cf. R. 90). In the latter category may be included the evidence of Sam Diner, Nat Honig, Thomas Laurence, Maurice J. Cannalonga, Richard A. St. Clair, Robert Wilmot, and John Oliver Thompson (R. 295–6, 300, 302–3, 307–8, 310–311, 315, 317).[34]

On the other hand, it is far from true, as petitioner implies at pp. 13–14 of his brief, that all evidence save that of Lundeberg and O'Neil was [34] With respect to the circumstances of the Madison Square Garden meeting, sought to be proved by government witnesses McCuistion and Innes, the Presiding Inspector made no finding either way because of an equal mistrust of the McCuistion-Innes version and the Bridges-Curran version (R. 286).

rejected by the Presiding Inspector as "untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable." No such comment can fairly be made on the testimony of Kelly and Barlow, outlined above (pp. 48–49). The evidence of the Lovelaces showed a meeting in their apartment at which petitioner sought advice from known non-union Communist Party members as to the contents of a telegram of instructions to be sent to his union. Attacks on their credibility failed, and their evidence was accepted by the Presiding Inspector as "important as evidence of the conduct of Bridges in dealing with Communists, especially nontrade union members," and as showing "a close association with Communists in line with other evidence as to Bridges' membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party" (R. 276). Rushmore, who testified as to petitioner's standing in the Party press, and as to his friendly attitude towards Party organizations, was accepted by the Presiding Inspector "as being forthright and as qualified to testify with regard to the matters disclosed by him" (R. 169). Attacks on the credibility and qualifications of J. Ezra Chase likewise failed (R. 166, 288, 323), and his testimony, with that of John S. Horn, was accepted as establishing petitioner's attendance at and participation in a meeting principally attended by Communists, at which petitioner made a speech laying down a "line for trade unionists, whatever their affiliation," which was parallel with the line currently advocated by the Communist Party itself (R. 291–292).

We do not suggest that any one of these witnesses standing alone, or all of them together, could be taken to establish petitioner's membership in the Party. Neither the Presiding Inspector nor the Attorney General so took them; the former's comment "that the testimony of Chase and Horn falls short of establishing by itself Bridges' membership" (R. 291) would be equally applicable to each of the others. But each was a reliable, qualified witness, trustworthy and trusted to the extent of his testimony. Separately and together they throw light on issues in the evidence of Lundeberg and O'Neil which might otherwise more readily have been resolved in favor of petitioner. They are not, as petitioner proposes, to be totally disregarded merely because their credible testimony falls short, in itself, of establishing the ultimate fact in dispute. They strongly support the finding of that fact on the basis of the more direct evidence of the principal witnesses.

C. The findings as to the Marine Workers Industrial Union (Findings 7–8, R. 104).—The Attorney General found that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was a part of, and was dominated and controlled by, the Communist Party, and that it believed in, advised, advocated, and taught the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States. Reference has been made (supra, pp. 33–35) to the "boring from within" strategy of the Communist Party in relation to the labor movement, and to the Trade Union Educational League (T. U. E. L.) and the Trade Union Unity League (T. U. U. L.) as "front" organizations. The T. U. E. L. was formed in 1921 or 1922 "for the purpose of building up an opposition movement within the American Federation of Labor against the Gompers leadership" and thereby gaining control of the Federation to be used by the Communist Party for purposes of violent revolution (R. 839). The Communist International supplied the funds for getting the T. U. E. L. started (R. 925), and the latter was thereafter controlled, directed, and supplied with funds by the Communist Party (R. 841, 875). It published the "Labor Unity" Magazine, devoted to propaganda having the end in view "of building up a strong block within the unions dominated by the Communist Party" for the purpose of achieving eventually "the overthrow of the Government and the establishment of a dictatorship of the proletarians" (R. 875). In line with the "boring from within" strategy then followed, the T. U. E. L. concealed its objectives and purported to be purely an educational association (R. 1176).

The supplanting of the T. U. E. L. by the T. U. U. L. represented a partial change in strategy resulting from a factional fight within the Party. William Z. Foster and others associated with him as the Central Committee of the Party felt that the American Federation of Labor was "committed to a policy of class collaboration" and that in any event it was insignificant in numbers in comparison with the vast number of unorganized workers, and would not provide "a sufficient mass base for operation" (R. 1177). They therefore contended "that it would be best to pursue a new policy, to build revolutionary unions in this country," and they "went forth to organize militant, revolutionary, industrial unions" (ibid.).[35] This resulted in the formation of the T. U. U. L.[36] The circumstances of its founding and its purposes are told in its own publica-

[35] Government witness Honig testified that the "chief reason" for the formation of the T. U. U. L. "was that it was felt in Moscow, in the Communist International and in the Red International of Labor Unions, that a situation was rapidly occurring where the formation of unions with a dire t revolutionary goal would be essential because, as you know, the Wall Street crash occurred in 1929, and unemployment started to increase, plants began to shut down, and they felt that now with this discontent, that this discontent would mount among the working class, and that was a good opportunity to form revolutionary unions to channelize that discontent" (R. 2102); and that another reason for its formation "was to find a trade union organization for the Communists who had been expelled from the A. F. of L. to belong to" (R. 2101).

[36] As pointed out by the Presiding Inspector (R. 204), the T. U. U. L. policy of emphasizing the organization of previously unorganized workers into revolutionary unions was not intended as an abandonment of the "boring from within" strategy in relation to established unions, but was designed to complement that strategy (Gov. Ex. 221, pp. 6–7, R. 2080; Gov. Ex. 135, p. 218, R. 1445).

Like the T. U. E. L., the T. U. U. L. was dominated by the Communist Party and its governing committees (R. 1176–1181; Gov. Ex. 164, p. 809, R. 1476). Its National Committee was composed chiefly if not entirely of members of the Communist Party and it openly supported that Party's program (Gov. Ex. 135, pp. 218, 220, R. 1445; Gov. Ex. 221, p. 13, R. 2080). In turn the importance attached by the Party to the T. U. U. L. is shown, in the "Thesis and Resolutions from the Seventh National Convention of the Communist Party of U. S. A." (Gov. Ex. 129, R. 1216–1219), as follows (R. 1217):

> The most fundamental task of our Party in mass work is the building of the revolutionary unions of the Trade Union Unity League into broad mass organs of struggle. The recent communications of the Comintern and Profintern have again laid stress upon this elementary necessity. It is in this work that there lies the key to the development of our Party into a mass Communist Party.

[11] Government Exhibit 220 is one of the documents that the court in Kjar v. Doak, 61 F. 2d 566, 568 (C. C. A. 7) held to be "quite convincing of the fact that the Communist Party believes in and advocates the use of force and violence whenever and wherever sufficient power is present to accomplish the purpose."

lutionary unions. It must play the leading role in the Trade Union Unity League, not by substituting itself for the T. U. U. L. and actually taking over trade union functions, but by stimulating its entire membership through the fraction system to build the revolutionary unions, to support them in their activities and to give them correct political guidance. The only way the revolutionary unions can grow into powerful mass organs is by the most complete support of the Party. In successfully building the revolutionary unions the Party lays the best basis for its own recruitment and mass leadership.

One of the revolutionary unions chartered by the T. U. U. L. was the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 1181–1182, 2103–2104; Gov. Ex. 221, p. 8, R. 2080). It was established pursuant to orders from the Communist Party (R. 2531), for the purpose of "disseminating [its] propaganda, carrying on agitational work, organizing for the revolutionary end" (R. 2564).[38] The officials of [38] Its constitution stated:

"Victory in this struggle [the revolutionary struggle of the whole working class against the capitalist system] can be won only by the most relentless, militant, and revolutionary struggle for the whole working class. * * * It [the M. W. I. U.] rejects and condemns the treacherous class-collaboration policy of the A. F. of L. which seeks to delude the workers into believing that it is possible for them to live 'in peace' with the capitalists" (R. 604).

See also the preamble in its membership book (Gov. Ex. 276; R. 3245–3252). Petitioner himself testified in the first the M. W. I. U. were leading members of the Communist Party (R. 2104), and its affiliation with the T. U. U. L. was openly stated in its literature (R. 2233).

Petitioner relied at the hearing upon an advisory ruling of January 3, 1934, made by the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization and approved by the Assistant to the Secretary of Labor (Alien's Ex. 15, R. 3695–3696), to the effect that membership in the T. U. U. L. or the M. W. I. U. should not be used as the sole ground for the deportation of an alien. This ruling was based upon an opinion (R. 3689–3695) of the then Solicitor of the Department of Labor and also upon "assurance that the Trade Union Unity League has severed any affiliation it may have had with the International Labor Union" (R. 3695). Petitioner also relied upon a letter (Alien's Ex. 25) of December 19, 1934, from the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization to the Chief of Police of Phoenix, Arizona, stating (R. 5248–5249):

> With reference to the Trade Union Unity League and its former connection with the Red International labor unions, we have sworn statements in our files as to the proceeding before Dean Landis that he was aware that the goal stated by the M. W. I. U. was the establishment of a "Revolutionary Workers Government," although he contended that he construed the union's aim as the securing of such a government "by democratic means" (R. 208–209, fn. 14; R. 3252).

motion adopted at a meeting of that organization in New York City on July 1, 1933 "to discontinue and sever the then existing affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions, an international organization of trade unions, of the said Trade Union Unity League and of all its constituent parts and associated organizations." It appears that testimony to the same effect was given by Nathaniel Honig, then editor of "Labor Unity," in the case of Chatham Shoe Company v. Shoe Workers Industrial Union at the trial had before Mr. Justice Edward J. McGoldrick in Special Term, Part V, Supreme Court [of New York] on October 6, 1933.[39]

Petitioner apparently relies on these exhibits[40] as evidence in his favor with respect to the character of the T. U. U. L. and the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and as the foundation of his contention that deportation on the basis of his affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union would be an illegal discrimination (Pet. Br. 18–19, 57, 72–73; see pp. 106–110, infra).

[39] The Presiding Inspector stated (R. 207): "A request was addressed to L. B. Schofield, head of the Immigration and Naturalization Service that he examine the files of his bureau for the documents or reports referred to in the letter. (Al. Ex. 25.) He reported that a search revealed no records relating to this matter." Tr. 4800–4808 [R. 5245–5254]."

[40] While admitting these exhibits for identification only (R. 3688, 5248), Judge Sears stated that he treated them "in the same manner as if they were actually in evidence" (R. 207).

But the alleged dissociation of the T. U. U. L. from the R. I. L. U., on which the advisory ruling was based and to which the letter of December 19, 1934, referred, was shown by evidence in the present case not to have occurred. Honig here testified that his testimony in the Chatham Shoe case was not that a dissociation had occurred, but merely that in 1933 the T. U. U. L. had ceased to acknowledge openly its affiliation with the R. I. L. U. (R. 2221–2222, 2233–2234).[41] As Judge Sears found (R. 206–207), Honig's testimony in the present proceeding is corroborated by the pamphlet "The Trade Union Unity League Today" (Gov Ex. 221), written by him and published by the T. U. U. L. in 1934 (R. 2079–2080). While making no mention of affiliation with the R. I. L. U., it enunciates substantially the same program as the earlier pamphlet, "The Trade Union Unity League, Its Program, Structure, Methods, and History" (Gov. Ex. 220, R. 2074), which had openly announced the affiliation of the T. U. U. L. with the R. I. L. U. The later pamphlet states, for example (R. 2081):

> The Trade Union Unity League * * * is based on the policy of class against class, and T. U. U. L. unions have come out in support of the revolutionary politi> cal class struggles led by the Communist Party, because this Party believes in the class struggle. * * * In Germany and Austria the futility of trying to overthrow the system of exploitation of the workers merely through parliamentary means has been shown.

Judge Sears and the Attorney General found that petitioner's affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union commenced prior to the alleged dissociation of the T. U. U. L. from the Red International in July 1933 (R. 238–249), 85–90); and if this finding is sustained (for discussion see infra, pp. 77–87), it is immaterial whether such dissociation occurred or not. In any event, however, in view of the uncontradicted evidence as to the affiliation of the M. W. I. U. with the T. U. U. L. and, through it, with the Communist Party, as to the domination and control exercised by the latter, and as to the continuity in the program advocated, we submit that Findings 7 and 8 must be deemed conclusive that the Marine Workers Industrial Union at all times between its organization in 1930 and its dissolution in 1935 was an organization falling within the description of the deportation statute.

4. The findings of petitioner's affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (Findings 10–11, R. 104).—The Attorney General found that after entering the United States petitioner had been affiliated with the Communist Party and with the Marine Workers Industrial Union. Although these findings are separately supppрted by independent evidence, affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union was tantamount to affiliation with the Communist Party, because of the latter's domination, control, and use of the union (see supra, pp. 34, 65–74).

The statute has not provided a comprehensive definition of affiliation. Section 1 (Appendix A, infra, pp. 126–127) specifies that:

> For the purpose of this section: * * * (2) the giving, loaning, or promising of money or anything of value to any organization, association, society, or group of the character above described shall constitute affiliation therewith; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken as an exclusive definition of * * * affiliation.

The legislative history is not helpful,[42] and we must assume that Congress used the word in its ordinary sense.[43] In United States v. Reimer, 79 F. 2d 315, 317 (C. C. A. 2), it was held that to prove "affiliation" within the meaning of the statute, other than by the giving of money, it must be shown that the alien "has brought about a status of mutual recognition that he may be relied on to co-operate with the Communist Party on a fairly permanent basis." Of course, "affiliation" as such means something less than membership. Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, 30. In Wolck v. Weedin, 58 F. 2d 928, 930 (C. C. A. 9), it was observed that "the Standard Dictionary defines the term 'affiliate with' as 'to receive on friendly terms; to associate with; to be intimate with; to sympathize with; to consort with'; and Webster's New International Dictionary defines the term as 'to connect or associate one's self with' "; and it was held that the alien's "sympathy with the aims of the Communist Party and his desire to join that party when allowed to do so; his admission that he had been 'connected' therewith for about a year; his attendance at party meetings; his selling the party organ; his giving money to the Communist Party whenever he could afford it, even though it was only in small amounts—all of these things are, within the meaning of the statute above and particularly subsection (2) quoted, sufficient to establish Wolck's 'affiliation' with the Communist Party." See also United States ex rel. Fernandas v. Commissioner of Immigration, 65 F. 2d 593 (C. C. A. 2) ("regularly engaged with well-known Communists in their activities").

The views of Judge Sears as to affiliation seem to us correct: "Affiliation may doubtless be shown circumstantially. Assisting in the enterprises of an organization, securing members for it, taking part in meetings organized and directed by or on behalf of the organization, would all tend to show affiliation" (R. 153). Measured by this standard, we submit that affiliation has been amply proved in relation both to the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

1. The "Waterfront Worker."—Judge Sears found that the "Waterfront Worker," a mimeographed newspaper which circulated on the San Francisco waterfront between 1932 and 1936, was an instrument of the M. W. I. U. and the Communist Party; that petitioner was associated with it as one of its editors from December 1932 until its abandonment; and that this association "demonstrates his affiliation with both the M. W. I. U. and the Communist Party, if not actual membership in either, or both, of those organizations" (R. 249). The Board of Immigration Appeals found that petitioner's association with the "Waterfront Worker" did not commence until September 1933, and that during the period of his association it was not an organ of the M. W. I. U. or the Communist Party (R. 420). The Attorney General upheld Judge Sears' findings (R. 85–90), and we submit that those findings are adequately supported by the evidence.

The issues of the "Waterfront Worker" in evidence, and the policies therein expressed, disclose, we believe, its domination by the M. W. I. U. and the Communist Party. Four of the five issues of the paper published prior to September 15, 1933, expressly acknowledge the assistance and cooperation of the M. W. I. U. (Gov. Exs. 204, R. 1592–1603, 1592; 205, R. 1621–1640, 1638; 247, R. 2576–2593, 2576; 280, R. 6142–6159, 6142). The September 15, 1933, issue and succeeding issues, however, did not make this acknowledgment (Gov. Exs. 248, R. 2595–2618; 249, R. 2618–2640; 250, R. 2641, 2655; 251, R. 2665, 2682; 281, R. 6180, 6194; 283, R. 6250, 6251, 6269; 285, R. 6279, 6302; 286, R. 6326, 6339). The June 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 204) announced that the paper would send a delegate to the M. W. I. U. convention in New York (R. 1597); the first July 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 205) stated that the next issue would contain a report of the M. W. I. U. convention (R. 1638) and announced a meeting "called by the Waterfront Worker in co-operation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union" (R. 1637); and the second July 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 247) contained the promised report of the M. W. I. U. convention (R. 2590). The August 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 280) published the M. W. I. U.'s proposed codes for longshoremen and seamen (R. 6142–6159). The September 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 281), which petitioner admits was published under his editorship (R. 6179), described the M. W. I. U. as "the only organization leading the struggles for better conditions" (R. 6184) and praised its activities in promoting strikes in Baltimore and on the S. S. Cornore (R. 6182–6184).

The first address of the paper, 830 Market Street, was the headquarters of the Needle Trade

Workers Industrial Union, a T. U. U. L. affiliate (R. 1559–1561, 6222). The second address, 3740 19th Street, used from July 1933 to February 1934 (Gov. Ex. 247, R. 2582, 6224), was a building occupied by Walter Lambert, an admitted Communist, as assembly rooms of the Workers Ex-Service Men's League, of which he was Manager (Gov. Ex. 219, R. 2049). Petitioner knew at the time that Lambert was an official of the Communist Party (R. 6225).[44] The third address, P. O. Box 1158, was rented for the paper by Harry Glickshon, generally known as Harry Jackson, an admitted Communist and M. W. I. U. organizer closely associated with petitioner (Gov. Exs. 211, 212, R. 1911–1914; R. 6091–6092, 6204, 6231–6240).

The October 1933 issue of the paper (Gov. Ex. 283) advised its readers to vote for the candidates of the Communist Party in the municipal elections of San Francisco (R. 6256, 6270–6274). The paper continuously advised the reading of Communist literature. The March 22, 1934, issue (Gov. Ex. 285) urged reading of the Western Worker (R. 6282), which petitioner knew was a Communist paper (R. 6270), and the November [44] Although not representing any union, Lambert was with petitioner at meetings of the San Francisco Central Labor Council, and at the hearing before Dean Landis petitioner testified that Lambert had more to do with trade union affairs than anyone else he knew and that he had had more contacts with Lambert than with anyone else (R. 6469–6470).

19, 1934, issue (Gov. Ex. 286) urged reading of both the Western Worker and the Daily Worker (R. 6336). The December 31, 1934, issue (Gov. Ex. 250) contained an advertisement urging workers to register for a course in "Fundamentals of Communism" at the San Francisco Workers School (R. 2652). The same issue sponsored, in celebration of the third anniversary of the "Waterfront Worker," a meeting at which the speaker was William F. Dunne, whom it described as "one of the foremost trade-union authorities in America" (R. 2643). Dunne was a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party (R. 1500); and in his pamphlet "The Great San Francisco General Strike"[43] (Gov. Ex. 191, R. 1501), published in 1934 by the Workers Library Publishers, he gave credit to the M. W. I. U. and petitioner for the calling of the strike and further stated (Gov. Ex. 191, p. 64): "Already in July 1932, under the leadership and guidance of the Party, there began the formation of the nucleus of the great struggle in the San Francisco port. Out of these first beginnings, which took the form of the publication of a longshore bulletin, there grew in the middle of 1933 a local of the I. L. A. in which the militant elements played a decisive role." The reference, of course, was to Bridges' union, the International Longshoremen's Association (cf. Pet. Br. 6).

[43] The January 28, 1935, issue of the "Waterfront Worker" recommended the reading of this pamphlet by "every worker," and stated that it "can be bought at 37 Grove Street [the Communist Party headquarters in San Francisco], or from the Western Worker salesmen on the Front every day" (R. 6320).

At the 1939 hearing before Dean Landis, petitioner testified that there was "no start toward real organization [among longshoremen] until September 1932, when we started our waterfront paper" (R. 3231–3232); that "we had no set plan. All we used to say in the paper was 'to organize' " (R. 3232); that the paper had been running "maybe a month or two" when his group took it over (R. 3243); and that "we took it over around September or October 1932, or it was running then and we took it over later, I can't set the exact time" (R. 3242). He testified further at the 1939 hearing that the paper had previously been published by the M. W. I. U. (R. 3234); and that "we changed the name of who it was put out by" (R. 3235) to a "group of longshoremen," it not being advisable, for fear of employer discrimination, to make public the names of individual editors (R. 3236–3237).

At the instant hearing, petitioner testified on direct examination that the paper was started by the M. W. I. U. in January 1933 and was put out in the name of "a group of longshoremen with the cooperation of the M. W. I. U."; that his group did not take it over until September 1933, at which time they "changed the name of the people putting out the paper to a group of I. L. A. longshoremen"; and that the paper was out of business for "three or four months" before his group revived it (R. 5761–5764). On cross-examination he testified that the "Waterfront Worker" was not started until June 1933 (R. 6133); that it was then put out by a group of "seamen-longshoremen" affiliated with the M. W. I. U. (R. 6134); that it went out of business around July 1933 [46] (R. 6133–6134); that it was out of business for around two months (R. 6136, 6138); and that his group did not "first conceive" the idea of taking it over until October 1933 (R. 6160–6161). When shown the September 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 281) he admitted, however, that it was put out by his group (R. 6179).

Under the rule of Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, petitioner's affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union could not have constituted an adequate basis for deportation in the earlier proceeding before Dean Landis, since that union went out of existence in 1935. As Judge Sears points out (R. 243), his findings as to the time at which petitioner's group took over the "Waterfront Worker" are in accord with petitioner's 1939 testimony, given at a time when there was less reason to disclaim association with the paper in its early stages. The discrepancies between petitioner's 1939 and 1941 versions, and the internal inconsistencies of the 1941 version, are far too great to justify saying, as did the Board of Immigration Appeals (R. 388), that an adequate explanation may be "predicated upon a slip of the tongue or the memory as to one item only—the year in which the change occurred." That petitioner told the truth in 1939 is strongly corroborated by the following circumstances:

[46] Two issues for July 1933 and one for August 1933 are in evidence (Gov. Ex. 205, R. 1621; Gov. Ex. 247, R. 2576; Gov. Ex. 280, R. 6142).

(1) At the second hearing he testified that the first address used by his group in the publication of the paper was 830 Market Street in San Francisco (R. 6195–6196, 6222). This address appears on all the issues in evidence prior to the second July 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 203, R. 1568; Gov. Ex. 204, R. 1598; Gov. Ex. 205, R. 1627), but beginning with the second July 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 247), the address that appears is 3740 19th Street (R. 2582), which petitioner testified was the second address used by his group (R. 6224). His testimony as to the addresses used thus is consistent only with the fact of his having been connected with the paper prior to September 1933.

(2) As Judge Sears found (R. 244), the earlier issues of the paper are in complete harmony with petitioner's testimony at the 1939 hearing concerning the emphasis therein upon organization. They also reflect the progress of organization. The issue for February 1933 (Gov. Ex. 203) states (R. 1568): "This paper is issued by a group of longshoremen for longshoremen." The issue for June 1933 (Gov. Ex. 204) states on the masthead (R. 1592): "This paper is issued by a group of organized longshoremen. We acknowledge the help given us by the M. W. I. U." [Italics supplied.] June 1933 is the month in which Local 38–79 of the International Longshoremen's Association was organized, and in which petitioner joined that union (R. 6339–6340). The first July 1933 issue (Gov. Ex. 205) states (R. 1622): "Like the rest of the stevedores we have signed up in the I. L. A."[47] The second July and August issues for 1933 (Gov. Exs. 247, 280) are full of discussion of the I. L. A.'s activities (R. 2584–2587, 2591–2592, 6142–6144, 6154–6156). This is inconsistent with petitioner's testimony at the 1941 hearing that the paper was published prior to September 1933 by a group of "seamen-longshoremen" and not until that month by a group of I. L. A. longshoremen (R. 6133–6134).

(3) As Judge Sears points out (R. 243–244), the numbering of the issues of the paper continues in the same consecutive series, with no break at the September 1933 issue; the subsequent issues reflect no substantial change in policy but, on the contrary, demonstrate "a striking continuity of program and policy, including an extremely cooperative attitude with regard to the M. W. I. U." There is no such gap in publication just prior to September 1933 as petitioner testified, at both hearings, had occurred prior to the taking over of the paper by his group.

The shortest period of time that petitioner placed upon the gap in publication prior to his group taking over was "around two months" (R. 6136, 6138) and the longest was "three or four months" (R. 5763). The Board of Immigration Appeals nevertheless found, from the fact that no issue of the paper is shown to have been published between the August 15 and September 15 issues, that there was a gap just prior to September 1933; and from this it found corroboration of petitioner's testimony that his group commenced publishing the paper at that time (R. 388–392). It bases this conclusion upon the premise that in July 1933 the paper was changed from a monthly to a semi-monthly basis. The only evidence in support of such a premise is that two issues were put out in July, and that the second July issue (Gov. Ex. 247) stated: "We will try to bring the waterfront worker out every two weeks" (R. 2582). Certainly this does not place the paper so definitely on a semi-monthly basis [45] that failure to publish a September 1 issue can be regarded as a gap in publication or as a going-out of business such as petitioner testified had occurred (R. 6133–6134, 6136, 6138). The August 15 and September 15 issues are numbered consecutively, and the September 15 issue (Gov. Ex. 281, R. 6181-6194) contains not the slightest indication that it is a resumption of a previously abandoned publication, and not the slightest reference to or explanation of the absence of a September 1 issue. Even if we assume arguendo that the paper had been placed on a semi-monthly basis in July, the gap in publication would be but two weeks, rather than four weeks as found by the Board (R. 391), since no such gap could have begun until the date for publication of the September 1 issue had arrived. Such a gap of two weeks is hardly consistent with petitioner's testimony that the enterprise had been abandoned for from two to four months (R. 5763, 6136, 6138).

The Board further emphasized that in order to accept Judge Sears' finding it would be necessary "to assume that there was a separately numbered series of 'Waterfront Workers' published prior to December of 1932, although no issue in such a series was in evidence and no one testified that it ever existed" (R. 387). But petitioner himself testified at the 1939 hearing to the publication prior to December 1932 of the "Waterfront Worker" (R. 3231–3237); and at the 1941 hearing he testified to methods of publication by the former group that are entirely consistent with the paper's prior publication in unnumbered issues at irregular intervals.[49] The lack of specific evidence of a prior separately numbered series thus is clearly not sufficient to justify rejection of Judge Sears' finding, approved by the Attorney General, as to the time at which petitioner became associated with the "Waterfront Worker."

We submit that the evidence fully sustains the findings of Judge Sears which were accepted by the Attorney General as to both the significance and the time of petitioner's association with the "Waterfront Worker."

2. Further evidence of petitioner's affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union.—There are additional items of evidence which, while perhaps not separately establishing affiliation with the Communist Party, nevertheless form a pattern "more consistent with the conclusion that the alien followed this course of conduct as an affiliate of the Communist Party, rather than as a matter of chance coincidence" (R. 100, 327).

At the time of the 1934 strike in San Francisco petitioner was already well acquainted with Harry Jackson, organizer for the M. W. I. U. (R. 3266–

[49] Petitioner testified that the former group consisted of men who "for a certain period of time, would be performing longshore work and, really speaking, longshoremen. But next week, or the next couple of weeks, they would be at sea again. They were not permanent resident longshoremen of the port" (R. 5761).

3268, 6091–6092, 6095–6097, 6203–6204),[50] and with Sam Darcy, secretary of the California District of the Communist Party (R. 6091–6092); and he worked closely with them. He was active in inducing seamen to join the M. W. I. U. and personally conducted groups of seamen to its headquarters for that purpose, although he was aware at the time that its goal was establishment of a revolutionary workers government (R. 3252, 6097–6098).[51] Against the opposition of various seamen's unions he unsuccessfully sought to secure the seating of M. W. I. U. delegates on the Joint Strike Committee in 1934 (R. 6347–6349).

Petitioner unsuccessfully opposed the adoption by the San Francisco Central Labor Council, on June 22, 1934, of a resolution repudiating "all Communist Organizations, especially the so-called Marine Workers Industrial Union" and denouncing the efforts of Communists "to inject themselves into an industrial conflict for the sole purpose of making converts to Communism" (R. 250, 6556–6560); and he notified Darcy before its adoption that it was contemplated (R. 6351–6352). He conferred with Darcy "quite a few" times during the 1934 strike (R. 6353–6354, 6358), and testified that "when we met with him we met with him as a representative of the Communist Party" (R. 6359). He continued to meet with him after the adoption of the resolution repudiating Communist organizations (R. 6360). By his own testimony he was in constant association with well-known Communists (R. 3266–3268, 6091–6092, 6095–6097, 6203–6204, 6353–6354, 6358–6360, 6377–6378, 6450, 6456–6482). Schneiderman, who succeeded Darcy as secretary of the California District of the Communist Party, conferred with him "ten or a dozen" times (R. 6457). It was either Lambert or Schneiderman who, at petitioner's request, introduced him to Earl Browder (R. 6456).

[50] As noted supra, p. 79, it was Jackson who, under the name of Harry Glickshon, secured for the "Waterfront Worker" its third mailing address under the supervision of petitioner's group (R. 6231–6240).

[51] As noted supra, fn. 38, pp. 70–71, he asserted that he construed the union's aim as the securing of such a government "by democratic means" (R. 3252).

On December 16, 1936, petitioner admittedly addressed a meeting in Madison Square Garden in New York (R. 6443). The arrangements for the lease of the Garden for this occasion were made by David Leeds, the treasurer of the Communist Party for the New York District, who paid in advance the $3500 rental (R. 3488–3493).[32] In September 1937 petitioner admittedly addressed a meeting at 1210½ West Washington Boulevard.

[32] As noted above, fn. 34, p. 63, the Presiding Inspector refused to make findings as to the circumstances under which this meeting took place, due to mistrust of both the McCuistion-Innes testimony and the Bridges-Curran testimony as to petitioner's knowledge of the Communist character of the meeting (R. 286). However, this refusal was not designed to cast any reflection on the undisputed testimony that the meeting took place, that petitioner addressed it, and that the Communist Party paid the rental of the Garden.

in Los Angeles. Government witness Chase, who was at the time a member and organizer of the Upholsterers International Union and also a member of the Communist Party, was instructed by Lou Barron, organizer of the Trade Union Section of the Communist Party in Los Angeles (R. 1127–1128), to attend the meeting. Chase testified that there were twenty-five or thirty people present at the meeting, ten or fifteen of whom he knew to be Communists (R. 1129). Petitioner's own witness, Horn, who was also present at the meeting, described petitioner's speech as tinged with Communism (R. 3651–3652).[53]

Government witness Rushmore testified that at an interview with petitioner, petitioner praised the Youth Congress of the Young Communist League, which was dominated and controlled by the Communist Party (R. 1429–1434). Dawn Lovelace, supported by the signed statement of her deceased husband, both of whom were Communists but were not members of a trade union, testified that in August 1935 petitioner at their apartment, in their presence and the presence of two other Communist Party members, discussed the contents of a telegram which he proposed to send to an officer of his local union (R. 1949–1951, 1955–1967, 1990–1993, 2002–2003). Petitioner, while admitting that he had been at the apartment, denied discussing the contents of the telegram (R. 5849). He testified that he would not discriminate against union men because of Communist membership (R. 6534–6537), and that he was strongly opposed to "the slander and the publicity that was going on in Los Angeles at that time * * * to the effect that the CIO was a Communist organization" (R. 6028).

[53] The testimony of Chase and Horn, as well as that of Rushmore and the Lovelaces, is touched upon briefly, supra, pp. 63–65, in connection with the finding as to petitioner's membership in the Communist Party.

No great weight is to be, or has been, attached to the testimony of seven additional witnesses, all of whom were members of the Communist Party, that petitioner had attended Communist meetings (R. 1545–1559, 1707–1711, 1789–1800, 2158–2167, 2333–2340, 2410–2417, 2520–2525; see supra, p. 63). Petitioner denied attending the meetings described by these witnesses (R. 5840–5841, 5843, 5845, 5853, 5868–5869, 5878, 6015, 6316, 6430). Judge Sears concluded that their evidence, for various reasons, did not establish petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party (R. 292–317). The Attorney General stated that such evidence "taken as a whole * * * cannot, because of its volume, be completely disregarded" (R. 98).

Petitioner strongly protests (Br. 13–14, 74–75) the "weight" which he asserts the Attorney General thus gave to witnesses whose testimony had been rejected by Judge Sears as "untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable" (see R. 90). However, it is to be noted that in no instance did Judge

Sears find that the testimony to which the Attorney General referred was false. With respect to each of these witnesses except Cannalonga he found merely that the facts to which the witness testified were not established to his satisfaction by the greater weight of the evidence (R. 295–296, 300, 302, 311, 315, 317). With respect to Cannalonga he concluded that his testimony "is without value" (R. 307–308), but he did not find that even Cannalonga falsified in giving the testimony to which the Attorney General referred.[54] The Attorney General as an original trier of fact on the whole record (United States ex rel. Hom Yuen Jum v. Dunton, 291 Fed. 905, 906 (S. D. N. Y.)) was not required by the Presiding Inspector's findings to treat the testimony of these witnesses as devoid of any significance whatever to the Government's case. He could, we submit, have properly given it more significance than he did. As it was, he merely alluded to a fact that seems obvious, namely, that the testimony of these witnesses is so consistent with the pattern of petitioner's activities as shown by other evidence that it cannot all be deemed false by virtue of the fact alone that these witnesses may for one reason or another have been not entirely reliable. He based no finding upon such testimony, but gave it, at the most, a significance merely corroborative of his conclusions based upon other evidence. This, we submit, he was fully entitled to do.

[54] The charges earlier made by petitioner as to misconduct of the Government's attorneys in respect of Cannalonga's testimony are totally without merit, and seem to have been abandoned. See fn. 55, p. 93, infra.

PETITIONER WAS NOT DENIED DUE PROCESS OF LAW BY REASON OF ALLEGED PROCEDURAL ABUSES

It is unquestionable that procedural abuses, like lack of evidentiary support, may justify the courts in habeas corpus proceedings in setting aside a deportation order as lacking in due process of law. United States ex rel. Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, 106; Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, 133–134; cf. Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 11–12. Petitioner enumerates at pp. 65–66 of his brief six asserted abuses[55] either arising out of the institution of the deportation proceeding or occurring in the course of it. Two of these—the action of the Presiding Inspector and the Attorney General in accepting as substantive evidence O'Neil's prior contradictory statements, and the action of the Attorney General in giving "weight" to the testimony of seven allegedly discredited witnesses—have been fully dealt with under Point I of this brief (supra, pp. 49–63, 91–93), and will not be further considered here.

[55] Eight such asserted abuses were enumerated in the petition for certiorari (pp. 26–40), but petitioner now appears to have abandoned his contentions in respect of alleged illegal discrimination against him in the amendment of the statute and in respect of alleged misconduct of the Government's attorneys at the hearing. We refer to our memorandum in response to the petition (pp. 29, 31–32) for a statement of our views on these points. Petitioner's passing references (Br. 10–11, 66, 71, 79) to the amendment of the statute as being specifically directed against him rest on the unwarranted assumption that the views of a few individual Congressmen in favor of pending legislation represent the considered legislative purpose.

Of the remaining four supposed abuses, it is not clear that petitioner claims that any of them is of such a character as should by applicable standards be held to vitiate the deportation order. The question which petitioner seeks to raise is not what "may be said in a constitutional sense of each of these elements, singly", but rather "in sum, whether the Attorney General has accredited himself 'by acting in accordance with the cherished judicial tradition embodying the basic concepts of fair play'" (Pet. Br. 65–66). We believe, and shall argue below, that in none of the respects claimed was petitioner deprived of any right secured to him by the Constitution. If we are correct in this it follows, we submit, that the actions complained of cannot by a mere process of argumentative cumulation be erected into the statute of an unconstitutional invasion of petitioner's liberty.

A. As to double jeopardy and res adjudicata.—As set forth in the Statement, supra, pp. 3–5, the present deportation proceeding followed an earlier proceeding, instituted under the statute prior to its amendment in 1940. In that earlier proceeding, conducted before Dean James M. Landis as Trial Examiner, the issue, because of this Court's decision in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, had been limited to whether petitioner at the time of the issuance of the warrant [56] was a member of or affiliated with an organization within the meaning of the deportation statute—specifically, as disclosed at the hearing, the Communist Party of the United States. The conclusion of the Trial Examiner was that the evidence "establishes neither that Harry R. Bridges is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States" (R. 636). The institution of the present proceeding, under the amended statute, charging past as well as present membership in not only the Communist Party but also other organizations within the statute, is attacked as offensive both to the double jeopardy clause of the Fifth Amendment and to "the principles of res adjudicata" (Pet. Br. 66–70).[57]

It is clear, we submit, that the doctrine of double jeopardy does not furnish ground for judicial intervention in deportation proceedings. In Helvering v. Mitchell, 303 U. S. 391, this Court, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Brandeis, distinguished between remedial and penal sanctions, holding the defense of double jeopardy applicable only to the latter. In describing the [56] See fn. 5, pp. 4–5, supra.

[57] It is not clear that petitioner rests upon the doctrine of res adjudicata as such: "The precise question here is not whether Dean Landis' findings and rulings were either correct or res adjudicata." Pet. Br. 68.

type of remedial sanction to which the opinion referred, the Court said (303 U. S. at 399):

> Remedial sanctions may be of varying types. One which is characteristically free of the punitive criminal element is revocation of a privilege voluntarily granted.

And by way of footnote illustration the Court added: "Typical of this class of sanctions is the deportation of aliens."

It may be observed that in Helvering v. Mitchell, supra, the Court was dealing with the imposition of both penal and remedial sanctions for the same act[58] rather than with what petitioner describes as "successive proceedings with respect to * * * identical matters" (Pet. Br. 68). But the inapplicability of the doctrine of double jeopardy to deportation proceedings does not spring from the rationale followed by Mr. Justice Frankfurter in his concurring opinion in United States ex rel. Marcus v. Hess, 317 U. S. 537, 553–556, but rather from the intrinsic nature of deportation. In Sire v. Berkshire, 185 Fed. 967, 970–971 (W. D. Tex.), a deportation order was upheld against a claim of double jeopardy based upon a prior discharge after a hearing upon the same issues. The roots of the principle lie in the inherent power of a sovereign state [58] Cf. United States ex rel. Zapp v. District Director of Immigration, etc., 120 F. 2d 762 (C. C. A. 2), holding that deportation may lie notwithstanding the pendency of an indictment based upon essentially the same facts.

(Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 556) to refuse "to harbor persons whom it does not want" (Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591). As was said by the Court in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, at 709:

> * * * "Deportation" is the removal of an alien out of the country, simply because his presence is deemed inconsistent with the public welfare, and without any punishment being imposed or contemplated, either under the laws of the country out of which he is sent, or under those of the country to which he is taken.

And further, at 730:

> * * * The order of deportation is not a punishment for crime. It is not a banishment, in the sense in which that word is often applied to the expulsion of a citizen from his country by way of punishment. It is but a method of enforcing the return to his own country of an alien who has not complied with the conditions upon the performance of which the government of the nation, acting within its constitutional authority and through the proper departments, has determined that his continuing to reside here shall depend. He has not, therefore, been deprived of life, liberty or property; without due process of law; and the provisions of the Constitution, securing the right of trial by jury, and prohibiting unreasonable searches and seizures, and cruel and unusual punishments, have no application.

This sovereign power of the Government through its legislative and executive arms to rid itself of those deemed inimical to the national welfare is not, we submit, to be restrained merely by the fact that at some previous time the same course may have been considered and, for whatever reason, abandoned.

Similar considerations, we believe, control the application of the doctrine of res adjudicata. It is well settled that res adjudicata is inapplicable to alien exclusion and deportation determinations by executive agencies. Pearson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281 (where "the proceedings upon both inquiries * * * appear to have been before the same persons, upon the same question" (p. 282)); Flynn ex rel. Ham Loy Wong v. Ward, 95 F. 2d 742 (C. C. A. 1); Mock Kee Song v. Cahill, 94 F. 2d 975, 977 (C. C. A. 9); Wong Chow Gin v. Cahill, 79 F. 2d 854 (C. C. A. 9); White v. Chan Wy Sheung, 270 Fed. 764, 767 (C. C. A. 9); Ex parte Stancampiano, 161 Fed. 164, 165 (S. D. N. Y.). In a field appropriately subject to the complete control of Congress, and in which national interests are so vitally involved, we believe that it would not accord with sound public policy to hold that an alien, however undesirable he may be deemed, acquires a vested right to remain in the country by virtue of a previous determination which may have been erroneously reached or based upon an inadequate development of the Government's case. Cf. Federal Communications Commission v. Pottsville Broadcasting Co., 309 U. S. 134, 145."

Moreover, petitioner's argument under this head rests on the faulty assumption that the two proceedings dealt with "identical matters" and involved the presentation of "essentially the same evidence"[60] (Pet. Br. 68, 65). We may concede that there was some community of issues between the two proceedings, in that establishment of petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party as of the date of the warrant of arrest (or as of March 2, 1938, the date of the warrant of arrest in the first proceeding) would have called for an order of deportation in each instance. We may also concede that although past membership or affiliation was not in issue in the first proceeding the Government's case con-

[59] There the Court held (p. 139) that a judicial reversal of an administrative order "for reconsideration in accordance with the views expressed" does not preclude the agency from reconsidering the order from the standpoint of other relevant factors which in its judgment were not previously given adequate weight, saying (p. 145):

"* * * But an administrative determination in which is imbedded a legal question open to judicial review does not impliedly foreclose the administrative agency, after its error has been corrected, from enforcing the legislative policy committed to its charge."

[60] Although we do not understand that diversity of the evidence presented in two proceedings on the same issue bars the principle of res adjudicata, it is worth remarking that no witness offered by the Government at the second hearing had testified at the first.

sisted essentially of an effort to show past membership which, it claimed, should be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to continue down to the date of the warrant (cf. Pet. Br. 67, fn. 38, 68a). But Dean Landis scrupulously confined his ultimate finding to the existence of present, as distinguished from past, membership or affiliation; and his lengthy Findings and Conclusions (R. 495–654) contain no intimation that he necessarily adopted the Government's view of what would be sufficient to prove its case.[61]

The issues as to petitioner's past connections with the Communist Party were therefore not determined in the prior proceeding, even on a strict application of the doctrine of res adjudicata. In any event, it is clear that the issues with respect to petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union were not and could not have been presented at the first hearing. That union was dissolved in 1935, and membership in or affiliation with it could not have been an issue in a proceeding confined to petitioner's status as of March 2, 1938.[62] In this proceeding, however, such membership and affiliation formed basic issues, independent of the issues of membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party (see p. 19, supra). The Attorney General's findings adverse to the petitioner on the issue of affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union are, we submit, sufficient of themselves to sustain the order, irrespective of any supposed application of the doctrines of double jeopardy or res adjudicata to the proceeding.

[61] At the most the presumption contended for by the Government is a mere permissible inference which the trier of fact is free to accept or reject as he sees fit. 9 Wigmore, Evidence (3d ed. 1940), sec. 2530; 2 Wigmore, ibid., sec. 437.

[62] The irrelevance of the Marine Workers Industrial Union to the first proceeding is shown by Dean Landis' comment (R. 604) that it would be impossible on the record before him "to determine the communistic or noncommunistic character of the M. W. I. U.; nor is it necessary to do so."

B. As to ex post facto or retrospective application of the statute as amended.—Petitioner claims (Br. 70–71) that the present proceeding violates due process through its embodiment of the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws. He asserts that the deportation statute was amended on June 28, 1940, "with the specific purpose in mind of deporting Bridges upon grounds admittedly not then existing" (Br. 71).[63]

It is settled that the prohibition of ex post facto laws contained in Section 9 of Article I of the Constitution applies only to criminal laws,[64] and [63] As noted above, fn. 55, p. 93, we do not understand petitioner now to contend that the amendment of the statute was an unconstitutional discrimination against him, nor do we regard as warranted his assumption that the amendment was adopted "with the specific purpose" of deporting him, except in the minds of individual articulate Congressmen.

[64] Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386; Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 242. In this connection, petitioner cites (Pet. Br. 70, fn. 40) cases which involve the deprivation of fundamental rights as penalties for past criminal conduct. To that deportation statutes are not such laws.[65] This was the answer made by this Court in Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, 39. There the petitioners had been convicted in 1918 of violations of the Selective Service Act of May 18, 1917 (c. 15, 40 Stat. 76), and the Espionage Act of June 15, 1917 (c. 30, 40 Stat. 217). They were subsequently ordered deported by authority of the Act of May 10, 1920 (c. 174, 41 Stat. 593), which provided for the deportation of aliens who had been convicted under various statutes, including the Selective Service and Espionage Acts, if the Secretary of Labor, "after hearing, finds that such aliens are undesirable residents of the United States." To the argument that this increased the punishment for the previously committed criminal acts, thereby rendering the Act of 1920 an ex post facto law, this Court replied (264 U. S. at 39): urge that these cases are applicable here is inconsistent with the intrinsic nature of the power of deportation. Whether petitioner was ever guilty of criminal conduct is entirely immaterial to this case.

[65] The cases holding that deportation proceedings are not criminal in character, and do not impose punishment for crime, are numerous. United States ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, 154; Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591; Hays v. Hatges, 94 F. 2d 67, 68 (C. C. A. 8); Nicoli v. Briggs, 83 F. 2d 375, 377 (C. C. A. 10). This is true even though the basis for deportation also constitutes criminal conduct punishable as such in appropriate criminal proceedings. Skeffington v. Katzeff, 277 Fed. 129, 131 (C. C. A. 1); United States ex rel. Zapp. v. District Director of Immigration, etc., 120 F. 2d 762, 764 (C. C. A. 2).

> * * * Congress by the Act of 1920 was not increasing the punishment for the crimes of which petitioners had been convicted, by requiring their deportation if found undesirable residents. It was, in the exercise of its unquestioned right, only seeking to rid the country of persons who had shown by their career that their continued presence here would not make for the safety or welfare of society.[66]

The same result necessarily follows in the present case, where deportation does not depend upon past conviction for crime (as it did in Mahler v. Eby) or upon whether the conduct relied upon was of a criminal character.[67] Whether such conduct was criminal or not is entirely irrelevant.

[66] Petitioner contends (Br. 70, fn. 40) that the language quoted from Mahler v. Eby is dicta. But Mahler v. Eby is, we submit, a direct holding on the point. Had the Court there accepted the petitioners' contention, they would have been entitled to discharge from custody. Instead, the Court directed that they not be discharged "until the Secretary of Labor shall have reasonable time in which to correct and perfect his finding on the evidence produced at the original hearing, if he finds it adequate, or to initiate another proceeding against them" (264 U. S. at 46). It follows that the ex post facto principle was held inapplicable. See also Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591.

[67] Where deportation is based upon conviction for crime, or upon criminal conduct as such, there is at least a more plausible basis than here for characterizing it as penal. Cf. Wallis v. Tecchio, 65 F. 2d 250 (C. C. A. 5). But even in such cases it is held not to be penal. Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32; Skeffington v. Katzeff, 277 Fed. 129, 131 (C. C. A. 1); United States ex rel. Zapp v. District Director of Immigration, etc., 120 F. 2d 762, 764 (C. C. A. 2).

That being the case, there is no possible basis for the application of a principle confined in its scope to criminal proceedings or to penalties, as such, retroactively imposed for criminal conduct.

But petitioner contends that the ex post facto doctrine is only a phase of a broader principle, embodied in the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment, against retroactive legislation, and that the deportation statute as construed is violative of that broader principle. Apropos of such a contention, it has been said (United States v. Sui Joy, 240 Fed. 392, 394 (C. C. A. 9)):

> We are unable to assent to the proposition that Congress cannot authorize the deportation of an alien resident of the United States who became such at a time when there was no statutory condition as to his right to remain. It is now well settled that, while an alien who has acquired a residence in the country with the intention of remaining permanently is entitled to the same protection of life, liberty, and property as a citizen, he acquires no vested right to remain, and the government has the power to deport him if, in the judgment of Congress, the public interests so require.[68]

[68] In accord, see also Skeffington v. Katzeff, 277 Fed. 129, 131 (C. C. A. 1): "It is too well settled by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States to require any citation of authorities that an alien resident in the United States may be deported for any reason which Congress has determined will make his residence here inimical to the best interests of the government;" Prentis v. Manoogian, 16 F. 2d

The contention that an alien may not be deported except in accordance with the laws in existence at the time of his admission has been rejected as often as it has been advanced.[69] The Constitution contemplates no such limitation of sovereign power. Nor does it contemplate that Congress may not provide for deportation upon the basis of an act that was not a basis for deportation when done.[70] To hold otherwise would be to require surrender of the sovereign power of Congress to decide who are undesirable aliens. We submit that there is no basis in either reason or authority for petitioner's contention that the de-

422, 423 (C. C. A. 6): "There is no constitutional limit to the power of Congress to exclude or expel aliens;" United States ex rel. Dickman v. Williams, 183 Fed. 904, 905 (S. D. N. Y.): "Congress could provide for the exclusion of every alien in the country or of any class of aliens."

[69] Chae Chan Ping v. United States (The Chinese Exclusion Case), 130 U. S. 581, 609; Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591; Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 279–280; Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, 39; Chung Yim v. United States, 78 F. 2d 43, 45 (C. C. A. 8); Chin Shee v. White, 273 Fed. 801, 804 (C. C. A. 9); Sire v. Berkshire, 185 Fed. 967, 971 (W. D. Tex.).

[70] Though we deem the distinction immaterial, it may be noted that the 1940 amendment did not provide for deportation upon the basis of an act that was not a basis for deportation when done. Petitioner's membership in and affiliation with the Communist Party and his affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union were grounds of deportation at whatever time or times such membership or affiliation occurred. The 1940 amendment simply removed the requirement that such membership or affiliation should have continued to the time of issuance of the warrant of arrest.

portation statute is retrospective legislation offensive to due process. Such a contention is wholly inconsistent with the fundamental nature of the deportation power.

C. As to illegal discrimination against petitioner in ordering deportation on the basis of past affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union.—On January 3, 1934, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, with the approval of the Assistant to the Secretary of Labor, rendered an advisory ruling (Alien's Ex. 15, R. 3695–3696) to the effect that an alien's membership in any one of a number of listed organizations affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, one of which was the Marine Workers Industrial Union, should not be used as the sole ground of deportation. Petitioner contends (Br. 72–73) that since this ruling no other alien has been ordered deported for membership in or affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and that for him to be singled out is a violation of due process in that such action is a denial of equal protection of the laws. Assuming that due process may embrace the concept of equal protection of the laws (see Hirabayashi v. United States, 320 U. S. 81, 100; Detroit Bank v. United States, 317 U. S. 329, 337–338, and cases cited) we submit that the contention is nevertheless without merit.

The advisory ruling of January 3, 1934, was based upon an opinion (R. 3689–3695) of the then Solicitor of the Department of Labor to the effect

or weight [sic] the evidence with altered results. It is of cardinal importance that in such close cases the Secretary of Labor should recognize that he is free to decide either way; no court decision even on the very case he is considering can properly be cited to restrain his choice; if he selects deportation he should realize that [it] is because it is his administrative pleasure to perpetuate the policies of his predecessor and not because it is his duty under court decisions" (R. 3693).

But just as the then Secretary of Labor was not bound by the decisions of her predecessors, by the same token succeeding administrators of the deportation laws are not bound by her 1934 ruling; and we submit that the Solicitor's opinion on which that ruling was based makes this clear.

It is thus apparent that the 1934 ruling was merely an advisory ruling based on evidence then before the Department, and that the Presiding Inspector was correct in ruling that it "has no binding effect in this proceeding" (R. 207). It was only an exercise of fact finding and executive, as distinguished from legislative, discretion. It could not be otherwise, for the deportation statute itself determines the kinds of organizations whose alien members or affiliates it requires to be deported; and it delegates to the administrative agency (now the Attorney General) no power to define such organizations or to vary the statutory definitions, but merely the power to determine whether the evidence before the administrator at a given time brings an individual organization within one of the statutory definitions. Even the latter power is not given as a legislative power to be exercised prospectively, but as a fact-finding power to be exercised from case to case. The Solicitor's opinion on which the advisory ruling was based specifically recognized the lack of any power in the Secretary of Labor to bind her successors, and the fact that her ruling would be merely a factual determination on evidence then before her. As the district court held, the deportation of alien members or affiliates of organizations found on sufficient evidence to fall within the statutory definitions "is mandatory and not discretionary" (R. 734); and the Department of Labor was without power, by its findings as of a given time, to grant a permanent exemption to any such aliens, just as it would have been without power to order the deportation of alien members or affiliates of organizations not falling within any of the statutory definitions.

We know of no authority, and the petitioner cites none, holding that the enforcement of a statute against one falling within its terms constitutes a denial of the equal protection of the laws merely because the enforcing agency may in the past or present have failed to perform its mandatory duty of enforcing it against others in like case. Cf. Thompson v. Spear, 91 F. 2d 430, 433–434 (C. C. A. 5), certiorari denied, 302 U. S. 762.

The grave consequences of such a doctrine to the power of government to correct a prior erroneous interpretation or past laxity in enforcement are too obvious to require exposition.

D. The absence of argument before the Attorney General as a denial of due process.—Petitioner charges (Br. 75–78) that he was denied due process by the action of the Attorney General in overruling the determination of the Board of Immigration Appeals without according him "fresh opportunity for hearing" to enable him "to reach the deciding officer's mind." The regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service make no provision for oral or written argument before the Attorney General, but provide merely that the Attorney General "will state in writing his conclusions and the reasons for his decision." Rule 90.12 (8 C. F. R., 1940 Supp., 90.12). Oral argument as such is not essential to a fair hearing (Morgan v. United States, 298 U. S. 468, 481); even where oral argument is altogether denied, it has been held that it is not an "essential ingredient of procedural due process and a fair hearing," Peoria Braumeister Co. v. Yellowley, 123 F. 2d 637, 639 (C. C. A. 7). Here, both oral and written argument were fully made before the Presiding Inspector and the Board of Immigration Appeals; and the Attorney General had before him not only the written conclusions of these respective hearing officials, but also the briefs of the parties filed with them. Since petitioner's objections to the Findings and Conclusions recommended by the Presiding Inspector were elaborately developed in his brief before the Board, as well as in the Board's own opinion which accepted those objections, the Attorney General had before him at the time of his decision all material necessary to a complete understanding of petitioner's contentions.

Nevertheless, petitioner suggests (Br. 77) that "when issues are freshly brought to focus before a new deciding officer the specific grounds upon which he proposes to overturn an existing public decision (if such be his disposition) [must] be given the person to be adversely affected." We do not so understand the responsibilities of reviewing tribunals, whether administrative or judicial. So far as we are aware, it has never been held that once the issues have been clearly posed by actual or recommended findings below, a reviewing tribunal must announce in advance its proposed opinion on such issues and permit argument specifically directed to the contents thereof. It is a commonplace of judicial procedure that in such a case neither a court nor an administrative agency is confined to the arguments of counsel in selecting the grounds of its decision whether or not to accept such findings. See Garland v. Davis, 4 How. 131, 143.

Much is made (Pet. Br. 75–76) of the fact that the circumstances in which the Attorney General undertook to render final decision in the case did not fall within the categories specified in Rule 90.12 for review by him of the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals, and that he gave no notice to petitioner that he proposed personally to decide the case. There can be no question that the Attorney General under the deportation statute is the final deciding authority, and that it is within his discretion both to delegate his authority and to revoke such delegation if and when in his judgment the occasion requires. We have stated above our reasons for believing that no consideration of due process required new oral or written argument before the Attorney General as the foundation for his decision, once full argument of all the issues had been made before the tribunals below and the opposing contentions of the parties had been made plain to him by the briefs of counsel filed below and the written Findings and Conclusions of Judge Sears and the Board of Immigration Appeals. If this would have been so had the case been formally referred to him by the Board for final decision pursuant to the regulations, it is no less so in a case where he chose to recall final decisional authority to himself dehors the regulations.

Here it has not been—and in view of the Attorney General's careful opinion it could not reasonably be—claimed that the Attorney General failed to give full and fair consideration to the entire record, as well as to the opposing contentions of counsel. Due process, we believe, requires no more.

* * * * *

As we have pointed out (supra, p. 94; cf. fn. 57, p. 95), it is not clear that petitioner claims that any of the supposed procedural abuses touched on above is of such a character as should by applicable standards be held to vitiate the deportation order. Rather it would seem that petitioner seeks to invest the proceeding as a whole with some indefinable aura of unfairness resulting from a series of considerations which would not of themselves warrant judicial intervention. The basic question is, of course, whether in the last analysis, by enlightened standards, petitioner received a full and fair hearing. We submit that a reading of the record admits of no doubt on this question. Seldom, if ever, has an alien been accorded, and taken advantage of, so full an opportunity to develop every possible aspect of his opposition to the Government's charge in a deportation case. Petitioner was represented throughout by counsel who showed themselves thoroughly versed in all elements of deportation law, both substantive and procedural. The Presiding Inspector was a highly qualified judge, experienced in both the trial and appellate review of litigation,[11] and totally disconnected from the Department of Justice. His impartiality, consideration, and thoroughness stand out brilliantly in the record. Petitioner was allowed the utmost in cross-examination of the Government's witnesses, and produced 29 witnesses of his own, in addition to himself—although, be it noted, no witnesses other than himself to testify directly to his non-membership in the organizations involved.[12] By according petitioner the benefit of the doubt, Judge Sears and the Attorney General resolved issue after issue of fact in his favor, or in such a way as to work him no prejudice. In the end, the case came down to a square issue of credibility as between petitioner and those of the Government's witnesses who still stood unimpeached. Judge Sears, who saw and heard the witnesses, disbelieved petitioner; and the Attorney General sustained Judge Sears. That Judge Sears may have been wrong is of no consequence on the issue of whether [11] Judge Sears was a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York from 1927 to January 3, 1943, assigned to the Appellate Division, Fourth Department, from 1922 to 1940, and Presiding Justice from 1929 to 1940. He then became an Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals of New York, retiring on December 31, 1942.

[12] The majority of petitioner's witnesses merely testified to facts tending to impeach the character or veracity of the Government's witnesses; a smaller number testified essentially that petitioner, whether or not a Communist, was a "good" labor leader. Some testified that they did not believe he was a Communist.

petitioner received a full and fair hearing. We submit that unquestionably he did.

THE DEPORTATION STATUTE AS CONSTRUED AND APPLIED TO PETITIONER DOES NOT VIOLATE PETITIONER'S CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES OF FREE SPEECH AND ASSOCIATION

Relying on the long series of cases in this Court which have set boundaries in a variety of circumstances to federal and state action restricting the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, assembly, and religion, petitioner contends (Br. 80–104) that the deportation statute, as here construed and applied to him, denies to him rights of free speech and free association guaranteed to him by the First and Fifth Amendments. As construed and applied to petitioner the statute calls for his deportation on evidence which shows membership in and affiliation with an organization advocating overthrow of the Government by force and violence.[73] The Government did not claim [73] The amendment of the 1918 Act (c. 186, 40 Stat. 1012) by the Act of June 5, 1920 (c. 251, 41 Stat. 1008–1009) was for the specific purpose of resolving doubts previously thought to exist and making clear that mere membership in an organization falling within the description of the statute should be "of itself the overt act sufficient to warrant deportation." H. Rep. 504, 66th Cong., 2d Sess., 1919, p. 7.

The 1918 Act itself was in the nature of an amendment to Sec. 3 of the general immigration and deportation statute (Act of February 5, 1917, c. 29, 39 Stat. 874, 875–876) for that petitioner personally advocated or believed in such a doctrine (see R. 1527). Petitioner testified that he believed in collective bargaining as a device to settle labor disputes and that he favored strikes only after other methods failed (R. 5885–5888); he was opposed to state syndicalism statutes because it was his opinion that they were used against legitimate union activity, although he did not believe in the tenets of syndicalism (R. 6069, 6484–6485). Generally, in discussing Communism with avowed Communists, he argued against it (R. 6095). Nor was the case tried or decided on the theory that the "clear and present danger" test set by Schenk v. United States, 249 U. S. 47, 52, had application. If, as has never hitherto been held by this Court, the sovereign power of the United States to deport aliens from its shores is deemed to be limited by the same considerations which under the First and Fifth Amendments would preclude criminal prosecution or other forms of public restraint, then only do the decithe specific purpose of resolving doubts previously thought to exist as to whether the phrase "persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all forms of law," as used in the 1917 Act, had been intended as merely explanatory of and limited by the term "anarchists." H. Rep. 645, 65th Cong., 2d Sess., 1918, p. 1. The legislative history does not establish that the amendment was adopted with Communists particularly in mind, but it is worthy of note that the proposal of the amendment (June 8, 1918) followed not long after the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia.

sions of this Court give force to petitioner's argument that the statute as construed and applied to him violates his constitutional rights. See e. g., Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 117 U. S. 356, 369; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 547; Wong Wing v. United States, 169 U. S. 649, 695; Truax v. Raich, 239 U. S. 33, 39; Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357, esp. Brandeis and Holmes, JJ., concurring, at pp. 372 et seq.; De Jonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353; Herndon v. Lowry, 301 U. S. 242; Thomas v. Collins, No. 14, this Term; cf. Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252. Cf. also Dunne et al. v. United States, 138 F. 2d 137 (C. C. A. 8), certiorari denied, 320 U. S. 790, rehearing denied, 320 U. S. 814, 815, upholding the conviction of citizens for violation of Title I of the Alien Registration Act, 1940, (c. 439, Title I, 54 Stat. 670–671, 18 U. S. C. 9–13). However, we do not believe that this question is reached,[74] since other decisions of this Court point to the conclusion that the power of Congress to provide for deportation of resident aliens is limited only by the due process requirement of a fair hearing at which the statutory grounds for deportation are established, and is unaffected by considerations which in other contexts might justify the striking down of legislation as an unwarranted abridgment of constitutionally guaranteed rights of free speech and association.

In 1904 this Court in Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, considered the application of the Immigration Act of March 3, 1903, 32 Stat. 1213, which provided for the exclusion of alien "anarchists, or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all government or of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials." The case arose out of the exclusion of Turner, an Englishman, who admitted that he was an anarchist and an advocate of anarchistic principles. The Court rejected the contention that this statute was unconstitutional because no power "is delegated by the Constitution to the General Government over alien friends with reference to their admission into the United States or otherwise, or over the beliefs of citizens, denizens, sojourners or aliens, or over the freedom of speech or of the press" (194 U. S. at 289). In commenting upon this contention, the Court said (pp. 289–290):

> Repeated decisions of this court have determined that Congress has the power to exclude aliens from the United States; to prescribe the terms and conditions on which they may come in; to establish regulations for sending out of the country such aliens as have entered in violation of law, and to commit the enforcement of such conditions and regulations to executive officers; that the deportation of an alien who is found to be here in violation of law is not a deprivation of liberty without due process of law, and that the provisions of the Constitution securing the right of trial by jury have no application. Chae Chan Ping v. United States, 130 U. S. 581; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228; Fok Yung Yo v. United States, 185 U. S. 296; Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86; Chin Bak Kan v. United States, 186 U. S. 193; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161.

* * * * *

Whether rested on the accepted principle of international law that every sovereign nation has the power, as inherent in sovereignty and essential to self-preservation, to forbid the entrance of foreigners within its dominions, or to admit them only in such cases and upon such conditions as it may see fit to prescribe; or on the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, which includes the entrance of ships, the importation of goods, and the bringing of persons into the ports of the United States, the act before us is not open to constitutional objection.

The Court then addressed itself to the issue of civil liberties (194 U. S. at 292):

> We are at a loss to understand in what way the act is obnoxious to this objection. It has no reference to an establishment of religion nor does it prohibit the free exercise thereof; nor abridge the freedom of speech or the press; nor the right of the people to assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances. It is, of course, true that if an alien is not permitted to enter this country, or, having entered contrary to law, is expelled, he is in fact cut off from worshipping or speaking or publishing or petitioning in the country, but that is merely because of his exclusion therefrom. He does not become one of the people to whom these things are secured by our Constitution by an attempt to enter forbidden by law. To appeal to the Constitution is to concede that this is a land governed by that supreme law, and as under it the power to exclude has been determined to exist, those who are excluded cannot assert the rights in general obtaining in a land to which they do not belong as citizens or otherwise.

And, finally with respect to the argument that the act was unconstitutional because it applied to all anarchists, including those who are merely political philosophers, whose teachings are beneficial, the Court said (194 U. S. at 294):

> * * * it would follow that Congress was of opinion that the tendency of the general exploitation of such views is so dangerous to the public weal that aliens who hold and advocate them would be undesirable additions to our population, whether permanently or temporarily, whether many or few, and, in the light of previous decisions, the act, even in this aspect, would not be unconstitutional, or as applicable to any alien who is opposed to all organized government.

So far as we know, there has been no further discussion by this Court of the question whether the power to admit and to deport aliens is subject to the prohibitions of the First Amendment. But that the force of the decision in the Turner case has been unaffected by recent decisions is intimated by its citation in the majority opinion and in the concurring opinion of Mr. Justice Douglas in Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, at 131–132; 165, with reference to the right of Congress to impose such conditions as it sees fit upon the privilege of naturalization. See also United States ex rel. Volpe v. Smith, 289 U. S. 422, 425: "The power of Congress to prescribe the terms and conditions upon which aliens may enter or remain in the United States is no longer open to serious question. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279; Low Wah Suey v. Backus, 225 U. S. 460, 468; Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591." And it is significant that in United States ex rel. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, and United States ex rel. Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, deportation of aliens on charges of personal advocacy of violent overthrow of the Government was upheld by this Court without discussion of the application of the "clear and present danger" test which has been held to inhere in the application of the First Amendment.

It is true that the Court in Turner's case was not dealing with the deportation of a resident alien, but the distinction has not been found significant in other contexts. In the Bilokumsky case, supra, the alien had been in the United States for nine years prior to the institution of the deportation proceeding, and it does not appear that the proceeding was predicated in any way upon a charge of illegal entrance. "The power to exclude aliens and the power to expel them rest upon one foundation, are derived from one source, are supported by the same reasons, and are in truth but parts of one and the same power." Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 713. Furthermore, aliens who have acquired a deportable status through their actions while permitted to remain in this country may be "decidedly more objectionable." Cf. United States ex rel. Volpe v. Smith, 289 U. S. 422, 425.

The lower federal courts have not granted to resident aliens any greater right to claim the protection of the First Amendment than was denied to an unlawful entrant in Turner v. Williams, supra. See Lopez v. Howe, 259 Fed. 401 (C. C. A. 2), appeal dismissed and certiorari denied, 254 U. S. 613, 650; Ex parte Pettine, 259 Fed. 733, 735–736 (D. Mass.); United States ex rel. Fortmueller v. Commissioner of Immigration, 14 F. Supp. 484, 486–487 (S. D. N. Y.); cf. United States v. Parson, 22 F. Supp. 149, 155, fn. 2 (S. D. Calif.), reversed on other grounds, 99 F. 2d 746 (C. C. A. 9).[75] And the lower federal courts have likewise not regarded the imminence of changes in government which an alien may advocate as a factor going to the validity of the deportation statutes. See United States ex rel. Georgian v. Uhl, 271 Fed. 676, 677 (C. C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 256 U. S. 701; Kjar v. Doak, 61 F. 2d 566, 568–569 (C. C. A. 7); United States ex rel. Abern v. Wallis, 268 Fed. 413, 416 (S. D. N. Y.).

Since naturalization is, like the right of an alien to remain in the country, a privilege which Congress may extend upon such conditions as it sees fit, it is within the competence of Congress to [75] In Colyer v. Skeffington, 265 Fed. 17, 60 (D. Mass.), the court expressed the view that immigration statutes were to be construed with regard to the "First Amendment and its declaration for freedom of speech, press, and assemblage." However, that view may be deemed to have been rejected by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit by reason of its reversal of the decision of the district court, sub nom. Skeffington v. Katzeff, 277 Fed. 129.

deny naturalization to an alien on the ground of utterances, beliefs, or associations for which, by the protection of the First Amendment, he could not be punished. United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U. S. 644, 649–650; United States v. Macintosh, 283 U. S. 605, 615–619. It would seem that the sovereign power of deportation (Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 556–557) would be subject to no greater restraint.

In his petition for a writ petitioner cited the doctrine of unconstitutional conditions (Pet. 43–44); but whatever the effect of this doctrine upon the civil rights of a resident alien in his status as such (cf. Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228), it does not, we believe, extend to protect him against the orderly termination of that status for whatever reasons may seem to Congress necessary or desirable in the public interest. The "reasonable relation" doctrine to which petitioner adverts at pp. 99–104 of his brief has likewise never been given application in this area. We know of no case in which this Court has imposed or suggested limitations upon the plenary authority of Congress to determine the grounds upon which an alien may be deported.

By excluding from the impact of the deportation statute an alien's political beliefs or attachments acquired after his entrance, Congress could, in its discretion, have transmuted the substantive constitutional guarantees of the First and Fifth Amendments into legal rights conferred upon aliens lawfully resident in the country. But the choice has heretofore been deemed to be legislative, not constitutional. Congress has unquestionably chosen to regard as undesirable residents in this country aliens who associate themselves with political beliefs directed to the overthrow of this Government by force or violence.[76] We believe that it had a constitutional right so to choose.

ON CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH COURT

BRIEF OF AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION AS AMICUS CURIAE

Statement of the Case

The background of this deportation proceeding is amply set forth in petitioner's brief (pp. 5-13). We shall, therefore, merely outline the unique history of Harry Bridges as it relates to the continuous efforts of the government, both in the executive and legislative branches, to deport him for alleged membership in or affiliation with organizations purportedly disloyal.

In 1934 efforts were first commenced to deport petitioner, but upon investigation by the Immigration Service no grounds were shown to exist and the matter was thereupon dropped. Thereafter in March, 1938 a warrant was issued by the Service seeking his removal from the country. In 1939, however, after a full hearing before a special trial examiner, Dean James M. Landis, again no grounds were found to expel Bridges under the law as it existed at that time, which as interpreted by this Court in Kessler v. Stecker, 307 U. S. 22, permitted deportation only for membership in proscribed organizations at the time of arrest, and the warrant was withdrawn.

The next attempt to banish Bridges was the introduction and passage in the House of Representatives of a special bill (H.R. 9766, 76th Congress, 3rd Session) specifically directing the Attorney General to deport him. Calmer heads prevailed in the Senate, however, where it died in the Committee on Immigration.

As a substitute, however, for that special bill, Congress adopted Section 23 of the Alien Registration Act of June 28, 1940 (54 Stat. 673) which provided for the deportation of any alien who either at the time of entrance into the United States or at any time thereafter was a member of or affiliated with certain proscribed groups and organizations (8 U.S.C.A. Section 137g).

In February 1941 a warrant for Bridges' deportation was issued under color of the new statute, and a new series of hearings held before another special trial examiner, Judge Charles B. Sears. Upon this hearing, grounds were found to expel Bridges, but the recommendations were rejected by a unanimous vote of the Board of Immigration Appeals in January 1942, which in turn was overruled by the Attorney General in May 1942, who thereupon ordered his deportation.

Interest of the American Civil Liberties Union

The American Civil Liberties Union is a nationwide organization, membership in which is open to all, rich and poor, alien and citizen. In our view the protection of the Bill of Rights should be accorded all persons in the United States. Consistently we have maintained that aliens as well as citizens, whether naturalized or native born, alike are entitled to civil liberty. Thus in Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252, we filed a brief amicus curiae in this Court, recognizing that aliens no less than citizens should be afforded freedom of speech in criticizing judicial opinions. But even if we did not adopt such a position, which has received the approbation of this Court, we would nevertheless feel constrained to file a brief amicus in this case in view of its history as outlined above. For it is apparent that surrounding this proceeding is an aura of persecution for the alleged holding of unpopular beliefs by this petitioner.

In any event to concede the plenary power of Congress to deport aliens within the country for alleged political beliefs for which citizens could not constitutionally be punished is to open the door to the penalty of banishment, which could easily be extended to citizens. It is clear then that if the civil liberties of the alien minority are attacked those of the citizens majority are also in jeopardy.

POINT I

Whether or not the power of Government to exclude aliens is subject to constitutional restraint, the deportation of aliens, lawfully and permanently residing in the United States, is subject to the basic limitation imposed upon governmental action by the Bill of Rights.

The government's basic contention, and indeed the main issue in the present case, is that "the power of deportation has the same basis as the power of exclusion", that the constitutional restraints upon the powers of government embodied in the Bill of Rights and particularly in the First Amendment are "inapplicable" to the exercise of "the plenary power of Congress to exclude or to deport aliens"; and that "the admission of an alien confers upon him, prior to naturalization, but a license to remain that is terminable at the will of Congress" (Government's brief below, pp. 17, 21; italics added).

We submit that these contentions are based upon a deep misconception of the true nature of constitutional restraints and of the legal and political positions of aliens lawfully residing in this country.

Whatever the plenitude of congressional power as to the exclusion of aliens, basic sociological as well as legal considerations prevent the identification of the scope of the power to exclude with that of the power to deport. The social structure of this country has, since its foundation, been such that every alien lawfully admitted to its shores for the purpose of permanent residence has of necessity been regarded as a potential citizen. This is "a country whose life blood came from an immigrant stream" (Ex parte Kumezo Kawato, 317 U. S. 69, 73), inhabited by "a heterogeneous people" (Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. S. 118, 120), "by millions of immigrants who have learned to love the country of their adoption more than the country of their birth" (Ex parte Kumezo Kawato, supra, ibid.).

In a country in whose larger cities "a majority of the school children are offspring of parents only one generation, if that far, removed from the steerage of the immigrant ship" (Schneiderman v. United States, supra, 120), naturalization of aliens must be treated as one of the essential tasks of the community. Nor must naturalization be thought of as an instantaneous act fully accomplished at the moment of the swearing in of an alien. On the contrary, it is a long, complex and delicate process of social adjustment and political education. In this process, governmental action plays as important a role as any social factor making for the success or failure of the process of Americanization. It would be absurd to suppose that during this decisive and formative period of political education of potential citizens, they may be exposed to a governmental action completely free and unrestrained in its exercise. Aliens who have been excluded from the United States, who have never been admitted to the community, may be in some circumstances the victims of crude governmental arbitrariness. As such, they deserve our humanitarian sympathy. But—and this is essential for the distinction between exclusion and deportation—their fate will exercise no direct influence upon the social structure of the American polis itself, to whose life they had never been admitted for a single instant.

Totally different is the legal position of immigrants, lawful and permanent residents of the country. Their exposure to the potentialities of a constitutionally unrestrained governmental action could not fail to exercise a deeply detrimental effect upon an integral part of the national community and thus upon the community at large. Just as the events of prenatal life of an infant may prove decisive in the formation of its physical and psychological traits, pre-citizen years of immigrants may prove decisive for the formation of their political character. Serfdom is no education for freedom.

The facing of the breath-taking alternative between acquisition of "the priceless benefits that derive from the status (of American citizenship)", regarded by many "as the highest hope of civilized men" (Schneiderman v. United States, supra, 122), and the crushing sanction of deportation—is not the proper training for citizenship of a free country.

American law would not have kept faith with American history and with the realities of American society if it had not reflected and embodied these ideas. This Court has explicitly recognized that despite the sweeping reception of the Common Law of England, some of its rules concerning aliens were never received in this country. One of these rules concerns a very special class of aliens, namely those owing allegiance to countries actually at war with the United States. Still as early as 1813, Chancellor Kent felt that the peculiarities of the American Commonwealth made it unwise to receive the strict English rule barring such aliens from courts (Clarke v. Morey, 10 Johns. 69). Kent's doctrine has been followed in a number of state and federal decisions. Recently, in a case involving an interned enemy alien who, under the prevailing statute, could never become a citizen (Ex parte Kumezo Kawato, supra), Mr. Justice Black applied the same "sound principle of the (American) common law" (Ex parte Kumezo Kawato, supra, at p. 75). Speaking for a unanimous court, Justice Black predicated the rule upon the contributions "made in peace and war by the millions of immigrants" and placed the decision upon the broadest possible ground, touching the constitutional plane, by asserting that any harsher treatment even of enemy aliens "would be repugnant to sound policy no less than to justice and humanity" (Ex parte Kumezo Kawato, supra, at p. 74).

In the light of decisions dealing with the legal position of interned enemy aliens or with the constitutional position of belligerent enemies,[1] it is hardly surprising that a much greater range of constitutional protection, going beyond access to courts or the right to trial by jury, has been accorded to friendly aliens, lawful residents of the country, who have filed—as petitioner Bridges had done three times—their declaration of intention to become a citizen.

The structure of most communities is too complex to admit a clear-cut distinction between insiders and outsiders, citizens and aliens, without the need for some intermediate class or classes of "novitiates". Even a comparatively static society as that of England, for example, has long felt the need for the category of denizens, persons in an intermediate position between that of natives and that of aliens (1 Bla. Comm. 374). For the distinction be-

1. Belligerent enemies were granted the right to sue in American courts in Ex parte Quirin, 317 U. S. 1. Mr. Chief Justice Stone said that "Neither the Proclamation nor the fact that they are enemy aliens forecloses consideration by the courts of petitioners, contending that the constitution and laws of the United States constitutionally enacted forbid their trial by military commission" (at p. 25) and assumed that some acts recognized as offenses against the law of war would not be triable by military commissions here "because they are of that class of offenses constitutionally triable only by a jury" (at p. 29). (Italics added.)

tween denization and naturalization see Dicey, Conflict of Laws, 164. This Court has drawn an analogous conclusion from American history and from the system of common and statutory law dealing with permanent immigration, requests and grants of "first papers", military and fiscal duties of immigrants, when it spoke of the category of "novitiates" in Schneiderman v. United States, supra, 158. The constitutional and political necessity to preserve "for novitiates as well as citizens the full benefit of that freedom of thought which is a fundamental feature of our political institutions", amidst which the newcomers have hoped to achieve the status of people "privileged to think and act and speak according to their convictions" (ibidem) requires a uniform construction of the congressional intent both in the field of naturalization and in that of deportation. In neither field should we "tread so close to the domain of freedom of conscience without an explicit mandate of Congress." Mr. Justice Douglas, concurring in Schneiderman v. United States, supra at p. 165. Lest the atmosphere of the community as a whole be poisoned and the process of Americanization frustrated in its initial decisive phases, neither the new citizen nor the "novitiate", the citizen-to-be, must be placed in a situation in which "he could not open his mouth without fear" and in which "his best course would be silence or hypocrisy". Mr. Justice Rutledge, concurring in Schneiderman v. United States, supra, at p. 167. Cf. Mr. Justice Murphy in Bridgartner v. U. S., 322 U. S. 665, 679 "the naturalized citizen * * * is not required to imprison himself in an intellectual or spiritual straitjacket." "This is not citizenship" Schneiderman v. U. S., supra, 167. Nor is it preparation for it.

The enjoyment of the basic constitutional rights must therefore be afforded to natural-born and naturalized, actual and prospective citizens alike. In the light of this principle the Court will assume that Congress did not intend to authorize the deportation for mere belief unless the expression thereof is shown to create a clear and present danger of public disorder or other substantive evil. "Such a construction of the statute is to be favored because it preserves for novitiates as well as citizens the full benefit of that freedom of thought which is a fundamental feature of our political institutions". Schneiderman v. United States, supra, 158. A fortiori should deportation for mere supposed membership in or affiliation with allegedly subversive organizations be denied on constitutional grounds. Cf. Mr. Justice Jackson in Korematsu v. U. S., —— U. S. —— (Oct. Term, 1944).

POINT II

Whether or not "deportation of aliens" is always a penalty, the deportation of an alien predicated solely upon §23 of the Alien Registration Act of 1940, is clearly punitive in nature and subject to all constitutional restraints regarding imposition of punishment.

The difficulty of drawing a clear line of distinction between merely civil or administrative sanctions on the one hand and punitive sanctions on the other is equalled by the great importance that the distinction itself possesses for the purposes of constitutional jurisprudence.[2] It has long been recognized that "the words 'penal' and 'penalty' • • • are elastic in meaning" (Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657), and that no governmental sanction is in itself either a punishment or a non-criminal sanction. Even death may be lawfully inflicted by the agents of government without being a punishment. The killing of a gangster by a policeman while the gangster threatens to kill the victim of a hold-up, is a governmental sanction predicated upon the unlawfulness of the gangster's behavior, but is obviously not a punishment. It is rather the exercise of police power, an action in the nature of an administrative, remedial, measure, clearly distinguishable from the imposition of a death penalty.

2. "Civil and criminal law overlap so that it is impossible to say with absolute precision where one begins and the other ends." Morris R. Cohen, "On Absolutisms in Legal Thought" (1936) 84 U. of P. Law Review 681, 686.

Analogous examples can be given with respect to any other governmental action, which is generally used as a means of punishment. Thus, the deprivation of freedom applied to presently insane and dangerous persons, the compulsion to do work, the destruction of property, real or personal, because of its actual threat to safety or health of a community, the exaction of pecuniary contributions for the purpose of actual reparation of present harm can and must be characterized as a non-penal sanction, and distinguished from governmental actions, identical in their physical content imposed, as will be seen, for past activity or condition, such as imprisonment, forced labor, confiscation or exaction of a fine.[3]

3. It is true, however, that past performances in themselves are a source of legitimate fears of future dangers. But this type of danger is present in almost every situation in which criminal justice intervenes: incapacitation of criminals is one of the recognized secondary functions of punishment. This is why to take a sanction out of the sphere of punishment, something more than this general fear of a second offence must be present. The sanction must be predicated upon this specific danger, in the sense that its existence must be proved and the application vel non of the sanction itself must be made clearly dependent upon the existence of such danger. When, on the other hand, the sanction applies whenever the past violation is proved, no evidence of future possibility

Punitive and non-punitive sanctions are thus relational terms, implying some relationship between the given governmental action and the situation in which it operates. The analysis of this relation seems clearly to suggest a basic principle which, without offering a universal test of distinction between punitive and non-punitive sanctions, appears to be well founded in universally accepted concepts and sufficient for the solution of the present controversy. This principle[4] is that the category of punitive sanctions comprises at least those measures that are predicated exclusively upon past and completed situations or actions, without requiring any special relation of such situations or actions to some present or future state of affairs. The execution of the gangster after conviction is predicated upon his past and not upon his future potentialities. It is punishment, because the state is not required to show that it could not incapacitate him otherwise. The killing of a gangster who is threatening his victim is predicated not upon his past, but upon the fear of the future. It is an administrative, remedial, measure and is justified only to the extent that no other ready means of incapacitation was available.[5] of harm being required, the sanction is clearly addressed to the retribution for the past, rather than to the prevention of the future and must be recognized for what it is: a punishment and not an administrative measure. To hold otherwise, would transform all punishments into administrative measures because of the presence of some secondary effect of prevention of future violations by the person being punished.

4. To avoid another logical fallacy it may be noted that the offered criterion of distinction provides only a minimum description of the sphere of punitive sanctions. It leaves open the question whether under some circumstances, some sanctions, although expressly predicated upon a present state of affairs, may still be punitive in nature. All it says—and all that is needed for the present case—is that at least where no reference to a presently existing unlawful or dangerous situation is made by the law, the applicable sanction must be characterized as penal.

5. This distinction clearly underlies judicial pronouncements where penalty is to be distinguished from remedial sanctions. Everytime a court finds that a given sanction is remedial rather than penal in nature it administers it with

This general principle of characterization suffers no exception in respect to deportation. What is true in respect to sanctions consisting in physical destruction of life or property and in deprivation of freedom or values, is equally true with respect to an action consisting in the forcible expulsion of an individual from a country. Like death or detention, deportation may or may not be a penalty. Like the other distinctions between administrative and punitive sanctions, the line of demarcation between "administrative deportation" and "punitive deportation" may not be easy to draw.[6] But logical difficulties should regard not to the past but to the present, and indeed sometimes future situation. "Dissolution is not a penalty but a remedy". Judge Learned Hand stated in U. S. v. Aluminum Co., decided under §4 of Title 15 U. S. C. A., on March 12, 1945. Therefore, he held dissolution cannot be applied without taking into account "the changes that have taken place", especially "Alcoa's position in the industry after the war." If the industry "will not need it for its protection", dissolution should not be ordered. To do so only because of the past, i.e., only because Alcoa had been a monopoly at some time, would make dissolution a penalty, not a remedy.

The United States Constitution (Amendment 13) expressly recognizes this ambivalence of sanctions and the possibility that an identical measure might or might not be used as a punishment when it permits "involuntary servitude" as and only as a "punishment for crime". In this situation non-punitive compulsion is forbidden, and the Government contrary to the case at bar, would have to show that the sanction is not applied for remedial purposes. "If the statute in this case had authorized the employing company to seize the debtor and hold him to the service until he paid the fifteen dollars, or had furnished the equivalent in labor, its invalidity would not be questioned". Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 244. The test of distinction is still the same; the pursuit of a result to be obtained in a presently existing setting takes the sanction out of the sphere of punishments.

6. This is not the first time that in the field of deportation Congress has been tempted to cross the line between permissible administrative remedial action and non-permissible administrative punitive action. 27 Stat. at L. 25 §4 (1892) provided that a Chinese unlawfully in this country could (a) be taken into custody by immigration officers and (b) imprisoned for a period not exceeding one year. This Court held that "detention * * * as part of the means necessary to give effect to the provisions for the exclusion or expulsion of aliens would be valid" but that detention unrelated to the administrative needs was a punishment without trial by jury forbidden by the Constitution. Wong Wing v. U. S., 163 U. S. 228. In the case at bar this Court is called upon to make a similar distinction, although predicated on other grounds, between remedial and penal features of deportation.

never excuse the neglect of distinctions, upon which the reality of constitutional guarantees hinge.[7]

Whether or not deportation predicated upon present membership in, or present affiliation with an alleged subversive organization is a merely administrative measure or a punitive sanction may be open to doubt. As we have stated, the relation to present dangers does not necessarily exclude the punitive nature of sanctions. Furthermore expulsion is certainly one of the most ancient forms of punishment known to the recorded history of mankind. "Primitive society had no penalties but death or exclusion from the community and the latter, as Cain reminded the Almighty, was the equivalent to death" (George W. Kirchwey in 4 Enc. Soc. Sc. 571). But be it as it may, it seems certain that deportation avowedly unrelated to any present state of affairs, ordered in a situation in which all parties expressly concede that even the most tenuous form of vague affiliation of petitioner Bridges, if existing at all, had been severed long before the present action was begun, and that such deportation is predicated exclusively upon the past, is and can be only punitive in nature. And at least this punitive deportation operating as a criminal sanction for past offences is within the ex post facto prohibition of the Constitution and may not be applied retroactively to the petitioner.

Thus, strictly speaking, the general scope of, and the limitations upon the power of government to deport for political beliefs, are not before the court at this time. Even the question whether or not Congress may impose the sanction of punitive deportation for past affiliations, severed before the proceedings, need not be decided here. To reverse the decision below it will suffice to hold that deportation avowedly predicated upon facts totally unrelated to any present situation, may not be ordered retroactively. In other words, strictly speaking, the constitutionality of "deportation-for-past-affiliation"—amendment, embodied in §23 of the Act of June 28, 1940 is not in question: all that is needed to free the petitioner is to deny the possibility of retroactive application.

7. For example, the determination that a "tax" is nothing but a disguised penalty allows the Court to intervene where it would otherwise be powerless. Thus in Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U. S. 233, this Court, in explaining why the Louisiana tax on periodicals of large circulation violated the due process clause, said: "It is bad because, in the light of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a tax to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled." See also, Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U. S. 238; U. S. v. Constantine, 296 U. S. 287; Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U. S. 20; Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U. S. 277.

POINT III

Whether or not deportation of aliens because of their present membership in, or association with certain proscribed associations can be justified by a reliance upon an implied legislative finding that the presence of such aliens is a clear and present danger of substantive evils—the presumption of such finding cannot be applied to the special case provided for in §23 of the Alien Registration Act of 1940, upon which the deportation of the petitioner is solely predicated.

The Government argues that the "clear and present danger" test of Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47, does not prevent the deportation of aliens based on their affiliation with allegedly subversive organizations because, as in the case of Dunne v. U. S., 138 F. (2d) 137 (C.C.A. 8), "Congress has made the determination of clear and present danger" (Government's brief below, p. 21). The gist of the contention is that this Court should construe the statute authorizing deportation for membership in, or affiliation with, a subversive organization as containing the implied congressional finding of clear and present danger. It is highly doubtful whether the court should accede to the notion that the clear and present danger test is satisfied whenever Congress makes the finding of its existence. The very essence of judicial protection of civil liberties would be destroyed if findings by other branches of government were held conclusive under all circumstances. It is even more doubtful whether in situations involving essential political freedom the court should declare itself satisfied with a mere assumption of implied findings of danger, without even requiring the legislature to take the trouble of an explicit statement.[8] The acceptance of a similar principle would ultimately lead to a situation where every act that could be considered constitutional under some circumstances would be held constitutional always, the court imputing to the legislature the implied findings of fact necessary under the court's doctrine, to sustain the act.

But even if the contention of the government is accepted with respect to deportation of aliens in general, it is logically impossible to apply it to deportations predicated upon the 1940 amendment, involved in the instant case. No implied finding of clear and present danger can be read into a special statute written with the explicit purpose of dispensing the government from the necessity of showing any present connection, no matter how trifling or tenuous, between subversive organizations and the alien

8. Where the attack on official actions is on civil liberties grounds, the usual presumptions in favor of their constitutionality or legality have been largely moderated or discarded. See U. S. v. Carolene Products, 304 U. S. 144, 152, n. 4; Schneider v. State, 308 U. S. 147; Thomas v. Collins, —— U. S. —— (Oct. Term, 1944, No. 14).

to be deported. The record of the instant case embodies the final and not challenged findings of Dean Landis to the effect that petitioner Bridges' affiliation with any subversive organizations, if any, had been severed long before any deportation proceeding was commenced against him. It was for the purpose of making possible the deportation of Bridges despite this accepted finding that the Act of June 28, 1940 was adopted by Congress. The gist of the statutory scheme consisted in making all reference to present dangers immaterial, irrelevant and non-pertinent to the triable issues. Whatever the possibilities of sustaining the general power of deportation for belief, it is impossible to rescue the very special, indeed private, ad personam statute involved in the instant case, by reading into it an implied finding of clear and present danger emphatically inconsistent with this statute's express aims and purpose. The "present danger" test cannot be read into a statute written by Congress in obvious defiance of the very doctrine that gave it to that test.

CONCLUSION

We respectfully submit that the petitioner be granted the relief sought, that he be ordered discharged and the warrant of deportation quashed.

BRIEF FOR AMERICAN COMMITTEE FOR PROTECTION OF FOREIGN BORN AMICUS CURIAE

Statement

The rights of three and a half million aliens who have not yet become citizens are affected by this case. The results arrived at, the safeguards ignored and the contentions of the government in its memorandum in the certiorari proceedings obscure the principles underlying the relation of our government to its friendly resident aliens. We suggest that because of the decision below, a re-statement of those principles and a repudiation of certain assumptions upon which the decision rests are necessary.

The petitioner entered this country lawfully and has lived here for twenty-five years. A vigorous and dynamic labor leader, he has been the storm center of industrial controversy, has made enemies and has earned the hostility of powerful interests (Bridges v. Wixon, 144 F. [2d] 927, 939). He has been ordered deported not because of any of his acts as a labor leader or because he has committed any offense. It is not charged that he has advocated the forcible overthrow of the government of the United States. Nevertheless, various legislative and administrative steps have been taken which have finally resulted in the order for his deportation. That order is based upon a finding of past membership in or affiliation with organizations found to advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

One hundred and fifty years ago the Alien and Sedition Acts were passed. The Alien Act permitted the President to arrest or deport any alien whom he should "judge dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States."[1]

The statutes under which petitioner has been ordered deported did not, as did the Alien Act, give the President power to deport petitioner as an undesirable alien. Though a bill was actually passed by the House of Representatives directing the deportation of the petitioner, naming him by name, this bill died in the Senate when the then Attorney General advised against its passage, stating that it would be the first time since the Alien and Sedition Acts that "any law would provide for a deportation without a hearing or without, indeed, the slightest pretense towards giving the accused what our nation has long known as 'due process of law'."[2] Thereafter, there was an amendment to the general deportation law, with the avowed purpose, according to its sponsor[3] of encompassing the deportation of the petitioner. Petitioner charges that to procure his deportation, various safeguards designed for the protection of individuals against arbitrary governmental action have been disregarded and that his deportation has been ordered in violation of his constitutional rights and of the dictates of fair play embodied in the American notions of due process.

The majority judges in the court below felt uneasy about the matter of proof as to the alien's membership in or affiliation with the proscribed organizations. The record did not leave with them the "pleasurable satisfaction that, barring a very slight possibility of error, the truth has been revealed" (144 F. [2d] 927, 938). They, however, felt bound by the decision of the Attorney General which reversed the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals. The dissenting judges thought that in the light of the quality of the evidence "it would seem a more forthright procedure to do what was proposed in the first place, deport him (petitioner) by legislative resolution" (144 F. [2d] at p. 943).

No one will dispute that this country has the right and that Congress is empowered to protect the United States against undesirable aliens by deporting them. The exercise of this power is, however, subject to definite limits imposed by Congress in its passage of legislation and upon the officials who are to enforce the statutes. To protect the rights of aliens we ask the Court to sustain the following contentions.

FIRST

The guarantees of freedom of speech and of the press are extended to resident aliens as well as to citizens.

The government, as we read their argument (Certiorari Memorandum, 33-35) implies that resident aliens are not protected by constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and of the press,—that the sovereign power of Congress to enact deportation laws is not limited by the First Amendment.

The First Amendment reads:

> "Congress shall make no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech or of the press * * *."

The limitations of the Congressional power under this amendment are now clear.

> "It is now a commonplace that censorship or suppression of expression of opinion is tolerated by our Constitution only when the expression presents a clear and present danger of action of a kind the State is empowered to prevent and punish." Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U. S. 624, 633.

This court, in stating where the individual's freedom ends and the state's power begins, said that any attempt to restrict the freedoms secured by the First Amendment

> "must be justified by clear public interest, threatened not doubtfully or remotely, but by clear and present danger. The rational connection between the remedy provided and the evil to be curbed, which in other contexts might support legislation against attack on due process grounds, will not suffice. These rights rest on firmer foundation." Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 322-3.

These, then, are the limits that Congress may not transcend.

The Amendment makes no distinction between citizens and aliens and the purposes of the Amendment preclude any distinction so far as the holding and expression of opinion by resident aliens is concerned.

The guarantees of free speech are designed to protect the community. It is deemed "essential to free government" "that men may speak as they think on matters vital to them and that falsehoods may be exposed through the processes of education". "Those who won our independence had confidence in the power of free and fearless reasoning and communication of ideas to discover and spread political and economic truth. Noxious doctrines in those fields may be refuted and their evils averted by the courageous exercise of the right of free discussion". Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U. S. 88, 95.

The experience of our country and the contrast of our institutions with those of totalitarian countries emphasize the wisdom of seeing that the right of Americans to hear and read all points of view are not interfered with.*

No one would, we think, argue that a resident alien may be restrained from expressing his views freely and without fear of deportation on the binomial theorem, the midnight curfew, the doctrine of transubstantiation or the efficacy of vitamins. But he is not limited to these matters. Our institutions protect him in the expression of his opinions as to "political and economic" truths, protect him in the "free and fearless" expression of these views without limit up to the point where his words become in effect acts,—where they become the immediate incentives to actions of the kind that the state is empowered to prevent.

* Nearly a century ago John Stuart Mill emphasized that it was for the benefit of the persons to whom the views were communicated that freedom of expression be not interfered with.

"But the peculiar evil of silencing the expression of an opinion is that it is robbing the human race; posterity as well as the existing generation; those who dissent from the opinion still more than those who hold it. If the opinion is right, they are deprived of the opportunity of exchanging error for truth; if wrong, they lose what is almost as great a benefit, the clearer reception and livelier impression of truth produced by its collision with error." John Stuart Mill: "On Liberty" (Everyman Ed. p. 79).

This must be true unless there is some express or implied provision in the Constitution distinguishing between citizens and resident aliens. Express difference there is none. Nor can any such distinction be read into the Constitution. For the education of the nation may be advanced as well by the statements of non-citizens as of citizens. Such distinguished aliens as Thomas Mann, Count Sforza and Pierre Cot have resided in our country as non-citizens. Their views on American trends as interpreted by what they had witnessed in their native lands—Germany, Italy and France,—would be at least as potent in averting noxious doctrines as the views of any native American.[5]

But "free and fearless reasoning and communication of ideas", "courageous exercise of the right of free discussion" is withdrawn from aliens if they know that the penalty for expressing or having at any time in the past expressed unpopular views may be deportation. If there were such a threat, the possibility of free discussion would be undermined. The speaker would be compelled either to "hedge and trim" (Thomas v. Collins, 65 S. Ct. 315, 325); or to keep silent. The only other choice remaining to the speaker would be the baneful one of expressing his views covertly with the danger of creating resentment and evasions that forcing views underground engenders.

[5] No recent book has perhaps caused more discussion concerning the advantages and limitations of planning and regimentation than "The Road to Serfdom" by the Austrian economist, Hayek.

"* * * all attempts to influence (the mind) by temporal punishments or burdens, or by civil incapacitations, tend only to beget habits of hypocrisy and meanness. * * *" (Language of the preamble to the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom quoted in Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U. S. at p. 646).

SECOND

An alien lawfully residing in the United States cannot be made deportable for associating with other persons for legitimate ends.

Where a resident alien may not be penalized directly for his own expressions or conduct he may not be penalized indirectly for associating with others when the association is for unobjectionable ends. Loose terms, such as "affiliation" and "association", will not be permitted to obscure this principle.

In the series of attempts to deport an individual unpopular with certain groups, fundamental personal rights are in danger of being slurred over. The dissenting judges assert that the Attorney General "in arriving at his finding of affiliation" "appears to have relied indiscriminately on every circumstance which might be thought to spell sympathy or to be indicative of an association however temporary in pursuit of ends however legitimate" (144 F. [2d] at 941).

If this statement is borne out by the record, then we submit that the construction of "affiliation" as used in the statute is an improper construction or else it results in the violation of constitutional rights.

A labor leader does nothing to render himself deportable by making common cause with a radical union in a campaign to procure housing for workers or in soliciting their help in winning a strike.[7] Nor would he render him-

---

[7] As the majority of the court below said (144 F. [2d] at 938), speaking of the longshoremen's strike and the association of the petitioner with the Marine Workers Industrial Union during the period of that strike:

> "It may be stated arguendo, that appellant in his management of that strike, was attacking most vicious and inhumane practices toward longshoremen and that he was justified in accepting help from any quarter."

self deportable by contributing to a fund for a day nursery for the infant children of the union members.[8]

An alien would not become undesirable and deportable because of such tenuous contacts with a radical union even though the union were proscribed by statute. For this would be an unreasonable interpretation of the word affiliation.[9] If, however, the statute made it clear that such conduct was intended to afford a basis for deportation, then we submit the statute would be violative of the Fifth Amendment in that there would be no rational relation between the contacts that are penalized and the evil that is designed to be curbed. Tot v. U. S., 319 U. S. 463; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 319-20; De Jonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353.

THIRD

A resident alien is denied due process unless he is given a fair hearing before the findings are made ordering his deportation. It is not a fair hearing for an administrative official to reverse a decision cancelling a warrant of deportation without giving the alien an opportunity to know the specific contentions of the Government and to address arguments thereto.

We assume the following propositions to be settled:

That depriving a person who has resided for twenty-five years in the United States of the right to continue

[8] How far the statute went in its attempt to reach anyone who might have any contact with one of the proscribed organizations appears from the section of the statute where it is provided that "the giving, loaning or promising of money or of anything of value to any organization, association, society or group, of the character above described, shall constitute affiliation therewith" (8 U. S. C. Sec. 137 [e]).

[9] Compare on this point the language of the dissenting opinion, 144 F. (2d) at page 941 and especially the discussion there of Kettunen v. Reimer, 79 F. (2d) 315.

his residence is a deprivation of liberty within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment (Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 284)[10] and that due process in a quasi-judicial administrative proceeding requires that there be an opportunity to meet contentions before there is a ruling adversely affecting the rights of an individual (Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1, 18).

The deportation statute involved in this case provides that if an alien is a member of or affiliated with certain proscribed classes he shall "upon the warrant of the Attorney General be taken into custody and deported * * *" (8 U. S. C., § 137). Congress has not implemented the statute. But the Immigration Service has promulgated regulations (8 Code of Federal Regulations, especially Parts 90 and 150) which up to a certain point assure an alien an opportunity to meet charges before the issuance of a final order against him."[11]

Under these regulations there is a Presiding Inspector who conducts hearings and proposes findings (§ 150.7). His proposed findings are subject to review by the Board of Immigration Appeals, the body which is empowered to issue orders of deportation, to cancel warrants of arrest and to exercise the discretion conferred by law upon the Attorney General appropriate to the disposition of deportation proceedings (§§ 90.2, 90.3). Provisions for being apprized of the proposed adverse findings of the Presiding Inspector (§ 150. 7[d]). or—where his decision is not adverse to the alien—to the proposed adverse findings of the Board of Immigration Appeals and of a hearing before these findings can be operative is provided for fully by the regulations (§ 90.11).

[10] "Deportation, at least of resident aliens, is, in the terms of human consequences, one of the most serious forms of the assertion of governmental power—far more serious than mere denial of entry." (Report of Secretary of Labor's Committee on Administrative Procedure, May 17, 1940, p. 61.)

[11] "The failure of Congress to deal with the problem of how that power [to deport resident aliens] should be exercised imposes upon the Department of Labor a special obligation to erect its own safeguards." (Report of the Secretary of Labor's Committee on Administrative Procedure, May 17, 1940, p. 61.)

There is a loophole in these regulations. In certain special cases the Attorney General may review the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals. There are no provisions in the regulations safeguarding the rights of the alien if the Attorney General "after consideration of the record believes that an order less favorable to the alien than that proposed" by the Board of Immigration Appeals should be entered.[12]

Thus, where there is a decision of the expert Board of Immigration Appeals[13] holding that an alien is not deportable the Attorney General may, so far as the regulations are concerned, declare the alien deportable without giving him a chance to be heard. We contend that this hiatus in the regulations does not justify the Attorney General, in denying the alien the right to a hearing before findings are altered to his disadvantage. It is true that the Attorney General has the record before him of what the Presiding Inspector has done and what the Board of Immigration Appeals has done but this ex parte proceeding does not protect the alien against new arguments being used against him or decisions being made on points that the expert Board of Immigration Appeals has not considered.

[12] The quoted language is from § 90.11 of the regulations which prescribes a full hearing before the Board of Immigration Appeals when that Board proposes from an examination of the record to issue an order more harmful to the alien than that recommended by the Presiding Inspector.

[13] The Board of Immigration Appeals is the successor of a body that existed under the Department of Labor. When this phase of the Immigration Service was transferred to the Department of Justice under Reorganization Plan V, adopted under the Reorganization Act of 1939 (5 U. S. C. A. § 133t, fn.), the Board instead of being an advisory board became a deciding board (Regulations § 90.3).

That he who determines must hear is the principle required by our notions of due process in administrative proceedings. In the last analysis this means that a person whose right of residence will be destroyed by the decision of an administrative official at any level must have a reasonable opportunity to know the contentions that will be made against him and to meet them before such a decision is made.[14]

The requirements of fairness are not exhausted in the taking or consideration of evidence but extend to the concluding parts of the procedure as well as to the beginning and intermediate steps (Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. at p. 20). Unless these wholesome requirements are lived up to there are the dangers that always exist in ex parte proceedings. These dangers are accentuated where the record is a long one.

How grave these dangers are is illustrated by what happened in this case. The expert body decided that "the case relied upon by the Service and accepted by the Presiding Inspector is not sustained" (R. 376). The Board rejected the Presiding Inspector's proposed findings as to membership in the Communist Party. The O'Neil statements were rejected by the Board of Immigration Appeals as having been received in evidence in violation of the rules of the Immigration Service (R. 449-50).

The Attorney General held that the statements were admissible enunciating—we understand for the first time—

---

[14] "Those who are brought into contest with the Government in a quasi-judicial proceeding aimed at the control of their activities are entitled to be fairly advised of what the government proposes and to be heard upon its proposals before it issues its final command." (Morgan v. U. S., 304 U. S. at pp. 18-9.)

The Secretary of Labor's Committee interprets the Morgan case as holding it to be "a denial of due process of law for a remote administrative official to render a decision without giving fresh notice of the specific contentions of the government and a chance to address argument thereto." (Secretary of Labor's Committee on Administrative Procedure, Report of May 17, 1940, p. 90.)

the theory that the alien had "waived" objection to the evidence (R.95-6). Whether it is error to decide that objections to the evidence have been waived when the deciding body has sustained the objection and rejected the dence is outside our discussion. The fact is that evidence was received by the Attorney General after it had been rejected by his Board without an opportunity given to the alien to show that there was no waiver.

After the Attorney General had made the decision there was no real possibility for reviewing the adequacy of the evidence. For the majority of the judges in the habeas corpus proceedings held that they were precluded from examining into the sufficiency of the evidence (144 F. [2d] at 938). Whether in the light of the paucity of the evidence (144 F. [2d] at 940) the courts below would have held that the "borderline of inadequacy" had been passed had the O'Neil evidence been removed from the case is a matter of surmise (See the discussion in the dissenting opinion, 144 F. [2d] at 943).

Beside the question of the admissibility and effect of this evidence which the dissenting judges deemed crucial, the failure of the Attorney General to grant a hearing had another result. The regulations envisage the making of decisions in deportation matters by the Board of Immigration Appeals. But that Board never passed upon the question whether the aims and character of the Communist Party and Marine Workers Industrial Union were such as to include them in the groups proscribed by the statute. The Board having decided that the alien was neither a member of the Communist Party or affiliated with the Party or the Marine Workers Industrial Union never went into these issues. The Attorney General, in reversing the Board as to membership and affiliation, did not send the case back to the Board to have it pass upon these issues. He simply accepted the proposed findings of the Presiding Inspector without giving the alien a chance to argue these questions before they were decided adversely by either the Board or the Attorney General, the authorities vested with final deciding authority.

These significant departures by the Attorney General cannot be viewed as other than a failure to give a fair hearing and accordingly a denial of due process.

Conclusion

The errors—dangerous to alien residents—in the decision below require that the decision be reversed.

BRIEF OF THE AMERICAN LEGION AMICUS CURIAE

AUTHORITY OF THE AMERICAN LEGION TO FILE BRIEF AS AMICUS CURIAE IN THIS CAUSE

The American Legion has filed with the Clerk of this Court the written consent of the parties to this action authorizing it to file a brief as Amicus Curiae herein as required by Section 9 of Rule 27 of this Court. Although request for permission to file this brief was made in February, 1945, final consent of counsel for the petitioner was not obtained until March 16th, 1945, thus making it impossible to file the brief at an earlier date. Typewritten copies of the brief were forwarded to counsel for both parties immediately upon completion and prior to printing in order that they might have the same at the earliest possible moment. This statement is not made for the purpose of criticism but in explanation of the delay in placing the brief on file with the Clerk of this Court.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

The American Legion is a non-political, civilian organization originally chartered by Act of Congress September 16th, 1919 (U. S. C. A. Tit. 36, Sec. 41-51 Incl.) which was amended October 29th, 1942 (U. S. C. A. Tit. 36, Sec. 43 and 45). The Federal Act outlines its purposes[1] and, among other things, fixes eligibility for membership[2] which

---

1. PURPOSES OF CORPORATION—The purpose of this corporation shall be: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to promote peace and good will among the peoples of the United States and all the nations of the earth; to preserve the memories and incidents of the two World Wars fought to uphold democracy; to cement the ties and comradeship born of service; and to consecrate the efforts of its members to mutual helpfulness and service to their country. (As amended Oct. 29, 1942, c. 633, Sec. 1, 56 Stat. 1012, U. S. C. A. Title 36, Sec. 43.)

2. PERSONS ELIGIBLE TO MEMBERSHIP—No person shall be a member of this corporation unless he served in the naval or military services of the United States at some time during the period between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, or during the period between December 7, 1941, and the date of cessation of hostilities as fixed by the United States Government, all dates inclusive, or who, being citizens of the United States at the time of enlistment, served in the military or naval services of any of the governments associated with the United States during either of said World Wars; Provided, however, That such person shall have an honorable discharge or separation from such service or continue to serve honorably after the date of cessation of such hostilities as determined herein. (As amended Oct. 29, 1942, c. 633, Sec. 2, 56 Stat. 1012, U. S. C. A. Title 36, Sec. 45.)

is composed of veterans of World War I and World War II who have served in the naval or military services of the United States between certain dates or who, being citizens of the United States at the time of enlistment, served in the naval or military services of any of the governments associated with the United States during either of said wars, provided, however, that such person shall have an honorable discharge or separation from such service or continues to serve honorably after the date of cessation of hostilities as fixed by the United States Government.

The Legion is composed of fifty-eight (58) departments and twelve thousand two hundred ninety-eight (12,298) posts, having a total membership of one million three hundred sixty-nine thousand seven hundred one (1,369,701). The local posts are spread throughout the length and breadth of the United States and are engaged in service to the community, state, and nation.

Our organization is neither dominated by capital nor labor, but it is amply represented in every community by a cross-section of both groups. Its membership is not restricted as to race, color, or creed but is only determined by whether the applicant for membership has had honorable service in the two World Wars fought for democracy. We have always opposed foreign "isms" aimed at the destruction or overthrow of our form of government and have championed the cause of Americanism.

The Legion's interest in this case is one of national security, the survival of national sovereignty, and the preservation of the free institutions of our country. Such considerations involve the power of Congress under Clause 4, Section 8 of Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States "to establish an uniform rule of naturalization," and under Clause 18 of said section "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof." This will necessarily require a discussion of the pertinent portions of the Act of Congress, set out at pages 5-7 herein, under which the deportation proceedings against the petitioner were conducted and the measure of proof necessary therein by the tests applicable in habeas corpus proceedings for the purpose of obtaining a collateral review of a deportation order. The relationship of the power of Congress under Section 8 of Article 1 of the Constitution to the rights reserved to the people under the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution will also be treated in our argument. We will leave the discussion of the factual issues to counsel for parties in this cause, except our reference to such issues as they may have been considered and determined by the Presiding Inspector, who actually saw and heard all of the witnesses, by the Attorney General, and by the lower courts.

OPINIONS BELOW

The District Court for the Northern District of California denied application for writ of habeas corpus. Ex Parte Bridges, 49 Fed. Supp. 292.

Appeal was taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, and that court by a divided opinion affirmed the decision of the District Court. Bridges v. Wixon, District Director, etc., 144 Fed. Rep. (2nd) 927.

JURISDICTION

Jurisdiction of this court is predicated on Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13th, 1925 (28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 347). This court has granted a writ of certiorari for review of the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the Attorney General's findings, that petitioner was a member of the Communist Party and affiliated with that party and with the Marine Workers Industrial Union after entering the United States, were adequately sustained by the evidence under applicable tests in a habeas corpus proceeding instituted to obtain collateral review of a deportation order.

2. Whether due process of law was denied to the petitioner by reason of alleged abuses in the institution and conduct of the deportation proceedings.

3. Whether the deportation statute as construed and applied to petitioner denied him freedom of speech and assembly in violation of the First Amendment to the Constitution.

STATUTES INVOLVED

Sections 1 and 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918 (c. 186, 40 Stat. 1012), as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920 (c. 251, 41 Stat. 1008-1009) and the Act of June 28, 1940 (c. 439, Title II, sec. 23, 54 Stat. 673, 8 U. S. C. 137), provide, in pertinent part, as follows:

That any alien who, at any time, shall be or shall have been a member of any one of the following classes shall be excluded from admission into the United States:

* * * * * * *

(c) Aliens * * * who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches: (1) the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States * * *.

* * * * * * *

(e) Aliens who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue, or display, any written or printed matter of the character described in subdivision (d) (advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States).

For the purpose of this section: (1) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to be used for the advising, advocacy, or teaching of any doctrine above enumerated shall constitute the advising, advocacy, or teaching of such doctrine; and (2) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to any organization, association, society, or group, of the character above described shall constitute affiliation therewith; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken as an exclusive definition of advising, advocacy, teaching, or affiliation.

SEC. 2. Any alien who was at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this Act, shall, upon the warrant of the Attorney General, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided in the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned in this Act, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States.

Section 19 of the Act of February 5, 1917 (c. 29, 39 Stat. 889, 8 U. S. C. 155) provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

> In every case where any person is ordered deported from the United States under the provisions of this Act, or of any law or treaty, the decision of the Secretary of Labor shall be final.[3]

BRIEF STATEMENT OF THE CASE

We assume that the parties to this cause will submit a detailed statement of the case, including the factual issues involved, and with that thought in mind we will restrict ourselves in this portion of the brief to a concise chronological statement of the proceedings now on review before this court.

Petitioner is an alien, a native and citizen of Australia (R. 778-780, 7736-7737), who entered the United States in April 1920 (R. 791, 7735). He has been in the United States continuously since that time, apart from several voyages as a seaman on American vessels, the last of which occurred in 1922 (R. 791-792). Petitioner has filed three declara-

3. By Reorganization Plan No. V, effective June 14, 1940 (54 Stat. 230, 1238, 5 U. S. C., fol. 133t; 5 U. S. C. 133v), the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws was transferred from the Secretary of Labor to the Attorney General, and since June 14, 1940, that official has administered the immigration laws.

tions of intention to become a citizen (Gov. Exs. 277, R. 6070-6074; 279, R. 6089; 296, R. 7735). He allowed the first two to lapse (R. 508), and the last, which was filed on March 28, 1939, apparently is still pending. In March, 1938, deportation proceedings were instituted against petitioner under Section 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920 (40 Stat. 1012, 41 Stat. 1008-1009) on the ground that after his entry into the United States he had become a member of and affiliated with an organization that advised, advocated and taught the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States and that caused to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States (R. 73-74, 503). James M. Landis, Dean of the Harvard Law School, was appointed trial examiner for the purpose of hearing the case, and hearings were held from July 10 to September 14, 1939 (R. 74, 504).

On June 12, 1939, following the decision of this Court in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, the warrant upon which the proceedings had been instituted was amended to charge that petitioner both had been and then was a member of or affiliated with the organization described in the warrant (R. 503). At the hearings before Dean Landis, the Government claimed that petitioner was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States, and that the party was an organization of the character described in the 1918 Act (R. 503-504, 508). Petitioner denied that he was a member of the Communist Party or had ever been a member (R. 509), and in December 1939 Dean Landis concluded that the evidence established neither that petitioner "is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States of America" (R. 636). Accordingly, he did not pass upon the question of whether that party was an organization within the Act (R. 497). In January 1940, the Secretary of Labor sustained Dean Landis and dismissed the proceedings against petitioner (R. 75, 139).

On June 28, 1940, Congress amended the deportation statute in question so as to provide for deportation of an alien who was "at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter" a member of the classes of aliens specified (Act of June 28, 1940, c. 439, Title II, sec. 23, 54 Stat. 673; see pp. 5-7, supra). The sponsors of the amendment stated that it was designed to obviate the construction placed upon the statute by the Strecker case that only present membership or affiliation required deportation (86 C. R. 8343, 9031-9032). The Attorney General then directed the Federal Bureau of Investigation to determine whether under the statute, as amended, grounds existed for reopening the deportation proceedings against petitioner, and as a result of this investigation a second deportation proceeding was instituted against petitioner on February 14, 1941 (R. 76). The warrant of arrest charged that petitioner was deportable under the provisions of the Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Acts of June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940 (pp. 5-7, supra) in that, after entering the United States, he had been a member of or affiliated with an organization (1) that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States; and (2) that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or (3) that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue or display, written or printed matter advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force or by violence of the Government of the United States (Gov. Ex. 1, R. 771-773; 142-143).

Charles B. Sears, a retired judge of the New York Court of Appeals, was appointed an inspector in the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Justice to preside over the hearing, take testimony, and make appropriate recommendations (R. 76, 141). At the hearings before Judge Sears, petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party and subsidiaries or allies of the party, notably the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and his membership in the Industrial Workers of the World constituted the conduct claimed by the Government as grounds for petitioner's deportation (R. 144, 147, 799, 807-808). Judge Sears held hearings in San Francisco from March 31 to June 12, 1941, at which the petitioner was represented by counsel and the public and press were admitted (R. 76, 143-145). The evidence covered 44 volumes of 7546 typewritten pages; and, in addition, the Government introduced 297 exhibits, and the petitioner 62 (R. 76, 143-144).

On September 26, 1941, Judge Sears transmitted to the Attorney General a Memorandum of Decision, analyzing the evidence which had been adduced, and containing proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law and order (R. 76-77, 134-347). Judge Sears found that the Communist Party of the United States of America was "from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time * * * an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;" that it was an organization that "writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, and displays printed matter advising, advocating, or teaching" such overthrow; that it was an organization "that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, and displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching" such overthrow; that it was an organization that "has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue and display, printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching" such overthrow; that the Marine Workers Industrial Union "was a part of the Communist Party, dominated and controlled by it" and advocated a similar overthrow of the Government of the United States; and that after entering the United States, petitioner had been a member of the Communist Party and had been affiliated with both the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 337-338). Accordingly, Judge Sears concluded that petitioner was subject to deportation under the statute involved (R. 338-339) and submitted a proposed order for petitioner's deportation to Australia (R. 340-341). Petitioner filed exceptions to the proposed findings (R. 348-365), and, briefs having been filed, the case was heard on oral argument before the Board of Immigration Appeals on November 24, 1941 (R. 369). On January 3, 1942, the Board rendered an opinion rejecting Judge Sears' proposed findings on the issues of petitioner's membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union (R. 367-489), and affirmatively found that petitioner had not been a member of or affiliated with those organizations at any time after he entered the United States (R. 490).

In view of its findings on the issues of membership and affiliation, the Board stated that it was unnecessary to pass upon the issues of whether those organizations were of the nature described in the deportation statute (R. 370-371). Accordingly, the Board entered an order cancelling the warrant of arrest and closing the proceedings, but stayed execution of the order "pending further order of the Attorney General" (R. 492). The Attorney General reviewed the decision of the Board, and on May 28, 1942, rendered an opinion and decision, in which he made findings in accordance with those proposed by Judge Sears and ordered petitioner's deportation (R. 73-106). Pursuant to the order of the Attorney General, a warrant of deportation was issued May 29, 1942 (R. 62-64), and petitioner surrendered himself to the custody of the respondent on June 2, 1942 (R. 27). On June 4, 1942, the Attorney General denied a petition seeking an opportunity to present argument and briefs to him for the purpose of reconsidering and reversing this decision (R. 678-687).

Petitioner filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California on June 2, 1942 (R. 2-17), and an amended petition on July 6, 1942 (R. 21-62). He attacked the legality of his detention on numerous constitutional grounds, claiming that he had not been accorded due process of law in that the deportation order was not supported by substantial evidence (R. 8-10, 53-58) and he had not been given a fair hearing (R. 43-53); that he had been subjected to double jeopardy (R. 11, 39-41); that the 1940 amendment to the deportation statute constituted as to him an ex post facto law (R. 11, 41); that he had been denied the equal protection of the laws in that he had been singled out and subjected to discriminatory treatment (R. 12, 28-36); and that the 1940 amendment, providing as a ground for deportation past membership in the described organizations, was an unreasonable limitation of his right to freedom of speech (R. 41-42). Petitioner also asserted that, except for the question of his membership in the I. W. W., the issues in the present deportation proceeding were the same as those in the earlier proceeding before Dean Landis, and those issues having been determined in his favor in that proceeding, the doctrine of res judicata, or at least an analogous principle, was applicable (R. 11, 36-39). On February 8, 1943, the district court, in a lengthy opinion (R. 723-759), denied the petition and remanded petitioner to the custody of respondent. On appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, the order of the district court was affirmed (R. 7810), by a vote of three of the five judges who heard the appeal. The dissenting judges thought that the conclusion that petitioner was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party was arrived at in reliance upon incompetent evidence received in violation of relevant regulations designed to insure fair hearings and to safeguard the rights of aliens (R. 7794-7809).

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

I. Under Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 4 and 18, of the Constitution, Congress is vested with the sovereign power, for the preservation of national security, to enact the legislation under which the deportation proceedings were conducted in this case.

II. Deportation under the procedure and upon the evidence does not violate due process of law.

III. Deportation in the instant case does not violate any rights under the First Amendment to the Constitution.

ARGUMENT

I

UNDER ARTICLE I, SECTION 8, CLAUSES 4 AND 18, OF THE CONSTITUTION, CONGRESS IS VESTED WITH THE SOVEREIGN POWER, FOR THE PRESERVATION OF NATIONAL SECURITY, TO ENACT THE LEGISLATION UNDER WHICH THE DEPORTATION PROCEEDINGS WERE CONDUCTED IN THIS CASE.

Sovereignty resides in the people and they have the power to delegate sovereign rights to instrumentalities of government for their protection and benefit. This principle was first enunciated in the case of M'Culloch v. The State of Maryland et al., 4 Wheaton 316, 404-5-6, in the following language:

> "The government of the Union, then (whatever may be the influence of this fact on the case) is, emphatically, and truly, a government of the people. In form and in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them, and for their benefit.
>
> * * * * * * *
> "The government of the United States, then, though limited in its powers, is supreme; and its laws, when made in pursuance of the constitution, form the supreme law of the land, 'anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.' "

The people delegated to Congress the sovereign power under Article I, Section 8, Clauses 4 and 18, of the Constitution "to establish an uniform rule of naturalization," and "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof." This power has long since been recognized by our courts as one for the purpose of maintaining our absolute independence and security. In the case of Ping v. U. S., 130 U. S. 581, p. 604, this sovereign power was expressed as follows:

> "While under our Constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the States, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the Constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations."

The authority of Congress to expel or to deport foreigners under its granted powers is absolute and unqualified and was so held in the case of Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, p. 707, in the following words:

> "The right of a nation to expel or deport foreigners, who have not been naturalized or taken any steps towards becoming citizens of the Country, rests upon the same grounds, and is as absolute and unqualified as the right to prohibit and prevent their entrance into the country."

It will be noted that the above language makes no distinction between the right to expel or deport foreigners and the right to prohibit and prevent their entrance into the country. This we believe is a complete answer to the argument of petitioner that "deportation presents a different problem from exclusion" (p. 34, Petitioner's brief). Recognizing that the right of deportation involved the "necessities of public welfare," the Court in Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, p. 556-7, stated:

> "It is admitted that sovereign states have inherent power to deport aliens, and seemingly that Congress is not deprived of this power by the Constitution of the United States. * * * Furthermore, the very ground of the power in the necessities of public welfare shows that it may have to be exercised in a summary way through executive officers."

Again in the case of Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, p. 591, the Court held that:

> "It is thoroughly established that Congress has power to order the deportation of aliens whose presence in the country it deems hurtful."

The complete authority of Congress to regulate naturalization "so vital to the public welfare" was announced in the case of United States v. Ginsberg, 243 U. S. 472, p. 474, as follows:

> "An alien who seeks political rights as a member of this nation can rightfully obtain them only upon terms and conditions specified by Congress. Courts are without authority to sanction changes or modifications; their duty is rigidly to enforce the legislative will in respect of a matter so vital to the public welfare."

That the granting of citizenship to aliens "touches the very well being of the nation," thus involving national security, was again expressed in the case of Baumgartner v. United States, 88 L. ed. 1155, p. 1161, as follows:

> "We are fully mindful that due observance of the law governing the grant of citizenship to aliens touches the very well being of the Nation. Nothing that we are now deciding is intended to weaken in the slightest the alertness with which admission to American citizenship should be safeguarded."

It would appear that the sovereign power of deportation, as well as the admission to American citizenship of aliens, touches the very well being of the nation, and that the Congressional power was exercised in the passage of the statute involved in the instant case for the "very well being," "welfare," and "security" of the nation as a whole.

It must be remembered that at the time Congress amended the deportation statute in question (June 28, 1940) so as to provide for deportation of an alien who was "at the time of entering the United States or has been at any time thereafter" a member of the classes of aliens specified (Act of June 28, 1940, c. 439, Title II, sec. 23, 54 Stat. 673; see pp. 5-7 supra), the major portion of Europe was at war. Feeling was tense, and preparations were being made for the security of our country in the event it was drawn into the conflict. Approximately three months thereafter (September 16, 1940) the Selective Service Act was enacted by Congress (54 U. S. Statutes 885, U. S. C. A. Title 50, App. Sec. 301 et seq.). Subversive agents of foreign nations were active and Congress was on the alert to protect our interests. It was, therefore, pardonable if that body adopted the amendment in question to provide for deportation of aliens whose presence in the country it deemed hurtful. Bugajewitz v. Adams, supra.

While "Inquiry into the hidden motive of Congress to exercise a power constitutionally conferred upon it is beyond the competency of courts," (Sonzinsky v. United States, 300 U. S. 506, pp. 513, 514), yet it is reasonable to assume that Congress was concerned with the welfare and security of our nation in the enactment of the amendment involved in this proceeding following the decision of this court in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, in order to correct the infirmities of the former act which were pointed out by the court in that decision. We sincerely believe that the statute as construed and applied has a very definite relationship to the purpose for which the governmental power of deportation exists, namely, the power to preserve the national existence of this nation and provide for its security.

II

DEPORTATION UNDER THE PROCEDURE AND UPON THE EVIDENCE DOES NOT VIOLATE DUE PROCESS OF LAW

Procedural Processes

In view of the fact that Congress is vested with the absolute sovereign power to deport aliens, it is also clothed with the authority to enact legislation for the execution of this power and may vest it in an administrative or executive agency. This principle is expressed in the case of Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, p. 40, as follows:

> "Nor is the act invalid in delegating legislative power to the Secretary of Labor. The sovereign > power to expel aliens is political, and is vested in the political departments of the government. Even if the executive may not exercise it without congressional authority, Congress cannot exercise it effectively save through the executive. It cannot, in the nature of things, designate all the persons to be excluded. It must accomplish its purpose by classification and by conferring power of selection within classes upon an executive agency. Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 557, 57 L. ed. 960, 965, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585."

In the case of Sunshine Anthracite Coal Company v. Adkins, 310 U. S. 381, p. 401, the Court, in discussing "the plenary power conferred by the commerce clause," decided:

> "'It is of the essence of the plenary power conferred' by the commerce clause 'that Congress may exercise its discretion in the use of the power.' Currin v. Wallace, supra (306 U. S. p. 14, 83 L. ed. 450, 59 S. Ct. 379). A part of that discretion is the selection of the sanction for the law's enforcement."

The power of Congress to delegate such authority to an executive department was approved in the case of Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272, p. 275, as follows:

> "* * * that such an inquiry' may be properly devolved upon an executive department or subordinate officials thereof, and that the findings of fact reached by such officials, after a fair though summary hearing, may constitutionally be made conclusive, as they are made by the provisions of the act in question."

The proceedings in the instant case were conducted before Judge Sears, who recommended deportation. His findings were approved by the Attorney General. Both of these officials were clothed with the proper Congressional authority in the performance of their duties in this respect.

It has been contended that the theory of res adjudicata or a like doctrine is applicable due to the fact that a similar prior proceeding was conducted before Dean Landis. This position is untenable. The hearing before Dean Landis was conducted under a former statute which required proof of present membership (see Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22) in a proscribed organization, whereas the hearing in the case at bar was under a statute which only required proof of membership in or affiliation with a proscribed organization at any time after entry into the United States. Consequently, the question involved in the present hearing was beyond the scope of inquiry in the former proceeding.

Furthermore, it has been decided that the principle of res adjudicata does not obtain in such proceedings. This principle was expressed by Justice Holmes in the case of Pearson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281 at pp. 284-5, as follows:

> "The board is an instrument of the executive power, not a court. It is made up, as we have mentioned, of the immigrant officials in the service subordinates of the commissioner of immigration, whose duties are declared to be administrative by Sec. 23. Decisions of a similar type long have been recognized as decisions of the executive department, and cannot constitute res judicata in a technical sense."

It is also contended that the statute is an ex post facto law and is retrospective legislation. A different viewpoint has been expressed by this court on at least two occasions. In the case of Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, p. 242, it stated:

> "Finally, it is insisted that, if retrospective in form, the section is void, as an ex post facto law within the prohibition of art. 1, Sec. 9 of the Constitution. It is, however, settled that this prohibition is confined to laws respecting criminal punishments, and has no relation to retrospective legislation of any other description."

Again in Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, p. 591, the Court held:

> "The determination by facts that might constitute a crime under local law is not a conviction of crime, nor is the deportation a punishment; it is simply a refusal by the government to harbor persons whom it does not want. The coincidence of the local penal law with the policy of Congress is an accident. * * * The prohibition of ex post facto laws in article 1, Sec. 9, has no application (Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 242, 56 L. ed. 1066, 1072, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613), and with regard to the petitioner, it is not necessary to construe the statute as having any retrospective effect."

We consider these cases as determinative of this proposition. Nor was the procedure discriminative in character in the claim that the petitioner was singled out for deportation. The case of Helvering v. Lerner Stores Corp., 314 U. S., 463, p. 468, states that:

> "A claim of unreasonable classification or inequality in the incidence or application of a tax raises no question under the Fifth Amendment which contains no equal protection clause."

We do not believe that the Attorney General was required to hear arguments before reaching his final decision. A question of similar character was presented in the case of Morgan v. United States, 298 U. S. 468, and the Court, at page 481 of that opinion, made the following comment:

> "In such a view, it would be possible, for example, for one official to hear the evidence and argument and arrive at certain conclusions of fact, and another official who had not heard or considered either evidence or argument to overrule those conclusions and for reasons of policy to announce entirely different ones."

This case was again considered by this Court (see Morgan v. United States, 304 U. S. 1, p. 21) wherein the Court used the following language:

> "The Government adverts to an observation in our former opinion that, while it was good practice —which we approve— to have the examiner, receiving the evidence in such a case, prepare a report as a basis for exceptions and argument, we could not say that that particular type of procedure was essential to the validity of the proceeding."

Under these decisions, we submit that provision for argument was unnecessary either before the examiner or the Attorney General. In view of the fact that the Board of Immigration Appeals was an intermediary body between the hearing inspector and the Attorney General, its decision in the instant case would not in any way be controlling of the Attorney General's action as he is made the final reviewing authority.

It is further contended by the petitioner that he was subjected to double jeopardy, which is prohibited under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. Double jeopardy only applies in criminal proceedings (see Helvering v. Mitchell, 303 U. S. 391, p. 399), and a deportation proceeding is not criminal in character. Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272, p. 275."

It would appear that due process of law as afforded under the Fifth Amendment was not violated in the procedural processes provided by Congress and followed in this case.

EVIDENCE REQUIRED

In habeas corpus proceedings no direct review of the decision of the administrative officer ordering deportation may be had but only a collateral review is afforded for the sole purpose of determining whether the proceeding was violative of due process of law. Judicial inquiry is limited.

In the case of Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, p. 133, the court, in discussing this question, commented as follows:

> "But there was much evidence of other facts from which Tisi's knowledge of the character of the leaflets might reasonably have been inferred. We do not discuss the evidence, because the correctness of the judgment of the lower court is not to be determined by inquiring whether the conclusion drawn by the Secretary of Labor from the evidence was correct, or by deciding whether the evidence was such that, if introduced in a court of law, it would be held legally sufficient to prove the fact found."

Later, in the case of Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, p. 106, the court confirmed these expressions as follows:

> "But a want of due process is not established by showing merely that the decision is erroneous, Chin Yow v. United States, supra, 13 (52 L. ed. 370, 28

Sup. Ct. Rep. 201), or that incompetent evidence was received and considered. See Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, 133, 68 L. ed. 590, 591, 44 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260. Upon a collateral review in habeas corpus proceedings, it is sufficient that there was some evidence from which the conclusion of the administrative tribunal could be deduced and that it committed no error so flagrant as to convince a court of the essential unfairness of the trial. Tisi v. Tod, supra.

"The ultimate question presented by this record, therefore, is one of fact, whether the warrant of deportation was supported by any evidence that the alien when he entered the United States advocated opposition to all organized government or the overthrow of the United States government by force and violence, within the meaning of the statute."

And again at page 110, as follows:

"But we find it unnecessary to consider this question, as we think that the record taken as a whole and without the aid of any statutory presumption presents some evidence supporting the deportation order."

This court, also, in determining the type of evidence necessary to support a finding of the National Labor Relations Board under a similar procedure, stated as follows:

"Substantial evidence is more than a scintilla and must do more than create a suspicion of the existence of the fact to be established. 'It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.' Consolidated Edison Co. v. National Labor Relations Bd., 305 U. S. 197, ante, 126, 59 S. Ct. 206, supra, and it must be enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the con> clusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for the jury." (National Labor Relations Board v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., Inc., 306 U. S. 292, p. 300.)

We do not understand that evidence "enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the conclusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for the jury" is any different from the "any evidence" rule as established in Vajtauer v. Comr. of Immigration, supra.

The hearing was conducted before an executive agency empowered by Congress to execute its sovereign power of deportation of aliens. If such power could be judicially restricted, the authority vested in Congress by the people would be a supine power.

In the instant case the District Court, in commenting on the evidence, came to the following conclusion:

> "I conclude that the record of the second proceeding inquiring into the deportability of petitioner, Harry Bridges, establishes that the order of deportation against petitioner was made after a fair hearing on substantial evidence, and no error of law occurred which operated to deprive petitioner of due process of law or any other of his constitutional rights." (Ex parte Bridges, 49 Fed. Supp. 292, p. 307.)

Judge Stephens in a concurring opinion in the Circuit Court of Appeals, Bridges v. Wixon, 144 Fed. Rep. (2nd) 927, p. 938, stated:

> "In no case have I given the evidence more careful attention than in this one. However, such attention has not left in my mind the pleasurable satis> faction that, barring a very slight possibility of error, the truth has been revealed. Such satisfaction is beside the point here. The simple question this court must answer is: Is there some evidence to sustain the charges? There is."

Again, on petition for rehearing, at page 944, Judge Stephens said:

> "The petition for rehearing stresses the point that the majority and concurring opinions in this case state that there is 'evidence' and that there is 'some evidence' which supports the order of deportation. The implication is that these terms were used as including a mere scintilla of evidence.
> "Federal Courts do not regard a mere scintilla of evidence as effective for any purpose, and it is my understanding that in using the word 'evidence' the idea of the mere scintilla was never considered."

We believe the testimony of Lundeberg that petitioner said, "You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist Party if you join," (R. 7267) and "You don't have to be afraid because I am one too." (R. 7268)—"I am a member of the Communist Party," (R. 7339) is certainly some evidence coming within the rule as laid down by this court even though he might have made prior conflicting statements, and that no court would ever be justified in removing a case from the jury under similar circumstances. Judge Sears, the Presiding Inspector, who saw and heard the witnesses, found other corroborating evidence. His findings were approved by the Attorney General as well as by the District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals. In the case of Baumgartner v. United States of America, 88 L. ed. 1155, p. 1158, this court held:

> "That the concurrent findings of two lower courts are persuasive proof in support of their judgments is a rule of wisdom in judicial administration. In reaffirming its importance we mean to pay more than lip service."

Some question has been raised as to the propriety of the procedure adopted by the trial examiner in permitting testimony as to a verbal statement made to the F. B. I. by the witness O'Neil which was later repudiated by him at the hearing. The rule applicable was stated in United States Ex rel Bilokumsky vs. Tod, 263 U. S. 149 p. 157, as follows:

> "* * * Moreover, a hearing granted does not cease to be fair merely because rules of evidence and of procedure applicable in judicial proceedings have not been strictly followed by the executive, or because some evidence has been improperly rejected or received."

It has also been contended that the "weighty proof" and "solidity of proof" doctrine laid down in denaturalization cases of Baumgartner v. United [illegible], supra, and Schneiderman v. United States, 320 [illegible] 118, are equally applicable to deportation proceedings. Upon analysis the distinction is clear. A denaturalization proceeding is judicial in character and has for its purpose the deprivation of citizenship once acquired. Judicial standards are applied in the determination of whether the requirement of "weighty proof" or "solid proof which leaves no troubling doubt" has been met. Such a proceeding presents a question solely for judicial determination. On the other hand, a deportation proceeding is administrative in character (see Vajtauer v. Comr. of Immigration, supra). Its purpose is the expulsion of an alien whose further presence is deemed hurtful to the best interests of the nation. It is a procedural process under the sovereign power lodged solely in Congress as provided in Article 1 of Section 8 of the Constitution for the security and welfare of the nation. Such a proceeding is conducted by an executive agency, and the final determination of whether the alien shall be deported is delegated to the Attorney General by statute. His decision is an administrative act; consequently, judicial review is circumscribed and cannot be substituted for his judgment if the court finds that some evidence was presented justifying the conclusion reached.

III

DEPORTATION IN THE INSTANT CASE DOES NOT VIOLATE ANY RIGHTS UNDER THE FIRST AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION

The people, through Congress, may prescribe rules under which aliens may enter, visit, or reside in this country. Aliens can acquire no constitutional right to remain here and may be deported summarily if Congress so chooses.

In Bugajewitz v. Adams, supra, at page 591, the court stated that "it is thoroughly established that Congress has power to order the deportation of aliens whose presence in the country it deems hurtful."

This court has denied the right of naturalization to an alien because of stated beliefs for which, by the protection of the First Amendment, he could not be punished. United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U. S. 644. Certainly the sovereign power of deportation is not the subject of further restraint.

In Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 228, p. 231, the Court said:

> "As against the validity of this section, it was contended that, whatever might be true as to the power of the United States to exclude aliens, yet there was no power to banish such aliens who had been permitted to become residents, and, that, if such power did exist, it was in the nature of a punishment, and could only be lawfully exercised after a judicial trial.
> "But this court held, in the case of Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698 (37:905), that the right to exclude or to expel aliens, or any class of aliens, absolutely or upon certain conditions, in war or in peace, is an inherent and inalienable right of every sovereign and independent nation; that the power of Congress to expel, like the power to exclude, aliens or any class of aliens from the country may be exercised entirely through executive officers; and that the said 6th section of the act of May 5, 1892, was constitutional and valid."

Thus the right to expel aliens in war and in peace was recognized as an inherent and inalienable right of every sovereign and independent nation.

This nation is now engaged in a struggle for the very survival of its sovereignty, the maintenance of its security; and the preservation of its free institutions. To protect its national life, it moved thousands of aliens and American citizens from the Pacific Coast following Pearl Harbor and herded them into virtual prison compounds. Such action was under its broad war powers as provided in Article 1, Section 8, of the Constitution. The power of Congress to expel aliens under the same article and section of the Constitution is not only applicable in war but in peace as well. It is empowered at all times, for the security and independence of the nation, to exercise its plenary power of deportation. This right, which is in the public interest, is paramount to any individual right reserved under the First Amendment, and utterances, beliefs, associations, or allowable thoughts, which might otherwise be permitted under that amendment, do not extend to the protection of an alien against the orderly termination of his status for whatever reasons Congress may deem necessary or desirable in the public interest. We have found no decision in which the court has even suggested limitations upon the plenary power of Congress to determine the grounds upon which an alien may be expelled.

In the instant case the hearing examiner, under the evidence adduced, found that the petitioner should be deported. The warrant of arrest which instituted the proceedings alleged that:

> "* * * after entering the United States he has been a member of or affiliated with an organization, association, society, or group that believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States; and that after entering the United States he has been a member of or affiliated with an organization, association, society, or group that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue or display, written or printed matter advising, advocating, or teaching the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States." Ex Parte Bridges, 49 Fed. Supp. 292-297.

These charges were sustained by the Attorney General in his findings and conclusions. They are set forth in full in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, 144 Federal Reporter (2nd) 927 at page 934. The District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals found that these conclusions were sustained by the evidence under the measure of proof doctrine established by this court. Surely such conclusions warrant the deportation order in the public interest.

The constitutional power "to establish an uniform rule of naturalization" carries with it the attendant responsibilities to see that it is exercised in the public interest. Since the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, this country has been a haven of refuge for desirable aliens who were interested in fitting themselves to the pattern of government established by our forefathers under that Constitution. The power to permit their entry, no doubt, was predicated on the theory that they would contribute to the well being of our nation and become useful citizens. This has proven true in most instances. Certainly, the permission to enter our country was never extended with the thought that aliens might later become members of or affiliated with any subversive organization which believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States, yet the Attorney General has found, among other things, that after his entry the petitioner has been a member of the Communist Party, has been affiliated with the Maritime Workers Industrial Union, and that it was a part of the Communist Party, dominated and controlled by it. He further found, among other things, 'that the Communist Party of the U. S. A., from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, is an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States." It was proven that the petitioner had filed three declarations of intention to become a citizen (Gov. Exs. 277, R. 6070-6074; 279, R. 6089; 296, R. 7735), but permitted the first two to lapse (R. 508), and the last, which was filed on March 28th, 1939, apparently is still pending. Such facts would not indicate that he intended to become a useful citizen. Such facts would also justify Congress in the exercise of its power of deportation to adopt the statute in question in the public interest, especially in view of the fact that at the time the amendment was adopted we were anticipating a war involving our national security, and our national sovereignty. Surely, it was in the purview of the power of Congress to see to it that the public welfare be protected.

By the processes prescribed by Congress, Harry Bridges has been adjudicated a person inimical to the welfare of this country. The alleged fact that he is a powerful leader in any particular movement is beside the point and entitles him to no more consideration than the humblest alien in all the land.

We submit that in view of the fact that Congress, in the interests of public security, is empowered to deport aliens, it has the sole right to determine when and the circumstances under which such powers shall be exercised for the public welfare, and that such power has been exercised properly in the instant case.

CONCLUSION

The order of the Circuit Court of Appeals denying Bridges' petition for a writ of habeas corpus should be affirmed, and the petitioner should be remanded into the custody of the respondent.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

No. 788.—October Term, 1944.

Harry Bridges, Petitioner,
vs.
I. F. Wixon, as District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

[June 18, 1945.]

Mr. Justice Douglas delivered the opinion of the Court.

Harry Bridges is an alien who entered this country from Australia in 1920. In 1938 deportation proceedings were instituted against him on the ground that he both had been and then was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States and that that party advised and taught the overthrow by force of the government of the United States and caused printed matter to be circulated which advocated that course. Under the statute then in force past membership or past affiliation was insufficient for deportation, present membership or present affiliation being required. Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22. A hearing was had. The examiner, Hon. James M. Landis, concluded that the evidence established neither that Harry Bridges "is a member of nor affiliated with" the Communist Party of the United States. The Secretary of Labor sustained the examiner and dismissed the proceedings. That was in January 1940. By the Act of June 28, 1940, Congress amended the statute so as to provide for deportation of any alien who was "at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter" a member of or affiliated with an organization of the character attributed to the Communist Party in the first proceeding.[1] A second deportation pro-

[1] The statute as amended (40 Stat. 1012, 41 Stat. 1008, 54 Stat. 673, 8 U. S. C. § 137) provides in part as follows:

"That any alien who, at any time, shall be or shall have been a member of any one of the following classes shall be excluded from admission into the United States:

"(c) Aliens . . . who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that believes in, advises, advo-

ceeding was instituted against Harry Bridges under the amended statute on the ground that he had been a member of or affiliated with that organization.[2] Another hearing was had. The inspector designated to conduct the hearings and make a report, Hon. Charles B. Sears, found that the Communist Party of the United States was an organization of the character described in the statute, that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Communist Party and was an organization of the same character, and that after entering this country Harry Bridges had been affiliated with both organizations and had been a member of the Communist party. He recommended deportation. The case was heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals[3] which found that Harry Bridges had not been a member of or affiliated with either of cates, or teaches: (1) the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States . . . .

"(e) Aliens who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published, or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue, or display, any written or printed matter of the character described in subdivision (d) [advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States].

"For the purpose of this section: (1) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to be used for the advising, advocacy, or teaching of any doctrine above enumerated shall constitute the advising, advocacy, or teaching of such doctrine; and (2) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to any organization, association, society, or group, of the character above described shall constitute affiliation therewith; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken as an exclusive definition of advising, advocacy, teaching, or affiliation.

"Sec. 2. Any alien who was at the time of entering the United States, or has been at any time thereafter, a member of any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this Act, shall, upon the warrant of the Attorney General, be taken into custody and deported in the manner provided in the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to the classes of aliens mentioned in this Act, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States."

The Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 is found is found in 39 Stat. 874.

[2] Since June 14, 1940 the immigration laws have been administered by the Attorney General. Reorganization Plan No. V, effective June 14, 1940. 54 Stat. 230, 1238, 5 U. S. C. fol. 133t, 5 U. S. C. 133v.

[3] The Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service provide that the alien shall be accorded a hearing before an immigrant inspector to determine whether he is subject to deportation on the charges stated in the warrant of arrest, at which hearing the alien is entitled to representation by counsel and to offer evidence in his behalf. As soon as practicable after the hearing has been concluded, the inspector is required to prepare a memorandum setting forth a summary of the evidence adduced at the hearing, his proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a proposed order, which are to those organizations at any time after he entered this country. The Attorney General reviewed the decision of the Board and rendered an opinion in which he made findings in accordance with those proposed by the inspector and ordered Harry Bridges to be deported. A warrant of deportation was issued. Harry Bridges surrendered himself to the custody of respondent and challenged the legality of his detention by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California. That court denied the petition and remanded petitioner to the custody of respondent. 49 F. Supp. 292. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed by a divided vote. 144 F. 2d 927, 944. The case is here on a petition for a writ of certiorari which we granted because of the serious character of the questions which are presented.

As we have said, Harry Bridges came here from Australia in 1920. He has not returned to Australia since that time. He was a longshoreman. In 1933 he became active in trade union work on the water front in San Francisco. The Attorney General found that he had "done much to improve the conditions that existed among the longshoremen". He reorganized and headed up the International Longshoremen's Association, an American Federation of Labor union. He led the maritime workers' strike on the Pacific Coast in 1934. He was president of the local International Longshoremen's Association from 1934 to 1936 and was Pacific Coast president in 1936. In 1937 his union broke with the American Federation of Labor, changed its name to International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, and became affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. Bridges was elected Pacific Coast District President of that union and has held the office ever since. He also holds several important offices in the C. I. O.

The two grounds on which the deportation order rests—that Harry Bridges at one time had been both "affiliated" with the be furnished to the alien or his counsel, who may file exceptions thereto and submit a brief, 8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.6, 150.7. The case is then heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals, a body authorized to perform the functions of the Attorney General in relation to deportation, but responsible solely to him. 8 C. F. R., 1940 Supp., 90.2-90.3. If exceptions have been filed, oral argument before the Board is permitted. Ibid., 90.5. Where a member of the Board dissents, where the Board certifies that a question of difficulty is involved, or in any case in which the Attorney General directs, the Board must refer the case to the Attorney General for review. If the Attorney General reverses the decision of the Board, the Attorney General must state in writing his conclusions and the reasons for his decision. Ibid. 90.12.

Communist party and a member of it—present different questions with which we deal separately.

Affiliation. The statute defines affiliation as follows:

"For the purpose of this section: (1) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to be used for the advising, advocacy, or teaching of any doctrine above enumerated shall constitute the advising, advocacy, or teaching of such doctrine; and (2) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to any organization, association, society, or group of the character above described shall constitute affiliation therewith; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken as an exclusive definition of advising, advocacy, teaching, or affiliation." 41 Stat. 1009, 8 U. S. C. § 137f.

The doctrine referred to is the overthrow of the government by force or violence.[4] The organizations or groups referred to are those which advise and teach that doctrine or which write, circulate, display and the like or have in their possession for such purpose any written or printed matter of that character.

In ruling on the question whether an alien had been "affiliated" with the Communist party and therefore could be deported, the court in United States v. Reimer, 79 F. 2d 315, 317, said that such an affiliation was not proved "unless the alien is shown to have so conducted himself that he has brought about a status of mutual recognition that he may be relied on to co-operate with the Communist Party on a fairly permanent basis. He must be more than merely in sympathy with its aims or even willing to aid it in a casual intermittent way. Affiliation includes an element of dependability upon which the organization can rely which, though not equivalent to membership duty, does rest upon a course of conduct that could not be abruptly ended without giving at least reasonable cause for the charge of a breach of good faith." The same idea was expressed by Dean Landis in the first Bridges report. After stating that "affiliation" implies a "stronger bond" than "association", he went on to say: "In the corporate field its use embraces not the casual affinity of an occasional similarity of objective, but ties and connections that, though less than that complete control which parent possesses over subsidiary, are nevertheless sufficient to create a continuing relationship that embraces both units within the concept of a system. In the field of eleemosynary and political organization the same basic idea prevails." And he concluded: "Persons engaged in bitter industrial struggles tend to seek help and assistance from every available source. But the intermittent solicitation and acceptance of such help must be shown to have ripened into those bonds of mutual cooperation and alliance that entail continuing reciprocal duties and responsibilities before they can be deemed to come within the statutory requirement of affiliation. • • • To expand that statutory definition to embrace within its terms ad hoc cooperation on objectives whose pursuit is clearly allowable under our constitutional system, or friendly associations that have not been shown to have resulted in the employment of illegal means, is warranted neither by reason nor by law."

The legislative history throws little light on the meaning of "affiliation" as used in the statute. It imports, however, less than membership but more than sympathy. By the terms of the statute it includes those who contribute money or anything of value to an organization which believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches the overthrow of our government by force or violence. That example throws light on the meaning of the term "affiliation". He who renders financial assistance to any organization may generally be said to approve of its objectives or aims. So Congress declared in the case of an alien who contributed to the treasury of an organization whose aim was to overthrow the government by force and violence. But he who cooperates with such an organization only in its wholly lawful activities cannot by that fact be said as a matter of law to be "affiliated" with it. Nor is it conclusive that the cooperation was more than intermittent and showed a rather consistent course of conduct. Common sense indicates that the term "affiliation" in this setting should be construed more narrowly. Individuals, like nations, may cooperate in a common cause over a period of months or years though their ultimate aims do not coincide. Alliances for limited objectives are well known. Certainly those who joined forces with Russia to defeat the Nazis may not be said to have made an alliance to spread the cause of Communism. An individual who makes contributions to feed hungry men does not become "affiliated" with the Communist cause because those men are Communists. A different result is not necessarily indicated if aid is given to or received from a proscribed organization in order to win a legitimate objective in a domestic controversy. Whether intermittent or repeated the act or acts tending to prove "affiliation" must be of that quality which indicates an adherence to or a furtherance of the purposes or objectives of the proscribed organization as distinguished from mere cooperation with it in lawful activities. The act or acts must evidence a working alliance to bring the program to fruition.

We are satisfied that the term "affiliation" was not so construed either by Judge Sears or by the Attorney General. The reports made in this case contain no precise formulation of the standard which was employed. But the way in which the term "affiliation" was used and applied convinces us that it was given a looser and more expansive meaning than the statute permits. Judge Sears in his report stated that "Affiliation is clearly a word of broader content than membership, and of narrower content than sympathy. Generally, there will be some continuity of relationship to bring the word into application." But he concluded that that was not necessarily so in view of the statutory definition. And he added: "Affiliation may doubtless be shown circumstantially. Assisting in the enterprises of an organization, securing members for it, taking part in meetings organized and directed by or on behalf of the organization, would all tend to show affiliation. The weight to be given to such evidence is, of course, determined by the trier of the fact." That view was apparently shared by the Attorney General. But the broad sweep which was given the term in its application to the facts of this case is illustrated by the following excerpt from the Attorney General's report:

> "'Judge Sears summarizes Bridges' attitude towards the Communist Party and its policies by saying that the 'isolated instances,' while not evidence to establish membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party, nevertheless show a sympathetic or cooperative attitude on his part to the Party, and form 'a pattern which is more consistent with the conclusion that the alien followed this course of conduct as an affiliate of the Communist Party, rather than as a matter of chance coincidence.' This conclusion, said Judge Sears, was strengthened by his consistently favoring nondiscrimination against union men because of Communist membership; and by his excoriating 'red baiters,' as he called those who took an opposite view, which 'amounted to cooperation with the Communist Party in carrying out its program of penetration and boring from within'."

But when we turn to the facts of this case we have little more than a course of conduct which reveals cooperation with Communist groups for the attainment of wholly lawful objectives.

The associations which Harry Bridges had with various Communist groups seem to indicate no more than cooperative measures to attain objectives which were wholly legitimate. The link by which it is sought to tie him to subversive activities is an exceedingly tenuous one, if it may be said to exist at all. The Trade Union Unity League was found to be a Communist organization. It chartered the Marine Workers' Industrial Union in 1930, which continued until 1935 and was found to be a proscribed organization. That union launched the Waterfront Worker, a mimeographed sheet, in 1932. The Attorney General sustained Judge Sears' finding that Bridges' sponsored it and was responsible for its publication shortly after it first appeared in 1932 and down to its abandonment in 1936. The paper acknowledged the assistance of the MWIU prior to September 15, 1933. The question when Bridges took over the paper was closely contested, the Board of Immigration Appeals finding that Bridges became connected with it about September 15, 1933, after the MWIU had abandoned it. The finding of Judge Sears, approved by the Attorney General, that the paper was an instrument of the MWIU and the Communist Party from December 1932 to its abandonment in 1936 and that it was under the domination and control of those organizations during that period rested primarily on the following grounds: "(1) The acknowledged cooperation with the M.W.I.U., in the early issues of the paper and subsequent favorable treatment of the M.W.I.U., T.U.U.L., and other Communist-sponsored organizations during the paper's entire existence, (2) Consistent attacks upon the so-called 'reactionary' leaders of the A F. of L. (3) Support of the Communist candidates for political office. (4) Advice to read Communist literature. (5) The use of addresses of Communists or Communist-affiliated organizations." But when the evidence underlying these findings is examined it is found to be devoid of any showing that the Waterfront Worker advocated overthrow of the government by force. It was a militant trade union journal. It aired the grievances of the longshoreman. It discussed national affairs affecting the interests of working men. It declared against war. But we have found no evidence whatsoever which suggests that it advocated the overthrow of the government by force. Nor is their any finding that Bridges took over this project with the view of doing more than advancing the lawful cause of unionism. The advice to support for office certain candidates said to be Communists was based entirely on the platform on which they ran—cash relief; abolition of vagrancy laws; no evictions; gas, water and electricity for the unemployed; and unemployment relief. The advice to read Communist literature was not general; it was specifically addressed to the comparative merits of those publications and other papers on the truthfulness of labor news. The use of addresses of Communist organizations, especially stressed by the Attorney General, was said by Judge Sears to demonstrate "a close cooperation with the Communists and Communist Organizations." But close cooperation is not sufficient to establish an "affiliation" within the meaning of the statute. It must evidence a working alliance to bring the proscribed program to fruition.

It must be remembered that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was not a sham or pretense. It was a genuine union. It was found to have, and we assume it did have, the illegitimate objective of overthrowing the government by force. But it also had the objective of improving the lot of its members in the normal trade union sense. One who cooperated with it in promoting its legitimate objectives certainly could not by that fact alone be said to sponsor or approve of its general or unlawful objectives. But unless he also joined in that overall program, he would not be "affiliated" with the Communist cause in the sense in which the statute uses the term.

Whether one could be a member of that union without becoming "affiliated" with the Communist party within the meaning of the statute, we need not decide. For Harry Bridges was never a member of it. To say that his cooperation with it made him in turn "affiliated" with the Communist party is to impute to him belief in and adherence to its general or unlawful objectives. In that connection, it must be remembered that although deportation technically is not criminal punishment (Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 242; Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591; Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, 39), it may nevertheless visit as great a hardship as the deprivation of the right to pursue a vocation or a calling. Cf. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333. As stated by Mr. Justice Brandeis speaking for the Court in Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 284, deportation may result in the loss "of all that makes life worth living".

We cannot assume that Congress meant to employ the term "affiliation" in a broad, fluid sense which would visit such hardship on an alien for slight or insubstantial reasons. It is clear that Congress desired to have the country rid of those aliens who embraced the political faith of force and violence. But we cannot believe that Congress intended to cast so wide a net as to reach those whose ideas and program, though coinciding with the legitimate aims of such groups, nevertheless fell far short of overthrowing the government by force and violence. Freedom of speech and of press is accorded aliens residing in this country. Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252. So far as this record shows the literature published by Harry Bridges, the utterances made by him were entitled to that protection. They revealed a militant advocacy of the cause of trade unionism. But they did not teach or advocate or advise the subversive conduct condemned by the statute.

Inference must be piled on inference to impute belief in Harry Bridges of the revolutionary aims of the groups whose aid and assistance he employed in his endeavor to improve the lot of the workingmen on the water front. That he enlisted such aid is not denied. He justified that course on the grounds of expediency—to get such help as he could to aid the cause of his union.[5] But there is evidence that he opposed the Communist tactics of fomenting strikes; that he believed in the policy of arbitration and direct negotiation to settle labor disputes, with the strike reserved only as a last resort. As Dean Landis stated in the first report:

"Bridges' own statement of his political beliefs and disbeliefs is important. It was given not only without reserve but vigor-

[5] As respects printing releases of the Communist party in a union paper he testified:

"As I understand, the question was my position in regard to printing official Communist releases. I still say it might depend. For example, if—there was a lot of trouble up there at that time, a lot of action and tieups. I believe that if the Communist party happened to send in a statement saying that they would do everything they could to support the particular dispute at that time in behalf of the Union position, my position would be that I wouldn't have any great objection to seeing that carried in the Union paper."

As respects voting for a political candidate known to be a Communist he testified:

"The question of support only goes to whether he is a unionist or not. If he is a bad unionist, we don't care what he is, we are against him; if he is a good one, we don't care what he is, we are for him. His first allegiance must be for the union."

ously as dogma and faiths of which the man was proud and which represented in his mind the aims of his existence. It was a fighting apologia that refused to temper itself to the winds of caution. It was an avowal of sympathy with many of the objectives that the Communist Party at times has embraced, an expression of disbelief that the methods they wished to employ were as revolutionary as they generally seem, but it was unequivocal in its distrust of tactics other than those that are generally included within the concept of democratic methods. That Bridges' aims are energetically radical may be admitted, but the proof fails to establish that the methods he seeks to employ to realize them are other than those that the framework of democratic and constitutional government permits."

That observation is equally pertinent to the record before us. We cannot construe "affiliation" as used in the statute to bring such conduct and attitudes within its reach. Whether the evidence would justify a finding of "affiliation" in the strict sense in which the statute uses the term is not for us to say. An act innocent on its face may be done with an evil purpose. But where the fate of a human being is at stake the presence of the evil purpose may not be left to conjecture. In these habeas corpus proceedings we do not review the evidence beyond ascertaining that there is some evidence to support the deportation order. Vajtauer v. Commissioner, 273 U. S. 103, 106. But detention under an invalid order of deportation is established where an alien is ordered deported for reasons not specified by Congress. Mahler v. Eby, supra. That is the case here. For our review of the record convinces us that the finding of "affiliation" was based on too loose a meaning of the term.

Membership. The evidence of "affiliation" was used not only to support the finding that Harry Bridges had been "affiliated" with the Communist party but also to corroborate the finding that at one time he had been a member of that organization. We may assume that such evidence, though falling short of the requirements of "affiliation", might be admissible for the latter purpose. But the difficulty is that the finding of membership like the finding of affiliation has an infirmity which may be challenged in this attack on the legality of Harry Bridges' detention under the deportation order.

Rule 150.1(c) of the Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (8 C. F. R., 1941 Supp., 150.1(c)) provides: "All statements secured from the alien or any other person during the investigation, which are to be used as evidence, shall be taken down in writing; and the investigating officer shall ask the person interrogated to sign the statement. Whenever such a recorded statement is to be obtained from any person, the investigating officer shall identify himself to such person and the interrogation of that person shall be under oath or affirmation. Whenever a recorded statement is to be obtained from a person under investigation, he shall be warned that any statement made by him may be used as evidence in any subsequent proceeding." And Rule 150.6(i) provides in part: "A recorded statement made by the alien (other than a General Information Form) or by any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statements made during the investigation."

O'Neil was a government witness. He was intimate with Harry Bridges. During the course of the examination O'Neil was asked about statements which he allegedly had made to investigating officers some months earlier. These statements were not signed by O'Neil. They were not made by interrogation under oath. And it was not shown that O'Neil was asked to swear and sign or that being asked, he refused. They were read into the record and verified by the stenographer who took them down. And an officer testified that later O'Neil had repeated the statements to him and to other witnesses. These statements were that O'Neil joined the Communist party in December, 1936; that he walked into Bridges' office one day in 1937 and saw Bridges pasting assessment stamps in a Communist party book; and that Bridges reminded O'Neil that he had not been attending party meetings. O'Neil admitted making statements to the investigating officers but denied making those particular statements.

Judge Sears admitted the statements not for purposes of impeachment but as substantive evidence. The Board of Immigration Appeals and the Attorney General both conceded that the statements were admitted in violation of Rules 150.1(c) and 150.6(i).[6] The Board held that it was error to consider the state-

[6] We accept that construction of the Rules. For Rule 150.6(i) when read in conjunction with Rule 150.1(c) fairly means (1) that an investigating officer in obtaining a "recorded statement" must obtain the statement by interrogation under oath and seek to obtain it over the signature of the maker, and (2) that only such a "recorded statement", so safeguarded, may ments as affirmative, probative evidence. The Attorney General ruled: "Had the alien raised the question at the time of the hearing, compliance with the Departmental Regulations would have been obligatory and a deliberate rejection of a request to exclude the testimony would have rendered appropriate the objections now raised by the Board. No objection having been raised by the alien throughout the hearing, however, he waived the right to object on the technical ground that the statement was not taken in accordance with the rules." One difficulty with that position is that Bridges did protest before Judge Sears over the use of the statement. He maintained that they were erroneously received and were without probative value though he did not rest his objection on the regulations. But there is a more fundamental difficulty. The original deciding body is not the inspector who hears the case. He merely submits a memorandum setting forth the evidence adduced at the hearing, his proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a proposed order.[7] The case then is heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals which is authorized to perform the functions of the Attorney General in relation to deportation. 8 C. F. R., 1940 Supp., §§90.2, 90.3. And the case may then go to the Attorney General for decision. If the objection to evidence on the ground that it violates the governing regulations is made before the agency entrusted with the duty of deciding whether a case for deportation has been established, it is made soon enough. Objection to the use of these statements as probative evidence was made before both the Board and the Attorney General. It was specifically objected that the statements did not qualify under the regulations.

be used as evidence when the maker of the statement gives contradictory testimony on the stand. It is true that Rule 150.6(i) also provides that "An affidavit of an inspector as to the statements made by the alien or any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence, otherwise than in support of the testimony of the inspector, only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statement and the inspector is unavailable to testify in person." If we assume that that provision creates an exception from the general rule in case of the inspector who is unavailable to testify in person, we can hardly infer that the exception was designed to swallow the general rule. The deep-rooted policy of the law towards hearsay evidence cautions against such a loose reading of these fundamental procedural safeguards.

The rules are designed to protect the interests of the alien and to afford him due process of law. It is the action of the deciding body, not the recommendation of the inspector, which determines whether the alien will be deported. The rules afford protection at that crucial stage of the proceedings or not at all. The person to whom the power to deport has been entrusted is the Attorney General or such agency as he designates. 8 U. S. C. § 155. He is an original trier of fact on the whole record. It is his decision to deport an alien that Congress has made "final". 8 U. S. C. § 155. Accordingly, it is no answer to say that the rules may be disregarded because they were not called to the attention of the inspector.

It was assumed in Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, 155, that "one under investigation with a view to deportation is legally entitled to insist upon the observance of rules promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to law." We adhere to that principle. For these rules are designed as safeguards against essentially unfair procedures. The importance of this particular rule may not be gainsaid. A written statement at the earlier interviews under oath and signed by O'Neil would have afforded protection against mistakes in hearing, mistakes in memory, mistakes in transcription. Statements made under those conditions would have an important safeguard—the fear of prosecution for perjury. Moreover, if O'Neil had been asked to swear to and sign the statements and had refused to do so, the fact of his refusal would have weight in evaluating the truth of the statements.

The statements which O'Neil allegedly made were hearsay. We may assume they would be admissible for purposes of impeachment. But they certainly would not be admissible in any criminal case as substantive evidence. Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 309, United States v. Block, 88 F. 2d 618, 620. So to hold would allow men to be convicted on unsworn testimony of witnesses[8]—a practice which runs counter to the notions of fairness on which our legal system is founded.[9] There has been some-

[8] We have here quite a different case from that where a prior statement of an alien, contradictory of testimony made at the hearing, is admitted. See Chan Wong v. Nagle, 17 F. 2d 987; Ex parte Kishimoto, 32 F. 2d 991; 4 Wigmore, Evidence (3rd ed.) § 1048.

[9] Dean Wigmore in his third edition of Evidence (1940) § 1018(b) took the other position. But he added, "The contrary view, however, is the orthodox one. It is universally maintained by the Courts that Prior Self-Contradictions are not to be treated as having any substantive or independent testimonial value."

relaxation of the rule in alien exclusion cases. See United States v. Corsi; 65 F. 2d 564. But we are dealing here with deportation of aliens whose roots may have become, as they are in the present case, deeply fixed in this land. It is true that the courts have been liberal in relaxing the ordinary rules of evidence in administrative hearings. Yet as was aptly stated in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 227 U. S. 88, 93, "But the more liberal the practice in admitting testimony, the more imperative the obligation to preserve the essential rules of evidence by which rights are asserted or defended."

Here the liberty of an individual is at stake. Highly incriminating statements are used against him—statements which were unsworn and which under the governing regulations are inadmissible. We are dealing here with procedural requirements prescribed for the protection of the alien. Though deportation is not technically a criminal proceeding, it visits a great hardship on the individual and deprives him of the right to stay and live and work in this land of freedom. That deportation is a penalty—at times a most serious one—cannot be doubted. Meticulous care must be exercised lest the procedure by which he is deprived of that liberty not meet the essential standards of fairness.

On the record before us it is clear that the use of O'Neil's ex parte statements was highly prejudicial. Those unsworn statements of O'Neil and the testimony of one Lundeberg were accepted by the Attorney General as showing that Bridges was a member of the Communist party. There was other testimony but it was so "untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable" as to be rejected by the Attorney General. If the finding as to Lundeberg's testimony was treated by the Attorney General independently of his finding as to O'Neil's, we would have a different case. Then we would have to determine whether the testimony of Lundeberg alone was sufficient to sustain the order. But the Attorney General, unlike Judge Sears, did not separate the testimony of Lundeberg and that of O'Neil for the purpose of his finding as to membership. He lumped them together and found that between them their total weight was sufficient to tip the scales against Harry Bridges. He ruled that if the unsworn statements of O'Neil and the testimony of Lundeberg were believed "the doubt is decided."[10] It is thus apparent not only that the unsworn statements of O'Neil weighed heavily in the scales but also that it took those unsworn statements as well as Lundeberg's testimony to resolve the doubt on this sharply contested and close question. Whether the finding would have been made on this record from the testimony of Lundeberg alone is wholly conjectural and highly speculative. Not only was Lundeberg admittedly hostile to Bridges. Not only did the Attorney General fail to rule that on the basis of Lundeberg's testimony alone Bridges had been a member of the party. But beyond that, the Board of Immigration Appeals significantly concluded that apart from O'Neil's unsworn statements the evidence of Bridges' membership was too flimsy to support a finding. It is thus idle to consider what the Attorney General might have ruled on the basis of the other evidence before him. Cf. United States v. Dunton, 291 Fed. 905, 907. The issue of membership was too close and too crucial to the case to admit of mere speculation. Since it was error to admit O'Neil's unsworn statements against Bridges, since they were so crucial to the findings of membership, and since that issue was so close, we are unable to say that the order of deportation may be sustained without them.

In these habeas corpus proceedings the alien does not prove he had an unfair hearing merely by proving the decision to be wrong (Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, 133) or by showing that incompetent evidence was admitted and considered. Vajtauer v. Commissioner, supra, p. 106. But the case is different where evidence was improperly received and where but for that evidence it is wholly speculative whether the requisite finding would have been made.

[10] The Attorney General stated, immediately prior to his analysis of the testimony of Lundeberg and O'Neil, the following: "Judge Sears examines in detail the evidence of fifteen witnesses as bearing on Bridges' membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party. Much of this evidence is rejected as being untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable. However, the evidence of two witnesses is accepted as showing that Bridges was a member of the party. If this evidence is believed—and Judge Sears believed it—the doubt is decided. The question is substantially one of credibility. The Review Board did not think the evidence credible. But it should be remembered that Judge Sears saw the witnesses on the stand, watched their demeanor and expression, and was in a far better position to judge their truthfulness than the Review Board, dealing with the cold print of the record.

"The two most important witnesses as to membership are Harry Lundeberg and James D. O'Neil."

Then there is deportation without a fair hearing which may be corrected on habeas corpus. See Vajtauer v. Commissioner, supra.

Since Harry Bridges has been ordered deported on a misconstruction of the term "affiliation" as used in the statute and by reason of an unfair hearing on the question of his membership in the Communist party, his detention under the warrant is unlawful. Accordingly, it is unnecessary for us to consider the larger constitutional questions which have been advanced in the challenge to the legality of petitioner's detention under the deportation order.

The judgment below is Reversed.

Mr. Justice JACKSON took no part in the consideration or decision of this case.

Mr. Justice MURPHY, concurring.

The record in this case will stand forever as a monument to man's intolerance of man. Seldom if ever in the history of this nation has there been such a concentrated and relentless crusade to deport an individual because he dared to exercise the freedom that belongs to him as a human being and that is guaranteed to him by the Constitution.

For more than a decade powerful economic and social forces have combined with public and private agencies to seek the deportation of Harry Bridges, who came to this country in 1920 from Australia. Emerging from the Pacific Coast maritime strike of 1934 as a recognized labor leader in that area, Bridges incurred the hatred and hostility of those whose interests coincided directly or indirectly with the "vicious and inhumane practices toward longshoremen," 144 F. 2d 927, 938, that Bridges was combatting. His personal viewpoint on certain matters also antagonized many people of more conservative leanings. Agitation for his deportation arose. Industrial and farming organizations, veterans' groups, city police departments and private undercover agents all joined in an unremitting effort to deport him on the ground that he was connected with organizations dedicated to the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence. Wiretapping, searches and seizures without warrants and other forms of invasion of the right of privacy have been widely employed in this deportation drive.

This opposition to Bridges' presence in the United States has been as persistent as it has been undaunted by temporary setbacks to its aims. The Immigration and Naturalization Service, after a thorough investigation of the original charges in 1934 and 1935, was unable to find even a "shred of evidence" warranting his deportation and the matter officially was dropped. But the campaign to banish him continued unabated. Eventually a warrant was issued by the Immigration and Naturalization Service in 1938 seeking his deportation. A clean bill of health was given him, however, after a full hearing before a special examiner, Dean Landis of the Harvard Law School. This only led to demands that the deportation laws be changed to make sure that Bridges was exiled. Thereupon a special bill was introduced and actually passed by the House of Representatives directing the Attorney General "notwithstanding any other provisions of law" forthwith to take into custody and deport Harry Bridges, "whose presence in this country the Congress deems hurtful." H. R. 9766, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess. Fortunately this bill died in a Senate committee after the Attorney General denounced it as inconsistent with the American practice and tradition of due process of law. S. Rep. No. 2031, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess., p. 9.

As a substitute for this direct legislative assault upon Bridges, Congress amended the deportation law by enacting Section 23 of the Alien Registration Act of 1940, 54 Stat. 673. This amendment set aside this Court's decision in Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, by making it clear that an alien could be deported if, at the time of entering the United States or at any time thereafter, he was a member of or affiliated with an organization advocating the forceful overthrow of the Government. It thus was no longer necessary that the alien be an affiliate or member at the time of the issuance of the warrant of arrest. In the words of the author of this amendment: "It is my joy to announce that this bill will do, in a perfectly legal and constitutional manner, what the bill specifically aimed at the deportation of Harry Bridges seeks to accomplish. This bill changes the law so that the Department of Justice should now have little trouble in deporting Harry Bridges and all others of similar ilk." 86 Cong. Rec. 9031.

This prophecy was quickly realized, to the satisfaction of the vast interests arrayed against Bridges. A warrant for his arrest and deportation under this new statutory provision was issued in 1941, followed by a hearing before another special examiner, Judge Sears. Evidence was presented by the Government on practically the same matters as in the first proceeding. This time, however, the examiner discovered sufficient grounds for recommending deportation. Although the Board of Immigration Appeals unanimously rejected this recommendation, the Attorney General, without holding a hearing or listening to argument, reversed the Board and ordered the deportation of Bridges.

It is not surprising that the background and intensity of this effort to deport one individual should result in a singular lack of due process of law. Much of the evidence presented by the Government has been described by the Attorney General as "untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable." The remaining Government evidence can scarcely be described in more generous terms. And the Court's opinion, in which I join, demonstrates that the proceeding had its validity further undermined by a misconception of the statutory term "affiliation" and by the improper use of hearsay statements.

But the Constitution has been more than a silent, anemic witness to this proceeding. It has not stood idly by while one of its subjects is being excommunicated from this nation without the slightest proof that his presence constitutes a clear and present danger to the public welfare. Nor has it remained aloof while this individual is being deported, resulting in the loss "of all that makes life worth living," Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 284, on a finding that, regardless of his personal beliefs, he was a member and an affiliate of an organization advocating the forceful overthrow of the Government. When the immutable freedoms guaranteed by the Bill of Rights have been so openly and concededly ignored, the full wrath of constitutional condemnation descends upon the action taken by the Government. And only by expressing that wrath can we give form and substance to "the great, the indispensable democratic freedoms," Thomas v. Collins, 323 U. S. 516, 530, to which this nation is dedicated.

The unconstitutionality of the statute in issue and the invalidity of the proceeding brought pursuant thereto are obvious. As construed and applied in this case, the statute calls for the deportation of Harry Bridges after a fair hearing in which "some" evidence is established that he was a member or affiliate of an organization advocating the forceful overthrow of the Government. Such a provision rests its claim to legality upon one basic assumption, an assumption that is obnoxious and intolerable when viewed in light of the supernal heritage and ideals of this nation.

This assumption underlying the statute is that the "plenary" power of Congress to deport resident aliens is unaffected by the guarantee of substantive freedoms contained in the Bill of Rights. In other words, as the Government has urged before us, the deportation power of Congress "is unaffected by considerations which in other contexts might justify the striking down of legislation as an abridgment of constitutionally guaranteed rights of free speech and association." From this premise it follows that Congress may constitutionally deport aliens for whatever reasons it may choose, limited only by the due process requirement of a fair hearing. The color of their skin, their racial background or their religious faith may conceivably be used as the basis for their banishment. An alien who merely writes or utters a statement critical of the Government, or who subscribes to an unpopular political or social philosophy, or who affiliates with a labor union, or who distributes religious handbills on the street corner, may be subjected to the legislative whim of deportation.

I am unable to believe that the Constitution sanctions that assumption or the consequences that logically and inevitably flow from its application. The power to exclude and deport aliens is one springing out of the inherent sovereignty of the United States. The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581. Since an alien obviously brings with him no constitutional rights, Congress may exclude him in the first instance for whatever reason it sees fit. Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279. The Bill of Rights is a futile authority for the alien seeking admission for the first time to these shores. But once an alien lawfully enters and resides in this country he becomes invested with the rights guaranteed by the Constitution to all people within our borders. Such rights include those protected by the First and the Fifth Amendments and by the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. None of these provisions acknowledges . . distinction between citizens and resident aliens. They extend their inalienable privileges to all "persons" and guard against any encroachment on those rights by federal or state authority. Indeed, this Court has previously and expressly recognized that Harry Bridges, the alien, possesses the right to free speech and free press and that the Constitution will defend him in the exercise of that right. Bridges v. California, 314 U. S. 252.

Since resident aliens have constitutional rights it follows that Congress may not ignore them in the exercise of its "plenary" power of deportation. As this Court said in a previous exclusion case, "But this court has never held, nor must we now be understood as holding, that administrative officers, when executing the provisions of a statute involving the liberty of persons, may disregard the fundamental principles that inhere in 'due process of law' as understood at the time of the adoption of the Constitution." The Japanese Immigrant Case, 189 U. S. 86, 100. No less may a statute on its face disregard the basic freedoms that the Constitution guarantees to resident aliens. The CHIEF JUSTICE, in his dissenting opinion in Jones v. Opelika, 316 U. S. 584, 609, has stated that "The First Amendment prohibits all laws abridging freedom of press and religion, not merely some laws or all except tax laws." By the same token, the First Amendment and other portions of the Bill of Rights make no exception in favor of deportation laws or laws enacted pursuant to a "plenary" power of the Government. Hence the very provisions of the Constitution negative the proposition that Congress, in the exercise of a "plenary" power, may override the rights of those who are numbered among the beneficiaries of the Bill of Rights.

Any other conclusion would make our constitutional safeguards transitory and discriminatory in nature. Thus the Government would be precluded from enjoining or imprisoning an alien for exercising his freedom of speech. But the Government at the same time would be free, from a constitutional standpoint, to deport him for exercising that very same freedom. The alien would be fully clothed with his constitutional rights when defending himself in a court of law, but he would be stripped of those rights when deportation officials encircle him. I cannot agree that the framers of the Constitution meant to make such an empty mockery of human freedom.

Since the basic assumption of the statute is false, the Bill of Rights must be brought to bear. And when that is done several constitutional infirmities are apparent in this legislation. See 52 Yale L. J. 108. As shown by the record in this case, Harry Bridges has done no more than exercise his personal right to free speech and association. Yet upon proof of that fact, he would be subject to deportation under the statute. The invalidity of legislation of such nature is inescapable.

First. The deportation statute completely ignores the traditional American doctrine requiring personal guilt rather than guilt by association or imputation before a penalty or punishment is inflicted.

The statute does not require that an alien, to be deportable, must personally advocate or believe in the forceful overthrow of the Government. It is enough if he is a member or an affiliate of an organization which advocates such a doctrine. And in this case the Government admits that it has neither claimed nor attempted to prove that Harry Bridges personally advocated or believed in the proscribed doctrine. There is no evidence, moreover, that he understood the Communist Party to advocate violent revolution or that he ever committed or tried to commit an overt act directed to the realization of such an aim.

The doctrine of personal guilt is one of the most fundamental principles of our jurisprudence. It partakes of the very essence of the concept of freedom and due process of law. Schneiderman v. United States, 320 U. U. 118, 154. It prevents the persecution of the innocent for the beliefs and actions of others. See Chafee, Free Speech in the United States (1941), pp. 472-475.

Yet the deportation statute on its face and in its present application flatly disregards this rule. It condemns an alien to exile for beliefs and teachings to which he may not personally subscribe and of which he may not even be aware. This fact alone is enough to invalidate the legislation. Cf. DeJonge v. Oregon, 299 U. S. 353; Herndon v. Lowry, 301 U. S. 242; Whitney v. California, 274 U. S. 357.

It is no answer that a deportation proceeding is technically non-criminal in nature and that a deportable alien is not adjudged guilty of a "crime." Those are over-subtle niceties that shed their significance when we are concerned with safeguarding the ideals of the Bill of Rights. The impact of deportation upon the life of an alien is often as great if not greater than the imposition of a criminal sentence. A deported alien may lose his family, his friends and his livelihood forever. Return to his native land may result in poverty, persecution and even death. There is thus no justifiable reason for discarding the democratic and humane tenets of our legal system and descending to the practices of despotism in dealing with deportation.

Second. The deportation statute is further invalid under the "clear and present danger" test enunciated in Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47.

It is clear that if an organization advocated and was capable of causing immediate and serious violence in order to overthrow the Government and if an alien member or affiliate personally joined in such advocacy a clear and present danger to the public welfare would be demonstrated and the Government would then have the power to deport or otherwise punish the alien. But the statute in issue makes no attempt to require such proof. It is apparently satisfied if an organization at any time since the alien became a member or affiliate advocated as a theoretical doctrine the use of force under hypothetical conditions at some indefinite future time. It is immaterial whether the organization presently advocates such an abstract doctrine or whether the alien is presently a member or an affiliate or whether he presently adheres to the organization's views. It matters not that an alien member never knew or understood the organization's illegal aim or that he may have resigned in protest upon learning of it. It appears to be enough that the organization at one time advocated the unlawful doctrine and that the alien was a member or affiliate at some time in the past, even if for no longer than one minute. 86 Cong. Rec. 9032. It is not even clear that the organization's advocacy of violent revolution and an alien's membership or affiliation must coincide in point of time. Such a statute fails to satisfy any rational or realistic test. It certainly does not pretend to require proof of a clear and present danger so as properly to negative the presumption that individual rights are supreme under the Constitution. It therefore founders in constitutional waters.

The Government frankly concedes that this case was not tried or decided below on the theory that the "clear and present danger" test had any application. Proof of Bridges' membership and affiliation with the Communist Party was shown by some of the most tenuous and unreliable evidence ever to be introduced in an administrative or legal proceeding. Proof that the Communist Party advocates the theoretical or ultimate overthrow of the Government by force was demonstrated by resort to some rather ancient party documents, certain other general Communist literature and oral corroborating testimony of Government witnesses. Not the slightest evidence was introduced to show that either Bridges or the Communist Party seriously and imminently threatens to uproot the Government by force or violence.

Deportation, with all its grave consequences, should not be sanctioned on such weak and unconvincing proof of a real and imminent threat to our national security. Congress has ample power to protect the United States from internal revolution and anarchy without abandoning the ideals of freedom and tolerance. We as a nation lose part of our greatness whenever we deport or punish those who merely exercise their freedoms in an unpopular though innocuous manner. The strength of this nation is weakened more by those who suppress the freedom of others than by those who are allowed freely to think and act as their consciences dictate.

Our concern in this case does not halt with the fate of Harry Bridges, an alien whose constitutional rights have been grossly violated. The significance of this case is far reaching. The liberties of the 3,500,000 other aliens in this nation are also at stake. Many of these aliens, like many of our forebears, were driven from their original homelands by bigoted authorities who denied the existence of freedom and tolerance. It would be a dismal prospect for them to discover that their freedom in the United States is dependent upon their conformity to the popular notions of the moment. But they need not make that discovery. The Bill of Rights belongs to them as well as to all citizens. It protects them as long as they reside within the boundaries of our land. It protects them in the exercise of the great individual rights necessary to a sound political and economic democracy. Neither injunction, fine, imprisonment nor deportation can be utilized to restrict or prevent the exercise of intellectual freedom. Only by zealously guarding the rights of the most humble, the most unorthodox and the most despised among us can freedom flourish and endure in our land.

Mr. Chief Justice STONE.

Mr. Justice ROBERTS, Mr. Justice FRANKFURTER and I think that the deportation order should be sustained and the judgment below affirmed.

This case presents no novel question. Under our Constitution and laws, Congress has its functions, the Attorney General his, and the courts theirs in regard to the deportation of aliens. Our function is a very limited one. In this case our decision turns on the application of the long settled rule that in reviewing the fact findings of administrative officers or agencies, courts are without authority to set aside their findings if they are supported by evidence. This Court has not heretofore departed from that rule in reviewing deportation orders upon collateral attack by habeas corpus. Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131; Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, 106; Costanzo v. Tillinghast, 287

U. S. 341, 343, and cases cited, and there is no occasion for its doing so now.

Congress, in the exercise of its plenary power over the deportation of aliens, has directed the deportation of any alien who, at the time of his entry into the United States or at any time thereafter, has been a member of or affiliated with "any organization, association, society, or group, that believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches . . . the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States, . . . [or] that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays . . . any written or printed matter" advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States. §§ 1 and 2 of the Act of October 16, 1918, c. 186, 40 Stat. 1012, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920, c. 251, 41 Stat. 1008-1009, and the Act of June 28, 1940, c. 439, 54 Stat. 673, 8 U. S. C. §137.

Congress has committed the conduct of deportation proceedings to an administrative officer, the Attorney General, with no provision for direct review of his action by the courts. Instead it has provided that his decision shall be "final", 8 U. S. C. § 155, as it may constitutionally do. Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 272, 275, and cases cited. Only in the exercise of their authority to issue writs of habeas corpus, may courts inquire whether the Attorney General has exceeded his statutory authority or acted contrary to law or the Constitution. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, 153; Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, supra. And when the authority to deport the alien turns on a determination of fact by the Attorney General, the courts, as we have said, are without authority to disturb his finding if it has the support of evidence of any probative value.

In this proceeding, the Attorney General, following the prescribed procedure, issued a warrant for the arrest of petitioner, charging that after his entry into the United States, he had been a member of and affiliated with organizations of the type referred to in the part of the deportation statute we have quoted. The Attorney General, as authorized by the applicable statutes and regulations, appointed the Honorable Charles B. Sears, an experienced judge formerly of the Court of Appeals of New York, to act as an inspector to hear evidence on the charges. The hearings before Judge Sears extended over a period of nearly three months, in the course of which evidence was offered by the Government and by petitioner, who was represented by counsel. The evidence is contained in more than seventy-five hundred typewritten pages of the record and in three hundred and fifty-nine exhibits. The record in this Court covers some seventy-eight hundred printed pages.

At the conclusion of the hearings, Judge Sears made his memorandum decision, in which he found that the Communist Party of the United States and the Marine Workers' Industrial Union were, at all relevant times, each an organization which believed in and advocated the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States, and that the Communist Party also wrote, circulated, distributed, printed, published and displayed printed matter advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States. Those findings are not challenged here. Judge Sears also found that petitioner was subject to deportation, and recommended that he be deported, on two separate and independent grounds: (a) that he was a member of the Communist Party of the United States, and (b) that he was affiliated with the Communist Party and with the Marine Workers' Industrial Union, which was a part of the Communist Party of the United States.

As we are of opinion that the finding of Bridges' membership in the Communist Party, standing alone, supports the deportation order, and that the finding is supported by evidence, we deem it unnecessary to consider other contentions to which the Court's opinion is principally directed. The evidence of membership is of two kinds, and may be briefly summarized. It consists of background testimony of numerous witnesses, much of it uncontradicted, which Judge Sears found to be true and which showed that Bridges had long and continuously associated with Communists and Communist Party organizations, and had exhibited a sympathetic attitude toward the Communist Party and its program. More important and decisive of the issue now before us is evidence concerning Bridges' interviews with two witnesses which, if true, as to either interview, showed that Bridges, both by his words and conduct, proved his membership in the Party.

One witness, Lundeberg, a prominent labor leader, testified that he had dined at Bridges' home in 1935; that Bridges, along with a member of the Communist Party who was also present, urged the witness to join the Communist Party; and that this took place in the presence of two members of Bridges' family and his secretary. Lundeberg testified that Bridges said on that occasion:

"You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist Party. . . . . You don't have to be afraid because I am one too. . . . I am a member of the Communist Party."

Bridges denied making these statements, although he admitted that the witness had dined with him at his home in 1935 when several members of his family were present. The others said to be present failed to testify and their absence from the witness stand is unexplained.

The other witness, O'Neil, who was the publicity director of the C. I. O., a member of the Communist Party, and an intimate of Bridges, and who shared offices with him after 1936, made a statement to members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that in 1937 he saw Bridges in his office pasting assessment stamps (receipts for payment of Communist Party dues) in a Communist Party book, which the witness was certain was petitioner's membership book in the Party, and that Bridges on several occasions reminded the witness that he had not been attending Party meetings. The accuracy of the statement, as given in evidence, was verified by the stenographer who, testifying as a witness, read the statement from her stenographic notes. Major Schofield, a Special Assistant to the Attorney General, testified that O'Neil had repeated substantially the same statement to him in the presence of two witnesses. O'Neil, who had demonstrated his hostility to the Government and his unwillingness to testify, testified, when he was called as a Government witness, that he had made two statements at the times and in the manner indicated, and that they were true statements, but he denied that he had said that Bridges was a Communist or that he had seen him pasting assessment stamps in a Communist Party book.

Judge Sears, who saw and heard the witnesses, ruled that the prior statements of O'Neil were admissible. He declared in his decision that he believed and accepted as true Lundeberg's testimony and O'Neil's prior statements; that each supported his finding that Bridges was a Party member; and that each was corroborated by Bridges' associations with Communist Party members and organizations as well as by other circumstances, appearing in the testimony, and which it is unnecessary to detail. On review the Board of Immigration Appeals proposed findings, which would have rejected the findings of Judge Sears as unsupported by evidence. The Attorney General declined to follow the recommendations of the Board, but instead adopted the findings of Judge Sears. He therefore ordered petitioner's deportation.

On this record we have only a single question to decide. Was there some evidence supporting the findings of Judge Sears and the Attorney General that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party? If there was, then, as we have said, we have no further function to perform and the judgment must be affirmed. To determine that issue we need not look beyond the testimony of Lundeberg. If his testimony is to be believed, Bridges admitted his membership in the Communist Party in circumstances which carry conviction of the truth of the fact admitted. It was for the hearing officer, Judge Sears, and the trier of fact, the Attorney General, not the courts, to say whether Lundeberg was to be believed. In deciding that issue, the administrative officials could take into account, as they did, the facts that four persons, all evidently friendly to Bridges, and who according to the testimony were present at the interview between Lundeberg and Bridges, failed to testify and that Bridges' failure to call them as witnesses stands unexplained. Interstate Circuit v. United States, 306 U. S. 208, 225-226, and cases cited.

The conclusion which the two administrative officers, charged with finding the facts, have drawn from this testimony, is not to be brushed aside by saying that the O'Neil statements are inadmissible as evidence and that the triers of fact would not or might not have accepted Lundeberg's testimony without O'Neil's. For neither Judge Sears nor the Attorney General made acceptance of the one dependent on acceptance of the other. Not a word in Judge Sears' decision or that of the Attorney General suggests that they did not regard the testimony of Lundeberg or the statements of O'Neil, each without the other, as sufficient to support their finding that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. On the contrary, each declared that he accepted Lundeberg's testimony and O'Neil's statements, and that he believed each. It can hardly be said, without more, that they did not accept the credited evidence furnished by each witness as sufficient in itself to support their finding of Party membership.

But the record does not stop there. Both Judge Sears and the Attorney General examined the Lundeberg and the O'Neil testimony separately and made separate findings as to the effect to be given to each. The findings of Judge Sears, adopted by the Attorney General, show affirmatively that both officials accepted the testimony of Lundeberg and the statements of O'Neil, as independently sufficient to support the finding that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party.

Lundeberg's testimony related wholly to his interview with Bridges in 1935. Of Lundeberg's testimony, Judge Sears said:

"The question for me to answer is whether the Government has established that Bridges admitted to Lundeberg at the time specified that he was a member of the Communist Party. If he did so admit, it is in my judgment conclusive evidence of the fact."

After examining Lundeberg's testimony, and considering his demeanor on the witness stand, and the strongly corroborative circumstance that others, who were in a position to deny his testimony, had failed to do so, Judge Sears said:

"I reach the conclusion, therefore, that the conversation did take place substantially as testified by Lundeberg and that Bridges did then and there admit to Lundeberg that he was a member of the Communist party."

Thus Judge Sears clearly stated that Lundeberg's testimony alone was sufficient to sustain a finding that petitioner was a member of the Communist Party in 1935.

At the conclusion of his like examination of O'Neil's statements, which related wholly to O'Neil's interview with Bridges in 1937, Judge Sears said:

"Having thus concluded that O'Neil made the statements attributed to him by Mrs. Segerstrom [the stenographer] and Major Schofield, I am also convinced of their truth. I do not overlook O'Neil's repudiation of the statements or Bridges' denials of the facts recited therein.

"Taking into consideration all the evidence bearing on this phase of the proceeding, I conclude that it is established that the narrations contained in O'Neil's statement to Mrs. Segerstrom and in his conversation in the presence of Major Schofield are the truth, and I find the fact that in accordance therewith that Bridges was in 1937, a member of the Communist Party."

The Attorney General, after a like separate examination of the Lundeberg and O'Neil evidence, made it perfectly clear that he accepted Judge Sears' findings as to each. He too said that the question as to each witness was a matter of his credibility, and that he believed the witness, rather than petitioner, because on this point he accepted Judge Sears' finding that they, and not Bridges, were to be believed. The conclusion is inescapable that the administrative officers, whose concurrent findings we are bound to accept if supported by evidence, did not make their finding, from the Lundeberg testimony, that Bridges was a Party member in 1935, dependent in any degree upon their finding, from the O'Neil evidence, that Bridges was a member of the Party in 1937, or vice versa. This is particularly the case since Lundeberg's and O'Neil's testimony was not cumulative as to membership in the Communist Party at a single time; each testified as to a different time, some two years apart.

It is true that the Attorney General, in an introductory paragraph in his decision, said: "However, the evidence of two witnesses is accepted as showing that Bridges was a member of the Party. If this evidence is believed—and Judge Sears believed it—the doubt is decided." But he went on to say that the question was one of credibility, and that Judge Sears, who saw the witnesses, was in a far better position to decide that question than the Review Board. He continued with a separate discussion of each witness and his testimony. He concluded as to each, without any reference to the other, that the witness should be believed rather than Bridges, and that Judge Sears' conclusion as to the credibility of each (which was not dependent upon his like conclusion as to the other) should be sustained.

The record thus conclusively shows that both Judge Sears and the Attorney General found, on the Lundeberg testimony alone, that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party in 1935. That finding is supported by the sworn testimony of Lundeberg, which was admissible in evidence and has probative force. As it supports the concurrent findings of Judge Sears and of the Attorney General that Bridges was a Party member at that time, we cannot reject that finding.

What we have said is not to be taken as conceding that O'Neil's prior statements were improperly admitted. The Court rejects them on two grounds, that they were admitted in violation of departmental regulations, and that as hearsay they were so untrustworthy as to make them inadmissible in any event. We think neither ground tenable.

We find nothing in the rules and regulations applicable to deportation cases calling for the exclusion of the testimony concerning O'Neil's prior statements.[1] Rule 150.1 provides that

[1] The opinion of the Court states that the Attorney General conceded that the evidence was admitted in violation of the Rules. The Department of Justice made no such concession in this Court. And we think that the Attorney General's decision, which is quoted by the Court, when fairly read, stated no more than that the objection based on the rules came too late; that had the statements secured during an investigation "which are to be used as evidence" shall be made under oath, and taken down in writing and signed by the person interrogated. Such a statement is denominated a "recorded statement" by the rule. The purpose of securing recorded statements is obviously to preserve evidence in a readily available form, and to insure that before a warrant of arrest is issued, there is credible evidence that the person investigated is an alien and is subject to deportation. It provides neither explicitly nor by implication that statements other than recorded statements are inadmissible.

It is true that Rule 150.6 excludes "recorded" statements unless the maker of the statement is unavailable, refuses to testify or gives inconsistent testimony. These restrictions on the admissibility of ex parte recorded statements hardly can be strained into a sweeping exclusion of all unrecorded statements, otherwise admissible in the proceeding. Indeed the rule on its face quite clearly permits an inspector to testify as to statements made by persons who are unavailable, refuse to testify or give testimony contradictory to a prior statement.[2] The statements as to which the inspector may testify are not restricted by the terms of the rule to recorded statements. Hence Judge Sears' ruling that Mrs. Segerstrom and Major Schofield could testify, under oath, that O'Neil had made statements to them in contradiction with his testimony on the stand, was not in conflict with the departmental rules.

But it is said that the evidence was in any event inadmissible. That the evidence would be inadmissible in a criminal proceeding is irrelevant here, since a deportation proceeding is not a criminal proceeding. Bugajewitz v. Adams, 228 U. S. 585, 591 and cases cited; Bilokumsky v. Tod, supra, 154-155; Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, 39. And no principle of law has been better settled than question been raised in time, compliance with the rules would have been required (it was not stated what compliance with the rules would have entailed); that if the Inspector, after deliberation, then had rejected the objection based on the rules, it would have been "appropriate" to raise the objections before the Board of Immigration Appeals; and that the right to raise the objection had been waived. Plainly he did not state or suggest that objections to their admissibility would have been valid if timely made, and there was no occasion for him to consider that question.

2 Rule 150.6(i) provides, in part: "An affidavit of an inspector as to the statements made by the alien or any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence, otherwise than in support of the testimony of the inspector, only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statement and the inspector is unavailable to testify in person."

that the technical rules for the exclusion of evidence, applicable in trials in courts, particularly the hearsay rule, need not be followed in deportation proceedings, Bilokumsky v. Tod, supra, 157, and cases cited; Tisi v. Tod, supra, 133; Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, supra, 106, more than in other administrative proceedings. Edison Co. v. Labor Board, 305 U. S. 197, 229-230, and cases cited; Opp Cotton Mills v. Administrator, 312 U. S. 126, 155, and cases cited. The only objections that can be taken to the evidence in such proceedings are not to its admissibility, but to its probative value. See Edison Co. v. Labor Board, supra, 230.

Judge Sears completely and accurately ruled on the admissibility of Mrs. Segerstrom's and Major Schofield's testimony as to O'Neil's earlier statements to them. He said:

"Whatever may be the common-law rule in relation to the reception of such evidence as that of Mrs. Segerstrom and Major Schofield, in this hearing the parties are not confined to common-law proof. Hearsay is admissible but the character of such evidence is an element to be used in its evaluation. The principal reason for the exclusion of hearsay at common law is that the opportunity for cross-examination is absent. In the present case, the sanction of cross-examination was present. Although the statement given to Mrs. Segerstrom and the statement made in the presence of Major Schofield were not under oath, there is something equivalent, for O'Neil testified on the stand that he told the truth in his interview with the agents of the F. B. I. and in the interview at which Major Schofield was present. There is in my opinion, therefore, every reason why this testimony should be heard and considered as substantive proof. It falls within the definition of substantial evidence heretofore quoted."

He appended in a footnote:

"(1) This view is fully supported by Dean Wigmore in the 3rd edition of his work (3 Wigmore, Evidence, 3rd ed., section 1018(b): 'It does not follow, however, that Prior Self-Contradictions, when admitted, are to be treated as having no affirmative testimonial value, and that any such credit is to be strictly denied them in the mind of the tribunal. The only ground for so doing would be the Hearsay rule. But the theory of the Hearsay rule is that an extrajudicial statement is rejected because it was made out of Court by an absent person not subject to cross-examination. . . . Here, however, by hypothesis the witness is present and subject to cross-examination. There is ample opportunity to test him as to the basis for his former statement. The whole purpose of the Hearsay rule has been already satisfied. Hence there is nothing to prevent the tribunal from giving such testimonial credit to the extrajudicial statement as it may seem to deserve. Psychologically of course, the one statement is as useful to consider as the other; and everyday experience outside of court-rooms is in accord."

See also Opp Cotton Mills v. Administrator, supra, 155, and cases cited.[3]

We think that the O'Neil statements were properly admitted and that, independently of the Lundeberg testimony, they warranted the Attorney General's finding that Bridges was a Party member.

With increasing frequency this Court is called upon to apply the rule, which it has followed for many years, in deportation cases as well as in other reviews of administrative proceedings, that when there is evidence more than a scintilla, and not unbelievable on its face, it is for the administrative officer to determine its credibility and weight. Warehouse Co. v. United States, 283 U. S. 501, 508; Trade Commission v. Education Society, 302 U. S. 112, 117; Consolidated Edison Co. v. Labor Board, supra, 229; Labor Board v. Nevada Copper Co., 316 U. S. 105; Marshall v. Pletz, 317 U. S. 383, 388; Labor Board v. Southern Bell Co., 319 U. S. 50, 60; Medo Corp. v. Labor Board, 321 U. S. 678, 681-682. We cannot rightly reject the administrative finding here and accept, as we do almost each week, particularly in our denials of certiorari, the findings of administrative agencies which rest on the tenuous support of evidence far less persuasive than the present record presents. That is especially the case here, since the Attorney General, the district court and the court of appeals have all concurred in the conclusion that the evidence is sufficient to support the findings. Coryell v. Phipps, 317 U. S. 406, 411; United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503, 518; Mahnich v. Southern S. S. Co., 321 U. S. 96, 99, and cases cited; Goodyear Co. v. Ray-O-Vac Co., 321 U. S. 275, 278.

Petitioner has made a number of other arguments which the Court finds it unnecessary to discuss. We think that they too are without merit. We would affirm the judgment.

[3] Wigmore concedes that his views have not been accepted by the courts generally. But, as we have said, the technical rules of evidence applied by the courts are not applicable to administrative proceedings. Edison Co. v. Labor Board, 305 U. S. 197, 229-230, and cases cited; Opp Cotton Mills v. Administrator, 312 U. S. 126, 155, and cases cited. For that reason the considerations suggested by Wigmore are controlling here and the Attorney General and Judge Sears could rightly consider O'Neil's statements as proof of the matters stated. Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U. S. 149, 157, and cases cited; Tisi v. Tod, 264 U. S. 131, 133; Vajtauer v. Commissioner of Immigration, 273 U. S. 103, 106.
